The Dust of Travel.

If you have been travelling any distance on the cars don's wash your face in cold water the moment you reach a washstand. If you want to remove sil trace of dust and smobe rub your face well with vassline or cold cream, and wipe it off on a dry towel. The towel after the wiping will show you where the dirk has gone. Then you may wash your face in hot water if you will. There is nothing like hot, really hot, water for the complexion. It keeps not only clean, but clean. Boston Travetter.

A Bridge Over the Behring Straits.

In an age which has seen a Forth bridge an accomplished fact, and a bridge from England to France discussed and designed, there is nothing novel or extraordinary in the project which is receiving serious attention in Russia of bridging over the Behring Straits. The narrowest part of the gulf which separates Siberia from Alaska is only 96 kilometres (little more than 60 miles), and it so happens that there are islands in a straight line which would serve as points of division in the bridge and reduce each portion to a length considerably less than that of the proposed channel bridge. The compensating advantage to be gained by a work of such huge expense is not obvious, though there needs must by something astractive in a scheme which, if carried out, would seem to bring nearer the day when it may be possible to make the circuit of the globe on foot. But if, as we are told, the supremacy of the world in years hereafter it to be divided between Russia and America, it might be better for general peace if the sea remains unabridged.

Grippe of Other Days. Grippe of Other Days.

There were altogether about 300 distinct epidemics of influenza in Europe between 1510, when the disease was first noted at Malts, and 1850. In 1729 the whole of Europe suffered severely. According to statistics published by the Novoe Vremya the disease caused 908 deaths in London in one week, and in Vienna 60,000 persons were affected. In 1737 and 1743 there were further outbreaks, and the deaths in one week in London amounted to 1,000. In 1758 domestic animals were first attacked by it. In 1782 40,000 persons fell ill of it in St. Pesteraburg in 24 hours. In St. Peteraburg quintne is now served out daily to the troops, mixed with vodks.

Extreme Low Neeks on Young Ladies are Not Approved.

The dancing dress of to-day is a thing of gauze and other sheer materials. Glimmer of satin and sheen of silk are for the time veiled by materials like the filmy gauzes of Indian wave, "floating air" and "woven mist," but made in the land of France and called by the less postic name of chiffognes. A few dresses for married ladies are made of broades and satin, but for young women the embroid-dered lisses and talles, or the spangled gauze, which look as if they might have belonged to the wardrobe of an Oriental Princess, are made up into graceful danoing gowns called "Josephine dresses," with simple, straight, full skirts of gauze over satin and olve quare-necked bodiess, which might have been modeled after the familiar portraits of the beautiful Empress.

The severe style of this dress, with its high sash of soft surah is considered especially suitable for a debutante, though in such a case the square neck is veiled with lace. There is a decided objection among mothers to the adoption of the extreme decoletie styles worn by the older women of society, by girls in their first or second season. In many cases the evening bodice for young girls: merely pointed and filled in with lace, while the sleeve is entirely omitted or is an elbow sleeve. Other dresses for young ladies are draped with floared net or gauze and caught up with rosettes and garlands of ribbons in the flat effect now universally seen. Dainty point d'esprit, dotted in the most delicate manner, embroidered lisses wrough with my rosebudos or some fine blossoms in pale from the manufacture, of castifaction being given in every strong man.

The French Executioner.

The profession of executioner seems to be followed by the same families for generations in France. Last month there died in Paris at the age of 90, the mother of Monsieur de Paris, as the present headsman is called. This woman was the daughter of a provincial headsman. Monsieur de Paris is himself married to the daughter of the headsman of Algeria, and there is every prospect that his place will in time be filled by his own son.

He Had Made the Bound Trip.

"I have taken my last order. I am going home," he said, as the clock struck the midnight hour.

The nurse looked at the doctor with a significant glance and whispered:

"His mind wanders."

Presently he lifted his feverish head from its pillow.

"Any letters from the house?" he inquired. "There ought to be letters here."

Then he slept, and in his sleep he was a boy again, babbled of flahing streams where the trout played, of school hours and romps with his mates. At 12 he suddenly awakened.

"All right!" he exclaimed in a strong voice, "I'm ready."

He thought the porter had called him for an early train. The doctor laid a soothing hand on him, and he slept. In his sleep he murmured:

"Bhow you samples of our goods. I'm going off whe road now. This order closes out. The house has called me in. Going to have my first vacation, but I shall lose for New Jorsey. What'll you give us for New Jorsey. What'll you give us for New Jorsey.

insight which should search out the life of insight which should search out the life of a man in his pecuniary relations, would penetrate into almost every oranny of his mature. He who knows, like St. Paul, both nature. He who knows, like St. Paul, both how to spare and how to abound, has greas knowledge, for if we take account of all the virtues which money is mixed up—honesty, justice, generosity, oharity, frugality, forethought, self-sacrifice, and of their correlative vices, it is a knowledge which goes near to cover the length and breadth of humanity, and a right measure and making in getting, saving, spending, giving, taking, lending, borrowing and bequeathing would almost argue a perfect man."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Punxgutawney, Pa., despatch of Friday says: Only three families of the striking miners were evicted to day. After the Sheriff, accompanied by 33 Pinkertons, armed with Winchesters, had thrown out an Italian family at Walston, 300 Italians collected and began yelling and firing into the air About 200 shots were fired. Master Workman Wilson arrived on the scene and quelled the crowd. He told them not to break the peace or they would ruin the cause. Wilson says that had he not appeared when he did there would have been one of the blocdiest riots ever seen in this country, as the Italians were terribly excited. There will, it is thought, be a great many more evictions to-morrow. excited. There will, it is shough, be a great many more evictions to morrow. Wilson says every effort has been and will be made to induce the foreign element to respect the law. The evicted families are being taken in by friends. A Large Bed.

Down in one of the rooms of the Tremont House is a bedetead which strikes terror to the heart of every man who is assigned to that room The strang feature about it is its immense proportions. It is a bed fit for, or a bed than would fit, a giant, and it is a bed with a history. Years ago, in the old days of the Tremont, "Long John" Wentworth used to board there, and this bed was constructed especially for him. He stopped at this hotel for a long time, and left there only when colored help was introduced. Mr. Wentworth did not like colored men, and he went over to the Sherman House to board. There he remained until he died. But colored men did not like Mr. Wentworth, so it was a sort of stand off. The big bed is still at the Tremont, however, and it is usually reserved for extra tall men. Once in a while a mistake will be made, and a small man will be assigned to the room. In such cases a search warrant is usually sworn out to find the man in the morning. This happened once when Frank Daniels, the sawed-off comedian, was given the bed, but he was discovered before the evening performance. They found him in one of the side pockets, and the next night they drew a fourteen-inch balk line around the bed.—

The electric light is to supersede gas in Rome. The motive power will be derived from the waterfalls at Tivoli, and the station for the distribution of power will be near Porta Pla. Rome does not in this case loose in picturesqueness what it gains in modernization, for the few electric lights already establiseed—as, for instance, on the Quirins Hill and in the Piazza Colonna—lend a singularly new and beautiful sapect to the Eternal city as seen in the evening from the neighboring hills of Frascati and the other "Castelli." A HARD LIPE

Lock at Your Nose.

A somewhat singular fact has been observed with reference to the shape of the nose, or rather, the setting of it in the face, so to speak. To be strictly orreot, from the artist's point of view, the nose should be exactly in the middle of the face, and at right angles with a line from the pupil of one eye to that of the other. As a matter of fact, it is rarely or never found thus placed; it is almost invariably a little out of "the square," and the fact of it being so is often that which lends a peculiar expression and piquancy to the face. A medical writer points out that there are anatomneal reasons why a slight deviation from the true central line may be expected, and that the nose which is found to be "centrally located" and accurately straight between the two eyes may, after all, be considered an abnormal one, the only absolutely true and correct organ being in fact, that which deviates a little either to the right or left.—St. Louis Republic.

One of the most unreasonable superstitions is that possed by so many people that deters them from making their wills, trusting to good luck to have time when the candle of life is flickering out. A lady of unusual culture and strength of character, a leader in a wide social circle, and active in movements for the advancement of her sex, died not long since of a third stroke of paralysis. She had a good deal of property and many articles of rare value that she designed to leave to a cherished young lady companion, but even after the second stroke, and she knew that a third would be fatal, she could not bear to think of making her will. She dropped off suddenly, and har friend is without anything, while remote relations get all. The instance is familiar to many in this city, but is not singular.—St. Paul, Minn., Giobe.

THE APTERYX.

Four Wingless Birds From New Zealand Reach England.

The Zoological Society in Landon has just acquired two specimens of the apteryx in addition to the two which have been already exhibited for some months. All the four birds are temporarily placed in the tortoise house pending alterations in the insect house, which will be their permanent resting place. These birds should be attractive to the vigitor for several reasons. In the first place, they are somewhat difficult to catch a glimpse of. Fortunately for themselves—for they have no doubt flourished and multiplied on account of this very habit—but unfortunately for the public, they are nocturnal; the rarity of their appearance will therefore add to their interest when they are seen. In the second place, they are remarkable even among "wingless" birds for the very radimentary character of their wings, which a life entirely devoted to a nightly hunt after worms has almost improved away altogether; but if the apteryx has no wings worthy the name, it has a pair of very sout legs which allow it to hurry over the ground at a very respectable rate, and to defend itself by vigorous kloks. The apteryx only occurs in New Zealand, and it has been said to make its nest in a way which seems very characteristic of its antipodean habitat. Instead of depositing its eggs in a nest and then sitting upon them, the apteryx first buries its egg and then digs a hole underneash it, in which it remains, and thus sits not upon but underneath the nest. It must be admitted, however, that this statement has been disputed.

My business takes me among the best peple, and that is why you mustan't use my name. You may have noticed that my articles, if you ever read them, contain a dash of recklessness here and there. You know how the English, I mean the best class of people, shrow those expressions of abandon in their conversation. They are the spice of chat when not used too frequently and when pat. Some people call these expressions sinns. But they are not. Professional people talk in the manner I have spoken about, and now the society people are adopting it. There is a charm in it, if you will believe me, when a pretty girl or an intelligent woman uses it. Many of these words and expressions are French, and, to tell the truth, some of them are a bit off color. But, being French and used as a spice, they go even in our best sets.—

"From the fryingpan into the fire," so to speak; Frenchmen and Bpaniards, sailing across on voyages of adventure, dissipate their means and have no alternative but to remain and join the forces; thus there are many who enlist to escape punishment in other countries, and who divulge to none their past history; and some do so on account of reverse of fortune, having got diagnosted with of will life, or are actuated by more sinister motives still, intending to desert as soon as they obtain comething better to do. Her husband was a model spouse, and several children blessed the union. In fact, their married life was a success, and they grew old together. A few days since a stranger called at the house. He was elderly and apparently wealthy. He asked for the wife. She responded and recognized him as her husband returned from the dead. Her surprise and consternation may be imagined Parker told a romantic story. He had been carried by the sea for a time and rescued by a Pertuguese ship, which had landed him in South America. He could not get a passage home, and determined to go into the interior to seek his fortune. He did so, writing to his wife at her parents' home in England. Those letters she never got. He, of course, received no reply and believed her lost also. Time went by and believed her lost also. Time went by and brought with it wealth and prosperity, but the thoughts of her would not down, and at last he determined to search for her in Canada. He came on here, and, after many inquiries, loosted her at last, only to find her the wife of another's children. A long consultation took place between them. Finally, Parker left. Before doing so he gave his wife a cheque for a large sum and his blessing for her future happiness. He is understood to have gone back to South America.

People Addicted to Rubbers Are Usually the Worst Sufferers.

Many people, especially women and children, suffer the whole winter through with cold feet. This is mainly due to the fact that they wear their shoes too tight. Unless the toes have perfect freedom the blood cannot circulate properly, hence follow stiffened and benumbed toes, cold feet, and often a numbness up the limbs. People who wear rubbers the whole winter through generally suffer with their feet. Rubbers make them very tender by overheating and causing them to perspire. They should only be worn during stormy or slushy weather, and even then should be removed as soon as one enters the house. They draw the feet, keep them hot and wet with perspiration—then as soon as ongoes out again into the air the feet are chilled. In the country I have noticed that the farmers put some dry straw or pleoes of newspaper in the bottom of their boots. I, myself, have often tried the latter, and can assure you that it is a good preventive against oold feet. This is doubless because the paper or straw absorbs the perspiration and the Worst Sufferers.

A very useful invention, tending to lessen the possibility of accidents in factories, is now being extensively adopted in England. The breaking of a glaus, which is adjusted against the wall of every room in the mill, will at once stop the engine, an electric current being established between the room and the throttle valve of the engine, shutting off the steam in an instant. By this means the engine was stopped at one of the mills recently in a few seconds, and a young fift, whose clothes had become entangled in an upright shaft, was released

"The 11 o'clock" was the name of the matutinal wall street cocktail, and this was followed by another taken before lunch and by one or two swallowed before the board closed. The result was that a good many brokers went home with more alcohol in their systems than was good for them. As a class they carried liquor well, and anything like open intoxication was seldom witnessed.

Within a few years there has been an entire change in the custom of the brokers. One of the leading brokers of the street cold me that it had been found that to, well be broked, not too strong, was the very best atimulant in the world for the kind of mental activity involved in the dealing with a tooks and securities. He made it in the Chinese way, steeping it in hot water and in a pot protested by coverings of felt from the cooler-atmosphere of the office. A thisableful of tea was put into the pot and upon this was poured water which was almost at the boiling point. Then the tea was allowed to steep while he ate his cysters, and when he poured it into the oup the liquor was transparent and of amber color and the aroms which greeted the nostrils was delicious. Said he:

"Upon this cup of tea I can do more work without fatigue than I used to do upon a pint of champagne, and there are no after effects. Many of the brokers now either brew tea themselves or train some-body in their offices to do it. Mr. Gould is a great tea drinker and so is Russell Sage."

Wild Turkeys as Sprinters—They Must b Taken at Long Range. Wild Turkeys as Sprinters—They Must be Taken at Long Hange.

Wild turkeys in this latitude, says a Fort Davis, Texas, despatch, are not very "gamey," but they are great sprinters. As for running, some of our gobblers certainly make as much as a mile a minute—or, at least, one thinks so. Along the Rio Pecos, where the timber is thick and feed plentiful in the fall of the year, some anormous turkey roosts are encountered, almost equal, I should imagine, to the odebrated Bheridan Roost, of Indian Territory. In Texas, too, the birds seem to attain a wonderful size, and their flavor, from feeding on berries beech nuts, acorns, grass seed, and especially pecans, makes the wild turkey of the Lone Star State certainly the most delicious morsel an epicure could desire.

gained ground that the wild turkey, from his manner of feeding, has dark feeh. This is entirely a mistake. No whiter or better meat was ever carved or placed on table. In some of the frontier towns along the Bouthern Pacific Railroad birds weighing as much as 25 pounds each were offered last weak at $1 apiece, with very few takers. Now, the best way to hunt turkeys down this way is with a small bore rife, say a $2-calibre. A shot-gun is hardly the thing, for the hirds hide in 'the tall grass and bushes, and will not allow a man to come within 100 yards of them if they can help it.

One can often see them in a roadway, but the mere smell of a man or a dog causes them to take to the bushes immediately. Sometimes it is possible to catch them in an open, but at the mere suspicion of a man's presence they are off like the wind, either taking to the lofficest trees or hiding away in the thick undergrowth and chaparel. If hard pressed a wild turkey will run like lightning, and trus to his legs so long as he can't cop beyond reach of his pursue; then, if the laster presses him too closely, he will fly for perhaps a mile and then exits.

A Large Bed.

Down in one of the rooms of the Tremont House is a bedetead which strikes terror to the heart of every man who is assigned to that room The strange feature about it is its immense proportions. It is a bed fit for, or a bed that would fit, a giant, and it is a bed with a history. Years ago, in the old days of the Tremont, "Long John" Wentworth used to board there, and this bed was constructed especially for him. He stopped at this hotel for a long time, and left there only when colored help was introduced. Mr. Wentworth did not like colored men, and he went over to the Sherman House to board. There he remained until he died. But colored men did not like Mr. Wentworth, so it was a sort of stand off. The hig bed is still at the Tremont, however, and it is usually reserved for extra tall men. Once in awhite a mistake will be made, and a small man will be assigned to the room. In such cases a search warrant is usually aworn out to find the man in the morning. This happened once when Frank-Daniels, the sawed-off comedian, was given the bed, but he was discovered before the evening performance. They found him in one of the side pockets, and the next night they drew a fourteen-inch balk line around the bed.—

B., despatch of Friday says: The express for Quebeo left Monoton early this morning with two engines and a snowplough ahead: When at a cutting about two miles west of the Jacquet River an immense pile of snow cansed the plough to jump the track, taking with it the two engines, one of which went almost completely through the other. They rolled over on one side, burying beneath the debris Driver James McGowan and Freman F. Gaudet. The latter soon got out bedly soalled, braised and wrenched, but will recover. McGowan is still buried under the wrockage and no doubt is dead. The baggage and other cars left the track, but no passengers were injured. The driver and fireman of the other engine were slightly injured.

An Elmirs, N. Y., despatch of Friday night says: The sharp crack of a pistol was heard in the house occupied by Mrs. Mary Eilinberger, at 502 East Church street, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. When officers entered the house they found Mrs. Eilinberger hysterically weeping, and in the hall leading to the front door the body of Wm. R. Edwards, better known as "Bill" Edwards, a well-known sporting man, lying in a pool of blood. An investigation showed life to be extinct, death having resulted from a pistol shot in the back of the head, the ball entering near the base of the brain. The woman was arrested.

Lock at Your Nose.

A somewhat singular fact has been observed with reference to the shape of the nose, or rather, the setting of it in the face, so to speak. To be strictly correct, from the artist's point of view, the nose should be exactly in the middle of the face, and at right angles with a line from the pupil of one eye to that of the other. As a matter of fact, it is rarely or never found thus placed; it is almost invariably a listle out of "the square," and the fact of it being so is often that which lends a peculiar expression and piquancy to the face. A medical writer points out that there are anatomical reasons why a slight deviation from the true central line may be expected, and that the nose which is found to be "centrally located" and accurately straight between the two eyes may, after all, be considered an abnormal one, the only absolutely true and correct organ being in fact, that which deviates a little either to the right or left.—St. Loute Republic.

Prejudice Against Will-Making. Prejudice Against Will-Making.

One of the most unreasonable superstitions is that possed by so many people that deters them from making their wills, trusting to good luok to have time when the candle of life is flickering out. A lady of unusual culture and strength of character, a leader in a wide social circle, and solive in movements for the advancement of her sex, died not long since of a third stroke of paralysis. Bits had a good deal of property and many articles of rare value that she designed to leave to a cherished young lady companion, but even after the second stroke, and she knew that a third would be fatal, she could not bear to think of making her will. She dropped off suddenly, and her friend is without anything, while remote relations get all. The instance is familiar to many in whis city, but is not singular.—St. Paut, Minn., Globe.

Four Wingless Birds From New Zealand
Reach England.

The Zoological Society in Landon has just acquired two specimens of the apteryx in addition to the two which have been already exhibited for some months. All the four birds are temporarily placed in the tortoics house pending alterations in the insect house, which will be their permanent resting place. These birds should be attractive to the visitor for several reasons. In the first place, they are somewhat difficult to catch a glimpse of. Fortunstely for themselves—for they have no doubt flourished and multiplied on account of this very habit—but unfortunstely for then public, they are nocturnal; the rarity of their appearance will therefore add to their interest when they are seen. In the second place, they are remarkable even among "wingless" birds for the very radimentary character of their wings, which allte entirely devoted to a nightly hunt after worms has almost improved away altogether; but if the apteryx has no wings wortby the name, it has a pair of very stout legs which allow it to hurry over the ground at a very respectable rate, and to defend itself by vigorous hicks. The apteryx only occurs in New Zealand, and it has been said to make its nest in a way which seems very characteristic of its antipodean habitial. Instead of depositing its eggs in a nest and then sitting upon them, the apteryx first buries its egg and then digs a hole underneath it, in which it remains, and thus sits not upon but underneath the nest. It must be admitted, however, that this statement has been disputed.

cases, time proved a conscler, and she married again. Her second venture proved happier than the first Her hunband wan a model spouse, and several children blessed the union. In fact, their married life was a success, and they grew old together. A few days since a stranger called at the house. He was elderly and apparently wealthy. He asked for the wife. His responded and recognized him as her bushand returned from the dead. Her surprise and consternation may be imagined Parker told a romantic story. He had been carried by the sea for a time and rescoed by a Portuguese ship, which had landed him in South America. He could not get a passage home, and determined to go into the interior to seek his fortune. He did so, writing to his wife at her parents' home in England. Those letters she never got. He, of caurse, received no reply and believed her lost also. Time went by and brought with it weslth and prosperity, but the thoughts of her would not down, and at last he determined to search for her in Canada. He came on here, and, after many inquiries, located her at last, only to find her the wife of another and the mother of another's children. A long consultation took place between them. Finally, Parker left. Before doing so he gave his wife a cheque for a large sum and his blessing for her future happiness. He is understood to have gone back to South America.

Oh, God!—that dream—it has not fied— One of us old and one of us dead. HEALTHFUL TEA.

But it is Properly Brewed and is Not a Decoction of Tannin.

In the old days on Wall street it was the custom for many of the brokers to renew their energies with frequentiationals: stoms during the day, says a New York letter to the Philadelphia Press. "The 11 o'clock" was the name of the matutinal Wall street cocktail, and this was followed by another taken before lunch and by one or two swallowed before the board closed. The result was that a good many brokers went home with more alcohol in their systems than was good for them. As a class they carried liquor well, and anything like open intoxication was seldom witnessed.

Within a few years there has been an entire change in the custom of the brokers. One of the leading brokers of the street told me that it had been found that tee, well brewed, not too strong, was the very best atimulant in the world for the hind of mental socivity involved in the dealing with stocks and scourities. Els lunch to-day consists of a half a dozen raw cysters, a hit of cold chioken and some teast, and while it was laid-dopon his deak he was husy brewing a bowl of tea. But it is Properly Brewed and is i of cold chicken and some stars, sate which is was laid-dopon his deak he was heary brewing a bowl of tea.

He made it in the Chinese way, steeping it in hot water and in a pot protested by coverings of felt from the cooler-atmosphere of the office. A thisableful of tea was put into the pot and upon this was poured water which was almost at the bolling point. Then the tea was allowed to steep while he ate his cysters, and when he poured it into the oup the liquor was transparent and of amber color and the aroma which greeted the nostrils was delicus. Said he:

"Upon this cup of tea I can do more work without fatigue than I used to do upon a pint of champagne, and there are no after effects. Many of the brokers now either brew tes themselves or train some-body in their offices to do it. Mr. Gould is a great tea drinker and so is Russell Bage."

Wild Turkeys as Sprinters—They Must be Taken at Long Range. Wild turkeys in this latitude, says a Fort Davis, Texas, despatch, are not very "gamey," but they are great sprinters. As for running, some of our gobblers certainly make as much as a mile a minute—or, as least, one thinks so. Along the Rio Pecce, where the timber is thick and feed plentiful in the fall of the year, some enormous turkey rocets are encountered, almost equal, ful in the fall of the year, some enormous turkey roosts are encountered, almost equal, I should imagine, to the celebrated Sheridan Roost, of Indian Territory. In Texas, too, the birds seem to attain a wonderful size, and their flavor, from feeding on berries beech nuts, accurs, grass seed, and especially pecans, makes the wild turkey of the Lone Star State certainly the most delicious morel an epicure could desire.

A general and erroneous opinion has rained ground that the wild turkey.

licious morsel an epicure could desire.

A general and erroneous opinies has gained ground that the wild turkey, from his manner of feeding, has dark flesh. This is entirely a mistake. No whiter or bester meat was ever carved or placed on table. In some of the frontier towns along the Southern Pacific Railroad birds weighing as much as 25 poinds each were offered last week at $1 apices, with very few takers. Now, the best way to hunt turkeys down this way is with a small bore-rife, say a 22-calibre. A shot-gun is hardly the thing, for the hirds hide in the tall grass and bushes, and will not allow a man to come within 100 yards of them if they can help it.

One can often see them in a roadway, but the mere smell of a man or a dog causes them to take to the bushes immediately. Sometimes it is possible to catch them in an open, but at the mere suspicion of a man's presence they are off like the wind, either taking to the loftiest trees or hiding away in the thick undergrowth and obsparel. If hard pressed a wild turkey will run like lightning, and trust to his legs so long as he can keep beyond reach of his pursuer; then, if the laster presses him too closely, he will fly for perhaps a mile and then settle.
