she pointed right out to sea. "Yonder! Sometimes I wish that, as the Scripture says, I had wings like a bird, that I might fly back."

And I saw that her beautiful eyes were dim with tears.

"Have you relatives there?" I asked.

"Or friends whom you love?"

"Neither friends nor relatives."

When my dear father died I was left quite solitary. But I need not long there, and was so happy! And South America is so beautiful, so different from this dreary land!"

I watched her nervously.

"Some day, perhaps, you will return?"

"Perhaps—I cannot tell," she replied, sadly, and turning on her heel, she walked slowly toward the spot where Anita was lying. The girl looked up and showed her white teeth, smiling; the smile broadened as her mistress spoke to her rapidly in Portuguese.

"Anita is of my opinion," said Madeline; she thinks this English climate detestable, and she longs for the palms and temples of the West. I suppose I shall have to send her back. The people think her a wild savage, because she does not understand their barbarous dialect, and she will never settle in England.

I had my own suspicion that Madeline was laughing at me, and that Anita's smile had a quite different meaning; but I was too happy in the mere presence of my darling to trouble myself on that head. Merely to stand by her side, and look into her face, and hear her musical voice, was joy sufficient; for never had she seemed more bright and beautiful. She wore a rich ruffled dress, tightly fitting, and descending to her knees; a pretty sashin hat to match; and the parasol she carried was more for use as a walking-stick than for a safeguard against the sun. The sea breeze had brought the color to her delicate cheek, and her dark eyes were unusually light and happy.

For the time being I forgot the social gulf between us, between her wealth and my poverty, and talked freely and unreservedly of many things. The old constraint left me, I suppose to the improvement of my manners, for Madeline seemed to look at me and listen to me with unusual interest.

"And you?" she said, presently. "Shall you remain in this lonely Cornwall all your life?"

The question took me by surprise, and was difficult to answer.

"Who can tell?" I said. "I have often thought of trying my fortune across the ocean, but habit has kept me chained to a dull place and a cheerless occupation. Sometime, do you know, Miss Graham, I think it is all fatality. It seems so strange, for example, that I should have been brought here at all, and that, even in so unlikely a place, we two should have been once more thrown together."

"It is fortunate for me, at any rate, that you became a Cornishman."

"How so?"

"Because, otherwise, I might not have survived—to thank you for my life!"

Was it gratitude, or an even tenderer sentiment, that filled her eyes with such tender meaning, and after one long look, made her blush and turn her head away? I cannot tell; but the look made my heart leap, while a new thrill of rapturous hope trembled through my veins. I glanced at Anita; she was looking again, with closed eyes. Carried beyond myself by the inspiration of the moment, I took my darling's hand.

"Miss Graham," I said; "Madeline—may I call you again by that dear name?—ever since we parted, years ago, you have been the one memory of my life; and when we met again—"

I would have continued impetuously; but gently disengaging her hand, she cried,

"Anita! come, it is time to go home."

The girl seemed to understand, for she sprang to her feet and pointed eagerly up the rocks. For myself, I stood stupefied and ashamed; but turning again to me with a light smile, Madeline continued,

"Are you returning to the village, Mr. Trelawney? If so, let us walk to-" gether."

Something in her manner convinced me that I had better encroach no further, but make the best of my immediate chance of happiness. So I answered eagerly that I was at her service, and the next minute I was piloting her up the rocks. The way was troublesome, and she often needed and accepted the help of my hand, thrilling me through and through with her warm touch.

At last we left the rock-rows prominently behind us, and stepped out on the open beach. We two led the way, while Anita followed behind, so slowly that we were soon left practically alone.

"How came you to walk so far?" I inquired. "We are three or four miles, as the crow flies, from St. Gurlott's."

"Oh, I came out early, and the sunshine tempted me on. I did not think that we had wandered such a distance. Poor Anita will be tired out."

"And you?"

"Oh, I love to walk!" she replied gaily. "Even in Demerara I used to wander for hours and hours in the woods; and once I was nearly lost. Night came down suddenly, and I had to creep into the hole of a great tree; and I wasn't frightened, though I could hear the tiger-cats crying all round me; for the fire-flies made it almost as light as day. But poor papa nearly went out of his mind, and, after that, would never let me enter the woods alone."

"How did they find you?"

"By beating the woods. There were about a hundred coolies carrying torches, and making noise enough to wake the dead. At last as they were passing, I popped out of my hiding place, and cried quite cozily, 'Here I am, papa!' He was terribly angry, but I was soon forgiven."

"It would be a hard heart," I murmured, tenderly, "that would not forgive you anything!"

She looked at me merrily, and shook her head.

"Ah, you don't know me! Poor papa, if he were alive, could tell you a different tale. I was always a spoiled child, Mr. Trelawney."

Thus lightly talking, and playing with the merest threads of conversation, to avoid touching themes of more dangerous interest, we walked across moor. Though it was winter-like, the air was very close and warm with sunlight, and Anita lagged more and more behind. At last we came in sight of the village, and paused by the side of the moorland farm where I had parted with my uncle. My eyes were fixed earnestly on Madeline. Suddenly I saw her start and change color.

Following the glance of her eyes, I caught sight of a well known figure approaching. It was George Redruth, elegantly dressed, and carrying a walking-stick.

He came up rapidly, and I saw by the expression of his face that he was ill-pleased. He glanced at me angrily and contemptuously, and then addressed his cousin.

"Where have you been?" he cried. "I have been looking for you everywhere. Do you know that it is three o'clock?"

"I did not know it was so late," replied Madeline, quietly. "Anita and I went wandering across the moor and down to the seaside, where we found Mr. Trelawney."

He looked at me again, and I saw his brow blacken more and more.

"Lunch was served at half past one," he muttered, "and my mother has driven over to afternoon service. I won't trouble Trelawney any further. Take my arm, and let me see you home."

He spoke with the air of authority habitual with him. I was not surprised to see Madeline flush angrily, and decline the proffered arm.

"There is plenty of time for that," she exclaimed. "See! poor Anita is almost exhausted—it would be foolish to assist her; it is none to assist me!"

Indeed, Anita seemed dead beat. She was seated on a stone, about a hundred yards behind us, resting her elbows on her knees, her chin in her hands. Redruth glanced toward her and shrugged his shoulders.

"I never go near niggers," he retorted; "can't stand them. Perhaps Trelawney is not so particular," he added, with an insufferable sneer.

Our eyes met, and a sharp retort was on my tongue, when Madeline broke in, with a touch of his own cutting manner.

"Anita is not what you so pointedly call her; and as for Mr. Trelawney, he is at least a gentleman, incapable of making coarse remarks, even at the expense of a social inferior."

This eulogium of myself seemed to afford George Redruth intense amusement. Possibly he thought the word "gentleman" had an odd sound applied to a person of my position. I flashed to the temple, but did not trust myself to make any observation. Without even looking at Redruth, I raised my hat to Madeline, and walked rapidly away.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Absorbed as I was in my newly-awakened love for Madeline, I failed to notice for some time the changes which were going on about us; but I was soon brought from dreamland by the attitude which the young master chose to take.

It soon became clear to me that his resentment, from whatever source it sprang, was leveled against me; and in a short time I discovered that the innocent cause of all these eruptions was Madeline herself.

George Redruth had made up his mind to woo Madeline Graham, and he honored me so far as to fear that my presence in St. Gurlott's might be the means of preventing him winning his cousin's hand. A marriage with Madeline would be advantageous to him, principally because his own position was becoming very insecure, he having gambled and bet away most of his fortune, and so being in danger of losing the position which her money would restore to him. Thus it was that he watched the growing friendship between myself and his cousin with ever-increasing anger; and finding he could not openly control her, he determined, I afterward learned, to gain his ends by treachery.

It was not to these things, however, which I was able at this time to give my entire thoughts; other and more painful matters occurred which for a time drove the young master from my mind.

At home things were going very badly with us. My uncle remained in the same despondent state, while every day fresh wrinkles appeared on my aunt's face—the tears were often wet upon her cheek. I seemed a sin for me to be happy while so much grief remained at home; and I sometimes felt inclined to go 11. It away and no return till I could bring our lost one along with me.

I began to wonder, too, if my uncle could be right when he said that the new overseer had a hand in poor Ann's downfall. It was strange, because Johnson's face had not been seen in St. Gurlott's. I was pondering over a solution of all these mysteries when one day an event happened which threatened to bring matters to a climax indeed.

I had come up from the mine after a prolonged inspection of it, and stood at the entrance, blinded with tallow and droppings, when suddenly I heard a wild sound of voices, and looking round I saw two men facing each other, and looking as if they were about to close in a deadly grip. One of the men was my uncle, the other was Johnson, the overseer.

At sight of the man whom he believed to be his bitterest foe, all my uncle's feebleness seemed to fall miraculously from him. He towered above the other, and raised his clenched fist as if to strike.

"You villain!" he cried. "You cowardly, treacherous villain! Tell me, what is my loss? Tell me, or, by the Lawd, I strike 'ee dead before me!"

In another moment the arm would have descended, for Johnson was paralyzed with fear; but I sprang forward and caught it with a cry. My uncle tried to wrench himself free.

"Let go, Blah!" he cried, fiercely. "I told 'ee what I'd do if I met the villain, and I'll do it. Look at the white-headed cur; he brought trouble to my lass! And now, while she's wanderin' about the earth in misery maybe, he cooms yar to laugh at whi he's dawn!"

"I still held him firmly; and Johnson, cur that he was, seeing that the danger was passed, recovered his presence of mind.

"Perhaps, now you're a little calmer," he said, "you'll tell me what you're raving about?"

"I will answer for him," I replied.

"Where is Annie Pendragon?"

He shrugged his shoulders, and raised his brows.

"It seems to me you are all raving lunatics together. Why do you ask me these things? What do I know of the girl?"

"You are supposed to have enticed her from her home. You were seen with her in Falmouth, and you must know where she is."

"I don't know where she is. I met her in Falmouth, it's true, and spoke to her; but her being away from home was no concern of mine."

"It's a lie!" cried my uncle, fiercely; and again he tried to free himself from my grasp, but I held him firmly.

"It's no use," I said; "we shan't mood matters with him. We must find out by some other means whether or not he is speaking the truth."

The result of all this was a serious illness, which laid my uncle low, and for some weeks threatened his life. During this time Madeline came frequently to the cottage, accompanied by Anita, who carried little tempting things for the poor old man to eat. At last, the terrible time passed, and he rose from his bed—the feeble, worn-out wreck of his old self.

From that day forth his intellect seemed shaken, but he clung with strange persistence to the one idea that Johnson was in some way responsible for all that had taken place. I had my own reasons for refusing to share this belief; nevertheless, I saw the overseer again, and after the interview with him, I became more firmly convinced than ever that my uncle was wrong in his surmise. If Johnson had a hand in Annie's flight, he was not the real wrong-doer. I still suspected George Redruth, though as yet I had been unable to obtain absolute proof of his guilt.

Meantime, having seen my uncle on the high road to recovery, I was compelled once more to turn my attention to the mine, which grew every day more dangerous. I had spoken to the master of these dangers again and again, and he had taken no heed. So long as he was safe above ground it was nothing to him that the lives of the men who worked below were in daily jeopardy. Nevertheless, I knew that something must be done; I resolved to make one last appeal to him, and if that failed in its effort, to communicate with the members of the company, who, conjointly with himself, owned the property. I had fully made up my mind to seek him at home, when I was spared the pains. He strolled down to the counting-house one morning in company with Johnson.

"Mr. Redruth," I said, approaching him, "I should like to speak a few words to you, sir."

He looked at me from head to foot with a cold supercilious sneer which sent my blood up to boiling heat, as he replied,

"Well, you can speak, then—I am all attention."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., NOV. 10, 1899.

The W. C. T. U. Convention.

The ladies of the provincial W. C. T. U. have had most propitious weather for the fourth annual Convention which was held in our town this week.

Delegates began to arrive on Saturday and on Saturday evening and Monday morning the executive, which includes the superintendents of all parts of the province, and they expressed themselves as highly pleased with the town, the manner in which they were entertained, and the whole proceedings of the Convention.

On Sunday afternoon a mass meeting of the children of the Sunday-schools of the town was held in the Baptist church. There was a large attendance. Mr. E. W. Sawyer, superintendent of the Baptist school, and Mr. J. D. Chambers, superintendent of the Presbyterian school, occupied seats on the platform and jointly presided over the meeting, which was addressed in a most interesting and instructive manner by Mrs. Fields.

The first regular business meeting was held on Monday morning, with Mrs. R. Chesley, the president, in the chair. Other officers present were Mrs. J. B. Hemmison, Wolfville, first vice, and Mrs. G. E. Rowe, second vice-presidents; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. C. Whitman, Canoe; recording secretary, Mrs. D. M. Hopper, Amherst; treasurer, Mrs. J. Botsford Black, Amherst. After the usual routine business several clauses of the constitution were discussed and amended. At the noon hour a very instructive address was given by Mrs. de Blois.

Monday afternoon the roll-call of delegates took place, after which the president briefly reviewed the work of the present year. She spoke of the encouraging results of the placiblets, and urged the need of more strenuous efforts for women's ballots. No better or easier solution has yet been received to the drink problem than that brought by Frances Willard years ago, viz., "Set against the appetites of the drinkers and the aversion of the liquor seller, the strong love of home." The address dealt as some length on the need of increased effort and more courageous work in the department of social purity. She alluded to the peace conference at the Hague as one of the most important events of the past year, and closed with several practical suggestions in regard to the general work of the union.

In the afternoon the visitors were entertained by the local White Ribboners at a 5 o'clock tea held in the vestry of the church. This was a very enjoyable affair.

The session on Monday evening was of the nature of a welcome meeting, and was held in the Baptist church which was tastefully decorated with flags, plants and mottoes, conspicuous among which was a banner with the word "welcome" above the organ loft. Mrs. Hemmison presided gracefully. Addresses of welcome were given by Mrs. David Freeman, in behalf of the local union, Miss Hilda Tufts, in behalf of the King's Daughters, Capt. Tingley, for Wolfville Division, S. of T., Mayor Thomson for the town, Rev. J. E. DeKlar, for the churches, and Dr. Trotter for the educational institutions. These were appropriately responded to by Mrs. Whitman, of Canoe. Excellent music was furnished by the choir, and a well rendered solo was given by Rev. P. M. MacDonald. Mrs. Rutherford, president of the Dominion W. C. T. U., conveyed greetings of the White Ribboners of the upper provinces and of the far west. She gave a brief but eloquent address on certain phases of the temperance work.

Tuesday morning after the opening exercises and roll call, to which a large number of delegates from all parts of the province responded, the reports of superintendents of departments were read and discussed. The report by Mrs. Frank Power, Lunenburg, on scientific instruction, was of a very encouraging nature. Regular instructions are being given in all the public schools on the subject. Mrs. S. H. Black, Dartmouth, gave an interesting report on Systematic Giving, which showed that the tything system for benevolent objects was largely on the increase. Mrs. McLaren, Lower Aspy, gave an excellent report of the work done by the union in distributing flowers to the sick in hospitals and other places. Twenty-four unions reported work for sailors and fishermen in the shape of comfort bags, literature and help in the shape of rest houses for sailors. Lunenburg reported a house of this kind. Mrs. O. C. Whitman, Canoe, deserves much credit for the work accomplished in this department.

The superintendents of other departments are: Junior work—Miss Ellie Smith, Windsor. Press—Mrs. A. A. Desbriay, Bridgewater. Narcotics—Mrs. Barton Jost, Guysboro. School of methods—Mrs. F. Woodbury, Dartmouth.

Evangelistic work—J. N. Marshall, Liverpool. Sunday school work—Mrs. Walter "Chitich," Hanport.

Franchise—Mr. S. R. Chesley, Lunenburg. V. O. nurses—Mrs. Chas. Archibald, Halifax.

Hereditary and Hygiene—Dr. A. I. Hamilton, Halifax.

Jail and prison—Mrs. M. B. McKay, Pictou. Mothers meetings—Mrs. J. B. Hem-mon, Wolfville. Parlor meetings—Miss L. Blanchard, Windsor.

World's mission—Miss A. Forbes, Windsor. The treasurer's report shows that $102 have been received from the local unions in affiliation fees, Yarmouth and Halifax having the largest membership. The memorable thank offering was $70.

The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Whitman, showed that the number of unions affiliated in this convention is 35; number of active members, 893; honorary members, 164; number of departments, 19; pages of literature distributed, 56,265; Bibles, 117; tracts and leaflets, 5,743; magazines, 2,679; papers, 1,867; money received, $2,954.56; six new unions were organized during the year.

The provincial delegates to the Dominion convention are: Mrs. David Freeman, Mrs. J. B. Hemmison, Wolfville; Mrs. Power, Lunenburg; Mrs. Downing, New Germany; Mrs. Musgrave, Aylesford; Mrs. Woodbury, Dartmouth; Mr. DeWolfe, Middleton; Miss Ellie Smith, Windsor; Miss G. Johnson, Halifax.

On Tuesday afternoon a large number of ladies gathered to listen to the various subjects to be brought before the convention. An excellent paper was read on "The School of Methods," prepared by Mrs. Jessie Woodbury, Dartmouth. This was followed by a paper on the "Duties and responsibilities of individual members and officers of the W. C. T. U.," by Mrs. (Dr.) Trotter, president of the Wolfville union. This was read by Mrs. Freeman, and was full of good advice and suggestive thoughts. Mrs. Rutherford, Dominion president, gave a practical talk about the duty of officers, and gave an account of her connection with the Woman's Journal, the organ of the Dominion W. C. T. U. Miss Wiggins, of Toronto, a very talented and bright speaker, conducted a parliamentary franchise drill, which brought out many witty and apt remarks. On the vote being taken, only one solitary "nay" was heard against the franchise for women. On Tuesday evening a large public meeting was addressed by Mrs. Rutherford, president of the Dominion convention, and Mrs. Fields, world's field organizer. These addresses were of marked ability and held the attention of the audience to the close. Excellent music was furnished by the choir and Mr. W. W. Roberts sang "The Holy City" in his usual pleasing style.

Interesting meetings were held on Wednesday morning and afternoon. Reports of committees were received and discussed and resolutions passed in connection with the work of the union. The officers were all re-elected with the exception of the second vice-president, Mrs. Power, of Lunenburg, being elected to that position. Votes of thanks were tendered the choir, the citizens of Wolfville and all who had helped to make the convention a success. The next meeting is to be at Sydney.

Wednesday evening a public meeting was held when the church was filled to the doors. The first part of the meeting was devoted to work of the Y. W. Branch, after which an excellent address was given by Miss Charlotte Wiggins. Her subject was Universal Suffrage, and she eloquently and forcibly presented the women's claim to the ballot. The address was heartily enjoyed by all present.

Mayor Thomson's Address AT THE W. C. T. U. WELCOME MEETING.

Mrs. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: The ladies of the local branch of this Temperance Union have invited me here to-night, that as mayor of the town I may address a few words of welcome to the visiting members of this Convention. I accepted the invitation with pleasure, because in so doing I would give expression to the feelings and wishes of our people.

On matters of religion and politics and some other subjects there are differences of opinion amongst us, as in other towns, but on the great question of temperance there is no difference. On that subject we are a unit. You will realize this from the following statements: Wolfville has a population of 1400-4000-4000 drug shop where alcoholic liquors are dispensed as medicine to doctors' orders. With this exception there is not within the bounds of the town a single place where such liquors can be bought. All our hotels are temperance ones. It was not always so. Formerly there were liquor dealers here, but by the vigilance and persistence of the Wolfville Division Sons of Temperance, backed by a strong public opinion, these pests have been driven out of the town.

Since that period the town records show that during the last three years but six persons have been arrested for drunkenness, and of these two only were residents of the town. These statements will show you that we are fully alive to the value of the temperance movement, and are in perfect accord with you therein. I do then but voice the feelings and wishes of our people, when I tender to you, as I now do, a cordial welcome to Wolfville, and to all members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union a hearty Godspeed in the great and noble work in which they are engaged.

Banjoes, Guitars, Mandolins, Autoharps, and Accordions.

It may not be generally known throughout the Maritime Provinces that we handle quite a large line of Small Musical Instruments. We have never advertised the fact extensively, as our efforts have been mostly confined to the sale of high class pianos and organs. However, in the future we expect to keep our friends more fully informed regarding "stock" etc., and will be very glad indeed to furnish immediate replies to all inquiries sent us in regard to the lines enumerated in our announcement to-day.

THE W. H. JOHNSON CO. LIMITED, Halifax, N. S.

Grand Pre.

At a trustee meeting last Saturday night at the Parsonage, a resolution was passed to make extensive repairs and improvements on the Methodist church here, amounting to about $1000, and half of that sum has been already subscribed by a few members of the congregation. William Woodman, Dr. Chipman and F. C. Dennison were appointed a committee to take charge of the work. The foundation under the north wall has settled and the wall is bulging out, threatening to destroy the church. This foundation will be replaced by a solid stone and brick wall, tile drains will be laid from the two corners to carry the water off. The floor of the basement will be taken up and a cement floor laid, giving a foot more in height from floor to ceiling. The walls will be sheathed and the ceiling covered with steel sheathing. It will be newly seated with modern seats, and the windows filled with ground glass. In the body of the church, the choir and organ will be moved from the gallery to a platform prepared for them back of the pulpit; the walls will be sheathed to match the sheathing of the ceiling, the windows will be refilled with stained glass, and the two heavy side galleries taken down, and the two ends of the end gallery curved out to the sides of the church in a semi-circle. The church will be painted, the furnaces put in good repair and lighting by calcium-carbide gas will be done if possible. This is a big undertaking for a small congregation with no rich men in it, and we ask for help from every Lower Horton Methodist at home or abroad. The work will be commenced at once and pushed along as rapidly as possible.

To begin with, the ladies will hold one of their dainty popular "goose suppers" in the basement of the church next Wednesday, Nov. 15th. Twenty fat geese have been engaged from one man, and all who come will, I am sure, find these geese with all the "frills" as appealing as usual. Posters will be put out this week. Kings County Agricultural Society held its 11th annual meeting according to law Tuesday, Nov. 7th, 2 p. m., in Eganville Hall. The membership is over 100 and the attendance was small. Secretary read the Government Circular. Minutes of annual, quarterly, and committee meetings read and adopted. Financial statement, auditors' report and directors' report for the year submitted and adopted by vote. Resolved that the directors' report be printed in the ACADIAN.

Officers elected: Pres. R. R. Duncan, Scotia; Secy. Dr. Chipman, Vice-Pres. Jas. L. Simons. Directors: F. C. Dennison, L. P. Dennison, Dr. J. N. Fuller, Robert Palmer, Chas. F. Patterson. Resolved that directors provide an innal for the different sections, and take charge of and be responsible for all implements used. Vote of thanks passed to Hon. Chipman for his kindness in assisting directors to purchase ball Klondike King. F. C. Dennison, chairman of directors, in his report referred to the success of the Creamery at Wolfville, and a discussion arose with regard to providing extra fodder for cows during the short months to keep up the supply of butter in late autumn and early winter. Butter is 25 cents per lb now and the Wolfville Creamery cannot supply its customers in the county, and the manager of the butter route in Halifax has been forced to buy butter outside to supply customers in Halifax. The shareholders who supply milk to the Creamery in Wolfville are reaping double profits—the pay for butter fat and the profit on the butter business in Halifax. The number of cows in this district if kept at their best flow is enough to double the quantity made at the factory in a year, and the profit would increase accordingly. There is no place in the province where so large and profitable a dairy business could and should be done as in the district covered by the Creamery at Wolfville.

The Exhibition came in for some discussion. The opinion expressed was that the Exhibition was the most of a "show" from the "grand stand" and too little exhibition of industrial and agricultural products. Some thought a provincial exhibition once in two years and county exhibitions in the off year would be an improvement.

Dr. J. N. Fuller was elected delegate to the N. S. Farmers' Association. Meeting adjourned.

DIAMOND DYES are Home Protectors. Imitation Dyes are Vile Deceptions. The thousands of women in our Canadian cities, towns and farming districts stand in need of the protection afforded by the never-fading Diamond Dyes.

Minards Liniment Cures Dandruff. Hands which have become roughened and tanned during the summer outing may be greatly benefited by washing with water.

Young Women Should Help the Temperance Cause. The blessings and hope of to-morrow depend upon the young men and women of to-day, for they are the home-makers.

For a Delicate Child. For a delicate child or an invalid there is a simple preparation of meat which contains a great quantity of nourishment and yet is most easily digested.

Automobile Laws. Laws regulating the operation of automobiles on public highways have recently been adopted in France.

Minards Liniment for Sale everywhere. SCHEDULE BEFORE HIM.—Scene—American school-room. Teacher—Who was the first man? Little Boy (at rear of class)—George Washington, ma'am.

A CARD. I, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a twenty-five cent bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, if, after using three-fourths of contents of bottle, they do not relieve Constipation and Headache.

To Cure a Cold in One Day. Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box.

As it Once Was. When the human foot was first introduced to shoes it was exactly as nature had made it, strong-symmetrical-landsome.

As it Once Was.

When the human foot was first introduced to shoes it was exactly as nature had made it, strong-symmetrical-landsome.

It has been revolutionized from what it was to the foot of to-day by sixteen centuries of distorting tightness and freakish styles.

"Slater Shoes" are made to fit feet as they are to-day, comfort first, but good appearance never forgotten.

Twelve shapes, six widths, all sizes leathers and colors.

Goodyear welted, name and price stamped on the soles.

What is "Khaki"?

In connection with accounts of the fitting out of our Canadian volunteers for South Africa the word "khaki" is seen many times.

It is getting to be the correct thing in London just at present to go to the Waterloo station every Saturday morning to witness the departure of the S. African train.
