SOMETHING TO THINK OVER.

You are aware that you cannot go without food and still retain your strength; yet you do neglect the exercise and recreation necessary to perfect health and long life. Why don't you buy a bicycle, ride it and add ten long years to your life? You can then, with clear brain and added energy, accomplish more than you do now, and in less time. With an easy-running Stearns Bicycle you can save enough time to enable you to make delightful outings. The Stearns is called the Yellow Fellow because of its orange finish; we have it in black if you prefer.

100% BETTER.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are curing heart and nerve troubles in every city, town and village in Canada. Mrs. F. Abbey, Toronto, says: "Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured my husband who had for fifteen years suffered with weak nerves caused by heart trouble. He was subject to pain in the chest, dizziness, fainting spells, sleeplessness, etc. He is now free from these troubles, and feels 100% better than when he began using the pills."

Minard's Pills

Are prepared from vegetable medicines only. The combination is so carefully arranged as to meet all cases when a Cathartic is necessary. They not only evacuate the bowels, but will open the secretions and expel foul humors from the system. Their action is gentle and thorough. Without any flaming advertisement, we send these Pills forth to make their own market, as our Liniment has already done. A TRIAL IN ALL THAT IS NECESSARY TO INSURE SUCCESS.

Are you Bilious, have you a Sick Headache, Colic, Jaundice, Constipation, Nervous Debility, Disturbed Stomach or Kidneys, Dyspepsia? Do you feel dull and heavy. Try these Pills a few times and all will be well with you. They will often break up a cold by taking a good dose at night, taking a light supper and bathing the feet in hot water.

Catholic Societies and the Intellectual Man.

The following excellent address was delivered by a distinguished member of the Boston bar, P. J. Finley, at the recent annual meeting of the Catholic Young Men's National Union, in Boston: In a country where freedom of speech, properly understood, is a postulate of Government, one naturally expects to find people assembled in meetings for the discussion of public affairs. This is a not infrequent occurrence, and for its more effectual accomplishment are formed organizations or societies. A society may be defined as a number of men or women banded together for the promotion or attainment of a common end. In the multitudinous pursuits of our complex life we have societies of all names and conditions organized for purposes praiseworthy and otherwise. Even our Catholic societies, with which we have specially to deal, there is an infinite variety of names, but in their devotion to the Faith a golden chain encircles them, a spiritual leaven energizes them. They are engaged in countless ministries of well-doing, humanity has few needs not provided for in their out-reach of charitable endeavor.

Nor is there any land, nor any age from gnosticism to agnosticism where such societies may not be found. In the days of Saint Jerome and Saint Chrysostom, as well as in the age called Dark, they had flourishing existence. The monks and missionaries, on the dissolution of the Roman Empire, founded schools and colleges, forged the arms that saved Europe from barbarism; the lamp of learning was kept burning in the lonely cell, classic literature was preserved in Sibley leaves, the "brothers of the pen" have handed down to us monuments of their skill and industry, manuscripts that are marvels of the pictorial art, evoking the admiration of all succeeding times. By their labors Europe was reborn and the seed was sown of a new civilization. And in our own age what deeds are done revealing this exuberance of enthusiasm? Wherever the sign of redemption is set aloft on a Catholic Church, there in smaller or larger numbers is a society of boys or girls, men or women, to manifest their allegiance to the inner world of the soul, to give advice to the sympathy of heart and intellect for that outer world crystallized in your magnificent motto "God and our neighbor." Who that neighbor is we are taught by the parable of the Good Samaritan. What language can tell of the chaste fire of sanctity in the breasts of our religious orders? Whether in the cloistered peace of rapt contemplation, moulding the minds of the young, drying the tear of the mourner, leading transients from God to schools of reform, ministering to the old and feeble in asylums, tending to the sick and wounded in hospitals or on the battlefield, everywhere the Holy Spirit vitalizes their work, and written large on the banner floating over their silent steps are the words "God and our Neighbor."

We may not speak of the sodalities peopling in the shadow of the sanctuary, of the Holy Name societies who would find make reparation for the revolting profanity that vexes our ears, of those of St. Vincent de Paul who strive to bring forth the full idea of an apostolate, nor of many others whose works are fraught with temporal and spiritual benefit to the members and to the community. Our concern is mainly with societies of young men organized for the physical, intellectual, and moral advancement of the members, and therefore, for their elevation and dignity of character citizens of the state and of the republic. In cities where young men are beset with so many distractions and temptations, such societies do invaluable good. For the stranger they sweeten the sadness from home, and furnish congenial companionship. To organize such a society is no easy task, to preserve its mechanism in good running order demands unceasing toil, and tireless vigilance. For numberless things are to be done regarding its normal operations. Seasons of disaster may come, but as the farmer by stress of weather is forced to seed his crop three times or more before the prospect of a rich harvest smiles upon him, so the officers must redouble their exertions to stimulate the members and revive a drooping organization. The members must not be inactive, they should be at one with the Board of Government, observant of the by-laws, and kindly in demeanor to each other and to visitors. As far as means will permit they should have a well selected and well stocked library, and be generous in their patronage of the Catholic Press in their homes and in the rooms of the association. In essays, debates, dramatic exhibitions, mental powers are brought into play, the views are broadened, both sides of a question are presented, and a noble ambition is fostered. Concerts are frequent, lectures are given, smoke talks furnish recreation. In a rare and exceptional case a member may try and exploit the society for his own advantage. This is frowned down as soon as attempted, all are pitted in generous rivalry with each other, animated by one motive, aspiring to one end. Mindful that this supernatural end can be reached only by the observance of the commandments and Precepts of the Church—the Divinely constructed lighthouse to guard against hidden rocks and shoals of error and guide into the haven of safety—they receive the Blessed Sacrament at stated times, and diffuse religion among the people. In the regular working of the society appears to be exemplified the direction of St. Paul, "Let nothing be done through contention neither by vain glory, but in humility, let each esteem others better than themselves." Philip, Cap. ii. 3.

Young men in particular are influenced by their surroundings, affected by environment, therefore, there is now such an overmastering desire for athleticism. A sound mind in a sound body is to be sought for, but we should never cultivate the one at the expense of the other, should never give undue attention to the gymnasium, base ball, or the wheel, to the detriment of intellectual and spiritual requirements. We should cherish cordial feelings for each other, so that as the pagans of the earlier centuries spoke of the Catholics of that time those who follow in their footsteps may have good reason to reiterate their exclamation, "See how those Christians love one another." One glorious effect of this love would be not only a union of all the societies in the United States, from New York to San Francisco, but an international union of Catholic societies. The difficulties to be overcome will fade away before the latent energies of our young men when fully aroused. In the beginning, however, it would be well to limit it to our own country, and to Ireland, England, and Scotland. Live on annex Spain, France, Germany, Italy, and Austria and when a consolidation is effected, establish, with the sanction of our beloved and august Pontiff, an official centre, which would operate as one vast dynamo of moral force from which Catholic energy would be transmitted to the outmost rim of the globe. Then would an epoch shroud in splendor, radiant with advent possibilities, and awaiting its advent we should infuse new vigor into every branch of the organization. Every member realizing the grandeur of his mission should actualize his thoughts in noble action, be familiar with the best that has been said or done in the world, and aid in the solution of problems that confront us in a way that will subserve the permanent interests of City, State and Nation. In our various callings we should be models of efficiency and integrity, faithful to the teachings of our holy religion, and follow with unflinching step the lode-star of duty, lead it whithersoever it may. To this little may be added for etching the lineaments of the intellectual man. We hear much of the spirit of materialism that is rampant, extolled for his possession of land and money. We hear still more of the self educated man whose point of view is larger, whose field of vision is broader, who from time to time casts forth our admiration by his magnificent donations for the benefit of his fellow men, for the uplifting, culture, and refinement of the race. In this way he provides the occasion for the development of the intellectual man, that is, of one usually regarded as one who has a liberal education. He is not the paucalistic patriot who poses as the guardian of our liberties, nor the preacher masquerading as the minister of the God of love while sowing dissension amongst brethren. He is not the author who will mutilate documents in order to present a one-sided view of a controverted question, nor the editor who makes the press the vehicle of what is pernicious to the young, of what reeks with vulgarity and lubricity. His mind is so trained and disciplined by study and application that he has a keen perception both of the realities of life here and of the life beyond. It can wander among the stars, search the depths of the ocean, sound the secrets of ether and reveal in the lambent play of the lightning. It scans the altitude of space, girdles the planets in their course, and does more than solve the riddle of the Sphinx at the hands of the electrical or chemist.

In a long past era the man who was gifted with such a mind was something of a phenomenon, poised on a lofty pinnacle he was almost idolized by the masses. Now when Patolus streams of knowledge lay bare their golden sands in every clime, when civilization is in information with the air they breathe, when there are over sixteen millions of pupils in our own schools and colleges, the rudiments at least are familiar to all. But knowledge ill directed or prostituted to vile ends is worse than crass ignorance. The intellectual man whose faculties can be focused on the apprehension of truth, can, by the light of reason alone, know of the existence of God, but with this knowledge he discovers the limitations of the mind. Marvellous in its reach of intelligence it must pause in approaching the sequelae of the Divine, for without the illumination of Faith it cannot measure the mysteries which transcend the comprehension of the intellectual man. While above the sphere of reason they do not contradict but are in full harmony with its dictates. He makes use of philosophy as the vestibule of the Temple of Theology, and regards the verities of science as allies thereof leading to the altar where the Holy of Holies "the greatest of all miracles" is tabernacled. Here Catholic societies and the intellectual man find the alpha and omega of their reverent love, and the substance of which the manna in the desert was an adumeration, and the nutriment of the soul, the well spring of their social, civil, and spiritual activities. Survey the horizon of life as we may in every arena of effort, physical, mental, speculative—the power of the mind is manifest, the intellectual man imperiously demands our appreciation. The soldier at the head of his army, the sailor in command of his vessel; the statesman in his closet unwinding the web of intricate policy, each struggles for the welfare of his country, and wins enduring greatness if the mind has perfect manifestation. It dowers the patriot with elemental strength, gilds with an overlying halo the masterpiece of painter, poet, and sculptor, and irradiates with the glow of genius the supreme works of orator, architect, and historian.

And yet in the Providence of Faith, where we believe on the actuality of God revealing truth, the little children who know the catechism of Christian doctrine are on the same plain as the most gifted members of Catholic societies, as the most brilliant intellectual man. And Faith is had by grace given us by the gratuitous goodness of God, ordinarily by prayer and the sacraments which He has established. There are those, it is true, who have denied the supernatural, who blazon their unbelief in myriad channels. But the promise and the potency of atonement may be dismissed as a dream, for all the verifiable conclusions of the scientist point with irresistible force to evidence of design and of a Creator. Prayers of the faithful will kill the microbes of unbelief, and plant the germ of faith in the breast of the erring. Already the sun of this century is near its setting, the shadows of its dusk are deepening, streaks of the new dawn are faintly outlined on the peak of the near future. What problems it may bring its momentous importance we may not forecast; our paramount duty, however, as members of Catholic societies and as intelligent men is unalterable devotion to our motto "God and our neighbor." Herein lies the essence of our relations to our country, for the better Catholic citizen, and a country rejoicing in moral, intelligent, incorruptible citizens has before it a career of unimaginable magnificence. Herein, too, is the essence of our spiritual relations. We profess allegiance to a church that, upborne by its Founder has fought triumphantly its militant war for nineteen centuries. The ordeal of combat may linger on, foes may assail it from within and from without, but looking back from the past we may have confidence in the future. He is the same yesterday, to-day, tomorrow, and forever—therefore the same of all the isms against doctrinal truth is mere ripple-wash tossed off the bark of Peter as it sails on its heavenly voyage directed by the Divine pilot. Mindful of our dual obligations to the Church and to the Republic we shall aim continuously for the well-being and expansion of both, believing, though they run in different orbits, yet that which is prejudicial to the one is injurious to the other. The Catholic Young Men's National Union will ever be a bulwark of the Republic, for the man that is true to his creed will never be false to his country. We should cherish, too, filial obedience to our ecclesiastical superiors—they are the dispensers of the mysteries of God—working in season and out of season under the manner which we are unconsciously bound to honor and defend "God and our Neighbor." And as the years go by, as centuries roll past, may it be said of Amer-

Work that Nourishes.

One of the secrets of a life of growing power is to be nourished rather than depleted by one's work. Activity is healthful strain is harmful. Men do not die of overwork, but of the maladjustment to the conditions of their work; for under right conditions work develops just as truly as exercise; but under wrong conditions it depotes and destroys. The great workers of the world have accumulated force rather than parted with it and have gathered richness of material and power of action by the putting forth of their energies; so that their lives have moved toward culmination rather than toward an early fruition followed by a long decline. It is easy to detect the difference between the man who is fed by his work and the man who is drained by it. The man who works with delight and ease grows by means of his activity, and the first secret to be learned in order to rid work of worry and wear is to take it in a purposeful spirit, to refuse to be hurried, to exchange the sense of being mastered by one's occupation for the consciousness of mastery. To take work easily and quietly, not because one is indifferent to it, is to take the first step towards turning work into play.—Catholic Review.

The virtues of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all forms of disease. Conspicuously prove. That it is an unequalled Blood Purifier. It conquers the denses, Scrofula, Relieves the itching and burning of salt rheum, cures running sores, ulcers, boils, pimples, and every other form of humor or disease originating in impure blood. The cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla are cures—absolute, permanent, perfect cures. They are based upon its great power to purify and enrich the blood.

The Cardinal's Cross.

Cardinal Melobers, when he was dying, had in his possession a peccolator cross and ring belonging to Pius IX. These he left in his will as a legacy to be handed over to that foreign mission which after a certain number of years would have gained most distinction in propagating the faith, the Cardinal Prefect of the Propaganda to be the Judge. Cardinal Ledochowski recently made the award and has assigned the peccolator cross and ring to the venerable French prelate, Cardinal Lavigne.

Cures

Prove the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla—positive, live, perfect, permanent cures. Cures of scrofula in secret forms, the goitre, swollen neck, running sores, hip disease, sores in the eyes. Cures of Salt Rheum, with its intense itching and burning, scald head, tetter, etc. Cures of Boils, Pimples, and all other eruptions due to impure blood. Cures of Dyspepsia and other troubles where a good stomach tonic was needed. Cures of Rheumatism, where patients were unable to work or walk for weeks. Cures of Catarrh by expelling the impurities which cause and sustain the disease. Cures of Nervousness by properly toning and feeding the nerves upon pure blood. Anemia means "want of blood," a deficiency in the red corpuscles of the blood. Its cause is found in want of sufficient food, dyspepsia, lack of exercise or breathing impure air.

recess of the fallen by itself, is a real, true following of Christ! A good pagan might do it and find abundant satisfaction in the hardest and most austere life, and in it all be only feeling his pride or carrying out a fad; even in other circumstances and with clearer light and better knowledge, instead of performing a meritorious religious act, and heaping up damnation for himself.

which refer to the seaside burial places of heroes. As long ago as the time of Homer great warriors were buried by the ocean in the amount they were in life; and when the people of Largo, in Scotland, insisted that a certain huge mound was artificial, and that under it was buried a brave chief in silver armour, many believed them. Barrow after barrow was overturned by the plough all over the United Kingdom, and remains exhumed, which indicated that they had been burial places, but not a scrap of silver or gold, or a button had been found. Still, the people of Largo held fast to their story.

Some time ago the Salvation Army in England published a biography of St. Francis of Assisi, and thousands of copies of it have been distributed. It is the work of Staff Captain Douglas, and the Rev. A. P. Doyle, C. S. P., has taken it as the theme for an article in the September Catholic World.

God is not like man, that great things should make Him incapable of small ones. On the contrary, He has a microscopic perception of the minutest details of His "glory," or felicity or reciprocated love; and to Him the least of these perceptions is priceless.—Coventry Patmore.

Irish devotion to the Blessed Virgin appears in the great numbers who in ancient times, bore the name of Maeline, which means "the servant"—literally the tapers "of Mary" such persons, male and female—were Maeline were common to both sexes—having been placed under her especial patronage and protection at baptism.—John Salmon.

Some great man has proclaimed himself an agnostic, and forthwith the educated classes repeat the word; then the men with a classical smattering, the readers of newspapers, the watchers of the political game, the skimmers of books, the eager auditors of the purveyors of bold novelties in religion and morality,—they say: "Who knows anything?" There is no intellect value in such a consensus as this. It is gregarious, not intelligence.—Bishop Hedley.
