WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER VIII.
"Too Late!"

"Poor Annie and me will be quite safe," laughed Olivia. "Mr. Faradeane does not even bark, least of all bite."

"This was a few minutes before dinner, and the entrance of Bertie and Bartley Bradstone stopped the interesting conversation.

"We are only waiting for Mr. Faradeane," said the squire, glancing at his watch, after the usual greetings had been got through.

"Faradeane?" said Bartley Bradstone as he stood in an easy—too easy—attitude, his evening suit cut in the very last fashion, and a costly diamond blazing in the center of his white shirt-front. "Faradeane? Is he coming?" and his brows came down with the half-sullen, half-suspicious frown.

"Yes," said the squire, "and I am glad to say we have struck up a friendship. He is one of the pleasantest men—"

"He might be polite as well as pleasant," said Bartley Bradstone, looking at his watch. "It isn't quite the thing for a newcomer to keep us all waiting."

Bertie cut in quickly. "It wants two minutes to six," he said. "your watch is fast, Mr. Bradstone."

"It's one of Dent & Frodsham's chronometers," he retorted.

"It's fast all the same," said Bertie, firmly, but pleasantly. "I timed mine at the station an hour or two ago."

Before Mr. Bradstone could meet this argument, the door opened and the footman announced Mr. Faradeane, and the great hall clock chimed the hour.

Every eye was, not unnaturally, turned upon the latest guest, and Olivia thought that Annie was right as she glanced at the tall figure and handsome face. Unlike Mr. Bartley Bradstone, his dress-suit was not in the latest cut, and instead of a blazing diamond was a plain black pearl.

An expression of approval shone in the squire's eyes, for Faradeane's appearance in evening dress confirmed the squire in his good opinion of him. "You have just come in time to prevent a duel of time-pieces," he said. Aunt Amelia smirged.

"I, at any rate, was sure Mr. Faradeane was not late," said she, graciously. "Then, as a reward, you shall be taken in by him," said the squire, offering his arm to Mary. Bertie, the highest in rank, escorted Annie; and Faradeane having Aunt Amelia, Olivia was left to Bartley Bradstone.

"This is a rough-and-scramble meal," said the squire, as the butler lifted the cover from the fish, "but if you will perpetrate such follies as penny readings, you must pay the penalty."

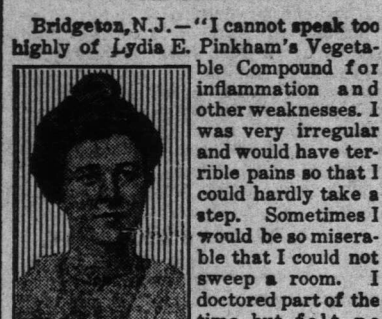

"My brother ridicules our humble efforts to amuse and instruct our brethren, Mr. Faradeane; but he is always doing good himself, which he never mentions."

"Nor permits any one else to mention," said the squire.

"Do not let your right hand know

RECOVERY OF NEW JERSEY WOMAN

Due To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I cannot speak too highly of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for inflammation and other weaknesses. I was very irregular and would have terrible pains so that I could hardly take a step. Sometimes I would be so miserable that I could not sweep a room. I doctored part of the time but felt no change. I later took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and felt a change for the better after the second day. I took it until I was in a good healthy condition. I recommend the Pinkham remedies to all women as I have used them with good results."—Mrs. MILFORD T. CUMMINGS, 24 New Street, Bridgeton, N. J.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence of the excellence of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the distressing ills of women such as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, backache, painful periods, nervousness and kindred ailments.

what your left hand doeth," as the man said who put a bad shilling in the collecting-box," said Faradeane.

Annie and Mary almost started. Was this the mysterious stranger whose dark, contemptuous eyes had smitten them with awe? And could it be possible that his first words should be a frivolous jest? They began by being astonished, and continued so during the whole of the meal, for Mr. Faradeane, if he did not quite "set the table in a roar," kept them all perpetually amused.

If it had not been so perfectly natural and free from the appearance of effort, it would almost have seemed as if he were playing the part of the wit with a purpose; but the musical voice was quite easy and unstrained, and the dark eyes were cloudless and unreserved. The squire glowed with sympathetic delight as epigram after epigram fell quite naturally from his guest, and Bertie's eyes sparkled with fun as he laughed at the dry humor and happy repartee.

Only two persons seemed unmoved. One was Bartley Bradstone, who sat in half-sullen, half-envious silence, taking no part in the conversation beyond a monosyllabic response, and inwardly and palpably chafing at the success the newcomer was obviously making.

The other was Olivia. At first she had smiled with the rest, but presently she happened to glance round the epergne which stood between her and Mr. Faradeane, and at that instant she caught his face off its guard, as it were, and saw a strange sadness falling like a shadow on his eyes and hovering about his lips. It was gone in a moment, but its remembrance haunted her, and she knew that the wit and the humor and the light-heartedness were assumed, and magnificently assumed, to hide some secret sorrow.

And as she listened as he told a story which convulsed Bertie and Annie and Mary, and made the squire laugh the hearty laugh which was so rare with him, there flashed upon her the well-known anecdote of the comedian who succeeded in convulsing a theatre with laughter while his thoughts were fixed upon his favorite child, who lay dying while he played. "A most delightful man!" exclaimed Aunt Amelia, as the ladies fled into the drawing-room. "I never laughed so much in my life."

"Nor I!" exclaimed Mary and Annie. "And he scarcely smiled himself. Did you see the squire laugh. Oh, dear? Why, he isn't at all what I fancied he would be! I'm not a bit afraid of him. But you didn't seem so amused, dear; you didn't laugh scarcely at all. Why was that?" and she wound her arm round Olivia's waist.

"It's because I'm so stupid," replied Olivia. "You must make allowances, Annie."

Meanwhile the butler—who had only succeeded in maintaining his solemn gravity through the dinner by going out into the hall and getting rid of his laughter—had placed the Hawwood port on the table, and left the gentlemen to discuss it.

"You have a wonderful memory," Faradeane—No, that's unfair, a wonderful vein of humor, I ought to say," said the squire.

Faradeane, who had sunk into his chair after the ladies' exodus, looked up with a slight start. "Your first remark is the right one," he said; "I have a good memory."

"Yes," said Bartley Bradstone. "It reminds me of Russell, who said once in the House that 'a man was indebted to his memory for his wit, and to his imagination for his facts.'"

There was a moment of ghostly silence; then Faradeane said, with perceptible ease and amiability: "Quite right, Mr. Bradstone, your quotation hits me to a nicety. I have a good memory."

"I've heard most of the stories a score of times," said Bartley Bradstone, filling his glass.

"And I haven't heard one," said the squire; "but I have been out of the world so long."

"You couldn't have heard them, squire," said Bertie, warmly, "seeing that Faradeane invented them on the spot."

"Not at all, Cherub," put in Faradeane with a faint smile.

"Well, nearly all. I remember you telling that one about Limerick races."

He stopped and caught at his wine glass as Faradeane's eyes grew grave and warning. "I mean I remember that story years ago."

"I never heard it before," said the squire, "and am just as grateful as if Mr. Faradeane had invented it," and he laughed. "Well, now, take some wine, for we must have a cup of tea with the ladies before you start."

Bartley Bradstone filled his glass, but Faradeane and Bertie left theirs empty, and a few minutes afterward they went into the drawing-room.

CHAPTER IX.

"The Bird is Netted."

The ladies had got their outdoor things on; but Olivia stood at the teatable with her gloves off to give the gentlemen their tea. As Faradeane went up to her for his cup, she raised her eyes to his face curiously, and felt no surprise at seeing it wear its usual grave and half-sad expression. She had instinctively known that he had been acting during the dinner, and the lightheartedness which had so enchanted the rest, was but seeming.

He met her gaze and smiled faintly, and her eyes fell.

"Were you going to ask me something?" he inquired, in a low voice.

"No, no," she said, confusedly. "Will you have some sugar?"

"You see," he said, "you were going to ask me something."

Feeling as if his dark eyes had read her innermost thoughts, she flushed, and turned away to put on her gloves.

"We really mustn't be late, Mr. Faradeane!" exclaimed Aunt Amelia, who was "got up" in a hat and jacket rather more youthful than Olivia's. "The dear people will be so anxious, you know."

"I am ready," he said, and he went toward Olivia to offer her his arm to the carriage, then stopped suddenly, as if he had remembered something, and looked round for Bertie, who sprang forward to her side instantly.

ECZEMA

Pimples form, run watery matter which turns to crust, itching becomes painfully intense, and the disease spreads over the body. There are many varieties of eczema, but all are cured by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Relief from itching is obtained in one, and gradually and naturally the sores are healed. You can see with your own eyes just what it does for you. It is a wonderful healing, soothing ointment, and this will encourage you to treatment until cure is complete.

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Olivia saw the sudden change of partners, and for a moment she hesitated; then, with lowered eyes, she put her hand on Bertie's arm.

The rest followed, and Faradeane got into the carriage with Annie and Mary, much to their delight, and somewhat to their awe.

"Well," said Bertie, eagerly, in a low voice to Olivia, "what do you think of him?"

"Of him?" asked Olivia, with an affection of doubt.

"Of Faradeane," said Bertie. "Isn't he splendid? By Jove! he was at his best to-night—I mean I should think so," he stammered, with a mental banning of his carelessness. "That's what I call humor, Olivia, don't you?"

Anybody can make you laugh—I mean any low comedian, but not as he does. He makes you think at the same time, don't you know. You know what I mean."

"Yes, I think I do," she said, in a low tone. "Is Mr. Faradeane always in such good spirits?"

"No, by Jove! poor old fellow!" said Bertie, regretfully. "He is generally awfully sad and quiet. I think he came out strong to-night to please the squire and amuse Annie and Mary. They were delighted, weren't they?"

"Yes. And you think Mr. Faradeane had no thought of our amusement and applause—yours and Mr. Bradstone's and mine?" she asked, with her rare smile.

"No; I think he exerted himself for the squire and the girls. It's just like his good nature."

"You appear to have become very intimate with him in a short time," said Olivia.

Poor Bertie colored a deep red, which the darkness luckily concealed.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

The remarkable economy of the incandescent gas lamp is by no means either its chief—or even an important—claim for popularity. It meets better than any other source of artificial light the requirements of ideal light.

In the color of the light produced it is far superior to any other illuminant in general and universal use. The investigations of acknowledged authorities indicate that for the approximation of artificial daylight the gas mantle has at least one and one-half times the value of the carbon-filament electric lamp.

This quality is highly desirable, indeed absolutely essential where the approximation of daylight color values is important. For lighting shops, displaying haberdashery, suitings, gowns, millinery, etc., the incandescent gas lamp is not even remotely approached by any other incandescent lamp.

Of all the manifold advantages of gas light, perhaps the most important is its favourable effect upon the eyes. The development of the incandescent electric lamp with its intense brilliant and glaring filament has been accompanied by hitherto unheard-of prevalence of eye troubles and diseases which are forcing themselves upon the attention of the medical fraternity. This is resulting in a greater appreciation of the soft mellow quality of gas light and is rapidly enlarging its field of use.—July 13, 1916.

A SMART BREAKFAST COSTUME.

Blouse and Cap—1780. Petticoat—1728. Comprising Pattern 1780, which consists of a blouse and cap, and Pattern 1728, which may serve as a morning skirt or a petticoat. Silk, crepe, gingham, percale, challis or washable satin could be used for these models. The skirt has full gathered portion joined to a hip yoke section. The blouse or sack could be of contrasting material. The Pattern of the blouse, which includes the cap, is cut in 3 sizes: Small, Medium and Large. It requires 3 3/4 yards of 36-inch material for the sack and 7/8 yard for the cap, for a Medium size. The skirt is cut in 7 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches waist measure. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 36-inch material for a 24-inch size.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns, which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

A JAUNTY SPORT COSTUME.

Blouse—1761. Skirt—1756. Striped taffeta in green and blue was used for the smock, and green jersey cloth for the skirt. Tub silk, linen and washable satin is also nice for this style. The skirt is a three-gore model with lap tuck at the front seam. The smock has front yoke portions and big pockets. Pattern 1761 furnishes the model for the smock. It is cut in 7 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure, and requires 3 3/4 yards of 44-inch material for a 36-inch size. The Skirt is cut in 7 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches waist measure. It requires 3 3/4 yards of 44-inch material for a 26-inch size, which measures 3 3/4 yards at the foot.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns, which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

A Little Story of two Mount Allison Men WHO HAVE DIED IN BATTLE.

When he was a student at Mount Allison a few years ago Lieutenant John L. Godwin, recently killed in action in France achieved very little personal success in athletics and yet it was through him that a weak spot was plugged in a 'varsity football fifteen and a player developed who subsequently became one of the star full backs in the Garnet and Gold history. And like Lieutenant Godwin that full back has now given his life for the Empire they both were proud to serve.

It was in the season of 1909 that the football people at Mount A. were at their wits' end to find a full back. A half dozen players had been shifted from other positions in efforts to plug up that hole but none of them filled the bill by a long way. Leaving that one position out of the question, the team shaped up badly enough but with glaring weakness in the last defence—well, 'Jimmy' McWilliam, the quarter-back captain, was a worried sort of person. And he wasn't the only one.

Then, one evening Godwin strolled into McWilliam's room and listened to the football groans. "Why don't you try that Trappell," he said finally. Godwin didn't know much about football but when he and most of the other fellows had left the room McWilliam and one or two football men talked over his suggestion. They didn't think much of it—to tell the truth—but something had to be done. Next day Trappell was turned out at full back. He was surprised, no doubt, but he was a silent sort of a chap and made very few comments when the order came.

And maybe he didn't wake people up! His work wasn't "finished" but it was mighty promising. Don Trappell played through that season at full and next year he showed up in great form, saving Mount A. in more than one tight hole. And if it hadn't been for John Godwin some of the people who thought they knew more about football in a minute than he did in a year would probably never have turned Trappell out at all in that 1909 season.

Trappell, a Newfoundlander, went across the water with the First Canadian Expeditionary Force and gave his life for the Empire in the early fighting in which the Canadians took part—falling in battle about the same time that 'Dicky' Boone, of St. John's, and Verne Eldorin, of Parrsboro, two of his Mount A. chums were killed. Godwin went overseas with an artillery battery some few months ago and was killed a short time after his brother, Lieutenant C. Godwin, made the great sacrifice. — Amherst Guardian.

No Tin Mugs Now.

An Instance of General Brusiloff's Thoroughness.

Early in the war General Brusiloff discovered that the tin drinking vessels, or canteens, carried by the soldiers glistened in the sun, and so revealed the presence of the wearers, and drawing the enemy's fire. So he sent to Petrograd for half a million yards of grey felt, and in less than forty-eight hours every canteen was covered in it, and rendered, from the military point of view, invisible.

There are plenty of men now serving in the British Army who remember when our canteens were carried on the packs—uncovered. Moreover, the rule was that they had to be polished to the brightness of burnished silver. A more tempting mark, or one more likely to attract the roving eye of an enemy sniper, it would be almost impossible to conceive.

For instance, at Loos a British soldier fired at a round shining object which showed itself for a few moments above the edge of a German trench, without, however, in the least knowing what it was. A little while afterwards the trench was taken by assault, and the soldier went to see what he had fired at.

He found a German lying there dead, shot through the brain, and clonched tightly in his hand was his little tin drinking cup, the bottom holed by a bullet. The unhappy man had incautiously raised the cup in drinking, and his head with it, and the same missile had pierced them both.

In the Boer War, again, a marksman on the British side was responsible for an even more extraordinary eventuality of the kind. Firing at the glint of a tin canteen at something over eight hundred yards range, he hit it.

The owner of the canteen who, like the German mentioned above, was in the act of raising it to his lips at the time, was un wounded. But the impact of the bullet drove the food it contained into his gullet with such unexpected force and suddenness that he was choked to death by a piece of meat—some accounts say a crust of bread—which became fixed in his windpipe.—Pearson's Weekly.

"Life of France Depends on England."

Rotterdam, August 8.—Major Mohr writes as follows in the Berliner Volkszeitung:—

"The life of France depends upon England taking a further part in the war, and whether it is still prepared to shed more blood.

"England is apparently determined to set the future of the war on this card. First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour confirms that unbroken stream of men and munitions is being carried across the channel. For us this is a reminder that we must, as far as possible, break this undisturbed communication between England and France. Only when we have carried out our threat against English communication with the continent can we reckon upon relief on the Somme.

"In this Somme district the English heavy guns spit day and night on our trenches, positions and every visible place of communication for our trenches with such fury as was never before experienced. Although hundreds of thousands of projectiles explode without effect, there still remain zones of fire, the horrors of which can only be imagined by those who have been there."

Fashions and Fads.

Square parasols are in fashion. Wide silver ribbons are good for girldes.

Many of the new blouses are skirted.

Nose veils will probably be worn all winter.

Cape collars are features of autumn coats.

Metal brocades are in high favor among silks.

None but the slender should wear the founced skirt.

Kid shoes, with ornaments of cretonne set in are new.

There is a new clear blue among the millinery velvets.

More cotton waiats than usual will be worn this autumn.

Many coat sleeves are cut with a flare below the elbow.

Many of the coats of the fall suits are fitted to the figure.

The novelties for autumn neckwear are almost bulky.

Feather Surgeons.

Snipe and woodcock have often been taken with a mass of feathers on one of the legs. This mass when examined has always been found to cover a broken bone. The feathers have been carefully and neatly twisted round the part where the limb was fractured in such a way as to prove that they had been put on intentionally as a bandage or splint, and the repairs have been made quite as skillful as if performed by a qualified surgeon.

A well known naturalist actually watched a woodcock through his glasses drag a broken leg to the margin of a stream. There the bird took some clay and, after working it into a paste with its beak, smeared it round the leg in layer after layer, adding a number of downy feathers which it plucked from its own back and breast.

When the operation was finished the bird stood still for more than an hour, no doubt to give the plaster time to set.

Wounds on other parts of the body have also been found plastered in the same way.—London Answers.

them, the Halifax School for the Blind stands high, and the war has undoubtedly given emphasis to the good work it has done. If the practical support of the nation is diverted, not from civilian to soldier, which is quite unnecessary, but from its own demands to those of neutrals with indefinite and "cosmopolitan" objects, there will be just ground for complaint.

S. O. E. Decorate Graves of Departed.

Yesterday afternoon the annual Decoration of Graves of deceased brethren of the S.O.E. took place at the General Protestant Cemetery and was largely attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. Royie, who gave a highly interesting and impressive address on the occasion, referring to the observance of the day, in which respect is paid to the departed brethren. In very touching words he spoke of the young men, members of the Society, who fell in the big charge on the immortal July 1st, Lieut. Stanley, Sergt.-Major Miles and Private Stanley Pike. Special hymns, including "Nearer My God to Thee" were sung in a very hearty manner by the large congregation. A small British ensign, the Society's emblem, was placed on the graves of the deceased members of the Society. In the morning a meeting was held in the Lodge room, when committees were appointed to attend the graves of departed members in the Church of England and Salvation Army Cemeteries.

There will be charming pictures at the Nickel theatre all this week and patrons should not fail to attend. To-day there is a swell programme which will afford pleasure to all. The grand serial "The Strange Case of Mary Page" will be continued. All the young folk are now interested in this very clever story. Kathlyn Williams, the popular actress will be seen in a thrilling story, entitled "The Carpet from Bagdad." This picture is in five reels and is brilliantly acted by the Selig Co. Wheeler Oakman, Guy Oliver and Charles Cleary are in the cast also. On Wednesday Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne will appear in "Graustark" a six-act drama.

Lost in Cabot Strait.

It is feared that Capt. William Mills, a resident of Channel, Nfld., who sailed from that port on Tuesday of last week in a small schooner for North Sydney, has been lost. He had only a small boy with him in the boat. He was last seen by Captain Reuben Keeping of the schooner Golden Rod near the Cape Breton coast attempting to take down sail. The day had grown stormy and Capt. Mills was evidently trying to make land in a rough sea. His little craft was soon hidden by mist which closed in on it, and it was not seen again. There is little doubt that the craft foundered or was dashed to pieces on the shore. Capt. Mills was very well known at North Sydney. He had made many voyages in his boats to this harbor for coal and provisions.—Sydney Post, Aug. 10th.

Police Court.

(Before Mr. Morris, K.C., J.P.)
Two men charged with loose and disorderly conduct were dismissed, and two others held on the same charge were each fined $1 or 3 days.

A case in which a seaman was charged with desertion was adjourned over till Wednesday.

'Head' Dawe summoned a woman for having a dangerous chimney. The case was dismissed.

Train Notes.

PRESIDENT WILSON TO ARBITRATE.

NEW YORK, To-Day.
 A general strike on virtually all the railroads of the nation, paralyzing commerce and throwing approximately two million men out of employment, can only be averted through the good offices of President Wilson. As a result of two days' developments in the dispute over the men's demands for an 8 hour day and time and a half for overtime, the controversy was laid before the President at his invitation after the workers had flatly refused any form of arbitration. They had refused mediation yesterday. Soon after accepting the President's summons, extended through the Federal Board, for mediation and conciliation, the men announced that the leaders of four railroad's brotherhoods would leave for Washington at midnight, accompanied by 30 of the 600 delegates assembled here. An hour later railroad managers, 15 in number, it was said, would leave for the Capital at the same time. Both parties will reach Washington to-morrow in time for an early conference with President Wilson.

Says Bulgaria May Desert Tentons.

May Shift Allegiance and Declare Affiliation for Entente.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Aug. 10.—The Providence Journal prints a cablegram from its London correspondent from which the following is an extract. The following statement is the essential part of a declaration made to me by an official of the British War Office.

There is now collected in and about the District of Salonika a splendidly equipped army of 68,000 British, French and Serbian troops. Fully 50 per cent. of these troops are seasoned veterans. There have been many alleged explanations of the reason why this large and powerful fighting force has not taken part in the combined drive that has been in progress along the various fronts continuously for the past month. The reason is that Great Britain and France want to make no move that will bring them into a clash with Bulgarian troops at this time. It is very probable indeed, that within the next few weeks Bulgaria will again shift her allegiance and declare her affiliation with the Entente. This vitally important fact, coupled with the exact knowledge now held by the British Government that Rumania is heart and soul with the Allies and will come in at the moment when they give the word, are the two outstanding developments of to-day which are causing more concern to all the fighting powers than the present military moves.

The elimination of Sazanoff from the Russian Ministry has taken away the last barrier to Rumanian's decision to join the Allies. It is understood on authority which I am not able to quote, but which is indisputable, that the entire territory of Bessarabia from Leova, at the Rumanian border east to the mouth of the Dniester, on the Black Sea and along fifty miles of the Black Sea coastline back to the mouth of the Danube, on the Rumanian border, is to be ceded by Russia to Rumania and that Rumania will at once place 450,000 troops fully equipped at the service of the Allies for operations either against Bulgaria or in connection with Bulgaria if the latter comes in.

Melting Down Hun Strength.

(T. L. Garvin in the London "Observer.")

The German strength is being melted down in the Picardy furnaces. We have every reason to think that these losses are heavier than ours, as one pulverizing bombardment follows another. Again, the Germans are bound to go on counter-attacking on a larger and larger scale, or give up the game. But the fighting in the Allies' plan. In this way the enemy's main calculation has been destroyed. At the beginning of the year and for nearly six months afterward the Germans believed that the conditions of trench warfare would give them an overwhelming advantage in the final phase. It would be a fight for what Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg called "the war map as it stands." The Allies would have the surplus of numbers, but not enough to overcome the Teutonic advantage in equipment and position. On all sides the Allies would dash their surplus to ruin in vain attacks against the German entanglements, machine guns, and trench mortars. The Entente Powers could get back no continental territory without conceding peace to Germany on favorable terms.

German Plan Destroyed.

Now, the whole plan for trench warfare on these terms has been absolutely destroyed. We have not yet got to open the gates of the West, but like its equivalent as regards the problem of power. West and East the Central Empires have to throw their troops into bloody counter-attacks without being able to stay the increases of the pressure that will squeeze them to death. Thus it must always be remembered that the Allies' general offensive is concentrated to gain the ground in the first instance, but to exhaust the enemy's reserves. While these are being thinned the wider the line to the enemy tries to hold the better. The subsequent collapse will be the more complete, and the Allies will be fighting on a wider front. This is elementary doctrine, but it is constantly forgotten.

Golf Balls.

History tells us that at first golf balls were nothing but round or nearly round pebbles about the size of the sphere used at present. These were supplanted by the hard cut wooden balls and then turned by the feather ball. Then came the gutta percha ball, of which an interesting story is told.

It is said a caddie in Scotland picked up a discarded football shoe with a gutta percha sole and tore off the sole. This he soaked in water until it was soft and then molded it with his hands to the size of a golf ball. Thence it was only a step to the molded and hammered gutta percha ball, which endured until as late as 1898, when the rubber cored ball was first brought out in the United States. The rubber cored ball was the foundation of the ball of the present, was not taken into England until three or four years later, and it is interesting to note that in 1905 Alcock Herd, who was the only player in the field using the ball, won the British open championship with it.—New York Sun.

LYNGFJORD OFF DOCK.—The s.s. Lyngfjord came off dock at 9 a.m. to-day, after undergoing extensive repairs to her hull and engines. Hundreds of her plates were newly riveted while several were so damaged that they had to be replaced. Owing to the peculiar formation of the bottom which rested almost flat on the chocks, it was difficult for the machinists to perform their work, so great was her weight that the chocks have been severely strained, causing them to expand several inches. The Lyngfjord has been painted outside and in and is now practically as good as ever. The floor of the dock will be repaired after which the s.s. Athos will undergo extensive repairs. The three-masted schooner Ida M. Lynch went on dock this morning and is resting near the gate where repairs to the dock floor are not needed.

Those Forty 'Leven Vases.

By RUTH CAMERON.

If you were going on a walking trip and someone asked you to carry a lot of things in your pack that you didn't really need at all, wouldn't you think they were asking absurd and unreasonable things? And yet—well, I was calling in the home of a recent bride the other day. On the piano were eight vases and two bowls. On the upper shelf of the double mantel were eight pieces of bric-a-brac (including six more vases). On the lower shelf there were nine beside the clock (including five more vases).

Some Day She Will Go To The Hospital.

On the wall there were forty-one pictures. Think of dusting that room every day, and I know she does just that, because she is a most conscientious housekeeper.

Some day I expect to hear that she has gone to a sanatorium.

They will assign all kinds of reasons for her nervous exhaustion (that's the latest, you know, nervous prostration is going out), but I shall know the real reason—too much bric-a-brac.

How many of us carry too much impediments on our trip through life! I have illustrated with material possessions, but I don't mean those alone.

There are other kinds of bric-a-brac besides those which we clutter up our houses with.

There's the kind we have in our hearts and minds.

Newfoundlanders in France.

G. J. B. in The Wesleyan.

The Newfoundland Regiment was far more terribly cut up during the charge of July 1st than had been reported when I sent you my former communication. Only ninety-five escaped wounds or death and came back to hear the general's great word of commendation. "Newfoundlanders I salute you individually. You have done better than the best."

Under nine hundred strong the brave boys—they averaged less than twenty-four years old, dashed cheering into the terrible fray, but seven hundred and sixty killed, wounded and missing was the terrible toll the regiment paid for the unique place it won that day among the Empire's finest fighting units.

To the Newfoundlanders had been assigned the task of charging the Germans' third line of trenches, directly in front of them. For days they had been training for the assault. English regiments were given the work of taking the enemy's first and second lines, and melted away before the awful fire. Nothing daunted, the Newfoundlanders dashed forward with a cheer. Their officers practically all fell quickly after they left the parapet and most of the non-coms soon were put out of action, but the regiment, rapidly thinning, kept steadily on till it reached the barbed wire unbroken by the cannonading, and its exhausted remnant, finding that impossible which eight English regiments had melted away in attempting, returned to the base leaving more than seven-eighths of their comrades dead or wounded on the field. But volunteers leaped out at once to bring them in, the wounded to be sent to English hospitals, the dead to decent burial behind the lines.

And so Newfoundland has sprung into an unique place in the story of the Empire's great struggle, and her sons are acclaimed as the bravest of the brave. But in the city where most of them drew breath, and in many a town and fishing hamlet on the shores of the colony, there are heavy hearts and tearful eyes. "Our gallant little Newfoundland," as Sir William Robertson calls her, is proud indeed of the valour of her sons but the loss of so many of them is hard to bear.

Rann-dom Reels.

By HOWARD L. RANN.

"Of Shoes and Ships and Sealing Wax of Cabbages & Kings. THE SUMMER COLD. The summer cold is a blood relative of Nature's criminal masterpiece, the grip, but is not so full of enthusiasm and general debility as the latter. People can have the grip every winter and after a while will be able to tell it from an ulcerated tooth without consulting the family doctor, but the summer cold will pass entire families by for several years, only to land on some loved member and cause him to resemble a hay-fever victim who has fallen heir to the pink eye.

The summer cold is caused by trudging with the laws of Nature in the matter of underwear. Why is it that a man will wear long, feverish underwear until the Fourth of July and then change suddenly to the light, airy one-piece suit, only to run into nine days of weather that would raise hoars frost on a polar bear? If more wives would compel their husbands to wear thick, beaver-board underclothes the year around we would not have so many employees laying off during the dog days with a nose like the headlight of a Mogul engine. Nobody ever heard of a Zulu Islander taking cold in August because of wearing too little underwear, which proves that we have a lot to learn from the unlettered and ring-nosed heathen.

The summer cold starts with a series of deceptive sneezes which sound like splitting kindling with the knee cap. The summer sneeze is a deceptive article and abbs and flows with great rapidity. It will remain in a lurking attitude for several hours and make the owner believe that the last quinine capsule has hit the target, then will suddenly begin to explode in a high-pitched staccato, interrupting an important telephone conversation and causing eighty cents worth of overtime. This can be avoided by seizing the summer cold in time and putting on a pre-shrunk wool union suit that laps neatly about both ankles.

There is nothing that will completely cure a summer cold except time. If a person is willing to wait until about February 15th, he can then exchange his cold for any approved form of grip, even up. Some people go to a resort where mineral spring water can be rented by the day or week and have an overworked nose therein, but it is cheaper and better to stay at home and go to bed with a late novel and a camphor bottle. No one should laugh at the victim of a summer cold, for it is liable to leap in the direction of the scroffer and cause him to wish that handkerchiefs were made as big as bed-spreads.

Weak, Nervous Children Quickly Gain Strength Under Following Plan

Nervousness, just like weakness, is a family predisposition. We inherit tendencies to disease just as we inherit physical resemblances. The strain of study, social duties, work at home—these all tend to make nervous troubles among children. No wonder that St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy, and constant headaches have become alarmingly common. Pale, nervous, listless young people are met everywhere.

It is nothing short of criminal for parents to neglect signs of weakness in their children. By ignoring the slightest symptom of nervous or mental strain, you may condemn your child to life-long invalidism. If any member of your family complains of headaches, fear of going into dark places, give them that wonderful tonic, "Ferrozone." Strength of body and mind, hardy nerves, ability to study with comfort, all the attributes of health quickly follow the use of Ferrozone. It establishes strength, color and endurance, vim—does this by filling the whole system with nourishment and tissue-forming materials.

It's because we know the enormous good that Ferrozone will do, because we are sure every child and even grown folks; will be permanently benefited, that we urge you to give it a trial. All dealers sell Ferrozone in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, or direct by mail from The Catarhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

TWO DOGS.

The dog of high patrician mien, of well-groomed coat and aspect clean, makes quite a hit when down the street he travels on his high-stepping feet. To pat his head we gladly reach, and we assure him he's a peach, and gentlemanly stroke his trousers hair, and wish we had ten bones to spare, so we could buy a dog like that, and give him latcheskeys to our flat. But when a seedy dog comes near, a dog with sores upon his ear, a dog with eyes that do not match, and fleas that make him madly scratch, we kick him swiftly with our feet, and hoist him half way down the street. Then leave the office, store and shack, to kick him round a block and back. 'Tis likewise with the human skate, for whom the rocks or roses wait, who galdness knows, or sorrow bears, according to the front he wears. You may have sterling worth to burn, and think men's plaudits you should turn, but if you wear a seedy shirt, some flying rocks are bound to hurt.

Blind Soldiers and Civilians.

Murdoch Square, Halifax, N.S., Aug. 8th, 1916.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I am enclosing herewith an extract from a letter recently received from Doctor C. P. Dickson, of Toronto, relative to a Canadian contribution towards the Permanent Blind Soldiers' Fund. This extract, with my reply thereto, will be self-explanatory. I am deeply interested in the welfare of the blind but I think that any project for the betterment of their condition should receive due consideration before it is launched. If the funds proposed to be raised by the New York Committee in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland were placed in the hands of a responsible Maritime Provincial Committee and allocated to the several agencies working for the good of the blind in these Provinces, including the blind soldiers, I would think the undertaking worth while and likely to result in great good. Even if the funds raised in Canada were to be utilized for the benefit of blind soldiers throughout the Empire, it would be worthy of support, but the undertaking seems to me altogether too cosmopolitan in its scope and too indefinite as to the management of the Fund. The needs of the civilian blind of these Provinces and Newfoundland, numbering as they do from three to four hundred as against one blinded soldier, surely call for all the help that can be given them, especially in view of the fact that the Canadian soldiers, who have lost their sight, have already had generous provision made for them.

Thanking you for the publication of the enclosed, I remain,

Very truly yours,
C. F. FRASER,
Per A.M.C.

Extract from Letter of Doctor C. P. Dickson, of Toronto.

"I am assured upon the best authority that a number of collecting schemes on behalf of blind soldiers are quite unnecessary, some unauthorized, and some directly fraudulent. Of this I have proof indisputable in my possession. The Permanent Blind Relief War Fund for Soldiers and Sailors, designed eventually to help the blind of every land, is laying plans at its office in New York for a most systematic campaign in Canada. I have explained to its secretary that we require the money in Canada for our own blind, but in spite of all my pleading they are going after large sums and they will assuredly get them. The organizer is a man of great wealth and all Canada is being systematically divided into districts on a scale never before seen here. Every interest for the blind in Canada is bound to suffer for years to come in spite of the fact that they coolly tell me that their campaign will help by directing attention to the needs of the blind."

School for the Blind,
Halifax, Aug. 8th, 1916.
Doctor C. P. Dickson,
192 Bloor St., West,
Toronto, Canada.

Dear Doctor Dickson,—I have heard with no little concern of the efforts that are shortly to be made by a New York Committee to raise a Permanent Blind War Fund in Canada and the United States. In my opinion there is no need for such a fund in Canada. We fortunately have at present only eleven or twelve Canadian soldiers who have become blind during the war. The number is much less, thank God, than was at first anticipated. These soldiers will receive a handsome pension from the Dominion Government. Moreover the Royal Hospitals Commission is authorized to give to these blinded soldiers any special training they may require to take up their life work anew. Under these circumstances the raising of a Permanent Blind War Fund in Canada is unnecessary. I understand the fund is to provide assistance to blind soldiers of all nationalities, including the Central Powers. It seems to me that Canada should look after its own blind soldiers and that it should leave Germany and Austria to look after theirs. We have in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland our fair share of blind people. Provision has been made for the education of the youthful blind and, in special cases, for the training of those who lose their sight in adult life. We have an organization to forward the interests of the graduates of our School for the Blind, and another organization for providing a Library for the Blind, for the Home Teaching of Adult Blind and for several other purposes. Our organizations are very much in need of funds to carry on their beneficent work. It would therefore appear to me that an extended canvass for the Permanent Blind Relief Fund administered in New York would be most untimely, and unfair to the scores of blind people in civilian life who have not yet been reached by any beneficent agency. I am entirely in accord with your idea of giving publicity to the needs of the blind in Canada and of forestalling any quixotic move to raise a large amount of money in Canada by the New York Committee of the Permanent Blind Relief Fund. We shall do our part in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland by seeking the co-operation of the Press to give wide publicity to the facts of the case, and believe that you will do the same in Ontario. I believe that in this matter we will have the public support of all right thinking men and women.

With kindest regards, believe me,

Very truly yours,
C. F. FRASER.

At the R. C. Cathedral.

At the R. C. Cathedral last evening, Very Rev. Rev. Remont preached a very beautiful sermon from the Gospel of the day, and depicted in choice language the grief of the Redeemer over the future destruction of Jerusalem. The preacher thought that the terrible condition of the world to-day was very like that older world which knew not, or did not recognize the hour of their visitation. In conclusion the Rev. Father reminded the congregation of the approaching festival of the Assumption, and particularly exhorted those broken hearted souls to pray fervently to the Virgin Mother, who with her mother heart would not fail to intercede with her Divine Son and quoted from St. Bernard that such prayers were invariably answered. Benediction was then imparted by Rev. Dr. McGrath.

AT THE BRITISH THEATRE.

Theatre goers will be pleased to know that the Rossley Troupe will appear in the British Theatre for one week in some delightful numbers, songs, dances, sketches. Everyone is anxious to see these clever girls who for six months delighted large audiences through Nova Scotia. These girls are no longer to be classed as amateurs, but first class performers. Jack and Marie Rossley our old favorites, will appear in numerous sketches assisted by the full company. Every Newfoundland in St. John's should make it a point to see the work of this talented troupe, the first theatrical company which ever went out of the oldest British Colony. After a most successful tour they are now prepared to delight those at home with an entertainment that cannot be duplicated anywhere. Come and see them and give them a welcome home. Mrs. Robert Hillier, New Harbor, T.B., received the following message from the Pay and Record Office at Ottawa:—

"Sincerely regrets inform you that 7863 Private William J. Hillier, Infantry, officially reported admitted to military hospital, Shorncliffe, July 8th, shrapnel, side, will send further particulars when received."

As seen by his number Private Hillier was among the first to enlist in Canada, being at the time a member of the Governor General's Foot Guards. He was attached to the 1st Canadian Regiment to go on active service and was all through the battle of Ypres and several other engagements during the past eighteen months, but escaped injuries till about the date mentioned, when he was hit by shrapnel in the side. The young soldier is a brother of Private Bob Hillier of the Newfoundland Regiment who was also wounded in the big drive on July 1st. Mr. James Hillier, the popular street car conductor, is also a brother.

Joffre Declares that Germany Will Be Defeated.

The Famous French General Says That the Turning Point of the Great Conflict Has Been Successfully Reached and Passed, and that the Allied Armies are Pressing on to Certain Victory.

General Headquarters, France, Aug. 6.—"Destiny is now shaping itself, and everyone can read what is about to happen. I mean the final defeat of Germany."

It was General Joffre who was speaking at his own headquarters. We had motored out from Paris with Franklin Bouillon, Chairman of the Committee for Political Action of the Chamber of Deputies, and, after a very brief wait, were led by a side path to the modest house where General Joffre does the work of war.

It was not the least in the world as one would imagine the head of the huge organization in the midst of the war. The streets of the little town were bare of population, and quiet with the stillness of a cathedral, and rare worshippers kneel in the shadow of ancient pillars. Our party made an unwonted intrusion of noise, and we found ourselves embarrassed by the curious gaze of men in uniform, to whom civilians are a strange sight in their stronghold.

The Home of the Chief. It was a relief when a junior officer showed us the way from the huge, silent hotel where the tremendous organization of the General Staff works in whispers, to the home of the Chief. When we arrived at the little red brick house we waited again in a quiet, darkened hall until the commandant came. Then we advanced again up a short flight of steps to another hall, and again waited until still another officer came and conducted us through a sunlit room, where the great General's luncheon was waiting to be served, into the presence of the Commander himself.

If we were somewhat nervous, wondering what would be the result of this meeting so long had sought and anticipated, General Joffre seemed frankly frightened at being thus bearded by a collection of men bent on seeing and examining for themselves and subjecting to the final test of personal scrutiny France's leader. We found him a man impressive by his size, with massive squareness of head, firm and determined mouth and jaw, and broadly spaced eyes, which looked squarely and unflinchingly into the eyes of his interlocutor.

After the introductions had been made there were a few seconds of hesitation on both sides, then Franklin Bouillon broke the ice with a few words about our desire to meet the General at the beginning of the third year of the war. General Joffre replied that it was a pleasure for him to receive us, and continued:

Settles Germany's Fate. "It is a special pleasure to me to meet you at this time, when France is fighting for the common ideal of liberty held by the two nations, and to renew the friendship that has always existed between us."

"And what can you tell us of the future course of the war and the campaign now under way?" we asked. General Joffre replied with the two sentences with which this despatch begins, and continued:

"The complete unity of action of all the Allies settles Germany's fate.

Characteristic of our campaign is the constant pressure on all sides by the Allies, who now have had time to form plans and to carry them out with perfect understanding of the necessities of the situation on all fronts."

The Generalissimo paid tribute to the manner in which all of the Allies have discharged their part in the ever-increasing effort and said:

"It is owing to the sacrifices of France, which, naturally was ready first, and consented to give herself to the common cause, that the other nations of the coalition have been able to prepare themselves in a manner now evident to the entire world. The Russians have been able to organize their resources and bring forward a constantly larger number of men from the practically inexhaustible supplies, while at the same time arming men and equipping them with artillery and all the needed munitions, without which war of the present day is impossible."

"What Russia has achieved in the past few weeks in Galicia shows, not only what Russia has done, but what she can do."

England also has had time to show her resources in men, and the valor of her troops on the Somme shows the effort she is making.

The Italians have had a more difficult and limited opportunity, but they have done magnificent work, and the reconstituted Serbian army is just beginning to take a new part in the paper.

The Crash Is Coming. "On the other hand, if we look at the enemy we know certainly that although they are still fighting as desperately as ever, they are drawing on their last resources. Their plan in the past has been constantly to transfer their reserves from one place to another, but with the united effort of the Allies they now find this impossible and it will become increasingly hard in the future. We know this from the information received from all parts of the front."

"It is not for me to say how long the struggle will last, but the question matters little. We feel and we know that the crash is coming. We have already reached the turning point. The five months' resistance of our troops at Verdun has shown that the plans of the German staff have been shattered."

"There is still no weakening of the German effort on the western front. There are still opposed to the Allied armies on this front two thirds of the best fighting men they have. There are 122 German divisions against us, while there are fifty German divisions combined with Austrian armies, before the Russians."

Turning Point Reached. "But the turning point was reached in the battle of Verdun, and it is only a question of time when the Germans will break. The General paused and smiled at us in a peculiarly candid manner. "It has been a great pleasure for me to give you this information," he said, "but it would be better yet for you to go and see for yourselves. We will give you all facilities to see our troops in the field, and you will see an army built up by two years of the hardest fighting the world has ever seen. You will understand the spirit of our soldiers, you will see an army of which the energy and spirit remain the same after two years of war and not only that, but an army in which the number of our soldiers at the front is actually greatly increased, in spite of the two years of fighting."

"You will then understand the decision of our country to see this war through to a victorious conclusion. We are fighting not only for the interests of our own country, but for the liberty of the world, and we will not stop until the liberty of the world is absolutely assured."

Leaving General Joffre, we were received by General De Castelnau, Chief of Staff, and General Pelle, Major General of the Headquarters Staff. Both expressed pleasure at being able to send a personal word to the American people, and De Castelnau linked the names of Washington and Lafayette with France and America in a short speech, recalling how both countries have shed blood for liberty. Both commanders expressed their appreciation of American sympathy for France in the present war.

AT THE CRESCENT. The Crescent Picture Palace today presents Miss Nell Craig and Bryant Washburn in "The Danger of Being Lonesome," an Essanay feature produced in two reels. "The Wrong Mr. Wright," a clever Vitagraph Comedy drama, when "Lin Came Home," is a palatial western drama featuring Miss Wolbert and George Holt. "Snakeville's Eugenic Marriage" is a very laughable Snakeville comedy. Professor McCarthy has arranged a new programme of music to accompany this big week opening programme, ETAINN opening show; be sure and see it.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

HUNS REPULSED.

LONDON, Aug. 13. The British official report states all is quiet along the Somme front, except for intermittent shelling. The Germans have been repulsed in an attack on Ypres salient.

BRITISH ADVANCE.

LONDON, Aug. 13. The War Office reports an important advance northwest of Poelers, the lines being pushed forward 400 yards, over a mile front.

FRENCH MAKE SLIGHT PROGRESS.

PARIS, Aug. 13. In a counter attack after the French gain on a four mile front, the Germans were driven back with heavy losses. Slight progress was made by the French south of Fleury.

Official—North of the Somme, after preparatory fighting yesterday and last night our troops to-day attacked the third German position, extending from East Hardcourt to the Somme opposite Buscourt. On this front, six and a half kilometres, our infantry with magnificent dash captured all the trenches and strongly fortified on a depth of from 600 to 1,000 metres. We penetrated the village of Maurepas, which, and the southern part of the cemetery are in our possession. We carried our new lines on the southern slopes of Hill 109 along the road from Maurepas to Clerly, and on to Saddle west of Clerly. The number of unwounded prisoners taken on us, counted up to the present, is 1,900, while thirty machine guns were captured.

MAIN ENEMY WINTER QUARTERS CAPTURED BY RUSSIANS. PETROGRAD, Aug. 13. An official report says that the main enemy winter quarters before Tarnopol and Buczies have fallen into the possession of the Russians. The battering down of the fortified wall happened on the same day as the fête in celebration of the birthday of the heir to the Imperial throne, Grand Duke Alexis Nikolevitch. Advancing before Stanislaw the Russians have crossed the River Bystrizza, into Solotvina.

Official—Our forces have reached Marianopol, seven miles southeast of Haller, the key to Lemberg.

RUSSIAN DRIVE UNCHECKED.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 13. The Russian drive in Galicia goes forward unchecked. The War Office announced to-day that a number of additional villages have been captured. Russian forces have reached Marianopol, seven miles southeast of Haller, the key to Lemberg. On the Upper Sereth they have gained possession of a series of fortified positions.

ITALIANS MAKE GOOD.

ROME, Aug. 13. The Italians have carried other positions and captured two thousand prisoners.

BERLIN SAYS NO GAINS FOR THE ALLIES.

BERLIN, Aug. 13. The French and British hurled large masses of troops against our positions on the Somme front yesterday and last night. An official to-day records no gains for the Allies, and says that assaults between Thiepval and Guillemont broke down with the heaviest losses.

GERMAN WIRELESS REPORTS UNTRUE.

LONDON, Aug. 13. The British Press Bureau says that the German wireless reports regarding damage done during the recent Zeppelin raids in England are wholly untrue.

The Real Friend in a Large Bottle.

The greatest friend to sick people is the one that helps them toward health. But nearly every human friend had heretofore suggested a different means of regaining lost health due to nervousness, overwork, debility and worry. Now there are dozens of friends right here in your own town who will agree that the best friend to their health is Zeotic—the health tonic. This already famous remedy for "nerves" and their consequent ailments is a combination of glycerophosphate—the actual elements of the human body—with Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine. A short two weeks of faithful trial will put you fair and square upon the path of bounding health. We know this so absolutely that if you cannot report real progress at the end of that time we will refund the purchase price. You who suffer and suffer and suffer should not delay beyond to-day. ## The War

The past week has been a number of successes for the arms, any one of which sufficed to make it notable. The report of Gorizia alone was a most satisfactory enough. It should be added that of Stanislaw, important neighbouring positions, Russians, and most valuable by the French in the Somme. The combined offensive is bearing abundant fruit.

Turning first to the West, which is still the most important of an advance by the Allies at Maurepas which was a profound effect upon the following their brilliant work. Poesiers and Hill 160, they seem to have taken a short advance; but the ball has been rolling in brilliant fashion. French. The region of Maurepas and Curly was reached by the most at the beginning of the month. The advance was made south of Comblies, which called the stepping-stone to Bapaume. More important the measure of their advance, announcement that they have through the German third trenches, or more correctly third system. If the penetration will spell at least local disaster to the Germans. We have many reports of a similar nature, expect too much from this. We should we attach too much to it. But the performance of one; and a striking proof of strength of the joint assault shall look for a renewal of offensive immediately to this area, at Guillemont and we should hear very soon of exciting developments.

Perhaps the outstanding of a great week is the capture of a blow, of Gorizia by the could ask no better proof of the success of Austria. That Gorizia should have seen fit to the Isonzo at all shows that there be no further danger to the Trentino; that he should idly and with such apparent taken this well fortified position, but to wonderful Italian. The first great barrier to this removed. To the south, the coast, the Doberdo plateau dominated by the Italians. Over the whole district of the Austrians will have their greatest resistance to lack if they are not saved. They have lost, and the Italian gained, a fine pivot in Gorizia once triumphant invasion the Trentino has thus been converted to a disastrous debacle, and must be bitterly repenting ever undertaken it. East she is faced with problems increasing danger and peril.

An American WHO IS A SOLDIER OF FIRE IN THIS WAR

Lieutenant-Colonel Bullock at Dighy on the Occasion of Raising Celebration at Where the 27th Overseas is Being Mobilized.

Dighy, August 6.—The 27th Overseas Battalion, C. E. F., celebrated second anniversary of the war with a flag-raising in a camp at Green Point, here.

A feature of the ceremony, excellent address delivered by Lieutenant-Colonel George W. of San Francisco, now a resident of Wilmot, Annapolis county, Md. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of American Colonels Bullock said in part: "Officers, N. C. O.'s and men, which has just been raised, emblematic of democracy and the weak, as against the strong and tyranny of our enemy sent gigantic struggle. The crosses—the cross of St. George and St. Patrick, stands for one of the greatest in the world. The cross of the great race which stands for rights to all and an impartial illustration of the law of nature. This wonderful race, celestial world over for Justice. A man who has contributed great success of the Allies. The cross of St. Patrick is that of Ireland, who is famed the world over for generosity. Victorious in the generosity to her beaten foes, flag of these great races, of whom the larger proportion people of the great republic south, are descendants—the protection of the weak and generosity. We from the American republic, stand for the same ideals and that is which compose this unit are giving vices and perhaps our lives great Union Jack.

Two years ago to-day the Allies commenced the struggle in the history of against a relentless and weeded foe. All through the initial period of the war—which has stood the batt-

The War Week by Week.

By OBSERVER.

The past week has been marked by a number of successes for the Allies, any one of which would have sufficed to make it notable. The capture of Gorizia alone was an achievement satisfactory enough; to it must be added that of Stanislaw and important neighbouring positions by the Russians, and most valuable progress by the French in the Somme. Truly, the combined offensive is beginning to bear abundant fruit.

Turning first to the West front, which is still the most important, we learn of an advance by our French Allies at Maurepas which may have a profound effect upon the position. Following their brilliant capture of Posteres and Hill 160, the British seem to have taken a short rest, for they have made no further attempts to advance; but the ball has been kept rolling in brilliant fashion by the French. The region of Hardecourt and Curlu was reached by them almost at the beginning of the drive, more than a month ago. It lies west and south of Combes, which may be called the stepping-stone to Peronne and Bapaume. More important than the measure of their advance is the announcement that they have broken through the German third line of trenches, or more correctly, their first system. If the penetration can be widened and pushed further it will spell at least local disaster to the Germans. We have heard too many reports of a similar nature to expect too much from this one; nor should we attach too much importance to it. But the performance is a fine one; and a striking proof of the strength of the joint assault. We shall look for a renewal of the British offensive immediately to the north of this area, at Guilleumont and Longueval; we should hear very soon how of exciting developments.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of a great week is the capture, almost at a blow, of Gorizia by the Italians. We could ask no better proof of the weakness of Austria. That General Cadorna should have seen fit to attack on the Isonzo at all shows that there can be no further danger to be feared in the Trentino; that he should so rapidly and with such apparent ease have taken this well fortified stronghold testifies not only to Austrian weakness but to wonderful Italian efficiency. The first great barrier to Trieste is thus removed. To the south, and near the coast, the Dobrodo plateau is also dominated by the Italians. Here and over the whole district of Montefalco the Austrians will have to oppose their greatest resistance to the attack if they are to save Trieste, for they have lost, and the Italians have gained, a fine pivot in Gorizia. The once triumphant invasion through the Trentino has thus been converted into a disastrous debacle, and Austria must be bitterly repenting having ever undertaken it. East and West she is faced with problems of increasing danger and perplexity. That in the East is itself threatening enough to demand all her energies. Here things seem to be developing rapidly into the greatest Russian victory of the war. We have before pointed out how dangerously Von Bothmer's army is situated before Tarnopol, menaced as it is on both flanks. The danger has been considerably increased by Letchitsky's fine progress, which has included the capture of Stanislaw and Monasterzyska. This has opened the way towards Halicz, which seems doomed, but it is also a great thrust behind Von Bothmer's rear. The last news tells of the reduction, by a frontal attack, of the positions held by him since last winter, so that he is now assailed on three sides. Lemberg is most certainly doomed, unless some miracle happens; but the fate of the great Austrian army is more important. Its retreat is now certain to be attended with great losses, and these losses are more valuable to Russia than the acquisition of much territory. Every day's news seems to discount the rumours of Hindenburg's impending offensive. He has enough to do to look after Kovel and the long line north to Riga. Austria is having a very bad time, and must soon resign herself to the loss of Galicia.

The attack of the Turks upon Suez and their disastrous and brilliant repulse by the British can only be called an interesting episode. Evidently Turkey still clung fondly to the hope of dealing England a vital blow in this quarter, but the illusion must now be thoroughly shattered. The recent activity in the Balkans near Dorian has been too slight and undefined to enable us to determine something serious. There is most certainly some large and hidden explanation of the mystery that involves this part of the war map, and it may be revealed at any moment. Clearly, the Allies do not think the time is yet ripe for any aggressive move on General Sarraill's part. A reason which is gaining credence, and may contain some elements of truth, is that they are waiting to be certain of the co-operation not merely of Roumania, but of Greece and Italy, of Bulgaria as well! We are not too sanguine of the last part of this theory, though it makes very pleasant reading, and in the Balkans anything may happen. In support of it, we can argue that Roumania's entry would seal Bulgaria's fate, and the latter may foresee in time and forestall the consequences of her treacherous conduct last year; but she is probably too closely wedded to the Teutonic cause and her fortunes too intricately involved in it to permit her withdrawal at this late hour. The whole matter is not of immediate importance and we can only "wait and see"; but on all the other fronts it is more than clear that the Allies are gaining a daily increasing advantage, and that their star is at last in the ascendant.

WHO IS A SOLDIER OF OUR EMPIRE IN THIS WAR.

Lieutenant-Colonel Bullock's Address at Digby on the Occasion of a Flag-Raising Celebration at Digby, Where the 27th Overseas Battalion is Being Mobilized.

Digby August 6.—The 27th Overseas Battalion, C. E. F., celebrated the second anniversary of the European war with a flag-raising in their new camp at Green Point, here. A feature of the ceremony was the excellent address delivered by Lieutenant-Colonel C. S. Bullock, O.C., this unit. Lieutenant George W. Banks, of San Francisco, now a resident of Wilmot, Annapolis county, raised the flag. The ceremony was watched by a large number of American tourists. Colonel Bullock said in part:—

Officers, N. C. O.'s and Men.—The flag which has just been raised is emblematic of democracy and justice to the weak, as against the autocracy and tyranny of our enemy in the present gigantic struggle. The three crosses—the cross of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick, together stand for one of the greatest nations in the world. The cross of St. George belongs to the English race—that great race which stands for equal rights to all and an impartial administration of the law of nations. The cross of St. Andrew is Scotland's. This wonderful race, celebrated the world over for justice. A hardy race, who have contributed greatly to the success of the Allies. The cross of St. Patrick is that of Ireland. Ireland who is famed the world over for her generosity, Victoria in battle, yet generous to her besten foes, thus, the flag of these three great races—races of whom the larger proportion of the people of the great republic to the south are descendants—stands for the protection of the weak, justice and generosity. We from the great American republic stand for these same ideals and that is why we who compose this unit are giving our services and perhaps our lives under the great Union Jack.

Two years ago to-day Britain and her allies commenced the greatest struggle in the history of the world against a relentless and well organized foe. All through the dark days of the initial period of the war—this flag which has stood the battle and the

In Memoriam.

In Loving Memory of Private Edgar C. Whitten who was killed in Action July 16th.

Now poor Edgar's task is o'er,
Now the battle day is past,
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the hero's soul at last;
Father in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave him now, Thy Edgar sleeping.

There no more the powers of hell
Can prevail to mar their peace,
Christ the Lord shall guard him well,
He who died for their release.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave him now Thy Edgar sleeping.

Farewell my dear Edgar,
On earth I shall see you no more,
But in Heaven I hope to meet you
There is no parting here.

Your Boys and Girls.

No one knows at what early stage a child receives its first impressions, but we would perhaps be surprised if we could see the effect produced on the baby mind by its environment, whether it be cheerful, placid and uplifting, or gloomy, depressing and nerve-exciting. The home in which the little one enters into existence and its atmosphere are the first influences which are brought to bear on a young child and which are often mother to try to keep the atmosphere of the home as peaceful, as happy and cheerful as possible.

When a child grows older and begins to notice objects, even when very young, the pictures in its home, and more especially those in the nursery where it spends most of its time, come in for a large share of this silent influence.

As soon as the little one is old enough to understand anything he usually exhibits a fondness for stories. Even babies will sit spellbound listening to the short tales suited to their comprehension.

The stories told should always be happy ones, especially at bedtime. They should set before the child pleasant mental pictures, and be calculated to instill into his mind an interest in and a love for dumb animals and to foster his higher instincts—courage, unselfishness, gentleness, ambition. Stories form one of the most potent influences in the character of the growing child.

Stoker Jumps Overboard

And Meets a Watery Grave—Cause Unknown—Stanley Babstock the Victim—Attempt to Rescue Him by Shipmate Is Futile.

A drowning tragedy occurred and a double one was barely averted on Saturday evening, when Stanley Babstock, aged 30 years, and a resident of Welford Street, this city, jumped overboard from the Red Cross Liner Florizel. The ship was leaving this port at the time for Halifax and New York and had just cleared the entrance to our harbour, when Babstock, who was engaged as a fireman on board the ship, leaped over the side of the ship into the sea. He had not risen to the surface when Patrick Hearn, a fellow shipmate and a fireman as well, ran aft on the ship and without any hesitation whatever plucked went overboard in the hope of saving his unfortunate friend, but was unsuccessful, as poor Babstock never came to the surface.

The Florizel was immediately brought to a standstill and a lifeboat lowered, in which Hearn was picked up, exhausted on account of swimming with his clothes on; but there was no sign of Babstock.

Pilot W. Broderick, who had taken out the steamer, was just returning in company with his associate pilots, F. Leary and L. Lewis. They observed the ship stopped. Thinking that something had happened, though not knowing what at the time, they went back to find out. The pilot boat picked up the lifeboat which Hearn was in and towed it back to the ship. Hearn was lifted on board again and the Florizel continued on her journey. Captain Martin having satisfied himself that further efforts to try and save Babstock were of no avail, as the poor fellow had sunk to rise no more.

SAD CIRCUMSTANCE.

At the time of the tragedy a flotilla of fishing boats were in the immediate vicinity squidding and in one of the boats was Mr. Babstock, father of the missing man. He did not learn of the sad affair until he returned home late at night.

HOW WAS HE DROWNED?

There are peculiar circumstances surrounding the tragedy and some strange theories are advanced regarding it, but the exact cause of the deceased stoker leaving the ship will not be known until the return of the ship to St. John's when an enquiry will be held. Babstock, it is thought, had just come out of the stokehold in a heat when he jumped overboard and was overcome quickly. He was known to be a powerful swimmer and for that reason the meeting of the two extremes is accountable for the man's instant death, in addition to the height from which he jumped.

CREW DISORDERLY.

Before the ship got away at all, and she did not sail till 6 p.m., though her schedule was 3 p.m., there was a series of fights on board at the Red Cross pier. A fireman named Puddister was almost beaten to death, his face being beyond recognition. Capt. Martin tried several times to make peace, but on each occasion met with a rebuff.

BODY NOT RECOVERED.

The body of the unfortunate fireman is not yet recovered. All yesterday many men were trawling for it, but without success. Deceased was married and leaves to mourn him a wife and two children.

BOY BROKE LEG.—A little boy named Michael Power, aged 3 years, broke his leg by falling from a ladder at his home in Barron Street, last evening. A physician, who was summoned, ordered the patient to the hospital for treatment whether he was taken in the ambulance.

The EASTERN TRUST COMPANY

WE GO ON FOREVER.

Just two reasons why the Eastern Trust Company can administer an Estate better than a personal executor or administrator.

1.—It has nearly twenty-four years' experience, and its existence is perpetual, neither does it cost any more to employ the Company than an individual. The Company affords the Estate absolute security. It has a paid-up capital of $1,000,000.00 and a reserve of $250,000.00. The Estates held in trust to December 31st, 1915, amount to $18,036,883.35.

2.—In the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, your Estate must look around for a substitute. The new administrator is unfamiliar with the business and confusion is often the result. The death of any officer of this Company does not break the continuity of the policy of administration.

While the Company administers over Fifteen Million Dollars worth of Estates, it also does a very large business in executing Trusts of all kinds and acting as Financial Agents of all descriptions. We can give fullest satisfaction in the collection of rents, interests, mortgages, dividends, etc.

Full information cheerfully given and all communications treated as absolutely confidential. CALL OR WRITE.
