CHAPTER VIII

The Earl of Swinford's Steward. The Earl of Swinford did not get through with his business until the day after the picnic, and when he reached home he was looking worn and troubled.

Almost the first thing he did was to send for his sister, Lady Marcia, and when they were alone he unbundled himself.

"Marcia, what is your opinion of Collins, my trusted steward?" he demanded.

"My opinion of Collins? What an extraordinary question, Edward!" cried Lady Marcia. "Collins had had the management of the estate since we were children. No one has ever questioned him!"

"Marcia, I am greatly troubled; I have a most painful duty to perform. I have to question the steward's honesty. My lawyers have had charge of the accounts, as you are aware, and they have suspected Collins for some years. He has drawn large sums of money for the erection of new cottages—for repairs—for modern machinery on the farm; he has robbed the tenants; he has falsified his accounts in every conceivable way. This has been going on for years, and I am the cause of it. The man has felt safe; he has had no master. The lawyers have employed a detective, and I am in possession of every proof of Collins' guilt. He has enriched himself at my expense, and the blow falls heavily upon me."

"I can scarcely believe it," Lady Marcia said.

"It is only too true; I could not believe it myself, until everything was laid before me in black and white. The lawyers wanted me to institute criminal proceedings forthwith, but I cannot do that. These men are like butchers; they have no heart or feeling. They think that he can be made to disgorge the money he has obtained by fraud; but it is my fault, and I will suffer the loss."

He paced the room in great agitation for a few moments; then he went on:

"Marcia, I cannot rest until this affair has been dealt with. I must see Collins here at seven o'clock, and I want you to be present. You have represented me for so many years that I want your support now. Let one of the servants find Collins, with instructions to be here at seven. Until then I will rest; I am completely unnerved."

"I will see that he is here, Edward," said Lady Marcia. "I hope that he will be able to clear himself, but—"

"It is absolutely impossible!" the earl interrupted, sadly, and Lady Marcia left him.

My lord could not tell why he was so nervous and upset. He tried to argue with himself, but came to no satisfactory conclusion.

"It is the shock," he thought, "the shock of finding that one's most trusted servant is a scoundrel. Collins is an old man, comparatively; he is fifty years of age, and has held a position of trust for thirty years. He must have been a young man when my father placed so much power in his hands; he must have had exceptional references."

He passed his hand through his hair, and remembered that Collins had always been a mysterious individual, a man of strong personality, who had always avoided the present earl. It seemed to him that the golden brightness of the future that had opened to him a few days since was fading away like a baseless vision.

"Why did I return?" he muttered, his eyes filled with anguish. "With that memory haunting me like a ghoul that feeds upon the living! Why could I not have died abroad? My child would have known little sorrow then; but I believe that she cares for me now. Have I only come back surrounded by an atmosphere of misery? And is this trouble with Collins merely the precursor of man's griefs for those who are dear to me?" Then he straightened himself, with an angry gesture of self-contempt, adding: "I'm a coward. My duty is here—my place at the head of my household, and I will tell Marcia all, even if she hate me for it. Perhaps, then, the past will not haunt me so remorselessly."

He rested for several hours; then dressed for dinner. He ate little, and Gladys did not trouble him with her chatter; for Lady Marcia had told her of some trouble with the steward, which had caused them both surprise and grief.

At seven o'clock the earl and Lady Marcia left the dining-room for the central library, where the business books of the estate were kept, and where business consultations had been held concerning all that appertained to the Swinford estates for nearly three centuries. This was one of the few original rooms of the first abbey buildings. It was lofty and spacious, and filled with cunning nooks, cupboards and sliding panels. The Swinford archives contained many interesting and curious notes, in which the central library was frequently mentioned. When the defenders of the abbey were overpowered by the crop-sared knives of Noll Cromwell, they had found refuge in the central library, and disappeared unaccountably. It was surmised that the solid masonry had been moved by secret springs, and that beyond it were subterranean passages that led to liberty. But the rough walls were now paneled with boards of stout oak, the floors covered with the richest and the softest of Turkey carpets, and the lofty ceiling had been responsible for these innovations, though he considered it an act of vandalism to cut down an old tree or chip off a bit of stone from the ancient walls of the abbey.

The steward did not keep my lord waiting; within a few minutes of seven he was announced, and entered the library with a quick firm step. He bowed to Lady Marcia, and, while welcoming the earl, glanced keenly at him.

"I have not been able to see you before, my lord," he observed. "Your return home was quite unexpected, and I was in Cornwall until this morning, arranging about the purchase of half-a-dozen draught horses of exceptional breed."

The earl did not believe one word of this, and he motioned the steward to be seated.

As Collins crossed the room, the earl could not help noticing his air of hauteur and defiance. Collins was nothing like one's preconceived idea of a gentleman's steward. He was a portly, handsome man of distinguished appearance. He was a gentleman both in manner and speech, and might have been taken for the earl's elder brother. No one would have guessed that he was the lord's inferior in birth and education, much less his servant.

"I suppose that it is your wish, my lord, to go through my accounts? The attorneys have been regularly supplied with copies, and the books are at your disposal any time after to-morrow."

"I desire to speak with you concerning the accounts, Collins," began the earl, stiffly, "and request you to deliver up your books at once."

"It appears that this may be a painful interview," answered the steward, "and I suggest, my lord, that Lady Marcia's presence is not necessary."

Lord Howard was astonished by the audacity of Mr. Collins, and again that nervous dread crept over him.

"Collins," continued the earl, coldly, "I have no desire to prolong this interview; I have sent for you to let you know that your career of theft is at an end."

"Be careful, my lord!"

"Absolute and indisputable proof has been placed before me, and your defalcations amount to more than twenty thousand pounds. You have robbed me, and you have robbed my tenants, upon an elaborate plan of fraud."

The steward laughed bitterly.

"Go on," he said.

BUTTERSCOTCH TO MILTON.

In that case the chances are nine to one that you did not have the patience or the courage to wait long enough for that candy to be done. At least that is what the maker of the best amateur butterscotch that I ever tasted, says.

A Man Makes Butterscotch. Said maker is a man who asked some of his feminine friends to make him butterscotch instead of the inevitable fudge. They told him it was very hard to get it right. He bet he could make good butterscotch and forthwith took the cook book and did it, not once but many times.

His explanation of his success and other people's failure is this: "They lose their nerve. They are afraid to obey the rule and not stir it, and they won't wait long enough for it to be done."

Now that episode is well back in the past but I thought of it when I heard that man's wife say to him in regard to an important business deal: "Henry, have you heard from S. & Co. about that shipment yet?" He had not.

"Something must be the matter," she said impatiently. "I know there's a letter gone astray or something like that. Don't you think you'd better write them again?"

"Oh, I guess we'd better wait a little while longer," said Henry.

Likes to Stir Things Up. "That's what he always says," said his wife. "We'll wait a little while longer. Now I like to stir things up and make them move along."

"There's some things that move along better when you don't stir them and don't hurry them," said Henry, "and if you will allow me to say it, my way has worked pretty well in the past."

He did not make any idle boast when he said that. He is a successful business man and one of the factors of his success is the patience and the courage to wait awhile, and then, when you feel as if you must do something, to wait a little while longer.

To Wait a Little While Longer. I think this ability to wait a little while when we feel like stirring things up, is one of the hardest lessons for most of us to learn—and one of the most valuable.

Time and patience work more miracles than anything else in the world. Many a family problem will work itself out far better if you let it alone than if you fuss with it.

I wonder how many jealous wives who lose what they want by their impatient instinct to stir things up, might not win out in the end if they were willing to wait.

It is a far cry from butterscotch to Milton but Milton belongs here just as surely as the butterscotch, for we need him to remind us that waiting can be service to ourselves and the world just as truly as action:

"God doth not need
Either man's work or his own gifts.
Who best
Bears his mild yoke, they serve him best;
His state is kingly, thousands at his bidding speed,
And post o'er land and ocean without rest.
They also serve who only stand and wait."

The Queen Who Loved Her Jester.

No lady of royal blood ever had a more romantic love than Margaret Tudor, sister of King Henry VIII. She was born on July 29, 1523, reared in the atmosphere of the English Court, and grew to young and beautiful womanhood, destined, as everyone thought, to marry a man of her own rank. But she loved a penniless courtier, who endured prison for her sake, followed her over land and seas, and finally married her in the face of all opposition. Their story is one of the finest examples of the strength of all conquering love, which helped them to surmount the highest obstacles. When Henry VIII announced to his sister that he had found a husband for her in the person of the King of France, already an old man, she was horrified, and felt absolutely crushed beneath the blow of circumstances. She knew it was impossible for her to fall in with her brother's wishes, for she loved Brandon, but she would not tell Henry that. She hastened to acquaint her lover of her misfortune, and he straightway made arrangements to carry her off by stealth. When all was ready he managed to smuggle a note into Margaret's hands, but she having the misfortune to drop it from her pocket, it was pounced upon by a spy and carried to the king. Brandon was promptly consigned to a deep dungeon, and if it had not been for the fact that Cardinal Wolsey used his influence on behalf of the prisoner, the "presumptuous" youth would have been beheaded. The king now hurried forward the preparations for Margaret's wedding to the King of France, which was celebrated by the Archbishop of London and York, and Margaret soon found herself amid the blinding splendour of the French Court, with her husband, a gaunt old man, beside her. Soon afterwards a great ball was given at which her husband presented to her his latest jester, and as the gaily dressed youth knelt before her she found to her joy that he was none other than her lover, Charles Brandon. Many stolen meetings followed and one day the old king found Margaret in her lover's arms. He fell into a great rage and had a seizure, from which he rallied sufficiently to hear Margaret's story and to give her his forgiveness and blessing; then he died. Charles implored her to give up the French throne, and they were quietly married in Paris, and returned to England. King Henry VIII in the face of this daring, could not but relent and he gave them estates and land, so that they could make their home in England. For many years they lived a happy and devoted couple.

Stole From Rich to Feed Poor.

The police of Budapest have arrested a modern female Robin Hood. The young woman when first taken into custody was thought to be a simple, dishonest servant. It transpired, however, that she is the daughter of a rich and honorable family, and is known among the poor of the city as the "Angel of Faubourg."

The young woman then confessed that under a false name she had been taking positions as a servant in wealthy households in order to rob her employers, and in this manner secure money to feed the poor. She was forced to this action, she declared, because her soul revolted at the misery on all sides.

Officials have placed her in an asylum for examination.

TRANSIENT VOWS.

WALT MASON

I ride in my horseless carriage, that's painted a festive blue, and wonder why love and marriage don't last as they used to do. The vows of our parents held 'em till twilight of life grew cool; divorces occurred as seldom as hens in a swimming pool. I think of my grandmas stately, I think of my great-grandfathers, who treasured their vows so greatly they pulled no divorce court wires. They wed in the golden morning of life, in their divers kirks, and travelled together scoring the lawyer and all his works. I'm driving my twin-four barrow along where the speed cops sleep, and modern conditions harrow my soul till I faint would weep. Man taketh a blooming creature, bedecked in her bridal veil, to parsonage and to preacher—they're spliced, for a piece of kale. You'd think, as you mark them cooling, like doves on a sunlit hill, that age, when it comes kerchooing, will find they are lovers still. But lo, when the Wooster Weekly next month to your home is mailed, you read—and you read it bleakly—the news of a vow that failed. The wife had a trick of snoring, the husband, a drugstore brach, and love, that was lately soaring, has withered and died the death. I speed up my rusty botzy, and run down a brace of clerks, and sigh, for my heart is sorry that marriage no longer works.

Grocers who sell Lantic Sugar in dust-proof, full-weight, 2-pound and 5-pound packages have no bags to buy, no weighing to do, therefore they know exactly the profit they make. The cost of putting sugar into bags for retailing, plus loss of weight and time, is said to be one dollar per 100 pounds.

ADDRESS OF THE Rt. Rev. the Lord Bishop of Nfld. Delivered at the Opening of the Twenty-Fifth Biennial Session of the Diocesan Synod, Wednesday, June 21st, 1922.

My Brethren of the Clergy and Laity:

Though the Kingdom, in the interests of which we are assembled, is not of this world, yet the world is the field of its operations, the people in whose world are its members, its citizens, whose welfare both in regard to their temporal affairs as in the sphere of their spiritual progress, is its first and chief concern, The Kingdom, that is the Church of Jesus Christ, cannot even begin to consider the advancement of its highest interests without taking cognizance of the conditions which obtain in its immediate as well as its more extended environment. The state of human society constitutes at the one and the same time a challenge, a rebuke, a hope, a despair, a door of opportunity, a task to be faced, a victory to be won.

The world registers the Church's enterprises, its visions or its lack of vision, its energy or its sloth. Now it has, or seems to have, an open ear ready to catch eagerly whatever word of promise or of help the Church proclaims. Now it seems to question every word that claims authoritative utterance, as from a higher power. And now it makes some pathetic appeal for an answer to questions which it feels itself unable to solve.

This is the position to-day in many parts of our distracted world. Over wide areas there is an epidemic of disorder, of distress, of uncertainty, and men and nations are groping about in the Egyptian darkness which enshrouds them, longing for a light, and saying as they watch the failure of this and that scheme for the amelioration of human ills "Who will show us any good?"

The time has, apparently, not yet arrived when the leading men in great nations and great movements will be ready to admit the fundamental error which has done more than anything besides to breed chaos amongst nations and peoples. I mean the "difference of concept upon the idea of God," and the place He should occupy in human thought and action. In a recent work entitled "Labour, the giant with the feet of clay" written by Mr. Shaw Desmond, the statement is made "that the great war has (already) tried to teach... the lesson that nationality and national conceptions play one of the major parts in the division of mankind. Man has yet to learn that there is something even still deeper, more formidable in its effects, and that is the outlook of human beings upon the things that lie beyond the material." And the writer adds, "one is not here speaking of theological differences. Nor is one denying that some of the noblest and finest men and women, who have existed have believed themselves quite sincerely to be helping humanity by 'fighting the idea of God' in the sense of theological definition, though such men and women, nominally spiritual, have actually taken the materialist view of life and living, and have been unconsciously 'on the side of the angels.'" But what one is speaking of is the fundamental irreconcilable difference between the materialist proper with his goal of fleshly or purely intellectual satisfactions, and the anti-materialist, between that overweighing mass... which steadily trends to a material conception of existence, and that minority, which regards the body as of little importance by the side of the soul, and only urges the care of the former in order that it may be a more worthy vehicle of the latter."

Speaking in his introduction of the small minority who have discovered that the God they had made for themselves had feet of clay the writer remarks "the men and women who are coming will not make that mistake—a God with feet of clay will not be their God." Coming from such a source the words I have quoted are at least suggestive. They imply that there are some—a small but an increasing number—who see that the only hope for the future of this disordered world is a return to the principles of the Christian Faith, for only in them can be found the true secret of real human progress and betterment.

It is neither a pleasant nor a comforting task, however, to be called upon to match the apparently purring forces of believers in Christ against the largely hostile world. Only an unshakable faith can view the prospect without alarm and without despair. To have a growing consciousness of the seriousness of the struggle involved; to face the facts as they are presented to us by friend and foe alike; to be under no illusion as to the resistance the Church will meet with, is only to be guided by common prudence and the dictates of common sense.

To some of you it may seem to be both unwise and unnecessary to paint this dark background into the picture of the Church's Diocesan life. What purpose can it serve? It may be asked. Perhaps this question can best be answered by asking another question? "What constitutes one of our greatest dangers as a Diocese? Is it not our isolation? Not merely a geographical isolation—though this has its weakening effect—but our isolation from the life of other parts of our communion, which is in contact with world problems in every quarter of the globe. Though our Bishop looks to the Chair of Augustine and pays allegiance to its occupant, for all practical purposes this Diocese stands alone—it is independent constitutes its own peculiar position and its own source of its sorest temptations. It must seek ever to save itself from falling by remembering the duty it owes to the whole Anglican Communion throughout the world. If this duty were to be lost sight of some compromising step might be taken in matters of faith and order, some irreparable error committed that might work disaster far beyond the narrow boundaries of our own Diocese. Hence the fortunes and the problems of the whole Church with which we are linked up by ties of parentage and tradition and desired life, are our intimate concern. No thought of disassociation with or disregard for the great body in its trials, its hopes and its aspirations can be thought possible. As an outpost of this great spiritual empire it is our duty to keep watch and ward, to build and to defend, to add strength so far as that is given us, to the whole commonwealth of the Kingdom of Christ.

It is of course true that the redemption of society is not necessarily committed to the Anglican Communion only, nor are we blind to facts as to claim that only through this Apostolic body can men be brought to know the truth that makes them free. But it is equally true to say that it would be sheer disloyalty to the great trust committed to us did we not aim at making common cause with the communion to which we belong in its widespread enterprises in all lands. I am sure that we have no desire to become self-centred, to allow our sympathies to be cramped within Diocesan boundaries, or to seek only for the means by which our own needs may be supplied. If our own home field must claim our first attention—and of necessity this is unavoidable—we shall not regard it as the sole claimant upon our sympathies and our thoughts, and prayers. We shall have in mind our corporate union with the larger body. And in touch as through the larger body our contact with the whole Catholic Church of Christ is brought about and maintained, so the problems which face the whole Christian world are seen to be our problems too, and these form the necessary background against which our local and Diocesan efforts and deliberations group themselves.

Here is the justification for the method of approach to the questions to be brought before our Synod, which I have adopted, and I have hope that the call to lift our eyes to wider horizons than those which bound our Diocesan life will enable us to view our own problems in the broad light of the Church's responsibility to men of every clime and kindred and tongue.

THE SPECIFIC DUTIES OF THE SYNOD.

In view of what I have already stated, let us proceed to think more particularly of what may be regarded as some of the specific duties of our Synod. The Synod is the governing body of the Church in Newfoundland; and one of its fundamental principles is that it shall continue as heretofore in spiritual union and communion with the Church of England. The Synod recognizes and accepts the Canon of Holy Scripture, as received by the Church of England, as the rule and standard of Christian Faith, and acknowledges the Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, together with the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion of that Church, to be a true and faithful declaration of doctrines contained in Holy Scripture; and maintains the threefold order of the Christian ministry—Bishops, Priests and Deacons—as Scriptural and Apostolic; and it is the object of the Synod, in dependence on Divine aid, to preserve those doctrines and that form of Church order and to transmit them to posterity.

All that follows in subsequent chapters of our Constitution and Rules has one object in view, viz., the carrying out of, or giving effect to, the great fundamental principles on which the Synod rests. Every chapter of our Constitution is intended to serve one purpose, viz., to enable the Church of England in this Diocese to bear its witness in communion with the whole Church, to the people committed to its charge. It is a well-defined purpose, to which limits are set by the very terms in which its principles are set forth. The subjects which rightly come within the Synod's purview are limited to such matters as have as their object the furtherance of the special functions of our Church. The Synod is under no obligation to go outside those functions and to usurp authority which belongs to other bodies. It makes no claim to authority to legislate in purely secular matters which have no necessary bearing upon its work as part of a spiritual society, nor does it wish to impose its authority upon those who acknowledge no allegiance to it. But on the other hand it cannot recognize the right of any other body to dictate to it as to the policy it shall pursue in matters which have to do with its spiritual and moral responsibilities to its people.

In matters which come within its proper sphere the Synod is the supreme authority of the Diocese, and it is a field of operations restricted within well-defined limits. It is so limited in order to enable it to deal more effectively with its own proper duties.

There are doubtless many important questions in which members of the Church of England are very appropriately interested; but for obvious reasons such questions cannot be introduced into our agenda, nor are we as a Synod called to pronounce upon them. We have our own work to do, and it demands all the thought, and all the time we are capable of giving to it in the few days of our disposal.

THE RECENT CENSUS.

The Diocese should not be regarded chiefly as consisting of so many miles of territory to be covered, but in the light of the number of persons it contains, for whom we as a church are directly responsible. The recent Census forces this point of view into special prominence, for it shows us that for serious heart-searching on the part of members of the body.

Though complete returns are not available as yet, the counts of revision in the various districts have enabled the clergy to obtain fairly accurate figures of the population in their respective localities. These figures should prove valuable in enabling the clergy to ascertain how far their own private records of the church people have been kept up-to-date. They will be useful too, in discovering for us isolated families who have been lost sight of, and also whether or not there are stretches of 'no man's land' containing Church families at present unsheltered, and in danger of being lost to the Church. As a Church we should examine our heart and conscience, and some of our methods in the light of facts which the Census reveals. In recent years there has been a noticeable tendency towards abandoning old settlements and to make homes in new localities where timber and fuel are obtainable, or perhaps where more fertile land is to be had. A gradual shifting of population has taken place, and this is still going on. Whilst in some districts we have made some attempt to meet those changing conditions in others we have not. The result has, I fear, been that a steady leakage has been in progress: people whom we have not followed up, have been absorbed by other bodies whose methods in this respect have been more practical than ours.

Whatever the causes of deflection may be the loss of people from the Church can never be regarded with complacency; it is a real disaster, and if any plan can be devised to minimize such losses in the future it is to be hoped that it will receive the hearty endorsement of every member of the Synod.

I shall not comment at great length upon this subject at present, as I anticipate that legislation will be introduced during this session with a view to more statistical information as to Church members being obtained and made use of.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

The question of the supply and training of men for the sacred ministry has received special emphasis from two directions during the biennial period. In the first place an unusual number of vacancies have arisen, and secondly the campaign on behalf of Queen's College has been steadily maintained, and has met with gratifying success, notwithstanding the general depression which has prevailed. The success achieved has been brought about mainly by the untiring efforts of the Principal, Rev. Dr. Facey, whose enthusiasm has been met by a sympathetic response on the part of the Clergy and their flocks. The Report of the College Council will give detailed information regarding contributions and I need not enlarge upon this point now; but I cannot refrain from an expression of the gratitude I feel for the splendid support given to the movement by many of the clergy whose example has inspired their congregations to subscribe to the fund in the face of very adverse conditions.

As the days pass the extreme importance of keeping our own Theological Institution open becomes more manifest. If Dr. Facey's courageously considered plans can be brought to maturity the Diocese will possess an Institution freed from the menace of threatened extinction, and at the same time more efficiently equipped to train men either to enter the ministry as soon as they have completed their course at the College, or to enter one of the English Universities for a period of further study before they are ordained. The Church people of Newfoundland are making no mistake when they invest either a large or a small sum in the Queen's College Funds. The Church of the future will, I believe, justify our action in saving and strengthening a College that has long since proved its value to the Diocese.

THE SUPPORT THE LIVING AGENT

The difficulty—I might say the impossibility—of filling vacancies in the ranks of the clergy does not stand alone. The provision of a living wage is a present and a pressing problem which has to do with its spiritual and moral responsibilities to its people. In 1920 not only were we courageous enough to say we could live without the E.P.G. grant but we proceeded to level up stipends considerably, or at least we passed such legislation as would supply, so it was hoped, the necessary funds for the Foreign Mission Fund, and having regard to the increased cost of living the Executive Committee had felt justified in interpreting the powers given it under the Assessment Act in a liberal manner and had raised the stipends as far as possible. But to ensure a continuance of this policy, it was necessary to secure largely increased contributions, and consequently the Assessment per capita was increased. At the same time, and for a like purpose, the qualification of a parish was raised to $1500.

Perhaps no one foresaw at the time the likelihood of such serious financial depression and dislocation of the usual sources of revenue as has since arisen, but looking back it appears unfortunate that the proposed increase in expenditure should have coincided with this financial depression, for without doubt the effect of our legislation has been to discourage and dishearten rather than to encourage. Notably this has been so in the case of smaller parishes falling vacant; and in proof of this statement I may say that practically all Parishes which have become vacant since have failed to qualify and have been unable to elect Rectors, and only temporary provision, if any, has been made for serving them.

THE DIOCESAN BUDGET.

I have not thus far made any reference to the Budget Plan introduced at last Synod; but I regard its due operation as of vital importance to our financial stability. Its working has a direct bearing upon the question of stipends. It was to my mind unfortunate that we were unable to launch this system until late in 1921, and in the circumstances it is not to be wondered at that the total income derived from this source fell considerably below our anticipations. The result has been that the Executive Committee found it impossible to maintain the stipends of clergy in charge of Missions at the figure paid in the two preceding years. This is regrettable but it was unavoidable.

The Synod will be wise, I think, in giving fuller consideration than was possible last Synod both to the better working out of the Budget Plan and the question of the qualification of parishes. It is obvious, in regard to the latter, that a continuance of the present unsatisfactory situation ought not to be contemplated. Temporary arrangements are not satisfactory either to clergy or people and to compel all parishes that cannot give a guarantee of $1500 to revert to the status of missions would, I feel, be a retrograde step. And what is perhaps of more serious consequence, our financial condition is such as to render the taking over of the responsibility of financing a number of new missions at this juncture entirely out of the question.

GRADED PARISHES.

In speaking of parishes it seems to me that our present rule as to qualifications is anomalous, and operates unfairly. Is it equitable that a parish of (say) 700 or 800 people should be expected to guarantee the same sum as a parish of two or three times that number? Oh, why should large and small parishes pay the same stipend? A modification of our rule giving it more elasticity seems to be desirable. A less rigid arrangement would encourage small localities to attain to a large measure of self-help and render them more independent of assistance from the rest of the Diocese.

Mobilizing Our Resources.

In order to assist the clergy and their Finance Committees in raising both the Church Dues and Assessments for the Budget last fall I asked several of the clergy to place themselves at my disposal to act as delegates to such parishes and missions as needed assistance. The clergy readily responded and the majority of them were able to carry through the work which they were asked to undertake.

From the reports which they made to me subsequently I gather that their visits were cordially received and were productive of much good. Owing, however, to the lateness of the season when the visits were undertaken the effect upon the Budget collections and Church Dues received was not so conspicuous as it might have been had the visits been made at an earlier date. We hope that this year's returns will show that the work undertaken was well worth while. But in my judgment it will be necessary to follow up this effort, for fuller information than many of our congregations have at present is necessary both in regard to the financial needs of the Diocese and how the Budget is designed to meet them.

An idea seems to prevail in some quarters that a congregation is free either to reject or to adopt the Diocesan Budget System as it sees fit. This erroneous idea must be dispipated. It is not sufficient that a parish or mission should consider only its own needs—how the services of its own local Church and the support of its own clergyman shall be secured. Parishes and missions must be made to realize that they owe an obligation to the Diocese and that they must bear their share of Diocesan obligations. Returns received from some quarters show that the urgency of Diocesan needs is not very well understood, and in consequence nothing like the response possible on the part of many, even in the present depressed state of affairs, has been made.

 It is evident that before we can hope to receive the money so urgently needed fuller information must be given, and more adequate means adopted to secure the support which the majority of the people can contribute in some measure.
 How is this help to be enlisted? We could continue the plan adopted last year and send delegations, and much good would be accomplished. But is there nothing more that we can do? It seems to me that our great weakness in this regard is lack of proper organization. Parishes and missions need to be organized on well-thought-out plans in order that their resources may be brought into the Church's treasury. And organization of this kind needs more or less expert treatment. All the clergy do not feel that they have the special qualifications needed for such work. Moreover, it requires more time than the average clergyman can give outside his own parish. If it be argued that such organization must necessarily imply increased expenditure would be more than justified by the increased returns received. To place the Diocese on a sound financial footing demands more than the haphazard methods we have hitherto employed. We must surely have discovered that for ourselves by this time. If we intend to give spiritual ministrations to our people and meet our obligations generally we must not be content until we have explored every avenue by which the means can be reached—it implies hard work, uphill work, but it is necessary work, and it is a spiritual work.
 I do not share the view of those who hold that it is a sign of unspirituality to be always urging upon and instructing our people in their duty to give to God's work as God has prospered them. Human selfishness is only too prone to take all the gifts that God is pleased to give with never a thought of acknowledgment by sharing these gifts with others. We need offer no apology for such plain speaking as we may think necessary upon this as upon other obligations of Church membership.
WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.
 The Board of Missions, the Report of whose work will be in due course be presented to the Synod will, I hope, steadily pursue the objects for which it came into existence. The Select Committee appointed last Synod to consider and report upon "the relation of the Board to the Executive Committee," in its Report which was adopted outlined the character and scope of the work of the Board. Obviously the whole of the programme set forth could not be fully carried out in the time which has since elapsed.
 I now suggest to the new Board that one of the most important matters to which their attention might profitably be directed at an early date is the organization of a Women's Auxiliary to the Board, either in connection with women's organizations already in existence or as a distinct organization, as circumstances might lead them to determine. I feel sure that such a step forward is most desirable.

LOSSES AND GAINS.

Since last Synod seven clergymen have left the Diocese, viz., Revs. Ernest Jones, H. F. Blackledge, E. H. Fletcher, Edgar Jones, T. P. Beauchamp, A. E. E. Legge, and E. S. Tarrant. Two priests have come to us from England, viz., Rev. W. F. A. Stride and the Rev. E. C. Earp, and three deacons have been advanced, one of whom has since been advanced to the priesthood.
 There are now seventy-nine names upon our clergy list, seventy-four of whom are actively employed, and five have retired. In 1921 the numbers were 77 and 6 respectively.
DEATH OF REV. CANON NOEL AND REV. CANON SMITH.
 Since last Synod two of our senior clergy—Rev. Canon Noel and the Rev. Canon Smith, both of whom had retired from active work, have died. Canon Noel was ordained deacon in 1864 and priest in 1868. He served at Ferryland, Upper Island Cove and Harbor Grace, having been Rector of the latter parish for about 39 years. In 1895 he became Rural Dean of Conception Bay, and two years later was appointed to a Canonry in our Cathedral. In 1915 he retired from the active ministry but continued to reside at Harbor Grace. For more than half a century Canon Noel served the Church in this Diocese with singular devotion; but it is with Harbor Grace especially that he will be generally associated. There his name became and remains a household word. Upon old St. Paul's he bestowed loving care, in restoring the tower and strengthening the fabric throughout. But his time and energies were always at the disposal of his brother clergy and their people, whilst to the work of the Diocese he contributed gladly and generously the fruits of a ripe experience. The warm-hearted hospitality of St. Paul's Rectory became proverbial. Here the clergy of the Diocese gathered frequently to their mutual encouragement, and here more than one question looking to Diocesan growth had its birth. The Home and Foreign Mission Fund owes, I believe, its inception to Canon Noel and one or two other like-minded priests who saw in the inauguration of this Fund a method whereby provision might be made for opening up new missions and in generally extending the Church's work.
 Canon Walter Redfern Smith was ordained deacon in 1869 and priest in 1871. He spent 14 years in the active ministry and continued to act as Episcopal Commissary for six years after he had ceased to have charge of a mission. At Greenspond, Exploits, Tilt Cove, Trinity East and Portugal Cove Canon Smith gave full proof of his ministry. It is a striking testimony to the esteem in which his labors both for the bodies and souls of his people were held to find that in one year, 1906, he was appointed Episcopal Commissary, Rural Dean of Avalon, and a Canon of our Cathedral Church.
 Although life should not be measured so much by length of years as by nobility of service, one cannot but be grateful to God that to these two servants of His were granted so many years wherein to sow the good seed of the kingdom with patient toil and humble persevering faith. May the Pastor Pastorum continue to bless the Church in this Diocese with men of like courage and single-minded devotion.
DEATH OF LAY REPRESENTATIVES.
 Since we last met we have been called to mourn the loss of several lay-members of the Synod. Mr. J. W. Withers had been a Lay Representative continuously for 46 years. Whether as one of the Executive Committee or of the other Synod Committees upon which he served Mr. Withers' wide knowledge and experience were placed at the Church's disposal. We can all recall the mental alertness with which he dealt with subjects under discussion and his keen advocacy of causes which were near his heart. We shall miss his presence and his counsel both in Synod and in the life of the community in which for so many years he played a useful part.

 Mr. Walter Daine Grice acted as Lay Representative for 44 years, and was a member of the Executive Committee up to the time of his death. There are those amongst us who can bear witness to his large-hearted generosity, his affection for his Church and his readiness to give time and effort to advance her interests. And it is an open secret that in the trying days of 1914, and those that followed he spent himself without stint in order to find time to serve his country, Church and community are the poorer since he was taken away.
 Mr. J. H. Monroe another Lay Representative, has also died. His connection with the Synod was of shorter duration than that of the two others whom I have mentioned, but his work for Church and community was of no mean order.
CHAPLAIN TO THE PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.
 Eight years ago in his opening address to the Synod the late Bishop, in speaking of the work of the city clergy in our public institutions, said: "It appears desirable that a Chaplain independent of parochial work should be appointed to minister to those of their inmates who are members of the Church of England. I commend this matter to the consideration of the Synod, as the required stipend must of necessity be provided from the Synod funds. I would point out that this is not merely a St. John's affair, it concerns the outports more than St. John's. The inmates of these institutions are, of course, constantly changing, but the proportion remains much the same. I have made enquiry, and find that two-thirds of the patients in the Asylum, and considerably more than half the patients in the Hospital, come from the out-harbors."
 Nothing, however, came of the Bishop's suggestion at that time, and it was not until the last Synod that provision was made for a Chaplain's stipend. Meanwhile the need had become more insistent because of the erection of additional hospital-buildings, notably the Sanatorium for consumptives, and in July last I appointed Canon Field to the office. The following figures will serve to show that the need of a Chaplain had not been exaggerated and they also supply evidence of the efficiency of Canon Field's work in carrying out this exacting and difficult duty.

EPISCOPAL STATISTICS.
 Since last Synod I have held 92 Confirmations at which 1393 males and 1515 females, a total of 2908 persons received the laying on of hands. I have consecrated 22 graveyards or additions to graveyards in the following settlements, viz.: Green's Hr., Cavendish, Spauldard's Bay, Sandy Point, Middle Barachois, Melvers, Curling, Lark Hr., Belburns, Shoal Cove West, Anchor Point, St. Anthony, Griquet, Cook's Hr., Great Harbor, Deep, Duzgan's Cove, Little Cony Arm, Sops Island, Jackson's Arm, Westport, Salvage Bay, and New Harbor.
 Six Churches have been consecrated, viz., Cavendish, Portugal Cove, Sandy Point, St. Anthony, Griquet, and Jackson's Arm; and additions to the Churches at Port au Port and Salvage Bay. Two ordinations have been held at which three deacons and two priests were admitted to Holy Orders.
THE COLONIAL & CONTINENTAL CHURCH SOCIETY.
 During the last Synod the Rev. Dr. Mullins, Secretary of the Colonial and Continental Church Society paid a visit to the Colony and spoke to us on behalf of the Society's work. Next year will mark the Hundredth Anniversary of the founding of this Society, and as its work has been of such great advantage to our own Diocese it is less fitting that we should show in some way our appreciation of its efforts.
 This Society owes its existence and its successful working entirely to the labors of a Newfoundland merchant, Samuel Codner, "a pioneer in Education for this Colony." At a meeting held at Margate in 1821 to inaugurate a branch of the Bible Society, Lord Liverpool made some forcible observations on the duty and responsibility of Great Britain to give to her extensive colonies the blessings of religious instruction. His words sank deep into the heart of Samuel Codner, and he determined, with the blessing of God, to found a Society for educating the poor of the Colony, where he had made his fortune. The Society's operations in Newfoundland were commenced in 1824, and it was then known as the Newfoundland School Society. It was subsequently merged into the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

 When the Society began its work here the population numbered only about 70,000, and there were fewer than 30 schools some of them operating only for a month or two in the year. By 1830 the Society had 28 schools in operation.
 "Most of the early teachers, became Clergy of the Church," and some of them, such as Meek and Kingwell, were amongst our saintliest missionaries.
 Acting always as the agents of the Church the Society's teachers have during all these years rendered notable service, and have placed the Diocese under a very great obligation. After 100 years of service the Society finds its annual income so seriously diminished that it has been obliged to sell out its reserves, and even then carries an adverse balance. The grants made to Newfoundland has had to be greatly reduced. In view of all that this venerable Society has done for us, and especially in consideration of its straitened circumstances, could we not next year endeavor to raise a . . . . . mark our appreciation of the benefits we have received? I trust that this matter will receive your sympathetic consideration.
THE BRITISH & FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.
 May I crave your indulgence for a short time in order to make a statement with regard to the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and particularly to the Branch of the Society operating in this Colony? I feel that I owe to my brethren some explanation as to why I think we may have some part in the work of this Society, and that in doing so we need be neither disloyal to our own S.P.C.K., nor to the Church of England.
 Founded in 1804 the Society has been the handmaid of missionary organizations generally. The fundamental principle of the Society is the dissemination of the Bible "without note or comment." Annually the Society issues millions of copies of the Bible or portions of the Bible. Last year it sent three millions of books to China and a million and a half to India. It added ten new languages to its list last year bringing the number of languages or dialects in which it publishes the Scriptures up to 538. Whenever a new language or dialect can be reduced to writing the Society is ready to bear the cost of issuing the Bible in that language, and is content with whatever return can be made by those for whom the Bible is thus made available. For every £1 the Society spends it receives but 7/- in return. The cost of publishing has so increased that a Bible that sold for sixpence, the cheapest in the world before the war, and upon which a loss of a penny a volume was made, is now catalogued at 18/- and is sold at a loss of sixpence a copy. The total expenditure of the Society last year was £492,138, etc. In spending such a large sum the whole of its reserves disappeared and a deficit of £25,000 was incurred. In the face of the fact that fresh demands are always being made to take up new work an increased income is obviously a necessity. A Society that spends £1200 a day on printing and sends forth the Bible and publishes the Gospel in a new language every five weeks and sends out 9,000,000 copies of Scripture in each year should at least be encouraged.
 Let me be more specific in order to show that our Church would stand to lose from an enforced curtailment of the Society's operations.
 The Anglican Communion teaches the Bible in 133 languages, and dialects in its world-wide work. Of these it is indebted to the Society for 184. The Presbyterians use 136 versions, Methodist Missionary Societies 103 and others in like proportion.
 Among the Vice-Presidents are the Archbishops of Canterbury, York and Wales, and more than 40 Anglican Bishops.
 The N. F. Auxiliary with its centre in St. John's has 33 branches. His Excellency the Governor is Patron, the Bishop is Hon. President and the Rev. Canon Bolt is President.
 As I bring this address to a close I am conscious of the omission of any reference to certain matters which are of extreme importance to the whole Church as well as to our own Diocese. In regard to more than one of such questions I have not felt that this is the time to dwell upon them and that more mature thought on my part and that of others would enable us to arrive at a wiser decision in respect of them. We are living at a time when the conclusions arrived at to-day are liable to be set aside tomorrow, and we are wise sometimes to heed the warning "festina lente." We have grave problems to face—courage and faith and patience are all needed if we are to act wisely in the face of many perplexities. Let us put aside as far as we may all personal and sectional considerations, and having a will to be helpful we may be directed in ways that lead to the greater strength and peace of the Church.

SAFETY FIRST.

The inauguration of a safety first campaign by the Motor Association comes none too soon, for the number of accidents for which cars are responsible seems to be very much on the increase. Not a motor season passes without its toll of fatalities and although the present season is not far advanced, three serious motor accidents have already occurred. People are apt to place the responsibility for these accidents on the shoulders of the motorists, but while it is true that there are some careless or incompetent car drivers, as a rule the fault lies with the victims. With respect to incompetent motorists, there are many people, driving cars to-day who either through their youth, nervousness or for other reasons are not fit persons to control the dangerous machine that a motor becomes in their hands.

But as we have stated, the chief fault lies with the public who either through carelessness, bravado, or indifference to their own safety, run risks which cause one to marvel at the fact that there are not more serious accidents. The only apparent cure is the Safety First Campaign, provided that it is carried out with a thoroughness which impresses upon the minds of motorists, and every section of the public, both young and old, the tremendous chances they are taking, and the methods they should apply to protect themselves from doing or receiving injury. So far as children are concerned, it is the duty of every parent, and every school teacher, to point out to them the dangers they run in playing on the streets and in attempting to steal rides on cars. It is only by such means that the child can be made to understand the elements of safety first. Newspapers and lectures are the means of appealing to the general public, and it is surprising how devoid of common sense many grown-ups show themselves by their actions on the streets.

There should also be an Act passed which would cause the motorist guilty of extreme carelessness or flagrant breaches of traffic regulations, not only to be severely fined, but also to have his license endorsed, and after a repetition of the offence, taken from him altogether. Some of the points which should be instilled into motorists' and pedestrians alike, are:

- (1) The necessity of all pedestrians to look up and down a street before crossing it;
- (2) The necessity of preventing children from playing on those streets which are provided with sidewalks;
- (3) The inadvisability of children clambering on or playing with cars that are parked;
- (4) The necessity of caution on the part of motorists driving through streets or around corners where there is likely to be large traffic or children are apt to congregate.

Many suggestions of a similar nature may be put forward. In the meantime, if the campaign which the Motor Association has inaugurated is successful in reducing the number of motor accidents to a minimum, the organization will have done an incalculable good for the community.

The Horseless Carriage.

The second instalment, for the season, of the Motoring Column that ran last year under the title "The Horseless Carriage" appears on another page to-day under the new caption of "Motobills," the former title having been dropped. This will be one of our regular features throughout the motoring season, and will constitute Thursday's feature.

C. H. E. Exams.

PAPERS ARE SATISFACTORY.
The papers in the various grades of the Council of Higher Education Examinations are eminently satisfactory this year. Mr. A. Wilson, C.H.E. Registrar, told the Telegram that those of the past five years. The papers this year, for the first time in five years, have been set by the College of Preceptors, London. From 1917 to 1921, they were prepared by the Dalhousie External Examination Board. The improvements this year are not alone in the nature of questions, but also in the actual printing of the papers. The printers' errors which during the past five years have made the life of the Registrar and his staff miserable during the examination week, are now conspicuous by their absence. The College of Preceptors were abandoned only for the period of the war, and now that conditions have become more settled, the C.H.E. Council wisely decided to return to them.

This is a record year with respect to the number of candidates. Although the fees have in many cases been doubled. This points to an increased appreciation of the educational value of the examination and a keener interest on the part of parents in providing their children with scholastic training. There are 237 centres scattered over the island. The number of candidates taking the examination are:

- Primary . . . . . 1800
- Preliminary . . . . . 2000
- Intermediate . . . . . 1250
- Junior A.A. . . . . 210
- Senior A.A. . . . . 30

This is a total of 6390, or an increase of nearly 600 over 1921, and 1600 over 1920.

It is particularly satisfactory to note that there are considerably more candidates taking the higher grades this year. The examinations finish on Saturday.

Returned to Ship.

POLICE TAKE DESERTERS BACK.
Three seamen, deserters from an ore ship loaded at Bell Island some time ago, and who had been sentenced to terms in the Penitentiary by Stipendiary Power, were released to-day and given in charge of Sergeant Shephard of the Newfoundland Constabulary and Sergeant McLean of the Corporation Police on the island. They were taken to the Cove this afternoon and from thence to the island, where their ship being due, they will be put on board thus relieving the Colony of the cost of their maintenance, and ridding the country of their persons.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, June 29.
That idea of McKesson and Robbins people of putting up a "fly dope" in solid form is a good one in many ways, and users of their Mosquitone say that in this form it is quite an effective way of keeping flies off. It is much less greasy and messy than ordinary liquid fly scarers, though the latter may be better when going on a fishing excursion, yet for casual use in the country, the Mosquitone will be found no less elegant than effective. Each stick done up in a glass protector. Price 30c. each.

Residents in Bad State.

WANT AT WEST BONAVISTA.
According to a letter received last mail by a well known gentleman from a business man of Bonavista, many of the residents in the section between Keels and Bonavista are in a very bad state and some are on the verge of starvation. The small suppliers have not given any credit, and as yet fish have not put in an appearance, so that the situation for many is very precarious.

Obituary.

MR. F. BRADSHAW, SR.
The Telegram learns with deep regret of the death at his home this morning of Mr. Frank Bradshaw, Sr. Deceased was the son of Dr. F. Bradshaw of Placentia, who came to that settlement when it was the capital of the country. His grandfather was a surgeon in the Royal Navy. He entered the firm of Fasker and was for many years afterwards a broker with Walter Grieve & Company. In later years he was with Thorburn & Tessier, finally going into the Commission business for himself. The late Mr. Bradshaw was an artist of no mean repute, and was often to be found with easel and palette, sketching in some beautiful local surroundings. He was in his 81st year, and leaves a wife (nee Miss Hutton), two sons, Frank and Fred, and three daughters, Mrs. Cleary, Mrs. (Dr.) Mitchell and Mrs. R. M. Pigeon, and one sister, Mrs. Emerson, to mourn their sad loss.

From Land to Sea.

MEMBER FOR FOGO MAY TAKE OVER FISHERIES DEPARTMENT.
It is stated that the resignation of Hon. W. F. Coaker as head of the Marine and Fisheries Department will be officially announced in a few days. The appointment of a successor is being considered. The retiring Minister, it is stated, wishes the Minister of Posts to take the job, but Mr. Halfyard will not consent to give up the position he already holds. It is not at all improbable that the portfolio will fall to Mr. R. Hibbs, who is at present secretary of the Road Commission.

Regatta Committee

MEETING TO-NIGHT TO DISCUSS SWEEPS.
A very serious question will come up for discussion at to-night's meeting of the Regatta Committee. It will deal with the right of the Boat Clubs to demand a monopoly of sweepstakes on the Regatta. Outside organizations have placed sweepstakes on the market, and there is not the least likelihood of these being withdrawn. Under the circumstances, if the Boat Clubs intend to withdraw their boats unless they receive a monopoly, there is a possibility of there being no regatta.

Lost at Fox Island.

A message from St. Augustine, Saguenay, via Quebec, received to-day from Capt. S. R. Winsor says: "Lost schooner near Fox Island. Five of our crew trying to connect with Home. Am remaining looking after wreckage." Capt Winsor was on his way to the Straits when his schooner was wrecked.

Fish Plentiful on Local Grounds.

Mr. J. G. Butler left by to-days express for New York.
Mr. Miller, representative of the Dominion Securities Company who was here on business, left by to-day's express for Canada.
Miss Isabel Hayward is a passenger to-day from Montreal by S. S. Manoe to spend a short vacation with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hayward, Forest Road.
Amongst the passengers arriving by express is Mrs. T. G. Potter, daughter of Inspector General Hutchings, Mrs. Potter whose home is in Montreal will spend the summer with her parents.
Mr. S. Loveridge, former city representative of the firm of Ashbourne & Co. Twillingate, left by express to-day en route to Battle Harbor, where he takes a position with the firm of Baine Johnston & Co.

Express Arrives.

The express with the Kyle's mail and passengers arrived shortly after 3 p.m. to-day. A short delay occurred through the derailment of a car between Howley and Gaff Topsails through which a few hours were lost in running time.

Fierce Fighting in Dublin.

Insurgent Stronghold Attacked by Free State Troops--Churchill Denies Pressure on Collins--Provisional Government Solely Responsible.

IRISH CIVIL WAR.

DUBLIN, June 28.
Michael Collins, head of the Irish Free State Government, took active measures to-day against Republican Insurgents, under Rory O'Connor, in their stronghold in the center of Dublin Four Courts. An ultimatum for the surrender of the Insurgents was ignored, and at the expiration of a brief time limit, Free State troops, in armoured cars and motor lorries, began a movement against the Insurgents, which was met with an immediate fusillade from the buildings. From dawn until late to-night there were heavy exchanges. Small artillery trench mortars and machine guns were employed by the attacking forces, but the Insurgents confined themselves largely to machine guns and rifle fire. No attempt was made to carry Four Courts by assault, but one of the walls of the building was breached at various places. There are a few casualties in proportion to the nature of the fighting and consist mostly of civilians caught in the line of fire. So far as is known seven have been killed, and a score more or less seriously wounded.

ON ITS OWN INITIATIVE.

LONDON, June 28.
In the House of Commons to-day, Col. Secretary Churchill repudiated assertions made in the London papers, that British pressure on the Provisional Government is responsible for attacks on Insurgents in Dublin. Secretary Churchill declared the Provisional Government's decision in no way arose out of the debate in the House. It arose as the result of further aggressive and anarchic action by Rory O'Connor and his Insurgents culminating in the forcible seizure of one of the principal officers of the Irish Government. The Provisional Government is solely responsible for the operation, and had declined all offers of assistance, except concerning equipment.

FOUR COURTS ATTACKED BY REBELS.

BELFAST, June 28.
Unconfirmed reports from Dublin said the gates of the main entrance of Four Courts had been blown down and some of the walls almost levelled. Four Courts has been held by Irregulars of the Irish Republican Army under Rory O'Connor since the middle of April and were attacked to-day by the Regular Forces of the Provisional Government.

FOUR COURTS HOLDING OUT.

LONDON, June 28.
Four Courts in Dublin was still held by the Irregulars at 10 o'clock tonight, according to a despatch to the Times. The Irish Labor Party are reported to disapprove the action of the Government in attacking the building.

ROBY'S COMMUNIQUE.

DUBLIN, June 28.
"The boys are glorious and will fight for the Republic to the end," said a communique issued this afternoon by Rory O'Connor, Commandant of the Insurgents under attack in Four Courts. It is said the only casualties sustained so far by the Insurgents were three slightly wounded.

HARDING TAKING A HAND.

WASHINGTON, June 28.
President Harding has decided to summon to Washington on Saturday, a group representative of the coal operators from all parts of the United States to discuss with representatives of the Miners' Union the possibility of a conference to fix wage scales that would settle the bituminous coal strike.

WAR IN EARNEST.

DUBLIN, June 28.
Insurgent Irish Republican Army men were still holding out in Four Courts stronghold, at noon to-day, against continuous attempts of Free State troops to dislodge them. Firing was in progress all the forenoon, and there was an especially heavy burst of firing at eleven. Shipping operations were almost incessant, with casualties estimated this forenoon at more than fifty, being hourly added to.

Proceedings of the Synod

June 28, 1922.
AFTERNOON SESSION.

The House met at 3:30, the Lord Bishop presiding, and reading the opening prayers.

The minutes of the previous session were read and confirmed.

Rev. Canon Bolt moved the report of the Ordination Candidates Council which on being duly seconded was adopted.

Rev. Canon Bolt moved the adoption of the Report of the Managers of the Diocesan Sustentation Fund, which on being duly seconded was agreed.

Mr. J. J. Long gave notice to ask Mr. Brian Dunfield to lay on the table of the House all correspondence relating to the employment of the staff of Bishop Spencer College; the dismissal, retirement or resignation of any member of the staff; also the Minutes of the Board of Directors relating to the same and any report of Miss Richards relative to the teaching staff for the good and future welfare of the College.

The above correspondence, etc., to be from the time Miss Richards was appointed Headmistress of Bishop Spencer College up to the time of her resignation.

Rev. J. T. Richards gave notice that he would on to-morrow draw the attention of the Synod to the work of Dr. Grenfell in Northern Newfoundland and Labrador, and move a resolution.

The House resumed its debate on the adoption of the Report of the Literature Committee. Several members expressed opinions of the very satisfactory character of the Diocesan Magazine under its new management, and of its increasing usefulness to church people.

The main problem in connection with the Magazine is, however, the problem of financing it, and a suggestion was thrown out that a limited liability company be formed to carry on this useful Diocesan publication.

At this stage the Report of the Literature Committee was adopted.

Rev. Canon Bayly then moved and it was duly seconded that a Select Committee be appointed to consider this question of the formation of a limited liability company in connection with the Magazine, and to report at as early a date as possible to this Synod. Agreed. The Committee nominated and approved by the House comprise the following, viz: Rev. Canon Adams, A. L. Barrett, Geo. A. Bartlett, Pursuant to notice, Dr. Blackhall moved his resolution that the Synod request the Legislature to increase the number of Directors of the Church of England Colleges, so that representatives from the outports and women may be introduced; and that a Bill may be introduced into this Synod to give effect to this resolution.

On being seconded the motion was put to the House, and on division was lost.

The House resumed the debate on the motion of Rev. W. R. J. Higgin relating to the question of the enforcement of law and order especially in connection with the Prohibition Act, and of the Resolution in an amendment by Rev. J. T. Hiscock, to ask the Government for a referendum on this question. The matter was debated by many members until the closing hour, when on motion, seconded and carried, the whole subject was deferred.

On motion, duly seconded, the House adjourned.

EVENING SESSION.

The House resumed at 8 o'clock. The Select Committee appointed in connection with the proposed amendment to Chap. I and Chap. VII of the Constitution and Rules concerning the franchise to women, reported that: "Having considered the matter to which we entrusted the Committee are of opinion that the qualification for speaking and voting should be the same for women as for men."

On motion, duly seconded, the Report was adopted.

Rev. Canon Jeeves moved the House into committee of the whole on the Report on the Bill brought in by the Select Committee. On being seconded this was agreed.

The House went into Committee. It was moved, seconded and carried that the report be adopted. Agreed.

It was moved, seconded and carried that the committee rise and report the Bill passed without amendment.

The Committee rose and the House resumed.

Canon Jeeves gave notice that he would on to-morrow move that the bill be read a third time and passed.

The House resumed its debate on the adoption of the Report of the Directors of the Church of England Colleges.

At 9 o'clock the debate was interrupted by the election of Executive Committee of the Synod, of which His Lordship the Bishop gave notice last evening, and appointed Messrs. W. N. Gray, George House, C. B. Dicks and W. J. Martin to be scrutineers. At 10 o'clock the scrutineers presented the result of the election to His Lordship the Bishop, who announced that the following had been elected: Rev. Canon Bolt, M.A., D.C.L., ex officio; Rev. Canon Bayly, M.A., Rev. Canon Smart, Rev. Canon Jeeves, M.A., Rev. Canon Reid, Rev. E. C. Eard, B.A., Rev. N.

The Lion and the Fox.

A STORY FOR THE CHILDREN.

Once upon a time a lion and a fox lived very near each other. Now the lion saw that, though the fox was neither so brave nor so strong as himself, yet he always managed to be well fed, no matter how severe the weather might be. Often when the lion had been without food for days he would see the fox dragging home a large fowl.

At length, he went to the fox and very politely said to him—"My dear fox, since we are such near neighbours, don't you think it would be a good thing if we were to co-operate, to enter into partnership?" The fox looked at the lion very slyly, for he did not quite see what he meant.

"How do you mean?" he asked at last.

So the lion explained, "I mean I would help you and protect you if danger came, and we would share all the food we got!"

But he soon found that he was worse off than he was before, for, though the lion would sometimes bring a deer for supper, it often happened that he brought nothing at all, but ate half of whatever the fox had obtained.

"Oh, oh," thought the fox, "this will never do." So he began to make his supper in a secret place some distance away from his hole.

After that, he did not always take home any meat, for if he only got one fowl, or one rabbit, he kept it himself; if he got two he took one home and shared it with his partner.

"That's the fairest way to co-operate," he said to himself, licking his lips.

"Oh, is it?" roared the lion, leaping towards him. "I think not, you're a cheat. I always bring home everything I catch."

"And precious little it is, these days," answered the fox angrily, ruffling his coat.

"What do you say?" roared the lion in a terrible voice. He was trying to scare his partner.

"I mean what I say," answered the fox, but he kept well away from him.

"You leave me to find the supper nearly every evening, and hardly ever do anything yourself. It isn't fair."

"We'll soon see if it isn't fair," answered the lion. "You shall soon cry another tale!" and he began to make himself look as fierce and angry as possible.

"I think I've had enough of feeding a great big thing like you," the fox went on bravely, but he was really very frightened and wished he was nearer to his hole.

"How dare you?" growled the lion. "I think it's time we dissolved partnership," went on the fox. "From now I shall feed myself only, and he tried to find a way to escape."

"Then you will feed me first," roared the angry lion, as he made a spring. The fox tried to dodge out of the way; but it was no use, the lion was too strong for him.

"That was a nice tasted partner," remarked the lion, licking his lips as he sauntered home.

Fifty Killed by Hurricane

Wind of hurricane velocity, the out- rider of a torrential rainstorm that swept from the eastern edge of New Jersey across New York city and over Westchester county late on the afternoon of June 11, was responsible for at least fifty deaths, hundreds of minor accidents, large destruction of property, and riots and panic at traffic terminals and pleasure resorts. The most numerous fatalities were drownings off City Island of men and women in rowboats.

The Defiance of Pele.

The recent death of one of the first of the missionaries who went to the Sandwich Islands brings to remembrance the work of civilization which had been done there. It was in 1820 that the American Board sent out representatives to Hawaii. The missionaries found a nation of savages, they have left a civilized people.

One of the most picturesque incidents connected with the overthrow of idolatry was the defiance of Pele by the Princess Kapiolani. Pele was the most dreaded deity of the Sandwich Islands, a goddess supposed to be of great and terrible power, who resided in the crater of the volcano of Kilauea. Superstition in regard to this revengeful spirit who dwelt in the fiery, seething pit, was hard to dislodge from the savage mind.

The Princess journeyed one hundred miles, most of the way on foot, to the crater of Kilauea. The missionaries at Hilo, twenty-five miles from the volcano, heard of her pilgrimage and wished to meet her at the volcano. One was obliged to give up because he had no shoes and his feet were tender. The other had no shoes either, but he was used to walking barefooted, so he started out. The Princess was much affected at this meeting with the missionary. The two, watched by a company of about eighty natives, descended from the rim of the crater to the "black rock." There, in full view of the terrific panorama, Kapiolani calmly spoke.

"Jehovah is my God," she said. "He kindled these fires. I fear not Pele. If I perish from the anger of Pele, you may fear the anger of Pele. If I do not perish, all the Gods of Hawaii are vain."

She then sang a hymn of praise, and returned to the wondering, fearful company, unscratched. In that few moments she had done much to overthrow the remaining paganism.

The Philanthropist.

An old woman went up to the fish-hawker's barrow and looked at his stock with longing eyes. She was evidently very poor, for when the hawkker asked threepence for a scale-full of selected bits she hesitated. "Have 'em at threepence, mum," growled the hawkker. "No, it's too much," said the woman dolefully. "Have 'em at a penny, then." Still the old woman hesitated. There was a look of pity mixed with disgust on the hawkker's face, and, turning from the woman, he said: "Here, missus, I'll turn me back while you sneak 'em."

Personal.

Mr. A. E. Holmes, who has been associated with the work of the Seaman's Institute for the last ten months, left on Sunday's express to attend the summer session of the Springfield Y.M.C.A. College, Springfield, Mass., where he will specialise in physical education. Upon his return it is expected that he will extend the activities of the Seaman's Institute considerably in the line of athletics and physical development. Mr. Wellington will assume Mr. Holmes' responsibilities during his absence.

To Conduct Funeral.

Colonel Martin, S.A., accompanied by Commander Sainsbury, leaves by this morning's train for Bay Roberts to conduct the funeral of Mrs. Thomas Bowering of that place, who passed away on the 27th inst. The late Mrs. Bowering, who is a sister of W. H. Cave, Esq., Minister of Shipping, is a Salvationist of many years standing and will be greatly missed in the Bay Roberts's Corps where she has long been a faithful worker.

O. McPherson, Furniture Dealer, Undertaker, Armstrong, B.C. Minard's Liniment Co., Ltd. Yarmouth, N.S.

DEAR SIRS.—Since the start of baseball season we have been hindered with sore muscles, sprained ankles, etc., but just as soon as we started using Minard's Liniment our troubles ended. Every baseball player should keep a bottle of your liniment handy. Yours truly,
W. E. McPherson,
Secretary of Armstrong High School Baseball Team.

HIT BY MOTOR CAR.—A girl named Jennie Brophy was hit by a motor car last evening whilst she was crossing Theatre Hill. The child received a bad scare, but fortunately escaped with only a slight bruise. No blame was attached to the driver of the car.

FRIGHTENED BY CAR.—Frightened by the horn of a motor car, a horse attached to a box car driven by Albert George, jumped over a small embankment on the Cockpit Road yesterday afternoon. George was slightly injured, but the legs of the horse were cut. The animal had to receive attention from a "vet."

Ore Steamer in Port.

WILL TAKE BUNKER COAL.
Bound from Norvik, Norway, to Baltimore with a cargo of iron ore, S. S. "American Star" arrived in port last evening to replenish her bunkers. The ship is 16 days out, and during the past few days the coal supplies became short. On arrival, the Star berthed at Harvey's pier where she is being supplied. The American Star is 5,268 tons gross and 3,347 tons net.

and is owned by the American Star Line Corporation, New York. The Furness Withy Co. are the ship's agents.

SENEP ARRIVES.—S. S. Senep reached port early this morning from the Fortune Bay Service. She reports the bankers doing well but little fish caught along the shore. The ship sailed at 4 a.m. for Bay de Verde to bring a sick man to this port to enter hospital.

Captured Convict.

The convict Arthur Conroy, who escaped from Parkhurst Prison, Isle of Wight, and was captured at Ryde on Sunday after 12 days' freedom on the island, was brought before the prison governor some days ago and remained until after an inquiry into his escape has been held. Convicts who escape are almost invariably punished by having to lose 3 or 6 months' remission of sentence gained by good conduct; by having for periods generally of 6 months to a year chains fastened to a waist band and riveted round each ankle by steel bands; and by being put on the lowest scale of prison diet. They also have to wear a distinctive dress, half jacket and half drab.

A Picture That Tells a Story

Dauber is an artist of the "The Israelites" school. To all persons who visit his studio, he says, "Look here; this is the latest masterpiece of my composition." They look, and see nothing but an expanse of bare canvas. They ask, "What does it represent?" "That? Why, that represents the passage of the Israelites through the Red Sea." "But, pardon, but where is the sea?" "It has been driven back." "And where are the Israelites?" "And the Egyptians?" "Will be here directly. That's the part of painting I like: simple, suggestive, and unpretentious.

Inmate of Poor House.

MURDERED BY INSANE COMPANIONS.
 That they strangled Boyd E. Pendleton, aged 25, with a pair of men's braces, one holding his legs while the other did the major part of the deed, is the story Blanchard Tidd told Saturday, June 10, concerning himself and Harry Smith, both inmates with Pendleton, of the harmless insane ward of the Digby County Poor House, N. S. Smith held the man's legs, Tidd said. An inquest was held on June 10 by Coroner Daley and a jury, and a recommendation was made that Tidd and Smith be removed to an asylum for the criminally insane. Pendleton was found dead in his bed Friday morning and death was presumed at first to have been from natural causes, as the man had been ill. Blood on the bedclothes and a mark on Pendleton's neck, however, led to inquiries. Tidd at first said the dead man hanged himself with Smith's braces, but later told the story of strangulation by himself and his companion.

How John Bull Became English.

In the reign of Queen Anne a Scottish physician, named John Arbuthnot, famous as one of the most famous wits of the day, brought out a book called "History of John Bull." This book, or "tract," poked shrewd fun at the political intrigues of the time, and in it the various nations involved, were pictured as persons. France was "Lewis Baboon" (a play on King Louis XIV. of the ruling house of Bourbon); Prussia was Lord Strutt, and the Netherlands were Nicholas Frog, after the frog of the fable who tried to swell himself into a bull. England was John Bull, hearty and blunt, "and honest, plain-dealing fellow."

Values Gowns Before Her Life.

The sailing of the United American liner Reliance from New York for Hamburg was held up for nearly an hour on June 13 by the repeated efforts of a woman first-cabin passenger to jump overboard. The woman was Mrs. Anita Motti, wife of a wealthy exporter of Milan, Italy. She had come to the United States a week previously on the same vessel, and was being deported because Italy's quota had been filled for the year. Mrs. Motti, expensively gowned and wearing numerous rings, spent her entire stay here at Ellis Island. When she found that her six trunks, containing clothes, valuable and personal effects, were not on the Reliance, the woman became hysterical. She struggled violently with immigration officers in her efforts to climb the ship's railing and jump into the water.

Six Killed When Lightning Hits Ferris Wheel.

Six people were killed and fifty injured on June 11, when lightning hit a ferris wheel at Clason Point, on the Bronx shore of Long Island Sound N.Y. In one of the worst cloud bursts and lightning storms that have hit New York for years. So suddenly did the electrical storm break that the crew operating the big wheel, in which 60 people were riding, were unable to stop the machine and allow the passengers to alight. With a rending crash, the wheel, with its load of shrieking men, women and children, toppled to the ground, part of it burying itself in the water of a bathing beach nearby.

Fads and Fashions.

The newest blouses are shown in cashmere prints of allover laces. Frocks of organdie are worn over organdie slips of contrasting color. A sleeveless frock of chiffon cloth has a wide fichu or organdie. The square neckline is many times used for the sleeveless bodice. Colored radium lace is used over slips of white silk or crepe de chine. The combination of blue and black is a Paris favorite of the moment.

Floss arrowheads give an aspect of smart tailoring to suits and skirts of flannel. Voluminous folds of puffs of the material finish the necks of many smart capes. Combinations of satin and taffeta with gingham are favored for bathing suits.

The newest shades of green are reseda and apple green, Jade is losing in popularity.

The long, sagging shoulder and the very wide sleeves are generally used together.

A charming pair of satin slippers has a band of tiny rosebuds in place of a strap.

A frock of two-tone taffeta has a fichu of organdie with applique motifs of ribbon flowers.

Parasols are very popular, but the long, slender cane of bright hue is still more popular.

A charming French hat, shows lace sleeves cut in one with the lace drapery of the brim. A hem finish of satin ribbon is used on the wide skirt of a frock of cross-bar cotton-satine. Allover beaded chiffon is used for a charming bridal gown. The full, slashed sleeves are of silk net.

Gibsol Universal Antiseptic Ointment, Made in Ireland.

One would gather from all that is being written on the art of advertising that it is only necessary to advertise extensively to sell almost any quantity of any commodity. But it is enduring quality alone that will stand the test of time. As a long-dead wiseacre had it "You may fool some of the people sometimes, but you'll never fool all the people all the time."

Though we have given our Ointment due publicity in all the countries into which we have introduced it, we find that our best advertisement is the testimony of those who have used it to those who need it. Merit alone has carried it to the great portion of fine continents, English, Scotch, Dutch, German, French, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, all use it and are glad to use it. Irishmen swear by it.

Medical men all through the world use it and recommend it.

It bears the Irish Trade Mark, the guarantee not of an individual or a firm, but of a nation.

Gives immediate and permanent relief in all cases and classes of skin trouble.

Don't take any chances with cuts, &c. Use Gibsol. It cleans the wound and prevents blood poisoning.

Unexcelled for stings, fly-bites and sunburn; Gibsol removes the irritation, replaces the skin, and gives the whole a smooth, cool appearance.

It's Flavor that Makes the Meal!

And the sauces that the Libby chefs have adapted for you give flavor to the simplest dishes.

It may be eggs, or macaroni, or a cheap cut of meat—an unusual and delicious sauce will make it something you eat with delight and remember with pleasure—because of its flavor.

LIBBY'S CATCHUP and CHILI SAUCE are made from red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the fertile soil of Kent County, Ontario, picked when they are mellowed by the sunshine of long summer days, then rushed to the nearby Libby kitchen.

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

HIS DIARY.

June 28th.—The Boat Clubs make a mighty cry to-day about the "sweepstakes on the Regatta, and some say they will take boats off the pond, if other Clubs are permitted to have sweeps. I to see Judge Morris on the matter and he tells me he will allow other Clubs to have sweepstakes, but will permit only the Boat Clubs to have wheels of fortune on the race course. The whole thing, I think, is mighty silly. I have cause to be joyful this day, for my being married this day, twenty years. Comes Povy and we did fall into celebration of the day, but he having at all times a weak head for wine, did become foxy and so I did have my man lead him home.

Translation of Body.

CEREMONY AT TORBAY.

On Sunday next the body of the late Fr. Troy, laid to rest in the Parish Church at Torbay, will be removed and placed in a Sepulchre in the new church. When the old church was being demolished some time ago the casket containing the body of the dead priest was taken up and both were found to be in a remarkable state of preservation. Sunday's ceremony takes place at 11 a.m., when there will be High Mass, Rev. Fr. Ashley, P.P., officiating.

Live and Let Live.

Dear Sir:—The above heading seems to be peculiarly applicable to the Regatta Boat Clubs in their present grievance, and it might be wise if they would give this good old adage due consideration. Dame Rumor usually exaggerates conditions to such an extent, that the original idea eventually presents a woefully distorted appearance, and it is sincerely to be hoped, that many of the rumors now being circulated, are merely fantasies of perverted imagination, for one would regret to think that those whom we have always regarded as "Regatta Sports" in the truest sense, are nothing more or less than Avaricious Road Hogs.

As for the contention that all Sweepstakes should be reserved for the boat clubs, because of certain expenses incurred, it would be just as reasonable for the business firms to demand similar concessions, in connection with our Annual Sealing Voyage, because of expenses they incur in pursuance of that venture. Let the Boat Clubs be satisfied with a fair share, for if their unreasonable demands are acceded to, they will create so much bitterness that the pleasure of our Annual Derby Day would be destroyed.

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.

"Fires of Faith" An Inspiring Picture.

WORK OF SALVATION ARMY ON THE FRONT FINELY SHOWN.

An inspiring photoplay is the superb Paramount picture "Fires of Faith," is the verdict of all who have seen that splendid production at the Nickel Theatre. Incidental to the development of an unusually appealing love story, Salvation Army scenes at home and on the fighting line vest the subject with an added interest and serve to make the presentation perhaps the most notable seen here in many years.

The story deals with a young woman of the slums who is reclaimed through the Salvation Army and who goes to the front as the finest of our young girls. The photoplay never lags an instant, for there is plenty of action in every scene.

The principal players are Catherine Calvert, Eugene O'Brien, Ruby de Remer, Theodore Roberts, Herbert Standing, Edythe Chapman and others.

The story was written by Charles E. Whittaker, and directed by Edward Jose, one of the ablest producers in the country. The thousands of enthusiastic movie fans of this city will be glad to learn that the big production, "Midsummer Madness" will be shown shortly. Watch for definite announcement.

MOTOBILIA.

Well, we have decided to adopt the above for the column heading, having, we admit, in lieu of receiving any suggestions from readers...

We had intended holding forth quite a lot this week on the subject of "Safety First" particularly as regards the juvenile population of the city...

A PROTEST.

Several communications have been received from Residents of Rennie's Mill Road in connection with motorists driving up that road late at night...

The preparations for the Motor Association Field Day are getting locked into shape and the only thing that is now wanting is the Inspector General's permission to proceed...

In a heated argument on the condition of the Asylum Road we overheard last night, a motorist was most insistent that the ruts on that thoroughfare were all of "fifteen sixteenths" of an inch deep...

About twenty years ago the colossal ignorance of the average Englishman about Britain's Oldest Colony used to be noted. We thought matters had improved in this way in recent years...

"CUSTOMS DUTY ON CARS 40%." Driving license cost five dollars. Within a radius of about thirty miles of St. John's the roads are fair for motoring but in the Island generally they are few, and on the whole poor.

Now let's pick that to pieces. The duty hasn't been 40 p.c. since the war. It is now 40 p.c. plus a surtax, plus a super tax, plus a sales tax. A driving license costs more than five dollars. Are there no good roads beyond Holywood, on the other side of the Bay for instance?

Talking of this kind of thing I wonder how many people fall for a set of War Volumes published under the Harmsworth jurisdiction and unloaded pretty freely in St. John's...

Well, we're going to put ourselves on the back now! By dint of harping in season and out of season last season in this column on the subject of Manuel's Bridge, the Bridge is at last put in a safe condition for vehicular traffic. All things come to him who waits, if he doesn't pass in his checks before the waiting is over. Now we are going to start a little campaign on Water Street even if we (personally) get it in the neck in two different places and we intend harping on the abominable condition of Water Street just as often as we did on Manuel's Bridge till it gets fixed up. Our original intention was to point out the worst places and try to agitate to get them fixed up first. But there are so many worst places it is hard to discriminate. Right along the street car rails from the Institute to the Railway station there is a deep rut by the side of each rail, quite deep enough to tear the wheel off any express wagon while opposite Knowledge's Hardware there is a rut big enough to tear the wheel off a motor car. For nice trenches across the road, similar on a slightly smaller scale to those used in France, try Water Street opposite the new Royal Bank building and again opposite J. B. Mitchell & Sons. For the principal street of the capital town of the Island of Newfoundland the condition of Water Street is a disgrace and we urge all owners of vehicles—motor or otherwise—to back us in our efforts to get it put in half decent condition.

This column will be published once a week if we can get sufficient matter of interest with which to fill up. Can you help us Mr. Motorist? We want good bright local matter not too broad to shock "Dave" and yet not of the "Victorian period Sunday reading" description. Motor notes of local interest, jests and quips re local drivers and their cars—as long as they are not offensive to the person concerned—are what the doctor orders. We don't want a lot of cuttings from British and foreign motor papers. The Board of Trade is stacked with copies of motoring papers which nobody ever reads anyhow and if we have to get down to robbing from other papers to keep going, "this here column" will go right out of business. Let's have your local matter and lots of it. It doesn't matter how you express what you have to say. We can lick it into shape, alright.

Apparently we are not the only ones who have trouble in trying to fill a Motoring Column. What in the name of goodness has the following taken from the Motoring Column of a recent issue of the "Winning Post," got to do with motoring? Unless, of course, they're also got a "Dave" who wants to be amused at any cost. He: (speaking); "A doctor tells me that a kid was born near Bradford last week with no arms and four legs." Me: "Horrible! Did it live?" He: "Live! Of course it did. It's doing remarkably well." Me: "Disgraceful. What was the doctor thinking about?" He: "Why not? It was a young goat!"

FEILDANS 4: SAINTS 1. The Feildans got the fright of their young lives last evening when in their battle with the Saints they were held scoreless in the first period with the play decidedly in favor of the Saints. Were it not for the clever defence of Tait and Rendell there probably would be a sad tale to relate to-day for the Saints had lots of opportunities. On the turn over however, the Scotchmen were worn down by the superior weight and staying powers of their adversaries, and shortly after play was resumed Goldstone notched number one, followed by Duke Winter's long shot, which was successful. Nothing daunted, the Saints took the ball west on nicely combined passing and Clouston minor had a try but failed. A corner was however awarded, which he placed nicely, and Savoyers did the needful. The fans were now awakened from their lethargy, but they swooned again when Winter and Jerrett registered in clever fashion. Some of the referee's decisions raised a howl, but then it must be remembered that the best referees was also players are always on the grandstand.

Freddie Phelan is out these mornings at daylight conditioning himself for the sprint. Freddie has victor ludorum honors to defend this year and evidently believes in preparedness. Bell is not competing in the Belvidere road race so as to give aspirants to road honors a chance, but he and Jimmy Jacobs have both made up their minds to go after the Guard's trophy. Long distance is evidently becoming more popular than ever judging by the numbers of athletes on the various roads these nights.

REGATTA MEETING TO-NIGHT. To-night there promises to be a showdown between the Regatta Committee and the Avalon and Cadet Boat Clubs. It appears that at the last meeting both clubs were given the assurance by "the powers that be" that no interference would be tolerated in the means proposed to raise money for the equipment of the boats and with this resolve the authorities concurred. They then both floated a ten cent sweep, offering $500 as first prize, and basing their times from 9 mins. 20 secs. up. Just as everything is finalized up bobs the Masonic Club sweep which offers $2,900 worth of prizes but with a much wider time basis. The Boat Clubs maintain that the larger prize prejudices their sweep. Of course the whole dispute boils down to the fact that if the Boat Clubs are not, as reported, private investment clubs they should be given every protection as they are.

ALL-CANADIANS VS. C.I.T. (In aid of War Memorial Fund.) On Saturday afternoon next, the whole holiday, the stay-in-towns will have the pleasure of wending their way to St. George's Field to witness what is expected to be one of the finest games of baseball played here since its inception. The match arranged will be played between a Canadian aggregation and nine of our best local boys the proceeds of which will go towards the War Memorial, and perhaps a better fitting day than this could not be found available in commemoration of the dear boys that have gone west, several of whom played the game before they departed to play the greater one when they nobly sacrificed their dear lives. In view of this it is to be hoped that a record attendance will be present and help this most worthy object. To those who contemplate taking in the game a surprise will surely be in store for one and all when watching three players on the Canadian line-up in action. Messrs. Campbell, O'Byrne and C. Watson who have recently arrived in town have signified their intention of playing. These boys who have been playing the game in Canada for some years and are said to be adepts with the clubs and can peg the old spheroid in lightning fashion, with six others picked from the various clubs will form the Canuck line-up and they will be no doubt a hard combination to beat. On the other hand the local boys are placing their strongest team against them and the match will undoubtedly prove sensational from start to finish. The Canadian boys will wear the Wanderers outfit, while the city team will wear the St. John's uniform. The match is scheduled to start promptly at 2.30. —A.H.T.

The City team to play the Canadians in aid of the War Memorial Fund is being picked this morning by Impire-in-Chief Chesman and his staff. To-night the Stars and Highlanders will play, and an exciting contest should be the result. In the first last evening for the St. Michael's Garden Party the B.I.S. beat the Killifish, the Stars the Fieldians and the C.L.B. the C.E.I. No football has as yet been arranged for Saturday evening, though it is likely that a scrub game of some kind will be played for the after tea stay-in-towns. It is reported this morning that a certain gentleman has offered to defray Bell's expenses to the Gallic meet if the committee which meets Mr. Dobyn to-day decides on Newfoundland representation there.

The Gospel Drum.

The only self-announced prophet of the Most High who has appeared in our city since the unprofitable visit of the late Elijah Dowle has been offering his apologia pro vita sua to "discriminating New Yorkers." There is nothing very novel about his defense of pulp, pyrotechnics. It is pretty much the same as that offered by another and still more successful worker in the vineyard, the Rev. Dr. Billy Sunday. Briefly it is that this generation of vipers needs a sign; and that in beating the drum in front of the tent to draw the crowd the modern preacher is only following the example of apostles and prophets. Preachers have done it in all ages; and the modern clergyman, though unhappily unable to work miracles, has to do what he can to get the crowds away from the movies. Well, there is something in it. Jeremiah's smashing crockery in the Vale of Hinnom, Elijah calling down fire from the skies when the priests of Baal had failed, even Hosea in his unfortunate matrimonial wars, only calling the attention of the public to a religious message. The crowd is attracted by balleyhoo, so the preachers give it. But it must be observed that it is a question not only of getting them to the tent, but of giving them something after they get there. If the method is justified by results, what are the results? The reverend gentleman is too modest to go into this, but the friendly critic may perhaps admit that if he were another Elijah he might be justified in turning she-bears loose on the scaffolds of Broadway, and that if Dr. Sunday were a spiritual leader as great as Isaiah we could forgive him all his acrobatics. However, our prophet has another argument, and this one is unanswerable. Before he came to town his church had a deficit every year; now its budget balances. The auditorium used to be half empty; now every

Women in Politics 2,000 Years Ago

The women's vote, the new element in politics. So proclaim the stars. But 2,000 years ago the woman in politics was an old, old story. It is only one of the old, old stories that have been found by recent excavations at Pompeii. Others, old when the ancient city was young, have not yet received their original every time the metropolis of the new world holds its municipal election, have also been unearthed. Pompeii's anti-vote societies, and her health organizations, are dead; their posters and propaganda live after them. The woman's press agent was not unknown. The manifesto of "Assellina, apparently one of the chiefs of the Pompeian League of Women Voters, still shines red on the walls. "Assellina, with her friend, Zmyrina, recommends the candidature of Caius Lollius Pisco for mayor because he will look after the streets, buildings and amusements for sacred feasts. But even then, woman could change her mind. Beneath the appeal of Assellina, traces of whose electioneering abound on the walls of the dead city, the diggers found: "Zmyrina objects to her name being used, and instead recommends the candidature of Caius Julius Politus." The traces of Pompeian writings hitherto found have been of a political or domestic nature, but now the works of the universal, age-old reformers have been found where they hurled their sanctimonious warnings and exhortations at the wicked.
