Not long since the Toronto Mail waxed very indignant because the Ontario government had permitted the provincial librarian and an editor of the Globe to exlibrarian and an editor of the Globe to exchange places in order to meet the exigencies of the party and of the newspaper. Now, another newspaper and party exigency has arisen, and we find the dominion government filling an Ottawa librarianship with an editor who has outlived his usefulness. Will the Mail calmly witness such an abuse of the appointing power? We are afraid it will. tracted several hundred sporting men to Mike Cleary's sporting resort last night. The pugilists had agreed to box six rounds, Queensberry rules, for a purse of $100. Both are veteran English pugilists, and have fought many a hard battle. At midnight Cleary amid loud cheers entered the ring and stated to his many admirers the conditions of the match. He deposited $100 with Wm. E. Harding, and said, "Give this to the winner." Barnes was the first in the arena. He was attended by Bob Smith, the veteran trainer and second, and Jack Keenan of Philadelphia. Mace's Stiff 'Un arrived a few minutes later, with Al Powers, Jack Dempsey's trainer, and George Taylor, the colored heavy weight champion. Jack Dempsey was referee and Mike Cleary was selected as time-keeper. The fight was quite interesting to those who admire boxing. Barnes was in the best condition, and had the best of the contest, and if the battle had been fought to a finish would have won.

To credit for conscientious devotion to public business the lords are no more entitled than to eredit for high minded and disinterested legislation; the attendance in their house, except when the special interests of the order were concerned has always been disgracefully small. Not by democratic theory or by social prejudice against rank, but by decisive experience, the house of lords stands condemned as useless and worse than useless to the nation and to humanity. Strange to say, in its last mements, some radies have risen up to defend it. But their reason is that the conservative principle could not be embodied in a more unpopular or a weaker form. For the same reason rational conservatives will desire a change, such as may at once substitute living for dead securities, and set free such conservative forces as the house of lords may contain to act effectively in a better sphere. Indications are not wanting that the same thought has begun to dawn upon some of the ablest and most thoughtful among the lords themselves.

who had all agreed to assess themselves liberally to assist in fighting the act. Mr. Dodds was the agent of the association, a committee of three of the leading members being an executive committee over him with wide powers. But besides the protective association the owners of taverns and licensed groceries in each county were formed into county associations, and whenever the temperance party agitated the Scott act in any county the local association got so much from the Dominion protective association or condition of raising a certain sum among its own members. This was the case in Halton.

The Dominion association, that is the wholesale men, have withdrawn from this position and have abandoned the fight. The local men will now have to bear the burden. In Simcoe, for instance, they, have collected among themselves $6000 or over. How they will fare on this line of action remains to be seen. The committee on insurance showed that $66,000 had been paid out for benificiary purposes, and $81,000 for general purposes. The surplus ever all expenses and liabilities is $17,000.

The afternoon session was occupied in considering the constitution and by-laws, but no amendments were made.

The crowning feature of the celebration in honor of the grand lodge took place last night in the shape of a complimentary ball at Horticultural gardens. Upwards of As nearly all the delegates strangers in the city, the brethren and a committee of ronto ladies were unremitting in efforts to make them feel at home. ronto ladies were unremitting in their efforts to make them feel at home. That they were successful goes without saying; the visitors are no longer strangers. They enjoyed themselves immensely and will carry away with them pleasant recollections of the affair. The lieutenant-governor and Mrs. Robinson were present and left a favorable impression upon all with whom they came in contact. Mayor Boswell also made himself highly agree ble. A conspicuous figure on the floor was Col. Maynard of Indianapolis, who with his pen has fought many a hard battle for the brother-hood and is consequently held in high esteem by them. Dancing to the music of the Royal Grenadier's band was generally and heartily indulged in. At midnight supper was served by Harry Webb. Grand Master Arnold took Mrs. Robinson in, and Miss Debs, sister of the grand secretary, went in on his honor's arm. Supper over, the program of dances was resumed, and it was after 3 o'clock when the strains of the national anthem brought the ball to a close.

I am a hardened specimen of the menkind, and have long ago resolved to keep my seat regardless of all comers, but this often ends in my having to support partially on my knees a load of selfishness the whole journey. Pity for dumb animals and regard for men's feelings must be a scarce commodity on some streets.

atches of the Royal Grenadiers were preented to the lucky men last night at the rmory. The corps turned out 300 strong, and preliminary to the presentation were put through the firing exercise. The prizes which were very handsome were placed upon a raised dias on the north side of the shed. The presentations were gracefully made by Mrs. Major Dawson, who had associated with her Mrs. Barlow Cumberland and Mrs. Capt. Harrison. Col. Denison, D.A.G., Col. Grasett, Major Dawson and Capt. Bruce also occupied places on the platform. The ceremony was witnessed by a thronged gallery of ladies and gentlemen.

For some years now a man in this town has denounced every alderman and terrorised every city official and every contractor and every man who did business with the corporation. He has been able to do this because he owned a newspaper. His name, as anyone will have guessed, is John Ross Robertson.

His latest piece of jobbing is in connection with the advertisement of the sale of properties in the city for non-payment of taxes. This advertisement is worth this year to the paper publishing it between seven and eight hundred dollars; in 1882 it was worth four hundred; in 1889 about the same sum. For the past three sales this advertisement has been given to the Telegram, though there is a Is this true patriotism, or is it not rather well-understood rule, affirmed over and over again by the vote of the council, that all advertising of the city or within the patronage of the city shall be distributed, equally and in turn among the various city dailies. The city clerk faithfully follows this rule. But the statute leaves to the city treasurer the giving of this particular advertisement, and he has seen fit to give to will doubtless continue to de so until doomsday if no one protests. And how gan"—or newspaper which is supposed to does Robertson get it? By nesing round speak for him. No other newspaper proprietor, or even newspaper canvasser has ever done this but Mr. Robertson: they have left it to the city officials to deal fairly by them, and Mr. Harman doubtless would have deme fairly in this case if the jobber had not been about. Any one of the four other papers was entitled to the advertisement before the Telegram. For years the Telegram has been exposing what it called jobbery at the city hall; the case in point is worthy of that paper's attention.

Whoever says The World's head is sore says what's right; and if he says that The World is not going to let it rest here he will not be wrong in the prediction. For we have two things to perform: first, that said the concerns the papers attention of Sept. 14:

at Manitowaning on my homeward On my way up I had met W. and he extracted from me a half promise that I should stay off for a few days when I returned, and take a chance of glimpsing at the island of Manitoulin. Before I came sack, however, I had decided that I could not afford the time. Besides I had got to be a friendly with the officers of the Magnet of the Owen Sound steamship company's line, and had made so many pleasing acquaintances among the passengers, that I regretted to cut short the connection by even the space of a day. But in all these thinkings I omitted one consideration—the relentlessness of a man who has something to exhibit. The editor of the Expositor felt it to be his duty to show me the island of Grand Manitoulin and the island of Grand Manitoulin me and any little celebrations of mine thereon had accepting to do with the matter. A rousing dinner at Riddell's hotel put a climax to the tour.

On Saturday I took the Africa for Owen Sound and although I missed my good friends Purser Mann, Captain McNabb and other officers and newly formed friends of the Magnet I yet enjoyed a quick passes to my destination and immediate connection with the train for Toronto.

What a Convict Has Done. From the Churchman.

It is not, perhaps, creditable to the phristianity of New Yorkers that the one refuge of discharged convicts in this (New York) city was started by a man who had spent thirty-five years in prisons in all parts of the world. What ought to have been done over and over again, perhaps, by christian people was done by a supposed outcast. It is as if the compassionate spirit or Christ toward the criminal classes has not been learned out of prison, but in it.

destined to gain any footing in Paris seems less than doubtful. Since the death of the enthusiastic M. Leboys "des Guays, who, for 25 years, was the director of the Swedenborgians in France, and who translated into French all the Swedenborgians literature, but little has been heard of the sect here. There has, however, always been a little band of adherents who have hitherto met for worship in a room of the Rue de la Faisanderie. Touching the new church in Paris the London Times says: The Debats, which does not expect it to attract many adherents, reviews previous attemps to propagate Swedenborgianism in France. About 1823 a Capt. Bernard converted all the officers of his regiment, and in the same year the chief vicar of Notre Dame, M. Agger, an avowed Swedenborgian, ended his days in a lunatic asylum. M. Leboys des Guays, judge and sub-perfect at St. Amand, established religious services there in 1837, co-operated with fellow-believers in Paris, made a convert of Emmannel de Las Cases, son of Napoleon's companion at St. Helena, and failed to convert George Sand, but made some impression on Abd-el-Kader. "Oh! I shall soon be back," was the reply. "Besides my wife isn't gor a gawy; moreover our trunk is there."

A council of war was he'd; the trunk was examined; a gent leman in the house taking it up with two fingers remarked that it was very light. The boarding-house proprietor also thefed it, and from all side a came the Gilbert and Sulling house, "It seems very light."

Meanwhile the carter had driven away with the heavy "sample case."

"Open this trunk," demanded the justly irate landle dy. "If it contains sufficient goods to ratisfy me that you are not trying to sw indle me, all will be well."

The idea! Open the trunk, indeed! The notion was souted by Mrs. F. The valise, how ver, was captured; the front door locked and the pair made prisoners. Another council of war and Mr. Charles I letcher finally concluded to accompany the landlord in search of sufficient pelt to satisfy the demands of his landlady. The door was opened and the two proceeded on their search which was finally concluded by part of the money being raised on the sale of a pawn-ticket. Mr. Fletcher returned for his valise and was told he should have it if he would open the mysterious trynk. Finally he did so. Void,

"What do I think about elopements?" said Mr. Beecher in answer to a reporter's query. "Do you mean, what do I think about the Morosiai elopement? Well, that depends. If the result is favorable, and both are happy, I think it is all right, though I do not by any means advocate secret marriages. I have known many a fellow to be a party to such an act, whom I could not blame—yes, I know Mrs. Beecher is in the room; but, nevertheless, I say that if I had been in his place I should most likely have done the same thing. I do not think it fair to assume that short courtships and hasty marriages are the main causes of the prevalence of divorce in America. If a young couple are left to settle their love affairs between them selves the result is usually as good as when the old people take property into acyount and make a marriage of convenience. The freedom that is given to an American girl in matters of this kind has the best possible influence. The main cause of freeign literature, particularly French novels. When either has essentially violated the spirit or agreement of his, it is unjust that the other should always be held to it. Non-support, cruelty, adultery and habitual drunkenness are all sufficient grounds for a divorce. Christ's teachings on this subject were to orientals, who paid no regards to the rights of women.
