

The Weekly Monitor

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1881.

The prospect for an Amber Cane crop this season is good, so far, although there will not be so many acres of it raised as was hoped for. Had all the re-plantations been good, there would now be from sixty to seventy-five acres growing. About two bushels of seed imported by one firm in the County, proved worthless. All the rest, enough probably, twenty or twenty-five acres came up finely and is doing well. This will be enough to insure Messrs. Miller & Root, who are erecting the mill, from loss. There will likely be over two hundred tons of cane to go through the mill. Next year, we understand, measures will be taken to secure the freshest and best seed that can be obtained. The mill will be of the most approved kind, and the building for it is to be about thirty feet, two stories high. The proprietors are quite sanguine as to the success of the venture. The result of the experiments last season proved that there can be no trouble in raising the cane. It grows as rapidly as understood the early frost better than Indian corn. Some persons pretend to know that Early Amber Cane will not grow in this valley, and in spite of the fact that it has been successfully grown here one season, they endeavor to make other people believe that it is useless to raise it. There are croakers to be found in every community wherever any enterprise is started; but the man who has taken this matter in hand is not such as can easily be frightened. They are bound to put it through. Success to them!

The importance and necessity of thorough disinfection of clothes, rooms etc., in the case of infectious diseases, though becoming far more generally recognized than formerly, is still not always paid as much attention to as is really necessary; we therefore give up a column of our inside space to the valuable instructions contained in the following article, treating on the subject, as well as giving general sanitary directions, issued by the State Board of Health of New York.

Sanitary Precautions to prevent the Spreading of Infectious Diseases.

Cleanliness and ventilation are in all cases and everywhere of the first importance. These diseases which appear chiefly from place to place and from person to person by means of their own infection and contagion, are to be regarded and treated as enemies, to be resisted and stamped out. The propagation of some of them is not only a help of local causes, seen or unseen, and the fatality as well as spread of such one of them as cholera, typhoid fever, smallpox and local unwholesome influences. Typhoid fever, scarlet fever, typhus, cholera, and cholera, are spread chiefly from place to place and from person to person by means of their own infection and contagion, are to be regarded and treated as enemies, to be resisted and stamped out. The propagation of some of them is not only a help of local causes, seen or unseen, and the fatality as well as spread of such one of them as cholera, typhoid fever, smallpox and local unwholesome influences.

Smallpox, Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria and Measles.

The patient should be kept in a separate room (preferable to an upper story from which, if possible, carpets, curtains, stuffed furniture, clothing and other articles are required for immediate use, should be removed before-hand; and no person, except the physician, nurse or parent, should be allowed to enter the sick room, or to touch any of the articles used therein, until after thorough disinfection. To disinfect clothing etc., in the Sick Room.—Keep in the room a tub containing a quart of a pound of saltpetre and two ounces of common salt to each gallon of water. A lead linen, towels, clothing, handkerchiefs, etc., used about the patient, should be allowed to soak in this solution for at least an hour before removal from the room, and afterward be thoroughly boiled, and the contents of the tub should be poured out and the tub washed. Never send such articles to the public laundry.

To Disinfect Discharges from the Patient.

Use the same disinfecting fluid as in disinfecting clothing but three times stronger, or use copperas water, made by dissolving a pound and a half of copperas in a gallon of water. The latter answer for all excremental discharges, while the former is best for all articles of clothing and furniture. All vessels used in the sick room should be disinfected with one or other of these disinfecting fluids, unless immediately immersed in boiling water. Disinfect the discharges and clothing immediately.

To Prevent the Body of the Patient from Spreading Contagion.

In the eruptive diseases, especially in scarlet fever, the patient's body should be anointed at least once a day with oil, lard or vaseline, containing about two grains of carbolic acid or salicylic acid to the ounce. This process should be maintained until all scab-like scuffing of the skin is at an end. The scab-like scuffing should be used, as directed, before again associating with unprotected persons. The patient should have several complete ablutions, in clothing through washing of the hair with soap or borax, and none of the clothing worn for several days before the disease declared itself should again be used until thoroughly disinfected and ventilated in the open air several days.

Typhus Fever.

Free ventilation, and disinfection of clothing, as above described, and the fumigation of the sick room are required. Typhoid Fever.—The patient lies in the bed, and should be anointed with the oil of discharges from the bowels, which should be at once disinfected with the solution of copperas and carbolic acid. Particular care should be exercised to prevent any possible contamination of sources of drinking water with these discharges. Bed clothing and other articles soiled, by the excretion should be treated with the zinc solution and be boiled.

Dysentery and Cholera.

Adopt the same regulations as in typhoid fever. Disinfection of Houses and Apartments.—Fumigation with sulphur is the only practicable method for disinfecting the house, as well as furniture, bedding, etc., that cannot be steamed or boiled. For this purpose the rooms to be disinfected must be vacated. Close the windows as tightly as possible, place the sulphur in iron pans supported upon bricks in wash tubs containing a little water, set it on fire by hot tongs, or with the aid of a spoonful of alcohol, and keep the room tightly closed twenty-four hours. For a room of moderate dimensions equal to ten feet square, or 100 square feet of floor space, at least two pounds of sulphur should be used; for large rooms, proportionally increased quantities. After fumigation, the freest possible ventilation should be practiced. All woolen clothing, silks, furs, stoves, bed covers, beds, and other articles which cannot be treated with a zinc solution, should be hung in the room during fumigation, their surface thoroughly exposed, and their contents turned inside out. Afterward they should be hung in the open air, beaten and shaken.

Supreme Court.

The Ray vs. Corbett still on. Our report of last week continued on Tuesday's proceedings. On the following day the first witness called was Mr. Alex. Shearer, agent of the Union Bank of Annapolis, called by defendant to prove negotiations for the loan, to pay Railway damages, and the disbursement of it by checks drawn by plaintiff. His testimony occupied nearly the whole day. Mr. Arthur Johnston, next called by the defendant, to prove deposits and withdrawals from the Savings Bank at Annapolis, and produced the books of the office.

Prof. Robertson Smith.

Prof. Robertson Smith, whose recent work on the Old Testament has excited so much ire on the part of the orthodox Scotch Presbyterian body, has accepted an offer from the Messrs. Black, publishers, Edinburgh, to join the staff of the "Encyclopaedia Britannica." It is understood that the engagement will not interfere with Prof. Smith giving continued attention to his special line of biblical and philological studies.

Collision in the Bay, Heavy Storm.

The schooner Anna, of Margarettville, and Harriet, of Annapolis, collided in the bay on Monday, 28th inst., bound down the bay for loads. The fog being very thick, and the wind light, the vessels drifted together for a few hours, when the two vessels collided, the Anna losing her port, and the Harriet her starboard. The Anna was damaged, but the Harriet was not. The Anna was towed to the wharf, but was not repaired. On Tuesday a terrific storm of rain, accompanied with thunder and lightning, broke over the bay. A large two-masted schooner, owned by Capt. Perry, broke from her moorings, has not since been heard of.

Beautiful comet, now visible in the northern sky.

A beautiful comet, now visible in the northern sky every clear evening, is the subject of an article in the "Morning Chronicle" which gives the names of the discoverers. Opinions are divided, and they have not yet agreed as to what particular comet it is. The "Morning Chronicle" people have settled to their satisfaction, at all events that it is a comet, and that it is toward for being the first discoverer.

Harper's Magazine for July.

Harper's Magazine for July is an unusually interesting number. Mrs. Chapman contributes a charming description of Opoto and Opoto vineyards, with beautiful illustrations. Mrs. Annie Howell's Prehensile describes the life of Lord Lorne and the Princess Louise at Rideau Hall—giving a legitimate interest. The article is illustrated with excellent portraits of the Marquis and his royal consort, and with interior views of Rideau Hall never before published. T. B. Aldrich contributes a delightful article—or rather the first part of an article—entitled "A Day in Africa," a description of one day's adventures in Tangier, with fine illustrations from drawings by H. R. and S. G. Jones, Samuel Adams Drake's "White Mountain" series, illustrated by W. H. Gibson, is continued. There are many other delightful sketches, but space will not allow us to give their names.
