Rough Water on the Restigouche.

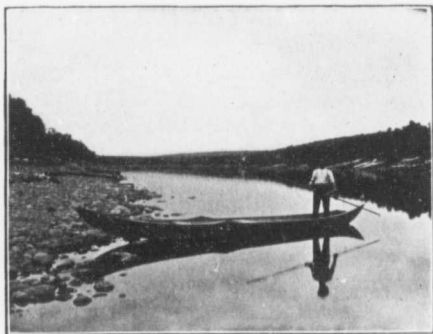

The Pool at Mill Lake, Charlotte County.

New Brunswick with its thousands of square miles of forest wilderness, intersected with magnificent rivers and streams, and dotted thick with lakes, big and little, is the sporting paradise of the North American continent. Nowhere else, except in the almost inaccessible Yukon and Labrador, is there such fishing and hunting. New Brunswick rivers and lakes teem with salmon and trout; through its forests roam the lordly moose, caribou and deer, and on its marshes are to be shot wild geese, duck, snipe and plover. There is also the plump partridge and the luscious woodcock for the hunter after feathered game. A week, a month, or a whole season can be spent in the heart of New Brunswick traversing country visited only by the woodsman and the occasional hunter. The fisherman can, if he wishes, catch trout in sections where never before was cast an artificial fly, and he can hook the king of fish in the finest salmon waters of the world. For canoeing and camping, the province offers exceptional opportunities. In the following pages brief outlines are given of a few of the more interesting canoe trips, but no attempt has been made to describe the scenic beauties of the country traversed, or to tell of the quick waters, the falls and rapids that will be encountered on nearly every one of the outings outlined. These are the pleasures of the trips that the canoeist will enjoy best by finding out for himself. For the most of these trips guides would be necessary, and it is advised that they be taken. They provide canoes, tents and all necessary outfit except fishing tackle. Parties planning one or other of the trips outlined, or any other that their fancy and a study of the map may suggest, are advised to write to the Tourist Association, St. John, and they will be put in touch with good guides and given all requisite information. The visitor who wants fishing pure and simple, without any reference to canoeing or camping, has only to make his wants known, as there are unlimited opportunities for this sport in almost every section of the province.

Saint John River.

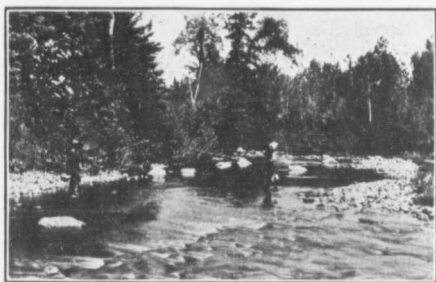

An ideal canoe trip is that from Grand Falls to Fredericton by the St. John River. This is a run of 140 miles, all down stream. If a longer journey is wanted it can be had by going still further up the river, say to Clare's or Connor's, which would give an additional 70 miles, or to Cabano or Notre Dame du Lake on Lake Temiscouata in Quebec whence a run can be had by the Madawaska River to the St. John River at Edmundston, 40 miles above Grand Falls, then by the St. John to Fredericton, with opportunities for side trips in the various tributaries. One of the most enjoyable of these would be to put the canoes on the train at Perth, about 20 miles below the Falls, and go to Plaster Rock, on the Tobique River. It is an exciting run of thirty miles down this river to the St. John, where the main journey can be continued. The Grand Falls are the largest and finest in America, excepting only Niagara, while the gorge below the falls is wilder and more remarkable in many ways than that at Niagara.

On the Upper St. John.

Between Grand Falls and Fredericton there are many rapids, which give pleasure to the trip, but none are of a character to cause anxiety to the experienced canoeist. The scenery along the whole route is beautiful and the trip is a most delightful one. It is an outing that can be enjoyed by those who like canoeing but do not want to rough it in the woods. The journey can be so arranged that comfortable hotels will be reached for each meal and for the nights. If desired, tents can be carried and pitched anywhere along the river bank, while the farmers will be found ready to supply all necessary stores. A week or ten days, or as much longer as the canoeist wishes can be spent on this trip, and if salmon tackle is taken it is a pretty safe prediction that the king of fish will be caught in some of the many pools along the route. There is no trout fishing on this trip except on the Madawaska River, but the outing is one that will prove most enjoyable to those who find pleasure in the song their paddle sings. Grand Falls, the starting point of this journey, can be reached in a few hours from St. John or Fredericton by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Below Fredericton the river broadens out considerable, but canoeing can be continued all the way to St. John, or side trips can be taken into the many tributaries. The Oro-mocto, eleven miles below Fredericton, which may be ascended for a long distance, is a particularly beautiful river. Then there is Grand Lake, a magnificent sheet of water thirty miles long; Washademoak Lake, another beautiful arm of the St. John; the Belleisle, the Nerepis, a lovely stream for canoeing, and the Kennebecasis. Large steamers ply on all these, except the Nerepis. The Kennebecasis may be ascended for a long distance above Hampton, the head of navigation, in a canoe. It is a particularly beautiful stream. The canoeist on the St. John, or in fact anywhere in Trout Pool on the Miramichi.

New Brunswick, will find that no objection is made to pitching a tent and putting up for a day or night or as long as the tourist desires.

The Miramichi Country.

A portage of fifteen miles from Kent station on the C. P. R. will take the canoeist to a point on the Southwest Miramichi, whence he can start on one of the most delightful trips in the whole province. Following down the stream, through a forest wilderness, the journey may be ended at Boiestown or Chatham, points on the Intercolonial Railway, or continued to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where this noble river, the second in size in the province, empties into the sea. There is excellent trout and salmon fishing. The Miramichi drains a magnificent country, and has many beautiful tributaries, so that those seeking an extended outing can spend weeks in the very heart of New Brunswick, enjoying the grandest scenery and the most bracing climate on the continent, and revelling in an angler's paradise. A glance at the map will show the extent of country drained by the Miramichi. It affords opportunities for unlimited canoeing and camping.

Perhaps a better way to go into the Miramichi country is from Chatham or Newcastle, on the Intercolonial Railway. From there a start can be made up stream and a selection taken of the North or South branch, or whichever of the tributaries is preferred. The best salmon rivers are the Northwest, Little Southwest, Sevogle, Miramichi, Renous, Dungarvon and Southwest Miramichi. There are also trout in all of these, and in the other branches of this wonderful water system. There are lakes innumerable in connection with all these streams and everyone abounds with trout. Along the Miramichi and its branches much of the salmon fishing is controlled and there is also control in some places of the trout fishing, but nearly all the owners or lessees sell the right to fish for a nominal fee, usually $1.50 per day per rod. There is not in all America a better canoeing and fishing country than the Miramichi and its tributaries.

Some good canoe and fishing trips would be from the Northwest Miramichi portage to the head of Forty-two or Fifty-two Mile Brook, branches of the Nepisiguit, thence on to the Tobique and down to the St. John. The same to the Restigouche by way of the Upsalquitch. Or from the Northwest Miramichi to the South Branch of the Nepisiguit. From the Northwest Miramichi to Mamozekel waters, and from there to the Tobique. This is a long trip, giving fine chances for a splendid outing combined with the best of sport.

From the Little Southwest to the Serpentine waters, and thence to the Tobique and the St. John.

From the Renous, a branch of the Southwest Miramichi, to the Tobique. There are numerous other ways. In fact, by following nearly any of the Northwest branches of the Miramichi and its tributaries, one can reach the Tobique waters.

From the Southwest Miramichi at Blackville, one may canoe down the Cain's River and portage into Gaspereaux Brook, or by way of Sabbies and Big Forks Brooks. Either will catch the Canaan River waters. From the Canaan River it is easy and delightful paddling to Washademoak Lake and from thence to the St. John River.

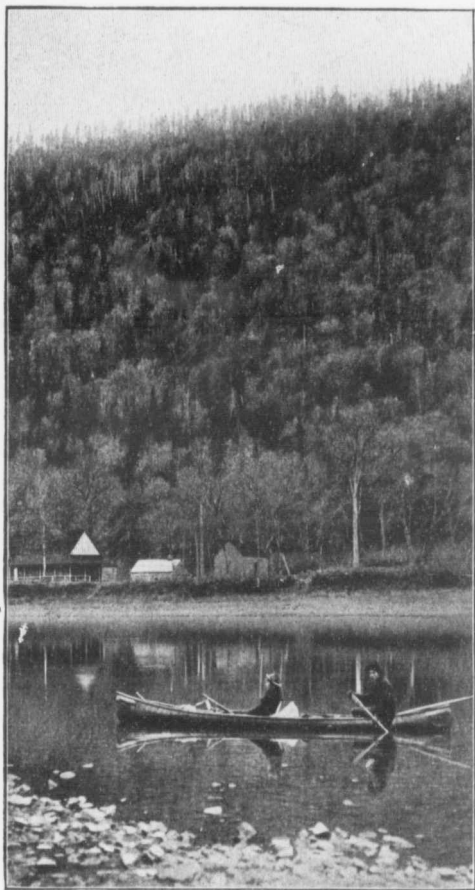

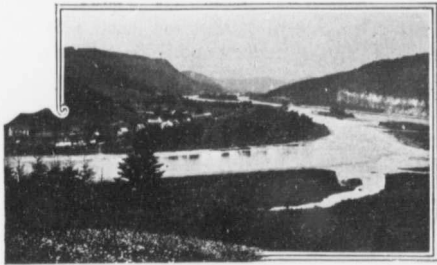

Breakfast.

The Restigouche.

A long trip, taking the canoeist far away from the haunts of man and into the depths of the forest wilds, is that down the Restigouche River. St. Leonard's, a station on the Canadian Pacific Railway above Grand Falls, is the starting point of this trip, on which from a week to ten days can be most profitably spent. The Restigouche is without doubt the finest salmon river in North America, but salmon fishing on it is controlled by the Restigouche Salmon Club. The trout fishing, however is free, and the canoeist will find it afford him all the pleasure he wants, for the fish are plentiful and ready to be caught. At St. Leonard's teams are taken for a twenty-five mile drive to the headwaters of the Restigouche. The canoe trip itself is not difficult if the water is high enough. It is very shallow for a long distance, with a good swift current all the way. Lower down are a succession of rapids and deep pools. These rapids are not very bad at first, and the canoeist gets used to "shooting" them before they become more dangerous. To any one who knows how to handle a canoe there should be no trouble in making this trip, even without a guide, although a guide is advised. The scenery is grand and wild, not a house or farm is seen for thirty miles or more. The different tributaries of the river, coming in at intervals of twenty miles or so, are good guides to one's location. The meeting of the waters, where the Restigouche and Matapedia join, is one of the most beautiful sights in the province. The return journey will be made by the Intercolonial Railway to St. John. The canoeist who does not want to take the twenty-five mile drive from St. Leonard's to the head of the Restigouche, can go up the Green River or the Grand River, tributaries of the St. John, and portage across to the Restigouche. This is a somewhat harder trip, but one that will be enjoyed by those who like to rough it. Trout fishing can be had in both Green River and Grand River.

Canoeing on the Restigouche.

Meeting of the Waters on the Restigouche.

This trip will be found just as delightful if the start is made from Campbellton, on the Intercolonial Railway. The route would then be up the main Restigouche, passing all tributaries until the mouth of the Waagan is reached. Follow the Waagan as far as there is good paddling or poling, and then portage to the Waagansis, following this stream to where it joins with the Grand, down the Grand to the main St. John.

Another fine trip is up the Restigouche to the mouth of the Upsalquitch. Follow the latter stream to the Upsalquitch Lake. Portage from the Lake to Portage Brook, a branch of the Nepisiguit. Follow the branch to the Nepisiguit and up the latter to the lakes at the headwaters, across from Bathurst to Nictau Lake, from thence to the Little Tobique, the main Tobique, to the St. John River.

The Restigouche, like the Miramichi, has numerous branches, all famous as trout and salmon streams. Chief among these are the Matapedia, the Upsalquitch and the Pata-pedia. The visitor who desires to reach the fishing grounds of the Restigouche or its tributaries quickly and is not intent on the long canoe journey, can go direct to Campbellton, on the Intercolonial Railway. There he is within easy reach of the fishing and can secure canoes, guides and all necessary outfit, and can go into his canoe sure of a successful trip.

Salmon Fishing on the Nepisiguit.

Nepisiguit River.

A fine canoe trip through a forest country, and one that will give the canoeist all the pleasure he can crave, with plenty of excitement running rapids and plenty of sport catching fish, is that down the Nepisiguit River. This is a famous salmon river, and equally famous for trout, which are caught along its entire length and in great numbers and of fine size in the Bathurst lakes, which it drains. The canoeist wanting to take the whole trip, and it is a good two weeks' journey, would go to the headwaters of the Tobique, portage across to the Nepisiguit, about three miles, then start on the long trip down stream to the sea at Bathurst. There are places where the trout will be caught as fast as the angler can cast his line, and where no skill or science is required to secure remarkable catches. The journey like that down the Miramichi and the Restigouche, or around the Squatook Lakes, is one that will furnish new pleasure in every mile travelled and that will introduce to the canoeist a beautiful country. The order of this trip may be reversed with equally satisfactory results. The excursionist would then take canoes at Bathurst, at the Grand Falls of the Nepisiguit, or at the mouth of the Forty-two Mile Brook. There is a good road to the latter. Thence up the Nepisiguit to the lakes, and down the Tobique. The scenery along this route is magnificent and there are fine chances for good sport.

To go up the Nepisiguit and down the Restigouche—by way of the Upsalquitch Lake—the canoeist would follow the Nepisiguit to the mouth of Portage Brook, portage from the head of the brook to the lake, and follow the Upsalquitch to the main Restigouche River, and thence to Campbellton.

With Bathurst as a headquarters, the fishing grounds of the Nepisiguit may be easily and quickly reached, and excellent sport obtained. Bathurst is the centre of a splendid fishing country. It is a station on the Intercolonial, and is within easy reach of many of the finest fishing streams and lakes on the North Shore section of the province, where fish abound. The canoe is everywhere used, and the canoeist will find ample opportunity to indulge his pleasures, whether long or short excursions are looked for.

A Rest for Lunch.

A Little Something to Drink.

Tobique River.

Tourists have described the Tobique as the most picturesque river in America. It is also one of the finest salmon rivers, but unfortunately for the would-be fisherman the rights are controlled by the Tobique Salmon Club. It is, however, permitted to fish trout, and for these the Tobique is as justly famous as for its salmon. The Tobique is a branch of the St. John, and the starting point for a trip up it is Perth or Andover, twin towns, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, and only two miles from the river's mouth. The river can be ascended about sixty miles to the Forks, and then the canoeist has choice of three rivers, the Nictau, or left hand branch, which is the best for trout, and leads to the Tobique Lakes where large fish can be taken; the Mamozekel, or centre stream, not a very good fishing stream, and the right hand branch, or Campbell River, famous for its salmon. The Tobique has numerous lakes and streams tributary to it, and in all excellent fishing will be found. In fact the Tobique is the heart of a fishing country that is unexcelled anywhere. The trip down stream with the current will be particularly enjoyed. A delightful trip is to go up the Tobique and down the Nepisiguit or up the Nepisiguit and down the Tobique.

The North Shore.

The opportunities for trout fishing in the rivers and streams of Northern New Brunswick are simply unrivalled. The trout in the rivers and in their tributaries attain a prodigious size, and display an amount of fighting energy when hooked altogether in keeping with their proportions. Trout fishing on all of the rivers is practically free, and the visiting angler will have no trouble in satiating his appetite for this branch of sport. The Nepisiguit is one of the very finest trout streams in the province, the fish averaging three pounds in weight, and so numerous that a good angler can obtain all he wants in a few hours.

Along the line of the Intercolonial Railway, between Campbellton and Newcastle, there are numerous small streams intersecting the line of the railway, and emptying into the Baie des Chaleur, which can be easily reached from any of the points above mentioned. The best of these are the Jacquet River, the Tatagouche and the Charlo. At the upper waters of most of these streams there are chains of lakes that fairly teem with lusty trout. The splendid opportunities for canoeing make these streams doubly attractive to sportsmen.

All along the line of the Caraquet Railway, which from Bathurst follows the coast of the Baie des Chaleur for seventy miles, there are fine trout rivers, the most important being the Pokemouche, Tracadie and Tabusintac, the latter two especially being classed among the best trout streams in the province. Mr. D. G. Smith, fishery commissioner for New Brunswick, who resides at Chatham, can give the canoeist and sportsman full particulars about this section of the province. All of the streams are available for canoeing and long or short trips can be arranged that will be forever remembered as the most enjoyable outings of a life time.

Camping on Lake Utopia.

Magaguadavic River.

To run this beautiful river, canoes would be put into the water at a point eight miles east of McAdam Junction, the terminal point of the Maine Central and Canadian Pacific Railways. The distance to Bonny River, on the New Brunswick Southern, where the train could be taken again for the homeward journey, is about forty miles. The trip is a most enjoyable one, and there is good trout fishing all the way, to say nothing of magnificent scenery. It is a delightful outing for one looking for a short trip with plenty of sport and pleasure. A beautiful side trip in connection with this journey can be made by running through the canal, a natural waterway, into Lake Utopia, probably the most beautiful lake in New Brunswick. Very large trout are caught by trolling in this lake and it is a most desirable camping resort.

Instead of going down the river, the canoeist can, if he is so inclined, go north from the railway into the Magaguadavic Lake, a magnificent sheet of water, fully nine miles long, and offering excellent opportunities for camping. It is a good fishing lake, and a delightful camping ground and short excursions can be made therefrom to excellent fishing streams and lakes.

Saint Croix River.

The St. Croix is at some points the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick. Canoes can be taken at Vanceboro, on the Maine Central Railroad, and there is a fifty mile trip down the river to Sprague's Falls, where American capitalists are now building a mammoth pulp mill. Here the railway can be secured for the home journey. This, like the Magaguadavic, is a delightful trip through a beautiful country and one that the tourist who does not want to spend long on his outing will thoroughly enjoy. As a wind-up to the journey he can go to St. Stephen or Calais and catch a salmon in the famous pool of the St. Croix at that place.

Musquash River.

From Clarendon station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, a drive of half a dozen miles will put the canoeist on the Inglewood Lakes, whence he can enjoy a very delightful trip through a chain of lakes to the Musquash River and by it to Musquash station, on the

A Little Repair Work.

New Brunswick Southern Railway. There is good fishing and some excellent canoeing to be enjoyed on this trip which is within easy reach of St. John, and can be made in a few days.

Cain's River.

One of the most popular sea trout resorts in New Brunswick is Cain's River. This swift running stream has its source in the northern part of York county, and flows through a picturesque and densely wooded district for a distance of sixty miles, when it enters the Southwest Miramichi at Blackville station, on the Fredericton branch of the I. C. R. There are three ways of reaching Cain's River from Fredericton, viz., by Taymouth, Boiestown and Doaktown, all on the I. C. R. During the early part of the season the canoeist may find plenty of water by taking the Taymouth route and hauling to the head of the stream, a distance of fourteen miles; but later, the Boiestown and Doaktown routes will be found better.

Trout weighing as high as five pounds have frequently been taken in these waters, and the angler need entertain no fears of having "fisherman's luck." The trip may be made in two or three days, but a week or ten days would not be too long to spend over it. The canoeist who wishes can continue on down the Miramichi to Newcastle or Chatham.

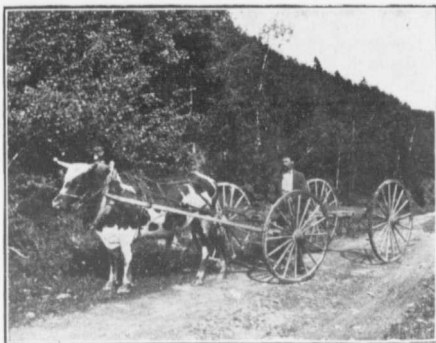

Bonny River.

The tourist looking for fishing and canoeing within easy reach of the habitations of man is advised to go to Bonny River, in Charlotte county, from whence he can reach Digdequash or McDougall Lakes, or some of the other great fishing resorts in that neighborhood. Bonny River is a station on the New Brunswick Southern Railway, connecting at St. John with the Canadian Pacific and Intercolonial, and at St. Stephen with the Washington Counties Railway. Thos. Sullivan, the hotel keeper at Bonny River, is himself a fisherman of wide experience and controls many of the finest privileges in his neighborhood, reserving them for his patrons. He has camps and canoes on all the resorts, and the tourist can live in the woods or return each evening to the comforts of the hotel. Perhaps more trout are caught annually in this section of New Brunswick than in any other part of the province, excepting the North Shore. There are innumerable lakes, and all contain trout.

Ready for the Portage.

The Squatook Lakes.

A canoe trip that is perhaps the superior of any on the continent is that around the Squatook Lakes. The starting point is Griffin's, a small station on the C. P. R., above Edmundston. Here oxen can be secured for a portage of four miles to Mud Lake, thence through Bardsley's Brook, the four Squatook Lakes and the Tuladi River and Lakes. The voyage is continued all down stream to Lake Temiscouata and through it by the Madawaska River to Edmundston. This is a voyage into the heart of the forest, far from the habitations of man. It is a journey taken by very few, but requires only ten days. There is abundance of fishing and the tourist is sure to see large game, such as bears, deer, caribou and moose, and may be fortunate enough to find the beaver at work. Besides trout, the fisherman would catch on this trip Tuladi, a splendid fish weighing as high as twenty pounds.

Green River.

Excellent canoeing and fishing can be had in a trip up the Green River. Edmundston, on the Canadian Pacific, is the starting point, and a drive of about three miles reaches Albert's, where canoes are taken. The river can be ascended for about 75 miles, with good fishing all the way. About twenty miles up stream the river forks, the left hand branch leading to a fine chain of lakes, where large trout can be taken. The tourist can return down the river or make a longer trip by portaging over and going down the Restigouche.

Fish River.

This trip is in Maine, but Edmundston, on the C. P. R., is the starting point, and the circuit brings the canoeist back to Edmundston. A drive of ten miles reaches the point of departure; then there is a run of forty miles all down stream, through the Fish River Lakes to Fort Kent and twenty miles more down the St. John river to the starting point. There is good fishing in the Fish River Lakes, while the scenery is grand, and much quick water is encountered, making the trip an enjoyable one.

A Morning's Catch.

Salmon River.

Chipman, on the line of the Central Railway, or reached by steamer from St. John, would be the starting point for a canoe trip of fifty or sixty miles up the Salmon River, with good trout fishing on the upper reaches and with opportunities of side trips to many good fishing lakes and streams. It might also be possible to catch salmon, as they are numerous in this river, but so far as known anglers have never tried to catch them with a fly.

Canaan River.

With Canaan station, on the Intercolonial Railway, as a starting point, a very enjoyable canoe trip can be had down stream to the Washademoak Lake, and thence by the River St. John to the City of St. John. On the upper waters of the Canaan River good trout fishing will be had, while the whole country traversed is beautiful.

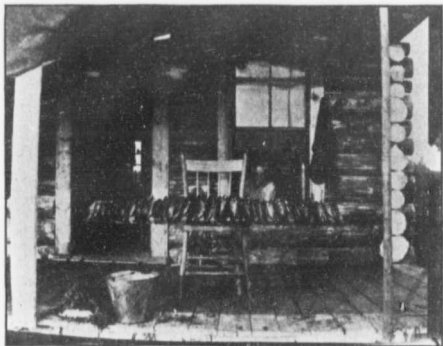

Portage on the Green River.

Log Camp in New Brunswick.

Camping in New Brunswick.

Canoeing and fishing and hunting and shooting are not so much sought after by some as are the opportunities for a rest on the shores of some quiet lake, river or stream. For this New Brunswick offers advantages that are unsurpassed. There can be found in every section of the province, deep in forest wilds or near the towns, on rivers, lakes and streams, comfortable and well furnished log cabins. These are owned and controlled by the guides, and can be rented for ridiculously small sums for long or short periods, and offer an ideal way for tourists—male or female—to spend the vacation period. Near all these camps is to be had excellent boating, bathing, canoing and fishing. It is not possible in this little booklet to give any list of the camps, or to tell of the special beauties and advantages of each, but it can with absolute confidence be asserted that an outing in any part of New Brunswick will be thoroughly enjoyed and forever remembered and talked about. There is no such delightful way of spending a vacation as in the open air. New Brunswick has a perfect summer climate, scenery that is unsurpassed and camping grounds to accommodate all who want to go camping. Men, women and children enjoy this form of outing and to the women it can be said they will find the camp fitted, perhaps not with every convenience of the city house, but with every requisite necessary to make the outing comfortable, and the guides, if their attendance is wanted, will be found capable, attentive and reliable. Perhaps the visitor would prefer a camp near the sea shore. If so that want can be gratified. Or it may be that the preference is board in a good hotel or country house. Whatever your choice, write the New Brunswick Tourist Association, St. John, for more information.

Yachting and Automobiling.

The Power Boat owner, the Yachtsman and the Automobilst will enjoy visits to New Brunswick in the summer season. The coast trips are most interesting and of a most varied nature, while many of the rivers can be ascended for long distances, taking the excursionist into the heart of the province. The St. John River and the Miramichi will be found particularly interesting by the yachtsmen, whether of white wings or power. The roads everywhere are good, and year by year more automobiles are finding their way into the province. At St. John, Fredericton, Moncton, Chatham and other towns it is possible to secure gasoline, and if necessary to engage the services of competent machinists if repair work has to be done. In St. John there is a good garage.

Big Game Hunting.

While this little booklet is designed to draw attention to the opportunities for canoeing, camping and fishing in New Brunswick, it would not be right to omit brief reference to the big game hunting that in the season brings to the province Nimrods from all parts of the world. Moose, Caribou and Deer are more plentiful in the New Brunswick forests than elsewhere on the continent. Many Maine sportsmen pay New Brunswick the compliment of crossing the border on their shooting trips, knowing they are surer of success than in the Maine forests. Wise protection laws enacted by the Provincial Government, and the fact that the heart of the province is still a forest primeval, continue to give the wild game a fair chance, so the man or woman who visits New Brunswick in the short shooting season can rely on getting a big head. The Tourist Association, St. John, can give all information about guides, etc.

The Open Seasons.

The open seasons in New Brunswick are:

Salmon—February 1 to August 15.

Sea Trout—April 1 to September 30.

Land Locked Salmon—May 1 to September 15.

Brook Trout—May 1 to September 30.

Lake Trout—May 1 to September 30.

Bass—All the year round.

Woodcock—September 1 to December 1.

Partridge—September 15 to November 30.

Other Wild Fowl—September 1 to December 1.

Moose, Deer, Caribou—September 15 to November 30.
