THE BRITISH ARMY IN WAR TIME.

The report of the commission on the conduct of the South Africa war is not altogether a condemnation of the war office management. Where it does condemn the report is as well as the evidence strong. Probably there is no other country in the world where an enquiry of this thorough character would be possible.

There is of course a good deal of disagreement. General Buller is blamed for not pushing on to relieve Ladysmith. He is himself of the opinion that General White was in a much better position to move out of Ladysmith and connect with him at Tugela.

ment, explaining that the Boer republics were organized on a war footing and that large sections of Cape Colony were making preparations to join the enemy when war should begin.

But there is also no doubt that the British government did not expect war and did not think preparation necessary. Enemies of England will perhaps go on accusing that country of making war of conquest on the Boers.

Great Britain has had many such experiences. She was surprised in the face of many warnings when the Sepoy rebellion took place. She was worse prepared for the Crimea than she was for South Africa.

Later in the Tongkin expeditions the weakness of the administration was shown. More recently still the affair of Captain Dreyfus cast discredit on the spirit of the army leaders.

After all, the fact remains that Britain had 150,000 men and 50,000 horses and mules in South Africa by the middle of January, 1900, three months and one week after Kruger sent his ultimatum.

There is of course a good deal of disagreement. General Buller is blamed for not pushing on to relieve Ladysmith. He is himself of the opinion that General White was in a much better position to move out of Ladysmith and connect with him at Tugela.

as it has in the past, meet the emergencies when they come. There is a limit to the application of the doctrine that a country must always be prepared for war in order that peace may be kept.

THE ATROCITIES.

If a fifth part of the slaughter, or a twentieth part of the barbarities said to have taken place in and about Macedonia had been reported from any other country, however remote from civilization, something would be done about it.

The task of restoring order, and establishing some basis of outward peace would be a thankless office, inasmuch as in any case one set of assassins would be rewarded and protected. Again it is almost impossible to conceive of any settlement as having in itself an element of permanence.

The nations must eventually interfere in this war. They have had to do so in the case of every one of these attempts of the nonconformist subjects of Turkey to attain total or partial independence.

he was subsequently disqualified by the courts. This man, who has long been on his seat long after the theft was exposed, exhausting all possible dilatory proceedings, was finally unseated and cannot again be a candidate for the men who were concerned in the theft were sent to jail.

According to Bradstreet, the cotton mills in the southern states now take more raw material than those of the north. In 1903 the northern mills took 4.58 per cent. of the American cotton used at home, while the southern mills took 50.42 per cent.

Two or three years ago Mr. Clergue was one of the rulers of Ontario. It was industrial and political. He suggested a doubt as to the future of the Clergue enterprises.

It was claimed that British Columbia was in favor of the Grand Trunk Pacific bill because the Victoria board of trade passed a unanimous resolution in its favor.

Tartarshet declined to commit himself to details, but admitted that negotiations were proceeding between this committee and Servia and also that the revolutionary chief, who was also present at the interview, went further than Tartarshet and alleged that weeks ago it was agreed that at the slightest provocation the Servian forces should invade old Servia and occupy Uskub.

Several former members of the crew of the government steamer Lansdowne have a complaint against the local management of the steamer. One of them, Elliott by name, called at the Star office to take on behalf of himself and two others, John McKean and William Armstrong.

The complaint is evidently caused by the fact that these three men are discharged. They quit work on the steamer on Monday and Elliott says, went out on a racket. One of them was arrested for drunkenness. On Tuesday morning when the men went back to resume their work, they found that their places had been filled by new men. They were told that they were no longer required.

The men complain against their discharge and consider that as Labor Day is a holiday they had a right to stop work. They also say that those who were engaged in their places were outsiders and not St. John men.

The natural feeling caused by their discharge is influencing these men to bring forward their grievances. Elliott says for the steamer all is not as it was. On one occasion a dog belonging to a customs house official on this port lay for three weeks on the steamer in the vicinity of the store room until the food to be eaten by the men smelt of dirty dog.

SERMON.

The Interesting Story of Jonah, by Rev. Thomas B. Gregory.

Now, the word of the Lord came unto Jonah, the great city, and cry against Nineveh, for their wickedness is come up before me.—Jonah 1:1, 2.

Any educated Jewish rabbi will tell you that the book of Jonah was written not to teach history, but to emphasize a moral lesson.

The author was writing for a purpose, which purpose was to set forth certain great ethical truths, and he succeeded.

The Book of Jonah has afforded the sceptics no little amusement, but really there is nothing in it to laugh about. It is not funny, except to the man who does not understand it.

On the other hand, when read intelligently, it is a very serious and a very sublime piece of writing—serious as life and sublime as duty.

The book opens with a command from God to the prophet: "Go to Nineveh, that great city, and preach against it, for their wickedness is come up before me."

There was a duty for Jonah to perform, a duty as clear as the day.

From the beginning of the world down to the present moment, those who have travelled that way have been shaken by tempests and scorched by lightning.

Well, after Jonah got ashore again he found out that he could not get away from the Lord, he went down to Nineveh and preached the sermon that he had been commanded to preach.

At last he had done his duty. If he had done it at first he would have spared a great deal of trouble.

What was he trying to do? To get away from the Lord? A fool? Yes, the greatest of fools!

of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would become of the city.

Jonah was a prophet. Was his prophecy coming true? Were people going to laugh at him and call him a false prophet? In other words, was God going to spare Nineveh, after all their wickedness?

That is exactly what God did! Nineveh repented and the threatened destruction did not come.

In the meantime the Lord was so thoughtful of the disgruntled prophet that He prepared a gourd to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shade over his head, to deliver him from the scorching heat of the sun.

So Jonah was exceedingly glad, and he said, "This is because of the Lord, for He did not intend to do me harm, for I was a sinner."

And God said to Jonah: Dost thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, I do well to be angry, even unto death.

Then said the Lord, thou hast had pity on the gourd, for which thou hast not labored, neither hast thou planted it, and it came up in a night, and perished in a night.

And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?

Now there is nothing more beautiful than this rebuke from the infinite kindness of the Lord to the narrow, cruel selfishness of the prophet.

50,000 CHRISTIANS Murdered for Their Faith.

(New York Journal.) While the civilized world looks on Turkey as exterminating the Christians in Macedonia, fifty thousand Christians have been murdered since Edhem Pasha took the Sultan's command to "restore order" in Macedonia.

These murdered men were not soldiers in the insurgent forces that are striving to deliver the province from the rule of the Turk, but villagers, farmers, and tradesmen.

SMUGGLING ALCOHOL By a United States Revenue Cutter's Crew Caused a Horrible Accident on the Cruiser Olympia, When a Barrel Caught Fire and Exploded—Official Story.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 13.—Lieut. Commander Van Doser, executive officer of the cruiser Olympia, today gave out an official statement of the facts attending the explosion of a barrel of alcohol on the cruiser's deck last night, causing the death of Corporal J. S. Kerkes, U. S. M. C., of Philadelphia.

The statement of Lieut. Commander Van Doser says: "The entire crew of the Olympia were returning aboard after forty hours' shore liberty when a five gallon water breaker full of alcohol was discovered in the forward turret. The executive officer at once ordered a thorough search of the ship and the yard in her vicinity to find any other spirits that might have been smuggled."

"The tank being full, the barrel was carried forward by Corporal Yerkes, Seibert, Shaver and Carter. In the meantime the crew was called to quarters and every man accounted for."

"While the men were in line answering roll the detachment with the barrel began pouring its contents into a tank on the port side of the forward turret. They had scarcely begun when, in a manner yet to be ascertained, the fumes of the spirits became ignited and exploded with terrific force. Both ends of the barrel were blown out, followed by a torrent of burning alcohol that spread in a flood of flames over the forward main deck."

"Yerkes was struck in the head by a piece from the barrel and fell into the burning mass. He was roasted to death. The other men were struck by flying fragments of the barrel but were not injured. Two of the men escaped fatal injury, but Seibert was horribly burned and so injured that he cannot recover."

"The injured men were hurried to the marine hospital, where this afternoon it was stated that Seibert could not live through the night, but that the other two would recover. Yerkes' body will be shipped to Philadelphia for burial."

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 13.—Apprentice Seibert died at the marine hospital this afternoon. He will be given a naval funeral.
