Mr. Marshall therefore moved that Section 6, of the original Scheme, that had been thrown out by the board be reconsidered.

Justice Keans thought Mr. Marshall was not competent to move such a resolution, he having voted in the miniority at a previous meeting.

Justice Gilbert said that the board was the most incompetent to deal with the question. The other Justices seemed to agree with him, a personal discussion seemed likely to arise among the members of the committee as their to work, but the Mayor stopped it and endeavored to keep the members of the board to the subject.

Mg Meanwhile the engineer of the freight train had wisted "down brakes" and reversed the engine, but it was too late. The engine leaped into the air and fell on one side of the track a mass of ruins. The mail car of the passenger train had the front end stove in, and the coal car of the freight train piled on top of it. The tender of the passenger train was also precipitated down the bank into the river. The freight train had six cars more or less smashed. No lives were lost. Three train hands were badly injured, one believed to be fatally so, and some passengers were slightly bruised. The collision is attributed to the train dispatcher at Carlin, who, it is reported, gave the freight train orders to run on the passenger train orders to wait.
