HOLIDAY WAS WELL CELEBRATED

The Town's People Celebrated the King's Birthday in Good Shape By Fishing Trips, Picnics and Other Sports

The King's Birthday, June 3, dawned bright, clear and hot. The town was practically deserted as everyone that possibly could made a gala day of it. The most popular sport was fishing, many parties being made up and lying themselves. Mirtinachi ward, H. H. Hatfield and party; the Misses Helen, Raymond, Dora Robinson, Lida Reid and Della Boone; and A. W. Kyle with J. Barnett, A. Rideout and E. W. Cameron left Monday evening for the Club house. Other parties going to the Mirtinachi the next day were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boyer and daughter, Havelock Hoyt and party of Victoria. Frank Plumer took along L. J. A. Ward, W. McPherson and Walter Baker. In Murray McLeod's car were C. S. Baker, W. McLeod, E. Laskey and C. R. DeWitt. J. Howard Adams took Mrs. I. A. J. Ward with C. D. Dickson and Misses Annie Davis and Belle Cummings made another party. Many fish were captured and even those that were not able to go sporting themselves had the pleasure of sharing the spoils, and according to the stories the biggest trout ever caught was taken by some member of the various parties. Many other of the town people made picnics to various places and not a few motored across the border to Houlton.

Play Friday Night

The play given by the Florenceville Dramatic Club in the Star Theatre Friday evening was received by a crowded house. All the parts were well taken and have been favorably commented upon showing the excellent talent these young people possess.

C. of E. Entertains Soldiers

Another party was given to the returned soldiers on Monday evening when the Church of England people entertained the members and adherents of their church. The party was given in the Armory and an exceedingly good time was enjoyed. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served. The invited guests included: Pts. Buchanan, Cosensonne, Booleston, Teddie, Neslea, Stevens, Howels, Hovey, Pratt, Hayward and Boyer.

GIRLS! WHITEN YOUR SKIN WITH LEMON JUICE

Make a beauty lotion for a face to remove tan, freckles, sallowness.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or milliner will supply you with three ounces of cerus white for a few cents. Squeeze the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle, then put in the cerus white and shake well. This makes a queer kind of the very best lemon skin whitener and complexion beautifier known. Massage this fragrant, creamy lotion daily into the face, neck, arms and hands and just see how freckles, tan, sallowness, redness and roughness disappear and how smooth, soft and clear the skin becomes. You'll be amazed, and the beautiful results will surprise you.

Notice

I will be at my office at Hartland, Monday between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. for consultations.

L. DeC. Macintosh, M.D.

Hartland gladly welcomed him back. He was in command of the 140th, when it was stationed here four years ago, and went overseas with his company. Later he was transferred to the 60th and afterwards to the fighting 26th. He has been twice wounded but never the less the Captain looks very fit. He won military honors by his bravery and was decorated with the Military Cross and Bar.

STARTS SHOOTING THINGS UP AND LANDS IN JAIL

Look "Queer Spell," Smashes Window, Fires at Cows and Then Kills a Cow

George Tisdale, a young Englishman living with a man named Hall at Beal Settlement, got in a ugly mood Tuesday and with a rifle started to shoot up things. He riddled the windows in the house and it is said fired at Hall. He then went to the barn and killed a cow, firing five shots into the animal. Sheriff Foster was sent for and with two deputies went to the scene and arrested the man who had hid the rifle on approach of the officers. He is now in Woodstock jail. He says he is not crazy, but just took a "queer spell." He is about twenty years of age and has never shown any signs of insanity. (Telegraph)

No Town Meeting on Regular Night

Monday, the 2nd, inst. was the Town Council's regular night of meeting, but, as there were only four councillors present, no business could be transacted. The other members of the council were out of town some on business and some for other reasons. A special meeting will probably be called either the last of this week or the first of next. It is to be hoped that our Town Fathers will soon get the by-laws in shape and have them to us in book form, as there are many points of Town Law on which we are ignorant, and on which we are anxious to be enlightened.

Tobacco Saves Hero's Life

A Salisbury boy who recently got home cherishes a warm spot in his heart for tobacco, for he owes his life to a chew of the weed. Just before going forward for a bayonet charge he bit off a large chew, and when the clash of arms came, he and his foe parried each other's bayonet thrusts and came to close grips. While the Salisbury boy is a strong sturdy chap, his opponent was a much heavier and stronger man and was gradually forcing him in a position where he could run him through with his bayonet and it was just at that stage that the characteristic resourcefulness of the Canadian soldier got in its fine work. His face and the German's were in close touch and Young Canada with all his force squirmed his mouthful of tobacco full in the German's eyes. The Hun dropped everything and clapped his hands to his face. This gave the Canadian boy his opportunity and sealed the doom of the German.

Kelly Home After Fourteen Years Imprisonment

William J. Kelly, of Richmond, who became a figure of international prominence a few years ago, when he was lured across the United States border, arrested by United States officers and sentenced to Atlanta Federal Prison, has returned to his home in New Brunswick, after completing the sentence.

People in St. John and throughout the province, who were deeply agitated at the time, will be interested in his return. His case was one that was discussed far and wide, was brought up in the Canadian House of Commons and was also discussed in the U. S. Senate, and it is said, was the occasion of considerable feeling in high quarters.

His return has in a measure revived the animosity that was aroused at the time of his being kidnapped by American agents. He was sentenced in Portland in 1910 to four years for smuggling and ten years for assault on a United States officer, made in 1903, when he was endeavoring to cross the international boundary line with a load of potatoes. He was shot in the neck but with a sled stake laid the American officers low and escaped back to Canada. Extradition was refused by Ottawa on the grounds that he acted in self defence.

Six years later he was lured to the boundary line and, it is asserted, was pulled across and arrested by United States officers.

During the Taft administration the British ambassador, James Bryce, asked for a pardon so that the man might go to the bedside of his dying wife, whose heart slowly broke under an effort to keep her brood of ten children together. The request for a pardon was refused and Mrs. Kelly died. One daughter died the day before his arrival home. One son gave his life in Flanders and the Canadian government has so far refused any allowance to assist in helping this distracted family.

Bill Kelly returns an aged man to a home that is stark and desolate.

THE PRairie PIRATE

Settlers Have Trouble With the Coyotes.

"Those rascally coyotes have been killing my sheep again, and last week they got my finest prize lamb," lamented a householder on the Saskatchewan prairie a few days ago. "Strange to say," he went on, "my next-door neighbor, just three miles away, does not seem to lose any, but there's no credit due the coyotes on that account for a sharp look-out kept, and he is able to be among his sheep several times a day."

"Why do you not shoot, trap or poison them and receive a good price for their skins, as well as the bounty?" was suggested. "We settlers have been shooting, poisoning and trapping them ever since there were settlers on the prairie, and Indians before us, but coyotes are too wise to be caught by trap or poison, and can shoot a gun a mile away. The worst of it is that every spring each pair breeds seven or eight pups, and by the late summer the young brood have developed an appetite for farmyard fowl. Cattle, sheep, chickens, wild duck and jack rabbits are not good enough for them when they can get their teeth into something better," he concluded.

This open winter and late, mild autumn have been a good friend to the prairie wolf, or coyote. Usually the deep snow and low thermometer makes the cost of living very high for coyotes during the dreary winter months. Last winter was so cold and the snow so deep that they were driven to seek food on the outskirts of prairie towns and cities and were hungry and bold enough to run across the railway tracks on the streets in the outskirts of Regina.

Fortuna has favored them this winter and while poor humans were suffering at the high price of lamb and veal, coyotes on the prairies were indulging sumptuously on both. Lamb and veal banquets, with carcasses of turkey, jack rabbits, domestic and prairie chicken, have been the order of the day, seven days of the week. Consequently the fur on the coyote is in better condition than usual and as high as $35 is being paid for their pelts.

Although the coyote helps himself liberally to live stock and poultry, he has no intention of paying for them with his pelt and takes every precaution to arrange to separate one or two sheep or lambs from the flock.

When a flock of sheep becomes restless and nervous, the trouble brewing. Mr. Coyote is somewhere at a point of vantage waiting for the psychological moment, which means the best opportunity to separate one or two sheep or lambs from the flock.

As soon as the sheep see the coyote they stampede, but already the wolf has slipped up the situation and is driving one or two in a safe direction, where he has already laid his plans. Having obtained his objective, his craftiest work is made short work of the fear-stricken victim.

Before visiting the poultry pens coyotes come quite near the house. Should any one appear he will turn around and go trotting leisurely away, as if to say "at a more convenient season," but if there is a gun they disappear like the wind. Nothing is sadder than the coyotes, excepting the wolf-hound, which the most successful hunters take for the hunt. A couple of hounds and a "killer" are put in the back of the wagon and covered from sight. When a coyote is sighted the hounds are uncovered and start in pursuit.

In a very short time their great speed brings the coyote to bay. A battle ensues by that time the "killer" (a slower dog) arrives and finishes the coyote. Last January when a capture was made in this way one great hound was wounded so badly that he was lame for weeks. "What we have to build" cannot be said of every bulldog especially when a coyote is in the game. A certain building which developed a habit of riding on the side of a motor frequently jumped off to his doom. One morning he went trotting after a coyote. After a mad chase the coyote reached his den, a deep hole in the earth, and disappeared, and the bulldog followed him. What occurred underground is hard to say, but in a very short time the bulldog had found his way out for open combat. During a terrible struggle the coyote seized an opportunity to make his den again and the bulldog, much relieved, made a dash for freedom, a sadder and wiser dog.

Coyotes will stand for hours on some high point of land watching the grazing cattle and sheep and at the same time keep very alert to any movement about the homestead or on the trail. After a traveler has passed the coyote makes a thorough investigation of the trail and having sufficiently satisfied his curiosity, takes up his post of observation again. They do a lot of prowling at night, and just after sundown their shrill evening song can be heard at great distances. A little later on the dark curtains of night close over the prairie and the northern lights dance their mystic dances along the horizon and up to mid heaven the long challenges of the coyotes sound doubly weird and plaintive.

THIS WEEK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Talk How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion which added to my weakness. I was very worried about the time—and he said if I could get some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would get well. I had heard much about it and I bought a bottle. I took it every week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months and I feel fine and can eat anything without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. W. C. Smith, 101 North Taylor St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays receive more stress and strain upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a nervous condition with headache, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. W. C. Smith.

The Wrong Extreme

By MARY JORDAN GARTH

Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union

"Bound for the city, eh?"

"Yes, Allen," replied bluff, hearty and handsome Marvin Farr, young enough to be in love with life and all its concomitants, and old enough to be engaged to Mrs. Eunice Brayton, a widow of twenty-eight, pretty as a picture and having, like himself, a comfortable amount of means.

"I suppose your property there needs looking after occasionally?"

submitted Farr's friend.

"Yes, that, and, confidentially—I'm to look for a wedding ring."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed Allen, with genuine pleasure in his face.

"Yes, I've been engaged, to Mrs.

Brayton since the first of the year, and we're to be married next month."

"You deserve congratulations, old fellow!" declared Allen warmly. "She is a charming lady and you should be very happy."

When he first reached Columbus,

Farr had gone to the office of a life insurance company. Next day at his hotel he received a letter from the exambling physician of that concern. As he glanced it over he fairly collapsed.

He thrust it into his pocket and sat staring at vacancy in a lost way.

He did not sleep that night. He was about like a man haunted with fiendish fears. He quickened his pace whenever he passed a jewelry store, he had no heart in business, and put in time wandering idly about.

One day, coming out of a stock broker's office where he had sat casually viewing blackboard and crowd, he came plump up against Arnold Day, the brother of his fiancée.

"Why, Farr!" exclaimed Day.

"What's the matter? You look ill."

"Oh, just a touch of indigestion," evaded Farr and Day went on his way, puzzled and wondering.

At the end of a week Farr returned to his home town. He called upon Eunice. She could not help but notice the change in him. He was preoccupied, had lost weight and amazed her at his second call by saying:

"Eunice, I'm going to ask you to postpone the wedding. Something came up in the city that requires my attention for some time to come."

"Marvin, dear, if it is your business, or the lack of money," began the loyal Eunice, "you know what I have in your."

"Oh, dear! No! Nothing of that kind," asserted Farr, stanchly.

"Don't ask me to go into details. If you wouldn't mind, let us put off the wedding for a time."

"Most surely, Marvin, provided you let me know your special worry when it gets too hard for you to bear alone."

So affairs drifted on as they had done, only that Eunice began to fret over the great change in her promised husband. One day she told her brother all her vague fears.

"Why, I think I can figure it out," said the latter. "I remember now that I met Farr in the city coming out of one of those speculation joints where men lose thousands in an hour. I'll wager Farr has been foolish enough to invest in some wildcat stock and has lost his money."

Fourthly Eunice approached Farr on the subject. She accompanied it with a memorandum of her means. "It's all yours, Marvin," she said generously.

"Come, use it to help you out of your difficulties and become the smiling contented man you were."

Farr was touched deeply. Here was a proof of the earnest love of his confiding fiancée that was simply irresistible.

His eyes grew humid, his voice trembled with emotion as he said,

"Eunice, I am going to tell you all about it. I have postponed the wedding because I may not live long."

"Marvin! how ridiculous!" immediately cried out Eunice. "Oh, dear!

What has ever put that nonsensical rubbish in your head?"

"The best authority in the world," declared Farr gravely. "It is heart-rending to think that the future bears no hope for me, because you can never become my wife. I may not live a year."

"If it were only a month, dear, all the more should I wish to be your Eunice grew pale as she read it. According to the country Marvin Farr which had already secured a destructive hold on his bodily functions. She gasped, she turned the sheet over in her hands helplessly. Then she sprang to her feet with a hysterical, but joyous cry.

"Oh Marvin!" she gasped, "this was not for you. See on the back; Report on Walter Doyle. That's not you. My dear! my dear! don't you understand? They sent you the wrong report, and this Walter Doyle is probably the happiest man in the world because he has been pronounced a perfect paragon of health."

And Eunice threw her arms about the neck of the man she loved, lifted suddenly from the lowest depths of misery to the radiant heights of delight.

AFTER EFFECTS OF INFLUENZA

Often as Serious as the Disease Itself—How to Get New Health

There are few homes in Canada that were not touched by the sorrow that trailed in the wake of the Spanish Influenza epidemic. Etti-mates of the loss of life caused by this epidemic show that it was almost as great as the losses caused by the war, and these take no account of the baneful after-effects which are sometimes as fatal as the disease itself.

Victims of the disease are generally left with impoverished blood and a weakened system. In this condition they are exposed to many dangers unless precautions are taken to enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves. The debility that invariably follows influenza is not a disease of any organ. It is a general condition of unfitness. It must be met by a remedy whose good results will be quickly felt throughout the entire system. In this condition

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be found invaluable. The mission of this medicine is to enrich the blood, and this new, red blood carries renewed health and strength to every part of the body.
The case of Mrs. George Louder, Hamilton, Ont., proves the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. Mrs. Louder says: "I had a very severe attack of Spanish Influenza which left me pale and very weak. My appetite completely failed me and the least noise would startle me and make me cry. I was under a doctor's care, and finally he advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I had not been taking them long before I could tell they were helping me. I used altogether nine or ten boxes and am now feeling as well as ever. I did not believe if it had not been for these pills I would have been a chronic invalid."

Such proof as this must be interesting to everyone who suffered from an attack of influenza, and why still feel in any way weakened as the result of the trouble. It points the way to new health and strength, and if you are one of the sufferers you should avail yourself of this medicine at once. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

Among the gallant men who served in the war, there were many who were not only brave but also kind. One such man was Mr. J. H. Smith, who served in the 1st Canadian Trench Company. He was killed in action on the 1st of July, 1918, at the battle of Arras. His death was a great loss to his family and to his community.

Mr. J. H. Smith was a native of Centreville, and he was a member of the local church. He was a very kind and generous man, and he was loved by all who knew him. His death was a great loss to his family and to his community.
