A nation is a potent factor in the life of humanity. Its influence upon its own people is very great. Their characteristics, their ideals, 4 heir powers with be determined to a considerable degree by the general standing, ideals, and impulses of the nation. Where national life are swift and strong there will be activity in commerce end in all departments of effort.

departments of effort.

Everything, therefore, which tends to build up a national sentiment bears directly upon the peoples welfare. To inspire the people with national feelings, hopes, aspirations is to give new courage, intelligence and strength to all workers. For this reason it is well to mark the nation, to the fact that it bad a beginning and has a history, that its career is not closed.

Annala has her bitthday celebrations. The first of July is marked by certain observances. The public business is asspended; the merchants class their stores; the excursions to distant points are numerous; the sports provided are abundant. Indeed the sports seem to be the leading feature of the day. There is no gathering of the people for any other purpose; there is no meeting for cultivation of national sentiment.

This we think a mistake. It would be a gain to have some assembling of the citizens where prominent public men could address the people cu civic duties and privileges. As things are the only discussion that takes place on national questions comes at election times when calm thought is difficult to accure. In the United States there is a great deal of cratory used on the fourth of July. It may not always be of the highest character; but it has its influence upon the young especially in fostering national sentiments and patriotic feelings. Among us there is nothing of this kind; the ministers even do not, as far as we know, make any reference to the Gitizens League, if our Council or the Citizens League, if our Council or the Citizens League, Mr and Mrs H.
