the House of Lords wish to consult the people on. Lords, as a rule, are active opponents of Liberal Governments and supporters of Tory Governments. The action of the House of Lords is largely partisan, and rarely non-partisan and actuated by meritorious considerations.

This short and simple decision of the Lords to consult the peo-made a change. What Balfour said could not be done in 1907, the Lords did in 1909, and in the words of Lord Curzon they "d-n the consequences," and for partisan advantages Mr. Balfour winks at the breach of parliamentary convention and backs the Lords in their evil ways.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

What is of real moment to the country now in this matter is what the Liberal Party can do if they win, and how they will do it, if the Lords kick against it.

The rejection of the Budget is only one-true it is the most grievous-of many grievances against the Lords for rejection of Liberal measures. Steps will have to be taken to ensure, if possible, a fair consideration of Liberal measures by the Lords, and not a partisan rejection of them, regardless of their merits.

Premier Asquith at Albert Hall, London, said: "I tell you in the name and on behalf of the Liberal Party that we have at this moment laid upon us a single task-to vindicate and to establish upon an unshakable foundation the principles of representative government '

The Liberal Party are determined to do something to put the Lords in their proper place. What they will do; what they can do; how they can do; how the Lords will take the proposals, are all topics of live interest.

The settled determination of the Liberal Party to do something effective was authoritatively announced in the House of Lords by the Lord Chancellor in these grave words :---

"It is impossible that any Liberal Government should ever again bear its heavy burden unless it is secured against the repetition of treatment such as our measures have had to undergo during the past four year. If we fail in the coming election it will only be the beginning of a contest which can only end in one way. If we succeed, I hope we shall not flinch in what will follow. We have not rovoked this contest. We have not provoked it, nor at any time desired it, but we are not afraid of it, and I hope that none of us will fail to do our duty in preserving the constitution of our coun-

STRUGGLE FOR SUPREMACY.

The utterance is cryptic, but suggestive of severe constitutional truggles to insure the supremacy of the party which is in majority in the House of Commons. It also seems to imply that the Liberal party, whenever it wins, will refuse office unless it secures the cooperation of the King in an effort to place the House of Lords in due subordination to the House of Commons. Such a refusal by a party in a majority would bring matters speedily to an issue.

Premier Asquith was even more explicit in his speech at Albert Hall, when he said :--

"We shall not assume office, and we shall not hold office, unless we can secure the safeguards which experience shows to be

This declaration of policy by Premier Asquith involves the solution of constitutional problems bristling with difficultes.

How can Premier Asquith secure these safeguards if the Lords object?

How can he convert the convention that the Lords shall not meddle with a Budget into a statute if the majority of the present Lords vote against such a bill?

If the Lords refuse to be curbed by statute, and if the Liberals when in a majority decline to hold office until they are curbed, how can a government be carried on against a hostile majority in the House of Commons?

A discussion of these issues may be of some interest move though wishing to do so. I felt rightened, yet chained to the spot ple involves innovations on the principles of parliamentary government, which have hitherto obtained acceptance, and which tend to revolutionize the constitution and weaken the preponderence in power of the People's House.

MOST ARROCANT USURPATION.

Mr. Asquith characterized the resolution of the House of Lords, when moving a resolution of protest in the House of Commons, as the gravest indignity and the most arrogant usurpation to which for more than two centuries the House of Commons has been called upon to submit.

Sir Frederick Pollock, one of the most distinguished of English jurists, considers it-

"The most audacious attempt to subvert the foundations of parliamentary government which has been made since the revolution of 1689.

The usurpation of the privileges of the House of Commons implied in Lord Lansdowne's amendment and carried to a successful issue for a time at least were set forth in remarkably clear terms by Lord Morley, who summed them up as follows :----

"First, it arrogated to the House of Lords the control of the taxing power; route.

Secondly, it assumed to that House the power of forcing a General Election by refusing supplies;

Thirdly, there must be a new Parliament whenever the sitting Parliament had displeased their Lordships' House:

'Fourthly, under these provisions they were proposing to change the representative supremacy into an obligarchic and non-representative supremacy;

"Fifthly, they were throwing out of gear the whole financial machinery of the year."

BALFOUR'S OPINION IN 1907.

The fact that Lord Lansdowne's motion involved a usurpation of privileges of the House of Commons and subverted principles accepted by Mr. Balfour himself is evidenced by the dicta of Mr. Balfour in 1907 in the House of Commons when speaking of the limited power of the House of Lords. On that occasion he said, and Premier Asquith did not forget to remind him of it :--

"We all know the power of the House of Lords is still further limited by the fact that it cannot touch these Money Bills, which, if it could deal with, no doubt it could bring the whole executive machinery to a standstill."

"The conclusion which I want to press upon the House, and which is all important in this matter, is that under our existing system we have two chambers which are not of equal power, which are not of equal authority, which cannot come into serious conflict in the whole field of administration, in the whole field of the initiation of legislation, or in the whole field of that legislation which deals with finance."

Mr. Balfour was of course referring to the usage in vogue, and iddressaccepted conventionally by both political parties. Two years have stand why the grape cure has for a long time been so popular in grapegrowing countries. This cure, however could only last as long as the vintage; and men of science have for some time been trying to devise a way of preserving the grape-juice without its fermenting or losing any of its valuable and wholesome properties. Several attempts in this direction have been made in grape-growing countries, and even in Great Britain; but we do not know of any so successful as that of the Mas-de-la-Ville, where the fresh and fruity taste of the grape has been so remarkably preserved.
