Inspected Creameries.—Mr. W. Logan, inspector of creameries and dairies, reported last evening from a trip up the E. & N. line. He found the majority of creameries to be in good condition—two or three in a less state of efficiency, and unless the latter improve, the Act will be put in force stringently. Mr. Logan reports the crops generally well looking well. Farmers in this district are talking of improving their stables. This is much needed, and a bulletin on the subject will be issued shortly.

This will be a red letter year in the annals of this Canadian sport.

Guggenheim's Interest.—It is reported that J. B. Hobson, managing director of the Cariboo Hydraulic company, during his recent visit to Victoria, has had in hand another deal by which two more properties pass under the control of the Guggenheim Exploration company of New York. These properties will be operated as an independent proposition from that of the Cariboo hydraulic, which has also become a part of the Guggenheim interests. The two properties which have been taken by the New York capitalists, on the recommendation of Mr. Hobson, have not in the past played a very important part in the mineral production of the north. They are, however, regarded by Mr. Hobson as important fields for carrying on hydraulic work on an extensive scale.

A New Patent.—A Canadian patent was granted during the past week, through the office of Rowland Britain, patent attorney, Vancouver, to Messrs. C. H. White and A. S. MacKay of Vancouver on a milk aerator and cooler. In the preservation of milk the removal of solid impurities, the de-aerization by efficient aeration and the subsequent cooling of it considerably below the temperate point are the most essential requirements, and it is for this purpose that the device of Messrs. White and MacKay has been designed. In it the milk is received into a vessel the conformation of the bottom of which is such that the solid impurities will be deposited in a central depression while the liquid is permitted to flow in a finely divided stream over the exterior surface of a conical vessel within which is circulated the aerating water, when necessary may be fed to attain the required temperature. An important feature of the invention in question is the particular manner in which the cold water is circulated to attain as great a cooling effect as possible with a minimum of water.

Does Your FOOD Digest Well? When the food is imperfectly digested the full benefit is not derived from it by the body and the purpose of eating is defeated no matter how good the food is how carefully adapted to the wants of the body it may be. Thus the dyspeptic often becomes thin, weak and debilitated, energy lacking, brightness and soap and vim are lost, and in their place come dullness, loss of appetite, depression and languor. It takes no great knowledge to know when one has indigestion, some of the following symptoms generally exist, viz., constipation, sour stomach, variable appetite, headache, heartburn, gas in the stomach, etc.

The great point is to cure it, to get real bounding health and vigor.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Do not accept a substitute for B.B.B. There is nothing "just as good."

PRISONS AND PRISON WORKERS

THE OLD NEWGATE PRISON AT EAST GRANBY CONN.

Three recent news events which have revived the world's interest in dungeons and prisoners. Though the United States has five prisons nowadays, time was when prison reform was badly needed here.

By OSBORNE SPENCER.

There is something fascinating in stories of prison life, even to the well-balanced intelligence, and two or three recently published news stories have brought out a host of prison anecdotes and incidents.

The first of these was the account of the scientific writing done during the twenty-five years imprisonment in the Schlossberg fortress by one of the most interesting phases of individual work for the good of prisoners.

The second was the story of one of the most interesting phases of individual work for the good of prisoners. The third and most recent was the story of J. Watson Hildreth's release from Sing Sing, where he had been serving a life sentence for helping to wreck a train some ten years ago, when only a boy in his teens.

A HORRIBLE CONNECTICUT NEWGATE.

Mozoroff's imprisonment, Americans would like to think, was accompanied by more privations than the imprisonment of either of the recently released Americans. Yet, though he was at first allowed to have no books, and no writing materials, this rigor was later modified; he was then allowed a variety of reading matter and the pens, ink and paper necessary to the writing of his books.

In the last century and a half, and though not every American is aware of it, it was needed on this side of the water as surely as anywhere in the world. For the lives of the prisoners in this country were nothing more nor less than "Hell on earth."

Some of the prisoners were confined along the same lines long after the organization of the colonies into what is now one of the world's greatest, proudest nations, a nation as proud of its prisons and their administration, and as proud of the "prison work" being done by many of its philanthropically minded men and women as it is of any other manifestations of its progress among the nations.

STRONG CELLS IN AN OLD COPPER MINE.

The reason for the excavation of the tunnels and shafts wherein the most desperate of Connecticut's criminals were imprisoned in the years just before and just after the revolution, was the discovery of copper there a year more than two centuries ago.

ories extending some distance underground were scooped out. In 1773, three years before the Declaration of Independence, other copper mines that yielded better returns were discovered, and the Ganbury workings were abandoned. When the Revolution broke out the Simsbury Committee of Safety saw that the abandoned shaft and galleries would make an ideal prison, and forthwith they built a building over the mouth of the shaft and divided it into the galleries up rudely into cells.

Into the unspeakably gloomy dungeons thus created the Simsbury Committee of Safety threw such of their friends and neighbors as they suspected of being friendly to the King's cause. It would be hard to imagine a more horrible place for the confinement of human beings.

SOME INTERESTING PRISON WORKERS.

Some attempts had been made in the old world to improve the condition of prisoners long before the final abandonment of the Connecticut "Newgate," but little or nothing of that sort was done in this country till years later.

modern prisons as compared with the prisons of earlier times would require more space than is here at command. Simultaneously with the improvements that have been brought about in prison building and the consequent temptation no longer, and, due to prisons there has grown up a great voluntary system of "prison work," so called, by men and women anxious to mitigate as much as possible the lot of the prisoners, both while in prison and after their release.

There has been no more interesting branch of this work than that carried on by the New York Prison Association, of which the late William M. F. Round was president for many years.

whiff of air that was not rankly fetid and poisonous. Evers and other diseases caused by bad air, filth and dampness, to say nothing of black despair, unrelieved by any occupation whatever, harassed the prisoners of the sombre-new world "Newgate," and deaths were frequent—how many there were in the years it was used mainly as a political prison no one knows. After the close of the Revolution it was used as a State-prison by Connecticut for twenty-five years. During that quarter of a century its conduct was much more sane and civilized, but even then it was a horrible place, far too horrible for the imprisonment of the worst criminals that might be imagined, even.

Her shaking finger pointed to a small round hole that cut clean through the pitted face, charred at its edges as if with fire.

It had come at last—the success we had hoped for, longed for, almost despaired at times of ever attaining; and it had come in overwhelming measure.

solid gold. Aye, and it was solid gold, too, or it meant the same thing, and the claim stood, worth to Jim and me—for we shared our luck, for better or worse—fifty thousand pounds at the lowest computation, as we afterward found.

And I'm going straight back to claim her. God bless her! I added. Once more his case was mine. I think we had known something of the sort all along, and that knowledge had helped to make us the friends we were.

The seizure of farming lands, allegedly for military barracks, and the spoliation of six miles of the richest soil of the valley outside Ping Yang, the practical spoliation every day of the Korean government, and above all, the silly overbearing manner assumed by the Japanese who migrated to the country, admittedly not the choicest of Japanese people, are...

CREAMERY COMMANDMENTS Some Fatherly Advice Extended of a Very Pertinent Character.

A Colonist reader forwards the following, clipped from an exchange, headed, 'Creamery Man's Ten Commandments':

- 1. Thou shalt not slumber late in the morning, but arise early and deliver thy cream to the factory, for he that goeth late causeth the buttermaker to use profane language. 2.
