

The Weekly Monitor.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1893.

As we predicted a few weeks ago, the House of Representatives at Washington by a sweeping majority passed a bill to repeal those clauses of the so-called Sherman Act which require the government to purchase a certain quantity of silver bullion each month. The friends of silver made a gallant fight, moving amendment after amendment in favor of free coinage at certain rates; but all these were voted down by a majority varying from 100 to 120, the largest majority given by the opponents of silver at any time during the session. This settles the silver question so far as the House of Representatives is concerned. Now the matter has to be dealt with by the Senate, where the contest is likely to be equally keen and the vote more evenly divided. The people of the Rocky Mountain states have until the last hoped for free coinage of silver at some rate, even though it was, as compared with gold, to be as low as twenty to one; but the recent vote has shown them the futility of their hopes. The result must of necessity be a bitter disappointment to them.

For the first time for a good many years the United States government finds itself confronted with the probability of a pretty large deficit on the present year's transactions. For the months of July and August, there has been a falling off in the revenue, as compared with last year's of over $1,000,000, or at the rate of about $75,000,000. At the same time the expenditure has gone on at the same rate as during recent years, the appropriations for pensions and many of the other services admitting of no reduction. Much of this deficit of revenue is doubtless caused by the fact that merchants are expecting a sweeping reduction in the tariff, and in consequence are not importing as heavily as on previous years. After the changes are made there will doubtless be a reaction when importations will go on as before; but in any event there is now every probability of a deficit of about $20,000,000 on the present year's transactions. What with the other serious experiences of the past few years, the two years of the McKinley tariff are likely to be remembered as two of the most disastrous since the war.

H. R. H. Duke of Edinburgh, the queen's second son, has now become a reigning sovereign. By the recent death of his uncle, Duke Ernest, he has inherited the throne of the kingdom of the German Empire, Save Coburg-Gotha. The Emperor of Germany is simply a union or confederation of twenty-six states, of which the German Empire is one. It has one vote in the Federal Council and sends two members to the German parliament or Reichstag. The duke, while subject to the emperor, has in all local matters the power of a sovereign. His dukedom comprises a population of over 200,000, and includes an area of about 700 square miles. With this throne Prince Alfred has also inherited the fortune of his uncle, the late duke, which is estimated at several millions of dollars; so that in relinquishing his English home and surroundings, and taking upon himself the duties and responsibilities of a prince of the German Empire, the duke of Edinburgh will have ample means with which to maintain the dignity of his exalted position. Indeed, his lineage seems to have fallen in very pleasant places. The Emperor of Russia is his brother-in-law, the Emperor of Germany is his nephew, the Crown Prince of Romania is his son-in-law, while Ferdinand, Prince of Bulgaria, is his cousin. Some years ago he was offered the throne of Greece, but declined it as at that time stood second heir to that of Great Britain. Now he is the seventh heir, the Prince of Wales, his children and grand children intervening. He has had an extensive training during a period of thirty-five years in the British navy, during which he has filled every position from cadet to admiral. Only a short time ago he was appointed to the command of the Mediterranean squadron, a position subsequently filled by the ill-fated admiral Tillycr. There is a present most cordial feeling between Great Britain and Germany, and now that an English prince has, under most favorable auspices, become a prince of the German Empire, he will be in a position to do most to strengthen and perpetuate that friendship.

The question of running street cars on Sunday has just been submitted on a vote of the people of Toronto, and after a very heated contest the electors have decided against Sunday cars by a majority of over one thousand. The result was a surprise to the friends of the Sunday cars, who were expected to win. Toronto was expected to be exceedingly conservative in this regard, as nearly all the other large cities of Canada allow the street cars to run on Sunday, when they are generally more extensively patronized than on week days. In the United States not only are street cars permitted in nearly all of the cities, but rail way trains as well on Sunday. Even freight trains run there on Sunday. In Halifax street cars run on Sunday as on other days, and although the city officials have been made to enforce the Sunday laws against street car employees they have always proved unavailing. If ever the city of Toronto would yield and pass the home rule bill, should it be in the coming contest, however, it would probably end his political career and deter home rule for a good many years, as he is too old to wait during the life-time of another parliament, and then fight the home rule battle all over from the beginning. So the next general election will be watched with more than usual interest. There is even now an exceedingly bitter feeling between the two parties, which is likely to be greatly intensified before the next contest is over.

A circular was recently read in all the Roman Catholic churches in Montreal, from Archbishop Proulx, announcing that collections will be taken up in every public church on each chapel one year for the establishment of Roman Catholic seminaries in India. This is in accordance with the Pope's wish, which is by far the longest time ever spent by the Pope to cooperate in the movement. The circular also deals with entertainments, such as balls and picnics, given from time to time by benevolent societies for pecuniary interests, and strongly condemns these amusements as not being in accordance with the Christian and religious spirit of these organizations.

The Dominion Line steamship service, thirty-one days out from Montreal for Liverpool, has been heard of. The steamer Ontario of Sydney, C. E., reports that she passed the Straits with her main shaft broken in two places. The Atlantic Mail steamer, the Wapleux, reports the same shaft broken in two places.

—The Methodist church at Digbyville was filled with friends assembled there on Wednesday evening, Aug. 25th, for the wedding of Miss Nellie Long, daughter of Mr. J. H. Long, formerly of Digbyville, Mass., and Mr. J. H. Long, of Digbyville, Mass., youngest son of A. L. Banks, Esq., of that place. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. The bride wore a handsome dress in white satin cut on the train and trimmed in white lace. She wore a white veil and carried a bouquet of white flowers. Miss Gertrude Whitman, daughter of Mr. H. W. Whitman, of Digbyville, was the bridesmaid, and was dressed in white cashmere and white silk. The groom was attended by Mr. J. H. Long, of Digbyville, N. S. The Rev. Mr. C. M. Tyler, pastor of the Methodist church, performed the marriage ceremony. After the congratulations of friends the entire bridal party, accompanied by their guests, repaired to the residence of the bride's father, where a sumptuous tea was served. After an evening of music and dancing, the bride and groom departed for their new home, leaving many a tearful parting. The wedding was a most successful one, and the bride and groom were accompanied by their guests, repaired to the residence of the bride's father, where a sumptuous tea was served. In Nova Scotia.

Description of the Trip from Boston and from Pleasant Point in the Western Part of the Province.

Two hundred and sixty-nine souls with but a single thought left Boston recently on the steamer Yarmouth, and the one idea was, "We are bound for Nova Scotia."

Leaving Boston at noon, the vessel, guided by a master hand, sailed down the harbor, passed the islands and light-houses, out into the open sea.

I think the people of Yarmouth must be very religious; for the village has ten churches; the fish nets are all drawn in from the sea and hung up on Sunday, and one can only look at the pleasure boats on the Sabbath.

Yarmouth is old, but charming, and the people are rarely excited. "The beaten path is the safe one" is a proverb followed by many travelers, and so up and away we go to Digby.

The journey from Boston to Yarmouth is not an arduous one in either of the Boston & Yarmouth S. S. Co.'s boats. Captain A. N. McGray is commander of the Yarmouth, and unlike most captains, he does not take the helm.

Yarmouth has been famous for the great amount of ship building which has been carried on there.

Agricultural.

Systematic Farming.

The object of the farmer should be not only to keep the product of his farm and his animals up to the standard of the present and the past, but to improve upon it.

The modern system of farming, with its tractor, better stock and better methods, enable him to do this very easily, if he will adopt them.

It is very easy to have a perfect system for the farm work, to an arrangement that intimate enough with him to know how well to do it, or when all the signs come right.

Water for Farm Horses. It would be all the better for any farm horse if he could be given water at some time between morning and noon, and some time between noon and night.

Whether an orchard is bearing or not a summer application of manure rarely fails to make it more productive.
