WARM ROAST FOR LAURIER

English Press Condemns
His Cheap Demagogism in Attacking the
G. O. C.

Lord Dunsford Will Not Resign—
Most Popular Commander Canadians Ever Had.

Ottawa, Cne, June 12.—It is understood that at Saturday's Cabinet council the Dunsford episode was under discussion, but whatever decision was come to, there was no announcement forthcoming when council broke up. It is the general impression among those politically interested that the Government has declined to force too far in Mr. Fisher's hands the decision of the Government as to whether or not to ask for his recall. Lord Dunsford himself, having, as his statement shows, declined to come to the relief of the minister by resigning. The probabilities are that the decision of the Government will not be made public for some days, and then by official announcement in the House. The delay, it is calculated, will give time for public excitement over the issue to subside.

"I have not resigned and I have no intention of resigning," was Lord Dunsford's reply to a correspondent Saturday evening.

LAURIER'S CHEAP DEMAGOGISM.

London, June 11.—The Globe says: Without entering into the unfortunate dispute of Lord Dunsford and the Canadian Government, it is certainly desirable to utter a protest against such language as Premier Laurier permitted himself to use. To say "He must learn that this is a responsible Government, and that in Canada they are not accustomed to being dragged down by the skirts of a gross indiscretion, such as the late Sir John A. Macdonald would never have been guilty of. Premier Laurier may feel the necessity of consulting certain interests in Canada, which he has better disregard, but he will not strengthen his position by attacking in an unmanly way the most popular commander the Canadian militia ever had."

The Daily Graphic says: "Mr. Fisher seems to be a curious mixture of ideas on the subject of political scandal. It is obvious that such a system prevailing makes Lord Dunsford's task an impossible one, and it is his right, indeed his duty, to protest in the strongest possible way. The fact, however, is to be regretted, but we can only imagine that he convinced himself that in no other way could the force he so ably commands be saved from the demoralizing influence of politicians."

EARL GREY

It is Announced That he Will Succeed
Lord Minto as Governor General.

London, June 11.—It is announced that Earl Grey, Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland, has been appointed to succeed the Earl of Minto as Governor-General of Canada.

Earl Grey is a brother-in-law of Lord Minto. The latter's term does not expire until October, so the official announcement of Earl Grey's appointment will not be made for some time.

Albert Henry George Grey is the fourth Earl, and a grandson of the Earl of Grey, who was prominent in the British political life of the century. He was born in 1813, is a son of Gen. Hon. Charles Grey, and brother of Lady Minto. He was elected to the Commons in 1880, and held a seat till 1886. He has been Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland since 1899, is a director of the British South Africa Company, and was administrator of Rhodesia 1896-7. Earl Grey was one of the executors and trustees under Cecil Rhodes' will. The Earl is the originator of the Public House Trust movement in Britain, having for its object the control of public houses, running them in such a way as to eliminate the element of private profit from the sale of intoxicating liquors and providing counter attractions to the bar in reading and recreation rooms. Earl Grey has an estate of seventeen thousand acres in Northumberland, and the Countess, a daughter of Robt. Hoiford, M. P., of Gloucestershire, is considered one of the most beautiful of English peeresses.

ROASTS THE STREET SHOW

But Says Children's Parade
Was an Inspiration and a Treat.

Rev. Mr. Hoyt Gives His Views of the Old Boys' Reunion—Some Pointed Comments.

"Some things I saw at the Old Boys' Reunion."

Such was the subject of Rev. J. W. Hoyt's discourse at William St. Baptist church last night to a large congregation.

The reverend gentleman selected his text from Proverbs 24 and the 32nd verse, "Then I saw and considered it well." "In thirty minutes it would be an utter impossibility to tell all I saw at the six days of the Reunion," began Mr. Hoyt. "Then were many things I might have never seen but didn't. It would have been infinitely better for the reputation and morality of our beautiful little city had many of the things not occurred. What we saw on King street was a disgrace to our town."

"I don't think that I speak against old boys' reunions. I have not a word to say against them. There is much to be said in their favor. There were many things that appealed to us all but why in the world for the sake of making old boys and girls to come home should degrading and disgraceful affairs, as we saw on our main street, be allowed."

"It is well nigh time good moral people had spoken out against it. I would like to have a better opinion of the old boys and girls of Chatham than to think that they took part in some of the things I saw. If they were old boys and girls then all I can say is may God have mercy on them and the houses. But it is my opinion that the foulest and worst were followers of the fair."

"Many business men spoke to me saying they were sick of such a disgrace in front of their places of business. There were many things I saw that I dare not mention."

"What else? Was there anything that appealed to the aesthetic qualities, anything to inspire the soul? Yes, I answer quickly. Yes, the boys and girls. I saw a sight that I never want to forget. It was most inspiring and helpful to see 1500 school children with happy faces and waving flags led by the 48th Highlanders' Band. My heart stirred within me. I can tell them now there is nothing that stirs me more deeply than hopeful childhood."

"I considered them and the thought came, where will they end? Where shall they know their destiny? In ten years half the boys and girls of that parade will be holding the positions of the world to-day. What influences will they wield and how will their powers be turned? There is girls, if put in the right direction, to turn the world upside down."

The speaker instanced the work of many great men and women who had started when children and showed that the influence of the children and the parents has with an occasional exception, all to do with the destinies of the boys and girls.

"The boys and girls think," continued the reverend speaker, "that just whatever their papa and mamma do is right. The children can be taught patriotism in the schools but morality and religion must be taught in the homes."

Rev. Mr. Hoyt spoke of the desecration of the Sabbath and the effect on the boys and girls. He said that the Sabbath was being desecrated more and more every day. He spoke of the trust God has put in us to bring the children up in the right way and said, "Just as the influence is, so will the result be."

The choir, under the direction of Miss Blanche Baxter, rendered excellent music.

MUST CARRY LIGHT

Relative to the recent accidents which have been threatened on the river in the evening by boats not carrying lights, the following enactment speaks for itself.—

Department of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa, May 15th, 1904.

Circular.—Owners, masters or persons in charge of small vessels, such as pleasure yachts, steam, gasoline, naptha, electric and other motor launches or row-boats, under way or at anchor, in all waters frequented by other vessels, are hereby notified that they must comply with the rules imposed by Chap. 79, Revised Statutes of Canada, entitled "An Act respecting navigation of Canadian waters for preventing collisions," especially as regards the lights to be shown.

Attention is also directed to the penalty which the master, owner or person in charge, if in fault, shall incur, viz., "A sum not exceeding $200 and not less than $20, which penalty will be enforced if conviction is secured. Cases of violation of the rules, brought to the notice of the department, will be prosecuted according to law."

BE SOLDIERS IN LIFE'S BATTLE

Rev. Mr. McGillivray's Fine
Address to the Men of 24th Regiment.

Splendid Service at the First Presbyterian Church—Excellent Music Provided.

The soldiers of the 24th Kent Regiment paraded yesterday morning and attended divine worship at the First Presbyterian Church. There was a good turnout and the Regiment made a splendid showing with their two bands, officers and men. Rev. A. H. McGillivray chose as his text "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." He said that life was often spoken of as a battle and that everyone at some time or other knew the price of that metaphor as applied to life. Those who were living in real earnest, knew that life was no mere parade or show but a sharp struggle. Where there was true life there was bound to be a struggle and the famous men who knew what it was to climb also knew what it was to fall.

Continuing, Mr. McGillivray pointed out some of the causes of the battles of life. He said that there never would be true temperance until the meaning of true temperance was recognized and that was self-control. Zeal for temperance was often in itself intemperance. Many defeats would be exacted by those who took part in the battles of life, unless they first subdued their will and brought it into subjection to the Master.

The soldiers present might not be called upon to serve their country, but God was calling them every day to obey his orders. Christ needed soldiers and never did he need soldiers more than to-day.

Special music was rendered by the choir and Miss Edna Martin rendered the splendid cantata solo, "Beat in the Lord." E. B. Arthur, the talented organist of the First Presbyterian Church, presided over the musical program and during the offertory, rendered an excellent organ solo.

On the return of the soldiers to the drill shed, Lt.-Col. Rankin, K. C., addressed his men and said that the trip to Wallaceburg had been arranged and wouldn't cost the members of the Regiment anything. He also said that an effort would be made to have Colonel Peters make his inspection on that day.

ONE YEAR

Faubert Receives Sentence for Perjury—May Secure Ticket of Leave.

John Faubert was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison this morning on a charge of perjury. There was also a suspended sentence against the prisoner. Judge Houston remarked that people pay little attention to suspended sentences and once they are released never bother about having the sentence removed. Then when they come up on another charge the suspended sentence is still registered against them.

The Crown Attorney asked that leniency be shown the prisoner. W. G. Richards also made an appeal for the prisoner. The prisoner's counsel painted in glowing colors the bright June morning and the spirit of kindness it should instill of man towards man.

Judge Houston said that he would like to deal more leniently with the prisoner than it was in his power to do. He had inflicted the smallest possible sentence that he could in accordance with the crime. If proper representations were made he thought that Faubert could get out on ticket of leave. Faubert got into his present trouble in an effort to get his brother and brother-in-law clear of a charge of attempting to break into James J. McKim's clothing store. He broke down completely, however, when he received his sentence and wept bitterly. He declared that he didn't care anything for himself, but his wife and two children were left without a home.

DIED AT ST. CATHARINES

The death occurred in St. Catharines of Mr. Gilleland, brother of James Gilleland, a former Chatham young man and vocalist. Deceased was a lawyer and had just completed his course and was starting up in business when he was taken ill. He was forced to take a trip for his health and he died before he returned. This is the third death which has occurred in this family during the past year, the father and a sister having preceded the present one. Deceased was working hard to take up his father's law practice in St. Catharines and it is supposed that his death was brought on by over-study. James is at present travelling with a surveying party in the Northwest.

The family are greatly respected in St. Catharines, where they have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

DECORATION DAY

Yesterday was Memorial Day with the K. O. T. M. and was fittingly celebrated by the local Maccabees. In the afternoon, headed by the ex-Regimental Band, they marched out to the cemetery some 300 strong. Geo. Embrey marshalled the parade and it was splendidly handled. The day upon which the flowers were carried was escorted to the cemetery, where the graves of the 15 brethren who have passed away were appropriately decorated.

At night the lodge attended divine worship at Holy Trinity Church, where a splendid sermon was delivered by the Rev. T. Beverley Smith. The pastor devoted his opening remarks to a brief reference to the derivation of the name Maccabees and to the man who was looked upon as the founder, Judas Maccabaeus. The most probable meaning of the word Maccabaeus was hero. The meaning gradually widened to include first "brothers," then "blood relations" and afterwards "fellow-warriors."

In the long roll of Israelitish worthies no more striking personality was met with than that of Judas Maccabaeus. His piety was manifest to all. His motives were pure and unselfish. He fought for God's glory and his country's good. No greater wish could any member of the lodge have than that such an epitaph might be written on his grave. Mr. Smith laid great emphasis on the fact that Judas Maccabaeus had spent the day before the battle in fasting and prayer. And drew attention to the wonderful lack of prayer in Smith was sure that if called upon to prepare for battle for King and country, the response would be an other battle to-day, namely, national righteousness to be fought at the polls, clean living and abolishing the drink evil and preservation of Sunday. He asked that the merchants, who were amongst the Maccabees to close up early Sunday night so that the clerks would not have to run around with parcels, Sunday morning. He also asked that the sanctity of the Sabbath should be preserved which could not be accomplished by having a cheap colored supplemented vulgar American paper left on the door step Sunday morning. A warm appeal was extended to every Knight to follow the example of the man whose name they bore.

AT AUSTIN'S.

$30,000 Surplus Stock to be Cleared Out in Six Weeks

It is the unexpected that always happens, is an old saying. It has been proved true this year in regard to the weather. After the unusually severe winter weather which restricted every Spring trade, most people looked for an early warm spring, but it didn't come. As a result we have $30,000 Worth of Stock Here, which we had calculated would be sold previous to June. We cannot afford to keep it here for several good reasons. FIRST—We need the room for other lines which will be coming in August, and which were contracted for months ago when prices were lower than they are to-day at the mills. SECONDLY—We need the money because a cash business needs prompt cash to buy in the cheapest market, and LASTLY, our policy is no matter what the loss, goods must be sold in the season they were bought for.

WHY WE CALL IT A RED TAG SALE.

Because every article that is reduced has a red tag or ticket with the special price marked on it in plain figures so you can readily see whether you are buying goods at special prices or not. All Goods Marked in Plain Figures, and strictly one price to all.

MORAN OF THE LADY LETTY...

By Frank Norris...

He looked carefully at the angry sky and swelling seas, noting the direction of the wind and set of the tide, then went forward and cast the anchor chains from the windlass in such a manner that the schooner must inevitably wrench free with the first heavy strain. The dory was still lugging at the line astern. Hoang dropped the sails in the boat, swung himself over the side and rowed calmly toward the station's wharf. If any notion of putting to sea with the schooner had entered the obscure, perverted cunning of his mind, he had almost instantly rejected it. Chatham was his aim. Once there and under the protection of his tongue, Hoang knew that he was safe. He knew the hiding places that the Sea Xup association provided for its members, hiding places whose very existence was unknown to the police of the white devil.

No one interrupted—no one even noticed his passage to the station. At best it was nothing more than a coolie carrying a couple of gunny sacks across his shoulder. Two hours later Hoang was lost in San Francisco's Chinatown.

At the sight of the schooner sweeping out to sea Wilbur was for an instant smitten rigid. What had happened? Where was Moran? Why was there nobody on board? A swift, sharp sense of some unnamed calamity leaped suddenly at his throat. Then he was aware of a clattering of hoofs along the road that led to the fort. Hodgson threw himself from one of the horses that were used in handling the surf boat and ran to him, hatless and panting.

"Look!" he shouted. "Look! Your schooner! Do you see her? She broke away after I'd started to tell you—to tell you—to tell you—your girl there on board—it was horrible!"

"Is she all right?" cried Wilbur at top voice, for the clamor of the gale was increasing every second.

"All right! No; they've killed her—somebody—the coolies, I think—knifed her! I went out to ask you people to come into the station to have supper with me!"

"Killed her! Killed her! Who? I don't believe you!"

"Wait—to have supper with me, and I found her there on the cabin floor. She was still breathing. I carried her up on deck. There was nobody else aboard. I carried her up and laid her on the deck, and she died there. Just now I came after you to tell you, and—"

"But—great heavens, man! Who killed her? Where is she? Oh! But of course it isn't true! How did you know? Moran killed! Moran killed!"

"And the schooner broke away after I started!"

"Moran killed! But—but she's not dead yet! We'll have to see!"

"She died on the deck. I brought her up and laid her on—"

"How do you know she's dead? Where is she? Come on; we'll go right back to her—to the station!"

"She's on board—out there!"

"Where—where is she? Man, tell me where she is!"

"Out there aboard the schooner. I brought her up on deck—left her on the schooner—on the deck—she was stabbed in the throat—and then came after you to tell you. Then the schooner—"

Boils were so painful could not sleep at night.

APPEARED ON NECK, LEGS AND ARMS.

It is well-known to all that bad blood is the direct cause of all skin diseases and it is necessary for the blood to be cleansed before the eruptions will disappear. For this purpose there is nothing to equal Burdock Blood Bitters as the thousands of testimonials we have on hand will testify.

Mr. Willard Thompson, McNeill's Mills, P.E.I., writes us as follows: "I wish to state to you that Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Some time ago my blood got out of order and many boils appeared on my neck, legs and arms. They were so painful that I could not sleep at night. After having tried many different remedies without any success, I finally decided, on the advice of a friend, to use Burdock Blood Bitters. Before I had quite used two bottles the boils had completely disappeared, and I wish to emphasize the fact that I think Burdock Blood Bitters the best blood purifier on the market to-day."

Lummy Jim

er broke away while I was coming. She's drifting out to sea now."

"Where is she? Where is she?"

"Who—the girl, the schooner—which one? The girl is on the schooner, and the schooner—that's her, right there—she's drifting out to sea."

Wilbur put both hands to his temples, closing his eyes.

"I'll go back!" exclaimed Hodgson. "We'll have the surf boat out and get after her. We'll bring the body back!"

"No," cried Wilbur. "It's better—this way. Leave her; let her go; she's going out to sea—out to sea again!"

"But the schooner won't live two hours outside in this weather. She'll go down."

"It's better—that way. Let her go. I want it so."

"I can't stay; I can't stay here!" said the other. "There's a storm coming up, and I've got to be at my station."

Wilbur did not answer. He was watching the schooner.

"I can't stay!" cried the other again. "If the patrol should signal—I can't stop here; I must be on duty. Come back; you can't do anything!"

"No!"

"I have got to go!" Hodgson ran back, swung himself on the horse and rode away at a furious gallop, inclining his head against the gusts.

And the schooner in a world of flying spray, white scud and driving spindrift, her cordage humming, her forefoot churning, the flag at her peak straining stiff in the gale, came up into the narrow passage of the Golden Gate, riding high upon the outgoing tide.

On she came, swinging from crest to crest of the waves that kept her company and that ran to meet the ocean, shouting and calling out beyond clouds there under the low, scudding clouds.

Wilbur had climbed to the top of the old fort. Erect upon its granite ledge he stood and watched and waited.

Not once did the Bertha Miller falter in her race. Like an unbidden force, all restraint shaken off, she ran free toward the ocean as to her pasture land. She came nearer, nearer, rising and rolling with the sea, her bowsprit held out west, pointing like a finger out to sea to the west—out to the world of romance. And then at last, as the little vessel drew opposite the old fort and passed not a hundred yards away, Wilbur, watching from the rampart, saw Moran lying upon the deck with outstretched arms and calm, upturned face; lying upon the deck of that lonely schooner as upon a bed of honor, still and calm, her great braids smooth upon her breast.

Her arms wide; alone with the sea—alone in death as she had been in life. She passed out of his life as she had come into it—alone upon a derelict ship abandoned to the sea. She went out with the tide, out with the storm; out, out, out to the great gray Pacific that knew her and loved her and that shouted and called for her and that dived in the joy of her as she came to meet him like a bride to meet a bridegroom.

"Goodby, Moran!" shouted Wilbur as she passed. "Goodby, goodby, Moran! You were not for me—not for me! The ocean is calling for you, dear. Don't you hear him? Don't you hear him? Goodby, goodby, goodby!"

The schooner swept by, shot like an arrow through the swirling currents of the Golden Gate and dipped and bowed and courted to the Pacific that reached toward her his myriad curling fingers. They inhaled her, held her close and drew her swiftly, swiftly out to the great, heaving bosom, tumultuous and beating in its mighty joy, its savage exultation of possession.

Wilbur stood watching. The little schooner lessened in the distance, became a shadow in mist and flying spray, a shadow moving upon the face of the great waste of water. Fainter and fainter she grew, vanished, reappeared, was heaved up again, a mere speck upon the western sky, a speck that dwindled and dwindled, then slowly melted away into the gray of the horizon.

LOG-ROLLING SEASON NOW OPEN ON OUR FREE NORTHERN RIVERS.

Operations of the Hardy River Driver and How He Manages to Steer Safely Down Dangerous Courses—How the Men Live and Work—Courage, Endurance and Physical Strength Are Necessary.

The log-driving season has opened again, and according to all the present indications it promises to prove a notable one. An unusually large number of logs, starting far up on the northern rivers, will be floated down stream to the towns, where the wood will be used for the manufacture of pulp, or turned into lumber at the sawmills.

During the protracted winter, with its steady cold and frequent snowfalls, the logging roads remained in excellent condition for the passage of the heavily-laden sledges, and all the winter's cut of logs, although said to be one of the largest on record, was taken out of the woods successfully.

The work in the logging camps ends each year when the entire cut has been hauled from the forest and is placed on the frozen surface of the rivers, or stacked in piles along the banks, to await the future opening of the waterway. When the men of the summer months, the men lead a life of unceasing activity, as they follow and guide the drives on their turbulent journey to the mills.

Cause and Location of the Jams. The logs are often arrested in their course, and many of them become stranded on shallow spots or half-covered rocks. Others, drifting against the piers of one of the numerous bridges, effectually block a portion of the channel, until, as the drive presses down stream, the logs are piled up on every side in almost impenetrable confusion. A "jam" containing thousands of logs is often formed in a few hours; yet days of labor are required of the river drivers before the channel is free again.

The difficulties greatly increase when the weather conditions are unfavorable, and extended drought or violent storms seriously impede the progress of the drives, and render them unusually late in reaching the mills. Last year a heavy loss resulted from such an experience on one of the rivers. The stream had been kept remarkably clear by a system of booms, outlining the channel and guiding the logs down the current. Suddenly, in the midst of a violent rainstorm, a cloudburst occurred, and among the mountains, Brooks and creeks were turned into torrents, small bridges and culverts were carried away, and with almost incredible rapidity the river rose and swept over its banks.

Logs which had been stranded in preceding dry weather were torn from the rocks and shallows and flung by the force of the raging waters against every obstacle that barred their way. The low-lying islands were heaped with logs, which were tossed far up above the level of the water. At one of the largest bridges the booms were swept aside like straws, and a double jam was formed in the river, mounting fully 12 feet in height and containing 1,000 feet of logs, this formation completely dammed the river, which, rising eight feet in less than an hour, flooded the intervals on either side. Breaking through a portion of the jam at last, the water subsided with equal rapidity, leaving masses of logs high and dry in every direction.

The storm took place in the middle of the night, and the river-men, returning to work the next morning, were amazed to find their easy task transformed into one of exceeding difficulty, and weeks of strenuous labor were necessary before the damage could be undone.

Could scarcely get up or down without help.

Had a severe pain in the small of the back.

Was treated in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, but not cured.

Kidney trouble was the trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Cured Mr. George Graves, Pitts Ferry, Ont., of a very bad case of kidney trouble.

He tells about the cure in the following words: "I cannot recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly. I never took anything that did me so much good. I had a severe pain in the small of my back and could scarcely get up or down without help. I could hardly urinate, but when I took Doan's Kidney Pills, I was in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, in winter, and when I came out I was some better but not cured. It was then I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. Since taking them I have been completely cured and have not had any trouble with my kidneys since."

Tools Used by the River-Men.

The river-men's tools are few in number, but well adapted to their special purpose. Most of the work is done with cant-hook, or peavey, a stout wooden pole, shod at the end with an iron spike. A movable arm is added, which, adjusting itself to the shape of the logs, grasps them so firmly that even the heaviest are managed with comparative ease. A long, slender pike-pole is also used in getting the floating logs. With these two implements and an ordinary axe, the most obstinate jam is generally conquered. Dynamite is employed on rare occasions, but only as a last resort. Its use in the immediate vicinity of bridges is forbidden, and the logs which gather against the piers, no matter how tightly they may be wedged, must be dislodged with the cant-hook. The log-driver's task is one of much danger. The footing is often insecure, even for the skilful tread of the river-man, who is shod in boots that are heavily spiked on the poles. As the logs are twisted and rent from their places, the mass of lumber moves and settles at most unexpected moments. The men are extraordinarily quick in retreating over the rolling logs, but occasionally a serious accident happens, when, as some "key log" is chopped in two, a portion of the jam is suddenly released and carries the river-men with it in its fall. When the men are working in dangerous positions, the long and pointed river-driver's boat is usually kept in waiting, and is ready to lend its aid in any emergency. It is also frequently used in transporting the log-drivers.

One of the favorite feats of the river-men is to use some floating log as a boat, and balancing themselves with the pike-pole, they often travel down stream with the current, poling themselves to the shore when they wish to land. The men show a pardonable pride in their ability to ride the plunging logs. The most expert are able, in a steady current, to slowly change to a sitting position, or even to lie at full length on the log, a performance which many an amateur might dread with so unstable a medium beneath his feet.

A number of horses accompany the river-drivers, and by means of a peculiar hook and chain they drag the stranded logs from the islands or river banks, where the use of the cant-hook would involve too much time and trouble. Portions of the drive drift far up the creeks, and these also are brought back to the river by horse-power, the drivers riding the logs all the way.

How the Men Live and Work. The crews of river-drivers generally consist of 50 or 60 men. They are directed by a "working boss," as he is called, who always accompanies the crew. A "walking boss," somewhat higher in authority, exercises a more general oversight. The life is one of constant exposure, but the men are well cared for in their camps, and the wages are good, ranging from $2 to $2.50 per day. Courage, endurance, and physical strength are necessary qualities in their occupation. The men are often knee-deep in water for many hours throughout the day, and a careless step or a rolling log may often result in still deeper immersion. Yet no attention is paid to damp clothing, and many a time the tired log-driver throws himself down at night without change.

The camp is composed of a number of tents, and is moved along the banks of the river as the men advance in their work. All the cumbersome and varied equipment, bedding, cooking utensils and food supplies are easily transported in the "wagons" and the frequent changes of camping ground are made with wonderful rapidity.

At one end of the little settlement the sleeping tents are erected, each one accommodating about 24 men. The kitchen tent is of prime importance, for an immense amount of cooking is necessary to supply the men with their four daily meals. The fireplace stands before the tent, and kettles of coffee, soup and potatoes are hung over the blazing fire. Bread is baked in a tin kitchen, and the tables in the tent show a tempting array of nicely-browned loaves, cookies and pies. The cook is an important personage in the camp, and much of its comfort is due to his skill and the authority he exercises over the men.

Breakfast is served at daybreak, after which the work on the river begins. At 9 o'clock, and again at 2, the men are furnished with substantial meals, which are carried to them by wagon, if their work has taken them far from the camp. At 7 o'clock a steaming supper awaits them on their return.

The river-men, therefore, are not without comforts, in spite of some of the primitive surroundings, and seem content with their lot. Undaunted by the constant and exhausting toil, they apparently find a strong fascination in the wild, free life of the river, and year after year, at the opening of spring, they return to follow the drives.

How Cossacks Catch Fish. The Cossacks on some of the rivers in Russia have a singular method of catching the fatty fish in winter. They cut a long trench across a river when frozen and run a net from one bank to the other; then, riding several miles up the stream, they form a line across the frozen surface and gallop their horses down toward the nets. The fish, hearing the noise and clatter of hoofs, become frightened, dart with a rush downstream and are thus entangled in the net.

The Cause, Not the Effect. Little Lucy Brown, while running in the yard one day, suddenly tripped and fell. Her mother, being attracted by the child's screams, rushed out, crying, "Why, Lucy, what's the matter? Was it an accident?"

"N'm," replied Lucy, between her sobs, "it was a brick."

LACROSSE

BERT IS A STAR.

The Toronto Globe of Friday last in speaking of the "Chippewas" team said:—"On the home, Frank Moran, with all his old-time speed and clever stick handling, will make his second visit to a Toronto audience, and he will not disappoint. With him Ross, a young Toronto, who gives great promise and is fast and clever, will make his debut. He looks like one of the finds of the season."

The Ross spoken of is Bert Ross, who played with our own Chatham team last year.

To-day's Mail says of Bert Ross' work in the game on Saturday against St. Catharines, in which the Chippewas won by a score of 5-3:—"Ross in Toronto was one of the stars of the game." The Globe says: "Ross in centre used his legs to good advantage and kept the home well-fed."

THE SATELLITE

This weather looks pretty good to me.

Suffering smokers, will there be no trains to Erieau this summer?

The thirteenth of the month today. It's probably an unlucky day.

Wallaceburg will have a chance to see a good Regiment on the first of July.

The circus got several chaps up at daybreak who had never seen the sun rise for many moons before.

If there will be no trains to Erieau this summer I'll have to start training so I can wheel out every night.

The soldiers of the 24th Regiment expect to have a sweet time when they strike the Wallaceburg sugar factory.

Canadians won't forget that "foreigner" snarled at one of our Empire's heroes, Mr. Tin-Pot-Titled Laurier. Not much!

I knew a girl once who used to live in Chatham. Her name was Fortune and everybody called her Misfortune.

When Laurier told the Canadian Parliament Dundonald was "a foreigner" his bosom pal Bourassa was ready with the applause.

The Mail-Empire says that the Hon. Sydney Fisher is too loquacious. He's just as bad as our fishers around here—Vide Vitel Goudreau, G. S. Heyward, E. J. MacIntyre.

Same old circus.
Same old parade.
Same old concert.
Same old lemonade—
This is quite enough.

How Canadians must have thrilled with pride when they heard their Premier, the pretty, empty, tin-pot-titled Laurier, sneering at the hero of Lady Smith, whose honors and titles were worthily won in gallant achievements for our Empire, at "a foreigner!"

Henri Bourassa, Laurier's chum and the man who raised such a protest against Canadian snubbing with the Empire in South Africa, naturally quote approval of the recall of that "foreigner" Dundonald, who brought such prestige and honor to the British Empire by his gallant relief of Lady Smith.

When Connie out of the House did so, His face it wore a look of woe; But he came back all rosy and bright, And he came back as "Sunny Jim."

Mr. Connie returned with: I come back a "Sunny Jim." I guess I took away your grim; If the men behind had stood by you, They'd have been doing at the

IN LOVE'S EMBRACE.

American Youth Gets a Rib Broken by an Impulsive Canadian and Victim Sues for Damages.

A despatch from Lockport, New York, says Walter Lorraine of Riga, Monroe County, has brought an action against Marie Du Calm of Niagara Falls, to recover damages. It is charged by Lorraine that Miss Du Calm hugged him so tightly as to break one of his ribs.

It appears that last winter the plaintiff was visiting in Ottawa. While there he met the defendant, who was visiting an aunt in the Canadian city. Mutual subjects of interest drew the young people into an acquaintanceship that speedily developed into an attachment of a deeper nature. Lorraine overstayed his original time, and the young woman also found it more agreeable than she had anticipated in the province. The ice carnival was at its height and the young people decided to go to Quebec to visit it and also to secure a number of photographic views, both being ardent amateur photographers.

The visit was made and conversation was punctuated with the click of the kodak. Lorraine was to turn home on the following day, and it was decided to develop the negatives that night. At the home of the defendant's aunt there had been fitted up a temporary dark room for the use of Miss Du Calm while she was visiting, and the room was fitted with the regular ruby lamp. That's where the red rays enter into the case.

Several negatives had been developed, and one in particular appealed to the enthusiastic nature of the defendant. As she saw the image of the gay scenes which they had witnessed earlier in the day, she was completely carried away. With a gurgling "Ooh, Walter, doesn't anything like that make you love nature? I'm just going to give you a big hug," she hurled herself at the plaintiff. As her arms encircled him there was a cracking sound, and Lorraine uttered a cry of pain.

Interest in the negative terminated and the plaintiff was assisted into an adjoining room. His pallor alarmed the defendant and she had a physician summoned. He decided that Lorraine had suffered a fracture of one of the ribs on the right side. Lorraine underwent the usual treatment, and under the pain incident to the knitting of the fractured ribs his return to Riga he talked the matter over with his friends, and they urged the bringing of an action to recover for his injuries. The advice of his counselors prevailed, and he wrote and suggested that the expense incurred in treatment of his injuries be paid for by the defendant. She refused to listen to such proposition, and then the law was called in.

In defence of her action Miss Du Calm sets up that she is an affectionate and clinging nature, that that fact was well known to the plaintiff, and that up to the time of the unfortunate incident or accident, she had shown no disinclination to submit to caresses and kisses. Furthermore, it is set forth that this time complained of was involuntary and due to the effect of the red rays of light radiating from the use of the ruby lamp, that it is a recognized scientific fact that the red rays are the most strenuous and likely to provoke excitability in one of ardent temperament and, their effect upon the defendant is and was at the time alleged in the complaint known to the plaintiff, wherefore judgment is asked that the complaint be dismissed with costs to the defendant.

A BEAUTIFUL BOOK.

The above caption is what every one is saying about the new publication on the World's Fair issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System. It is without doubt the most artistic and beautiful of any published in connection with the World's Fair. The book contains 48 pages with descriptive matter of the main features of the Exposition profusely illustrated, and embodies the latest and best maps of the City of St. Louis, showing street car lines and many other features, also a map of the Grand Trunk Railway System showing the route to and from the Fair, as well as variable routes and attractive side trips that will appeal to their patrons. A chapter on "How to Reach St. Louis" is given, and all the information that prospective visitors to the Fair are looking for. The publication is not only one that will interest everybody who secures a copy, but will be a handy guide to those who take in the Exposition. Copy can be had for four cents in stamps, on application to J. D. McDonald, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

The Grand Trunk will on June 13th commence to operate a double service direct to St. Louis from Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, London, etc.
