"ECHOES of the Past; OR, The Recompense of Love!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

They went up to the ward, and Clive and Quilton stood beside the bed and looked at the woman. Her face was quite calm now and her dark eyes, after resting on their faces for a moment, gazed vacantly before her.

"Poor woman," said Clive. "She does not appear to be in any pain. How long may she remain like this?"

The house surgeon shrugged his shoulders. "Impossible to say," he said, by no means callously, but in a matter-of-fact way. "She may be in this condition, for some time, months, years, perhaps—I've known such cases; on the other hand, she may recover her full senses and memory at any moment. If she goes on as she is going now, she will be able to leave the hospital in a week or two. She will want looking after, and the trouble is that she can tell us nothing of her friends; we cannot communicate with them, for there is nothing about her, no letter or anything of that kind, to help us to identify her."

"We must do something for her," said Clive uncertainly.

Quilton had not yet spoken, but had looked down at the white and now placid face with an impassive countenance. As Clive hesitated, however, Quilton said in a casual manner:

"I think I know a woman who would look after her. She lives in a house in one of the slums you were good enough to take me to. She is the widow of a compositor I happened to know—one of The Beacon men—and she would be glad to take charge of her for a small weekly sum."

"That is very good of you, Quilton," said Clive warmly.

He thanked him again when he got outside, but Quilton, as he lit his pipe, waved the thanks aside.

"Oh, that's all right," he said. "We'll share it between us. I mean, you can pay the money—for, of course, your dukeship would insist upon that—and I'll do the rest. You've got enough on your hands already, and can't be expected to worry about a little affair of this kind. By the way, I'll step back and tell them to send me word when she is fit to be moved. Don't you bother yourself; I'll look after her. What a nuisance the force of example is; going about and talking with a professional philanthropist one catches the troublesome disease. If I see much more of you I shall be taking to district visiting and Dorcas meetings."

With a curt nod and an air of boredom, he turned on his heel and re-entered the hospital.

Clive's affairs were numerous and pressing enough to drive the woman out of his head. There was to be a general election, and it was to take place at once, so that it might be over before the hay harvest, and the country was soon plunged into the usual state of confusion and excitement which is entailed by a general appeal to the free and independent electorate. It was necessary that Clive should go down to Brimleigh without delay, for already his agent there had written to tell him that he would be opposed by a strong Conservative candidate; and he hinted that another candidate, from the extreme Radical and Socialist side, might also take the field.

The Chesterleights were full of enthusiasm and energy on Clive's account, and when Clive told them that he must go down to Brimleigh to begin the fight, Lord Chesterleigh looked up quickly and said, with a smile:

"What do you say, Edith, shall we go down and help him?"

She responded at once and as enthusiastically.

"Why, of course!" she exclaimed. "We'll go down in force, father; and I'll canvass for him."

"And you'll help him to win, my dear. But you must do our part of the canvassing. I can take no part in it; a peer, you know, must not interfere in an election."

"I'll work like a Trojan. We'll take all the carriages down and we'll paint the place red!" Red was Clive's color. "I'll kiss all the babies, and tell the mothers that they are the finest—the babies, I mean—I've ever seen. Of course, you'll win, Clive?"

"With such aid failure would be impossible," said Clive.

They went down to Brimleigh, the Chesterleights going to the house of a friend, Lady Wynthaw, and Clive putting up at the Liberal hotel, the Royal Hart. They found the place in great excitement, for Brimleigh took electioneering seriously, and the campaign began in stern earnest.

Lady Edith threw herself into the contest with all the ardor she had promised. She drove over from the Grange, Lady Wynthaw's place, every morning, her carriage and horses bedecked with Clive's colors; she canvassed from house to house; and if she did not actually kiss the babies, she flattered the mothers and badgered the husbands and fathers into the present accepted fashion. For that occasion she cast aside her natural hauteur and was all smiles and graciousness, and she sat on platforms behind Clive and listened to his speeches with an eager intentness and pride which duly impressed the audiences.

She appeared to be incapable of weariness, and treated Clive's remonstrances with laughing defiance, reminding him that his cause was hers and that he would need all the help she could get. And she spoke truly, for the third candidate had appeared, a rough, but eloquent man, a Socialist, who had come down accompanied by a band of men as rough and determined as himself. Among them was Koshki, the anarchist, and Clive, when he met him in the street and was scowled at by Koshki, knew that he had not only to fight political foes but a personal enemy. Mr. Broddy, the third candidate, and his friends did not mince their language or exhibit any care in the selection of their phrases when they addressed the electors, but called Mr. Clive Harvey a fraud and a hypocrite, and a traitor to the people of whom he was supposed to be a friend; but the Conservative candidate fought the fight in a pleasant and gentlemanly fashion, and he and Clive met in quite a friendly way.

"That chap Broddy," he said to Clive, with a hearty laugh, "will ruin you. He'll split the Liberal vote and let me in, you'll see! But for him, I shouldn't stand a chance."

"All's fair in love, war and electioneering," responded Clive, with a laugh. "I'd rather you got in, Gordon, than Mr. Broddy. But I'm not beat yet."

"That's so," said Gordon. "And you have the pull of me; I can't talk a bit, and you can jaw the hind leg off a donkey. And then there's Lady Edith! Frankly, I do envy you there! But I don't bear any grudge and, by George, such a charming lady ought to have her own way! Why haven't I a wife or a sweetheart to fight for me?"

This was very pleasant; far more pleasant than to stand by and hear—and Clive often did stand by and hear—Mr. Broddy and Koshki informing the working men that he, Clive, was a miscreant, not only unworthy to sit in the House of Commons, but to live.

At election times, local charities flourish exceedingly, for those who are connected with them are cute enough to appreciate the fact that hay should be made while the sun is shining, and that at no period are candidates so liberal and generous as when they are seeking the suffrages of the elector. The pet charity at Brimleigh, and a very worthy one, by the way, was an orphanage, and the governors shrewdly decided on giving a concert in aid of its funds; and as shrewdly obtained all three candidates and their friends as their patrons; charity, as we know, has no politics, and by thus coralling all the political parties, the governors maintained their partiality and avoided invidious selection.

The result promised to be a brilliant financial success. Lady Edith wanted to buy up all the tickets and distribute them among Clive's supporters, but Clive pointed out that this would be bribery in its most obvious and overt form, and she had to content herself with making up a huge party which was to drive down to the hall with literally flying colors. Clive wished to absent himself, but Lady Edith and the rest of the ladies declared that he certainly must be present.

"Why, it would never do!" said Lady Edith. "It is the great event of the year at Brimleigh; they eat and drink and sleep concert; and it would look as if you were indifferent. Besides, Mr. Gordon and that horrid man Broddy will be sure to be there. Oh, of course you must go, dearest. And you must clap like mad and endorse everything. And really I think it is going to be a very good concert. Have you seen the programme? Where is it? I had it somewhere this morning. Oh, I remember, I gave it

A Remedy For All Pain

"The efficiency of any drug," says Dr. C. P. Robbins, "is known to us by the results we obtain from its use. If we are able to control pain and disease by means of any preparation, we certainly are warranted in its use. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and this is what the patient most often applies to us for. I am something to relieve his pain. If we can arrest this promptly, the patient is most liable to trust in us for the other remedies which will effect a permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is Anti-kamnia Tablets. Many and varied are their uses. I have put them to the test on many occasions, and have never been disappointed. I found them especially valuable for headaches of malarial origin, where quinine was being taken. They appear to prevent the bad after-effects of the quinine. Anti-kamnia Tablets are also excellent for the headaches from improper digestion; also for headaches of a neuralgic origin, and especially for women subject to pains at certain times. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets give prompt relief, and also shorten the patient's time to go about as usual. These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for Anti-kamnia Tablets. They are also unexcelled for headaches, neuralgia and all pains."

to a woman in that dirty little street at the back of the Town Hall. Shall I ever forget that street!" She shuddered, then laughed. "Ah, don't think I mind, Clive! I'd live in the slums if, by doing so, I could help you to get anything you want."

"I know," he said in a low voice, with a pang of remorse and self-reproach as he kissed the arm which she had thrown around his neck.

"But about this concert, dear," she went on. "It will really be worth going to, for they have engaged some good people; they have got that new girl one hears so much of lately—what is her name?—Veronica Vernon. Father heard her at Manchester and was quite enthusiastic about her. You must go; and we must sit in the front row and look delighted with everything and everybody."

Clive shrugged his shoulders. "Your majesty has but to command and this slave has only to obey," he said.

"Slave! Ah, which is the slave, I wonder!" she said, with a sigh, as she smoothed his hair which her embracing arm had roughened.

Lady Wynthaw had arranged a dinner-party for the night of the concert, a huge dinner-party which was to go on from the Grange to the hall. Clive, who came in to dinner rather late—he had to address a meeting that afternoon—was rather tired and a trifle dispirited, for he had found his audience rather cold and inimical, no doubt owing to the fact that Messrs. Broddy and Koshki had addressed them earlier in the day, and he was rather silent and thoughtful amid the merriment which prevailed, for it seemed to the party, dining cozily and luxuriously, that it would be impossible for their candidate to be beaten.

The dinner was necessarily short, for the concert began at seven-thirty, and, hurrying through their meal, the party set out in the best of spirits.

"You look tired, dearest," said Lady Edith, leaning forward in the carriage, her hand stealing into Clive's.

"Little wonder," said Lord Chesterleigh. "For the first time in my life I realize one of the advantages of being a peer; one hasn't to contest an election. But it will soon be over; we shall have a big majority and all will be beer and skittles."

"It is you who should be tired, Edith," said Clive, "and I shall be glad when it is over, for your sake. How much you have done for me!"

Though it was early, they found the hall nearly full. As he entered, Clive saw his opponents, Mr. Gordon and Mr. Broddy, in the front seats. Mr. Gordon bowed and smiled; Broddy, who had Koshki beside him, scowled. As Clive seated himself, he caught sight of Sara, who had, of course, come down with her mistress to Brimleigh, in the seat behind him. The organ, of which Brimleigh was justly proud, played an overture and the concert proper began.

Each performer was received with unstinted applause, each song and instrumental piece was encored, and the directors, at the back of the platform, beamed with complacent satisfaction. Presently there was a little lull, followed by the stir of anticipation which marks the appearance of a bright and particular star.

Lady Wynthaw had arranged a dinner-party for the night of the concert, a huge dinner-party which was to go on from the Grange to the hall. Clive, who came in to dinner rather late—he had to address a meeting that afternoon—was rather tired and a trifle dispirited, for he had found his audience rather cold and inimical, no doubt owing to the fact that Messrs. Broddy and Koshki had addressed them earlier in the day, and he was rather silent and thoughtful amid the merriment which prevailed, for it seemed to the party, dining cozily and luxuriously, that it would be impossible for their candidate to be beaten.

The dinner was necessarily short, for the concert began at seven-thirty, and, hurrying through their meal, the party set out in the best of spirits.

"You look tired, dearest," said Lady Edith, leaning forward in the carriage, her hand stealing into Clive's.

"Little wonder," said Lord Chesterleigh. "For the first time in my life I realize one of the advantages of being a peer; one hasn't to contest an election. But it will soon be over; we shall have a big majority and all will be beer and skittles."

"It is you who should be tired, Edith," said Clive, "and I shall be glad when it is over, for your sake. How much you have done for me!"

Though it was early, they found the hall nearly full. As he entered, Clive saw his opponents, Mr. Gordon and Mr. Broddy, in the front seats. Mr. Gordon bowed and smiled; Broddy, who had Koshki beside him, scowled. As Clive seated himself, he caught sight of Sara, who had, of course, come down with her mistress to Brimleigh, in the seat behind him. The organ, of which Brimleigh was justly proud, played an overture and the concert proper began.

Each performer was received with unstinted applause, each song and instrumental piece was encored, and the directors, at the back of the platform, beamed with complacent satisfaction. Presently there was a little lull, followed by the stir of anticipation which marks the appearance of a bright and particular star.

to a woman in that dirty little street at the back of the Town Hall. Shall I ever forget that street!" She shuddered, then laughed. "Ah, don't think I mind, Clive! I'd live in the slums if, by doing so, I could help you to get anything you want."

"I know," he said in a low voice, with a pang of remorse and self-reproach as he kissed the arm which she had thrown around his neck.

"But about this concert, dear," she went on. "It will really be worth going to, for they have engaged some good people; they have got that new girl one hears so much of lately—what is her name?—Veronica Vernon. Father heard her at Manchester and was quite enthusiastic about her. You must go; and we must sit in the front row and look delighted with everything and everybody."

Clive shrugged his shoulders. "Your majesty has but to command and this slave has only to obey," he said.

"Slave! Ah, which is the slave, I wonder!" she said, with a sigh, as she smoothed his hair which her embracing arm had roughened.

49th Day of the War

Latest From the Front.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 26.
The Governor, Newfoundland:
In France the enemy succeeded in re-occupying some portions of the central trenches of the salient lost in Champagne.

Near Riga, six violent German attacks have been repulsed and fierce attacks beyond Ilukst also repulsed. On Oginski canal and at Chartorysk, counter-attacks have been repulsed, and at the latter point over a thousand prisoners captured.

The Italian offensive continues successfully.

In Serbia, near Stronmitza, the French have repulsed a Bulgarian attack. The pressure in the north continues.

German reports admit the sinking of the cruiser Prince Adalbert off Libau, and only a small portion of the crew rescued.

BONAR LAW.

SITUATION GRAVE.
SALONIKA, Oct. 26.
The situation in Serbia is grave, of course, but it is in no wise desperate, said a French officer. The Austrians and Germans have advanced less than twelve miles on the Danube front notwithstanding their numerical superiority. The line now held by the Bulgarians may prove to be perilous to them. You may say the French are fully alive to the situation and are not at all discouraged.

PLEGGED TO MAINTAIN NEUTRALITY.

LONDON, Oct. 26.
A cable to the Herald says S. J. Dillon telegraphs from Rome to the Daily Telegraph that he knows for an absolute fact that while the Greek cabinet is under no real obligations to the central empires, King Constantine is bound to the Kaiser by a solemn pledge to maintain neutrality toward Germany, the Kaiser agreeing to give Greece territorial compensations after the war, if she does not cast her lot with the Allies. To do him justice, says Dr. Dillon, King Constantine, it must be said, refused, despite threats, to draw sword on the side of Germany. Dr. Dillon is convinced that if the Allies send a big army to Serbia, the German conspiracy will fall and both Greece and Roumania then will support the entente; but the relieving force must be a big, a very big army.

RUSSIAN AID TO SERBIA.

PARIS, Oct. 26.
Russia has completed preparations for the despatch of strong forces of troops to help the Serbs at points where they are most needed, according to the Petit Parisien.

DEFEND BLACK SEA COAST.

LONDON, Oct. 26.
The report that Turkish troops are being concentrated at Burgas, Varna, and other points on the Black Sea coast of Bulgaria, is reiterated in a despatch received here to-day from Athens. The despatch says the Turks are to oppose the Russian attempts to land troops, having feared the latter could not be counted on to resist the Russians. A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that five thousand German soldiers from Constantinople are replacing Bulgarians at points on the Black Sea. The littoral defence of the coast has been entrusted to Germany.

BREACH WITH GREECE POSSIBLE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.
A News Agency despatch from London this afternoon, says that Britain's offer of Cyprus to Greece lapsed because Greece has not seen its way to helping Serbia. Foreign Minister Grey told the Commons to-day that a break between Greece and the Allies hinted at by the Central News to-day, was a possibility, and the suggestion was made that the Greeks might carry their neutrality ideas so far as to interfere with the Allied operations in the Balkans. A note handed by a representative of the Allies to the Greek Government is said to contain information that a break may occur if Greece takes such a stand or persists in her refusal to come to the aid of Serbia. The cabinet held a long session to discuss the Balkan situation and the report of Sir Ian Hamilton on the situation in the Dardanelles, to-day. Premier Asquith was so much better to-day that he was able to keep his engagement and attend the cabinet meeting.

FIGHTING IN CHAMPAGNE.

PARIS, Oct. 26.
Fighting has continued in the Champagne district, at Lacourtine, with limited fluctuations, according to an announcement made by the French War Office to-day. The stubborn French resistance and offensive activity of the French troops checked the counter-attacks of the Germans.

RELEASED FROM PRISON TO ENLIST FOR THE FRONT.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.
John D. G. McKinnon, Hamilton bank manager, now in Kingston Penitentiary, will be released to-morrow and permitted to enlist for the front. The Governor-General has decided to exercise clemency in his case. McKinnon, who was manager of the branch of the Union Bank, was sentenced about a year ago to three years in Kingston Penitentiary on a charge of embezzling $12,000.

DELCASSE'S SUCCESSOR.

PARIS, Oct. 26.
The expected decision with regard to a successor of Delcasse as Foreign Minister, was not reached at the Cabinet meeting this afternoon. It is probable, however, that the decision will not be long delayed.

LONDON'S AERIAL DEFENCE.

LONDON, Oct. 26.
The new defences of London against attacks by Zeppelins are gradually assuming shape, according to a statement made this afternoon by Sir Percy Scott, who is in charge of the work. In a statement read at the inquest held in the case of a Londoner killed during a Zeppelin attack, Sir Percy said the number of guns for defence against aircraft has been recently increased and further improvements as to their position, number and character are in contemplation. He asked the Treasury Solicitor, who read the statement, to warn the public to seek protection when Zeppelin raids were made, because of the danger of being struck

"CAN YOU AFFORD TO TAKE CHANCES?"

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known where serious complications and fatal illnesses have had their start from a neglected cough or cold.

A cold is more than inconvenient—it is dangerous—so the big thing is to find a reliable remedy—one that will give you quick, satisfactory relief. There are many treatments that are recommended for a cough or cold but "STAFFORD'S PHORATONE COUGH AND COLD CURE" is recommended to be the safest, surest and most satisfactory way to cure a cold, grippe, etc.

Price 25 cts.; Postage 5 cts. extra. Prepared only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld. Manufacturers of 3 Specialties: Stafford's Liniment, Stafford's Prescription "A," Stafford's Phoratone Cough & Cold Cure.

ATHENS, Oct. 26.
An official despatch announces that the Serbians have recaptured the town of Veles Krupulu on the railroad east of Uskup, after desperate fighting.

Gas in the Stomach is Dangerous.

A Warning Of Acid Indigestion. Prompt Use of Magnesia Stops All Sourness And Pain. Sufferers from indigestion or dyspepsia should remember that the presence of gas or wind in the stomach invariably indicates that the stomach is troubled by excessive acidity. This acid causes the food to ferment and the fermenting food in turn gives rise to noxious gases which distend the stomach, hamper the normal functions of vital internal organs, cause acute headaches, interfere with the action of the heart, and charge the blood stream with deadly poisons, which in time must ruin the health. Physicians say that to quickly dispel a dangerous accumulation of wind in the stomach and to stop the food fermentation which creates the gas, the acid in the stomach must be neutralized and that for this purpose there is nothing quite so good as a teaspoonful of pure bisulphated magnesia taken in a little water immediately after meals. This instantly neutralizes the acid, thus stopping fermentation and the formation of gas, and enables the inflamed, distended stomach to proceed with its work under natural conditions. Bisulphated magnesia is obtainable in powder or tablet form from any druggist; but as there are many different forms of magnesia it is important that the bisulphated which the physicians prescribe should be distinctly asked for.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

"Does an announcement of a wedding require a call upon the parents of the bride and when the bride gets home should I call upon her?" was Grace's problem. "An announcement does not require a call upon the parents of the bride but you should call upon the bride after the 'At Home' date specified on the announcement," said her sister.

Gas in the Stomach is Dangerous.

A Warning Of Acid Indigestion. Prompt Use of Magnesia Stops All Sourness And Pain. Sufferers from indigestion or dyspepsia should remember that the presence of gas or wind in the stomach invariably indicates that the stomach is troubled by excessive acidity. This acid causes the food to ferment and the fermenting food in turn gives rise to noxious gases which distend the stomach, hamper the normal functions of vital internal organs, cause acute headaches, interfere with the action of the heart, and charge the blood stream with deadly poisons, which in time must ruin the health. Physicians say that to quickly dispel a dangerous accumulation of wind in the stomach and to stop the food fermentation which creates the gas, the acid in the stomach must be neutralized and that for this purpose there is nothing quite so good as a teaspoonful of pure bisulphated magnesia taken in a little water immediately after meals. This instantly neutralizes the acid, thus stopping fermentation and the formation of gas, and enables the inflamed, distended stomach to proceed with its work under natural conditions. Bisulphated magnesia is obtainable in powder or tablet form from any druggist; but as there are many different forms of magnesia it is important that the bisulphated which the physicians prescribe should be distinctly asked for.

"Carry On,"

OUR MOTTO.

The latest casualty list of Prussia is probably the key to the report that Prince Von Buelow, former German Chancellor, will shortly submit to President Wilson and King Alfonso Germany's conditions of peace. The Central Powers have now shot their bolt in Belgium, France and Russia. The Italian campaign is going against them, and their only hope rests in the Balkans on the purchase of Bulgaria, and their intrigues with the court parties of Greece and Roumania. Germany would no doubt like to make peace before her growing exhaustion becomes more apparent. But it is unlikely that the Quadruple Entente would be so stupid as to make peace with Germany until her power of making trouble for the next generation or two has been taken from her as it surely will by the Quadruple Entente keeping up the pressure on her. The Kaiser is the King of Prussia, and it is as King of Prussia that he dominates Germany and through Germany Austria. In Prussia the Kaiser is practically autocratic, and it is to Prussia we must look for light on the situation. The Kaiser depends on the military strength of Prussia to dominate Germany. Out of a population of 65,000,000 in Germany, 40,000,000 people are found in Prussia. Less than half of these are males. The Prussian casualties to date, according to the Dutch despatch published to-day, exceed 2,000,000. This list shows that one male out of every ten males, no matter how young or how old, has been on a casualty list. The number of males between the ages of seventeen and fifty five is less than ten million. Out of this ten million male population of idlers, workers and fighters, two million soldiers have been met with some form of casualty, death, wounds, sickness or capture. To realize what this means we should call to mind that Newfoundland has about 60,000 males between 17 and 55, and if Newfoundland had suffered as Prussia has suffered, we should have a list of 12,000 casualties, or in other words our casualties would amount to four times the number of men we have contributed to the Army and Navy. This brings us to the point that Prussia is being rapidly depleted of men fit for fighting, and that she cannot stand bloodletting to the same extent

GREAT SPEECH
BY LANSDOWNE
ON WAR SITUATION

11.30 A.M.

SALONIKI EXPEDITION QUESTIONS.

LONDON, To-day.

Earl Loreburn asked whether the despatch of troops to Saloniki had been determined upon by the approval of naval and military advisers and whether the Government could give an assurance that full provision had been made for communications with this force, and for supplying men and material to the satisfaction of naval and military experts. Loreburn said he understood the Government's desire that the matter should not be debated at the present time, but that there was a reason for asking that question. We are disappointed in the Dardanelles enterprise, said Loreburn, and added he did not know whether the enterprise had commenced with or without the advice of naval and military authorities. One could not help asking whether this new venture would be a repetition of it. The greatest danger from which this country could suffer, the speaker said, was unpreparedness and decision. Lansdowne explained there were moments when it was not to the public interest that questions relating to war should be freely discussed in Parliament. The effect on both their allies and their enemies had to be considered. He declared he could assure Loreburn neither the present Government nor in any government which he had been a member had it been the practice or habit that amateur strategists should impose plans upon the professional advisers of the government. Lansdowne continued, it was unlikely anything of the kind could occur. Earl Kitchener was present at every Cabinet meeting and it was impossible to suppose he would allow himself to be deflected from his course by the pressure of his civilian colleagues; apart from that, the speaker added, the procedure by Committee of Council had given far greater opportunity to military and naval experts to assert themselves and make their views known, and the Cabinet as a whole to consider both naval, military and political aspects of the case, so ministers and their advisers took account of both sides of the problem, but whatever particular views were given by naval and military advisers, we understood he was to provide a force for the purpose of enabling Greece to fulfill her treaty obligations to Serbia. It was under such circumstances that we sent such troops as were available to Salonika. It was a small force because only a small force could be collected at the time. The French Government on their side despatched a force which is now on the spot, which apparently at this moment is engaged with the Bulgarians on the eastern frontier of Serbia. At the same time a larger force was prepared for service in southeastern Europe. Transports were taken out for the purpose of conveying it to its destination. I suggest these steps are incomplete. No doubt they were taken with great promptitude. They were ones which could be taken to relieve the position in Serbia. They were taken after full deliberation with naval and military advisers. The British force of Salonika was thirteen thousand in round numbers and may be regarded as the precursor of a larger force, which has been put under orders. At the same time, the use to which that force will be put, must depend on the situation when it arrives at the scene. Events moved very rapidly in that part of the world. There have been two quite recent developments which profoundly affected the military situation. The first was the deliberate decision of the Greek Government that her treaty engagements did not require her to go to the rescue of Serbia in the present momentous crisis, and the other is the progress of the campaign in northern Serbia. Lord Lansdowne, after giving some details of the position of the Serbian armies, expressed an opinion as to the outlook for Serbia which is quoted in the beginning of this despatch. He said the military plans must depend upon the military situation when the reinforcements arrive. Up to this point the Allies are of one mind. The military and naval advisers of Britain and France will consult, and until these consultations are concluded, I cannot say for what purpose the British force will be used. General Monro, who arrived in that part of the world to-day has been instructed to report as soon as possible his opinion on all the aspects of the case. Lord Loreburn need have no apprehension in this or any other matter of the kind that the Government is likely to be led into precipitate action, owing to some hurried impulse or some vague sentiment to achieve its object. At every step the Government will take the best naval and military advice obtainable, and that advice will have reference not only to new enterprise but to all subsidiary questions with regard to safeguarding communications and the supply of men and material. Lord Kitchener, said Lord Cromer, had been singularly parsimonious in his utterances in the Lords. Speaking candidly, the statements never contained much more than what we have already read in the daily papers. We want something which will show that there is a real grasp of the situation and to be told the general outline of what is being done about it.

Earl Cromer disassociated himself from those who wished to change the Government, and strongly advocated a smaller Cabinet. Loreburn who expressed dissatisfaction with Lansdowne's answer, supported, as did other members of the House, a smaller executive, and in reply Lord Curzon said Premier Asquith had this matter under consideration. Lansdowne said personally he favored a change.

THE KING IN FRANCE.
PARIS, To-day.
President Poincare and Minister of War Millerand, yesterday met King George on the Anglo-French front and reviewed the troops. To-day King George, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, returned the visit. With General Joffre, the French Commander-in-Chief, he witnessed the march past by the French Colonial troops and inspected the artillery observation sites and batteries.

SERBIA'S GALLANT STAND.
LONDON, To-day.
Serbian troops, which have been gallantly holding the little north-eastern corner where the Austro-German and Bulgarian armies are about to join up, are being slowly pushed back, as the pressure on them becomes greater. Marquis Lansdowne, Minister without portfolio, in the British Cabinet, regretfully announced in the Lords last night, he feared they could not much longer withstand the attacks. In fact all along the northeastern frontiers of Serbia, the invaders are making steady progress, although at great cost. The Serbians, now that they have reached the hills, are making them pay heavy for every mile covered. It is only in the south where the French have joined hands with the Serbians, that the Bulgarians are being held back.

The French and Serbians are entrrenching themselves and awaiting reinforcements, which they hope will enable them to drive the Bulgarians out of Macedonia. Britain and France, according to Lansdowne in the Lords, are despatching a strong force to the Near East and are only awaiting the report of General Munro, the new British Commander on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and other military and naval advisers to decide at which point they will be used. Britain and France, Lansdowne said, have taken up the challenge of the Central Powers in the Near East as elsewhere and were preparing to strike blow for blow. They hoped eventually to receive the support of Greece and Roumania, although they were not depending upon them. Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, to-day told the Commons that Britain's offer to cede Cyprus to Greece had lapsed. Greece had not fulfilled her treaty obligations to Serbia. The British Minister at Athens is reported to be making representations to Greece with respect to the use of Salonika as a base for the Allies, also with regard to Greece's future action.

Heavy fighting continues at the Riga and Dvinsk regions of Russia. German Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is undaunted by his repeated failure during the past forty days to reach the Russian fortresses on the Dvina River and is making another furious and determined effort to accomplish his aim. Reports to-day were to the effect that he had made further progress, particularly near Iloukst. Along the rest of the line, through the provinces of Vilna, Grodno, Volhonia and in Galicia there have been battles at many points and advances first on one side then on the other. The Italians are still carrying on their offensive against the Austrians, while the struggle in the Champagne region of France, which began when the French captured a portion of the Lacourtine works from the Germans, some of which the Germans have recaptured, is still in progress. The French claim they have extended their gains here by taking an adjoining trench north of Massiges.

SERBIA APPEALS FOR AID.

LONDON, To-day.
London newspapers this morning publish an appeal from M. Pachitch, Serbian Premier, for speedy aid from England. Serbia's efforts to defend her existence against the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians who have, he says, condemned her to death. For twenty days, he says, our common enemies have been attacking us. Despite the heroism of our soldiers, our resistance cannot be expected to be maintained indefinitely.

MANILLA, To-day.
A typhoon partly wiped out the town of Tobacco. A hundred were killed and the railroad line is washed away. The Governor-General is sending a relief expedition to the stricken district.

THIRTY-FOUR MORE VICTIMS OF GERMAN COURT MARTIAL.

AMSTERDAM, To-day.
According to Tvd, thirty-four additional death sentences against persons charged with espionage and treason were pronounced by court martial at Liege. The newspaper adds, Pope Benedict, the King of Spain and President Wilson have been appealed to by telegram to intervene on behalf of the condemned persons.

PUSHING BACK THE BULGARIANS.

SALONIKA, To-day.
The Bulgarians have been completely driven off Serbia on a line extending from the French sector of Kridato to Kokedvcan. They have been pushed back also from Veles to the outskirts of Nish, probably owing to their Komanoov-Tranya line untenable owing to the menace of Serbian attacks on both sides. Offensive operations against Nish have been ordered beyond Piro. The Austro-Germans are making most violent efforts but their progress is extremely slow. The city of Nish is tranquil and said to be in no immediate danger. The Government archives and Foreign Legations have been moved only as far as Kraljevo, where they are awaiting developments.

GERMANS REPULSED IN CONGO.

HAVRE, To-day.
An official despatch received by the Belgian Government states that a German force attacked the Belgian troops south of Kivu in the Congo. After nine hours' fighting, the despatch states, the Germans were driven back to the borders of German East Africa, leaving 68 dead and a quantity of munitions.

CONFERENCE AT BERLIN.

BERLIN, To-day.
The United States Ambassador Gerard declined to discuss for publication his conference yesterday with Emperor William. The conference lasted an hour.

FIERCE FIGHTING ON DVINA.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
The tension of fighting on the Ivinik-Riga front is increasing rapidly. This is particularly noticeable on the road to Riga where, owing to conditions, the Germans hope it will be easier to cross the Dvina than at any other point. The successful advance of the Russians debouching to the westward from the region of Shtansky, has greatly alarmed the Germans, as this spot is at the junction of Von Buelow's and Von Richthorn's armies. Should the Russians succeed in breaking through, the Dvinsk operations threatened by Germans would be completely frustrated. The Germans therefore have sent for special reinforcements with the object of covering their right flank to the rear of Von Buelow's army, thus linking it up with Richthorn's army.

QUESTIONS ABOUT PEACE.

LONDON, To-day.
When Premier Asquith returns to Commons to-morrow he will be asked by Annan Bryce whether unofficial exchanges of views have been carried on between Berlin and London with the possible object of conclusion of an early peace, and whether inquiries of similar nature have been made by official representatives of any neutral Power. Mr. Asquith will also be asked whether he still adheres to the declaration in his Guild Hall speech that Great Britain should not sheath her sword until the freedom of Europe was secured. Another of many questions to be addressed to the Premier is whether in view of defiance of international law by the German Emperor in ordering wholesale destruction of private property of civilians in this country, the Government will take steps to trace and sequester private estates in England of the German Emperor and rulers of German States and hold them as security for the present and the future caused by air raids.

REMAINS ARRIVE.

The remains of the late George H. Bishop, whose death occurred at Green's Harbor, P.E.I., on Monday last, were brought to the city by the local train to-day. Undertaken S. G. Collier is in charge of the funeral arrangements and interment takes place this afternoon at Betty Harbor, the birthplace of the deceased.

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $831,000.00, and a reserve fund of $229,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business, of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other business.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities, and administers their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

He Never Was a Boy.

By RUTH CAMERON.

One day this summer as a group of us were paddling up the river near our summer home, we came upon a crowd of boys swimming. At the sight of the canoe they cried out in delight and made for us, their white backs gleaming in the sunshine. As they flopped about us, racing with the canoe, awkwardly attempting difficult speed strokes, and in general showing off, one came too close and sent a shower of water into the boat. It drenched one of our number who was beautifully clad in white trousers.

He Couldn't Get Over It.

The other boys laughed and the boy who had done the mischief dove under water in mock terror. The man with the white trousers looked first taken aback then angry. One could not understand that. It is not particularly pleasant to be drenched. But the third change, which should have been to amusement (rueful perhaps), did not come. Instead he remained disgruntled throughout the trip and kept emitting grunts of disgust and comments such as "That boy ought to be tanned!" "They ought not to let them bathe in the river; they're a public nuisance," etc., etc. Finally he evoked a protest from another masculine member of the party. "Oh, come on, Jeff, forget about it! Your trousers are all dry." "It isn't that," said he with dignity; "it's because I hate to see boys always up to mischief." "In other words you hate to see boys," rejoined the other.

"The man-who-never-was-a-boy," that was what we nicknamed him after that. Don't you think there are a good many like him in the world?

Instead of having sympathy for a stage of development through which they once passed, they are irritated and antagonized by all its manifestations.

To me it is a particularly incomprehensible frame of mind, because it is one of the griefs of my life that I never have been and never shall be a small boy. It seems to me that there is no other age or condition that gets so much solid satisfaction out of life. If there is such a thing as reincarnation, I hope next time I shall have a chance to be a small boy. I don't care so much to be a man. I wouldn't mind being a woman after I grew up, but oh, to be a small boy from the age of seven to fourteen or fifteen, with his freedom, his energy, his mischievousness, his freckles, his self-consciousness and his unequalled capacity for having a stirring good time all the time!

Of course I am not defending everything the small boy does. I realize that the average small boy has an abysmal lack of respect for other people's property and rights and a fearful tendency to turn his energies into dangerous channels. But even with his faults I like the small boy better, oh, ever so much better! than the man-who-never-was-a-boy. Don't you?

A potato grown in Northwood, Kent, has "done its bit" to increase the supply of home produce. Having a remarkable number of spores, it was cut into twenty-three pieces and planted on April 21st. Each piece grew, and when the crop was dug up a day or two ago it was found that the single tuber had produced as many as 267 potatoes, or about 30 lb. in weight.

News From Lawn.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—On October 18th a public meeting was held at Lawn to solicit funds to help our wounded soldiers and sailors now at the front.

The meeting was called to order at 8:15 p.m. by the Chairman, Mr. Alphonse Edwards, President of the Lawn Catholic Association. In a few well chosen words he told the audience the object of the meeting after which he called on Magistrate Benning to address the meeting. The Magistrate rose and read a telegraphic communication received from W. J. Gosling, Chairman of the Patriotic Committee at St. John's, which fully explained to the satisfaction of all the need of generous contributions. After the reading the Magistrate made a not lengthy but very impressive and powerful speech which was avidly taken in by all present. He alluded to the number of young men who had volunteered to serve their King and Country in the Army and Navy—eleven in number out of a population of 250. He also touched on the new call for volunteers by Lord Kitchener, and quoted the famous leader's words as to the efficiency of volunteers as against compulsory service men; the Magistrate added: "Give me the man who does a thing voluntarily for the good of all, the man who has to be driven to do his duty is in the way; but the worst man is he who not having spunk enough to volunteer himself discourages others from doing so. Such a man is always ready to avail himself of everything that comes his way but makes himself conspicuous by his absence at public meetings and his failure to come up with his little bit. His policy being take all but give nothing."

The successful fishery just closed was next touched on by the speaker showing conclusively that to our great Navy, the Pride of England her Colonies, the prosecution of said fishery was made possible. The Magistrate then addressed the ladies, of which there were a goodly number present, exhorting them to get together and form the Lawn Branch of the L. P. A., he told them they had done wonders in giving their husbands, sons and brothers for the defence of the Empire, but told them not to stop there; he asked them not to be outdone by harbours no bigger than their own but to get together, appoint their committees, solicit their mitts send them along to St. John's, procure the wool and do their little bit towards putting socks and mitts on feet and hands of our own loved heroes.

Lady Davidson's appeal was then read. The Magistrate then touched on the coming ballot to be cast on November 4th for or against Prohibition. I cannot go into the appeal of the worthy Magistrate in regard to this question fearing to take up too much of your space; but I cannot pass over the compliment paid this patriotic little place when he said that in his ten years as Magistrate he on no occasion had cause to reprimand a man for the abusive use of liquor. He asked them not to make this a personal matter but to vote total prohibition for the good of the country in general and that of the numerous families suffering through abusive use of alcoholism by those owing them support.

The Chairman thanked the Magistrate for his able speech and then called on Mr. John Ben. Patten, of Grand Bank. Mr. Patten told the audience that previous speakers had so well covered the ground that there was nothing left for him to say, but after listening a while it was found that the Magistrate had left ample ground for the genial Patten to cover and this he at once started to do in great style, his appeal for contributions was earnest and telling, illustrated by several examples taken from the Holy Book showing where in many instances little had been given, still much had been done with the little. The speaker informed the audience that he had a son a volunteer; he did not deny feeling bad at his going but wished him God speed. In referring to the work done by the Navy, Mr. Patten brought home to us very strongly the position we would be in were it not for our supremacy of the sea. Our Magistrate touched on our successful voyage, but of what avail your good fishery if we could not get it to market, regardless of your catch we would now all be reduced to a state of starvation for no salt would be available to cure your catch; try and realize this and be thankful as previous speakers stated we cannot all go and fight but all can help; do so now as generously as you can.

The gentleman then spoke to the ladies of the Patriotic Association and told them that if it were possible for them to see the gratitude of our boys when a batch of clothes arrives from the old home that they would one and all start right away and see what they could do. He then spoke on the question of Prohibition and in a few telling words pointing out the evil of drink, exhorted them one and all to cast their votes in favour of total prohibition.

The Chairman moved a vote of thanks to the speakers which was seconded by Magistrate Benning and unanimously carried by the audience. The Magistrate then announced that a subscription list was opened and would be kept so till the following evening.

I wish to say that if St. John's could have witnessed the rush of poor people to get rid of their mite in the good cause it would have done them good. The audience were next invited to while away the evening in dancing, the President having graciously given the hall for the purpose. A very pleasant meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem. Sincerely yours, A VISITOR TO PATRIOTIC LAWN.

Mother! Your Child is Cross, Feverish, From Constipation

If tongue is coated, breath bad, stomach sour, clean liver and bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow. If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Prsentation.

A rather pleasing event took place at the C. L. B. Armoury yesterday afternoon when Capt. Montgomerie was presented with a case of splendid pipes by the members of G Company of the Newfoundland Regiment. The presentation was made by Lieut. S. The recipient after being heartily cheered by the men, thanked them for the gift and for the kind words of appreciation contained in Lieut. Norris's remarks.

The Good Genius of the Sick Room.

A Gas fire, always a desirable installation, never proves its worth more than in cases of illness, for an invalid may need a fire at any season of the year. A coal fire makes dirt and dust and needs repeated attention, and the noise and clatter that the least stoking operation renders inevitable is at once an annoyance and a possible danger to the patient. When once alight will Gas fires, are clean and noiseless, and when properly adjusted, and it is now the common practice of medical men, especially when the illness is likely to be lengthy, to recommend a gas fire in the sick room.

When children are convalescent but still confined to one room, it is highly necessary, if the much-dreaded chill is to be avoided, to keep its temperature at a steady level. This is impossible where coal is the fuel, but a gas fire can be so easily and accurately regulated that the required degree of warmth can be obtained without difficulty.

Coffey Out in Third.

New York, Oct. 19.—Frank Moran, of Pittsburg, knocked out Jim Coffey, the Dublin Giant, in the third round of a ten-round match here to-night. A right cross to the jaw in the third round sent Coffey to the floor with a count of five. Moran rushed at him and struck him again. Referee Phil Brown stepped between the men, giving Moran the technical knock-out. Moran weighed 200 pounds, Coffey 301.

The Pittsburger owed his victory to his superior ring generalship. Coffey was the aggressor at the beginning of the bout, but Moran, conserving his strength, waited for the opportune moment.

By his victory, Moran earned the right to meet Jess Willard, the present holder of the world's heavyweight championship.

British Ships Seek Kronprinz Sailors.

Two War Vessels Join U. S. Cutters in Trying to Capture Escaped Men.

Onondaga steamed up Chesapeake Bay at daybreak to join in the hunt. She will search one side of the bay going up and the other side coming back. Other cutters engaged in searching for the missing yacht along the coast are the Seminole, Androscoggin, Pamlico, Mohawk, Itasca and Seneca.

Naval officers are of the opinion that if the yacht went to sea it would have been detected somewhere along the coast before now. The report that one of the officers obtained several photographs before sailing is not credited in naval circles. Admiral Beatty said that he believed the men sailed the yacht up Chesapeake Bay, ran aground and have not been able to get back.

Largest Gold Shipment Yet.

New York, Oct. 19.—The largest shipment of gold from England to the United States, said to be larger than any of the previous consignments, arrived here to-day and was placed in the assay office. The gold is said to consist chiefly of British sovereigns and to be worth approximately $25,000,000.

The gold was consigned to J. P. Morgan & Company, but no official announcement concerning the value of the shipment was made by that firm. It was learned that the coins would be melted into bullion bars and credited to the British government by the Morgan firm.

The Magic of Khaki.

(From the London Advertiser.)
 Eastern romances tell of a magic cloak which possessed wondrous transforming qualities. It made a prince of the peasant, a hero of the modest, gave beauty to the ugly and learning to the ignorant. Some such wizard appears to be in the fibre of khaki. Have we not seen countless cases within the last year where it has placed dignity about the frivolous, replaced meanness with manliness, given distinction where the commonplace formerly existed? Many a lad who because of mental occupation was ignored or treated patronizingly, now holds our sincere respect and admiration. The khaki sends a man's shoulders back and his head up, mentally and physically. It gives him what we for lack of a better term call "class." War tends to level all, yet putting on the khaki places a man in that splendidly exclusive set which plays the chief and most heroic part in the conflict. Put on the khaki and step up amongst the elect.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

By GEORGE FITCH
 Author of "At Good Old Siwash"
 This is a lovely world, full of bumper crops and palatial homes, of soft-voiced touring cars and luxurious trains, of good things to eat and absorbing books to read and jobs which

FEED CHILDREN

On Properly Selected Food. It Pays Big Dividends.

If parents will give just a little intelligence thought to the feeding of their children the difference in the health of the little folks will pay many times over, for the small trouble.

A mother writes: "Our children are all so much better and stronger than they were before we made a change in the character of the food. We have quit using potatoes three times a day with coffee and so much meat."

"Now we give the little folks some fruit, either fresh, stewed, or canned, some Grape-Nuts with cream, occasionally some soft boiled eggs, and some Postum for breakfast and supper. Then for dinner they have some meat and vegetables."

"It would be hard to fully describe the change in the children, they have grown so sturdy and strong, and we attribute this change to the food elements that, I understand, exist in Grape-Nuts and Postum."

"A short time ago my baby was teething and had a great deal of stomach and bowel trouble. Nothing seemed to agree with him until I tried Grape-Nuts softened and mixed with rich milk and he improved rapidly and got sturdy and well."
 "There's a Reason."

get fatter every year, and patient golf balls waiting to be abused. The world has never been a closer imitation of but so are prices. For a nice exciting Paradise, and we would all be happy and content if it were not for the high cost of living.

Wages are going up all the time, little aviation meet there is nothing that can equal the monthly altitude contest between the pay check and the price of necessary luxuries. There was once a time when a man could live well on $1.50 a day and could take of his worries with his socks at night. But how can you live on $1.50 a day now, when the theatre trust has raised the price of tickets to $2 a night and there are ten times as many theatres to be supported?

There was once a time when $60 a month was a young fortune, and a large family, including a future senator, could be brought up on it. Nowadays it costs $60 a month to put one son through college, and about the most you can expect from him is three or four golf clubs, or, if you are lucky, a permanent daughter-in-law.

There was a time when $90 a month put you in the village smart set, and you could give a party now and then with ice-cream. But what does $90 a month buy you now? Two automobile tires; and you have to get credit for the third, which blew up on the 29th.

There was a time when $150 a month would buy a nice house with a stable in the back and a horse bink in front, and you could have two kinds of cake for dessert and go to Chicago to grand opera once a year. Now $150 a month will just about pay for three weeks at a seashore hotel, and if you don't go your next-door neighbor will come in every evening during the winter and tell you how nice it was on the beach.

There was a time when $5,000 a year made a man so rich that he could be kind to the poor and could give $150 a year to the church, and could be universally beloved because he wore old clothes like the plain people. What does $5,000 a year get you now? Just half as much as your friend's $10,000 gets him, and he uses his extra $5,000 making you look like a misplaced Hubbard squash.

The high cost of living high is causing untold misery in this nation, and something ought to be done in the way of providing the suffering prosperous with parachutes.

THE MOST STRIKING feature of the POLAR BEAR is its beautiful white coat, which is in keeping with the whiteness of its surroundings in the Arctic regions. The snow in those regions, however, is not whiter than clothes washed with SUNLIGHT SOAP.

The beauty of SUNLIGHT SOAP is in its purity, and the easy way in which it releases dirt from clothes, without injury to the fabric no matter how fine it may be. It is manufactured with the purest materials and there is £1,000 Guarantee of Purity on every bar.

From Major Franklin.

Writing to a friend in the city from "Somewhere in France" under date of September 24th, Major W. H. Franklin says:—

"You are quite right, the past 12 months seems a lifetime, and I expect the effects will last for the rest of one's life. Still it has been a glorious experience, and we all hope that now is the beginning of the end. It is splendid to note the spirit of the men, despite the months of the strain of trench warfare.

"I was lucky at getting a few days back and so seeing my wife and family. At the same time I saw all my old friends in the Newfoundland contingent. They are a positively splendid lot of men and I would back them against any regiment here, providing their discipline is good. I hadn't an opportunity of judging that. The men looked strong, healthy, clean and well set up, and moved quickly. I was sorry to hear the officers complain of not having an opportunity to go forward with my own regiment. Naturally all my work has been towards being able to impart to them the experience I have had—practically seven months in the firing line. However one learns that perhaps all is ruled for the best, and there is enough hard work in every day to completely wash away vain regret. This can only be a scribble, but I wanted to write to-day as we are warned for the attack, the bombardment having started. We are all ready and will be thrown in either this afternoon or to-night. Hope it will be successful, it is a big show.

"Please remember me to all your people, and if I'm as lean and fit when I come home as now, I'll beat you all at squash or tennis.

"We have now only four officers left of the thirty that embarked with this Regiment; shows the wastage. Every one says Newfoundland has done splendidly in her contribution, but more are wanted."

THE LONG ROAD

That roads are long to E a y street, is true, all w i n n e s preach it; and if you move on sluggish feet, it's doubtful if you'll reach it. I see some lads who work for hire their leaden trills dragging; the smallest effort makes them tire, and all they know is lagging. They face their work with dismal croaks, and grumbings stale and wheezy; they'll never bask beneath the oaks that line the street called Easy. The road is long to Easy Street, too rough for any tugging, and one must tireless be and fleet who there would have his dwelling. Oh, watch the men who there abide, the men who dance and gambol, and you

Tit-Bits of General Information.

Up to August 31st 92,658 railway men had enlisted, a percentage of 14.90 out of a total of 621,588 employed.

Paris, before the war ate almost 2,000,000 lb. of snails every year, and paid from 12s. 6d. to 15s. a thousand for them.

After forty-four years, service in the Windsor Post Office, Mr. William Riley, who was special postman to the late King Edward VII. and also to King George V., has retired on a pension.

Swans, according to the law of England, are Crown property. Whoever steals or destroys swans' eggs forfeits 5s. for every egg, and whoever steals a marked swan of the Crown commits felony.

Some cylinders of German poison gas captured in the trenches in Flanders bear dates as remote as 1908, at which time Germany was busily preparing for the war which, she says, was "forced on her" by England.

From the Aborigines' Rights Protection Society the Government of the Gold Coast has received £1,500, subscribed locally, for the purchase of an aeroplane to be presented to the Royal Flying Corps. This aeroplane will be inscribed, "Gold Coast Aborigines."

The population of the United Kingdom a month before the war broke out is officially estimated at 48,089,249. There are no sufficient data as to the effect of the war to enable the Registrar-General to frame any reliable estimate of the population this year or next.

Wonderful carpets from Persia and other parts of the East, a number of which are naval prizes, of a total value of over £30,000, are being auctioned in London. Some 600 carpets are to be disposed of, one of the most remarkable of which is valued at £2,000 and took over thirty years to make.

The very best cork is absolutely necessary to insure good wine. The peerless Pommery of 1904 would not be worth a shilling a bottle if it had a faulty cork. In an average bottle of champagne the cost of the juice of the grapes is about 1s. 4½d., whereas cork and bottle are put down as costing 7d.

In aid of the Trowbridge (Wilts) Farmers' Red Cross sale two pigs followed their owner, Mr. James Pike, round the town collecting. He called them by means of a bell, and wherever he went they followed him. The pigs are only three months' old. Their tour resulted in £5 5s. for the fund.

In the early 'sixties cigarettes were only smoked (in England) by foreigners or Britons who had acquired the habit while residing abroad. The first English cigarettes were stained brown, to imitate the tobacco-leaf, and were not gummed. The paper was merely tucked in at the ends, and they required to be held together by the fingers, like the modern Spanish cigarette.

The war has had an extraordinary effect on the shipping industry, old vessels for which only breaking-up prices could have been realized eight months ago finding ready purchasers at Cardiff and other ports at £10 and £11 per dead-weight ton—considerably more than they were worth when newly built. A ten-year-old steamer of 6,000 tons, which sold for £25,000 in 1911, changed hands recently for £60,000.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Anxious mothers often err in one of two ways in looking after the physical wants of a young child. They either line the medicine chest with gargles, castor oil, cathartics and dope for colds, or they neglect the child's needs entirely. Physicians are recommending to mothers to get further away from using the old time-honored medicine chest. They should take the suggestion offered by the Chinese physicians who make it their business to keep their patients well.

If you are a rational mother you will give your child a wholesome and liberal diet. This means plenty of milk and fresh eggs, and a good portion of fresh vegetables and fruit. Meat once a day for a young child, but she needs it that often to make blood and strength. One of the simplest ways of keeping your little girl well is to give her plenty of fruit and water.

Prohibition Meeting at Brownsdale.

The Prohibition meeting was held at Brownsdale, October 19th, in the Orange Hall which was given free by the brethren for the occasion. Mr. H. T. Avery occupied the chair and on the platform were Rev. H. Godfrey, Rev. N. M. Guy and Rev. F. Smart, and also our honorable member, Mr. A. Targett. Quite a number of people attended the meeting. The speakers in most interesting and instructive lectures told the audience of the effect of alcohol on the human system and also some of the evils which are detrimental to our physical, mental and moral well being. The Rev. F. Smart spoke with enthusiasm concerning the young men who are gone from Brownsdale as volunteers for their King and Country. A hearty vote of thanks proposed by Mr. H. C. Brown and which was carried with great applause by clapping. The proceedings ended as they began with the hearty singing of God Save the King.

Prohibition Meeting at Harbor Grace.

Special to Evening Telegram. HARBOR GRACE, To-day. A most enthusiastic Prohibition meeting was held at Coughlan Hall last night. The hall was filled, many standing. E. Parsons, M.H.A., chairman. W. A. Munn, Esq., was the first speaker and delivered a message from St. John's to help the city down open saloon and save sons and daughters, the former from drink, the latter from even worse evil drunken husbands. Rev. Dr. Hazelwood from Canada, was the next speaker and for an hour and a half held the audience spellbound at his earnest appeal to remove the temptation from the island. He gave most convincing facts to prove that without liquor stores there is no temptation to drink. Rev. A. A. Holmes also spoke most encouragingly of the outcome of the election.

BRITISH THEATRE.

The beautifully appointed, cosy and well ventilated "British" was well patronized last night to witness the closing of the interesting programme which was shown the first two days of the week. This will be succeeded to-day by another, which the management promise to be "the best yet." First among the magnificent photographs to be projected will be the great Detective Story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of the greatest fictional detective the world has ever known—Sherlock Holmes! "A Study in Scarlet" is one of his most famous. The part of Sherlock Holmes is played by Francis Ford, the greatest "Sherlock" ever seen upon the legitimate stage. The "one and only" Mary Pickford, the great Canadian photograph actress, will also be seen in a farce-comedy. Other features will be shown, "all worth while," and Miss Ruth Emblen will be heard in two splendid selections, her first being a pretty chanson entitled "Beautiful Roses" and her second the appropriate American Civil War marching song, "Tramp—Tramp—Tramp." Both Miss Elsie Tapper and Mr. A. H. Allen will discourse appropriate music.

AT THE EVER POPULAR CRESCENT.

The Essanay Company presents "The Strength of the Weak" at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day; this is a very strong emotional drama produced in two acts. An interesting western drama: "The Girl at Nolan's" is produced by the Vitagraph Company, featuring Margaret Gibson. The story of a girl reporter is a fine melo drama entitled: "In The Line of Duty"; and a very laughable comedy is: "Hypno and France," an Edison release. Mr. Dan Delmar sings a nice Irish ballad: "In My Home Town in Ireland," this is quite a new song and has a pleasing and catchy melody. For the week end the Crescent presents a two reel detective feature: "Following a Clue."

LAST DAY OF ARTISTIC STATUE ACT.

Those who have not already seen the beautiful act at Rossley's have only to-night to do so as there will be a complete change of programme on Thursday, another change of pictures also. The tickets are selling fast for the competition on Friday night. There are quite a number of names and it promises to be a very interesting competition. The act on Thursday will be one of great daring, full of thrills and very sensational, by the marvellous Atlantis Fiske and Jack. These artistes are very wonderful and the crowds every night are simply delighted with them.

THE CLOSING CHAPTER OF THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY.

The greatest Nickel for some time takes place to-day and it is sure to attract large audiences. Consequently the performance this evening will start at 7 o'clock sharp. The final chapter of "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be shown. This wonderful film has been running at the Nickel for six months and it has been most popular. Thousands of our citizens are interested in it and will want to see the last episode. The tenth installment of "The Trety O' Hearts" will also be given. This is now as popular with the hundreds of regular Nickel attendants as The Million Dollar Mystery. Everyone should make an effort to see to-day's show as they are certain to enjoy it. Most attractive feature films are coming to the Nickel shortly. They are the best obtainable and are specially selected.

A Century of Methodism in St. John's, Nfld.,
By PROF. J. W. NICHOLS, F.S.A.

A Book of Exceptional Interest, Reference and Instruction for Every Methodist Home in the Colony.

This Book contains an account of the Centenary Celebration of Methodism in St. John's, recently held there on June 20th and 21st, 1915, together with a copy of the magnificent Oration delivered in Gower St. Church on that occasion by REV. GEORGE J. BOND, B.B., LL.D. and also a description of the Unveiling Ceremony, when HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR, SIR W. E. DAVIDSON, K.C.M.G., officially unveiled the Mural Tablet placed in that Church to celebrate the introduction of Methodism into St. John's.

The whole is artistically printed on fine half-toned paper and profusely illustrated by over 100 choice photographs of present and past Ministers, Churches and Schools.

Accompanying the Photographs is a Brief Biographical Sketch of the Methodist Ministers stationed in St. John's within the past 100 years, together with briefer notes on the growth of Methodism and some views of historic landmarks of a vanished St. John's.
