For Love of a Woman; OR, New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"I, TOO, AM FREE."

"I am going, of course, you know that. My love for you has not yet robed me of all manliness, Doris, and I am going. This discovery which you made this afternoon was half-suspected by me. The eyes of a man who loves are keen in all matters pertaining to the woman he loves; and from certain signs I suspected that Lord Cecil Neville was bound up in your past life; but it was suspicion only. The marquis's innocent exposure has turned it into certainty. And so—I have waited to bid you good-bye."

She sat perfectly motionless for a moment. Then she looked up at him, with a piteous entreaty.

"What shall I say?" she murmured.

"Say nothing," he replied, huskily. "I give you your freedom, Miss Marlowe. Knowing, as I do how cruelly you have been deceived—you and Lord Cecil," he put in, as if the speaking of his name were difficult to him, "there is no other course open to me. I love you—oh, yes!—you know that; but my very love for you pleads for you against myself! And so I give you lack all your pledges, and say snipny 'good-bye!'"

He held out his hand, eyeing her keenly and sorrowfully. But she did not place her burning hand in his. Instead, she shook her head slowly.

"Stay," she murmured, almost inaudibly, and her pale face grew crimson for a second.

He leaned upon the couch, and bent over her, trembling, and white as death.

"You say 'stay!'" he breathed. "Think—think what the word means to me, Doris!"

"I—I have thought!" she breathed. "It means—oh, you cannot imagine all it means to me! Will you repeat it?"

"Yes," she said, in as low a voice as before.

He took her hand and held it in his. "And will you tell me that—that you do not love Lord Cecil; that you can forget him?"

She turned her face away.

"Don't—don't drive me too hard!" she murmured, piteously.

His face grew wan and haggard again.

"I—I understand," he said. "Yes, I understand—and I must be content."

He let her hand fall, and walked to the window, turning his back to her. Then he returned, and kneeling beside her, said, in a low voice:

"Doris, I asked you to trust me. I ask it still. Remember that no man, not even Lord Cecil—with a touch of bitterness—"could love you more dearly than I love you; and—trust me."

"Yes, I trust you. I have always done so," she said, almost inaudibly.

"We are to be married on the sixteenth," he said, musingly. "Everything is ready, Doris."

She inclined her head.

"We will be married on the sixteenth!" he said, almost solemnly. He raised her hand to his lips. "Don't look so scared, Doris," he said, with a curious smile. "I—I am a better man than you think me!" and, dropping her hand, he left the room.

Doris had burnt her boats. There was no returning across the river. She had pledged herself now irrevocably.

The next morning at breakfast the marquis's valet called to enquire after Miss Marlowe.

"His lordship has been in a terrible state, miss," he said, gravely. "He was afraid that something he had said had offended or alarmed you, and although he was put at a loss to remember what it was, the idea distressed him very much, and seems to be preying on his mind. He was very ill, indeed, last night—quite wandering, so to speak—and the doctor did not leave for a moment."

"Please tell the marquis that I—I have forgiven all that he said; that I know he was not aware there was anything to offend me in—in the incidents he related," said Doris, painfully. "Yes; tell him that, whatever it was, I forgive it freely."

"Thank you, miss," said the valet, with a look of relief. "His lordship will be very glad to get the message. Begging your pardon, miss, but his lordship seems—if I may be so bold—to be wrapped up in you. He was talking about her ladyship, the marchioness, last night—her ladyship and the little girl—and he kept repeating your name, as if you reminded him of her."

Doris sighed. Percy Levant stood gravely regarding the table-cloth, saying not a word.

"I suppose you have sent for Lord

Cecil, as the marquis is so much worse?" said Lady Despard.

The valet shrugged his shoulders.

"I certainly intended doing so as soon as the telegraph office was open this morning, my lady; but directly the marquis became conscious he distinctly forbade me doing so. Of course I should not disobey him while he was sensible, and there was no immediate danger. The marquis demands implicit obedience from his household, my lady."

"Perhaps Miss Marlowe will be able to call and see him this morning," said Lady Despard, glancing enquiringly at Doris; but she grew pale, and shook her head.

"Not to-day," she said, in a low voice, and almost pleadingly. "To-morrow—perhaps."

The valet bowed.

"Thank you, miss," he said, gratefully, and as he withdrew he added, respectfully, "a sight of you will do him more good than all the doctors in Italy, I am sure."

If Doris had promised "to pay the sick man a visit she could not have done so, for Percy Levant, without consulting either of the ladies, ordered the phaeton and pair, and calmly requested them to get their things on.

"I am going to take you ladies for a long drive," he said, with that air of resolution which all women admire in a man. "You, Doris, because you need it for your health's sake, and you, Lady Despard, because you are in danger of becoming a monomaniac!"

"Oh, indeed!" retorted Lady Despard, languidly; "and what's my mania, pray?"

"Wedding millinery," he replied, pointing to the confused mass of lace and muslin, amidst which Lady Despard seemed to exist.

"Well, there's some truth in that," she said, with a smile, "and, anyway, I suppose we shall have to go, eh, Doris? And this is the man whom we thought all milk and honey, so meek and docile as scarcely to have a will of his own!" she added, pouting. "You see what you have done, my dear, you have completely spoiled him by being foolish enough to promise to marry him!"

She went for the drive, Percy Levant taking the reins and Doris seated beside him, and in after-years she remembered, with a singular vividness, every incident of the day, almost every word he spoke. Never had he been in lighter humour, or in better "form," and if his object was to drive, for the time at least, all remembrance of the marquis and his story of Spencer Churchill's villainy from her mind, he almost succeeded, and as the hours sped by, the exquisite scenery, the keen, fresh air, and the unflagging wit and humour of her companion brought the colour to Doris's pale cheeks, and drove the lines of care and trouble from her brow.

And through it all he permitted no sign of his own suffering to become visible. The handsome face was as evenly cheerful, the pliant lips wore a settled smile, causing Lady Despard to look at him once, and exclaim, with a sigh:

"I wish you could sell me that butterfly nature and disposition of yours, Percy. I would give you more than half my kingdom."

"Would you?" he said, turning on the box and glancing at Doris as he did so. "Would you?" and a curious expression flashed across his face for a moment. "I'm afraid you would be like the man who thought he was doing a clever thing in buying a sovereign for nineteen shillings and sixpence, until he tried to change the coin and discovered that it was a counterfeit!"

They went to a country inn, at which he had ordered dinner by a servant sent on before, and Lady Despard was enchanted by the dainty simplicity of the menu and the manner in which he played the host, and when he strolled off to smoke his cigar and leave them to trifle with the grapes and the ripe figs which nestled in the centre of a huge repousse dish of such flowers as only Italy can produce, Lady Despard patted Doris on the cheek, causing her to start from a reverie, and said:

"Yes, my dear, I will say it again: you have done very well! He will be simply a treasure of a husband. I assure you, I don't know another man in all my extensive list of friends and acquaintances who could have behaved so perfectly. Fancy taking two women out for the day, keeping them amused every minute, and then giving them all the nice things women love, not ugly chops and steaks, but all these delicate things for dinner. And he'll be just as fresh and bright all the way home, of course! Yes, I must repeat it, my dear. I think you have made an excellent choice, and if I hadn't registered a vow never to marry again, why—oh, there's time to cut you out yet if I tried very hard, so don't look so exasperatingly self-confident! And now the best thing you can do," she went in, as Doris smiled and sighed, "is to go and find him, and repay him for all his trouble with one of those sweet, little speeches of yours, and several of those upward glances of those blue eyes which seemed so innocent and commonplace, and yet, as I have been told, drive poor men to thoughts of suicide. Go and find him, my dear; he hasn't gone far, and is, of course, waiting for you to join him. I shall be quite happy and content for a hour, I assure you. Come back when the moon is up above those trees, and then we will start."

"Which means that you want to go to sleep," said Doris, smiling as she rose.

"Quite right, dear," assented Lady Despard, serenely. "I want to go to sleep for a few minutes, and dream that I, too, have got a handsome young man who is fortunately poor enough to have to work for me, and who worships the ground I tread on. Go and find him, and—be good to him, for he deserves it!"

in danger of becoming a monomaniac!"

"Oh, indeed!" retorted Lady Despard, languidly; "and what's my mania, pray?"

"Wedding millinery," he replied, pointing to the confused mass of lace and muslin, amidst which Lady Despard seemed to exist.

"Well, there's some truth in that," she said, with a smile, "and, anyway, I suppose we shall have to go, eh, Doris? And this is the man whom we thought all milk and honey, so meek and docile as scarcely to have a will of his own!" she added, pouting. "You see what you have done, my dear, you have completely spoiled him by being foolish enough to promise to marry him!"

She went for the drive, Percy Levant taking the reins and Doris seated beside him, and in after-years she remembered, with a singular vividness, every incident of the day, almost every word he spoke. Never had he been in lighter humour, or in better "form," and if his object was to drive, for the time at least, all remembrance of the marquis and his story of Spencer Churchill's villainy from her mind, he almost succeeded, and as the hours sped by, the exquisite scenery, the keen, fresh air, and the unflagging wit and humour of her companion brought the colour to Doris's pale cheeks, and drove the lines of care and trouble from her brow.

And through it all he permitted no sign of his own suffering to become visible. The handsome face was as evenly cheerful, the pliant lips wore a settled smile, causing Lady Despard to look at him once, and exclaim, with a sigh:

"Would you?" he said, turning on the box and glancing at Doris as he did so. "Would you?" and a curious expression flashed across his face for a moment. "I'm afraid you would be like the man who thought he was doing a clever thing in buying a sovereign for nineteen shillings and sixpence, until he tried to change the coin and discovered that it was a counterfeit!"

They went to a country inn, at which he had ordered dinner by a servant sent on before, and Lady Despard was enchanted by the dainty simplicity of the menu and the manner in which he played the host, and when he strolled off to smoke his cigar and leave them to trifle with the grapes and the ripe figs which nestled in the centre of a huge repousse dish of such flowers as only Italy can produce, Lady Despard patted Doris on the cheek, causing her to start from a reverie, and said:

"Yes, my dear, I will say it again: you have done very well! He will be simply a treasure of a husband. I assure you, I don't know another man in all my extensive list of friends and acquaintances who could have behaved so perfectly. Fancy taking two women out for the day, keeping them amused every minute, and then giving them all the nice things women love, not ugly chops and steaks, but all these delicate things for dinner. And he'll be just as fresh and bright all the way home, of course! Yes, I must repeat it, my dear. I think you have made an excellent choice, and if I hadn't registered a vow never to marry again, why—oh, there's time to cut you out yet if I tried very hard, so don't look so exasperatingly self-confident! And now the best thing you can do," she went in, as Doris smiled and sighed, "is to go and find him, and repay him for all his trouble with one of those sweet, little speeches of yours, and several of those upward glances of those blue eyes which seemed so innocent and commonplace, and yet, as I have been told, drive poor men to thoughts of suicide. Come back when the moon is up above those trees, and then we will start."

"Which means that you want to go to sleep," said Doris, smiling as she rose.

"Quite right, dear," assented Lady Despard, serenely. "I want to go to sleep for a few minutes, and dream that I, too, have got a handsome young man who is fortunately poor enough to have to work for me, and who worships the ground I tread on. Go and find him, and—be good to him, for he deserves it!"

Of all the poison taken into the blood, the gonoe and pus contributed by diseased gums (Pforrhea) are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.

adequacy of make-shift arrangements intended to preserve public order became obvious.

STRIKE RIOTING IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass. Sept. 10.
An unidentified man was killed, a woman was shot and severely wounded and a police officer was beaten by a mob and taken to a hospital in a serious condition in strike rioting in the vicinity of Scholay Square to-night. Fifty three members of the Metropolitan police force who have been on emergency duty during the strike and who were ordered to patrol Scholay Square to-night, refused and were immediately suspended. They marched in a body to headquarters of the policemen's union at Pay Hall and took out applications for membership.

CANNOT DESERT RUSSIA.

LONDON, Sept. 10.
Colonel John Ward, Labor member of the House of Commons, who has just returned from Russia, in an interview, said that "to desert the Russians, who had rallied to our standard, will make our name stink in the nostrils of every non-Bolshevik Russian. We went to Russia to prevent the Germans from transferring men to the western front. Are we now to say to those who rallied around us, you have served our turn, we are going, we wish you luck? That is unthinkable. It would be black treachery to leave them to face the enemies they have made for our sakes without anything more substantial than our good will."

The Battle of Malplaquet

The battle of Malplaquet, in which the allied forces, under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, defeated on September 11, 1709, the French, commanded by Marshal Villars, is noteworthy as the Duke's last victory in a pitched battle. But it proved costly, as the French, highly favoured by the ground, fought with remarkable bravery. Villars, although a vainglorious man, was no mean general, and he had made the most of the natural advantages; but, when once the contest had begun, there was little chance for tactical surprises or for the sudden inspirations of military genius. Moreover, the Marshal was severely wounded early in the day, and, although he endeavoured to direct the movements of his army while seated in a chair, he fainted from loss of blood and was carried from the field. Prince Eugene, too, was wounded in the head, but refused to retire, and, if Marlborough went unscathed, yet it was reported among the French that he was killed. However, he was to live for many years, and soon to experience the ingratitude of his queen and country. Already the factious men opposed to him were gaining ground in the cabinet and the country, and the most was made of the fact that Marlborough's losses approached 20,000, those of the French being but half. On the other hand, the fact that they had been turned out of a strong position was slurred, and altogether the situation at home was such as to inspire the English general with the gravest misgivings. Although in reality glorious both for the men and for their leader, Malplaquet, in fact, did the allied cause almost as much mischief as a reverse, inasmuch as it was employed with skill to exploit the feeling of "war-weariness," and thus to forward the backstairs intrigues by which ultimately Marlborough was driven into retirement and exile.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DOES IT GROW IN YOUR GARDEN.

There moved into our neighborhood a few months ago, a middle-aged couple whose only daughter is married and lives in a city about a thousand miles away. I had never met the daughter, but I soon came to feel as though I knew her well because her mother had so much to say about her. Seldom have I seen a mother and daughter seem to think more of each other. They wrote to each other every other day and never did any possible occasion for gift-giving, such as Valentine's Day, Thanksgiving or Easter pass but what the mother had some little gift to show me that her daughter had sent. As for the mother—well, she didn't need any occasion for her gifts. Her fingers were perpetually busy, and if one asked what kept them so, one was sure to find it was a pair of rompers for her grandchild, a shirt for the son-in-law or a gaiter waist for the daughter herself.

All Roads Led to Daughter.

In conversation with her, all roads led straight to the daughter and family. She never tired of telling me how generous and thoughtful her daughter was, how she had had flowers sent her every day when she had been ill once, and how she never missed a letter, and so forth and so on.

Naturally, when her daughter came to visit, I looked for a remarkable demonstration of family affection. And for the first two or three days I saw it. But very, very soon the rifts in the lute began to appear. Daughter accepted too many invitations from her old friends and mother was hurt at being left alone. Mother wanted to correct what she regarded as faults in her grandchild and daughter resented that. Daughter wanted to rearrange certain details in the house and mother resented that. Daughter even informed me that she thought her mother wore too much jewelry. Instead of an atmosphere of unusual tenderness, there was an atmosphere of distinct tension in that house.

They Could Do the Little Things But Not the Big One.

I don't doubt that these two really loved each other in the common use of the word. I couldn't doubt that they were always doing little things for each other. But they couldn't do the one big thing.

They could deny themselves and work hard to make each other material gifts, but they couldn't give each other the gift of sufficient forbearance and understanding and tenderness to produce a happy companionship even for two months.

They Could Die But Cannot Live for Each Other.

It seems to me that this is true of a great many families. They love each other deeply—they would perhaps even die for each other. But they cannot or will not live for each other.

A happy congenial companionship is the true flower of family life. It should be the commonest flower that grows and yet I have pessimistic moments when it seems to me it is the rarest.

ON BEING FAT.

There's no much sense in being fat, in wearing too much lard; the weary years have taught me that for I'm an obese hard. Diseases pile I entertain, dire ailments two or three; and though I'm twisted up with pain, I get no sympathy. Men laugh to hear a fat man groan; and though he's feeling tough, and has an ache in every bone, they think it all a bluff. If I were thin and drawn and pale, they would not treat me thus; if I put up an anguished wail, they'd make all kinds of fuss; with soothing words they'd quell my fears, and bid my pains depart, and shed the sympathetic tears that reach a sick man's heart. But I am fat and when I yell they all begin to laugh; and they'll be laughing till my knell precedes my epitaph. A lean man falls, and people sigh, and wonder if he's hurt; they bring his hat, arrange his tie, and brush from him the dirt.

Little Benny's Note Book.

By LEE PAPE.

Yestiddy Mary Watkins told me I was all rite only she thawt a boy awt to be bigger than a girl, me not being any bigger than her, and on the way home I had a ideer, and I went back in the kitchen and ate spoonfulls of baking powder, thinking if it makes cakes rise higher it mite make me, the hardest part about eating it being the swallowing, and I wawked around a little while and then I looked in the hall mirror and I still looked about the same size, and I went up in ma's room and ma was sewing with the sewing masheen, me saying, Ma, do you think I look any different?

I can't see anything different about you, sed ma. And she kepp on sewing, and I started to wawk around the room looking in the mirror every time I went pass it, looking about the same each time, and after a while I sed, Do I look any different yet, ma?

For goodness sake, seritney not why in the world should you? sed ma. Me not saying wry, and I started to wawk around the room again, and pritty soon I started to feel funny inside, thinking, Gosh, G, I'm starting.

And I kepp on feeling funnier and funnier inside, and I sed to ma, How do I look now, ma, any different?

For mersey sakes, I should say you do, sed ma.

Am I mutch bigger, ma? I sed.

Bigger? Wat are you tawking about? Youre wite as a sheet. Have you bin eating anything you shouldent off? sed ma.

No mam, only bakng powder, I sed.

You krazy thing, sed ma. And she made me take medicine, and I felt worse and wesar and I had to go to bed, and this morning I still felt a little funny and still looked krazky the same size.

There's tender feeling in the glance that everyone bestows; and for a padded ambulance some sympathizer goes. A fat man falls all in a heap, and telescopes his spine, and people stand around and weep—but laughter brings the brine. The fat man goes his greasy way, with large and bulging vest, and to the whole world, every day, his every move's a jest.

Every Saturday evening after 7 o'clock, Choice Ends of Beef, Mutton, Lamb, Pork will be sold at cost. ELLIS & CO., LTD., 203 Water Street.—nov29.

White and Black.

The white do resent the appearance of colored people in white neighborhoods and this resentment does, whether justly or not, work a change in neighborhood feeling and in property values. We may as well look the facts squarely in the face and we ask the colored people to consider them. If the whites and colored cannot refrain from riots and bloodshed and interminable violence on the bathing beaches, how long will it be before the question is asked: Shall there be separate bathing beaches for the whites and colored? If the races cannot get along in certain neighborhoods without fights and brawls and police interference, how long will it be before segregation will be the only means of preventing daily murders and perhaps a recurrence, on a scale vastly enlarged, of the East St. Louis disaster? If a colored person cannot enter a street car without this being the signal for shooting and furore, how long will it be before public policy and the protection of life and property makes necessary another system of transportation?—Chicago Tribune.

Just Like Tommy.

Dr. MacNamara, M.P., who it will be recalled, was at one time President of the National Union of School Teachers, and who has always maintained a keen interest in educational affairs, is fond of telling the story of a bright little thirteen-year-old miss at a cookery class at an elementary school in South London.

This little lady (says Dr. "Mac") had been set to make some jam. She accomplished her task satisfactorily, and then wrote out and pasted on the jar she had just filled, a label, which read, "Best household jam—Tommy Atkins brand."

"But why 'Tommy Atkins'?" asked the teacher.

"Well," was the reply, "every time I stirred it up it wanted to go over the top."

A limited quantity of very smart frocks for Fall and Winter were opened by us on Friday last, and are to-day on view in our Showrooms.

These are exclusive French and American models, no two alike. Among the selection may be seen:—

1. Black Satin Sonple, heavily piped on sleeves and overdress.
2. Black Plain Silk Jersey, round neck, self buttons, side fastening, loose girdle. (An ideal model, giving long slender lines.)
3. Navy Ribbed Silk Jersey, round neck, and Russian Blouse effect.
4. Navy Serge, trimmed Military braid, Sand Jersey Vest and Cuffs.

This showing includes some beautiful models in Serge and Satin, Serge and Fur and Serge and Military Braid.

KEEPING IT UP.

With unblushing effrontery Tuesday's Star published the letter of Dr. W. E. Jones, of Avondale, exactly as it had appeared in the Morning Post. The reason for this is not altogether comprehensible, and Dr. Jones himself will have to supply the explanation. It will scarcely be believed that it places that gentleman in a creditable position, and the awkwardness must be far from pleasant. However its between them now, and one or the other will have to make the amende honorable and tell the public the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth regarding that celebrated interview, which evidently did take place after all.

The Mother Goose editorials of the Star cause much laughter about town. The Tommy Tucker quotation in Tuesday's issue is peculiarly one against itself. The juvenile Tucker, was, like the juvenile Star, is hungry, and the nursery rhyme goes, "was crying for his supper." That exactly fits the Star. It too is "crying for his supper," but it will go hungry for a long time yet, because the table at which it expects to sit has but seating accommodation for a limited number of guests, and one of them will not be the Star. Therefore its appetite for the good things for which it yearns must go unappetized. Our esteemed contemporary says that we shall receive further consideration at its hands. We expect to. We have been already in receipt of some of its consideration—respectful and otherwise, but principally otherwise, and the gauge of the Star's consideration can always be measured by jealousy and pettiness.

The dear motherly old Advocate, too, treats the Telegram to a whole lot of similar consideration. Not so long ago it chortled right merrily when we gave, to quote its own brave headline, "Hot Shot for Mr. Squires." Now it too appears to have changed its tune, and is engaged in singing a duet with that same Mr. Squires, and accusing the Telegram of all manner of heinous offenses. Funny, isn't it, that when a newspaper is not with the other fellow, it has abandoned all its principles and sold itself for Government printing. The little duet, however, between the Advocate and Star, with Post accompaniment is discordant. The notes are not true, that is leaving out those Bank of Montreal notes, and the audience notes the lack of harmony. After all that the President of the F.P.U. has said about the leader of the various Councils of that organization, there is no wonder that an occasional false note occurs in the duet. However let them sing away for another little while. They are but chanting their own death song, politically.

And, friend Advocate, if you have a modern dictionary at hand please, please look it up occasionally. "Kudos" learned brother, as we have taken occasion to point out to your wayward intelligence many times before, does not mean that which you think it does. For the sake of your own erudite reputation do not again perpetrate such an atrocity as the following, which concluded an article in Tuesday's issue, "Willing to sell his vote for a few kudos." Well, well to be sure.

The Civil Service Increase.

It is pleasing to be able to announce that the Government have decided to appoint F. C. Berteau, the Auditor General; J. O'Reilly, Tax Controller; and W. H. Christian, Chartered Accountant, a Commission to inquire into the duties, classification and pay of the persons in the employ of the Colony, with a view to far-reaching readjustments. Pending the report of the Commission, which should be ready for the next meeting of the Legislature, a percentage increase will be made in salaries to all branches of the service.

The Official Report of the Inter-town Baseball series played at Grand Falls will appear in our columns tomorrow. It is a most interesting article and will, we are sure, be read with keen and lively enjoyment by all lovers of the diamond game.

Yesterday's Train Accident.

At 2.45 yesterday morning, No. 2 express east bound, in charge of conductor Nebucett, met with a derailment when approaching Grand Falls Station, car Terra Nova, a sleeping car and a first class car leaving the track. Three passengers, Mrs. Bennett, Victoria Street, Miss Rose Cleary and Sergt. Keefe, who were in the first class car were slightly cut by broken window glass and were attended by a doctor from Grand Falls. The cause of the accident is unknown. The train with the remaining cars left Grand Falls at 7 a.m. yesterday and arrived last night. Several of the passengers remained behind at Grand Falls to join to-day's incoming express.

Stone for Trinity.

Hon. J. G. Stone who arrived at New Melbourne on Monday after visiting the adjacent places below, was given an enthusiastic reception, and was hailed as a jolly good fellow by both union and non-union men. The voters are determined to send him back to the House of Assembly with the largest majority of votes ever polled in Trinity district.

Football.

Quite a large gathering of football fans were at hand yesterday at St. George's Field to witness the double header between City and Regiment and City and Bell Island. The first game between the City and Regiment was a good exhibition of football, being well contested and lively throughout, and resulted in a draw. In the second game both teams fought hard for victory, the game resulting in a win for the Islanders by a score of 3 to 2.

Evidence of Burglars Being Cool, Daring and Strong, Plentiful--- Attempted to Smash Open Vault and Safes---Supposed to Be Same Gang as in Garland Burglary --- Numerous Robberies Within Past Month.

Police and newspapermen had a busy morning today, when they had no less than three burglaries, committed yesterday, to work up and present to their respective heads. The first case investigated was that of Marshall Bros., where the facts were found to be: Last evening, at 7 o'clock, when Mr. Charles Marshall, manager of the firm, opened the business office door, he immediately saw the signs and evidences of the burglars' activities in his own private office the drawers of his desk had been opened, papers were scattered over the floor, and other derelict conditions were found. Outside, in the main office, a large electric globe had been smashed to small pieces, and the great vault bore many marks of having been pried and struck by some hard object. He motored to the Police Station and reported to the authorities who immediately got to work on the case. From their investigations the facts were ascertained. The office is on the back of the building, and back of that, with a small space intervening is the building owned by Campbell and McKay, in which is stored meat and other goods. Between the two buildings, and nearest the latter, is a cold-storage apparatus, run by a motor. This was running yesterday morning until one o'clock, when the motor man left for his dinner. A short ladder is always kept against the apparatus, used when anything goes wrong by the motorman, who climbs up by its means. This ladder could not be removed during the morning without the man seeing it, and as this was the ladder used, it is conclusive that the robbery was committed after one o'clock. Mr. George Marshall was at the office at ten o'clock in the morning and there was nothing amiss up to then. The first window, at the back, is from fifteen to twenty feet above the ground, and by placing the ladder against the side of the building, the marauders could reach the window and gain entrance. Before doing this, however, the burglars threw stones through the window, first throwing one, retreating to the wharf, waiting awhile, and returning to throw another. In this way, if anybody heard the sound of breaking glass and came to ascertain its cause, the thieves would be on the wharf and so would not be connected with the breaking. However, nobody came and there was no interruption whatever. This window entered into the ground floor, on a level with Water Street, and after getting in through this the burglars went up the stairs to the office, on the next flat. In this they must have first attempted to force the vault. In this attempt the combination was completely wrecked and rendered useless. Failing in this they hammered at the big hinges, which was a hopeless task, as anybody with the slightest knowledge of safes could have told. The hinges were bent slightly, but gave way no further. They tried now to get in through the wall adjoining the vault, even breaking in a hole six inches deep. This wall, which is of brick, is three feet thick, and it would have taken them several hours to break through. Even then they would have been nowhere.

Evidently realising this, they desisted further efforts in this direction, and tackled the top of the vault, tearing away some wood-work that they must have thought would have given them access to the money. In breaking away this wood-work, they smashed the electric globe. Probably seeing by now that they could not open the great vault, which is about seven or eight feet high, they entered the private office adjoining the main one, and, seeing no safe or money box around, tackled the private desk. This is a modern one. There are two rows of drawers and one in the centre. This latter one, which is above the knees of the person sitting at the desk, locks all the other eight drawers. To unlock them the centre one must first be opened. After endeavouring to pry out the centre one, and eventually succeeded by tearing it out holtus holtus. This of course, released the other eight, and they were immediately ransacked. Nothing of monetary value, excepting a twenty-dollar gold piece, however, was in them, and they threw out all the papers and documents on the floor in their search. Seeing that there was nothing to be gotten three the thieves turned their attention to the ware-room of the offices. Here they broke open a small cash drawer in which was about $20. Appropriating this they soon after left the building, descending to the ground floor and letting themselves out by hauling back the bolts and bars of the cellar door. Cigarette ends and matches were on the floor and it seems as if they took their time and smoked while they worked. The same signs were found in Garland's bookstore a few days ago, after it had been burgled.

The second case was that of the Royal Stores. Here the case was much simpler and less complicated. Entering from the back, as in the other case, by means of a ladder, they got in through the window by smashing a hole big enough to enable them to insert an arm and turn back the catch. This window entered into the wall-paper department and so far as can be ascertained the thieves did not go beyond it. A large cash register, valued at about five hundred dollars, was wrecked. This register was on the counter and there was no money in it. Not knowing this, however, the burglars attempted to open the cash drawer of it by prying it with a large pair of shears, used for cutting wall-paper. The shears were broken off short but the drawer was not opened. Evidently they did not know much about cash registers, or they would have realised that, to open it, all they would have to do would be to press the release key. The register was completely wrecked. A small drawer, kept underneath the counter, was smashed open and a sum of money, about ten dollars, taken. They left 300 coppers in place of the $10, evidently getting tired of carrying so much money about with them—especially copper money. Just from where they got the 300 coppers has not yet been ascertained, but the loser should report to the police. This was all they took. No money was in the register, it being a custom of the firm not to leave money in it overnight, so that the thieves, as they read this, can be warned that all future efforts in this direction will be futile.

The third was that of H. J. Stabb's office, on Water Street East, at the bottom of Cochrane Street. Having by now become tired of entering by means of ladders, they no doubt decided to go in through the front door, and actually pushed the door on Water Street in, smashing the wood that held the bolt of the lock. Inside they hauled open the drawers of all the desks in the main office and threw the contents, mostly papers, to the floor. Finding nothing there, however, they next turned their attention to the private office inside, where a safe is kept. This they attempted to open by prying with a piece of board, a slider from the desk. Naturally, they failed in this, and, giving up the safe as a hopeless proposition, they went through another desk that was in the office. Papers and other contents were strewn about the floor, but there was nothing to take. This burglary was committed in the night, as proven by the fact that there were innumerable burned matches about the floors, showing that the gang lighted them for illumination enough to enable them to carry out their work. One half smoked cigarette was found. The robbery was discovered by Mr. Charles Harvey, the manager and proprietor, this morning when he opened the office. Detective Head Constable Byrne has been detailed to all of the cases.

In each case so far known there have been the same signs, namely, that the marauders were strong, daring and determined. That they were crude and amateurish is also evident, as none but such would attempt to open safes and vaults in such a manner. Cigarettes were found in every place entered, and there can be no doubt at all that it is the same gang in each case.

Numerous cases within the past few months have been discovered, among them being that of McNamara, the jeweller, and of the Rexall Store, adjoining. Other cases were also known. When the perpetrators of these robberies are apprehended all future such depredations will cease.

A Disastrous Colliery Explosion.

An absolutely unparalleled disaster occurred at the Prince of Wales Colliery, Abercarn, on September 11, 1878. On the morning of that day 377 men and boys went down the pit, including most of the bread-winners of the village—and all went well till a little past mid-day, when a loud booming denoting an explosion was heard, and dense volumes of smoke were seen to issue from the mouth of the principal shaft. An agonised crowd at once collected from every corner round the edge of the pit, and three brave men named, Harris, Herbert, and Moseley, at once descended at the risk of their lives, and attempted to make their way towards the workings. They were speedily joined by the manager of the mine, and Mr. Cadman, the Government inspector who were at the head of an exploring party. They first came across eighty-two men and boys, all alive and but little hurt. These were speedily brought to the open air; but when further search discovered the bodies of fourteen dead horses, it was seen that there was little chance of rescuing the remainder of the men. The pit was on fire, and the danger of after-damp was so great that all further exploration had to be abandoned, though a party effected an entrance into a shaft, two miles off, only to discover eight bodies. It was some time before the authorities ventured to flood the mine, and so cut off all hopes of the survival of any who might have escaped the fire, but at length the violence of the subterranean flames rendered that act of merciful severity almost necessary. The stern resolve was taken on the 12th after a consultation with the Government officials, and in a few days water was pouring into the shaft at the rate of seven thousand gallons per minute; and it was not until the middle of October that a sufficient quantity was pumped out again, to permit a renewed attempt for the recovery of the bodies.

A Cause of Strikes.

Official statements put at 2,066,031 the number of working days lost in Canada in the months of June and July because of strikes. One newspaper attributes the loss in working time, which, of course, meant a great loss in production at a period when the country's chief needs increased production, to the activities of 'One Big Union' organizers who not meet with much success in a country of contented people; such success as they have met with has been largely due to the fact that there has been discontent in Canada as a result of the unchecked operations of the profiteers which have burdened the mass of people almost beyond bearing. If the Ottawa Government had made any sincere effort to prevent profiteering, and to punish profiteers, there would have been much less discontent in the country—even though the ministers' effort had failed of complete success—and neither the 'One Big Union' organizers nor any other extremists would have been able to bring upon the Dominion such loss as was entailed by the strikes of June and July.—Sydney Record.

At the Majestic.

Mabel Normand in "Sir Hopkins" will be seen at the Majestic this evening, when a screen presentation of Stevenson's great book, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," will be also shown. Large crowds witnessed this show last evening and were thoroughly pleased with "Sir Hopkins," as interpreted by Mabel Normand, who seems to possess a special forte in impersonating gawky young girls. The scenes of this picture are laid mostly in a small Southern village in America, where oil has been struck in various nearby places. Thinking that oil is to be gotten out on a certain piece of land, a sharper seeks to capture it from the owner, Sir Hopkins' father. He almost succeeds, too, but is happily frustrated by Sir and her lover, the son of the village grocer. This is a picture that is filled with wholesome fun and should be seen by all.

Don't Snapshot Redskins

TRAGEDY MIGHT FOLLOW.
Savages have very quaint notions about the evil effects which result from having one's photograph taken. The North American Indian somehow imagines that, especially if the portrait is a good one, the virtue is obtained at the expense of the body of the original, who moreover has placed himself in the power of the artist or photographer who is invested after the sitting with some kind of a magic power over the man concerned.

This well-known antipathy, on one occasion led to very tragic consequences which have been described by one of the chief actors in the drama.

A white man named Catlin was engaged in drawing in profile the face of a North American Indian chief, named Mahtochega, who did not share the sinister forebodings of his fellow Redskins.

This profile, when finished, added to the excitement of the other Indians, and indignation, as well as fear, was loudly voiced when it was noticed that the portrait was apparently incomplete.

"Why is half of his face left out?" demanded the aggrieved Indians. "Mahtochega is no coward. He was never afraid to look a white man full in the face."

The chief himself, however, did not share their indignation until he was stung to action by the taunts of one of his colleagues known as Shonka, the Dog. Shonka jeered:

"The Englishman knows that you are but half a man; hence he has painted but one-half of your face, for he knows that the rest is good for nothing."

The chief's susceptibilities were immediately aroused. His manhood must be vindicated! He therefore challenged Shonka, his accuser, to mortal combat.

The duel was arranged, and unfortunately Mahtochega was shot dead as a result. By a coincidence the bullet which ended his life tore away the part of his face which had been omitted in the drawing.

Went About in Fear of Death.
The disastrous affair was not allowed to end here. Mr. Catlin, the Englishman who sketched the offending portrait, had the utmost difficulty in escaping the vengeance of the Indians, and for months afterwards he was in constant fear of death at their hands.

Inside the tribe itself the Indians proceeded to avenge the death of their chief, and so declared a vendetta quite as bitter as any which ever emanated from Corsica, against the family of Shonka, who had killed him.

Although this had been done in a fair fight, this did not in any way placate their desire for revenge, and the matter was only finally ended when both Shonka and his brother had been sent to follow the chief into the happy hunting-grounds. — Pearson's Weekly.

The Sahara Not Dry.

Soon It May Not Be A Desert At All.
It is one of the wisest beliefs that the Sahara is perfectly dry. As a matter of fact it rains there, animals and plants live there, and it is inhabited by close on half a million people!

It is certainly a very dry region, but throughout the Sahara Desert there are wells and oases which supply plenty of water.

Nor is the desert without plants and trees. Palm trees, mimosi, shrubs of all kinds are found scattered all over the desert, and this fact has turned the attention of French experts towards the region, who argue that if anything grows there naturally, much more will grow if the land is cultivated.

Schemes are on foot, in fact, to cut a road right across the desert, enlarge these wells and oases, and generally cultivate a region which has really got its bad name because it had been allowed to run wild for centuries. Round the wells grow fig trees, apricots, peaches, grapes and date palms, which, with very little care would bring a wonderful profit.

One of the greatest troubles, however, the French, who have a protectorate over the Sahara, have to face is the people who live there. Like the country, they are wild and absolutely unscrupulous, not hesitating to rob and murder any traveller who attempts to cross the desert.

Father.

Used to wonder just why father
Never had much time for play;
Used to wonder why he'd rather
Work each minute of the day.
Used to wonder why he never Loafed along the road and shirked; Can't recall a time whenever Father played while others worked.

Father didn't dress in fashion,
Sort of hated clothing new;
Style with him was not a passion,
He had other things in view.
Boys are blind to much that's going
Or about 'em day by day,
And I had no way of knowing
What became of father's pay.

All I knew was when I needed
Shed I get 'em out of the spot;
Everything for which I pleaded,
Somehow father always got.
Wondered, season after season,
Why he never took a rest,
And that I might be the reason
Then I never guessed.

Saw his cheeks were getting paler,
Didn't understand just why;
Saw his body growing frailer,
Then at last I saw him die.
Rest had come! His tasks were ended,
Calm was written on his brow;
Father's life was big and splendid,
And I understand it now.

Nature's Red Flags.

Every hedgerow is a mixture of valuable food plants and others which are deadly poisonous, and the eye cannot judge which are good and which are harmful.

Indeed, if one attempts to trust the eye alone, the consequences are bound to be disastrous, for it is a curious fact that many of the most beautiful berries are also the most deadly. What, for instance, could be more lovely than the brilliant crimson fruit of the guelder rose? Yet these berries are decidedly poisonous.

So, too, are the lovely pink berries of the spindle tree, and the scarlet ones of the bitter-sweet.

What could be more exquisite to the eye than the fruit of the deadly nightshade? This plant bears a large black berry which resembles a ripe cherry. Yet it is the most dangerous of all our wild fruits. Two of these berries will kill a child.

The berry succeeds a flower which is of a deep purple colour, and here is one warning which Nature gives us. The fruit of most plants which bear flowers of this colour is poisonous. Another instance in point is the meadow saffron, a sort of crocus, the purple blooms of which appear in the autumn. Its bulb and leaves are both poisonous. The result of eating them is burning in the throat, sickness, and partial blindness.

The sense of smell is more trustworthy in the detection of poison than that of sight. Take the hemlocks, of which there are several sorts, all as poisonous as can be. All have a strong, musky odour.

The water dropwort, water hemlock, and fool's parsley are all dangerous. To this order belong the carrot, parsnip, celery, and parsley; yet, while these are valuable garden plants, nearly all the wild members of the same family are poisonous.

Dandelion leaves are most poisonous, but no one in their senses would dream of eating them, for the merest drop of their juice stings the lips.

Fads and Fashions.

Round collars are used much on children's frocks.

The oval silhouette is much liked for tailored suits.

A few of the new blouses are made of duvetyne.

New street dresses have girdles of heavy silk cord.

One-piece coat-dresses sometimes have peg-top skirts.

Smart little hats are being made of embroidered kid.

Accordion pleated skirts are in high favor for fall.

Some afternoon dresses feature full gathered skirts.

Chiffon velvet and suede are the favorites for handbags.

Long black silk gloves are worn with plain black gowns.

Oil Is Beating Coal.

Shall We Have It in Our Grates?
The high price of coal and the prospect of it becoming dearer still has resulted in a big demand for oil fuel. It is now cheaper to use oil fuel in ships and factories than it is to use coal. Perhaps before long we shall be using it in our homes too.

The great coal strikes of 1911 and 1912 made hundreds of big firms turn towards oil, and it is a remarkable fact that once oil fuel has been used coal is abandoned for ever.

Oil is not only cheaper than coal, but it is cleaner and less trouble. It is ever so much easier to transport and to supply to engines. A few feet of tubing and a main line express engine, for example, can take in 600 gallons of oil fuel in from four to five minutes. Oil, too, has the advantage that there are so many big deposits of it in various parts of the world that it is not affected by strikes so much as coal.

When proper oil-burning engines are used there is no smoke attached to it at all, and factories using oil have no tall chimneys, no piles of ashes, no tedious shovelling of coal into the furnace. Just a few pipes, that's all. A few taps regulate the oil supply to the boiler furnace, and, in fact, with oil the grimy coalstokers can be replaced by girls in spotless white caps and aprons.

DO YOU WANT ONE FREE?

About a year ago we issued a 56-page pocket booklet which we mailed to all our clients at that time. We still have a number left, of which we would be glad to send a copy free of charge or obligation to any investor asking for same.

It treats upon the Science of Investment; how Banks and Trusts make their money; the significance of watered stock; the difficulties and histories of old companies; the magnificent profits returned from various companies on small investments; speculative deals; about small shareholders; melons; inside methods; oil profits and who makes them; the abuse of money; growth and safety, and many other interesting items.

Funeral Tuesday.

The funeral of the late Mr. Norman Belbin took place on Tuesday afternoon, and was well attended. A guard of honor was present from Lodge St. Andrew, A. F. and A. M., and from Leeming Lodge, L. O. A., with which Societies deceased was associated. Interment was at the General Protestant Cemetery, the officiating clergyman being Rev. E. W. Forbes M. A.

Tuesday's Football Game

In the first of the football games for the Victory Cup, the Stars on Tuesday night defeated the Saints--this season's League champions--by 2 goals to nil. The game was a spirited one all through, and though the Saints made some fine attempts to reach their opponents' net, they were unsuccessful. J. Kavanagh and Power in turn did the needful for the Stars, one goal being notched up in each half. Mr. W. J. Higgins was referee.

A Refutation.

Editor Morning Post.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of to-day, in a report of the meeting held in the Casino Theatre last night on behalf of a political party led by Hon. R. A. Squires, you quote Mr. Cullen, a returned Naval Reservist, as alluding to me in the following terms.

"Mr. Cullen cited the case of a soldier who had lost both legs and on going to P. T. McGrath, he was told that he could shovel coal. Mr. Cullen brought down the house when he said, that if he had been in the man's place with a crutch he would have knocked the head of McGrath."

Permit me to say, in reply, that only one soldier has returned who has lost both legs. This is Private James W. Moore, of Holytown. Mr. Moore, on being discharged from the Regiment was immediately granted the maximum pension allowed him under the law, namely that for total disability, $50 a month, with $10 a month for a helper, the same that would be allowed him, if he were in Canada, this being the highest Pension paid by any allied country. In addition, of course, his artificial legs are renewed from time to time and repaired as they require the same. Moreover, it is quite open to him to engage in any business he thinks fit without his pension being reduced in the smallest degree.

When Capt. Butler brought him to me, and I talked with him, I suggested to him, off my own bat, the idea of his taking up the work of a linotype operator in a printing office, an employment that would admit of his sitting all day long, and which is much in vogue in Canada and America for men suffering from such a disability. He was taken with the idea, and I offered to have him trained in the Herald office and find him permanent employment there, if it could be arranged with the Typographical Union for its rules to be waived so that he could be brought in and receive such training.—He came to the office, looked over the linotypes, and then made an application to the Civil Re-Establishment Committee for training in such work, such being the prescribed procedure.

Dr. Blackall took up with the Typographical Union the question of his being admitted for this purpose, but the Union being only a branch of the International Union, and the rules of that body not permitting such training except for men who had been employed in printing offices before the war, except they entered apprentices and went through a four or five year course, it was not possible to work out this scheme. However, with a view to this or other employment for Mr. Moore, the Civil Re-Establishment Committee, on our representations, arranged to give him a course of training in the school maintained by that body, and he entered there accordingly. But trouble again occurred to his injured legs, and he had to interrupt his course to go into hospital for further treatment, and when he finishes his course it is hoped to be able to find him permanent employment of a nature suited to his condition.

These facts can be verified by Major W. H. Parsons, M.C., R.A.M.C., Secretary of the Pension Board, Dr. W. W. Blackall, Vocational Officer of the Civil Re-Establishment Committee, Capt. Bert Butler, D.S.O., his assistant, and Mr. M. F. Quigley, President of the Local Typographical Union.

P. T. McGRATH.

Obituary.

MATILDA PELLEY LOCKYER.

We regret to record the passing of Matilda Pelley Lockyer, wife of William S. Lockyer, who died at her home in Trinity on the 21st August, after a protracted and painful illness, which was borne with Christian fortitude and resignation. The deceased lady leaves to mourn their loss her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Sam. Grant and Miss Stella Eliza, one sister, Mrs. A. W. Miller, and a large circle of other relatives and friends. She was an earnest church worker, and interested herself in all good works. To the poor and needy her charity was unbounded, and many among the poor of Trinity will miss her sympathy and ready help.

Do You Seek Better Tyres?

The thing you want most in a tyre is the thing The Good year Tyre & Rubber Companies try hardest to put there.

That is great mileage at small cost. The Good year Tyre & Rubber Companies do put it there, and make sure of it by guarding every step of manufacture with jealous care.

To start properly, The Good year Tyre & Rubber Companies own and operate their own rubber plantation in the East Indies, their own cotton plantation, and their own cotton mills.

To continue properly, The Good year Tyre & Rubber Companies insist that other materials they use shall conform to the same high Good year standard.

And they pursue in the same critical spirit every one of the processes of tyre-building—they watch and weigh, test and try, up to the moment of wheeling the completed product into the stockroom.

By fitting Good year s to your car, you will, we feel certain, enjoy better tyre service than ever before.

Cadets Hold Field Day.

The members of the C.C.C. Senior Company met at their Armoury yesterday afternoon and proceeded to the country where they spent the evening in mimic warfare. Preceded by the drum and bugle band the corps returned to the city at 8 p.m., voting the day as a most enjoyable one.

Mr. C. E. Hunt left by yesterday's express on a visit to Toronto.

The Old Ships.
They called 'em from the breakers' yards, the shores of Dead Men's Bay,
From coaling wharves the wide world round, red-rusty where they lay,
And chipped and caulked and scoured and tarred and sent 'em on their way.
It didn't matter what they were nor what they once had been,
They cleared the decks of harbour-junk and scraped the stringers clean
And turned 'em out to try their luck with the mine and submarine...
With a scatter o' pitch and a plate or two,
And she's fit for the risks o' war—
Fit for to carry a freight or two,
The same as she used before;
To carry a cargo here and there,
And what she carries she don't much care.
Boxes or barrels or baulks or bales,
Coal or cotton or nuts or nails,
Pork or mallet or sewing-machines,
Or a trife o' lumber from Hastings Mill
She carried 'em all and she'll carry 'em still,
The same as she's done before.
And some were waiting for a freight,
and some were laid away,
And some were liners that had broke all records in their day,
And some were common eight-knot tramps that couldn't make it pay.
And some were has-been sailing cracks of famous old renown,
Had logged their eighteen easy when they ran their easting down
With cargo, mails and passengers bound South from London Town,
With a handful or two o' rattine stuff,
And she's fit for to sail once more;
She's rigged and she's ready and right enough,
The same as she used before.
The same old ship on the same old road,
She's always used and she's always knowed,
For there isn't a blooming wind can blow
In all the latitudes, high or low,
Nor there isn't a kind of sea that rolls,
From both the Tropics to both the Poles,
But she's knowed 'em all since she sailed sou' Spain,
She weathered the lot, and she'll do it again,
The same as she's done before.
And sail or steam or coasting craft,
The big ships with the small,
The barges which were steamers once,
The hulks that once were tall,
They wanted tonnage cruel bad, and so they fetched 'em all.
And some went out as fighting-craft and shipped a fighting crew,
But most they tramped the same old road they always used to do,
With a crowd of merchant-sailormen, as might be me or you...
With a lick o' paint and a bucket o' tar,
And she's fit for the seas once more,
To carry the Duster near and far,
The same as she used before;
The same old Rag on the same old round,
Bar Light vessel and Puget Sound, Brass and Bonny and Grand Bassam,
Both the Rise and Rotterdam—Dutch and Dagoes, niggers and Chinks, Palms and fire-files, spices and stinks—
Portland (Oregon), Portland (Maine),
She's been there once and she'll go there again,
The same as she's been before.
Their bones are strewed to every tide from Torres Strait to Tyne—
God's truth, they've paid their blooming dues to the tin-sah and the mine.
By storm or calm, by night or day, from Longships Light to Line,
With a bomb or a mine or a bursting shell,
And she'll follow the seas no more,
She's fetched and carried and served you well,
The same as she's done before—
They've fetched and carried and gone their way,
As good ships should and as brave men may
And we'll build 'em still, and we'll breed 'em again,
The same good ships and the same good men.
The same—the same—the same as we've done before!

Crippled Soldier Complains.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—The war is now over and what is left for us crippled to do; where does the help come in? When the returned cripples went in to some of our merchants and asked for a few dollars' worth of credit for business purposes they turned us down flat. We had some hundreds of dollars worth of credit from our Jewish merchants on Water Street and paid them every cent and we were willing to prove that our names were creditable. But it seems that it is not to be so with our own.
Now, Mr. Editor, is it justice that we should be treated this way? If we could have a fair stock we could have a comfortable living. For whom did we fight and bleed? Where now is the brotherhood of man? And where does religion come in? Does it not say, "Treat thy neighbor as thyself?" It is only a few months since our struggle was over and now everything is forgotten. It is in so what is going to happen later on? What is left for us to do, "a job for one hand or a crutch for one leg?" We should have had here a Lennox or a Trotsky; then we would get a hundred dollars' worth of credit for sixty or ninety days. They surely would say, "Good for you!"
Now, merchants, study the Bible and reform before it is too late.
Thanking you for space,
A CRIPPLED SOLDIER.
City, Sept. 19, 1919.

RAIN.

We love rain. We dote on rain. We simply adore rain. There are people—so we have heard—who do not like rain. We cannot understand how there can be. It seems to us that there must be something wrong with the individual with whom rain is not one delight after another. This heavenly liquid descends in torrents and flushes the streets and washes the people. It is a most beautiful sight to see the pretty little drops falling to the ground with a cute little "plop" and who has not tasted of the pleasure of a delightfully cool drop trickling down his neck, as the leaky umbrella failed to keep it out? Surely there breathes not the man with soul so dead that he cannot regard with sentimental contemplation drop after drop, bucketful after bucketful, barrel after barrel, lake after lake and ocean after ocean of rain falling, falling, falling! If there breathes such an one we cannot blame the poet for bewailing the departure from the human breast and councils the sentiment and romance that once were ours. Of course, when we refer to the delights of rain, we mean those of other countries. They are not intended to apply here. Personally, when it rains here, we take the quickest turn to our Cubum Editorium sanctum, where we remain until the last solitary drop has fallen, been absorbed and forgotten. Yes, verily, friends, rain is delight piled on delight.—The C-E.

RECIPROCATION.

Two sailors, an Irishman and a Scotchman, could never agree, and the rest of the crew had become adepts in starting them on an argument. One day "Patron Saints" was the subject of which the Scotchman knew nothing and the Irishman just a little. "Who was the patron saint of Ireland?" said Jack. "Do you mean to say you don't know?" said Pat. "Why, the holy St. Patrick." "Well," said Jack in deliberate tones, "hang your St. Patrick." In a towering rage the Irishman hesitated a second while he thought of something equally offensive, and then burst out with "And hang your Harry Lauder!"

SAY IT SWIFTLY.

Sally Simon saw Sadie Sies Slowly, sadly swinging. "She seems sorrowful," said she. So she started singing. Sadie smiled; soon swiftly swung; Sitting straight, stowed stidily. "So" said Sally, "something sung Scatters sunshine swiftly."

PERHAPS SHE'S RIGHT.

The Hero Worshipper: "There goes Mrs. Tompkins' 'usband! 'E's one of the old 'contemptibles." The Cynic: "All 'usbands is contemptibles."

MOHAMMAD SMALL EATER.

Mohammad was abstemious. A handful of dates and a mouthful of water were all the food he required for a hard day's work.

WORLD'S BIGGEST NEEDLE.

Cleopatra's Needle, the famous obelisk on the Thames Embankment, London, is one solid piece of stone, seventy feet high and one hundred and eighty-six tons in weight.

WHAT OLD TZE SAID.

The good I would meet with goodness, the not-good I would also meet with goodness.—Lao Tze, the Chinese moralist.

THEY MADE HIM BLUSH.

Bring a curate, of course he was shy. The other Sunday, after service, two fair members of his congregation persuaded him to see them home; and, after desperately dragging his brain for a topic to converse upon, he said to the girl on his right hand:—"What is your favourite hymn?" "The girl answered coyly:—" "Draw me nearer." The curate blushed furiously, and at that moment the other girl said:—"That is only the chorus; the commencement of the verse is 'I am Thine.'"

HE DIDN'T WANT MOSS.

Lady: "Why don't you go to work? Don't you know that a rolling stone gathers no moss?" Tramp: "Madam, not to evade your question at all, but merely to obtain information, may I ask what practical utility moss is to a man in my condition?"

Fletcher Henstep's clock stopped last night and he has been unable since to crank it. While it is undergoing a renovation, he is saving expenses by guessing the time of day.

MILLIONAIRE'S ROMANCE.

It is ingenious and novel ideas which pay in business nowadays, period.

Woolworth, the American millionaire who has just died, employed 25,000 assistants and had nearly 2,000 shops in this country and the States. Yet his initial capital was £1, his month-moth business being built up on the simple idea of a shop where prices would range from 2½d. to 5s., but no higher.—English Paper.

THE ONLY EXPLANATION.

Lady Visitor: "Remember, my good man, that stone walls do not a prison make, nor from bars a cage." Convict: "Well, they've not me hyperthesised then, that's all."

ENLARGING THE DICTIONARY.

Recent developments in aeronautics have added about two hundred words to our vocabulary, someone has estimated. And that's a large a vocabulary as some persons possess.

TELLING A GIRL'S AGE.

Most girls of a marriageable age do not like to tell their age, but you can find out if you follow the subjoined instructions, the young lady doing the figuring. Tell her to put down the number of the month in which she was born, then to multiply it by 2, then to add 5, then to multiply it by 50, then to add her age; then to subtract 365, then to add 115. Then tell her to tell you the result. The two figures at the right will denote her age, and the remainder the number of the month in which she was born. For example, say the number is 323; She is 22 years old, and was born in the 8th month, August. Try it.

[In reference to the above, we would sincerely advise that the gentleman trying to find out the young lady's age should be careful not to let the lady suspect what he is trying to find out, otherwise, "Well, the result can well be imagined! Further, if he should see any signs of dawning suspicion, see how quickly he can get through the door.—The C-E.]

DOWN IN THE MOUTH.

"Haven't you any milk that is more cheerful than this?" queried the new boarder as he poured some of the liquid into his coffee. "Why, what do you mean by that?" asked the landlady. "Oh, nothing," rejoined the new boarder; "only this milk seems to have the blues."

MUSN'T POINT AT SHIPS.

Sailors consider it very unlucky to point towards another ship. You may nod towards it, or indicate its presence otherwise, but don't point!

WHEN BOYS GIGGLE.

To be really well dressed a woman must be so attired that small boys will stand still to giggle at her. This saying is attributed to Monsieur Point, one of the noted Parisian dressmakers.

PA WAS AMUSED.

Little Bo: "Please doctor, will you come and see father at once?" Doctor: "What is the matter with father?" Little Bo: "He can't stop laughing, sir." Doctor: "Whatever is he laughing at?" Little Bo: "Mother's caught her tongue in the mangle."

GUESS HE'S RIGHT.

The creator of "Sherlock Holmes" predicts an uprising in England if food profiteering and other methods of beating the consumer out of his dollars are not abandoned. And Conan Doyle is something of a prophet, too.

SEEKING INFORMATION.

Young Mother: "He is somewhat cross to-day. He is teething." Old Bachelor (in great awe of the mite of humanity): "And when do you expect him to commence—er—commence—hairing?"

BETTER UNSAID.

A bitter jest, when it comes too near the truth, leaves a sharp sting behind it.—Tacitus.

HOWEVER YOU TAKE IT.

What three words did Adam use when he introduced himself to Eve, which read backward and forward the same? "Madam, I'm Adam."

LIKE TO BE TOLD.

Of course, your girl knows how sweet she is, but she likes to hear you say it.

THE EXPLANATION.

Guest: "Walter, are you sure this is ox-tail soup?" Waiter: "Yes, sir." Guest: "But I've found a tooth in it." Waiter: "Well, I don't know, sir, but I reckon that ox must 'ave been biting 'is tail."

1. Thou shalt heed the call of Plain quiet wall papers and white woodwork wherever such is possible.
2. Thou shalt lighten dark rooms by the use of light-hued, yellow-tinted wall paper, that suggests the blessed sunshine.
3. Thou shalt see that thy walls and thine own personality are not to forward, but modestly retiring.
4. Thou shalt use no large-patterned wall papers against which to hang thy pictures. The one will kill the other.
5. Thou shalt have no centerpiece or cornerpieces upon thy ceiling, but only a very nearly plain expanse of light color.
6. Thou shalt have thy fill of bright tints, and delicate designs for bedrooms and boudoirs, but for drawing-rooms, dining-rooms, libraries and halls, thou shalt be compelled to use less frivolous papers.
7. Thou shalt, when the ceiling is not too high, run the paper of the side wall up to the ceiling, putting the border just below the angle.
8. Thou shalt not panel the walls of a small room, except it be above a mantelpiece, a sideboard or a bookcase, where a bit of tapestry, a mirror or a picture may be held in place by strips of moulding.
9. Thou shalt use attention-compelling cut out borders, or conventionally designed strips for divisions between walls and ceiling.
10. Thou shalt remember at all times that thy wall paper is but a background against which to show thy pictures, thy furniture, and thy friends.

"Old Time Liberal" Propounds a Series of Queries.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—I shall be greatly obliged if you can give me, as an oldtime Liberal, space for a contribution to your columns which, I think, its importance will warrant.

I have been like yourself somewhat uncertain as to my political stand in the coming election and have been weighing carefully for many weeks past the pros and cons of the case as presented by the various parties. I read very carefully on Tuesday all the newspaper accounts of the Squires Party's meeting on Monday night in the Casino and weighed thoroughly yesterday the arguments presented by the various speakers and last night set down my views in the letter which I now send you.

The only man's opinions of all those who spoke on Monday night which seemed to me to carry any force were Mr. Brownrigg's. He impressed me as an honest man trying to bring the public mind to bear on the questions of serious concern and I admired him specially for the contemptuous way in which he discarded the showman's cry "The Graters Must Go," one unbetting serious-minded men, and focussed public opinion as represented by that meeting on the question of the Reids and their relationship to the Government of this country.

Nobody can dispute that the Reid issue is one that persistently calls for consideration and that every well wisher of the country must recognize clamorous for a settlement but I am perturbed over what I consider to be the sinister position which Mr. Squires occupies in relation to this question.
Therefore I am going with your permission to submit to Mr. Brownrigg through your columns certain propositions respecting which I would like an answer from him, believing that this will be the best way of getting light thrown upon a phase of the present political struggle which is the most obscure and dangerous that,
to my mind, has confronted this country for many years.

I refer specifically to the unexplained incident of Mr. Squires and the $5,000.00 which he was charged by Mr. Coaker in the Assembly a year or so ago with having received from the Reids, in Bank of Montreal notes, at a time when he (Mr. Squires) was Colonial Secretary in the National Government, and Chairman of a Subcommittee of the Executive Council of that day which was inquiring into claims made by the Reids against the Colony for extra work in connection with the building of the branch railways.

Before setting out my arguments in detail I think it only fair to Mr.
Squires to say that this transaction may be the most innocent possible but that when Mr. Squires seeks the franchise of the people of this country to elect him to power with the majority to require the Reids to live up to their contractual obligations, he owes it to the people, whose support he is seeking, that he should be able to show them that his hands are absolutely clean and that no breath of suspicion sullies his record.

Having said this much in fairness to Mr. Squires, I now desire to remark that innocent though this transaction may possibly be, no more sinister and suspicious transaction has been associated with any public man in this country for very many years past.

Mr. Squires was charged by a follow member of the Legislature with this circumstance more than a year ago, and Mr. Squires from that day until this has made no attempt whatever to explain it away.

Since then a further charge has been made that Mr. Squires after the publication of this charge by Mr.
Coaker drafted a letter so phrased as to convey to the public the impression that he never received this money at all and took this letter up to Mr. H.
D. Reid and asked him to sign it so that he, Mr. Squires might send it to the newspapers for publication and that Mr. Reid refused to do so on the ground that Mr. Squires had actually been paid the money. Serious enough as the original charge was, and gravelly as its seriousness was, ac-gravated by Mr. Squires' silence, this second charge and the silence which he similarly has maintained with regard thereto, constitutes an indictment of him as a public man, which, I submit, makes it impossible for conscientious people to vote for him, unless he can explain away this whole transaction and that without delay.

Let Mr. Brownrigg and myself range abroad for a moment and ask ourselves the question how could we conceive of Mr. Lloyd George, or Sir Robert Borden, or President Wilson remaining silent under accusations of this character, or coming back to our own shores, could we conceive of Sir Robert Borden being the subject of such charges and not indignantly repel-ling them before the ink was dry wherewith it was printed. The more the matter is studied the more, I submit, it leaves the conscientious elector no alternative but to insist upon an explanation. It is difficult to imagine any circumstances which o nits face is more calculated to arouse suspicion against a public man even though that suspicion may ultimately be found to be unjustified. The damning feature of this matter is, as I see it, and as, I think, Mr. Brown-rigg will see it, the fact that Mr.

Squires accepted this money (if he did accept it) in Bank of Montreal notes.
No business concern along Water Street pays amounts of this kind in bank notes. Mr. Brownrigg or any other business man knows this to be the fact. Money is only paid in bank-notes under circumstances like this when there exists some reason why it is desirable that the fact of the passage of the money is to be kept secret. I am entitled to ask why Mr.
Squires accepted this money in bank-notes, when a cheque is the customary method of payment of large amounts.

Again I say, can anyone conceive of Premier Lloyd George, or Sir Robert Borden, or President Wilson, or Sir Robert Borden, a member of a Ministry and specially charged at the time with an inquiry into claims by a Contractor under that Ministry receiving $5, 000.00 from this Contractor in the form of banknotes, a fact that means above everything else that the payment could not be traced.

Once more I admit that the whole transaction may be an absolutely innocent one, but I maintain, and I think Mr. Brownrigg will agree with me, that before the people of this country can accept Mr. Squires with the confidence that he is going to do the right thing by them, they must have an explanation of this affair in all its phases.

I see from time to time in Mr.
Squires' paper two very ugly words—graft and blackmail; Mr. Squires uses them freely against his opponents. I would like to ask Mr. Brownrigg, as an honest man, if he knows of any incident in the public career of any of our politicians better deserving of the infamy attaching to the words graft and blackmail than this Squires-Reid transaction, in the light of Mr.
Squires' failure for more than a year to attempt any explanation whatever of it.

Again I say that there may be a full and complete explanation, but that falling that explanation, Mr.
Squires cannot blame the people of this country if they put upon this affair a construction by no means complimentary to him.

Furthermore I say, and I think
Mr. Brownrigg, as an honest man, will agree with me, that falling an explanation from Mr. Squires of this affair, the people of this country will hesitate and will rightly hesitate to entrust the reins of power to the hands of Mr. Squires lest they find themselves "sold out" after the election.

We of Newfoundland have had in the past many disillusionments at the hands of our public men, and we want no more. Mr. Squires was a member of the Executive Council of this country from 1908 until the end of 1917. As a supporter of that Party during its first four years of power he voted for all the measures which it put through the Legislature, including the branch railway contracts, whereby the Reids regained a power in this country which had been rapidly passing from them during the Bond regime, and during the second four years of the Morris administration Mr. Squires was a member of the Ministry itself, and the Morris was a party to all the measures taken or not taken with reference to the Reids and their contractual obligations. During all this period no one ever read of, heard of, or saw Mr. Squires evincing any special interest in protecting this country from the Reids. So far as his public utterances show, or private channels have revealed, Mr. Squires never pursued any course in any way different from his fellows in the Government and never championed in any manner or fashion the cause of the country against the Reids.

Business Man Is Enthusiastic Over Big Improvement

W. W. Paynter, of North Rustico, Praises Tanlac For Helping Him and His Wife.

It is doubtful if there is a better known of the care fully secured of man in the vicinity of Charlottetown than W. W. Paynter, general merchant and proprietor of the hotel at North Rustico, Prince Edward Island.

While on a business trip to Charlottetown, recently, Mr. Paynter called at Reddin Brothers drug store to make a purchase of Tanlac and stated that both himself and wife are using the medicine with wonderful results. When asked if he was willing to give his experience with Tanlac to be published, Mr. Paynter said:
"Yes, indeed, for it was by reading the statements of others that we heard of it and were induced to attempt a trial. I had suffered from a bad stomach, poor appetite and a general run-down condition for years. I could not digest anything properly and as a result I lost weight and strength continually. I was extremely nervous, slept but little and had that listless and hazy feeling all the time.
This condition had existed so long that it was beginning to wear down my whole system. What I would eat nearly always caused me nausea, cramps in the pit of my stomach or some other form of indigestion. I also suffered from dizziness, felt listless and hadn't the energy to attend to business properly. I was not sick exactly; that is not sick enough to take to my bed, but was just about one half efficient and getting worse
all the time."

"My wife was affected practically the same way I was and had gotten into this run-down condition on account of the same trouble. I had two bottles each there is all the difference in the world in our condition already. My wife says she is feeling like a new person and as for me, why I have my old time vigor and energy back and am just feeling fine.
Everything I eat agrees with me perfectly now, for I have no more pain or distress of any kind after meals, and my sleep is sound and restful every night. We are going to continue taking Tanlac for a while longer and I don't hesitate to recommend it for I have never run across a medicine that I consider in its class."

There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive and assimilating organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole system. Next, it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest its food permitting the nourishing elements to be converted into blood, bone and muscle.

It overcomes, it is said, that great exciting cause of disease—weakness.
It renders the body vigorous and elastic, keeps the mind clear and energetic and throws off the symptoms of nervousness and indigestion.
It builds up the constitution weakened by disease and mental and physical overwork, quickens convalescence and is an unfailing source of comfort to all suffering from such troubles.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M.
Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.
—adv.

Between Mr. Squires and the Reids, the merits of the $5,000.00 transaction, and his candid and honest conclusion
as to whether if we vote for Mr.
Squires in the present emergency and return him to the control of public affairs we will not be as the homely phrase puts it "jumping out of the frying pan into the fire."

Yours truly,
