CAUTION.
The Cornwall Manufacturing Company have pleasure in intimating the complete restoration of their works at Cornwall which are now in full operation, producing large quantities of White and Grey Blankets, and Heavy Medium Class Percales. They regret, however, having again to call attention of the public to the continuance of the disreputable practice of importing English Blankets and selling them as Canadian. These Blankets are made largely of Shoddy and Cotton Waste, with a small percentage of pure Wool, and though slightly in appearance, closely imitating the Cornwall Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Manufacture," have neither warm nor wear, but can be sold at a lower price than the Cornwall Blankets which are made of Pure Wool) can be produced for.
The public are cautioned against this attempted deception, and respectfully informed that the name of the CORNWALL MANUFACTURING COMPANY is printed on the ticket of every Blanket made by them.

Town and County News.

PETITIONS have been circulated for signatures, praying the Legislature to pass an act to erect the municipalities of Mono, Mulmar, Melancthon, Amaranth, Louth, East Garafraxa and Orangeville, into a Provisional County, to be called the County of Dufferin.

MR. PETER RENNIE, of West Garafraxa, made a clean sweep among the grade cattle at the London Exhibition, being awarded no less than 5 first prizes. This was a very fitting termination to the season's exhibitions, and is a credit not only to Mr. Rennie as an individual, but also to the township and county in which he resides.

A very severe accident by burning happened to Mrs. Carson, of East Garafraxa, on Friday last. It appears that the old lady was baking bread when she was seized with a fit, to which she has been subject, and falling into the fire, was very badly burned before assistance arrived. Very small hopes are entertained of her recovery.

CHARLTON'S DIRECTORY.—The agent for this sheet directory is now in town, making arrangements for issuing a sheet directory containing advertisements of the business in Guelph. All business names are inserted free of charge, and it will also contain other valuable information. A certain number of copies are printed and distributed about the town and vicinity. As the publisher has had large experience in the business, the Directory will no doubt be well got up. Mr. Wallace is the agent.

FARM SOLD.—Mr. Christian Schwenndamm, one of the most enterprising farmers in Waterloo Township, has sold his farm near the town line between that township and that of Guelph, to Mr. George Atkinson, formerly of Nelson. The farm, which has been well cultivated and furnished with superior buildings, consists of 124 acres, and has realized the proprietor $8,000, or equal to sixty-three dollars per acre.

POSTRAITS OF EARL DUFFERIN.—We have received from Messrs. Notman & Fraser, Toronto, the well-known photographers, two beautiful portraits, cabinet size, of Earl Dufferin. They have been taken since His Excellency came to Toronto, and are published by his special permission. One gives the head and bust, the other is a full figure. Both are very correct likenesses, and are finished in the highest style of the art. Messrs. Notman & Fraser are famed for their excellent work, but we have never seen them turn out better portraits than these two. Copies are now on sale at their gallery.

Ladies Meeting.
As previously announced a number of the ladies of Guelph met in the Baptist Chapel on Thursday night, and had an interview with Mrs. Birt in reference to Miss McPherson's mission. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a goodly number found their way to the place of meeting, but not so many as would have been otherwise expected. After listening to a most interesting account of the benevolent work in which Miss McPherson is now engaged, those present at once proceeded to organize themselves into a Society, in order that they might more efficiently contribute to Miss McPherson's noble work, and also to other charitable objects to which their attention may be called. The following office-bearers were unanimously appointed:—President, Mrs. A. Lemon; Sect. and Treas., Mrs. C. Raymond; Managing Committee, Mrs. J. Hogg, Mrs. R. Thompson, Mrs. Dr. McGuire, Mrs. Quarrie, Mrs. Massie, Mrs. Horvath and Mrs. McKenzie, with power to add to their number.

The next meeting will be held on Tuesday, the 22nd, at half-past two, p.m., at the house of Mrs. C. Raymond. A cordial invitation is given to all who feel interested in the good work, and can make it convenient to attend. Contributions in the meantime in money or clothing may be forwarded to the Secretary. The Committee tender their thanks for donations already received.

THE BUFFALO COURIER says that Milwaukee enjoys its own fat woman. Her name is Pregar, and Fairbanks hardly does her justice at 535 pounds. She girls five feet eleven inches over the bosom, five feet two around the hips, two feet around the arm, and when she laughs her chin wrinkles down into the dark line collar space.

George Macdonald

THE FAMOUS NOVELIST'S FIRST LECTURE IN AMERICA.

The Boston correspondent of the New York Mail gives the following interesting gossip concerning George Macdonald's debut on the American lecture-platform:—The Harvard Street Library Association of classic old Cambridge—Harvard street, be it observed, not University—to-night had the honour of introducing "the greatest living master of fiction" to the lecture platform of America— "not only my first appearance in America, but my first lecture on Robert Burns," said the reverend author, pleasantly meeting the audience "half-way," and at once establishing the most frank and confidential relations with them. "I come to you, my own people, for you will let me call you my own people, won't you?" quite disarmed criticism and gained friends at the outset.

The enterprising publishers of Scribner's face the face of the author of "Wilfrid Cumberland" familiar to the reading public, and a very true picture of the Scottish face it is. The full beard, the dark hair, broad parted in the middle, and the broad, low brow are quickly recognized. A black dress coat on a slightly stooping, moderately tall figure, white necktie and rather prominent gold chain complete the figure.

The Robert Burns of the lecture course is an old acquaintance, a little threadbare with much handling, but when right in the midst of an earnest apology for the vice of his hero he bells ring out 9 o'clock the speaker pauses, drew out his watch and appealed to the audience. "Can you give me two minutes more?" they would have readily granted him hours instead, so interesting had he made his subject.

"Readings from Burns, with notes and commentaries, by the enthusiastic Scotch poet," would better describe the evening's entertainment, and while the readings were full of the Scotch fervor, admirably intimated, full of humor and fire when "To a Mouse," "Address to the Deil," and "Duncan Gray" were presented; full of pathos and tenderness when the love songs were recited, and alive with patriotic pride and earnest feeling when ("the song of all songs, a Scotchman," he said) Burns' "The Wallace Bleed" was reached;—while the readings were fired with an enthusiasm that reminded one of the scenes when Strauss led one of his own waltzes, the quaint characteristic comments were most enjoyable and left the deepest impression.

Spoken without notes, with no evidence of preparation, given with a profusion of nervous, energetic gesture, the lecturer seemed so carried away with his subject that the audience sat spell bound.

It seemed at times that the speaker would have been more at home in a pulpit; the clergyman was frequently evident. Often leaning on his desk as if it were a pulpit cushion, he read some of the serious poems such as one would read Watt's hymns, and frequent sermonizing marked the preacher. One seeing and not hearing the lecturer might easily imagine him a Methodist in the midst of an earnest exhortation.

A very earnest temperance lecture accompanied a sad apology for Burns' Drinking Songs and Intemperance. "It was not the drink that made the song, it was a companionship," was thrice repeated, and grateful allusions to graver verses were given with a positive glow, as he said, "Oh! I'd like to pass over what I must say."

Selections from "Tam O'Shanter" were prefaced: "I shall read all I think best. He was not as fastidious as we'd like him to be; not ahead of anything that went before. It's not because of the objectionable that his songs are so popular." The tone of regret, and the emotion with which these words were said were very touching, and a thrilling appeal to young men for the purity which only can make the best of a man, was very effective.

Burns' satires of the clergy was noticed kindly. "If the clergy had been different from what they were I believe Burns would have been different," and the doctrine presented at that day, "and some of them even now. I'm sorry to say, under a thin disguise," were made responsible for such of his poems as "Holy Willie's Prayer," which he read.

George Macdonald, the lecturer, exhibits little of the weird, supernatural, dreamland characteristics of George Macdonald the novelist. A very real, wide-awake man it is who speaks so lovingly and with satisfaction to his earnest words, recognizing many of the peculiarities that have made his books so popular. As a lecturer, his most striking characteristics are a tremendous earnestness and a wonderful simplicity and frankness, and most humility. The secret of Burns' power as a poet, he said, was "his thorough sympathy with humanity, with nature, human nature and animal nature, with all forms of life," and this George Macdonald evidently possesses in full measure. His Robert Burns cannot fail to please American audiences, and the man himself will win their hearts.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL.—The Tory papers are making a great ado about the alleged illegality of the action of Mr. Blake in creating Queen's Counsel, and they are now trying to make some capital out of the report that the Judicial Committee in England have decided that the Local Government had no power to create Queen's Counsel, and that it was the prerogative of the Dominion Government. To all which a contemporary effectively replies as follows:—1. That Sir John Macdonald has not ventured to create any Queen's Counsel since Confederation, which is a presumptive proof that he has not the power to do so. 2. That Sir John Macdonald has not ventured to publish the text of the alleged decision of the Judicial Committee, which is presumptive proof that no such decision has been rendered. 3. That all the Courts and Judges in Ontario have recognized the Queen's Counsel created by Mr. Blake, which is proof presumptive, if not proof positive, that the appointments were legal and constitutional.

THIS MORNING'S DESPATCHES

French Chamber of Commerce.

The Liquor Law in Chicago.

The Tweed Case in New York.

Paris, Oct. 20.—The Syndical Chamber of Commerce publishes the text of Secretary Boutwell's circular, directing that all goods imported into the United States in French vessels from countries other than France shall be charged with a discriminating duty of ten per cent ad valorem. The comment is appended that the circular was issued in retaliation for the new French law imposing differential duties on foreign bottoms, and will cause the loss to France of the carrying trade of numerous countries exporting goods via Havre.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—The notification of the Superintendent of Police to saloon-keepers to keep their doors closed yesterday in accordance with the ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquor on the Sabbath was almost universally observed. Friends of the law are much gratified at the result, and already the saloon-keepers acquiesce in demand for the enforcement of law.

New York, Oct. 21.—There is no sign yet of Tweed and Tom Fields. It is asserted that the former fled because, as sured by those claiming to know, that no bail would be granted on the new indictment found against him. The new indictments against Mayor Hall are very voluminous.

Local and Other Items.
The Sabbath School Convention closed its session at Montreal. The next meeting of the Association will be held in Toronto, during the month of October, 1873.

CAPT. COOTE, who shot the man Graham on the schooner White Oak, will be tried at the Welland Assizes, Oct. 28th. He is now out on bail for $1,600, $800 himself and two others of $400 each.

TORONTO was visited by an organized gang of burglars who broke into four stores. The thieves made a big haul of booty, although the exact amount was not yet been ascertained.

A Canadian family lately crossed Lake Michigan, bringing with them an ancestor who had lain in Dominion soil for 27 years. A storm arising, the superstitious sailors attributed it to the presence of the dead body, and promptly pitched the latter overboard.

LIEUT. HENLEY, of the 60th Rifles, who will be remembered played with the Canadian cricket team against the English Eleven, received an injury from the cricket ball in one of the matches which has rendered the amputation of one his legs necessary to save his life.

The Monetary Times understands that the Directors of the Western Insurance Company have resolved to cancel the issue of $200,000 additional stock at 10 per cent. premium to be fully paid up as intended. The tightness in money rendered the present an unfavorable time for the contemplated extension of capital.

WATER-SPOTS.—This summer there has been an unusually large number of water-spots reported on the Lakes; why the phenomenon has been more frequent it is not for us to say, but in addition to other reports, we learn from the Detroit Union that the steamer Indian, just up from the southern lake ports, reports seeing six immense water-spots on Lake Erie.

GIRLS OFF WITH THE CIRCUS.—The Hamilton Times says:—A telegram was received on the 14th inst. from the Chief of Police, Guelph, directing the authorities here to be on the lookout for Phoebe Smith, 16 years, a young girl named Josephine Smith, and Elizabeth Oliver, decoyed from Michigan by some black-legs following the show, and stating that the mother would be on the first train. Some trace was found of them here, and, in accordance with the telegram, the mother duly arrived and was directed on to Lockport, whither the birds had flown.

SENTENCED FOR ARSON.—Christopher Goodman, found guilty at the Hamilton Spring Assizes of inciting, was sentenced to be confined in the Provincial Penitentiary for the term of seven years, and on the charge of setting fire to McKee's house, in the vicinity of Hamilton, upon which he was found guilty on Thursday, he was sentenced to ten years imprisonment. The imprisonment to be concurrent. Patrick Blake, found guilty of setting fire to his house in Hamilton about a week ago, was sentenced to two years in the Penitentiary.

STEERAGE PASSENGERS.—The Montreal Witness says:—It certainly is pleasing to hear one so well qualified to speak on the subject as is the Rev. A. Styleman Herring, bear his testimony to the creditable nature of the arrangements for steerage passengers by the Allan Line of steamers. Much of a damaging nature has recently been written on this subject of the treatment of steerage passengers, but the character of the Allan Line have not suffered therefrom. Some thousands of poor immigrants from East London have been brought to Canada by their vessels, and on one occasion Mr. Herring himself crossed in one of them to Quebec; his object being amongst other aims, to see for himself how these people were treated on the voyage. The satisfactory conclusions which he drew on this head he has lately embodied in a letter to the London Daily News.

Mr. Froude on the Relations Between England and Ireland.

The following are the most salient points of Mr. Froude's first lecture in New York on Wednesday night:—

But philosophers have not yet discovered how to uproot the soil in Ireland, and so long as England remains a great power, with fleets and navies, and commercial interests in every corner of the world, England cannot, England will not let go her hold upon an island lying close under her side. She cannot risk the possibility of a hostile State establishing itself between her and the Atlantic. She will not consent either to a separation or to measures designed to bring it about.

Every concession which will promote the happiness of the Irish people we are willing to make, we are willing to volunteer; but we cannot commit political suicide. Until England is beaten upon her knees, Ireland must share the fortunes of the stronger country. If the Irish race refuses to be reconciled, but to us, than we must continue as we are—each a thorn in the other's side—or they must themselves seek another home, or else they must fight for their independence, and win it like men. Should they achieve such an enterprise, though my duty would then be to my country, and though I would struggle to hold Ireland to its obedience, yet, as a member of the great human brotherhood, when it was done, I should willingly welcome them as another nation of the earth. (Applause.) But political freedom, gentlemen, is too precious a jewel to be lightly owned. It is not to be bartered away for money, it is not to be granted on newspaper articles, that the fates award the crown of national independence. That crown is the reward only of united, persistent determination to be free, a determination which flinches from no danger, admits of no compromise, but to expend itself in deed as well as in word.

To win independence they must first learn to obey. They must learn subordination and self-sacrifice. They must forget their quarrels and feuds, uniting themselves into one harmonious whole with a common purpose. To bestow independence upon a people who have never earned it, is to give wings to those who have never learned to fly. Those who desire to be free must first show that they can control themselves. If I were to sum up in one sentence the secret of Ireland's misfortunes, I should say it lay in this: That while from the first she has resisted England, complained of England, appealed to Heaven and earth against the wrongs England had inflicted on her, she has ever invited others to help her, and never herself made an effective fight with her own ranks. Compare the history of Scotland with that of Ireland. England first invaded Scotland, and endeavored to incorporate it into England by force. The whole Scottish people told Edward it should not be. England could overrun their country, build castles and garrison them—she would intrigue, bribe and threaten. The English failed. They could not kill the whole people, and while the people lived the people were determined to be free. England found it had a wolf by the throat. She could not strangle it, the effort to hold it down was too exhausting to be maintained, and the contest was abandoned. To-day a contest exists between the two, and it was effected on equal terms. To-day Scotland retains her religion, all her laws; the Scottish nobles remain on the soil which they so nobly defended. Out of the union of England and Scotland arose the country which the world knows as Great Britain. (Applause.)

Ireland too, was invaded. Ireland, instead of a narrow river and a dry marsh for a frontier, had a trench of sea before her 70 miles across. She had a larger population than Scotland and a country no less difficult to be overrun, yet the invaders fastened themselves upon her soil, and to-day remains under the yoke of the stranger. She has had no Bannockburn, she has had no Bruce nor Wallace. She persists that she is in chains, and she cannot break them. She has all this liberty which England and Scotland have. There is no country in the world where a Government can be defied with so much impunity, and where mutiny is allowed so much freedom of speech as in Ireland at the present day. Yet she makes nothing of it. What is the explanation of the difference? Are the Irish less brave than the Scots? They have proved their courage on a hundred battle-fields. Was Ireland occupied in such overwhelming force that resistance was impossible? Forty thousand English were defeated at Bannockburn. For five centuries the English available force in Ireland rarely exceeded 1,500 men. The Irish were forever quarreling among themselves. The Scots were together. A Douglas cared more for his country than himself. An O'Donnell would take the English side if they would help him to a slice of his neighbor's land. (Laughter.) An Irish proverb says: "When you find an Irishman on the spit, you can always find two other Irishmen to turn it." (Laughter.) O'Donnell was no exception. He it was who, when reproached for selling his country, said he thanked God he had a country to sell! (Laughter.)

No people ever allowed performance to limp so miserably behind promise. Look at the history of Irish rebellions, and you read that the temptation of revenge upon the hereditary foe has been stronger than the hatred of the national foe. Who does not know, if familiar at all with the history of Ireland, that, if accident set Ireland free to-morrow, the first step after a declaration of independence would be a declaration of civil war? But, until Ireland is united in its determination to have liberty or die, independence would be a curse to her. England has only one wish for Ireland, and that is to give her all the advantages and blessings she can. Separation we cannot agree to. All else we yield to, and I appeal to American opinion to assist us in determining what more can we do than has been already done. The English and Irish are divided by a cloud of mutual distrust and cannot understand each other. I believe you wish well to England. The English-speaking race are connected by ties which cannot exist between any other countries. Ireland lies between us. One or other on both of us her future fate depends. America may form the intermediate element with which a combination hitherto impossible may be at last effected.

The horse epidemic is increasing in Buffalo so as to threaten to seriously embarrass the business of the city.

The Governor-General.

Earl Dufferin in the short time that he has been in Canada has done more to make himself popular with the people than any Governor we ever had, with the exception, perhaps, of Lord Elgin. He does not content himself by staying at the capital, and in a hum-drum, decorous way earning his salary by discharging the official duties required of him. He is bent on making himself thoroughly acquainted with the country—its manufacturing position and resources, its industries of every character, and its educational status. He does not hedge himself in with his official dignity, and stand aloof from the people in solitary state, but freely mixes with all classes, questions them closely and intelligently on all matters relating to the business of the country, and thus in a sense makes him one of themselves in their pursuits and in their prospects. Possessing as he does a highly cultivated intellect, and a remarkable faculty for observation, we venture to say that he already knows more about Canada and its industries than any half-dozen of the ordinary, easy-going Governors who have administered the government in this country. His replies to the large number of addresses presented from the different bodies are marked, by a felicity of expression, a thorough conception of the subjects adverted to, and a generous sympathy with all aims and objects which at once win for him our respect and esteem, and give evidence that while he remains among us he is, as far as his position will allow, determined to become one of ourselves, and identify himself as much as possible with our progress and prosperity.

We were particularly struck with his excellent speeches in reply to the addresses presented to him at the Normal School and Toronto University last week. He made the honest admission that he was equally surprised and delighted to find that our educational facilities were unequalled by any country in the world, and of such a high order as to take rank with similar institutions in any of the older European countries. Especially did he advert in terms of the highest praise to the wide range and practical character of our University curriculum; and though not undervaluing the importance of a classical education, he dwelt on the benefits of such an extensive curriculum, and its peculiar adaptability to the wants and varied pursuits of this young country. Such praise from a thoroughly competent judge, such as Earl Dufferin is, cannot but be particularly pleasing to our people, and is a fitting acknowledgment of the valuable labors of our public men who have laid the foundations of our educational system deep and wide, and afforded such ample facilities to all classes for acquiring knowledge.

Should Earl Dufferin continue to follow out the course he has so wisely chalked out for himself, his residence in Canada will be an immense benefit to the country in stimulating and encouraging her people to greater efforts in future, in making the governing classes and people in Britain better acquainted with our real position and wonderful progress; and he will at the same time earn for himself a popularity which will add additional lustre to his already brilliant reputation both as writer and a statesman.

A bill has been introduced in the Spanish Cortes abolishing the penalty of death for political offences, and has passed its first reading.

The date of the grand banquet in honor of the recent Reform victories has not as yet been fixed, but it is understood that it will be on the eve of the opening of the Ontario Legislature. No efforts are being spared by the committee to render it eminently successful. Hon. Edward Blake will be one of the speakers on that occasion.

On Saturday last Dr. Laratt W. Smith was unanimously selected by the Senate of the University of Toronto to the office of Vice-Chancellor. The duties of the office have been fulfilled for many years with great assiduity and tact by the Hon. Adam Crooks. He resigned it lately, considering that the position was incompatible with that of a member of a Government which controls the affairs of the University.

Prince Napoleon has appealed to the Procureur-General of France for redress against the Minister of the Interior and the Prefect of police, and others who took part in his expulsion from France. The appeal is made in accordance with the provisions of the penal code. Should it be rejected or disregarded, the Prince will commence personal proceedings in the Courts against the parties concerned, and will avail himself of all legal means to procure restoration of his rights as a citizen of France, and the punishment of those who have illegally driven him from his country.

The Nature and Preservation of Timber.

The best timber is that which has grown slowly, on a soil rather dry than moist, and is compact and heavy, the annual logs being thin and uniform, showing a hard clear surface when cut, and not a dull or chalky one, free from clefts or radial cracks, and from emphases and cracks between the annual layers. Timber is best cut at or near the maturity of the tree, as a young tree has too much sapwood, and an old one is likely to get hard and brittle at the core. Probably fifty years is the least and one hundred years the greatest age at which the ordinary wood should be cut. The best season for felling is when the sap is quiet, or in midsummer and midwinter. Timber exposed freely to the air in a dry place, sheltered from the sun and rain requires two years and upwards, according to the size, to become well seasoned. A small part, however, of the material put into our public works receives sufficiently careful treatment in this respect, and hence the short life of the majority of these structures. Artificial seasoning is effected by exposing the material, properly piled in a suitable building, to a current of hot air. Timber loses in drying from 15 to 30 per cent. of its weight, and shrinks across the grain from two to five per cent. Wood lasts the best when kept dry and well ventilated. When kept constantly wet it is somewhat softened, and will not resist so much, but it does not decay. Piles placed in the Rhine nearly two thousand years ago have been found quite sound during the present century, and the roof timbers of some of the old Italian churches are still in good condition. Many highway bridges in this country are apparently uninjured by from forty to fifty years of use; and railway bridges, made of good material and carefully protected, have been in service for twenty years, and are still in good order.

Wood decays the fastest when alternately wet and dry, or when subjected to a close, hot atmosphere. Thorough seasoning, protection from the sun and rain, and the free circulation of air are the essentials to the preservation of timber. Oil paint will protect wood from moisture from without, but unless it is perfectly dry when painted the moisture within will be unable to escape and will cause decay. Several different methods of preservation are now in use, consisting of an injection of different chemical preparations into the pores. Chapman's process employs sulphate of iron (sopparas); Kyan's process, corrosive sublimate (bichloride of mercury); Burnett's process, chloride of zinc; Bonaccorsi's method, sulphate of copper; and Mr. Bethell saturates the timber with creosote. In these several operations the air is exhausted from the tank in which the timber is placed, the sap drawn out from the pores and the solution poured in.

The woody fibre is seen by the microscope to consist of long, slender tubes, upon the tenacity of which depends the tensile strength of the timber. The lateral adhesion, or the strength across the grain depends upon the adhesion of the sides of the tubes. The pines, or cone bearing trees, have a straight and regular fibre, and are well adapted to direct tensile strains; but the lateral adhesion is small, so that they are much more easily split along the grain, and much less suitable to resist shearing endwise, or sliding of the fibers on each other than the hard woods.

Immigration into Canada.

Under the above heading the New York Herald makes the following comments upon the progress of Canada in material prosperity: "We think our northern neighbours slow. So they are, if we contrast their history with ours for the past century. Still, the statistics show that during the last decade Canada has received by immigration an addition of more than forty per cent on her population, and during the last thirty-three years more than twice doubled her number of inhabitants, counting now two and a-half millions against half a million a third of a century ago. As our population exceeds that of the Canadian Dominion by more than ten-fold, it is natural for us to look upon her growth as insignificant. Yet, since the breaking out of our late war, she has gained at a more rapid proportionate rate than we have, our increase of population having been thirty-five per cent. As Canada has three hundred and fifty thousand square miles of territory, being equal in extent to Great Britain, France and Prussia, or six times the size of England and Wales, she has as yet only ten persons for each 640 acres of land. Consequently she has abundance of room for all who may come to find homes upon her fertile soil or to win fortunes from the abundant facilities she offers for profitable commercial or industrial enterprise. Should she continue to grow at her present rate till the end of this century, she will then have a population of twenty millions, or about half our present number. Though events do not move with a rush so rapidly beyond our northern frontier as on this side of it, Canada has vast enterprises which mark her population as embracing the same elements of thrift which are so rapidly developing our own greatness. Her great rivers and excellent harbours, her canals and railways, when completed, will offer to the products of her fields, forests and mines easy means of export, while her rapidly growing and prosperous population will furnish abundant consumers for the fabrics with which Europe balances the traffic. It cannot be doubted that for British subjects who wish to escape the overcrowding and excessive competition in all industrial and commercial pursuits "at home," and who hesitate about trying our experiment of self-government, Canada offers abundant hope for an improved condition, and it is fair to believe that for several decades she will receive a constant and liberal flow of immigration, and that the two English speaking nations must control the destinies of North America. If in time, Canada wishes to take her place in the constellation of stars upon our banner of freedom, we hold ourselves ready to comply with the dictates of "manifest destiny." Should she prefer to stay out of the Union we shall still be true friends, generous rivals and good neighbours. Her prosperity will only stimulate ours."

TO MABEL IN HEAVEN.

You passed away, O Mabel, like the dew of morning hours
That trembles on the thirsty grass, and gladdens all the flowers;
Ere your sweet young life was tainted by a breath of sin or care,
You left this weary world for realms all bright beyond compare.
But you left a heart, O Mabel, wrestling with such bitter woes
As only in this world of grief, a mother's heart can know.
Could she see a single moment all the blessings that are thine,
Made a star of light forever in the Saviour's crown divine,
Could she look upon the beauty of the dwellings of the blest,
Where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest,
I believe her lonely heart would cease its cry of longing wild,
And would sing: "I thank thee, Father, for thy goodness to my child."
O, I know her lonely heart would cease its cry of longing wild,
And would say: "I bless thee, Father, surely thou hast saved my child."
O, she knows the sea of sorrow woman's heart must battle through,
And she would not wish you, Mabel, on the dreary ocean too.
Soon her bark shall ride at anchor on the waters of the bay,
And you'll lead her through the pearly gates into the light of day.
Where not a breath of sin or care shall mar a single soul,
While the never-ending ages of eternity shall roll;
Where every spirit shall forget its cry of longing wild,
Where the child shall find its mother and the mother find her child,
Where the Father guards his children in the dwellings of the blest,
Where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

CHAPTER XXII.

A FOUL DEED—THE MISSING ONE.

"Captain Gibson," cried George in wildest horror, "forego your horrid purpose. Do not—oh, God, do not kill me!"

For answer they dragged him forward with increased determination, and by the fenshish expression which he saw on both their faces the youth knew that they had resolved on his destruction. Convinced now that appeals would be useless, he ceased to make them, but a frenzy of soul supervened, which caused him to put forth a frantic effort to escape from their hands.

The love of life is strong in every man, and most so in the young and healthy, who have no affinity to death, but whose every hope and desire is in existence. This instinctive and deepest power of feeling in the soul leapt up into vehement exercise in George, and there ensued a struggle of the most desperate character—a silent, hard-breathing struggle of men whose last energies were staked on the issue.

Had George been uninjured when he began the contest his chance would have been good, for he was much younger and more active than his antagonists, but the blow which had a little before rendered him insensible had weakened him much, and though he was animated by the most powerful influence that can work in a human soul, he was placed at fearful disadvantages, and struggled with a blind, confused, ill-directed effort, which was in a sure way deciding the contest against him.

With a horrible sinking of soul, George realized this, and the bitterness of death came upon him, and during the few moments that he still continued desperately to struggle, the cruelty of his fate pressed upon his soul with acutest agony.

They had now borne him up against the frail rotten bars of the wooden enclosure, and beneath him he saw the black gulf of the shaft of the old mine, round which years ago the wooden bars had been placed as a protection both for man and animal. The mode of his death was here made clear to him. He was to be hurled to destruction down that black abyss—ashed to pieces in its unknown depths. With a shuddering groan he made a last despairing effort to escape, but his murderers on their side increased their endeavor, and pressed him ruthlessly against the wooden bars till they gave way with a crash and a suddenness which nearly precipitated all three forward into the shaft.

Stephen and Garrett saved themselves by bounding back. George, alas, fell inward, and clutched as the fall of one of the bars which still remained firm. He was now hanging over the abyss without foothold, and supported only by his arms. The bar, too, was frail as the rest, and he felt it cracking and yielding—the moment it gave way he must fall and perish.

"Break the bar," hissed Stephen, through his panting lips.

Nathan had already formed the intention of doing so, and with a fenshish glare

THE CATTLE PLAGUE IN ENGLAND.—This dreaded disease broke out in the East of England in the first day of September. Immediately it was evident that it was rinderpest of which the animals had died, the stringent rules of an Act passed three years ago, were put in force. All movements of cattle on the roads, all fairs for sale of cattle, etc., are prohibited, without first a special license from the local authorities, and where there is any disease within two miles of where the cattle came, or the place where they are going, or cases of the disease within the twenty-eight days preceding, such license is absolutely refused.

Grief, excessive anxiety, or prolonged study will produce infirmity in the nervous system, in proportion as the strength of that system is expended upon the mind in troubled thought, so are the organs of digestion, assimilation and nutrition, rendered inactive and sluggish in proportion as the system becomes infirm. Every individual has some one organ weaker than the rest, and this is always the first to suffer during nervous prostration; for example, a delicate nervous system, sometimes causes total suspension of the muscular action of the heart, when the patient is debilitated, producing sudden hemorrhage and death. No doubt any longer remains of the practicability of restoring the nervous system, and through the nerves the muscles of the impaired organs. Fello's Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites has been proved to possess such power in numerous instances. It will impart strength to overcome trouble and affliction. Persons who are accustomed to look upon the dark side, and who see no pleasure in living, on using this Syrup soon learn to value and enjoy life, and those who study deeply or through long hours, will find in the Syrup a promoter of the power of endurance in the brain.

BRANLEY'S—Epps's Cocoa—GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labeled "James Epps & Co., Homeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

THE REASON WHY
Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calais is called a Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic, because Phosphates constitute more than half the material of the human body, and are absolutely essential to the growth of Bone, Muscle and Nerve, which cannot attain full development without them. They promote a good appetite, perfect digestion, create pure, healthy, vitalizing blood, and supply the waste constantly going on in the system as the result of mental and physical exertion. Being combined with Calais, the Peruvian Bark, the only specific for Chills and Fever, and that condition of Nervous Prostration, and General Debility arising from low vitality and exhaustive diseases, it forms an elegant and agreeable, invigorating Tonic, purely physiological in its action, that may be taken safely under all circumstances, and in diseased conditions of the body, as it builds up the constitution in the same manner as our daily food.

Sold by all Druggists at 21.
POSITIVELY A FACT.
