Select Literature. A ST. VALENTINE'S MISHAP.

CHAPTER I. It was the 13th of February. The early twilight, murky and chill, formed no inducement to persons who adorned an evening stroll; and Captain Thornbury for the last hour had sat upon his apartment, lounging in an easy chair before a bright fire, with a cigar between his lips.

THE next moment the captain was bowing low before his idol. Though a lover, his statement was correct: Rosalind Gower was beautiful, and her expressive face could beam and sparkle with love, or freeze into the most frightful beauty.

It was with neither the one or the other of these that she greeted the captain, as, casting a timidly searching glance at her face, he paid his compliments. Her manner was decidedly not cold, but it was assuredly devoid of that warmth, mingled with a tinge of nervousness and conscious down-dropping of the eyes, that he had hoped to see, and his heart beat yet a little faster and a little less reluctantly as he besought her hand for the quadrille then forming.

'Then may I hope for the honor of the next?—a valise, I believe,' he asked, flashing a covert glance of hate at the 'idiot, Jedsion,' whose exultant smirk plainly showed whom Miss Gower had favoured with the quadrille—only a square dance, thank Heaven!

'Really it's most unfortunate, but I find my world is given for the first five dances,' rejoined Rosalind, smiling as she consulted her card. 'I cannot promise until the sixth.'

'The sixth?' stammered poor Thornbury. 'With that, then, I must be content. Business from the Horse Guards prevented my being here earlier else, surely, I should not have been so unfortunate.'

'Perhaps not, if you reckon it a misfortune, Captain Thornbury,' she replied; then added: 'Mr. Jedsion, I fancy they are taking places.'

The young officer drew mutely aside. He was even too confused to offer to hold Rosalind's bouquet or burlesque, though she rendered so slight a service would have been a consolation to him. What could it mean? How changed she was! Her last sentence had even sounded cold and scornful. Had she, indeed, divined his intent by those lines, and was this a method to prevent an unpleasant interview? At that thought the room spun round, and Captain Thornbury hastened to sit down in a retired corner to recover himself.

Then fearing such indolence, so foreign to his usual lively, sociable nature, would attract general attention, as it had already Cissy and Frank Gower's, he commenced to play with the cards, not the one inquiring whether he were not well, the other jesting him upon being in love—he arose, found a partner for the next dance, and performed it, to his fair companion's disgust, like an automaton.

It was no good attempting it. He could not get his spirits up. Rosalind's manner chilled him to the very heart. Not that she avoided him—no; she spoke, when there was occasion, pleasantly enough. But it was not being in love—he arose, found a partner for the next dance, and performed it, to his fair companion's disgust, like an automaton.

'Yes, of course; but—well, I may as well confess all—we have made up our minds, too, that we would propose before he left for India—that he would propose this very night.'

'I can assure you, my dear, that nothing is further from the captain's thoughts; and it is well it is so, for it prevents one of the most painful scenes a woman could go through.'

'Then you would refuse him?' was the wistful question.

'Decidedly—without the slightest hesitation. I am as little likely ever to consent to be his wife as he is ever to ask me to be so.'

'Well, I am truly surprised! You can't like that foolish coxcomb person?—that is impossible!'

'How do you know?' rejoined Rosalind, with a laugh, that struck like a knife in the listener's breast. 'Hearts are strange things, and he is most devoted. But come, I am engaged to him for the next dance. Is it a round one?'

'So; a square. It is the Lancers!'

The voices ceased; there was a rustling of garments, and the speakers were gone.

Assured of this Captain Thornbury—soldier as he was—buried his face in his hands and sobbed like a child—or rather, man; it being without tears, the worst of griefs. The paroxysm reached no higher than his throat, but that it was wrong with torturing agony.

Conquering his emotion with a great effort, he forced himself to think how he should act. His first impulse was to open the conservatory doors and escape unseen, but he had wisdom enough left to remember that he was in evening dress, and would have to return next day to bid the Gowers farewell before he left England. How could he do so if he quitted The Cedars in the eccentric fashion he contemplated?

Not! On second thought he would master his suffering and say farewell that night. It would be better when surrounded by guests. Yet, if he stopped he would have to dance with Rosalind. Not at all—he would excuse himself. He dared not trust himself to him so cruelly on as she had, when her feelings towards him were such as she had at that moment expressed. He was right after all; she preferred the fool, Jedsion.

The last galling idea produced a sudden change. The captain felt his cheeks grow hot, his eyes sparkle, and a strange excitement seize him as it occurred; and it was under this influence that he resolved to return to the ball-room. The Lancers were just forming. The couple opposite Rosalind and Jedsion had yet to be filled up, and Edward Thornbury, quickly obtaining a partner, became their vicar.

His companion now had no cause to complain of his want of animation nor conversation. Ever gay and agreeable, he outdid himself. He saw Rosalind cast a strange look of surprise in his direction, and it seemed to serve as an incentive to his excitement for he laughed, chatted, apparently in the highest spirits—rather too high indeed, as if champagne had something to do with it.

The dance over, he led his partner to a seat, apologise for so soon leaving her, and made his way to Rosalind. She was making the tour of the ball-room with the hateful Jedsion as he stopped before her.

'Pardon my intrusion, Miss Gower,' he said now very calmly, 'but the business to which I referred once before this evening necessitates my departure from Norwood to-night. If possible, therefore, may I hold myself excused for the next, the sixth dance, as I must, really, take my leave now?'

He noticed—at least, thought he did—that she grew pale, that her voice faltered, as extending her hand, she said:

'This is very sudden, is it not, Captain Thornbury?'

'It is rather, but even with us military men, business must precede pleasure sometimes. Allow me to say goodbye!'

'Good-bye!' she exclaimed. 'Good-bye!' he reiterated; then added, in a low tone, 'I trust to have the pleasure of seeing you when I return—if I return—Miss Gower. When perhaps, though—and his glance for a moment rested on her companion—you may no longer be Miss Gower. Under whatever name, however, you can wish your greater happiness as a Captain Thornbury.'

He raised her hand to his lips, heard her say something, but could not tell what, owing to the murmur of his voice, then hastened away. The other members of the family were in other apartments; and seeking them, he made his farewell. Ten minutes after, like a madman, he was hastening from the house. Even as his steps trod the crisp gravel of the avenue, a murmur and a commotion had arisen in the ball-room.

Miss Gower had fainted!

Ignorant of this—an event which might have caused him a beam of pleasure perhaps—Captain Thornbury reached his apartments, entered them so abruptly and unexpectedly, as to arouse a master's chair and his master's slippers. Much to his secret satisfaction, however, his delinquency was not noticed.

'Tim,' said the captain, hurriedly, 'most of my clothes and books are packed, are they not?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Then fling the rest into the remaining trunks, and get one of the servants the while to fetch a cab, for, if possible, I must catch the last train to London.'

'What, captain, going to-night?'

'Unexpected business makes it imperative that I should be in town early to-morrow. Quick! do you hear me? See about the trunks!'

THE ELECTRICAL TELEGRAPH.

In the present progressive age, when changes and improvements are rapidly multiplying, and the inventive powers of the human mind are exemplified in the opening of new facilities for the extension of all those interests with the expansion of modern civilization.

Those who are now in mid-life distinctly remember the time, when we never received intelligence across the Atlantic in less than ten days.

About thirty-five years ago, Morse propounded to the world the novel idea of utilizing electricity as a messenger of instantaneous intercourse between far-divided localities.

The invention of which we are speaking was the benefaction of a great mind bestowed upon the human family.

Among the incidents was the remarkable presence of mind displayed by a woman who sat in the gallery within a few feet of the fatal spot.

The London Hour understands that within a few days a further step will be taken towards the consolidation of the British North American Provinces.

Forty years ago this ready mode of correspondence was unknown. Whatever may have been the dreams of philosophy, or the struggles of science, the busy world at large knew nothing of them.

Suppose by a fiat of the Omnipotent Ruler of the universe, the laws of electricity were to be so changed that it could no longer be employed as a messenger of intelligence, the result would be universally disastrous.

Only a day or two ago we received a telegram of no small importance to us. By any other source the news could not have reached us in time to be usefully available.

A TERRIBLE CHURCH DISASTER.

The following are the particulars of the disaster caused by the falling of the walls of the St. Andrew's church, New York, on Thursday night, 25 inst.

The building, the upper wall of which fell upon the church, was partially burned on the 19th of January, and the thaw had melted the snow and completely broken the otherwise unsupported walls together.

There were about thirteen hundred persons in the church when the wall fell. The Lenten services were drawing to a close, and the Rev. Father Carroll of St. Stephen's church was near the end of his discourse.

He concluded as the wind ceased its raving, but the sound of his last word was almost overcome by sharp snap-like noises that came from the gallery at the east side of the church.

The horrified people in the body of the church and in the other gallery had not time to see what had occurred when the sound was repeated, and there was a fall of thick dust raised over the gallery which obscured it from view.

In their mad haste to escape a threatening danger, the people fled toward the street. They caught hold of each other impulsively, and mutually delayed one another.

At Park Hospital there still remains eight of the wounded, all of whom are doing fairly well, with the exception of Patrick Lavale, a young man whose spine is injured, who cannot possibly recover.

Among the incidents was the remarkable presence of mind displayed by a woman who sat in the gallery within a few feet of the fatal spot.

Six persons were killed and a large number more or less injured.

—The oldest slip of all in Webster's Dictionary is, that while it is called "the unabridged" the word unabridged is not found in its list of words.
—A tax of six cents per pack is imposed on playing cards in England. During the financial year 1873-4, the tax was paid on 1,028,956 packs.
—The Chatham Herald says it is reported that the Frenchman, Lataigue, who was wounded by the constables in the affray at Albert's house in Caraque has died.
—Most of our exchanges have something to say about wild cats just now. We hope that ere long some new game will be started, to break the wild cat monotony.
—The Revolution at Venezuela is on end, and the rebels have delivered up their arms. The leaders of the insurrection will leave the country, and the others will remain unmolested.
—The venerable Judge Marshall—we believe a nonagenarian; is still vigorous in mind, and ready to use his pen in the advocacy of truth, as well as in the exposure and condemnation of error. In the Morning Chronicle last week he showed up the fallacies of that Universalist Sermon, which appeared in the columns of that paper a few days before.

—The Anglo American Cable Com-pany announce that after the 1st of May the tariff from New York to Great Britain and France will be reduced to fifty cents in gold per word.
—The notorious John Mitchell, well-known as an Irish insurrectionist, and lately denied a place in the House of Commons, for which he was elected, is said to be dangerously ill.
—General Sheridan has sent a letter to the Methodist Preachers' Association at Boston, thanking them for their recent vote approving the President's Louisiana policy, and his own action in enforcing it.
—The Court of Queen's Bench in Quebec has decided that a Provincial Assembly has the power to enforce the attendance of witnesses, and to imprison for contempt, by virtue of the Speaker's warrant.
—It appears that the extreme severity of the present winter in the "far west" of the United States and in Ontario, is being attended with several epidemic diseases—scarlet fever, measles, mumps, &c.
—The North German "Gazette" says the French Government has ordered the purchase of 10,000 cavalry horses in Germany. The "Gazette" hopes that the German authorities will take steps to prevent such purchases.
—Avard Longley, Esq., M. P. P., for this County gave a lecture at Berwick on the 2nd inst. Subject: "The Wines of the Bible." From the notice of the same in the "Star" we gather that the subject was ably handled.
—A lecture will be delivered at the Court House, to-morrow evening, under the auspices of the Bridgetown Literary and Debating Society, by the Rev. John Clark, pastor of the Baptist Church, this town. Subject: "Clas. Hadden Spurgeon."
—A correspondent of the Sackville Post advocates Fort Cumberland as a proper site for the proposed Maritime Province Penitentiary. Is it because that locality is centrally situated for the prevalence of crime—and that it should be where it is most needed?
—One ship broking house in England offers nearly two hundred steam vessels for sale, and it is stated that not less than three hundred steamers are idle in English ports. That is an indication of business which cannot be misunderstood.
—The steamer "Gottenburg," with one hundred and twenty persons on board, including passengers and crew, was wrecked on one of the Fuxnaux Islands, Bass's Straits. So far as is known, only four lives were saved. Three boats with passengers and crew remain to be heard from.
—The Windsor and Annapolis Railway Co. represent to the Ottawa Government that they cannot change to narrow gauge by the time fixed for the change of the Intercolonial Railway by Mr. Bridge, and that Government ought to bear the expenses of changing for them.
—The whole civilized world are watching with deep interest the Tilton-Becher trial. The evidence is being sifted and weighed by every body. What will be the verdict of the Jury empaneled to try it that will be recorded in the Court, is of vastly less importance than that of the general public.
—In the Roundout Methodist church on a recent Sunday morning the usual donning of overcoats was proceeding amid considerable confusion, but had not been completed when the pastor Rev. J. J. Dean, arose to pronounce the benediction. He paused a moment and said: "Brethren, I guess I will put on my overcoat hereafter during the benediction, so as not to lose any time."
—The above might apply to some other places beside the above.
—A shocking case of suffering is mentioned by a city contemporary, the scene being Boston Highlands. The Rev. Mr. Dunning, a most benevolently active Christian, it is stated found one family in his district destitute of almost every thing, with six children and the father lying dead in the house. Seven persons lying dead in one house, and all members of one family, is something that cannot easily be paralleled in the history of peaceful times.
—Quite a lively sparring match has come upon the boards between the "Presbyterian Witness" and the "Chronicle" in reference to the character of some of the advertisements that appear in their columns from time to time. To our mind the "Chronicle" has the best of it. It is bad enough for secular papers to publish advertisements such as are found in their columns, but when they appear in a paper purporting to disseminate religious truths among the masses the very sight of them causes a nauseous feeling to creep over any one sensitive to what a religious paper should be. Last week's "Wesleyan" had to acknowledge that one of its advertisements was not just honest in what it claimed to be. The fact is the religious papers are a little too much quizzed up with God and Mammon.

—A correspondent at Sand River, Cumberland County, says that "The oldest inhabitant here tells us that this winter has been the coldest he has experienced since his birth, and he is now over one hundred years. The snow in some places is six feet deep, and where we are at work in the woods it is not less than four feet on a level. Moose and Caribou are abundant, and were it not for the law protecting them a very large number would be slaughtered."
—We clip the following from an exchange:
WANTED.—By the 9th of March a good old-fashioned servant girl for household. Must be clean, honest, willing to do as she is told, and respectful. No Presbyterian, Methodist, or Baptist need apply. Reasons.—One is wanted who will do the work for good wages given, and not give the excuse for neglect of the latter "that it is Bible Class, or Prayer Meeting night, and she must go—or else off to an occasional Tea Party at the Pastor's house where the bazaar are invited to see the young ladies safe home."
N. B.—One green enough to reply "YES MAM," or "NO SIR," will be appreciated at their full value.—"Old fashioned housekeeper."
Such a servant may be difficult to find. We recommend the advertiser to import a "Heathen Chinese."
OBITUARY.—Mr. John D. Nash, the well known Auctioneer and ex-Alderman, died Tuesday, 2nd inst. in his 70th year. No man in the city was more familiarly known than Mr. Nash, and his death will be very generally regretted.—Hz. Chronicle.
Erlend Erlundson, a Dane, who died recently at Port Hope, Canada, left the bulk of his estate, valued at $130,000, to the Toronto General Hospital.
The total number of locomotive steam-engines in the world is said to be 45,007, of which 14,222, or nearly one third, are in the United States.
Judge Neilson, the presiding Judge in the Beecher-Tilton trial, and who was selected for that important duty on account of his distinguished ability, is a Canadian. His father is Judge Neilson, of Ernestown, near Napanee, Ont.
The total public debt of the United States is now $2,269,309,307. For a long time this debt was being reduced at the rate of several millions every month. It has now taken a turn the other way, the increase in January last being $1,397,854, and the total increase since 30th June, 1874, only $907,931.
Paris boasts of a standing army of something like 5,000,000 rats, and some one has computed that if the rodents were to array themselves ten abreast and march upon Berlin, the vanguard would enter the German capital while those in the rear were issuing from the gates of the French metropolis.
The survey for a canal route across the Isthmus of Panama is progressing favourably under the direction of Captain Lull. A much lower summit level than that of the railroad has been found which is only 282 feet. Captain Lull is reported to have said that the result of the survey so far had been more favorable than was expected.
DEATH OF MRS. T. D. ARCHIBALD.—We regret to learn of the sudden death of the wife of Senator Archibald, which occurred at Ottawa on Saturday evening. Previous to her marriage, only a few months ago, the deceased resided in Dartmouth.—Hz. Chronicle.
Great heat is reported from Victoria, Australia. At Melbourne the thermometer has reached 112 deg. Fahrenheit in the shade. Bush fires have occurred and great damage has been caused. This is the Antipodes, truly of Canada.
The ice on the lake and river, is frozen so thick, that travelling is safe on almost every part of it. No water is visible anywhere on Lake Erie and parties are continually crossing from Sandusky, Missouri and Toledo to this town, and the villages along the lake shore. On Sunday last quite a party drove to this town from Monroe. Visitors from Grosse Isle, in sleighs and cutters, now frequently come over here.—Ankerburg Echo.
In a short time Germany will have the two greatest men-of-war afloat,—the Kaiser and the Deutschland. They are rated at 1,300 horse powers nominal, with a safe working capacity of 8,000. With a length of 280 and a width of 62 feet, they will draw 20 feet of water. Their plate is from six to ten inches thick, and they are mounted with eight cannons of 26 centimeters each, capable of piercing iron plates eleven and twelve inches thick.
A special from St. Johns, Newfoundland, to the New York Tribune says: "Tuesday March 3, the ship Viola, from France to St. Pierre, laden with salt and sugar, was abandoned in the ice in St. Mary's Bay. The captain and crew were saved. People from the shore went to save the ship, but a northeast gale scattered the ice, and twenty of them were lost and twenty-two others are missing."
A FISHERMAN LOST.—Rory McDonald, aged 25 years, unmarried, belonging to Cape Breton, was drowned on the 17th of January, by the capsizing of a dory on the Grand Banks. He was one of the crew of the Gloucester schooner "Knight Templar."—Chronicle.
The heaviest snow for a number of years began at Cincinnati, on Sunday morning, and lasted until dark. Eight or nine inches of snow, fell on the city. The storm extended southwest as far as Jackson, Missouri, through West Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania. A sudden thaw would cause immense floods in the Ohio River and tributaries.—Chronicle.
Hon. James Buffington, Member of Congress from Massachusetts, died suddenly at Fall River, March 8th.
Lieutenant General Sir James Hope Grant died in London on Saturday, aged 67 years.
At St. Mary's Church, Aylesford, Feb. 24th, by the Rev. R. Avery, Shipley Square, Major of 72nd V. Militia, to Miss Lizzie, daughter of the late Mr. John Campbell.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The village of Merriton, Canada, was flooded yesterday by the giving way of an embankment at Riordean's Pump Mill.
The number of lives that were lost by the wreck of the bark "Giovanni" on Cape Cod was 74.
OTTAWA.
(Ottawa Special to the Ankerburg Recorder.)
OTTAWA, March 6.—After recess last night, the debate on the Pacific Railway was continued by Dr. Tupper. He made a speech of several hours duration; the principal objection he had to the policy of the Government was the large amount of money required to be appropriated for works which he considered were not required for the Pacific Railway.
He was followed by Masson, Holton, Geofrion, and others. The item passed with the understanding expressed by the Premier, that a full discussion would be allowed upon any amendment that might be moved when the item came up for concurrence.
The revenue of the Dominion for last month was $1,782,700, and the expenditure $1,442,394.
YARMOUTH.
(Yarmouth Dispatches to the Morning Chronicle.)
YARMOUTH, N. S., March 6.—William Varramborg lost his life yesterday under the following circumstances: He and James Morris went gunning together, when Morris gun went off prematurely, and the charge lodged in Varramborg's arm. Doctors Webster and Kelly amputated the arm, but the loss of blood had been so great that he sank and expired immediately after the operation. He was an honest, industrious man, and leaves a family.

Agricultural.

"My daughter keeps my farm accounts, sir; and she is as systematic and particular as ever my own was, who kept them before he left home. I tell you it does girls' (and he might have added boys also) good to give them some responsibility, and set them to watching things about the farm and household. They learn, I find, economy by it, and soon discover that their father on them far more than a crumpled old curmudgeon, because he does not loosen his purse string whenever they see something they happen to fancy; for they discover the reason why the purse should not be opened."

WASTED TROUBLE. There is no use in manuring land to grow weeds; in buying tools to rust out under a stone wall; in erecting buildings to rot away for want of paint and care; in buying animals and leaving them to the unhindered action of disease; in accumulating manure to fill the air with its exhalations, and the brooks with its leachings; in raising forage to floor a barnyard with; in buying land to yearly lose its strength and virtue; in growing crops to feed unheeded insects. Yet more than one of these defects may be seen in almost untraced operations on every farm in a country, and the extent to which they lower the average success of our farmers is greater than would be believed.—New York Herald.

DESTROYING CURCULIOS. The following extract has been going the rounds of the agricultural press for some years. Have any of our readers tried the experiment, and if so with what measure of success? Soak corn-cobs in sweetened water until thoroughly saturated, and then lay them to the limbs of the trees a little while after blossoming, being sure to burn the cobs after the fruit ripens, as they will be found full of insects. A good plan is to change the cobs every few weeks. My theory is this—that the insects deposit their eggs in the cobs in preference to doing so in the young plums. The first season I tried it upon one or two trees only, and in the summer was rewarded by a good crop of fine plums as ever ripened, while those on the other trees fell off when they were about half-grown. In accordance with this result, next spring I bought sweetened water, and I have since used it on all my plum trees, and the summer found them full of delicious fruit.

SMUT IN GRAIN. Corn smut is caused by a parasite fungus, long known to botanists by the name of Ustilago Maize, and has frequently been described and figured in botanical works. Its development, or growth, is pretty well understood. The fungus grows from very minute spores, which are produced by millions, and exactly as to how these spores reach and infest the growing corn, we can find nowhere any definite information, nor have I seen any date relative to preventives. We are left to surmise and analogize. Smut in wheat is produced by a similar fungus, similar in its botanical character, and in its results, and this wheat smut fungus is much better known to agriculturists. It is proved that this grain access to the plant through the seed. The spores are sticky, and adhere to the sound grain at harvest, or threshing, and are sown with the seed wheat. As the new wheat plant grows, the fungus develops, in due time, and it, ripening its spores at harvest, the spores may be killed, and the crop saved, by soaking the seed wheat in strong brine, or in a weak solution of sulphate of copper, commonly known as blue vitriol, or blue stone. The proportion used is two to five ounces per bushel of wheat.

DELIRIUM TREMENS. Sniffles brought his two weeks' spree to a close on Thursday night. He lay on a lounge in the parlor, feeling as mean as sour lager, when something in the corner of the room attracted his attention. Raising on his elbow he gazed steadily at it. Rubbing his eyes, he stared again, and as he stared his terror grew. Calling his wife, he asked hoarsely— "Miranda, what is that?" "What is that, Likey?" "Sniffles' name is Lyengrus, and his wife calls him Likey for short and sweet. "Why that—that—thing in the corner," said the frightened man, pointing at it with a hand shaking like a politician. "Likey, dear, I see nothing," replied the woman. "What you don't see it!" he shrieked. "Then I've got em. Oh, heavens! bring me the Bible. Miranda, bring it quick! Here, here on this sacred book I swear never to touch a drop of whiskey. If I break my vow, may my right hand cleave to the roof of my mouth, and—"

How dreary seems each hour, As it slowly, slowly goes, To the man who sits in anguish With a broil upon his nose! To MAKE STEADY MIXED MEAT.—A Boston lady sends for publication in the Germantown Telegraph the following recipe for making mixed meat, which is now in season. She informs us that she has tried various modes, but finds the following to be the best. Take seven pounds of currants, well plucked over and cleaned; finely chopped beef suet, the lean of a sirloin of beef mixed rare, and finely-chopped apples, each three and a half pounds; citron, lemon peel and orange peel cut small, each a half pound; fine moist sugar two pounds; mixed spice one ounce, mix well and put in a deep pan. Mix the juice of the lemons and oranges that have been grated together in basin; pour half over and press down tight with the hand; then add the other half and cover closely. This will keep a whole year or longer, and is frequently made one season to keep over for the next.

FOR PRODUCE.—Limes.—Mix.—Make a strong solution of alum water and bathe the part affected well with it, and in a few minutes the frost will be "soft," and if done as soon as frozen the part will not be sore. I have tried it in cases where hands have been frozen stiff, and it left them perfectly natural. SAMUEL CUMMER, of Willowdale, in Toronto Globe.

Jokers' Corner.

A YOUTHFUL THESPIAN.

PAINFUL RESULT OF HAVING A FATHER WHO WILL NOT APPRECIATE SHAKESPEARE.

From the Detroit Free Press.] A few days ago young Gurley, whose father lives on Croghan street, organized a theatrical company and purchased the dime novel play of "Hamlet." The company consisted of three boys and a hostler, and Mr. Gurley's hired girl was to be the Ghost if the troupe could guarantee her fifty cents per night.

"I'll go, most noble duchess," he said as he took up the basket, "but my good sword shall some day avenge these injustices!" He knew that the grocer favored theatricals, and when he got there he said: "Art thou provided with a store of that vegetable known as the 'later, most excellent duke?'" "What in thunder do you want?" growled the grocer as the "Hamlet" came out.

"I see what ails him," mused the father, "this explains why he hangs around Johnson's barn so much. At the dinner table young Gurley spoke of his father as the 'Hamlet' to him, and when his mother asked him if he would have some butter gary he answered: 'The appetite of a warrior cannot be satisfied with such nonsense.' When the meal was over the father went out to his favorite shade tree, to cut a sprout, and the boy was asked to step into the woods and see if the henstock was frozen up. He found the old man there, and he said: 'Why, most noble lord, I am supposed to be far away!'"

"I'm not so far away but what I'm going to make you skip!" growled the father. "I'll teach you to fool around with ten cent tragedies! Come up here!" For about five minutes the woods was full of dancing feet, flying arms and moving bodies, and then the old man took a rest and inquired: "There, your highness, dost want any more?" "Oh! no, dad—not a darned bit!" wailed the young "manager," and while the father started for down town he went in and sorrowfully informed the hired girl that he must cancel her engagement until the full season.

THE GARLIER, MAIN JOURNAL, says that there is a store in that place in which a skull is kept, marked "This man was a demagogue." Beware!
