Poetry. "For My Sake." Three little words, but full of tenderest meaning; Three little words the heart can scarcely bear; Three little words but on their import dwelling; Why wealth of love these syllables unfold!

"For my sake" cheer the suffering, help the needy; On earth this was my work; I give it thee; If thou wouldst follow in thy Master's footsteps, Take up my cross and come and learn of me.

"For my sake" 'till the harsh word die unuttered; That trembles on the wit, impetuous tongue; "For my sake" check the quick, rebellious feeling; Then when they break thee down, they wrong.

"For my sake" press with steadfast patience onward; Although the race be hard, the battle long; Within my Father's house are my mansions; There thou shalt rest and join the victor's song.

And if in coming day the world revolve thee; If "for my sake" thou suffer pain and wear; Bear up heart; thy Master went before thee; They only wear his crown who share his care.

Two Little Old Ladies. Two little old ladies—one grave, one gay; One could not be happy, "because," she said; "So many children were hungry for bread; And she really had not the heart to make them cry."

The other old lady smiled all day long; As she knitted or sewed or crocheted a song; She had "not time to be sad," she said; "When hungry children were crying for bread."

She knitted and knitted and gave away; And declared the world grew better each day; Two little ladies—one grave, one gay; Now which do you think chose the wiser way?

Select Literature. A Child's World. The child was in his seventh year, and the garden, 12 times as old, was on the island.

The house also on the same island and was the place where the child ate and slept and obeyed. But his life was in the garden. The house faced a pond, and two bridges bound it and the garden to the world.

By the water, however, were the bridges. When its gate was raised a flood of water boiled and twisted down to a smooth green bed below and then floated quietly to the garden's side. Over against the upper bridge a mighty dam held the island from the sea.

Should be whistling cheerily at the lower end. Polly stepped out on the platform and peered up the track. Yes, there was the familiar headlight—she would have known it among a hundred.

With a hundred terrifying questions flashing through her mind Polly ran on through the gloom. When she was almost within range of a big headlight she saw a flash of light and a whistle.

BY ONE OF THE VISITORS.

Port Lorne is one of the many pretty villages lying along the Nova Scotia side of the Bay of Fundy shore.

As a summer resort it is just delightful. The visitors will find two favorite summer hotels bearing quite a number of pleasant homes, owned by Capt. James Anthony, is certainly beautiful situation, well cared for, and the hotel and home-like; everybody has a good time.

The hotel, owned by Mr. Frank R. Starrett, which is to be found on a little lawn, with a dear little flower garden in front, on the right hand going down the mountain, has been enlarged and arranged expressly for the comfort and convenience of summer boarders.

Persons seeking a rational, healthful and pleasant sea-side home, would do well to call at these places. Among the hotels during the month of July were: Rev. Charles Herr, D. D., and family, of New Jersey; Rev. C. Goodspeed, D. D., and wife, of McMaster Hall, Toronto; Rev. J. Webb, L. T., and family, of Springfield, N. S.; and Mr. and Mrs. Crowe, of Bridgetown.

The Port Lorne people are well known as being very industrious and enterprising; they are moving with the times. The following are some of the improvements that are going on at this present time: Mr. George Corbett is building himself a house which is pleasantly balanced on the top of a high peak near the high-house, commanding a full view of the bay and also the mountain.

Mr. Johnson Corbett is improving the appearance of his residence by making his house more modern and cozy. Mr. Samuel Sprober which was owned by Mr. Thomas Sprober a short time ago, has been purchased by Capt. Samuel Beardsley, Jr. Mr. Beardsley is building a tower for his house.

The Harris Elliott property has lately been purchased by Mr. Ernest Ray. Mr. Arthur Neaves is building a house down on the shore, near the wharf. Capt. Joseph Riddell is building a very slightly elevated house, which is already slightly finished.

There is, on the mountain road near the shore, a new building, called the "Pillar." The Pastor, Rev. E. P. Caldwell, B. A., is held in high esteem by all of his flock.

The Port Lorne folks are, moreover, quiet, law-abiding, hospitable, temperate, moral and religious.

It is, it would seem, but one thing needed to make this most charming summer resort perfect, and that is telephone connection with Bridgetown and other places in the valley. Doubtless this will find its way over the mountain to the shore before very long.

OLIMPIUS OF HIS CAPTAINS: HIS CATHEDRAL; ITS ABBEYS, ITS TRADITIONS AND ITS BEAUTIFUL PARK.

By J. R. BURNETT, Author of "American Farms."

THE JUBILEE.

When on my way from America to England this year with the avowed purpose of being in London to join in the Jubilee rejoicings of June 22nd, I was wretchedly disappointed to find that I was not to be in London on any account on Jubilee day. There's not a hundred or more of us, but something of a London crowd; one's sure to be robbed or crushed, and if he undertakes to provide a crowd with water, and very few will be able to see the procession at all, and if they do secure seats, they will have to sit in their places for hours with nothing to do or see. Such were the cheering impressions of what was in store for me on Jubilee day by old Londoners on our side of the Atlantic.

What I have really experienced! None of the dire forebodings. I have seen London crowds—pretty much as they are now. I have moved about this great object of interest and that, and feared my eyes from them with the thousands of people who were in every way to the full, and I am pretty well satisfied that I was not killed, crushed, starved, or injured. On the contrary I feel very much improved, and I certainly would not have been on Jubilee day, and carried my wallet and several sovereigns about with me all the time.

A better behaved great collection of people I have never seen, tall in all respects, and I have seen London during the past week. I have frequently seen in New York and Boston, and during special occasions which were 25% behind the London crowd in behavior. That the congestion at times was very great, and motion difficult is true enough, but a spirit pervaded the people all day, and they were ready to make their own time for adjustment. It has appeared to me marvellous many times, that such a vast multitude of people, in such a small space, should be carried on without frequent serious mishaps. But none has come, and we are safe, and the Jubilee is over.

Unless our eyes are our lot, and, by observation, so throughout were the lot of others, for several days previous to the great event. I lost my baggage when on my way from Wales, where I had been making a visit. I found it once in a way, and the next day returned to my home in London. I lost it again, and this time it did not reach me until three days after I had arrived in London.

At the last baggage office in London I found a constant stream of people looking for missing baggage for their property. One lady and gentleman came to me for help, and they finally traced the official to the White Sea. Her husband was arrested against the English system of only labeling baggage. It was told that the immense amount of baggage to be handled here could not be forwarded in time to passengers. If the American system of labeling were followed, there is something in it worth considering. Certainly the railway people are good at looking up baggage.

From Hereford to London on the 19th, I witnessed some amusing incidents. As our train would draw up at a platform, there would be a stampede of people up and down the length of the train, and the result was that, in most cases was already full, seeking for a chance of passage. I will not soon forget the experience of one old lady who had been made in Nicaragua, and the steamer from that section had been bringing in gold dust in great quantities.

A Klondike in the Tropics.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 12.—A new gold field has been discovered, but this one is in the tropics. Reports have come to this city lately that big fields of gold have been made in Nicaragua, and the steamer from that section had been bringing in gold dust in great quantities.
