NEW METHOD OF STORAGE.

A recent invention, called a cooking chest, seems to offer a suggestion that may be of value on the farm. In a cooking chest the idea is to economize heat by preventing its escape. A kettle of meat or vegetables is taken, while boiling hot, from the fire and packed in the chest. As the heat cannot escape, the cooking goes on for hours in the chest and without any fire. The "Farm and Fireside," thinking that this invention might be used in cooking milk and preserving butter, asked the writer to make some experiments with one of these cooking chests. The experiments were made with a simple and inexpensive chest that had been used in cooking. The chest consisted of a common, wooden packing box, measuring on the inside twenty inches wide and fourteen inches deep. This box was lined on the inside with heavy corrugated paper and filled two inches deep with sawdust, and covered with heavy wrapping paper. The sides were then lined, three inches thick, with excelsior, and wedged with woollen blankets, securely tacked on. Inside the box was then placed a tin bread-box (costing twenty cents), and for the whole chest a loose wooden cover was made.

The first experiments were made to find out how long cold water can be kept cold in such a storage chest. The water used was from a very cold well and was carefully tested before and after each experiment, with a Fahrenheit thermometer. In the first experiment an enamelware pail, holding four quarts, and having a tight cover, was filled with well water at 40 degrees F. The pail was placed in the tin box and wrapped in heavy burlap, and the box closed and completely covered with a heavy blanket. Over the blanket was laid several newspapers, and on this was laid the wooden cover, with a weight on top to keep it pressed down airtight. The chest was closed exactly at twelve noon. Seven and a half hours later the chest was opened and the water found to be 54 degrees. In the next experiment the pail, filled with water at 47 degrees, was packed in the chest at half-past seven p. m. At eight the next morning it was 54 degrees. In the third experiment the water at 45 degrees was placed in the chest at eight in the morning, and when taken out at noon was 48 degrees. These experiments show that, by the aid of such a chest, water can be kept cool twelve hours or more.

In the fourth experiment, a quart can of milk was placed in the chest, before being placed in the pail, and the water found to be 54 degrees. The milk can, before being placed in the pail, was chilled by letting it stand in another pail of water fresh from the well, in order to prevent the can from raising the temperature of the water. The pail and milk-can were placed in the chest and remained there five hours, when the milk was found to be 52 degrees, and a glass of milk was tested by several persons and pronounced cold and refreshing.

Two experiments were made with well water in keeping butter. The pail was filled half full of water at 50 degrees and a tumbler inverted in it. On top of the tumbler was placed a dish of butter and the chest closed at nine a. m. It was opened six and a half hours later and the butter was firm and hard. In the second experiment the pail, full of water at 45 degrees, was put in the chest without the cover and a dinner-plate laid over it and on the plate was placed some print butter and cream cheese. The chest was closed at half-past two p. m., and on opening the chest at half-past six the thermometer resting on the butter showed it to be 54 degrees. The chest was closed again re-opened at half-past six the next morning, when the temperature was found to be 56 degrees, and the butter and cream cheese were firm and hard, and were served on the breakfast table. In this experiment the water kept the butter hard for sixteen hours, and had milk been placed in the chest with the butter, it would have been cold and just at the right temperature to serve on the table. In another experiment a small quantity of ice was added to the pail of well water. This reduced the temperature to 42 degrees. The chest was closed and not opened for twelve hours, when the water was found to be 52 degrees, showing a very great economy of coal.

The experiment shows that it is possible to keep milk and butter cold in such a storage box. Such a box would hold an ordinary wooden pail in which could be placed four milk bottles resting in the water up to the tops. All that is necessary is that the box must be well wedged with excelsior, straw, or sawdust, kept in place with woollen or burlap, and that the pail of water be placed in a tin box that can be taken out and washed, if any water or milk is spilled while packing the box. The well water used in the experiments was unusually cold, but any water can be chilled to 40 degrees or 42 degrees by adding a small piece of ice and then kept cold for many hours. The box might also be made larger. Several boxes could be used for a large quantity of milk is to be stored.

SELECTED RECIPES. E

Here are two recipes for mince meat procured from old-fashioned cooks:

No. 1.—Five pounds of chopped beef two pints of chopped suet, ten pints of chopped sour apples, two pounds of sugar, one quart of molasses, two ounces of cinnamon, one ounce of cloves, one tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of pepper, six pounds of fruit. Mix altogether and seal.

No. 2.—Cook two and one-half pounds of beef (this should make two quarts when chopped), four quarts chopped apples, one pint of currants which have been thoroughly cleaned, one quart of raisins stoned just before using, one cup of chopped citron, four cups of brown sugar, two cups of molasses, one cup of chopped suet, one nutmeg grated, one tablespoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of cloves. Place in an earthen vessel and keep in a cool place. This quantity will make twelve pies.

Some delicious cakes to be made now for Christmas are the following: Imperial Cake.—Two pounds of sugar, two pounds of butter, two pounds of flour, two pounds of raisins, three pounds of blanched and chopped almonds and two pounds of dried citron. It is well to pound the almonds in a porcelain mortar, a small quantity at a time, adding rose water occasionally to keep them from becoming oily. After mixing in the fruit with the sugar and flour, add one wineglassful of rose water, two glasses of sweet grape juice, a small quantity of mace and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake four hours, placing in a cool oven at first and increasing the heat gradually. When cold put in a tin box and seal tightly.

Christmas Cake.—Beat one pound of butter to a cream. Add one pound of powdered sugar and beat together. Whip together and add one pound of gnaty flour. As soon as these ingredients are perfectly smooth, stir in one-half teaspoonful of cloves, one grated nutmeg, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of allspice, the grated rind and juice of two lemons and one-half pint of the fermented grape juice. Mix together one pound of suet, one pound of currants, one pound of stoned raisins, one pound of orange peel, one-quarter pound of lemon peel and one-half pound of sliced citron. Bake six hours, taking care to turn the cake with the remainder of the cake. Line a fruit cake pan with greased paper, filling it afterwards with the mixture, and bake in a moderate oven for three hours, increasing the heat during the last hour. For a medium-sized family this recipe should be halved and it will last as a rich sweet all through the holiday season.

A delicious chestnut sweetmeat is the French marron glace, which may be made from the common small chestnut or the large English nut. Take off shell and brown skin. Boil in steaming water until tender, but not soft. When the water is drained off add to each pint of the nuts two tablespoonfuls of vanilla and one pound of sugar dissolved in half a pint of water (this amount of water should be used for the entire weight of the sugar). Allow the chestnuts to boil in this vanilla sauce until very soft and dark, and rich. Lift each carefully with a fork, put in a bottle or jar and cover with the boiling syrup. Seal tightly and stand aside until ready for use.

Exile Reveals Horrors of Siberia.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 20.—If an amnesty for political prisoners is not proclaimed before winter, several thousand men and women will die in Siberia of hunger and disease. The men and women in question belong to the most intelligent class in Russia, and with them are many young children. The majority of the men are professional men, schoolmasters and clerks who cannot do manual work, and they have been sent to Narim, Kolymsk and Yakutsk, where even the inured muzhik could not live. By sending them to Siberia the Czar's government attains two ends: it drives itself of its foes and saves the expense of keeping them in jail. Here is a picture from the pen of Dr. Kneip, an exile of the horrors of life at Narim. What it is in winter may be imagined:

"We live, seventeen of us, including three women, in a peasant's room near the administration house. And what a room. It seemed to me laughable at first when I arrived, but after the first night I thought I would never laugh again. The walls and floor are filthy and covered thickly with vermin. We have had no summer, and have to keep the one window closed at night; and all the time choke and cough and groan from the unbreathable air and continued horror of insects.

His Majesty's rage over the indiscreet baring of secrets is said to be indescribable. One story is that the Kaiser has been compiling his own version of his feud with Prince Bismarck, and possibly his reply to the memoirs will take the form of the publication of the Kaiser's diary, which is doubtless whether Prince Alexander is amenable to the same law.

The third volume of Bismarck's own memoirs is locked up in the vaults of the Bank of England, with instructions that it shall not be published in the lifetime of the Kaiser.

WOMAN.

The New and Different Magazine for Women, which makes its first appearance with the November issue—Now on Sale at the News-Stands.

There are in America a good many distinctly woman publications. Though they differ widely in merit, they are nevertheless emphatically similar in general scheme—a smattering of fiction, a considerable percentage of small talk.

This is all right in its way, and doubtless furnishes a very good model for a woman's magazine; but it is not the only model on which a magazine can be made that will be welcomed into the home by women.

Women are the great readers of the world, and this is especially true with regard to fiction. Men read more or less fiction, some books, a good many articles in the magazines, but chiefly confine their reading to the daily papers. They are much greater readers of daily papers than women. Women have more time for reading than men, and the story dealing with the human heart, and with the joys and sorrows and struggles and triumphs of life, interests them most keenly.

It is this element—good, wholesome, absorbing fiction, and in great measure—that will differentiate Woman from all the other woman's magazines. To make room for all this fiction—say, four or five, or even six serial stories, and a large number of short stories, and perhaps now and

Great Cricketer Ascends a Throne

The famous cricketer, Prince Kumar Shri Ranjitsinhji, has come into possession of an Indian throne, and is now the Jam Sahab of Nawanager.

Prince Ranjitsinhji was not of royal blood. He was the second son of Jiwan Singh, born thirty-four years back, in September, 1872, and is a Hindu of the Rajput race. His uncle, Sir Vibhaji Ranmaji, then ruled in Nawanager, and when he had been thirty years Jam (or governing prince) he confirmed his admiration for his nephew Ranjitsinhji by adopting him and naming him conditional heir. To effect this the Jam had disinherited his natural heir, a son who had been born to him by a Mohammedan lady. This course was taken with the approval of the Government of India.

Ranjitsinhji, to prepare for his expected succession, was sent to an Indian college, and subsequently to Cambridge University. But in August 1882 one of the three Mohammedan sisters who were recognized wives of the Jam gave birth to a son. There was subsequently a quarrel between the Jam and the father of Ranjitsinhji, which eventuated in the setting aside of the latter's succession in favour of the new child, and application to recognize this boy as the new heir was addressed to the Government of India and sanctioned.

Not long afterwards, in 1888, when Ranjitsinhji had established his fame as a cricketer, his uncle, the old Jam, Sir Vibhaji, died, and immediately the natural son, Kumar Jarwant Singhji, succeeded his father. The renowned cricketer called his protest to the Bombay Government and the Supreme Government of India, and claimed the throne because the mother of Jarwant was not a Rajput, asking for an official enquiry, but this was overruled.

But Jarwant's reign has lasted only eight years, and as he has died childless Ranjitsinhji is now to become, with the agreement of the Government of India, Jam Sahab of Nawanager. The State is the largest of the little kingdoms under British protection in Kathiawar, which lies in the north-western country along the Gulf of Cutch, and is a little more than twice the size of Sussex. Its population approaches 320,000. The former Sussex cricketer will have a miniature army of 2,700 troops, upon which to develop his military training. Cricket polo, and football are already played in the State.

WOMAN.

The New and Different Magazine for Women, which makes its first appearance with the November issue—Now on Sale at the News-Stands.

As a complete novel—there will be published no fashions and no illustrations. Every illustration and every page of fashions cut just so much out of the reading space.

You cannot get something for nothing, and get it for a very long time. If a magazine gives you fashions and illustrated bits—serenades, and in its departments, all that its price will cover, it is clear that it cannot give in addition a ton of fiction.

This magazine will concentrate on fiction. Fiction will be its fourteen-inch gun. It may be that this isn't as good a model for a woman's magazine as the conventional one, but it has the merit of being different. If there were only one woman's magazine in the field, the other model would probably be preferable. But with several hundred such periodicals, and all built on practically the same lines, it would seem that something radically different in conception, though equally close to the nerve-centers of human interest, would be able to preempt a corner of the woman's field and hold it. All fiction would be absolute conure up to the purpose in this magazine, but that would not matter. The aim is to make it independent of its great volume of fiction, just as much of a home magazine in all the essentials as any woman's magazine on the market—a publication that shall outrank all other magazines for women in the way of entertainment, and, in addition, shall have the substantial qualities that go to help people to live better and be wiser.

Woman is a very big magazine—192 pages, which gives it well-nigh double the reading space of the various women's publications. By reading space is meant the space given to reading and not occupied by advertising.

Whatever advertising this magazine may carry will appear on additional pages—pages inserted especially for advertising, and not taken from the reading section. All this—its brightness and its freedom from advertising on reading pages—will further differentiate this magazine from the conventional brand of woman's magazine.

The Amerer Will Venture on Trip

Calcutta, Oct. 22.—With Eastern pomp and circumstance the Amerer of Alghamists will make a tour of Northern India during the coming winter in order to demonstrate his friendship with England, which finds his country convenient as a "buffer State" between the Indian and the Russian empires.

A gorgeous retinue of 1,500 persons will accompany the Amerer, who has never before left his own country. The Indian Government will provide a military escort of 2,000 men, consisting of horse, foot and artillery.

The tour will include the chief towns of Northern India, as well as Bombay and Calcutta. In Nepal, the first big game country in India, the Afghan monarch will have some exciting sport.

In each province through which the Amerer passes the principal chiefs will join his suite, adding their picturesque personalities to the imposing cavalcade. The whole affair will make a spectacle of splendor which is only possible in the East.

KAISER FORMULATED HIS PRECEPTS OF LIFE

Berlin, Oct. 20.—Here are some of the sentences which the Emperor does not want to forget, and therefore needs them constantly under his eye. He has had the maxims printed on the walls of his workroom at Rouniten, where he has now been for some days shooting. These maxims are:

"Be strong in sorrow."
"Do not desire what you cannot obtain."
"Take the day as it is, men as they are."
"An hour of joy will make one forget a thousand hours of sorrow."
"The world is so great and man so little that it is not possible for man to be the centre of the universe."

St. John, N. B., Oct. 20.—The Cushing sulphite pulp mill was sold under foreclosure at public auction today to Captain Partington of England, the chief stockholder. The amount paid was $416,000. The sale brings to an end a long time litigation in the higher courts of Canada, and finally carried to the privy council in England.

Diver Finds Two Dead in Submarine.

Bizera, Tunis, Oct. 22.—Divers continued their work all day yesterday on the French submarine boat Lutin, which went down Tuesday off this port with two officers and fourteen men on board, and by nightfall they had fixed a chain under her stern and replaced the rope under her bow by another chain. M. Thomson, the French Minister of Marine, was present at the scene practically all day long.

One of the Danish divers, a man named Low, reported to the minister that he found the principal hatch of the Lutin partly open and perceived two bodies inside near this hatch. He was unable to open the hatch completely, as he could not reach the handle, which is three feet inside.

Low continued his descent with the purpose of determining the best way of tunnelling under the stern of the Lutin, which is imbedded in the bottom to a depth of two feet. This tunnelling meant much hard work, and it was impossible to attach a line to the stern until it was done.

The bows of the submarine are slightly raised and it was comparatively easy to get a chain under this end.

John G. Willett, of St. John, was in town last week. While here he left with the Monitor a specimen of the New Brunswick greenstein. It is a pretty apple but for flavor we prefer the Nova Scotia variety.

Miss Myrlo Bishop went to Grafton, Kings county, on Tuesday to attend the Annapolis District convention of the Women's Missionary Society, as a delegate from Providence Methodist church Mission Band and Circle.

Miss Hattie Walsh, who is now a nurse in the MacLean hospital, near Boston, underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Massachusetts General hospital, last Wednesday evening. The operation was successful and the patient is doing well.

CABINET MINISTER MOVES OWN GOODS

London, Oct. 20.—John Burns, the labor Cabinet minister, is now comfortably settled in his new and larger home in Lavender Gardens. A great deal of fuss was made about his personal removal of his household goods from the humble home in Lavender Hill, which he has occupied for so many years, but as a matter of fact, it was only his precious books that he moved personally.

Mr. Burns's books are his greatest treasures. Since his very early days he has collected books which related to the history of England, books of travel and volumes of vital statistics. To this day he can be seen diving into the three-penny boxes of second-hand booksellers.

His collection of "blue books", all carefully bound, is unrivalled. Mr. Burns did not even occupy the whole house at Lavender Hill. For some years the top floor was tenanted by the widow of a chimney sweep. Now his new house is absolutely lined with books so carefully arranged that he can put his finger on any "facts" which his opponents may require.

OFFICE CLERKS LIVE THE ALLOTTED SPAN

London, Oct. 20.—Office work is the healthiest employment, according to Dr. A. T. Schofield, who gives lecturer to business men in the financial section of the city. He said that clerks are the only men who live as long as they ought to, and that as a body they represent exactly the average life.

Clergymen live from twenty to thirty years longer than they should, and doctors die before their time.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Baptist services at Bridgetown, on Sunday next, morning and evening, and at Granville Centre in the afternoon.

The Baptist sewing circle will be held at the home of Mrs. W. E. Reed, on Thursday afternoon from 2 to 5.

The first dance of the season, under the auspices of the Bridgetown Quadrille club, was held at the St. James hotel last night. About fifty guests were present.

The professional man who buys of a mail order house and a merchant who has his printing done out of town belong to the same lodge—same degree.

Some fine apples have been on exhibition this week. In S. N. Ward's window is a splendid dish of Blenheim Pippins, grown by Oliver DeLancy, of North Williamston, and in Warren's window some fine Bishop Pippins and Golden Russets, grown by Edward Messenger, of Centreville.

With the coming of winter those who patronize our merchants will find better stocks to select from than were ever shown in this place. Our business men have been making a study of the wants of this community and they will have what you are looking for in stock. Give them a chance on everything you purchase this season.

News has been received from Lynn that Miss Eliza Brinton, referred to in our despatches last week, was not an eloper. She had been married a short time previously to Warren Cook, son of Eliza Cook, of Yarmouth, and the couple were then on their wedding trip to Cleveland, Ohio. They have since returned home.

By a vote of 8 to 7 the Halifax Council, has decided to publish the names and addresses of every rate-payer in the city, and the amount of assessment of each property, thus everybody in the city will know what every other citizen is assessed; it is a good idea; and another good phase of civic government is to publish once each year the names of rate-payers whose taxes have not been paid.

The address given by Mrs. Timpany in the Baptist church Sunday evening, under the auspices of the W. M. A. Society, was listened to with much pleasure. Mrs. Timpany is a very interesting speaker. She told many things in connection with the work on the Lebanon field; also the work in connection with the hospital over which Dr. Timpany has charge. Dr. and Mrs. Timpany are workers under the American Board, but will always be welcomed by Mrs. Timpany's many friends in Bridgetown.

A good form of entertainment for the long winter evenings in the country districts would be the organization of farmers' clubs and literary societies. These would give the country folk a better chance to become acquainted, and much benefit would be derived from the interchange of views on farm and kindred topics. No doubt trustees would freely grant the use of school houses for such meetings. Mental horizons would be broadened and country life made more bright and attractive.

Chamberlain Must "Rest for Months"

London, Oct. 24.—Joseph Chamberlain's condition, which The World described recently, is being understood here now.

Mr. Chamberlain's secretary writes that he "is improving steadily, but his medical adviser imperatively orders a complete rest for several months."

The attempt to conceal the true character of Mr. Chamberlain's illness from the British public is inexplicable. For it will be almost a miracle if he is ever seen in public again.

Gambling on his chance for life is going on at Lloyd's, where ten guineas per cent must be paid to insure him for six months, fifteen guineas for a year.

OPPOSITION WINS QUEBEC COUNTY

Quebec, Oct. 24.—Ligerizo Robetalo, aged 22 years, an Independent Liberal and opposition candidate, was yesterday elected M. P. for Quebec county, by a majority of 496.

Methodist Church Walls Collapse

Amherst, Oct. 24.—A portion of the stone wall of the new Methodist church, collapsed yesterday when about two hundred tons of stone and mortar crashed into the basement crushing the floorings, timbers, etc., with it. A space 56 feet in height and about 30 feet wide is completely shattered.

Pope Pius Is Indisposed

Rome, Oct. 24.—The Pontiff is suffering from a slight attack of gout and has been ordered to take a complete rest.

SCOTCH AWARD ENDS FREE CHURCH DISPUTE

London, Oct. 22.—The Elgin commission on the Scottish Church dispute has issued a report dealing with the immense properties, the fight for the possession of which led to the long drawn out battle just ended.

The commission has awarded to the United Free Church the assembly hall and college buildings at Edinburgh, Glasgow and Aberdeen, while the Free Church, get a block of office buildings in Edinburgh and the annual sum of $15,000 for the maintenance of its college, for which there is sufficient accommodation in the office buildings at Edinburgh apportioned to that church.

The Free Church is also awarded two additional churches at Glasgow. The foreign mission funds are mostly given to the United Free Church, but the commission promises the Free Church to allocate sufficient funds for its missions.

No Russian Need Apply in Paris

Paris, Oct. 24.—A young attaché to the Russian Embassy hunted several days for lodgings, but nobody would let him a room. He was obliged to stay with friends until finally the Ambassador went personally to one house owner and vouched for the attaché. Inquiry developed that, finding it impossible to assure themselves, by letters or references as to character or high station, that their rooms would not be turned into bomb factories, the landlords decided to refuse to accept any Russian for a tenant.

British Women On the Warpath

London, Oct. 24.—An unusual excitement in connection with the re-opening of parliament yesterday was caused by the presence of one hundred women suffragists, many of whom, despite the protests of the police, managed to find their way into the quiet lobby of the house of commons with the intention of button-holing the members in support of their movement. A number of suffragists, as they are termed here, mounted the vacant chairs in the lobby and began to harangue the few members present in that part of the house. The police, after being reinforced, made a strategic advance against the invaders, taking the women singly and gradually ejected them one by one from the house. They clung tenaciously to the stalwart policemen and railings and other means of support and offered strenuous resistance to expulsion with shouts of "We will have votes," and "You cowardly men dare not give us justice," resounding through the halls.

Smallpox in New Brunswick

Fredericton, Oct. 24.—James McElman, chairman of the York County Board of Health, will start for Middleton, New Brunswick, today in response to a request from the residents of that place, a report having reached here that there has been an outbreak of smallpox at Middleton and that the situation is quite serious. The disease is prevalent in about seven families—about twenty cases altogether.

Furious Storm Raging in Denver

Denver, Col., Oct. 24.—The storm which has continued here for three days without interruption, is raging with increasing fury, accompanied by a heavy fall of snow.

Alfonso's Queen Hopes for Heir

London, Oct. 24.—Her English Queen confidently hopes to give Spain a future sovereign—so the Spanish Court announced semi-officially, a day on the young woman of young Queen Victoria's family are assured. They rejoice now that Princess Alicia of Battenberg made a concession of her daughter's marriage, May 21 last, that she should be accompanied to her adopted country by her old nurse who cared for her through her childhood. A British physician of the Princess's choice will be Madrid with the than Princess Ena and he has been and will be her medical attendant.

AGRICULTURAL

RENOVATION OF WORN OUT SOILS

The practice of ploughing under green crops as manures is not very general, and we do not know as much as we should like to know of the value of this method. Some crops do not thrive when sown on land into which a green crop has recently been ploughed. This is particularly true of those crops that like a solid seed bed, or which are sensitive to acids. When a heavy green crop is ploughed under it goes through a fermentation not unlike that which occurs in a barrel of kraut, resulting in the formation of a considerable amount of acid.

Alfalfa is particularly sensitive to acids, and it also requires a compact seed bed. It is unwise, therefore, to green-manure the land just before seeding to alfalfa. The cereals, particularly wheat and rye, do not do well after a green manure.

On the other hand, potatoes and corn are not seriously injured by green manures. In fact, potatoes are benefited by them, since the resulting acid condition of the soil prevents the development of potato scab. Generally speaking, when it is desirable to plough in a green crop, before fall-sown crops, it should be done a month or six weeks before planting time, and the soil should be harrowed frequently or otherwise compacted. A few good rains will wash out most of the acids, and aid in compacting the soil. The acid may also be counteracted by adding lime.

Along the Atlantic coast as far north as New Jersey and south at least to Georgia, crimson clover, frequently called German clover, thrives as a winter annual. Like all the legumes it stores up much nitrogen and greatly enriches the soil in this element. This crop deserves a much wider field of usefulness than has yet been accorded it.

In the northern part of its territory crimson clover should be sown in July. In the south, September is supposed to be the best time to sow it. It is best adapted to sowing in corn or cotton. In sections where it has not previously been grown it frequently fails, apparently from lack of proper bacteria.

Crimson clover furnishes winter pasture, makes good hay if cut when just coming into full flower, and is valuable as a green feed in spring. It helps to fill the gap in the soiling system between green wheat and early corn. Perhaps its greatest usefulness is as green manure. It may be ploughed under any time in the spring and be followed by corn or potatoes.

In this connection the practice of a farmer near Hagerstown, Md., is of interest. Ten years ago he began sowing crimson clover in corn at the last ploughing, covering the seed with the cultivator and using ten pounds of seed to the acre.

In the spring the clover was ploughed under and another crop of corn planted. Ten consecutive crops of corn have been taken from this field, a crop of crimson clover being ploughed under each spring.

The field of corn has increased during the beginning, to about 50 bushels at the present time. Evidently the practice was a good one in this case.

Those who are not familiar with crimson clover should try it on a small scale at first, as there have been many failures with it. The following five-year rotation is a good one on stock farms in middle latitudes, and shows one way of securing the benefits of crimson clover as a green manure: Corn with crimson clover sown at last cultivation, corn, oats, wheat, clover (common red).

the cotton rows followed the old cowpea rows, and the vetch was left to seed on the old stalks, as before.

This method requires that the cotton rows should be about five feet apart, but the farmer who practices it assured Professor Lloyd that his yield of cotton had doubled in the three years since the practice was started. This method is worth attention of farmers who grow cotton continuously on the same land, and this class includes the vast majority of cotton growers.

Rye is not half appreciated by the American farmer. It is very hardy, will grow on the poorest land, makes good winter and spring pasture, and if sown early enough makes good fall pasture. It is a good spring soiling crop after corn, rye may be sown in this corn at the time of "laying by," or may be sown on the stubble after the corn is cut, and be ploughed under in the spring for any of the crops mentioned.

The cowpea has been a boon to the farmers of the South, and its value is coming to be generally recognized. During the past few years the demand for cowpea seed has exceeded the supply, and high prices have resulted. A good way to secure cowpea's beneficial effect on the soil is to sow it in corn at the last cultivation.

This practice has become well-nigh universal in the South and is extending northward. This crop may also be sown after wheat, oats, or rye, at least from the latitude of Washington, D. C., southward, and may be harvested for hay in time for another full crop to be sown.

Prof. H. J. Waters, of the Missouri agricultural experiment station, has grown cowpeas between wheat crops for several years past and increased the yield of wheat in a marked degree.

It seldom pays to turn under a crop of cowpeas in the green state. It is better practice to make hay of them, feed the hay, and put the manure back on the land.

As is the case with all legumes, the roots of the cowpea crop add a great deal of nitrogen to the soil, and hence a marked effect on fertility. If a heavy green crop of cowpeas is ploughed under in the autumn it is best not to plant the land until the following spring.

A very good plan for bringing up the fertility of a worn-out field is to sow rye in the fall, plough this under in the spring, harrow thoroughly, let the land lie a month, and then sow cowpeas. Cut the peas for hay and sow rye again. A few seasons of such treatment will restore fertility to the soil. Fortunately, both of these crops will grow on very poor land.

Almost any crop may be used as a green manure, as occasion demands. Those previously mentioned are more generally used for this purpose than others. In ploughing up clover seed, many farmers, particularly on fields most in need of manure, wait until the clover is nearly ready to cut for hay before ploughing, in order to get the additional nitrogen and humus thus produced.

turn, they expect the boy to work each year for nothing. At last, when the young man leaves to start for himself, they consider themselves greatly wronged, forgetting that young manhood has his own hopes and interests.

All this tends to discourage and hamper the young man just at that time in his life when help is most needed. Because of all this, many boys leave the farm for other work, and consequently their life is a failure.

On the other hand, look at the parent who has made some provision for the boy. The boy does not want to forsake the farm, because his father has helped him to realize what it offers him for life. He has taught him the inestimable value of economy, honesty, labor and money. He has interested the boy in his future work.

How has he done this? By explaining to the child as years advance the methods of cultivation, by putting him to work, by showing him that the end will be profitable, and when the end is realized by giving from the gain a liberal sum to the boy; by teaching him to save this and put it where it will grow. The same plan has been followed with the stock, poultry and other sources of farm profit. He gives the boy a pig or colt and when the stock is sold, the cash received for the boy's property is given him. All the time he learns to manage and care for stock and crops. This plan is the only way to create and hold a self-interest.

All this gives the boy, when he reaches the age to judge for himself, something to start him aright, a source from which springs success. The boy is really wealthy to begin with, not in dollars and cents, but in knowledge and experience and prepared. Make your boys your partners.

These lost Israelites need not travel far out of their way to find a sect with at least as strange practices and as unorthodox a creed as their own, for the "Holy Rollers" have their headquarters among the Beret Hills, in New York state. The Holy Rollers had begun for the end of the world in March, 1902, and if the program was not rigidly kept it was through no lack of faith and enthusiasm on their part.

As they swayed to and fro, they sang, "O, the joyful day is coming," with eyes wild and staring and perspiration streaming down their faces, while their leader filled up the pauses in the singing with fierce bursts of exhortation. "That's right," he would shout, "it's coming—coming" on March 1, 1902, and every man, woman, and child in this place is going to be right here to see her come. ## Some Singular Religious Sects.

The 83 "Lost Children of Israel" who arrived in New York in a short time ago on their way from Australia to Michigan have many strange beliefs, among them an assurance that the end of the world is fixed for the month of August, 1916, and that when Satan and his armies have been finally routed, they will be borne away to a happier place in chariots of gold.

These lost Israelites need not travel far out of their way to find a sect with at least as strange practices and as unorthodox a creed as their own, for the "Holy Rollers" have their headquarters among the Beret Hills, in New York state. The Holy Rollers had begun for the end of the world in March, 1902, and if the program was not rigidly kept it was through no lack of faith and enthusiasm on their part.

Daddy: "Bobby, wouldn't you like to see your little sister the stork brought last night?" Bobby: "I'd sooner see the stork, daddy."

For the first time little Gladys had been taken out to dine. When she returned home she remarked: "It was all very, very nice; my dinner was mighty good, and the silver and cut-glass was beautiful, but I don't like their table manners as well as ours."

Mineeva turned to Venus with a frown. "Tell me," she demanded, "you who know so well the hearts of men, why men never fall in love with me?" Venus laughed aloud.

"Silly!" she cried. "You might know it is because you get too wise to them."

"I have several reasons for not wishing to marry you," she said laughingly. "In the first place, I do not love you. In the second place, you have no money. In the third—"

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Fott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon a re-trying when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to his friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequalled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by W. H. Warren, Pharm. D.

The Glass Ball in a Shooting Gallery

The shooting gallery man at Coney Island was packing to go South for the winter. "Do you see this glass ball?" he said. "It was a tall of hollow glass, an airy glass soap bubble that had swung all summer at the end of a thread in the foreground of clay pipes, bells and what-nots that had made up the gallery's target."

"This glass ball," the man went on, "is my great money-maker. All summer long people tried to hit this ball—it was bigger and nearer than any other target—and everybody failed. Those and of bullets were fired at it; thousands of nickels were spent on it; yet here it is still untouched—my best breadwinner."

"All wise-shooting gallery men have a glass ball like this. It makes such a tempting target, yet it is never hit. It is never hit because the air that precedes a gun charge is sufficient to blow the ball aside, out of the way. You might fire forever and not hit it."

JOHN OBEYED.

Mrs. F—was a very stern woman, who demanded instant and unquestioning obedience from her children says "Chums." One afternoon as she was working in her sewing room a storm came up and she sent her son John to close the trap leading to the flat roof of the house.

"John, I told you to shut the trap."

"Yes, but, mother—"

"John, shut that trap!"

"Yes, but—"

"John, shut that trap!"

John slowly climbed the stairs and shut the trap. The afternoon went by, and the storm howled and raged. Two hours later the family gathered for tea, and when the meal was half over Aunt Mary, who was staying with Mrs. F— had not appeared.

Mrs. F— started an investigation. She did not have to ask many questions; John answered the first one.

"Please, mother, she is up on the roof."

WHAT

Fruit-a-tives

ARE
Fruit-a-tives are the marvels of modern medicine. They have accomplished more actual cures—done more good to more people—than any other medicine ever introduced in Canada for the time they have been on sale.

Fruit-a-tives are fruit juices. They are nature's cure for

- CONSTIPATION
- BILIOUSNESS
- BAD STOMACH
- DYSPEPSIA
- HEADACHES
- IMPURE BLOOD
- SKIN DISEASES
- KIDNEY TROUBLE
- RHEUMATISM
- IRRITATED THROAT

Fruit-a-tives are the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. These juices are concentrated—and by a secret process, the juices are combined in a peculiar manner. This new combination is much more active medicinally than fresh juices—yet so perfect is the union that Fruit-a-tives act on the system as if they were in truth a natural fruit, medicinally stronger than any other known fruit.

To this combination of fruit juices, tonics and internal antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets.

These are Fruit-a-tives—sold everywhere for 50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. FRUIT-A-TIVES LIMITED - OTTAWA.

The Only Perfect Emulsion

Any well made emulsion of good Cod Liver Oil is good as far as it goes, but if it lacks Iron it is not a perfect emulsion, because Iron is even more necessary and more valuable than the oil.

FERROL

is finer, more palatable and easier to digest than any other preparation of Cod Liver Oil. Anyone can take Ferrol; few can take Cod Liver Oil in any other way.

Every intelligent person knows that three of the greatest remedial agents known to science are Cod Liver Oil, Iron and Phosphorus. To get them in combination and in proper proportion you must have Ferrol. There is no other way.

Sufferers from Anemia, Bronchitis, Chronic Coughs and Colds, Lung Troubles of any kind, Nervous Prostration, Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, General Debility, Loss of Weight, Whooping Cough, Croup, La Grippe or any of the ailments known as wasting diseases, can take Ferrol with the confident assurance that it will cure them if a cure is possible.

Each dose of Ferrol contains a full medicinal dose of Iron and in no other way can Iron be properly administered.

Ferrol holds the record for increasing the weight. Ferrol contains neither alcohol, "dope" nor dangerous drugs of any kind.

Ferrol is the Ideal Infant Food. If your baby is not thriving, give it Ferrol and watch it grow.

Ferrol is not a patent mystery. The formula is freely published. It is prescribed by the best Physicians. It is endorsed by the most eminent Medical Journals. It is used in prominent Hospitals, Sanitariums, etc.

It was not more than four feet deep, carefully carpeted with sand and accented by rocks on all sides. Not the faintest crab or fish was to be seen. It provided an ideal bath.

Iris was overjoyed. She pointed to the water and said, "I will be with you at tea-time."

He gathered all the tin he was able to carry and strode off, enjoining her to fire her revolver if for any great reason she wanted assistance, and giving a parting warning that if she delayed too long he would come and shoot to her.

"I wonder," said the girl to herself, watching his retreating figure, "what he is afraid of. Surely by this time we have exhausted the most surprising of the island. Anyhow, now for a splash!"

She was hardly in the water before she began to feel the cold embrace of Jenks. Suppose anything happened to him while she was thoughtlessly enjoying herself here! So strongly did the thought possess her that she hastily dressed again and ran off to find him.

He was engaged in fastening a number of bayonets transversely to a long piece of timber.

"What are you doing that for?" she asked.

"Why did you return so soon? Did anything alarm you?"

"I thought you might get into mischief," she confessed.

"No. On the other hand, I am trying to make trouble for any unwelcome visitors," he replied. "I intend to set this up in front of our cave in case we are compelled to defend ourselves against an attack by savages. With this barring the way they cannot rush the position."

On the nineteenth day of their residence on the island the sailer climbed, as was his invariable habit, to the Summit rock while Iris prepared breakfast. At this early hour the horizon was clearly cut as the rim of a saucer. He examined the whole arc of the sea with his glasses, but not a sail was in sight. According to his calculations the growing anxiety as to the fate of the Sirdar must long ere this have culminated in the dispatch from Hongkong or Singapore of a special search vessel, while British warships in the China sea were being warned to keep a close lookout for any traces of the steamer, to visit the coast, to intercept and to question fishermen who encountered. So help might come any day or it might be long deferred. He could not pierce the veil of mystery that was useless to vex his soul with questionings as to what might happen next week. The great certainty of the hour was Iris—the blue eyed, smiling divinity who had come into his life—waiting for him down there beyond the trees, waiting to welcome him with a sweet rosy greeting, and to kneel with a fierce devouring joy, that her cheek would not pale nor her lip tremble when he announced that ever blue another man must set before the expected relief reached them.

He replaced the glasses in their case and dived into the water. The wind, after blowing steadily from the south for nearly a week, had veered round to the northeast during the night, and the change portend a storm? Well, they were now prepared for all such eventualities, and he had not forgotten that they possessed, among their treasures, a box of books for rainy days. And a rainy day with Iris for company! What gale that ever blew could offer such compensation for enforced idleness?

The morning sped in uneventful work. Iris did not neglect her cheerfulness. After luncheon that he was his custom now to carry a dishful of water to his apparently arid rock, and also rose to fulfill her self-imposed task.

"Let me help you," said Jenks. "I am not very busy this afternoon."

"No, thank you. I simply won't allow you to touch that shrub. The dear thing looks quite good to me. It drinks up the water as greedily as a thirsty animal."

Iris had been gone perhaps five minutes when he heard a distant shriek, twice repeated, and then there came faintly to his ears his own name, not "Jenks," but "Robert," in the girl's voice. Something terrible had happened. It was a cry of supreme distress. Mortal agony or overwhelming terror alone could bring that name from her lips. Precisely in such moments this man acted with the decision, the unerring judgment, the instantaneous acceptance of great risk to accomplish great results, that marked him out as a born soldier.

He ran into the house and snatched from the rack one of the rifles reposing there in apple pie order, each with a filled magazine attached and a cartridge already in position.

Then he ran with long strides not through the trees, where he could see nothing, but toward the beach, whence in forty yards the place where Iris probably was would become visible.

At once he saw her struggling in the grasp of two ferocious looking Dyaks, one by his garments a person of consequence, the other a half-naked savage, hideous and repulsive in appearance. Around them seven men armed with guns and parangs were dancing with excitement.

Iris' captors were endeavoring to tie her arms, but she was a strong and active Englishwoman, with muscles well knit by the constant labor of recent busy days and a frame developed by years of horse riding and tennis playing. The pair evidently found her a tough handful, and the inferior Dyak, either to stop her screams—for she was shrieking, "Robert, come to me!" with all her might—or to stifle her into submission, roughly placed his huge hand over her mouth.

In the grasp of two ferocious looking Dyaks.

They had secured, a young and beautiful white woman so contentedly leaning back in the arms of a Dyak. With the slow speed advised by the Roman philosopher the back sight and fore sight of the rifle came into line with the breast of the coarse brute clutching the girl's face.

Then something bit him above the heart and simultaneously tore him of his hair and safety.

The survivors, crier savages, did not know that the chief's hold and ran with all her might along the beach to Jenks and safety.

Again and yet again the rifle gave its short, sharp snarl, and two more Dyaks collapsed on the sand. Six were left, their leader being still unconsciously preserved from death by the figure of the flying girl.

A fourth Dyak dropped.

CHAPTER VIII.

THEY looked long and steadfastly at the retreating boat. Soon it disappeared into a green speck on the smooth sea. The even breeze kept its canvas taut, and the sailor knew that no ruse was intended. The Dyaks were flying from the island in fear and rage. They would return with a force sufficient to insure the weakening of their vengeance.

That he would again encounter them at no distant date Jenks had no doubt whatever. They would land in such numbers as to render any resistance difficult and a prolonged defense impossible. Would help come first?—a distracting question to which definite answers could not be given. The sailor's brow frowned in deep lines; his brain troubled now with an anxiety singularly at variance with his cool deportment during the fight. He was utterly unconscious that his left arm encircled the shoulder of the girl until she gently disengaged herself and said indignantly:

"Please, Mr. Jenks, do not be angry with me. I could not help it. I could not bear to see you shoot them."

Then he abruptly awoke to the realities of the moment.

"Come," he said, his drawn features relating to a wonderfully pleasing smile. "We will return to our cave. We are safe for the remainder of this day, at any rate."

Something must be said or done to reassure her. She was still grievously disturbed, and he naturally ascribed her agitation to the horror of her capture. He dreaded a complete collapse of any further alarms threatened at once. Yet he was almost positive—though search alone would set at rest the last misgiving—that only one man had survived the island. Evidently the Dyaks were unprepared as he for the events of the preceding half hour.

The tissues of the throat are inflamed and irritated; you cough, and there is more irritation—more coughing. You take a cough mixture and it eases the irritation—for a while. You take

They were either visiting the island to procure turtle and beche-de-mer or had merely called there en route to some other destination, and the change in the wind had unexpectedly compelled them to put ashore. Beyond all doubt they must have been surprised by the warmth of the reception they encountered.

Probably when he went to Summit rock that morning the savages had lowered their sail and were steadily plying north against wind and current. The most careful scrutiny of the sea would fail to reveal them beyond a distance of six or seven miles at the utmost.

After landing in the hidden bay on the south side they crossed the island through the trees instead of taking the more natural open way along the beach. Why? The fact that he and Iris were then passing the grown over tract leading to the valley of death instantly determined this point. The Dyaks knew of this frightful hollow and would not approach any nearer to it than was unavoidable. Could he trust this circumstance to advantage if Iris and he were still stranded there when the superstitious sea rovers next put in an appearance? He would see. All depended on the girl's strength. If she gave way now; if, instead of taking instant measures for safety, he were called upon to nurse her through a fever, the outlook became not only desperate, but hopeless.

And, while he bent his brows in worrying thought, the color was returning to Iris' cheeks and natural buoyancy to her step. It is the fault of all men to underestimate the marvelous courage and constancy of women in the face of difficulties and trials. Jenks was no exception to the rule.

"You do not ask me for any account of my adventures," she said quietly, after watching his perplexed expression in silence for some time.

Her tone almost startled him, its unassumed cheerfulness was so unlooked for.

"No," he answered. "I thought you were too overworked to talk of them at present."

"Overworked! Not a bit of it! I was dead beat with the struggle and with screaming for you, but please don't imagine that I am going to faint or treat you to a display of hysteria now that all the excitement has ended. I admit that I cried a little when you pushed me aside on the beach and raised your gun to fire at those poor wretches flying for their lives. Yet perhaps I was wrong to hinder you."

"You were wrong," he gravely interrupted.

"Then you should not have heeled me. No, I don't mean that. You avoid disaster during the next attack. This, he felt certain, would take place at night. The Dyaks would land in force, rush the cave and but and overpower him by sheer numbers. The fight, if fight there was, would be sharp, but decisive. Perhaps if he rethe discovery of certain unmistakable evidences on the beach showed that the Dyak leader had lost two or three fingers of his right hand.

"So he has something more than his passion to nurse," mused Jenks. "That, at any rate, is fortunate. He will be in no mood for further enterprise for some time to come."

He dreaded lest any of the Dyaks should be only badly wounded and likely to live. It was an actual relief to his nerves to find that the improvised dumchans had done their work too well to permit anxiety on that score.

He gathered the guns, swords and creases of the slain, with all their uncounted belts and ornaments. In presence of a vaguely defined plan of future action he also divested some of the men of their coarse garments and collected six queer looking hats shaped like inverted basins. These things he placed in a heap near the pitcher plants. Thereforforth for half an hour the placid surface of the lagoon was disturbed by the black dorsal fins of many sharks.

His guess at the weather conditions demanded by the change of wind was right. As the two partook of their evening meal the complaining surf lashed the reef, and the tremulous branches of the taller trees roared the approach of a gale. A tropical storm—not a typhoon, but a belated burst of the periodic rains—deluged the island before midnight. Hours earlier Iris retired, utterly worn by the events of the day. The gale chanted a wild melody in mournful chorals, and the noise of the watery downpour on the tarpaulin roof of Belle Vue castle was such as to render conversation impossible save in incoherent shouts.

Luckily Jenks' carpentry was effective, though rough. The building was water tight, and he had called every crevice with unraveled rope until Iris' apartment was free from the tiniest draft.

The very fury of the external turmoil acted as a lullaby to the girl. She was soon asleep, and the sailor was left to his thoughts.

"Sleep he could not. He smoked steadily, with a magnificent prodigality, for his small stock of tobacco was fast diminishing. He ransacked his brains to discover some method of escape from this enchanted island, where fairies jostled with serpents and hours of utter happiness found their knees in moments of frightful peril.

Of course he ought to have killed these fellows who escaped. Their sloop might have provided a last desperate expedient if other savages effected a landing. Well, there was no use in being-wise after the event, and, as he might, he could derive no way to his thoughts.

"This, he felt certain, would take place at night. The Dyaks would land in force, rush the cave and but and overpower him by sheer numbers. The fight, if fight there was, would be sharp, but decisive. Perhaps if he re-

Had done their work too well, received some warning Iris and he might retreat in the darkness to the cover of the trees. A last stand could be made among the boulders on Summit rock. But of what avail to purchase their freedom until daylight? And then? If ever man wrestled with desperate problem, Jenks wrestled that night. He smoked and pondered until the storm passed, and, with the changefulness of a poet's vision, a full moon flooded the island in glorious radiance.

He rose, opened the door and stood without looking steadily at the brilliant luminary for some time; then his eyes were attracted by the strong lights thrown upon the rugged faces of the precipice into which the cavern burrowed. Suddenly he uttered a startled exclamation.

"By Jove," he murmured. "I never noticed that before."

While the Jury Was Out

By William Frederick Dix
Copyright by S. S. McClure Co.

THE midmorning Colorado sun beat down upon a restless little group of men on the steps of the Fort Merton court-house, upon the dusty cottonwood trees growing dispiritedly on each side of the road that stretched away from the little sandy square to become, a few hundred yards below, the main street of the town, and up the tin roofs of the two story brick or frame stores on each side of it. The jury had not yet been brought up from the county jail near by, and the group of men directly interested in the proceedings were sitting and lounging about the steps, smoking and carrying on desultory conversation. The district judge, sitting on the top step, was an eastern college man, about forty years of age, once an athlete and still with a trim, slender figure. The only touch of the western was in the gray slash at his hair, worn straight and firmly set upon his brown hair.

"A pretty bit of graying land," he was saying to the sheriff as he looked out over the level prairie, dotted here and there with an adobe shack and occasional herds of cattle.

The sheriff, a brawny, blue-shirted young fellow of thirty, with unkempt hair and mustache, increased his booting and straightened out one of them, pushed his hand deep into the pocket of his corduroy trousers and yawned.

"All right, harder!" said Hardy, rising good naturedly and taking off his coat. "Here you go. Hold on," he added. "You couldn't catch a cold here. Here, Mr. Hackett, go out there and let me throw you a few curves."

The others laughed at this, for Hackett, the senior counsel for the defense, also up from Pueblo for the trial, was an enormous middle aged Hoosier, six feet two in height and weighing 250 pounds. He had a mass of crisp black hair and wore a black broadcloth frock coat and trousers, low turned down collar and high buttoned cuffs. He was slow moving and ponderous, though forceful and shrewd in his profession, deliberate of speech and anything but an athlete.

"Here, I'll catch you!" exclaimed the junior counsel, Blake, a somewhat hairy, powerfully built westerner, rising and stepping into the ring. "You can't catch a cold here either, Hardy!" he cried in scornful indignation.

"Well, I'll catch a little of that exercise myself," said the judge, rising in the center of the ring. "You're not getting any younger, Hardy!" he said to the junior counsel, who was still in the ring. "Why not have a little game while we are waiting?" said Hardy, half joking. "Come on, sheriff."

"Come on, sheriff!"

"Here, you've got muscle!" he added, rubbing his hands after the first pass at the Comanches against the Sioux. The Sioux won the toss and took the field. Mr. Hackett had positively refused to play and had been made umpire by general acclaim. As soon as his honor found himself contented and on the field he threw himself into the battle with the greatest enthusiasm.

There was many an evidence of "softness" in the condition of the players and a noticeable tendency to let swift balls go by rather than grapple them with fingers muzzled to the hard impact. Wild throws to bases were not infrequent, and in consequence there were much base stealing and hilarious sarcasm from the players on both teams. The official relations of these men were for the time lost sight of. They were merely heathen, enthusiastic Americans, feeling the joy of tingling blood in their veins, the zest of friendly competition and of physical exercise.

The runs were frequent and the errors numerous, and at the end of the third inning so many home runs were scored and so many arms growing stiff that it was mutually decided by the teams to call the next inning the last. The score stood eleven runs for the Comanches (the team made up of Judge Hillier, Hardy, Blake, the keeper of the Eagle hotel and one or two other witnesses), and nine for the Sioux, the battery of which was formed by the court clerk and the sheriff, whose heavy long boots, extending far up inside his corduroys, detracted somewhat from any grace of movement he might have had as he bent his entire soul and mind to the clerk's erratic curves, ably backed up by the assistant prosecutor, the stenographer and several witnesses.

At the beginning of the fourth and concluding inning the deputy sheriff had come up with the prisoner, who was stopped and put his hands behind his back. The trial had been particularly exciting one, and those who had followed it were tired after the three days' strain in the ill ventilated jail. Some one, any one, take the base!"

"Here, Copperswatt, play first base, we've only got to hold 'em down this inning, and we'll beat 'em easy. There's one out already."

Copperswatt looked uncertainly at the deputy, then at the judge, and quickly pulled off his coat and stepped to the base. His face showed clearly the prison pallor, and this warm sunlight and fresh air seemed wonderfully sweet to his spirit. Taken suddenly away from the active, vigorous life of the ranch, for seven months confined in a dreary prison, the world had seemed gradually to recede from his life. This sudden contrast of green, open field, ringing with the hearty voices of his fellow men, and the vision of the free, limitless prairie on all sides was a tragic one to the man. He glanced at the players about him, jostling in the game and thinking only of it.

"Go ahead," he said quietly. "I'll play."

The Comanches failed to make a run during the rest of the inning, and Copperswatt was safe on second before the ball was fielded in.

As Copperswatt came to the bat it was evident that the psychological moment of the sport had arrived. Everything had been completely forgotten save the game, and so intense was the interest that the approach of the court-house janitor was entirely unnoticed. He had come slowly down from the steps and after a few moments of bewildered surprise, stood leaning against a tree near the catcher, watching the prisoner as he slowly moved the bat backward and forward over the plate.

"One ball!" yelled Mr. Hackett, mopping his neck with his handkerchief.

"Two balls!"

"Strike one!"

"Three balls!"

Crack!

The ball flew straight from the bat high above the right fielder's head, and Copperswatt was safe on second before the ball was fielded in.

The janitor began to grow very uneasy and edged slowly down the field toward the first baseman. The crowd yelled as Copperswatt, still panting, edged off toward third. Harvey turned suddenly and tried to catch him napping, but in his excitement he threw a little wild, the baseman missed it and Copperswatt reached third amid much uproar. The Sioux were all gathered now in a frantic crowd between third and home, yelling like their prototypes, and the Comanches were also noisy.

"Go it, Copperswatt," shouted his team mates. "Get home and we'll win the game! Steady, now! Look out! Look out! Don't let them catch you!"

"Now, Hardy," pleaded the judge, "the heaven's sake, play ball! Don't let him make this run!"

"Steady, Hardy," said the catcher.

"Watch my signs."

The janitor had crept up close to first base.

"Say, Judge," he whispered to his honor, who was now dancing like an Indian and watching every move of
