TREED CITY FOLKS ARE ALREADY FLOCKING TO COASTAL RETREATS

The Manifold Charms Which Hampton Offers as an Inducement to Visitors--Renforth, Rothesay, Westfield, Riverside and Millidgeville are all Preparing for a Pleasurable Season.

HAMPTON, Kings Co., June 1.—In view of all that is being set forth in favor of other suburban resorts—and many of them, doubtless, possess sufficient qualifications to warrant all that is being said in their favor...

Up the road is the finely located house and farm premises of J. H. Scott and family, the outlook from which covers all that could be desired to charm the eye or delight the senses.

Just across a slight dip, where the brook—out of the lake—runs down through the railway culvert to join the creek, lie the warm slopes of the farm of Humbert Fairweather, former owner of the Park Hotel, St. John.

Yes, he remembered, this is no way-back, moss-grown, sleepy hollow, where everything is past its prime...

Another former St. John resident is Andrew Rudolph, who with his wife and daughter occupy the cottage on Main St.

The Helmet of Navarre

BY BERTHA RUNKLE. GROSSET & DUNLAP Publishers: New York.

(Continued.) "Neither of us, M. le Comte. But Monsieur, leaving, put the keys in my hand, and I am head of the house till he returns. You are very angry, M. Etienne, but my shoulders are broad enough to bear it. Your madness will get no countenance from me."

"Hang you for an obstinate pig!" M. Etienne cried. "Vigo said no more. He had made plain his position; he had naught to add or retract. Xenuis's face cleared. After all, there was no use being angry with Vigo, one might as well make fists at the flow of the Seine."

"Very well," M. Etienne swallowed his wrath. "It is understood that I get no aid from you. Then I have nobody in the world with me save Felix here. But for all that I'll win my lady!"

water flung on our ambitions. I took the liberty of doubting whether perfect loyalty to Monsieur included thwarting and disobeying his heir. It was all very well for Monsieur to spoil Vigo and let him speak his mind as became not his station, for Vigo never disobeyed him, but stood by him in all things. But I imagined that, were M. Etienne master, Vigo, for all his years of service, would be packed off the premises in short order.

I walked along in a brown study, wondering how M. Etienne did purpose to resolve mademoiselle. His scheme, so far as vouchsafed to me, was somewhat in the air. I could only hope he had more in his mind than he had let me know. It seemed to me a pity not to be doing something in the matter, and though I had no particular liking for Hotel de Lorraine hospitality, I had very willingly been bound thither at this moment to try to get a letter to mademoiselle. But he would not send me.

"No," he had said, "it won't do. Think of something better, Felix." But I could not, and so was taking my dull way to the inn of the Trois Lanternes. The city were a sleepy afternoon look. It was very hot, and few cared to be stirring. I saw nothing worth my notice until, only a stone's throw from the Three Lanternes, I came upon a big black coach standing at the door of a rival abode, L'Or de O. It aroused my interest at once, for a travelling coach was a rare sight in a beleaguered city. As my master had said, this was not a time of pleasures.

dragons on it. Of his two men, one took the middle of the room, amassing himself with the windpipe of Maitre Menard; the other was posted at the door. I was shot out of M. Menard's grasp into his, and I found his the gentler of the two.

"I say I know not where he went," Maitre Menard was gasping, black in the face from the dragon's attentions. "He did not tell me where he went. Ah!—The breath failed him not only, but his eyes, bloodshot and bulging, rolled toward me."

"Never you mind. I want him." "But Maitre Menard he should not be touched." I cried. "The Duke of Mayenne said himself he should not be touched." "I know nothing about that," he replied.

again, and again stopped. I meant to say that Monsieur had never left the inn last night; he could have had no hand in the crime. Then I thought that I had better know the hour of the murder. "M. le Comte is a very grand gentleman; he would not murder a lackey," I got out at last.

"You can tell that to the judges," the captain rejoined. At this I fell on my knees, with my spine to the wall, and a witness was the last thing I desired. "I know nothing whatever about it," I cried. "He seemed to me a very fine gentleman. But you can't always tell about those nobles. The Comte de Mar, I've only known him twenty-four hours. Until he engaged me at last, yesterday afternoon, I had never laid eyes on him. I know not what he has been about. He engaged me yesterday to carry a message for him to the Hotel St. Quentin. I came into Paris last night before last, and put up at the Amour de Dieu in the Rue Comte de Mar. He called on me to run his errands, and last night he brought me here with him. But I had never seen him till this time yesterday. I know nothing about him save that he seemed a very free-handed, easy master."

To a nice ear I might have seemed a little too voluble, but the captain only laughed at my patient flight. (To be continued.)

A LUCKY GIRL

Saved from Deadly Decline by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "When I think of my former condition of health," says Miss Winnifred Perry, of West River, Sheet Harbor, N. S., "I feel that I have been as fortunate as a lottery ticket. I was once so weak and nervous, so pale and anemic, so that I could scarcely get up and walk, and I was almost blind. I had lost all my hair, and my skin was so dry and cracked that I could not bear to be seen. I had been for years a great sufferer from all these troubles, and I had tried every remedy that I could get my hands on, but nothing had done me any good. I had been told that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills would cure me, and I bought a box and tried them. I had not taken more than a few boxes when I began to feel better. My hair began to grow again, and my skin grew soft and clear. I could get up and walk now, and I was almost blind no longer. I had my hair cut, and I was as well as ever. I feel that I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I have told my friends and neighbors of my cure, and they have all bought a box and tried them. They are all cured now, and I have had no more of my troubles since. I feel that I have been saved from a deadly decline by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "Hang you for an obstinate pig!"

Interests of the Duke of St. Quentin. He would forward them, if need were, over our bleeding hearts. On top of all this disobedience and disrespect he was most amiable to M. Etienne, treating him with a calm assumption of friendliness that would have maddened a saint. Yes, it was not hypocrisy; he liked his young lord, as we all did. He would not let him imperil Monsieur, but aside from that he wished him every good fortune in the world.

M. Etienne argued no more. He was wroth and sore over Vigo's attitude, but he said little. He accepted the advance of money. "Of course Monsieur would say, What coin is his silver?" Vigo explained—and despatched me to settle his score at the Three Lanternes.

I set out on my errand rather down in the mouth. We had accomplished nothing by our return to the hotel. Nay, rather had we lost, for we were both of us, I thought, disheartened by the cold sure trips to Paris. I readily imagined that the owner of this hair came on anything business indeed. He might be an ambassador from Spain, a legate from Rome.

I passed by the group of street urchins who were stoking the horses and clambering on the back of the coach, to wonder whether it would be worth while to wait and see the dignitary come out. I was just going to ask the coachman a question or two concerning his journey, when he began to snap his whip about the barrels of the little whelps. The street was so narrow that he could hardly chastise them without danger to me, so it seemed best to saunter off. The screaming urchins stopped just out of the reach of his lash and set to pelting mud at him with a right good will, but I was too old for that game. I reflected that I was charged with business for my master, and that it was nothing to me what envoys might come to Mayenne. I went on into the Three Lanternes.

The caretaker was absolutely deserted; one might have walked all about and carried off what he pleased, as from the sleeping palace in the tab. "This is a pretty way to keep an inn," I thought. "Where have all the waiters gone? They have all fled! I have heard of a confound of voices and stuff of feet from the back, and I went through into the passage where the staircase was.

Here were gathered, in a huddle, like scared sheep, some dozen of the serving folk, men and maids, the laziest most of them in tears, the men looking as though they were about to be flogged. Their eyes were fixed on the closed door of Maitre Menard's little counting-room, whence issued the shrill cry:

"Spare me, noble gentleman! Spare a poor inn-keeper! I swear I know nothing of his whereabouts!" As my footstep sounded on the threshold, one and all spun round to look at me in fresh dread.

"Mon Dieu, it is his lackey!" a chambermaid cried. In the next second a fatty dairy dame, her eyes blazing with fury, darted out of the group and seized me by the arm with a grip of her nails that made me think a panther had got me.

"So here you are," she screamed. "I declare I thought you were going to bite me. Oh-h-h, you and your fine master, that come here and devour our substance and never pay one sou, but bring rain to the house! Now, go you straight in there and let them squeeze your throat awhile, and see how you like it yourself!" She swept me across the passage like a whirlwind, opened the door, shoved me in, and banged it after me before I could collect my senses.

The room was small; it was very well fitted up by a bureau, a strong box, a table, two chairs, three soldiers, one inn-keeper, and myself. The bureau stood by the window, with Maitre Menard's account-books on it. On turned, a trifle more civilly than he had done. "I have naught to do with the Duke of Mayenne. If he is friends with your master, M. de Mar may not stay behind bars very long. But I have the governor's warrant for his arrest."

"On what charge?" "A little, Mercy murder."

"Yes, the murder of a lackey, one Pontou." "But that is ridiculous!" I cried. "M. le Comte did not—"

I came to a halt, not knowing what to say. "Louise—Paul de Lorraine killed him," was on the tip of my tongue, but I choked it down. To find wild accusations against a great man's man were no wisdom. By accident I had given the friend the impression that we were friends of Mayenne. I should do ill to impel the detestation. "M. le Comte"—I began the detestation.

Among New Brunswick banking men who have risen rapidly from the ranks the name of Frederick W. Taylor will be well remembered by a large number of St. John people, among whom he made many friends during the time he was stationed in the Bank of Montreal here when E. C. Taylor, a son of Duke Taylor, and his brother and a nephew of John W. Taylor and James Taylor, of this city. He started at the bottom rung of the ladder, and by strict attention to his duties has risen rapidly to his present important position.

The Bankers' Insurance Managers and Agents' Magazine, of London, referring to the unavoidable absence of the London manager, Andrew Lang, through illness, makes the following comment: "His place has been ably filled by Mr. Frederick W. Taylor, who joined the staff of the Bank of Montreal in 1878. He still retains the title of assistant manager at head office, and prior to coming to London was acting manager of the important branch at Chicago, and has held various other responsible positions at the Canadian Branches. In his capacity as inspector his many visits to all important towns and cities of Canada have given him unrivalled opportunities of acquiring not only a personal and intimate knowledge of the business of Canada, but an acquaintance with its prominent men, which is afforded to few Canadiana. A man of calm, confident strength, he fills the post with marked ability, tact and good sense. He also plays an important part in the life of the Anglo-Canadian community in London. To his share fell the task of organizing the business of the London office in the handsome new premises in Threadneedle street, to which it was transferred last February. More centrally located, the new office is in every way better adapted to conduct the unusually important business which naturally flows to the bank."

BOILS ALL OVER HIS FACE AND NECK

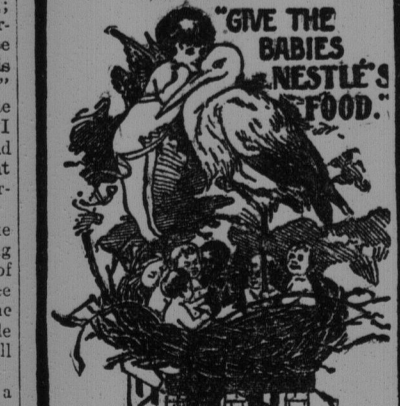

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS DID FOR HIM WHAT FOUR DOCTORS FAILED TO DO

Kewaway, Ont., July 28th, 1900. Messrs. The T. Milkway Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

DEAR SIRS—I am writing to let you know what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am a young man, twenty years old, and a year ago last March I began to feel dull and sick, and was greatly troubled with boils coming out on my face and neck, mostly on the latter. I would no sooner get rid of one than I would have, perhaps, two or three more appear.

I had four doctors trying to cure me but they had very little success. They would stop them for a month or six weeks and then they would be as bad as ever again. Almost every patent medicine, advertised to cure boils, I could get hold of, I tried, and still without success. At last one day, last spring, someone happened to say, "Why not try taking Burdock Blood Bitters for the boils?" I was willing to try anything and immediately sent for a bottle, but at the time was doubtful if it would be of any use. However, I used that bottle and while I was taking it began to feel better, although I still kept having a few boils but not nearly so bad as ever. I had taken six bottles, and needless to say, I was very happy. I had not a boil appear for the past three months. Every day I was supplied when they heard that Burdock Blood Bitters had done for me what four doctors failed to do. If any suffer from boils, I would strongly advise them to use B.B.B. It makes you feel like a new man. I always keep a bottle in the house, now, as I think it is a medicine that should be in every household.

Yours truly, HENRY A. SMITH.

JOHN STORM WAS NOT AN IDEAL CHRISTIAN

Rev. F. S. Bamford Discusses Hall Caine's Famous Book—Says Storm was Inconsistent Because His Passion was his Master—The Story a Farce and a Lie.

Rev. F. S. Bamford, pastor of Carleton Baptist church, recently delivered the following sermon in which he criticised Hall Caine's famous book, "The Christian."

"During the past week," said the preacher, "there has appeared on the stage of our city theatres a representation of Hall Caine's famous book, 'The Christian.' It is my purpose in a modest way to express an opinion of the teaching that pervades the book and the play. When a book appears bearing a title, 'The Christian,' and remembering as we do the spirit in which the book has been received it seems almost our duty as Christian people to form some judgment upon its teaching. If the author has rendered some service to our Christian idea, the least we can do is to express our gratitude and encourage him to go on. If, on the other hand, the author has in any way misconceived or travestied the Christian idea, it may be wise for us to enter a caveat, because it is quite certain that being a novel, and being written by one of our leading writers, it will be read and accepted as an exposition of Christian truth by men who have but an imperfect acquaintance with the Bible and Christian literature.

"To the many who have read Hall Caine's book and seen the play the outline of the story will be familiar. But let us look more closely into its teachings. The Christian who gives his title to the book is a young Ritualist priest, who goes to work in London and takes with him a young island girl (Maggie) who presently becomes a distinguished actress. The young priest, John Storm, is powerfully attracted to the girl, and he exposes the cause of women in such a manner that his worldly-minded vicar repudiates him, and, discouraged by the action of the vicar together with the cause that he wishes, he does not submit to his directions as he wishes, he takes to the mountains and joins an Anglo-Burmese convent.

"Presently he leaves the convent life because he cannot forget the girl. He then enters upon a course of philanthropic work and afterwards becomes famous through the city as Father Storm. It is then that the vicar returns, and he is manifested. He thrills London by the announcement that the end of the world will come on Derby Day. On account of social disturbances created by such an announcement the Home Office thinks it wise to issue a warrant for his arrest. After his release he takes to the hills and is excited by denunciations which to the community at large border on prophetic utterances. He utters a diatribe against society at large in language that becomes contemptuous and in consequence he pays the penalty with his head. We are to understand that this priest is following the path of the Man of Sorrows, treading the same footstep.

"Hall Caine's purpose," he says, "is to depict the types of the mind and character of creed and culture, of good effort and religious purpose, which he thinks he sees in the life of England and America at the close of the nineteenth century. But if the world was so divided as he teaches of the book as typical of the Christianity of our day, if the representative present-day Christianity is a person in a coat and breeches playing at monasticism, announcing the end of the world at random, sensational, and mad, never able to distinguish in himself between his excited love of a woman and his fervent service of God, if this is really the picture of the Christianity of our age then it is right to inscribe upon our generation the ominous words 'Memento Mori' and to call this life 'The Christian' is a parallel between this life and the life and death of our Lord Jesus, and he wishes us to understand that the priest, John Storm, who is called 'The Christian,' has been living over again the life of the Son of God. The story as presented to the public both in the book and on the stage is a farce and a lie as it represents the character of the true Christian. While I keep in mind the fact that the writer of fiction is under no obligation whatever to tell you the whole truth on any subject he is expected in presenting a truth to give that truth its place in the world, and allow for fairness and justice for the same.

"First of all let me remind you of the author of the real 'Christian,' comparing his work with that of John Storm.

"If we go back to the beginning of the Christian era to the man who so marked the ages that the civilized races count from his birth, if we go back to Christ, we have in Him the ideal pattern. Christ is Himself, as John Storm Mill said, 'above comparison to those before him and those after him.' The most marvellous characteristic of Christ did not appear to me to be His blameless life, but His renovating and transforming and regenerative power, what we may call His spiritual productivity. The mind of Christ is being formed in humanity, and is becoming the mind of man. Christ has changed the stoner's noblest virtue—a proud, pitiless endurance—into a spirit of truly heroic sympathy, which can weep with them that weep, and yet be strong to bear the worst of sufferings, not only without complaining, but joyfully. On this ground the common standard of duty has been raised from mere justice to self-sacrifice, and although the best Christians stand immeasurably below Christ, yet Christians constitute all more or less. This means the life Mr. Corder Morrison, who on this point said: 'Christian doctrine has a power of cultivating and developing saintliness, which belongs to no other sect, or creed, or philosophy. When rightly apprehended it strengthens the will, raises and purifies the affections, and finally achieves conquest over the baser man.' It may be as Corder Morrison has suggested, that 'the true Christian saint is the rarest product in every Christian church.' And yet they are not so rare as we suppose, for we have good men and women in the world whose lives are patterns for others to imitate. The true Christian appears before the mind as one who, above all things, has found joy and peace in believing; not like a surfer on the sea, driven of the winds and tossed; not a frantic, impulsive and therefore a dangerous man. The Christian's mark is serene. The Christian today, just as in the apostolic days, is one who studies to be quiet and to do his own business, living a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity. How vastly different is the New Testament conception of the Christian as compared with the John Storm type of Hall Caine's book!

"It is perilous to handle in the medium of fiction a subject of this kind. For this portrait of a Christian is so drawn that it is impossible for the reader to retain sympathy with the man. In every stage of the Christian life there is an element of irony and extravagance. As I said before, he plunges into a monastery in order to escape the tumult of passion; and when chance thrusts a woman before him, he plunges out again, and breaks all his vows without ever considering what he has done. There is an element of irony in the murder of the object of his passion in order that he may by the destruction of the body rid himself of a temptation. It is the same of Scripture as a just foundation for his infamous intention.

"We hear a great deal about Christianizing the stage and for this purpose they put on the boards a representation of such a character as a type of twentieth century Christianity. I do not know whether Hall Caine intended to give his book to the world as a commentary on the Catholic movement that is taking place within its borders, or whether he is presenting the ideal of the Anglican monastery as it exists today, but in any case he has lost the ideal of the Christian character in presenting John Storm as his type.

"Even followers of his own order must condemn his inconsistency and madness. A truth uttered by a puppet may be not the less a truth, but when it is expounded by one whose voice are of no value whatever the sharpness of his teaching is become dulled. John Storm's real reason for turning his back upon the monastery life was not so much because he had studied the failures of that life, but because the passion was his master. Herein lies the man's inconsistency. I am ready to accept the wholesomeness of Hall Caine's teaching respecting morality, yet at the same time I do not believe that he has lost the ideal of the Christian character in presenting John Storm as his type.

"Reserved fund increased—At a recent meeting of the directors of the British Columbia Permanent Loan & Savings Co. of Vancouver, the sum of $10,000, was transferred from surplus funds to reserve account, thus bringing the reserve up to $60,000.

Prince Errant

Haha is Presented with a Steed of Many Fine Points

1. Haha: There goes that pup with Aladdin's lamp! Hurry, Prince: we don't want to lose it!

2. Prince: Here Doggie, nice doggie! fetch us the lamp. Haha: The fool kiyi thinks we're playing with him.

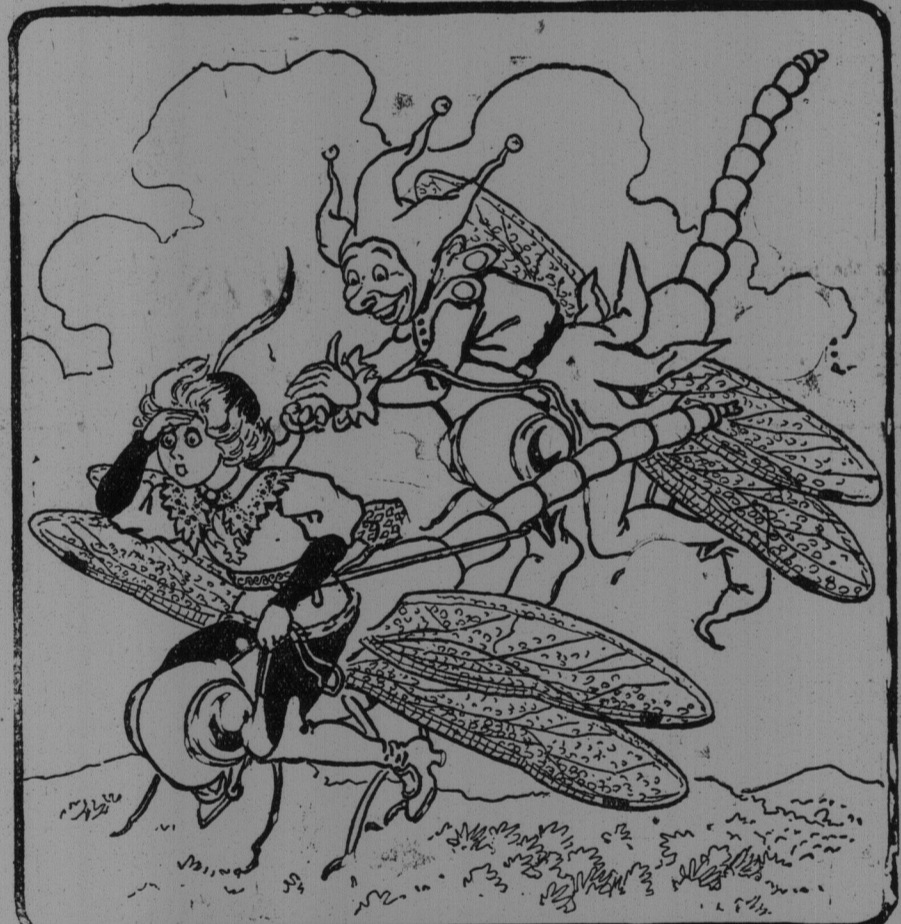

3. Prince: There he goes into that wheat-field. Maybe the wheat rubbing against the sides of the lamp will summon the Genii!

4. Haha: Hello, old man! You get handsomer every day. Now just bring us a couple of dragon-flies: we want to take the air.

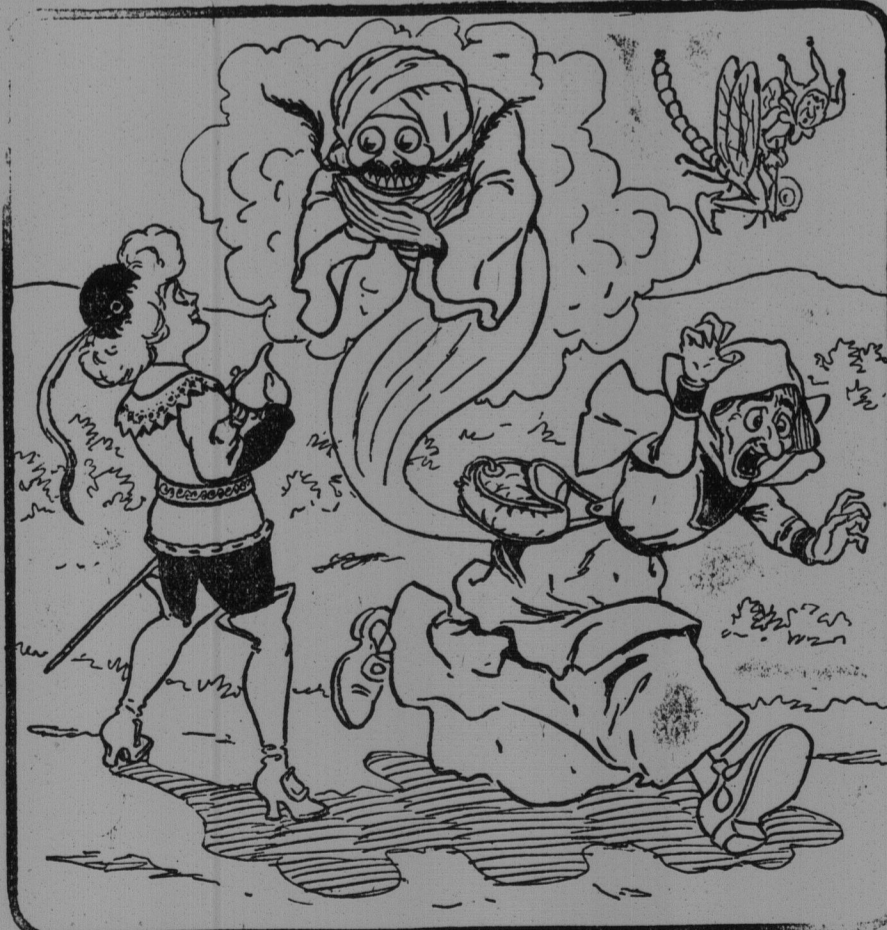

5. Prince: Say, isn't this great! I've tied that lamp to my back, so I can't lose it any more. We'll fly around till we see a castle.

6. Prince: There's an old hag down there; we'll get her to direct us to the nearest castle. Haha: Here's a chance to get even with the Prince. All right Prince, I'll rub the lamp and have the old hag take you to the castle.

7. Haha: Goodby, Prince. The old hag will lead you to the castle. I'll fly ahead and tell them that you are on your way. Prince: Oh, if I could only reach the lamp!

8. Prince: Yes, I summoned you again, Genii. Just scare this old hag away and change that steed Haha's riding into a porcupine.

9. Prince Errant: Why, Haha! I congratulate you on your fine mount. I have never seen a steed with so many fine points. Haha: Ouch! Oh! Your jokes have too many points to them, Prince. Take me off! Take me off!

EXCLUSIVE MODES GLEANED IN PARIS

PARIS, May 26.—Sporting garments, such as are designed for automobile driving, bathing, yachting, etc., are just now occupying an important place here. The shops are full of the ready-made garments, some of them showing a high degree of perfection, but as is readily at the private makers or at the stylish "mets" that one sees the choicest auto things.

The reason of this is largely because the French femme elegante insists absolutely upon the exclusive model. She must have everything different from the rest of the world, and the moment a style is taken up by the shops she drops it entirely.

The result is that madame's beautiful garments, showing often scarcely a sign of wear, and frequently before the season well begun at the second-hand dealers. Women in the highest circles and of unlimited wealth sell their discarded costumes in Paris, and sometimes thousands of francs are realized by a single sale.

As for the garments which are sold, they have a varied and wonderful career. Generally actresses in the small theatres buy them first, and they in turn sell them in time, Madame la Comtesse may finally recognize her former gowns among the ragged splendors of some old clothes market. Everything has its price in Paris, and the poorest grisette knows the value of every "chiffon" (rag) put up for sale.

CHIC MOTOR WEAR

The automobile toilette which will come some time or other to the old 'ol' man—and prove boons to the lucky woman who spies them in the first stages—are first of all distinguished by mad color. Cherry red, electric blue, periwinkle, ochre, lilac and Opheia pink are some smart colors for the shower-proof coats.

The garments hang with immense fullness. Skirts of the prettiest ones depend from novel yokes, with touches of white or ornamental stitching. The big sleeves, puffed and looped up in open cloak way to three-quarter lengths, are delightfully coquetish, showing effective trimmings of ruffles, bows or bands of the rain-proof material.

The newest automobile hat is a species of straw turban, big and clumsy, with an owl-like front which is accentuated by the trimming. Whatever the color of the coat, the hat matches. The small flowers put on in one's eyes at each side of the front, the handsome ribbons and floating veil—all give that look of coquetish disguise which is so taking.

Cherries as big as small apples are very modish ornaments for the auto headpiece, with the fruit often colored to suit the scheme of the get-up. For the dusty or damp run a silk hood, made exactly on the hat lines, with a curtain to cover the hair and cheeks, may protect the head-piece. Some goggles with half masks of kid—white, red, black or blue—are also worn; gloves are in gauntlet shape, and laced boots may come almost to the knee. But these are practical things. At the short-run meets which are accompanied by lavish banquets the dressing is coquetish and elegant in the extreme.

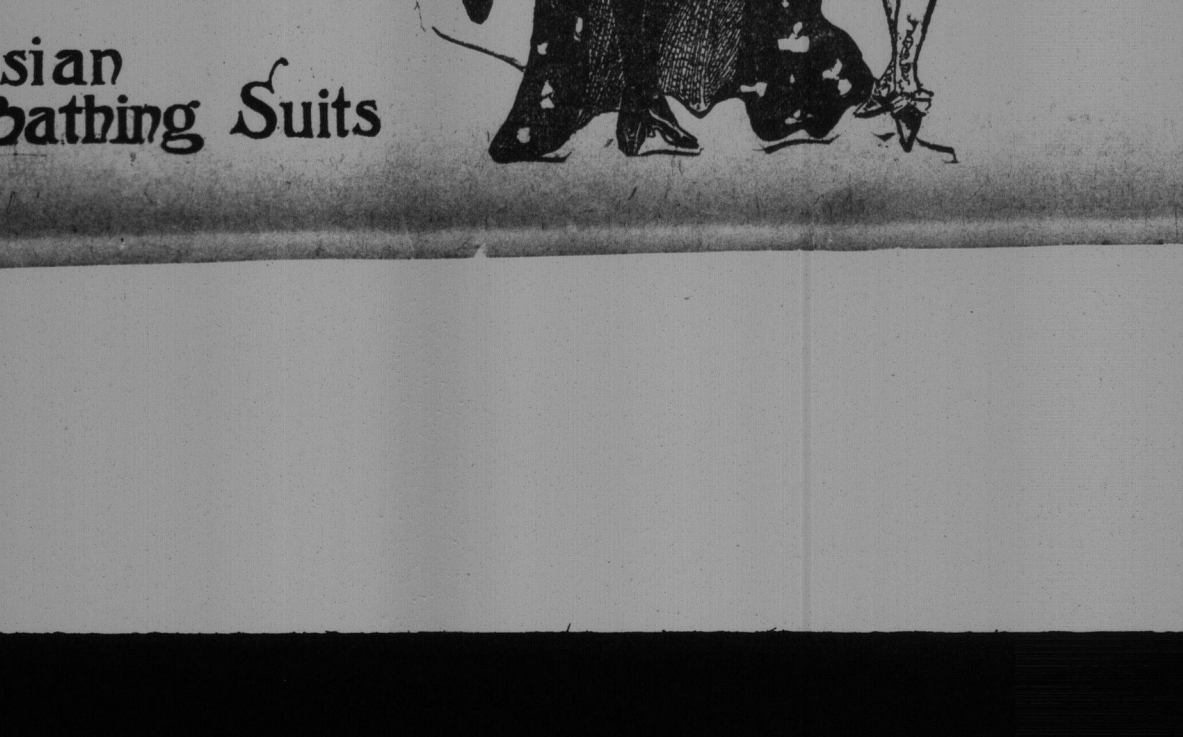

Women who prefer the entirely sporty thing, however, have a complete motor outfit throughout. When the outer coats are thrown off and the silk hoods removed a costume all automobile is displayed. These coat-gowns, which are of various textures, khaki-colored alpaca, pongee, tweed, etc., have a very jaunty and racy air, showing short skirts, gay linings, mannish shirt waists and stiff linen collars and cuffs.

The accompanying hat matches, many small, compactly built sailors being seen. The eccentric leather hoods which are described as sometimes worn in America have little place here. Even the plain leather coats are, in a measure, set aside, the shower-proof satin coats and all the other very dressy ones having the chief vogue.

For warmth in chilly districts, sweaters and knee trousers of white knitted wool are carried in the machine, and perhaps veils of extra thickness. Chiffon cloth and French bazaar (a material as thick as thin delaine) compose many of the veils for hard wear, the novel and coquetish disposal of the veil being the last stroke of the get-up.

Running a race with the motor toggery— in the shops at least—are the toilettes baina de mer. Parisians are very independent regarding bathing dresses, the chief sign being to throw Anglo-Saxon prudery to the winds. Low necks, short sleeves

INSOLENT CORPORATIONS

(Collier's Weekly) Municipal ownership tendencies are helped enormously by the insolence characterizing so many public service corporations—an insolence bred of long immunity and arbitrary power. Some time ago we advised consumers, in places where gas or water was unreasonably expensive, to contest their bills in court, and we now advise that part of the population which happens to be located in New York City, to overthrow the Metropolitan Traction Company's latest act of oppression.

TOWN OF NELSON, B. C.

According to information furnished by its 20,000 club, Nelson, B. C., has now a population of 6,000. The town possesses water works, electric light, gas, tramway, large public and high schools, seven churches, four chartered banks, city electric power plant just completed at a cost of $300,000. Seven large passenger steamers and half a hundred miles of navigable waters. Nelson district gained first prize at the 1905 exhibition of the Royal Horticultural society of London, England, and the province of British Columbia secured the gold medal in competition with all the British colonies. During the last season about 20,000 crates of strawberries, 1,000 crates of apples and several hundred crates of peaches, plums, pears and raspberries were shipped from the Nelson district, and they secured the highest market prices.

Childhood Ailments

Most of the troubles that afflict little ones may be traced to the stomach or bowels and if these are put right the child will get well and thrive well. Baby's Own Tablets will cure all stomach and bowel ailments, and all the other minor troubles of babyhood and childhood. And the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine contains no poisonous opiate or barium drug. Mrs. Wilbert McKenzie, Chelmsford, Ont., says: "My little girl was troubled with obstinate constipation to such an extent that we did not think she would live. She cried almost constantly and was wasting away. I got a box of Baby's Own Tablets, and in three days found a great improvement. I continued giving her the Tablets for nearly a month, and every trace of the trouble has disappeared, and she has since been a bright, healthy child and has grown nicely. You can get the Tablets from any medicine dealer or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

Childhood Ailments

The boiler makers of Mattoon, Ill., have secured increased wages and other concessions.

Absolute Purity in Bread is essential in order to give proper nourishment to the system. It is, however, dependent upon the purity of the flour. You cannot make pure bread with an impure flour. "FIVE ROSES" FLOUR is made by a process which insures absolute purity. From the time the wheat enters the mill until the flour reaches the cook it is untouched by human hands. The grain itself is thoroughly cleaned before grinding, whilst the flour is sifted, time after time, through the finest silk cloth in order to remove the smallest impurities. These processes render "FIVE ROSES" an easy and satisfactory flour to use, and insure better results on Baking Day than can be obtained with any ordinary brands. ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT. THE VALUE OF RHUBARB WHEN RIGHTLY COOKED

Miss Mabel Peters Gives Times Readers Eight Recipes for the Preparation of this Much-neglected but Nutritious Product of the Garden.

When working on a committee for compulsory education for St. John, I was told by a prominent citizen that "I had better teach the women how to cook;" that "it was more needed."

For rhubarb, I know why, and know what that family is missing in suppers, easily prepared, inexpensive desserts. Following are a few ways of cooking this much neglected, nutritious herb.

Wise Mothers Nourish Their Babies on Life-Giving Lactated Food During the Hot Weather. It Saves Baby from All Deadly Summer Complaints. All Druggists.

Wipe each stalk of rhubarb with a clean, damp cloth; remove a small cutting from each end; cut rhubarb in inch lengths; place in porcelain kettle; to every pound of rhubarb add three-fourths of a pound of sugar.

RHUBARB AND ORANGE JAM. One quart finely cut rhubarb, 6 oranges, 1-2 pounds sugar; peel the oranges, remove as much of the white pith as possible; slice and cut seeds. Add the rind of half the oranges, cut in fine strips; add rhubarb and sugar, cook on top of range, stirring frequently, remove all the rind, as it is bitter. Lemons may be used in place of oranges if desired, but more sugar is required. White sugar is used in MABEL PETERS. Westfield, N. B., May, 28th.

THE HALF HOLIDAY

To the Editor of The Times:
Sir:-Is not this an opportune time, the 15th of June, when there comes the first touch of summer...

My position is that of an onlooker simply and I shall be glad to see the matter further dealt with.

Yours respectfully,
JAMES SHAW.

What Does it Mean?

YALE WAITING FOR HARVARD.
According to Yale's athletic managers, nothing has been done about a Yale-Harvard football game for next fall.

It is taken for granted, so to speak, that there will be a game between the two universities, but no arrangement has yet been made for one, although some time has elapsed since Harvard decided to play football again.

Notices have been posted in all the cotton mills of New London and Windham counties Conn., of a ten per cent. increase in wages to take effect at once.

The hairdressers of Paris, France, who are on strike because their employers refused to close on Sundays, compelled the closing of the shops recently by a severe and amusing ruse.

The employees of the Hogana Railway, which serves the principal coffee estates in the state of Sao Paulo, Brazil, have struck, and the trouble is now threatening to spread to all the railways in that region.

The 11th commercial artists of New York City have given their employers until June 4 to answer their ultimatum in favor of the abolition of piece-work and contract systems, and double time pay for Sunday, holiday and overtime work.

The strike at the East Helena, Mont., plant of the American Smelting and Refining Company has been amicably settled, the men agreeing to return.

The brick makers' strike in Coeymans, N. Y., has been amicably settled.

Gov. Higgins of New York recently signed the Page bill, which provides for an eight-hour day and the prevailing rate of wages on all state and municipal contract work.

By order of the Prussian minister of public works a nine hour working day was introduced recently in the state railway workshops in the Berlin, Frankfurt-on-Main, Magdeburg and Posen railway districts, and time wages were increased, so that no decrease in the workmen's wages should result from the reduction in working hours.

There are 23,000 members in the Barbers' International Union.

Recently sixty bricklayers succeeded from Chicago, Ind. No. 21 and started their own union, but have been unable to get a charter.

Since the successful strike of the grand opera chorus girls in New York several weeks ago, their union has been growing rapidly. The new union is known as No. 14 of the Actors' National Protective Union, chartered by the American Federation of Labor.

REMARKABLE PROGRESS.

No greater proof of the wonderful success of the present management of the MANUFACTURERS LIFE can be offered than to show side by side the standing of the company on December 31st, 1904, just previous to the time when the present management took office, and on December 31st, 1905.

Table with columns: Dec. 31, 1904, Dec. 31, 1905. Rows: Insurance in force, Policy Reserves, Assets, Income, Surplus on Policy-holders account.

In fact so great is the company's rate of progress at present, that during 1905 many items in the company's report increased more than the whole item amounted to 10 years previously.

The national officers of various unions are making an open fight against the Industrial Workers of the World.

Railway trainmen to the number of 400,000 on every railway line in the United States have begun a campaign for better wages.

The threatened accession of ten or twelve local unions of bricklayers and masons in and near New York City has been averted, the executive board of the International Union having agreed to a compromise satisfactory to the executive committee of the New York locals.

In Germany on an average of twelve trades cited, one hour's work represents approximately 12 cents of earnings; in the case of Great Britain 17 1/2 cents, and in the United States 35 cents per hour.

Thousands of girl workers in Chicago bookbinders may strike on account of a cut in wages.

Street railway employees of Detroit are agitating for an increase of scale from 23 1/2 to 27 cents an hour.

Strikes and labor troubles in Turin, Italy, are increasing.

One hundred Chinese recently arrived at Gainesboro, Fla., to take the place of the striking men in the turpentine fields. They are to receive 80 cents a day, while the strikers asked $1.50 and $2.

Hard Coughs
Have you forgotten that family history of yours, with its tendency to weak lungs? Your doctor has not, if you have!

He will tell you the special danger of hard coughs in your case. Then ask him what he thinks about your taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If he says it is a good medicine, why not take it? We have no agents! We publish, C. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., the formula of all our medicines.

Mothers of families freely admit that no material gives such satisfaction for general wear as the colored Dongola. This season the color is of that rich dark brown that matches so admirably the hosiery. The style of these shoes is commended, as they are less liable to slip at the heels than the ordinary low Oxfords—the strap on the instep holding them on securely.

LATE LOCALS

The death of Joseph McPherson at Roxbury, Mass., last Wednesday is reported at the age of 64 years. He was a native of this city.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, German street, Rev. David Lang, M. A., D. D., pastored services at 11 and 7 p. m. Sabbath school at 2.30. All are cordially welcome to the services.

The funeral of Mrs. Eleanor A. Willis took place today from her son's residence, 61 Elliott Row, at 11 o'clock. Service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Spang and Rev. C. W. Hamilton and the body was taken to Upper Sackville for interment.

Twelve deaths were reported to the board of health this week as follows: Senile decay 3, diphtheria 2, consumption, meningitis, heart disease, heart failure, cerebral embolism, disease of prostate, cancer of os uterini, one each.

Success has crowned the opening sale of the Union Clothing Company. Many hats come, more will come. All day today and tonight the good things will be offered. Call and investigate this unusual money-saving opportunity. See adv. on page 3.

On Wednesday next the priests attached to the St. John conference will meet in the presbytery of the Church of St. John the Baptist, Lower Cove. The priests attached to this conference are those of St. John, Kings, Queens and Albert. Theological and ecclesiastical matters will form the subjects of discussion at the conference.—New Freeman.

The half-holiday goes into effect today in the leading hardware establishments, and the wholesale grocers will also close. No definite action has yet been taken by grocery clerks or retail grocery employees. While the half-holiday is not general among wall paper men, George Nixon and Reid Bond will close during June, July and August.

Considering the Street, Shipman & Co. production of When Knighthood Was in Flower which will be at the Opera House three nights, commencing June 7, 8, 9, as a whole, with its gorgeous scenery, magnificent costumes, and a cast which includes some of the best actors and actresses of the day, it is safe to say that it will draw one of the biggest crowds of the season to that theatre on the night of its presentation.

THE IRISH PAWNBROKERS

This famous farce comedy The Irish Pawnbrokers, which has been one of the biggest successes ever known in farce comedy, will be the attraction at the Opera House Monday night. This is the fourth edition and is the work of Edgar Selden. He has so re-written the comedy that it is safe to say that it will draw one of the biggest crowds of the season to that theatre on the night of its presentation.

ROSELLE KNOTT HERE NEXT WEEK

It is safe to say that Messrs. Swely, Shipman & Co. are this year taking out the most gorgeous set of scenery for their great production of When Knighthood Was in Flower that has ever left New York City. Five sets are required for the excellent descriptions of the country where the play is laid during the time about which it is written. The properties and settings have been made exact copies from originals in French and English museums and are simply magnificent. The sets represent Windsor Park, London, on Monday, 1513, Mary Tudor's apartments at Beilwell House, London, one of the most beautiful palaces of the time, the great room of the famous Bow and String, Bristol, the ball room of the Palace Des Tournailes, Paris, and the morning room of the Greenwich Palace, London.

A FINE SHOW

Among the important attractions booked for early production at York Theatre is Fabio Corelli's novel, "The Vendetta." The story deals with the duplicity of the wife of "Fabio Roman" and her favor for the friend of her husband, which results in their joint contrivance to consign Roman to the torture of a living death by being entombed alive, and it is then that he registers his vow of vengeance on the erring pair. Through the terrible eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, his escape from entombment is made possible and is followed by the death of his false wife and friend. This great attraction opens at York Theatre on Thursday next.

TIRED CITY FOLKS

A. P. Paterson's house has received a new coat of paint which adds greatly to the neat appearance.

The grocery store of Harold Thomas has become very popular with the residents and fills a long felt want.

Kamp Kumfort is resplendent in a new dress of white paint with green trimmings.

At Riverside

Riverside this year seems to have increased in popularity and the cottages have all been taken.

D. J. Parly and family have taken a cottage there.

Charles J. Lordly is occupying the same cottage he had last year.

Eustace Barnes and family are out again this year.

Attonson Morrison and family expect to move out on Thursday next.

Those who are out there are: Walter Fleming, J. S. Gibbons, Wm. L. Robson, L. D. Clarke, Thomas U. Hay, John McFarlane, Alexander Campbell, Jr., A. R. Campbell, Arthur Lordly and R. T. Lovatt.

One of the residents when asked if there were any special matters arranged for said the only thing he knew of was the "frag band," which was expected to make its appearance tonight. He added also that the perch were with them yet and that eels had not yet made an appearance.

At Millidgeville

Of all the summer resorts within easy reach of the city, it is clearly evident that Millidgeville occupies a prominent place in the foremost rank. The number of suburbanites is vastly in excess of last season, and already accommodation is at a premium.

Those who have located there for the present season are unanimous in voting it an ideal summer resort, affording, as it does, an excellent opportunity for yachting, boating and canoeing.

Frank E. Williams, talking with the Times today, expressed the opinion that a large up-to-date summer hotel was needed at Millidgeville, and if expertly handled, could be made a paying proposition. There are, he adds, plenty of suitable localities, and the advent of such an establishment would be hailed with delight, not only by the St. John public, but by summer tourists generally.

Those who have moved out are still busy getting their cottages into shape for the season, and as a natural consequence, social events are by no means so numerous as they doubtless will be when everybody has settled down and plans begin to take definite form.

The numerous yachts and small craft form a striking picture, and a notable feature of the present season is the rapid increase in the number of power boats. At the present time, however, there is one grievance, at least, that should be investigated by the city, and which should be attended to without delay. The disgraceful condition of what is known as Manor Sutton street, is talked of generally among the summer residents, who say that it is so dangerous for driving that two of the suburbanites, feeling it was high time for somebody to take the matter in hand, had some improvements made at their own expense.

Application was made to the city to make this thoroughfare suitable, but apparently the proper officials ignore the application, and, as a natural result, not a dollar was expended in this direction. Residents complain that as houses are being built in that section of Millidgeville the city fathers should take some action in the matter. It has also been ascertained that the people are desirous of having the road incorporated.

To return again to the matter of accommodation, it is worthy of note that it has been found necessary to erect two suitable houses for well known city families. "This," remarked one of the suburbanites to a Times reporter, "speaks for itself."

Among those who are summering there are J. Fraser Gregory, Sydney L. Kerr, A. W. Macrae, Chas. A. Rutherford, A. E. Prince, Holly Mela, Lingrey, Dr. March, A. P. Hazen, F. E. Law, Horace King, Gil Sweeney, Stephen Matthews, George Jackson and others.

At Westfield

The past week has seen quite a number of the summer residents arrive and this popular resort is commencing to show signs of its usual activity. The fine weather of the past few days has been heartily welcomed after the long stretch of rainy weather, and the suburbanites having become settled are now thinking of various amusements for the summer evenings.
