NEWS OF THE WEEK.

LOCAL NEWS.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mrs. S. J. Stubbs, died suddenly in Portland, on Monday.

PERSONAL.—His Lordship Bishop Rogers, was in the city for a short time, last week.

A mine shot was found in a spruce log which was sawn at Cushing's Mill, recently.

The Fredericton Oddfellows will have an excursion to Grand Falls, on Dominion Day.

GRUBBEN A Moncton butcher, has been fined $4 for shaving on Sunday. The case will be one of appeal.

DEPUTY MAYOR.—On Wednesday, Dr. Tuck was sworn in Deputy Mayor to act in the absence of Mayor Earle.

ROBBERY.—Mr. H. Neals' store, on Main street, Portland was entered at an early hour, Saturday morning, and $2.75 stolen.

HAMPTON is to have a new Catholic Church situated at the station. It is now in course of erection and will be 40x24 feet with vestry.

FIRST COMMUNION.—About 80 children of the St. Peter's, and 120 of the Cathedral Sunday schools made their first communion, last Saturday morning.

EXPLOSION.—A window was smashed in D. Watter's house, Main street, Portland, on Thursday night by the explosion of a lamp.

A swindler registering his name as G. O. Sinclair, Louisville, Kentucky, has been detected here having victimized some and unsuccessfully tried the same game with others.

OPEN AIR CONCERT.—On Wednesday next, the 7th Battalion Band, Fredericton, under the leadership of Mr. Frank Bryson, will hold forth on the Officer's Square, in this city.

THEATRICAL.—Mr. Wm. Neary will open a grand dramatic season, limited to two weeks, at the Mechanic's Institute, Monday evening. G. F. Rowe's celebrated comedy of "Brass" will be the opening piece.

HORSE RACE.—A race on the Mainway, on Thursday afternoon, between John M. Stafford's horse, and Mr. John Gray's mare was won by the former. Stakes, $50 a side.

FOUNDLING.—A little female waif about a month old, was found lying in the recess of Mrs. Campbell's door, Spring street, Portland, on Thursday night. It was healthy and well clad.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.—An attempt to break into Mr. J. J. Mullin's store, Portland, at an early hour, Monday morning, was frustrated by the appearance of the night watchman who guards the premises.

The grand Masonic procession, on Wednesday, numbered 550 men. And yet when the spread report of the affair by the G. O. G. was read by a non-spectator he certainly could not in his imagination conjure up less than 5000.

A number of men are to be met with on the street every day who appear to be unable to get work. Strangers should not come here in the hope of getting employment, as building operations are not as extensive as might be expected.

We have received from P. J. Kennedy, 5 Barclay Street, New York, "President Grant and Political Rings, a Satire," by P. Cadmore, Counselor-at-law, author of the "Civil Government and the Constitutional History of the United States," the "Irish Republic," etc., etc.

PENIC.—The Roman Catholics of Moncton are making preparations to hold a grand picnic, in aid of their new Church, on the first of July, full particulars of which will shortly be published. Efficient committees have charge of the affair and there is no doubt it will be a grand success.

RACKET.—About four o'clock, last Saturday morning there was a disturbance among a crowd of young men who had been tampering with the ardent, and who made their exit from the rear of a bar room near the foot of Portland. The police putting in an appearance there was a general stampede.

On Thursday evening, Father Matthew Association elected Messrs. F. J. Duffy, J. Ryan, J. Allen, J. Connors and T. O'Brien as Convention delegates. The delegates ex officio are Rev. Father Dalet, chaplain, and Mr. J. O'Keefe, Local Deputy. Mr. P. J. O'Connor, was appointed Local Deputy for the ensuing year.

Duffell's coat got two years in the same institution. Thornton for receiving stolen property, case laid over from last court, was also sent over, three years.

NEW BOOT AND SHOE STORE.

A very neat and attractive looking Boot and Shoe Store, has been lately opened on Main Street, Portland, by Mr. Hugh Phillips who has had a successful run of Custom Work from his friends and the public for forty years. The stock is of first class makes and styles. The readers of the HERALD in Portland may feel assured that a visit to the store will convince them that the goods are A 1 and can be purchased at very reasonable prices. See adv.

A MASSIVE and HANDSOME Gold Cross with neck chain—the whole said to weigh seventy two pennyweights—was among the display of valuable articles at the jewelry establishment of Mr. Isaac Harris early this week. The Cross, which was intended for His Lordship Bishop Rogers, to replace that destroyed when the Cathedral, Episcopal Residence, College, etc., were burned last winter. The Cross is the handsomest piece of work of the kind ever seen in Miramichi.—Advocate.

THE McCarty inquest is not yet finished at Shelburne. On Wednesday, the Sackville Post had the following extraordinary statement which was telegraphed from Alberton, P. E. I.:—A woman named Parker, wife of a brother of Annie Parker, made a statement here to-day before a local magistrate. She testifies that on the night of 12th Oct. her husband and she were in a house at Shelburne, and Annie Parker went in to see them. McCarty came there late at night, opened a window and was crawling in, when Parker hit him on the head, killing him. Parker fled to the States and his whereabouts are unknown. Sheriff Sweeney is expected here at once to take the woman to Shelburne to testify. The story turns out a canard.

DROWNED.—About five o'clock yesterday morning, word was given to the police that the body of a man was in the mud, about fifteen feet out from Lloyd's Wharf; the tide being out at the time. The man was found lying on his face, part of which was embedded in the mud, and his hands stretched out as if in the act of swimming. The policemen, with assistance, procured some water and oakum and washed part of the body, with a view to identification. Subsequently it was removed to the Dead House where an inquest was held on it in the afternoon. The body, when found, was respectfully attired. A watch was found on it which had stopped at 9.55. The drowned man was Charles McKay Fleming, aged about 30 years, son of Mr. T. Fleming, of Shelburne, and had been away from home since yesterday forenoon. "Found Drowned" was the verdict of the jury.

CLIMO's ever-popular Photographs, at liberal prices, are made at 13 Charlotte street (Jack's building). His beautiful price reductions, views, Call saved of New Brunswick scenery, and St. John before the war, can also be had at above address and dealers.

THE REWARD OF OBEDIENCE.

A LIBERTY. On a steep, low range of Alban hills, In a quiet spot, where verdant hills Flow hushed down from Tuscan's low, stood in a green past, the ancient tower...

One summer eve, ages long gone by, The good monks came from the vineyard high, The "Ave" rolled with the soft, low hum, Silence and night o'er the abbey fell...

Of goodly race was this young Prior; The last to die, the first in choir, His noble brow was gentle and high, The light of genius gleamed from his eye...

With a patient smile he stood his lamp, For he would speak in the hall of prayer, First in the choir he sang his part, His voice was clear and his heart was true...

With a patient smile he stood his lamp, For he would speak in the hall of prayer, First in the choir he sang his part, His voice was clear and his heart was true...

With a patient smile he stood his lamp, For he would speak in the hall of prayer, First in the choir he sang his part, His voice was clear and his heart was true...

With a patient smile he stood his lamp, For he would speak in the hall of prayer, First in the choir he sang his part, His voice was clear and his heart was true...

and speaking in quick, low tones, raising her eyes to his, "I know that you love me, and I am sure that I love you very dearly, but I am not worth the waiting for, I am not worth the having; and I mean to have this one happy, joyous summer to myself. Perhaps the fall—but, never mind that now, so good-bye, till dinner time."

"But, La Neige!" "Nay—" "Jamie an' ye dinna wait, Ye canna marry me!"

and with the low words ringing in his ears, he finds himself upon one side of the door and Miss St. Arnold upon the other. Taking a cigar from his pocket, he thrusts it between his lips, lights it, and strides off in an amiable mood to his study room.

While a bright, amber flood of light from the west, fills the decks, and glimmers upon the white sails of the Alert like a glory.

The day following is like all the other days that come after it. Breakfast, a saunter on deck, luncheon; back to the deck again, or in the saloon, where Gerald reads aloud while the ladies work, and after dinner the most delicious part of it all.

The day following is like all the other days that come after it. Breakfast, a saunter on deck, luncheon; back to the deck again, or in the saloon, where Gerald reads aloud while the ladies work, and after dinner the most delicious part of it all.

only as marking the era of a Homer or a Demosthenes. "No," she cries, quickly, and looking at him in surprise. "I often think of it—that is as you say, strange anomaly, but I never think of it like that. How could I! I have thought and puzzled over it even at school. How being converted to Christianity ourselves, we should presume to retain the attributes of heathenism, in connection with one of the most glorious wonders of the universe, created by the hand of a beneficent Father to beautify the firmament which he had made. When we think of the star that heralded to mankind the birth-place of the Saviour of the world, the star of Bethlehem, would it not be little short of sacrilege to think of it forming part of the constellation of an Astronoma or a Cassiopeia?"

"I cannot find words to express one half of what I want to say. This I can say—no matter how vague it may sound to you—that I think it a most dangerous blot upon our Christianity. We do not believe in the heaven of mythology, in Jove's heaven. We read with very incredulous wonder, indeed, of that classic period, and yet we bring its duties very near us, when we clothe one of the most beautiful stories that God has given to the world in such an idealism."

Her listener shrugs his shoulder as she finishes, but La Neige says neither the movement nor the smile which plays beneath his moustache as he answers her: "I am sorry, Miss St. Arnold," he says, "but you are quite beyond me. Your is—excuse me—rather too poetical version for a practical mind like mine to follow as it deserves."

"I did not me it so, believe me," she replies, quickly; "I only tried to express in very commonplace words, what has long been my own thoughts, and of course I did not expect to find you as sceptical as myself."

"But granted as you say," he returns, "but too glad to continue the argument, for the sake of keeping her beside him, that she should be so, he says, "I am only surprised that you would endeavor to make the attempt," she cries, warmly, but never heeding the interruption, he goes on—

"It is more than likely that such characters as Jupiter, Apollo, Hercules and others, really existed, and that in their vague histories there is as much fact as fiction. They are reckoned as gods, it is true, but so also—later on—were Hector and Ulysses, and we read that the ancients granted no less than three hundred Jupiters alone. That in itself seems considerable, but not so incredible when we consider everything, according to the most liberal writers—the people who had lost all knowledge of God, were only too ready to turn their adoration to other objects. They deified men because they were grateful for what those men had done for them and for their country. Euclepius excelled in medicine, while Bacchus was a vine grower, and so with the others. Men deified them, and their natural yearning after the marvellous, being ignorant as to what would say—of all diviner pronouncements than that they should eventually perpetuate the splendour of their deities in such a form, as would alike appeal to their love of the wonderful and the instincts of their worship."

"Could the officers belonging to the navy room of the Alert but be accorded another laurel," La Neige stands looking at him, her hands clasped.

"But still I do not see," she says, slowly; "that you have said anything to cause me to change my own opinion. I say that having been converted to Christianity, enlightened, taught to despise all that is false—later on—were Hector and Ulysses, and we read that the ancients granted no less than three hundred Jupiters alone. That in itself seems considerable, but not so incredible when we consider everything, according to the most liberal writers—the people who had lost all knowledge of God, were only too ready to turn their adoration to other objects. side along the deck—almost deserted where they two are—for more than half an hour. At last La Neige grows tired of this very unusual silence, and says, gaily, (To be continued.)

TESTED AGAINST ENGLISHMEN AND SCOTCHMEN—THE IRISH PROVE THEIR INTELLECTUAL SUPERIORITY NOTWITHSTANDING THEIR MISADVANTAGES.

[From the Bar of Harvard's Speech at the Dublin Meeting.]

Lord Grand, who was loudly applauded, said:—"The resolution which I shall have the honor to propose relates to intermediate education—a most important branch of the question, and one in which it cannot be admitted that the Catholic youth of Ireland is placed at a great disadvantage, the whole endowments for intermediate education being, as is shown by the Endowed Schools Commission Report, entirely in the hands of Protestants. This being so, it will at once be seen how unfairly Catholic students are handicapped with those students who possess those educational advantages from which they are excluded—a position which is the more irksome and difficult to bear at a time when all the prizes, whether of the civil or military services, must be obtained by open competition; and it is on this account that I hail with satisfaction the announcement that this state of things has attracted the attention of Her Majesty's Government, and that they have shaped the intention to bring in a bill on this very important subject (applause)."

It is nearly six years since the "MAIL" was established, and during that time it has gradually acquired a circulation and influence, which renders it second to no other newspaper in the Dominion. The Publisher takes great pleasure in announcing that he purposes to still further increase this circulation by greatly improving the WEEKLY MAIL during the coming year, whereby he hopes to make it

The Great Family Paper of Canada. Special Editors have been engaged for the various Departments, and no expense will be spared to make the whole paper

INTERESTING AND RELIABLE. The MAIL will remain true to the principles it has always advocated, and it is intended to make it, by the aid of such additional strength as single capital can afford, even a more potent champion of the Conservative cause.

ALL THE OLD DEPARTMENTS OF NEWS, POLITICAL INTELLIGENCE AND EDITORIAL, will be continued with unabated vigor. During 1877 the following Departments will receive special attention:—

AGRICULTURE in its various branches, made especially interesting by a series of prize articles on leading subjects. We propose that our subscribers shall make this a Mutual Improvement Club, and that each one shall add his name to the general fund of agricultural knowledge.

Our Market Reports will be a specially well written feature, whereby he hopes to make it

Our Literary Department will be a leading feature. Stories both short and continuing, with the best authors, and which number in many cases illustrated.

Our Ladies Department, under charge of Ladies of the name of the Customs and Excise, an interesting and valuable feature. Fashion, Household Culture, History, the Care of Children, &c., will be included in this department.

Health in the Household, under charge of an A. M. D. M. D., will add to the value of the WEEKLY MAIL.

During the year we will treat our readers to a large portion of Canada, illustrating the duties of the House, Farms, Factories, Natural Scenery, &c. An especial feature of the WEEKLY MAIL, during the coming year. Price as before, $1.50 per annum.

DAILY MAIL, $4.00 and Special Agents Wanted Everywhere. Address, THE MAIL, Toronto.

INVALUABLE THE BEST QUALIFIED. Of every 100 Scotch examined 91 succeeded; of every 100 English examined 22 succeeded (applause). It is important to recall the figures—91 to 22. Let Dr. Lyon Playfair and 1st Secretary, who are prone to disparage the fruits of primary education, explain these figures if they can. The figures I quote show that Scotland ran in 11 per cent. of the candidates, though Scotland is only 10 per cent. of the population of the three kingdoms. Consequently more than her full quota of candidates were sent in, and won, as his Grace has shown, only 9 per cent. of the places (applause). Now it is to be borne in mind that for centuries Scotland has had no special system of education; that as the audience I am addressing knows too well, at the time that Scotland's system was in full vigor, it was penal for Catholics to send their children to the schools; that under that infamous system everything was done to crush and blight the intellect of Catholics. Yet now, with Christian Brothers' schools and National schools, which have not yet a half-century of existence, look at the satisfactory results arrived at. Whilst Ireland, with such antecedents in every 100 shows 22 successful candidates.

SCOTLAND WITH ALL THE ADVANTAGES of a long established system, can only, in the very curriculum of primary education, have obtained such results as every 100 (applause). What, therefore, may we not expect will be done if a truly liberal scheme of intermediate education be introduced? Believe the same results will be arrived at by Irish students as have been obtained in the competition for the minor prizes of the Civil Service, and that we shall find Ireland obtaining more than her share of the great prizes of the public service, such as those of the Indian establishment, through the industry and intelligence of her sons (applause). I trust, therefore, that the proposed bill will remedy the portion of our educational system, and having great confidence in the integrity of our purpose of the excellent movement who so warmly represents Her Majesty in this country, I cannot but hope that through his wise counsel such a bill may be presented to Parliament, and that we shall see the Catholics of Ireland, and be an instrument of justice to their long deferred claims.
