LESSON IX.—SEPT. 1, 1912.

The Death of John the Baptist-Mark 6: 14-29. Temperance lesson.

Commentary.—I. A troubled conscience (vs. 14-20.) 14. King Herod.—Herod. Autipas, the ruler of Galilee and Perea. His father was Herod the Great, who was king of all Palestine when Christ was born, and who attempted to slay him, causing the death of the infants of Jerusalem. At the death of Herod of Jerusalem. At the death of Herod the Great, his sons were appointed to rule, the territory being divided between Archelaus had Judea, Herod Philip, Trachonitis, and Herod Antipas Galilee and Perea. It was the ambition of Astipas to be called king, and this ititle was sometimes applied to him through courtesy. His name was spread abroad—Jesus had been engaged in his public ministry for more than two years land his teachings and missales had been and his teachings and miracles had been widely reported, and the news had reached to the palace of Herod Antipas. This ruler had deserted his first wife, the daughter of Aretas, the king of Arabia, and Aretas made war upon Herod to avenge the wrong done his daughter; thus Herod was kept busy with his enemy on the southeastern border of his It has therefore been suggested that Antipas had but recently heard of the great works that were being wrought by our Lord. Others said Perhaps Herod's friends endeavored to quiet his alarm. Mias-Elijah. There was an expectation that Elijah would reappear according to the words of the prophet Malachi (4: 5.) The people failed to perceive that this was fulfilled in the coming of A prophet—A new prophet. 1d. ... said, It is John, whom I beheaded-His guilty conscience made him afraid, and he had cause enough to fear he believed that John was alive from the dead; for one who had the power to arise from the dead or who was suffici ently honored by Jehovah to be raised from the dead would be able to de Herfrom the dead would be able to de Her-od much injury. 17. Bound him in prison. The place of the imprisonment was in the southeastern part of the dominion of Herod, at Mucherus, where he had a palace with a prison attached. For Herodias' sake—Herodias was the daughter of Aristobulus, the son of Her-od the Great. She had married her unde. Herod Philip, whom she deserted for Herod Antipas. Herod Antipas had put away his wife, the daughter of Arctus, John had said There was courage in that rugged prophet of the wildernes declare the truth in the presence of the ruler, even though that truth was le the highest degree unpalatable to the guilty peir. John spared neither common sinuers, nor sinners high in the social scale in his denunciation of iniquity Not lawful for thee Herod was guilty in putting away his wife; was guilty in taking the wife of his brother tHerod Philip was living); was guilty in marry-ing his niece, who was also his sister-inlaw. Herodias was unprincipled and ambitions. She had married Herod Philip, the eldest son of Herod the Great, thinking that he would enter upon the inheritance of his father, but, when Philip was disinherited and became poor, be deserted him for Antipas, who was tetrarch and rich. It was proper for John to reprove Herod. 19. Had a quarrel against him "Set herself against him."—R. V. Would have killed him— The Greek has the idea of a settled pur pose to kill him. The reason why Hero-dias could not kill John is given in the 20. Herod feared John-Herod's feelings toward John were min-gled. He feared him, he admired him,

B. A rash promise (vs. 21-23).) 21. A convenient day was come A day suitable to the cherished and wicked purable to the cherished and wicked pur-pose of Herodias. She had long desired to have John slain and was seeking an opportunity to accomplish this end. On his birthday—In imitation of the opportunity to accomplish this end. On his birthday In imitation of the Roman emperors, the Herodian princes kept their birthdays with feasting and revelvy and magnificent banquets.—(Am. Bib. Lords, high captains.—Civil and military officers, Chief estates—"Chief men."—R. V. They were men of high rank in Galilee. These feasts were held in the evening and often extended far into the night. 22. The daughter of the said Herodias. This was Salome, the daughter of Herod Philip and Herodias. Oame in, and danced—It was customary in the East on occasions of this mary in the East on occasions of this eart to hire dancing girls to perform in the presence of the banqueters. No reputable maiden could ever have done such a thing. Wine was flowing freely and the feasters, in virious stages of intoxication, welcomed the degrading entertainment that was furnished them. Herodias was so desirous of having John executed, that it is more than John executed, that it is more than probable that she was a party to the arrangement whereby her own daughter should be degraded to play the part of a dancing girl, knowing that the banqueters would be likely to bestow costly gifts upon the performer.

III. A heartless request (vs. 24-26)

gifts upon the performer.

III. A heartless request (vs. 24-26).

24. What shall I ask The question of Satome was natural enough, and a wise and honorable mother would have so directed her daughter as to reflect credit upon herself, her daughter and the one making the offer. The head of John the Baptist. This was a murderous request, yet this conscienceless woman had been waiting for just such an opportunity as this, 25. Give me. In a charger Perhaps the feast suggested the idea of having the head of John borne in on the head of John borne in on a large platter, as food had been served to the guests. 26. Exceeding sorryhetter nature attempted to assert itself, as he realized the import of Salome's request. He knew John was a righteons man, and that the people fav

Gave it to her mother-She gained her Gave it to her mother—She gained her purpose, but her gloating over the tragedy brought but partial and fleeting satisfaction. Misfortunes followed this unhappy pair. Herod lost his dominion, was banished to Gaul, thence to Spain. Herodas shared his banishment and both died in disgrace. 29. His disciples, etc.—John's disciples were faithful to their master to the last. The body body had been thrown out and they performed the sad rite of burial. Matthew says they "went and told Jesus."

Questions.—What did Hero! say when he heard of the fame of Jesus? In what prison had John been put? By whom?

prison had John been put? By whom? Why? Why did Herodias hate John? Why? Why did Herodias hate John? Why was the marriage of Herod and Herodias unlawful? Why did 'Herod fear John? Who danced? What oath did Herod take? What request was made of Herod, and by whom? What were Herod's feelings when the request was made? What was the resuit?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic. The Voice of Conscience. I. Quickened a guilty memory.
II. Pointed out specific crimes.
I. Quickened a guilty memory. The onscience of Herod destroyed his creed.

Under an accusing conscience his theological view of life and destiny could not hold. Conscience faithfully portrayed evils committed, faithfully demned his wrongs and chastened his pride rigorously, but it would not undo his past or make his present peaceful or his future hopeful. He could remember details in such a way as to see every evil resting upon himself, not finding reevil resting upon himself, not finding re-lief in bringing others in as the cause of his crime. In him we have the illus-tration of the power of an aroused con-science as God's avenger of sin. The report of Christ's marvellous works awoke the solemnities of even Herod's debased nature, and made him a witness. lebased nature, and made him a witnes unto himself that the world is under the rule of a supreme moral governor. The self-willed and voluptuous king was forced to acknowledge the same spiritual realties that John had steadfastly held. Yet trying to escape from himself he could not tell what to do with the present situation in the light of his past con duct. There was a mixture of a guilty conscience, superstition, policy, cunning, and ignorance. The Baptist's voice seconed always to sound in his guilty soul. Conscience and memory asserted their power, so that Herod and his ugly crimes were left alone together. Thou Herod did not originate the plan murder John, he executed it, and his conscience forced him to say, "Whom I beheaded." Cowardice, superstition and cruelty go together. Herod's history is solemn warning upon the nature of II. Pointed out specific crimes. It was the carrying out of that promise made over the wine-cup which made Herod a murderer. Debauchery and crime keep close company. Herod assumed to regard a blasphemous oath as more sacred than the law of God. His mind had been darkened and poison by his indulgence in false pleasures of last and intemperance. The Grecian habits of dancing, as introduced into Palestine, became Satan's trap for Her od. There was a time when Herod heard John gladly. There was something within him which yearned toward justice and goodness. With all his evil practices and abandonment of principle. Herod could not but admire and respect John. He knew honestly, faith and devotion, when he saw them in John. He even applied his preaching to his own some particulars so that he "did case in some particulars so that he "did many things." He followed his advice in some reforms. It is likely that he counted himself sufficiently righteous and secure against the wicked. Having thus persuaded himself, he may have harkened with great delight to the faith ful descriptions of dangers in which others stood. Partial reformation without repentance caused Herod to cling to his darling sin. When John rebuked him for that sin and said, "It is not lawful," Herod's friendship changed to enmity. he should have been angry with his own sins. He had admired the man in whom he saw justice and holiness, but he re-fused to be helped into that place of noble manhood. He determined to seek an escape from further preaching and an escape from further preaching and exhortation. He could imprison the man, but he could not imprison the truth. He could not hinder John's work. It was finished, and could not be undone. He had done the faithful work of a preacher of repentance. We read the character of Herod and Herodas and Salome in a few verses of this lesson. There is no better mirror to reflect the heart than the choice of

Every acre that does not produce a crop is a burden to its owner. If he is out of debt and can afford to carry an outside investment, well and good; but if he is in debt and needs the money invested in idle land for the proper handling and equipment of the used land, then he is not only unbusiness-like, but he is foolish to hang on to land that can but keep him poor as land that can but keep him poor as

Silage or roots are good for the young sheep, because it assists in keeping the bowels open and the system in a cool condition. Using rich grain feeds of an oily composition to avoid constipation is wrong, because it is expensive and hard on the sheep's system. Where silage cannot be had roots, of course, would answer; in fact, are preferred by the majority of shepherds. Silage is probably more common through the country and more frequently available. Of silage or roots two or three pounds would be ample for daily feed for sheep. If the silage contains considerable corn. If the silage contains considerable corn the grain recommended should be cut somewhat, and, if possible, some oilcake should be added to the grain

When milk is skimmed the fat is taken out, and an unbalanced ration is the re-sult, one that is richer in protein than it ought to be for the young calf. There is nothing better to replace this fat than nothing better to replace this fat than flaxseed meal. Get the raw flaxseed ground. It contains 30 per cent of fat. Cook this into a jelly, and feed a calf a small amount of this at first with the small amount of this at first with the skim milk, after which the quantity may be gradually increased. While she was in the grounds, her butler, Norman Ross, concealed himself beneath the bed inst here and when he thought she had Ross, concealed himself beneath the bed just here, and when he thought she had fallen asleep he tried to steal the keys of the jewel-case. Lady Billies heard him, and spoke out, and he cut her throat with a case-knife. She lived three days and died, crying, "Save Norman, poor misguided boy!" The butler, realizing what he had done, jumped from this window, which is harely four feet high, and broke his leg. He thereupon crawled under the shadow of the old stone fence there, near the old well and stone fence there, near the old well, and lay there until he was almost dead from thirst, and he was found at the old well trying to get water. Lord Wedderburn felt complimented

Lord Wedderburn felt complimented and pleased. These old facts were stamped on his memory since childhood, and it pleased him to think a stranger was interested in them.

"You do, indeed, and I thank you for your interest," was all the reply he could make. They had to go now to another part of the old house. It was a small tower room and in it they found a flueer old bookcase, on the glass of which was an inteription in Latin and the name Patrick Home, 17-. They the name Patrick Home, 17--. They elimbed another flight of stairs, the steps of which were dangerous and broken away. They climbed these stairs to another storey of the gloomy old house. Here they saw two small rooms. In one there was a small fireplace, the hearth being covered with old, smoul-dery ashes. This room had been Nor-man Ross' bedchamber. In this room he had conceived the terrible deed that he had committed. There were traces of his writings on the walls, and the wooden pegs upon which he had hung his clothing. Miss McRay shuddered and followed Lord Wedderburn down the broken stairsteps.

"It's a most uncanny old place," she said, when they had reached the great arched front doorway, and seated them-selves on the stone steps to rest before etarting homewards.

"Indeed it is—such a monument of broken hearts and lives," he said, think-You believe, then, in broken hearts?"

"What I say to you is in confidence. It lays bare a wounded heart, and I have a reason for laying that heart bare to you. A young man, having grown careless from contact. with the world, is called out one night to the death-bed of an old friend. That old friend, knowing that she must die in a few hours, and leave a little foster child alone and unprotected, having no kith or kin to send her to, asks the young man to marry the child. It is a weird scene—the dying woman pleading, the child crying, etc., etc. The young man consents, and in a few minutes a man in attendance pronounces them man in attendance pronounces them man and wife. The young man is called away, expecting to be back in a day or two, and make every preparation for the future of his wife. He returns in a short time, and the man and child have disappeared as surely as if the grave closed over them. In fact, there was a railway accident, and a young woman answering the and a young woman answering the description was found amonk the killed. That has been five years, and no trace of either has been found, despite the most unrelenting research."

When Lord Wedderburn looked up, her face was white, hard and set.

"Then you are married?" she gasped.
"If that was a marriage," he said.
There was no proof that the man had the right to marry anyone; and besides, there is every reason to believe that death has claimed him."

Her heart had gone out in tenderest love for this man, and it was beyond recall. It had indeed some her time to have heartaches, but his words held some comfort. She heard the guiver in he asked, as he left her at the entrance.

"Nothing more, I think, than that you will make every investigation in your power. I can share a dead love, but not a living one." She turned abruptly away from him. There, was a terrible conflict now between her love and herself. Lord Wedderburn watched her in ity. He knew that the offer he had He knew that the offer he had made was such a poor one, and that she loved him. The breakfast bell rang as they enter-The breakfast bell rang as they entered the hallway, and it was only the work of a few minutes to make themselves presentable. Miss McRay's face was exceedingly pale. She heard little or none of the bright conversation around her. Lord Welderburn's lace was a strange mixture of sorrow and contentment. He felt he had acted fair-ly. He told her he had no love to offer her, yet he must marry, and he had chosen to offer a life's devotion to her. The great sorrow was for the past. He never forgot Dorothy for a moment. When she died his heart died. When he thought of her a strange feeling came over him. It seemed of late that Doro

The were to visit old Bunco were taking gally of the drive to the ruins. The were to visit old Bunco Castle, and many weird legends hung over those old, decayed ruins.

It was decided that all should go, but Lord Wedderburn did not feel like going. He felt as if he had proven false to Dorothy, and this thought made him miserable. Yet he had to go with his guests. All that day he found no opportunity of being alone with Miss McRay. He took her arm within his; and walked over the rules. walked over the ruins. He assisted her gently over the broken walls. Tender-ness was displayed in his every act, but he could not shake off the feeling that he was acting a traitor to his Dorothy. He had one comfort: Miss McRay had told him to investigate, and while he was investigating he would remain true to her.

The day was spent pleasantly by all

The day was spent pleasantly by all but Miss McRay and Lord Wedderburn. Neither of them was happy.

When they returned in the evening Lord Wedderburn was almost ill. Miss-McRay repaired at once to her own apartment and remained there. Lord Wedderburn did not join the guests at dinner. He pleaded a headeche and was excused. After the dinner was over and the guests were assembled in the great the guests were assembled in the great drawing room, Lord Wedderburn heard the laughter from below. He could not think, save of Dorothy and his unfaithfulness to her.

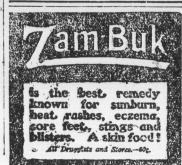

He opened the window and stepped outside on a balcony. The moon shone bright and clear; old Lenthill lay over in the distance. Lord Weddenburn made up his mind to walk over there. To-night he must bury all thought of Doro-thy. He walked down the pathway. Once he thought he saw a enadow fall across his path, but he saw no one. He felt nervous and sad, but he walked on, He had that peculiar sensation of not being alone. He attributed this, also, to his state of mind. He reached the doorway, and sat down on the step. He sat there that night and waited until Dorothy came to him. A figure sprang from behind a marble column, and a bright steel blade flashed in the moon light. Lord Wedderburn grasped his assailant's hand, knocked the knife in the air, and threw his assailant on the

Girl Cured of Disfiguring Pimples

A Nova Scotia girl, Miss Mabel Morash, of Dover West, writes: "When I was about twelve or thirteen years of age, my face broke out with pimples, and I tried everything to get rid of them, but failed. The pimples were the worst, on my forchead and chin. They came out in groups and developed later into sores. Being on my face they caused great disfigurement, and were most embarrassing.

"After trying so many remedies without success, I saw the Cuticura Ointment adversised, and I sent for a box. I then applied it to the pimples, and in a week I saw a great change in my face. I kept using it, and in a few months it rendered a complete cure. Now you cannot tell I ever had pimples, thanks to the Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Mabel Morash, Mar. 31, 1911.

"Do you know I ought not to hear your cay for mercy?" asked Lord Wed derburn.
"I realized it, my lord."

The Halian arose from the ground and moved off. Lord Wedderburn drew was of foreign make.

He took out the letter, opened it, and

"Dear Nephew: I enclose you pounds, sufficient for your journey to Remember to make sure what you do. Remember tow much is depending on your steady hand, and we will do as I said, and you must ad-mit it is a very generous offer. Let me once how you have succeeded

"Martha Weston Home."

There was nothing in this letter that particularly proved that the Weston Homes had hired this man to attempt to take his life, vet Lord Weddenburn felt that it was true. He had never seen this Italian before, and why he should seek his death, he could not tell. His death would only benefit one family, and that was the Weston Holmes. His mother was right, then, when she said that the first attempt would not be the last. OIt had clearly proven to Lord Wedderbur that his life was in the house he found some letters awaiting him. One was from his solicitors asking him to come to town. As he started, he saw Miss McRay standing at an open window. "What can I do for McRay standing in town to-day?" he asked tender-He could not give her love, but he could show her the tenderest respect shall be happy to know you are happy, He felt more kindly towards her than ever. She felt that they now perfectly understood each other. He made no pretense of love, yet he could give her tender devotion. She loved him, and it was a noble self-sacrificing love. He had trusted her with his heart's secret, and she would respect it. As devotedly as she loved him, she wished that he might use every eexition to know the past before they extered the future.

She built no hopes as yet. Lord Wed-derburn honored and respected her. Ha knew that her love was pure and un-selfish and that fate had been most un-bind to him in thus forcing him to be compeled to offer marriage to so true a woman, when he could not offer her the love that she was worthy of, and it was doubly unkind to her in forcing her o give co unch for so little in return

" HAPTER X. Lord Wedderburn took a cab from the station, and went at once to the of-fice of his solicitors.

"So glad you come, was just going to write you again. I do not know as yet that we have any reason to con icet trings, but a very strange thing use called our attention. There is a lunatic in the W—— asylum that per-sistency calls Wedderburn all the time. "Dr. Sprague called on me and wished me to try an experiment on the man. If he happens to know you and remembers you, that will decide a great point as to his being cured. I thought to ask you to accompany me and see the man, that you may tell us if you ever saw him before. My idea is that he has in some way heard the mame, and it is the some way heard the strange whims to which demented persons are addicted.

"I certainly think so, as I can think of no one now," said Lord Wedderburn.

The W—— asylum was situated in the outskirts of the city and was a long

"I was desirous of seeing you on another matter, also. Do you remember the most important matter you en-trusted us with! Well, we have had amtrusted us with! Well, we have had ample time to think it all over and have decided that you have no proof that the marriage was solemnized legally. In other words, that the man was a minister or a person having the right to perform the ceremony of marriage. We have no proof that the lady is dead, yet the circumstances are more than favorable to that belief. Now we wene not decided when we spoke to you and not decided when we spoke to you and now we have decided that while this is now we have decided that wante this article, the evidence is almost nothing; and on the other hand we have no proof that the man was not a minister, or person having the power to perform the marriage ceremony, and we have no proof that your wife is not living."

have no proof that your wife is not living."

"Now you cannot swear positively that the body you saw was that of your wife. In fact, I am told you held serious doubts. The features had changed—the hair was darker. Death may have changed the features, but I doubt it in regard to the hair. In fact, I doubt both. The clothing was entirely different. Now, if I understand matters clearly, your housekeeper made the garments she wore. She left Castle Royal to take the ill-fated train. It is not al to take the ill-fated train. It is not at all likely nor probable that she could or did change her clothing, and your housekeeper positively asserts that it was not at all the same material, color, nor make, Such, I believe, are the facts in the case. Now, on the strength of these doubts until they are clearly removed, you are a married man, and can not safely enter into another marriage, it is a most unfortunate situa-tion, my lord, and I sympathize with you, but it cannot be helped. Before you can re-marry, with safety, there will have to be an action brought to have that marriage annulled."

remorse. He had now almost compro-mised his honor. He had placed himself and the lady in a most unfortunate position, but a hope crept into his mind. Miss McRay had clearly understood the case, and had told him to investigate—he was sure of her friendship.

"I cannot help but think that the lady will turn up most unexpectedly at some future time," said Mr. Miller as they drove up the entrance to the asylum. Dr. Sprague welcomed them heartily "Pardon the trouble I have given you my Lord, but we wished to make an ex-periment, in the interest of science, you know. The physician led the way a small reception room. Then the trio were ushered into the hall where the patient was.

"My God! it's Bouguman," said Lord Wedderburn.

'You know him then?" said the solicitor. Lord Wedderburn shook as with a chill. Here was a ghost of the past arisen before him.

"Do not show the least agitation: go quietly up to him and shake hands with him as if there was nothing wrong." Lord Wedderburn did so, while the two men stood aside and watched. "How do you do, Boughman?" said Lord Wederburn, extending his hand.

The man looked at him steadily as he gave his hand, but there was not the least sign of recognition. "Do you not remember me. Bough-man?" acked Lord Wedderburn. There was only the stare, but no sign of re cognition yet.

Mining Engineer's Experiences in North.

Herds of Caribou as Tame as Sheep.

After years spent in the wilds of Ungava, Capt. Kenneth E. Kennedy, of Sherbrooke, Que. has returned to civilization and yesterday arrived at the Chateau Laurier Hotel bere. Capt. Kennedy is a mining engineer, and although he will not talk about his work in the north lands, it is understood that he has made some startling discoveries in this line.

Capt. Kennedy has stories galore of the hardships and trials of the north country. For three weeks the party of which he was head were without food and had to depend on the meagre support of the rod and gun. Bears were seen in plenty and the caribou up in the northlands were as tame as a flock of sheep. It seemed a shame to have to slaughter them to augment the food

Up to two days ago Capt. Kennedy had heard no news of the outside world. The story of the Titanic wreck, flashed as it was round the world on wireless streams of electricity failed to reach him and he heard the news with surprise two days ago.
When seen in the Chateau, Capt. Ken nedy appeared to be a young man. He wore a broad trimmed sombrero and a nugget of silver adorned his khaki

It was a year ago last December that Capt, Kennedy with a party of eight whites left Lake St. John, Quebec, for the north country. There were also Indians in his party. As a mining engineer, Capt. Kennely was chiefly interested in the mining aspect of the wilds he was visiting. visiting.

From Lake Misstassinus the party worked north. In June they were far north and though in the heat of the summer months down there, Capt, Kennedy found he could cross lakes on the ce still .emaining. In August the party met with an ac-cident. The cause containing their pro-visions was upset, and for three weeks while beating their way back to food and shelter they had to trust to red and gun.

Now Capt. Kennedy is back to civ-"I saw you at Lenthill—can't you remember anything of Dame Wynter!" asked Lord Wedderburn.

"Dame Wynter?" he repeated vacanthis knees and prayed. "He has been a minister of the gospel," said the physician, "I am quite sure of that, for I have heard him preach as fine formons as I ever heard."

"I saw you at Lenthill—can't you remember and gun.

Now Capt, Kennedy is back to civilization. He was surprised to hear of the recent treasure expeditions which have been organized to go to Ungava. He hinted at mineral discoveries in the north, and stated that he had claims staked. When asked about the mineral discoveries in the north, and stated that he had claims of the gospathy has been asked.

side of the country, he refused to make "You have your claims staked. It would not hurt to tell something about the country." pressed the Free Press.
"Yes, we have our claims staked."

responded, "but like many others, we want more." "In a short time I will be able to give out some statement that will make people open their eyes," he added, "including the mineral wealth of the country, as to its timber wealth, and in regard to its agricultural possibilities."

Capt. Kennedy had some remarkable photographs. One was a tremendous herd of caribou. They're as tame as sheep up there, he commented. Up in the north the party had little time to attend to the niceties of dress and Capt. Kennedy, had some curious experiences on the trip down. He was almost refused a seat in the first class carriage of a train and the porter in-sisted on showing him into a second class carriage. In what was left of his suit of clothes he was eyed askance on railroads and in hotels.

Capt. Kounedy left his party on Lake St. John. This was not his first trip to the north, but off and on he has a four years in Ungava districts. He be here for a few days transacting bus ness with the Government.

THREE "COMPANY" DESSERTS:

Chocolate Whips One pint of milk: 2 eggs, chocolate, pinch of salt. Sweeten to taste. Heat the milk, add 2 tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate. Then add the eggs and other ingredients. Fill glasses two-thirdds full and drop whipped cream in each, Fruit Compote Five oranges, cut ful of strawberries (or grapes if strawberries are out of season); one cupful of walnuts; juice of one lemon. Sprinkle with six tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a tenspoonful of cinnamon. Serve with haif pint of whipped cream.

Pineapple Sherbet—Take one tables spoonful of gelatine and dissolve it in half a pint of warm water. After it is dissolved add another half pint of warm water, one pint of sugar and one can of pineapple, chopped fine and added with the juice. Then freeze.

USE THE YOLKS.

When making custards, ust the yolks of the eggs only. The whites should be saved. They add nothing to the flavor of the custard, and will be found most useful for clearing soups.

at the Peacock inn in Rowsley:
"I dance because I must.—Anna Pavlova.

"Coyne, on a week-end trip to Haddon Hall, put up at the Peacock inn himself. In looking over the visitors' book he saw Paylova's pretty autograph, and took up a pen and wrote:

"I sing because I can't.—J. Coyne."

Professor Brander Matthews, says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph, at a literary dinner in New York said of a certain "best seller":

Trepoff was the detested enemy of the nihilists, and he was very anxious to obtain inside information as to their doings and plans. Suddenly one day in 1878 he was fired at while driving through the streets of St. Petersburg by no other than Vera Sassulitch. She was at once seized by the soldiery and was charged with the attempted murder of Trepoff, being tried in the ordinary manner; but, to the amazement of the public, she was acquitted!

On her release the nihilists gathered about her, desiring to admit such a friend of the people to their closest acquaintance. In this way she was admitted to all their private circles and was made acquainted with their secrets. These she at once communicated to the Russian government. The truth was that the whole business, including the attempt on his life was faked by Trepost himself. and it was simply a clever ruse to get from the nihilists what could not be got in any other way. Thereafter Vera Sassulitch played the part of government spy on innumerable occasions.

ANSWERED BACK.

Ready Reply of a Ragged Turk to a Scot In Kilts.

During the troubles at Crete in 1897 the Seaforth highlanders were landed to help to restore order. Their advent, dressed in the familiar kilts, created a great sensation, as the natives, who themselves wear a kind of kilt, had never seen British soldiers in such a costume.

An amusing incident occurred one day when a party of Seaforths were marching through a small, wretched looking village. As usual, the inhabitants turned out to stare at the soldiers, and one of the highlanders with a view to raising a laugh among his comrades shouted out to a group of Turks, "Gae hame, ye dirty blackguards, an' scrub yersels.

Imagine his astonishment as well as that of the remainder of the highlanders when a ragged and evil looking Turk shouted back in reply, "Go home yourself, Scottish dog, and cover yourself up!" It was afterward discovered that this Mohammedan had spent several years in London and so learned the language. - From "Anecdotes of Soldiers In Peace and War," by J. H.

Damp Salt Before Rain.

Very few persons know that when the salt gets damp it is either because it is too near the rea or because it is going to rain. It is very hard to keep the salt cellar dry at the seashore, as there is so much moisture in the air all the time, but in other places it is usually a sign of rain in the air all the time, but in other places it is usually a sign of rain when the salt gets damp. Things that help themselves to the water in the air are called "deliquescent," and salt is one of them. When water is in the air in the form of gas it sometimes become too plentiful for the air to hold, and then we get what is called "precipitation," or rain. But long before the water vapor in the air is heavy enough to fall in rain there is enough of it to sware to make salt is enough of it to spare to make salt

When Robespierre Was "Stung." Under the terror Robespierre used to play a peaceful game of chess at the Cafe Regence, and the story is told of a youth who once challenged him and leat him twice. Robespierre after his debeat asked how much he owed, no stakes having been previously tixed. The supposed with who by fixed. The supposed youth, who in reality was a girl in man's clothes, resented an order for the release of her lover from prison, and Robestierre signed it. Napoleon Bonaparte tring his consulship was seen at the mous cafe, but he showed himself tactician at chess.

No Fear of Thieve:

Some years ago a London merchant sent a cargo of goods to Constantinople. After the supercargo saw the beles and bor safely landed he inquired where they could be stored.

"Leave them here—it won't rain sominat," was the reply.

"But I dare not leave them thus exposed. Some of the goods might be stolen." said the supercargo.

DEATH OF MRS EDWARD DAVIS

Minerva Rowsome, aged 64, relict of the late Edward Davis of Addison, in his lifetime a prominent farmer of Leeds County, and for many years treasurer of the Brockville Fair Association, died on Saturday Aug. 10, in the general hospital, Brockville where she had been under treatment for six weeks with an affection of the throat. Mrs Davis was taken ill while visiting her sister Mrs Gardiner of Toronto and was taken to the Brockville hospital by her two daughters, Misses Norma and Edna, who are the sole survivors of the family. Three brothers and five sisters survive as follows: Erastus Rowsome of Athens: Horton Rowsome of Lyn; Henry Rowsome of Crombere, Ont.: Mrs W. S, Donaldson and Miss Rowsome, Brockyille, Mrs Arthur Purvis, Yonge Mills; Mrs J Gardiner, Toronto, and Mrs Miller Owen Sound.

GOES TO PENITENTIARY

On Friday last His Honor Judge McDonald sentenced Fred Anglim of McIntosh Mills to three years in Kingston penitentiary. Anglim had pleaded guilty to all the charges. Petitious MISS BELLE E. CREY for leniency, numerouly signed, had been presented to the Judge. Dr. Mitchell of the Eastern Hospital had twice examined Anglim and pronoun ced him responsible for his acts.

In addition to obtaining $150 from the Northean Crown Bank on a forged cheque, the Times gives the following record of his operations:-

It transpires that on July 2nd he negotiated a loan for $127 at the Metropolitan Bank and on the 16th of the same month obtained $150 at the Bank of Montreal, using the name of Bernard Flood, on the promissory notes in both instances. Mr. Flood, it might be explained, is a leading farmer of the section where Anglim resides. On the 11th April last Anglim purchased a pair of $3.75 boots at well known specialties in in fruit Neill's store, alleging that S. A. Coon of Athens had requested that he make the purchase for him while visiting Brockville that day. It was all news to Mr Coon when billed for the goods.

THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY

The proposed electric loop-line railway running from Ottawa to Morris burg, thence to Brockville and on through this section to Ottawa is again in the limelight. An Ottawa despatch savs :-

The road is capitalized at $4,000,000 and will be bonded at $20,000 per The line will oun through some forty cities, and towns and villages when completed, and a good portion of the right of ways have already been secured and Mr Darrell states that his firm has been assured of the hearty support and co-operation of the differ ent municipalities through which the line will run. Mr Darrell states that there is an abundance of power all along the line but that he thinks that the gasoline electric will be the can used. The cars cost over $27,000 each but by adopting that form of locomotion it will do away with transmitting stations and the laving of over head charges. Mr Darrell further states that the financing of the road is having been placed in London and

It is expected that actual construction operations will be commenced on that portion of the road from Ottawa to Morrisburg within the next thirty days Mess ... Morden and Darrell are here to see two substantial and influential citiz ns with the object of not only trying to get them interested financially in this proposition, but to act as directors of the road. There is without a doubt a big future for such a railway, and when completed it will fill a long felt want.

VISIONS.

I see a great stir in an Eastern sky is gladness, freedom and absence of care. The Son of Man is an invited guest. The host did not know half the dignity, host did not know half the dig beauty and fame of the occasion: self-contained man thought well of him-self as he bestowed patronage upon the he did not understand, and when guest departed he was considered debtor to the provider of the feast.

They mount the platform of patronage, they come to give words, meaningless, stale and ego-tistical, they display their parts their tistical; they display their parts, their powers and poverty; they repeat them-selves, they are known, they swell out and look big. "If I had only one more and fook big. It I had only one more feather to my wing, then would I fly away and be at rest." The honest leader of the meeting said: "We have heard of that 'feather' before. When I consider your eloquence here, and your performance elsewhere. I am led to say,

Lord, give him the extra feather and let him go."

Here is another vision and the place is holy. The soul is sincere, devout, recomplished: the soul is saved, unselfish determined. Yet, from ideals partly revealed, some of these are under the dominion of the programme. One is constrained to read the lible two hours before breakfast, for personal confort only. CO-OPERATIVE FARMS FOR WO-MEN.

The desirability of establishing women's co-operative farms in the United Kingdom has been seriously considered, and should the present plans mature, the first experimental colony will be located on a farm of 228 acres in Sussex. The breeding and care of horses, cows, sheep, pigs, poultry, and rabbits, the cultivation of fruit, vegetables and flowers; and the raising of ordinary farm crops will be undertaken. It is believed that a ready home market will be found for the products of such a farm, as statistics show that about $175,000 is annually paid in the United Kingdom for tame (or "Ostend") imported rabbits and nearly $70,000,000 for butter consigned from Denmark, while the value of import ed bacon and pork approximates $40, 000,000 annually. In addition, mil lions of dollars are expended each year for eggs, vegetables, fruit, etc., received from abroad.

The movement has this two-fold purpose—to provide young women who are desirous of emigrating to any of the English over-sea possessions with thorough training in all branches of farming, and also with an adequate knowledge of domestic court; flowers, perfume, rest are here, choice friends one expected; choice food, wines, and fruits are prepared. UNITED STATES "PRINCIPLES."

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

Would it not be well for some group of advanced thinkers in the United States to nominate Mr. "Mugsy" Mc-Graw for President? From present indications he is the most representative not only because he is manager of the famous baseball team known as the New York Giants, but also because he is the embodiment and the interpreter of American national sentiment. For it was the great "Muggsy" who a few years ago said to the players under his con-trol: "These are the new rules, boys; now we must figure out how to beat them." That is the precise attitude which the Senate of the United States has taken with regard to the Panama Canal; and it is the kind of cynical sen the country to the south of us seeming-ly admire. From the day that the so-called Liberty Bell was first rung in Philadelphia the people of the United States have shown themselves singularhave scoffed at a sense of honor, as something ridiculous. They empower their statesmen to enter into solemn treaties with the full intention of violating their obligations whenever the oc-casion arises. The assistance they re-ceived from Great Britain in obtaining the right to build the canal and thus conserve their sphere of influence on the western hemisphere goes for nothing. The canal being built, the Senate repudates all treaty obligations.

The construction of this canal is one of the greatest achievements in all his tory. The American officials who have made the work possible are truly great men, whose names should not be allowed to die in the memories of the people of either North or South America, but forty-seven senators have chosen to be smirch their achievement and make the name of it synonymous with shame, what must the effect be on the ethics of American youth in the course adopted? It is tantamount to saying that it is no crime to rob a till if you "can get away with it." Verily the American Ser country as the crook among the nations.

The twelfth session of the Interna tional Geological Congress, held in Ottawa, Canada, during 1913. This is the first time this country has been honored with this important meeting and the fol-lowing details in advance will be of interest to our readers:

Since the first meeting of the congres in Paris in 1878, meetings have been held in Italy, Germany, England, the United States of America, Switzerland, Russia, Austria, Mexico and Sweden den. At the last congress held in Stockholm in 1910 there was an attendance of 850, and it is expected that this number will be exceded in Canada next year.

Geologists from every quarter of the globe will attend the congress and for many it will be their first visit to Cana da. They will include professors from the leading universities and mining schools. officers of the various Government geo-logical surveys and mining departments, and geologists and mining engineers in private practice.

New Leader Issues Manifesto---Will Follow Dead Leader's Example.

Late General Now Lying in State--Touching Tribute From Queen Alexandra.

the Salvationists throughout the world, published in the Daily Chronicle to-day, General Bramwell Booth, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, indicates the direction of the Army's coming activities. He speaks confidently of its future, and sends to the millions. whose spiritual direction he has assumed, a battle cry to icspire the future Afte" a tender and beautiful tribute to his father, the new General says:

"The Army's reorganization and achievements are the outcome of God's spirit. That spirit cannot die. gave the figure a lifelike appearance.

"It was the late General's great doy that he had created a body into which he had breathed a living soul. The outward body might alter, but the spirit is enshrined in the spirit of charity and compassion and self sacrifice, and cannot be crushed.

"It is my ambition to preserve and ester that spirit. Despite the materfoster that spirit. Despite the mater-talism of the age, there is a new and growing yearning for a more ideal and spiritual life, which is acting as a recruiting agency for the Salvation Army.

Asked whether the Army still would be governed on military lines, the General replied that no doubt it would, because military discipline gives a tremendous cohesion of simplicity and power to the organization, of a similar kind to that displayed by the Roman Catholic Church.

Referring to the world-wide in-fluence of the Army the General be-lieves in whole a large part of the work is still among the lowest strata of society, and he has great hopes of winding a way among the working

The General also sees immense fields for activity in the service of foreign and colonial Governments, especialy among the criminals and tribes of India.

He thinks there is great room for He thinks there is great room for an extension of work among all the suffering people in America, and he betwee that an immediate step should be taken to open a campaign in China, for which, however, money is needed, as the prejudice there against foreigners would make the ordinary method of sending officers about the country ineffectual. He adds. "We must rely on taking converts immediately, and treating them verts immediately, and treating them in a central organization."

Speaking generally, Bramwell Booth confesses that he would re-joice in the decline of the Army if the spirit left it. In this regard he should, in brief, be for not keeping dead things above the ground."

"The General has great sympaths in the demand of the poor for better wages and the higher conditions of life. Among his own pet schemes is one to hetp ail the poor widows with small children of the country in homes before coming to the workhouse. Referring to the world-wide house Referring to the world-wide expressions of sympathy, he says he does not believe that his father, in moments of highest inspiration, could have hoped for anything so

London cable: In a message to | Standing at the four corners of the bier, cadets held the flags of Great Britain, the United States, Japan and Ger many. All around were bodyguards of Salvation Army officers, wearing red and white bands on their sleeves.

At the foot of the casket stood the last portrait fo the dead General, while at its head was a painting of the late Mrs. Booth. The body of the dead missioner was dressed in the familiar frock uniform coat he always wore. It was open to show the red jersey bearing the words "Blood and Fire," the coat arms of the Salvation Army, emblazoned on the breast. The silvery hair and beard and the waxen face contrasted with the brilliance of the uniform and mob which gathers for the lying in state of a dead ruler or other prominent per-sonage, displayed great reverence.

ALEXANDRA SENDS CONDOLENCES

Queen Mother Alexandra to-day telegraphed to Bramwell Booth as follows:
"I beg you and all your family to accept my deepest and most heartfelt sympathy and irreparable loss you and the nation have suffered in the death of your great, good and never-to-be for-gotten father. It is a loss which will be felt throughout the whole civilized world but, thank God, his work will live for-

Messages of condolences have also been received from King Christian, Denmark; tieneral Luis Botha, Premier of the Union of South Africa; Lord Isling-ton, Governor of New Zealand; Lord Rosebery and many other prominent persons throughout the world. In connection with the funeral there is under consideration a suggestion that the coffin be conveyed to Abney Park cemetery on a gun carriage as symbol-istic of the militant character of the evangelist's work.

HIGHER UP?

New York Civilian to be Indicted.

Becker Has Deposits of $125,000 Now.

New York, Aug. 26.-The investigation of the murder of Rosenthal and of police graft produced this news to-

A statement issued by District Attorney Whitman shows that Lieutenant Becker had on deposit in nine banks rom November, 1911, to August, 1912, $49,625.75, and that Mrs. Becker withdrew $20,008.15 from eight savings banks on July 31 and August 1, after Becker was indicted for murder.

The record of Becker's deposits in six more Manhattan banks and in three out-of-town banks are being tabulated. It is now estimated that the bank de-posits, together with cash known to have been put in safe deposit boxes, will approximate $125,000. In addition Becker put up heavy margins for Wall street speculation.

The district attorney has established a graft connection between a civilian employee of the police department and an inspector who owed his promotion to this employee. It has been learned that the uniformed official had two safe deposit boxes and a bank account, and that the inspector had three bank accounts and a safe deposit box. The with-drawals from the inspector's bank ac-counts and the visits of the official to his safe deposit boxes tally precisely as to dates. These men and a second uptown inspector will be indicted, it is announced.

The grand jury by a unanimous vote indicted Detectives James C. White and John C. Steinert for oppression and perjury. The evidence showed that they had placed a revolver in Jack Zelig's pocket, and had sworn to a lie before a grand jury. Steinert was placed in item of news that flashes to-lay from the district attorney's investigation of the graft side of the Rosenthal case was that the influential civilian employee of the police department named by Barns as one of the triumvirate of blackmail managers has been definitely linked as a grafter to a police inspector whose rise in the department surprised even his friends. Mr. Whitman has discovered that the official, who was represented to the gamblers as being in a position to control the police department, has had two safe deposits boxes and a fat bank account for more than a year, or since the time that Becker began to make the "Strong arm squad" financially

The records of the visits paid by the official to his safe deposit boxes have been obtained from the concerns that rented these private repositories, and the records of his deposits in the bank have been placed before the district athave been placed before the district attorney. Bank officials have given to the district attorney the records of deposits made in three banks by an accused inspector. And there is a record also of the visits he paid to his safe deposit box. The district attorney finds an interesting coincidence in the dates of withdrawals of each by the inspector from his bank accounts and the dates of the visits of the official to his safe deposit boxes. Mr. Whitman declined to discuss the alleged relations between the official and the inspector, except to say that there was more evidence of a say that there was more evidence of a graft connection than a coincidence, and that indictments would be asked for.

Detroit Alderman's Alleged Price in Council.

Detroit, Aug. 26 .- The preliminary examination of Alderman Louis Brozo, of the Thirteenth ward, charged with of the Intreenth ward, charged what bribery, came to a dramatic and unex-pected halt late to-day, when Charles T. Wilkins, special assistant to Prose-cuting Attorney Shepherd, suddenly col-lapsed unconscious in his chair. In an instant Detective Walter J. Brennan, who had been testifying as to how he trapped Brozo, was forgotten. The court room was in a turmoil. It was thought the attorney had sustained an apopietic stroke and was dying. A physician soon restored consciousness to the stricken lawyer, and when he recovered Judge Stein adjourned the hearing until

It was stated that overwork and loss of sleep, added to recent illness, caused the assistant prosecutor to break down. the assistant prosecutor to break down.
There was no morning session of court to-day, and Detective Brennan was on the stand most of the afternoon. He testified that on July 12 he had 'telephoned Brozo to come to his office 'on advice of Glinnan,' and that he talked with Brozo in the detectives' office the next day. Ald Glinnan presidents office the next day. Ald, Glinnan, president of the Common Council, has already been bound over to stand trial for alleged bribery.

Brennan testified that during his conversation with Brozo he offered him $100 to make a speech at a Council meeting in favor of closing a street for the bene-fit of the Wabash Railroad and then voting for such an ordnance. Brozo, so Brennan testified, agreed to the proposition, and called at the detectives' office again on July 25, when, the latter claim ed, he paid the bribe.

Much of the cross-examination was the same as in the Glinnan case -an effort by the defendant's attorneys to probe into the career of the detective before his coming to Detroit to conduct before his coming to Detroit to conduct his aldermanic investigation. During a little passage at arms between Brozo's counsel and Brennan, the latter admitted that Brozo never asked for a cent. "But he did take the money," added Brennan, Shortly after this Attorney Wilkins' collapse ended the day's proceedings.
