POETRY.

The Farmer's Wife.

Up with the birds in the early morning—
The dewdrop glistens like a precious gem;
Beautiful tints in the skies are dawning;
But she's never a moment to look at them,
The men are waiting their breakfast
early;

She must not linger, she must not wait;
For words that are sharp and looks that
are aury,
Are what men give when meals are late.

Oh, glorious colors the clouds are turning,
If she would but look over hills and trees;
But here are the dishes, and here is the churning.

Those things must always yield to these.
The world is filled with the wine of beauty
If she could but pause and drink it in;
But pleasure she says must wait for duty—

Neglected work is committed sin.
The days grow hot, and her hands grow weary
Oh, for an hour to cool her head,
Out with the birds and the wind so cheery!

But she must get dinner and bake the bread.
The busy men in the hay-field working,
If they saw her sitting with idle hands,
Would think her lazy and call it shirking,
And she never could make them understand.

They do not know that the heart within her
Hungers for beauty and things sublime;
They only know that they want their dinner—
Plenty of it—and just "on time."
And after the sweeping and churning
and baking,
And dinner dishes are all put by,
She sits and sews, though her head is aching,
Till time for supper and "chores"
draw nigh.

Her boys at school must look like others,
She says, as she patches their frocks
and hose;

For the world is quick to construe mother's clothes.
Her husband comes from the field of labor;

He gives no praise to his weary wife;
She's done no more than her neighbor—
"Tis the lot of all in country life.

But after the strife and weary toils
With life is done, and she lies at rest,
The nation's brain and heart and soul—
Her sons and daughters—shall call her blest.

And I think the sweetest joys of heaven,
The rarest bliss of mortal life,
And the fairest crown of all will be given
Unto the wife who weeps farmer's wife.

Sweet Violet.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

"Now I must beg you to set me down at my office door, and I will at once write Violet a letter, so that I can have it ready when you go back from your drive, if you will be so kind," he said, and Amber assented
very readily to his wish.

Accordingly, within the hour, the light phaeton stopped at the corner,
and Cecil brought out a letter for Violet.

"I will bring you an answer tomorrow morning, and perhaps we can yet outwit grandpapa and Harold Castello," declared Amber, archly, and drove away, after giving him an entrancing smile, and a glance that was almost too fond for friendship.

CHAPTER XI.

Amber did not intend to break faith
with Cecil in the promise she had made.

She carried his fond love letter to Violet that evening.

But she had taken it to her own room first, carefully extracted it from the envelope, and read every word.

Her dark cheek paled with anger,
her heart throbbed with jealous pain at the words of love that Cecil had written to his darling.

"How I hate her for this!" she cried, bitterly. "How I would like to write her heart as she has done mine!"

And the dark flush of her eye boded
no good to her innocent rival.

She replaced the letter so carefully in its envelope that no one would have guessed the seal had been tampered with, and carried it to Violet.

"I have brought you a treasure—a letter from Cecil," she exclaimed, gayly.

How the blue eyes sparkled, how the cheeks flushed with joy as Violet caught the letter and pressed it to her warm lips, murmuring:

"My darling!"

She tore it open and read it eagerly through twice, then looked up at Amber, her eyes shining through happy tears.

"Oh, how can I thank you, dear Amber?" she cried, gratefully.

"By believing that I am your true friend," replied the crafty girl.

"Oh, I know now, I am sure of it,
or you would not have brought me this letter, that has made me so happy!"
and again Violet kissed her love-letter
with blushing cheeks.

Amber, how bitterly, how jealously
Amber envied her that exquisite happiness, she did not dream, or she would have started in a fright at the evil in her cousin's heart.

She thought that Amber had overcome her love for Cecil, and was content to be only his friend, and to forward his love affair with another with generous self-forgetfulness.

But sweet-Violet had never felt the pain of a slighted love, or she might

of joy in his eyes would have driven her mad.

She said quietly that she must go;
she had only stepped into the office on her way to the druggist's for some eau de cologne for Violet—poor thing, her head ached so—and she would take another letter for him that evening, if he would have it ready when she took her afternoon drive.

He thanked her gratefully, and forgot her the next moment, as he turned gladly to the perusal of Violet's letter.

CHAPTER XII.

While Judge Camden dawdled over the newspapers in his elegant library that evening, Amber came in and drew a chair to his side.

He glanced around at the superb
young beauty, with her glowing cheeks
and flashing eyes, and inquired, sarcastically:

"Well, what is it? A big drygoods bill for me to pay?"

"Not this time, dear grandpapa," cooed Amber, sweetly.

"Then it's a big check to buy jewelry or fiddlers. You never come wheeling around me like this for nothing," retorted the crusty old judge
in a tone of conviction.

"Oh, how cruelly I am misunderstood," sighed the girl, and after a moment of profound silence for effect,
she continued:

"I came to talk to you about Violet."

"Umph!"

"Are you determined to make her marry Mr Castello?"

"I have sworn it!" curdy.

"In spite of her love for Cecil?"

"Cecil be—hanged!" retorted the old man, violently.

"Then you entirely ignore his claim
on Violet?"

"I ignore it utterly! Now look here, my girl," and he wheeled around on her, wrathfully, "if you come to me to wheedle me into consenting to the affair between Violet and that fortunehunting Cecil Grant, you're wasting words, let me tell you, and also making matters worse for yourself! I won't be interfered with, I tell you squarely; and you will mind your own business if you know which side your bread is buttered on, miss!"

"Yes, sir," meekly.

"So now, if you satisfied, you can go back and tell Violet what I said,
and leave me in peace to read my papers!"

"I'm not satisfied yet, sir," de-murely.

"The mischief you are not? But I won't hear another word, I tell you
—not another word! And mind you, Amber, I may leave you out of my will if you persist in meddling with my business," furiously.

Amber smiled slyly at his perturbation, and answered in a low, deep,
and measured voice:

"Grandpapa, you are more hasty than wise. You have simply jumped at the conclusion that I came here to plead my cousin's case."

He stared at her in amazement and exclaimed:

"Didn't you ask me if I was determined to ignore that fellow's claim on Violet?"

"Certainly."

"And didn't you mean to take his part?" dubiously.

"Certainly not!"

"Then, by gad, what did you mean,
girl? Explain yourself!"

"Don't speak so loud, grandpapa, please. If we are heard, everything is lost," breathed Amber, glancing timorously at the door, with her taper fingers at her lips.

He suppressed another growl and contented himself with glaring impatiently at her from the shade of his heavy, boisterous white brows.

Secure of her victory, Amber smiled
archly at him, and cried, gayly:

"Don't look at me so angrily, like a great lion about to gobble me up; for though I am only a little mouse I am going to help—on to your wish."

"You," contemptuously. "You can't persuade Violet to marry Castello,
I know, and you can't lure Grant
away from her, for I think you've already tried that game, and failed, eh?"

The burning crimson flooded Am-ber's olive cheeks and brow to the edges of her beautiful hair at this coarse jeer, but, with an effort, she kept back a stinging retort, and answered, calmly:

"If you mean that Cecil Grant was my lover first, and that Violet stole him from me, you are right; and, in the face of that humiliation, do you think I would lower myself to plead their cause with you?"

"No, not if you inherit any of your grandfather's spirit, Amber!" chuckled the wicked old judge, with returning good humor.

"Well, I have been told that I resemble you in many things, grand-papa," returned Amber, smilingly, and indeed she did have the same sparkling hazel eyes and determined mouth as well as the fiery temper of the old man.

"Yes, yes, you are a chip of the old block, Amber, and Violet always favored her scape-grace father too much to please me. Not that she isn't the prettiest girl in the world; but those dark blue eyes of hers have the same look of the scamp's that lured my Mario from me," angrily. "But,
Amber, you said you could help me.
How?"

"I have a clever plan of my own to betray Violet into a marriage with Harold Castello. You know, grand-papa, in spite of all your bluster, that you cannot force Violet into this marriage against her will. The law is against you."

"Violet isn't eighteen yet, and I can command her obedience until she becomes of age," he answered, frowningly.

But Amber laughed softly, and replied:

"Your authority if you asserted it in the arbitrary manner you propose. You are a lawyer, and you know well that your rights over Violet do not permit
you to drive her into an unwilling marriage. And there are her father's kin also to consider. Suppose she appeals to them, and they come forward to protect her from you."

"I shall take care to keep her from communicating with them," he replied grimly.

"Very well. But in spite of your threats and your bluster, I do not believe that you will dare to push Violet into this unwilling marriage."

"I dare anything," he began, stormingly; but again she interrupted:

"You cannot make her marry him.
She would appeal to the minister, and he would not perform the ceremony."
"I might find a justice of the peace less scrupulous."

"You might, but I am doubtful.
The Virginians are very orthodox,
you know, toward women, and our Violet is worshiped in the whole county. I fear you would be mobbed
if the truth of this matter transpired,
and Cecil Grant, who is such a favorite,
might lead the mob."

"If you came here to taunt me, Amber," he began, in furious displeasure.

TO BE CONTINUED.

It is Extreme
Folly

To use medicine to cure effects instead of using Paine's Celery Compound to get rid of the cause. Paine's Celery Compound will make you well and strong.

All the while you are using it the nerves gain in power and strength, the digestive organs are fully toned, and lost health is rapidly restoring.

It is extreme folly to neglect the insignificant ills, aches, pains and tired feelings that some people look upon as merely trifles. You should remember that the hot summer weather aggravates
the little ills of life, and these little ills
frequently develop serious disturbances and deadly diseases. Paine's Celery Compound should be used at once to bruce up the diseased nerves, purify the blood and fortify the system. Weak children, frail and weary women, and tired and broken-down men find a new existence in Paine's Celery Compound, nature's true life-giver.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., JULY 22, 1898.

Editorial Notes.

The Weymouth Free Press which is now under the editorial guidance of Mr. J. Scott Robinson, formerly a resident of Wolfville and well known in connection with certain literary exploits, instructs its readers regarding the shrewdness of Kings as follows: "Kentville is called the Devil's Half Acre because the residents of adjoining temperance towns swarm into it and go on periodical drunks while there." It has been hinted that the editor of the Free Press has reason to know whereof he speaks. "Experience, sternest teacher is the best."

At a special meeting of the town council on Friday evening last, Mr. J. M. Toye tendered his resignation as police man and janitor of the school building, etc. This was accepted to take effect the first of October. Mr. Toye has filled the position for several years, and though there have been some complaints, and his judgment in some instances has been questioned, yet we believe to his credit and to the credit of his duties faithfully and well. The duties of a policeman in a small town are numerous and not always of a most agreeable nature, and it is not to be expected that any man could give unbounded satisfaction.

It now really looks as if we were to have a watering cart. The Board of Trade has taken the matter in hand and subscriptions to the extent of $125 or more have been secured. The whole cost of the cart will be $175, and the council at its meeting this week agreed to furnish the balance necessary and purchase and operate the cart. The need of such an institution has not been so apparent during the past week, as it has rained nearly every day, but before the summer is over we feel sure that our citizens will have many evidences of the wisdom of the undertaking. The cart will be ordered at once and should be in operation early in August.

We have recently received copies of the Turner's Falls, Mass., Reporter, containing a very readable "write up" of the recent excursion to our Province of the Massachusetts press party. The Reporter is an interesting weekly journal published by Mr. Cecil T. Bagnall, whom the ACADIAN had the pleasure of meeting some years ago when on a visit to Nova Scotia. We regret that Mr. Bagnall and his associates did not place Wolfville on their programme of stopping places, as they thus missed a treat. Wolfville is by odds the loveliest town of the valley in the matter of natural beauty and all that makes up an ideal summer resort. Don't miss us next year, Brother Bagnall.

A large and enthusiastic gathering is expected at Baccaro, Shelburne Co., July 26, 8 p. m., for the Third Quarterly Session of the Grand Division of Sons of Temperance. Through the courtesy of railway and steamship companies every possible facility will be afforded delegates in attending the meeting. Barrington district is perhaps the best organized, most aggressive, in what has been called the Order's stronghold, Nova Scotia, and being fully alive to the possibilities and significance of the publicity will utilize to the utmost the energy of such a gathering. The Coast Railway Co. will furnish through tickets to Barrington and return at one fare by rail, and one and one third by coach. The Yarmouth S. S. Co. can fare, other Railway Co's as usual.

The bath-houses and cottages have been whitewashed and present a bright appearance. Grounds are being prepared for tennis and ball.

Next week promises to be a very interesting week, the tide arriving in the afternoon, making it a grand time to bathe.

Some of the cottages are expected to be occupied by parties from Wolfville the coming week.

Mrs. Edward Woodman and daughter, of Centerville, are spending a few weeks at the beach.

The Palmer party, of New York spent Monday at the shore and were delighted with the scenery.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Elliott Smith and friends from Wolfville and Kentville spent Tuesday evening here.

The dull weather has prevented much of an attendance, but quite a number were present on Wednesday. Private parties from Falmouth, Grand Pre and Hortonville were enjoying a day's outing. There were some forty or fifty American tourists viewing the beauties of Blomidon, Minas Basin and surrounding country, and getting a look at the wonderful rise and fall of the tide of the Fundy.

To-day, if fine, there will be numbers in attendance to hear the Wolfville Band and have a dip in the tide.

The members of the Wolfville Band desire to publicly express their appreciation and gratitude for the kindness and good-will which Mr. W. J. Schledge displayed by inviting them to the Central House where he treated them to ice-cream and cake, after their performance on Monday evening last.

A. W. STEWART, Secy.

Town Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the town council was held on Tuesday evening. Present: Mayor Thomson, Counc. Bowles, Harvey and Porter.

A communication was read from the Secretary of the Board of Trade asking that water be allowed for use of fountains recently placed in the old cemetery, when available. On motion the request was granted.

A petition from the Women's Christian Temperance Union and other citizens, 230 signatures in all, asking that an ordinance respecting the curfew be introduced and put in force, was read, and in the absence of the recorder the matter was laid over until the regular monthly meeting.

A letter was read from Mr. W. L. Bishop, of Dartmouth, replying to enquiry from town clerk respecting the purchase of forty tons of crushed stone, for the construction of 60 feet of street as an experiment, stating that the matter would be laid before the council and a reply forwarded as soon as possible.

A letter was read from Charles Quip, of Bridgetown, applying for the position of policeman of the town at a salary of $450. This matter was laid over, and it was resolved that the council advertise for applications for the position of policeman and janitor, etc.

Our Birds.

One morning not long ago I noticed a number of swallows resting on a roof and chattering in a very excited manner. Suddenly they all took wing and flew toward a tree where some sparrows had built their nest. Sparrows are robbers. They will enter the nests of other birds, kill the young, turn out the eggs and play bad boy in earnest.

But sparrows are not the only big nest robbers of Wolfville. There are boys who are known to spend much of their idle lives in tormenting the pretty song birds that visit us each summer. The swallows I saw attacking the sparrows nests were seeking revenge upon their feathered cousins, but as birds are not equal to boys with stones and slings and guns in any quarrel, the boys of Wolfville must know that the law of the land protects our robbers, flocks, swallows, grackles, and all other birds, and any one guilty of harming these in any way will be punished.

Will the parents of children note this?

Among the Magazines.

The Windsor Magazine for July contains stories by A. Conan Doyle, Guy Boothby, Cottrill Hoe, Carlton Dawe and Spencer Leigh Hughes. Among the other prominent articles are "Don Carlos and his connection with the Spanish Throne," with pictures, by "Lawn Tennis," by H. W. Wilberforce. "Hastings as a Literary Centre," by Chas. T. Bateman. "With Nansen in the North," by Lieut. Johansen, who accompanied the explorer on his perilous trip to the frozen North. "From Hampton Court to London," a humorous sketch by W. Pett Ridge. "A Peep at Albany, W. Australia," written and illustrated by Harry Furniss, of "Punch." "The Editor's Scrap Book" with its choice bits of wit and humor. All the above articles are profusely illustrated, and include one hundred half-tone illustrations from drawings of the best English artists. Subscription price, $1.50 per year, 15 cents per copy. T. C. Allen & Co., Halifax, are general agents for the Maritime Provinces.

The August number of the Delinquent is called the millennium number, and presents many features which emphasize the interest of the magazine for all members of the household. The article in the nature of a biography, by Charlotte M. Hall, should prove of practical value to the expert as well as the novice. A timely sketch on the women of Cuba, by Kate Coventry, throws a bright light on their home-life and is intensely interesting. The Bagle Sancé Lynde, a romantic war story by Francis Lynde, is charmingly appropriate at this time. Summer desserts, cakes and varied, home-made loaves, hot, weather housekeeping, vegetables in new guises, and provision for the house-work form an excellent group of household subjects, and a characteristic variety of special and general information is offered in the regular departments.

The Newest Wonder of Science

Is the title of an article in the June number of the "Cosmopolitan," which treats of the liquefying of the air, an undertaking which most of people have hitherto thought impossible.

Anybody who will take time to read the article referred to will have no trouble to appreciate the contentions of the manufacturer of Prince Edward Island Notes.

Boats ply regularly between Pictou and Charlottetown, and Pictou DuChene and Summerside. The officials are obliging, and ready to promote the comfort of the passengers.

At this season of the year one has a good opportunity to judge of the productiveness of the soil; and if this is to be determined by what it yields, the opinion must be very favorable. The grass, at this writing, is nearly ready for the mower. The crop of clover in some parts is simply immense, and beautiful fields of timothy wave in the breeze. And such pastures! The average is a r lotent with white clover, but some surpass anything I have seen elsewhere, having grass up to the ears of well-conditioned horses and cows, and which some of our good farmers might be glad to have to cut for winter's use.

Grain, potatoes and turkeys are looking well. I would judge that this season will be such as to give joy to the tiller of the soil. Several industries have arisen that are likely to be of great value to the Island. A pork packing establishment has been started in Charlottetown. This country is well adapted for the raising of pork, and a stimulus has been given to this line of business that promises much for the future.

There are 32 cheese factories on the Island besides several factories for butter. One of the Cavendish farmers told me that he had sent to his factory at Stanley Bridge upwards of 7000 lbs. of milk during the month of June. It is not unusual for the same factory to receive on Monday 18,000 or 20,000 lbs. of milk. This, however, stands third in regard to importance. It is managed by the farmers. Each person supplying milk receives fifty cents monthly, and at the end of the season, after the sales have been effected, his share of the profits.

The Island produces excellent wheat. In some districts imported flour is quite unknown. A Bay View farmer had 500 bushels to dispose of last year. A milling establishment in New Glasgow, N.S., is bidding for all the wheat to be produced this year beyond local necessities. If they succeed in the endeavor they will obtain a good big pile.

The Islanders are paying some attention to fruit raising. Judging from addresses given at a recent meeting of an agricultural society, they are hoping yet to raise apples for exportation. They should be able to produce plums and smaller fruit in abundance.

Nat Taylor.

"What a bright boy Nat Taylor is," Mrs. Eaton used to say to her husband.

"He does me good to see him go by the house. He is always whistling or singing away to himself as if he were too happy to keep still, and yet he hasn't nearly so many pleasures as most boys and girls."

"There he comes now on his way to school. He is not the boy to let his teacher say he is never tardy or absent, and it is really wonderful how fast he learns. He'll be the banner boy in the grade at the end of the year, you see if he isn't."

Just then Nat appeared around the corner, whistling as usual. He had a package in one hand to leave at the express office for his mother, and a big bunch of strawberries in the other.

"What are you going to do with your berries, Nat?" asked Mrs. Eaton.

"Oh, they're for Auntie Clapp," said Nat, with a chuckle. "She said last night she had almost forgotten how strawberries taste, so when I found these in the pasture this morning, I will be after the cow, I thought I would bring them along to remind her."

"Isn't that just like the boy," Mrs. Eaton continued, after Nat was out of sight. "He's always thinking of some one else, even if it is such a little fellow."

One morning Nat didn't go to school as usual. He was sick and had to lie in bed, and everybody missed him. Some of the boys came to find out what the matter was, but he felt too miserable to see them.

It was a day or two before he was well again, and then he wasn't quite his old self. By and by people began to ask, "What has happened to Nat? He doesn't whistle as much as he used to."

He neglected to do errands for his mother even when she told him of them two or three times over. He said he forgot, though he used to pride himself on his good memory. His teacher noticed the difference in school, and asked Mrs. Taylor if Nat was sick.

"He is not so bright as he was," she said. "Almost every day he seems dull and stupid a good part of the time. Yesterday he went to sleep twice in class, something I never knew him to do before. I can't make out what the trouble is."

Mrs. Taylor looked anxious. She called Nat and asked him how he felt. He said he did, but he hung his head and looked as though he had been caught at some mischief. Something certainly was wrong with Nat.

"That night his mother found out what it was. There's a hole in the knee of my trousers," Nat said, when he bade them all goodnight. "Will you mend it, mother, so that I can have them to put on in the morning?"

Mrs. Taylor repaired the torn place and looked to see if there were other holes. "There's sure to be one in the pocket," she thought.

There was no hole there for a wonder, but she found something else which made what Nat called the "berry look" come into her eyes.

"Can you guess what it was?" A cigarette! She knew now what had made Nat sick, why he forgot to do errands, and why he went to sleep in school instead of being bright and quick at his lessons. He had been learning to smoke.

When Nat came down in the morning, Mrs. Taylor said, "Did you know there had been a thief in the house, Nat?"

"Why, no!" exclaimed Nat, with wide open eyes. "Did he steal anything?"

"Yes, he has been stealing my boy's health and good spirits, and my memory, and leaving quite a different kind of boy in his place. What shall we do with him?" asked Mrs. Taylor, holding up the cigarette. "Here he is!"

Nat started to laugh, but he stopped when he saw his mother's face, and they had a long talk together.

When it ended, with a smile: "Well, mother, I don't believe we want any thieves in our house."

Mrs. Taylor did not find any more cigarettes in Nat's pocket for he kept his mouth sweet and his head clear by not smoking again.

He told his teacher the story one day, and the next morning she hung this card up in the room:

boys teach each other to chew and smoke at a rate simply astounding.

There are hundreds of thousands of boys not yet out of school who are reckless at cigarette smoking. They learned because it was easy to do so, and they teach the coming legions for the same reason.

Lack of money is not always a barrier. Discarded cigar stamps, thrown in the streets by careless Christians, have tempted thousands of boys into the habit.

ANAEMIA, OR BLOODLESSNESS.

Its Victims are Pale in Color, Subject to Dizziness, Palpitation of the Heart and Other Distressing Symptoms.

From the Echo, Plattsville, Ont. Anemia, which literally means bloodlessness, is prevalent to an alarming extent among young girls and young women of the present day, and is a fruitful source of "decline" and consumption.

The symptoms of this trouble are many, but among the most noticeable are pallor of the face, light and puny, shortness of breath on slight exertion, dizziness, severe headaches, weakness of the vital organs, palpitation of the heart, and dropsical swelling of the limbs.

The more of these symptoms shown, the greater the necessity for prompt treatment. Among those who have suffered from anemia and found a cure is Miss Emily Webb, a young lady residing near Wolfville, N. S.

My illness first came on when I was about sixteen years of age. My complexion was a pale waxy color; I was troubled with general weakness, dizziness and palpitation of the heart, I was placed under medical treatment, but the medicine prescribed did not appear to me the slightest good.

As time went by I was slowly but surely growing worse. I was unable to do any work about the house, and my limbs would tremble to such an extent at the slightest exertion that I could scarcely stand upon my feet.

Then my stomach became so weak that I vomited almost everything I ate; I grew dependent and feared I would not recover. While in this condition a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I followed the advice.

After I had used two boxes I noticed an improvement and my heart was gladdened with the hope of renewed health. At the end of six boxes my appetite had fully returned, and with it strength, color to my cheeks, and brightness to the eyes.

I still continued taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills until I had taken in all twelve boxes, and I can truthfully assert that I am healthier and stronger than I ever was before. I owe this to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I would urge all girls who suffer as I did to give them a fair trial.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done more to make strong, healthy, rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed girls than any other medicine ever discovered, and mothers should insist upon their daughters taking an occasional course of this medicine.

Sold only in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Offered in any other form the pills are substitutes intended to deceive.

When a voice comes "out of the silence," it behooveth it to come with a message worth the bringing. There are many voices and the result is Babel.

But when it comes with a song such as this, the man and woman who have ears that hear, stop and listen:

Who drives the horses of the sun Shall lord it but a day; Better the lowly deed were done, And kept the humble way.

The rust will fade the sword of fame, The dust will hide the crown; Ay, none shall outdo high his name Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat Was in some quiet breast; That found the common day-light sweet, And left to Heaven the rest.

It is the opening poem in John Vance Cheney's "Out of the Silence," a book of happy, nature-loving verses that are good to read. Not all the verses are as good as some of them, but all are worth reading, and many of them will be remembered. They are graceful, they say something, and they are always cheerful in tone.

It is safe to follow

The example of the millions of women who have made the Diamond Dyes their chosen and only dyes for domestic dyeing. The faith of all is so firmly established in the powers and excellence of the Diamond Dyes that they would not use any other make, even if the common dyes were given free of cost.

Valuable and useful goods should not be experimented on with poor and untried package dyes. Rain and loss of goods and money will meet the users of adulterated dyes.

Follow the safe example of earth's millions and use the Diamond Dyes, and success, happiness and pleasure will be your reward.

The latest catalogue of the University of Chicago shows that that institution has the largest proportion of female students of any of the great universities in the country. The total number of students in attendance last term was 1,150, of whom 697 were men and 459 were women. Omitting the divinity school, there were 287 men and 312 women in the undergraduate department.

NO SLEEP—NO REST.

LL do not appreciate the words of John G. Sax, who says, "God bless the man who first invented sleep!" But appreciation is not wanting to those who have suffered as Mrs. White, of Mary Township, Ont., who became so ill with nervous troubles that she was unable to get up for over three months. She could not stand, and she was so weak that she could not get up without the aid of her husband. After taking the first dose of Dr. Eddy's Nervine she felt as if a weight had been taken off her mind, and she was able to get up and do her usual work. This is a wonderful medicine in the several cases of nervousness, and the greatest benefactor to those who suffer from it.

Minards Liniment Cures Distemper Little Elmer—Pa, what is an extemporaneous speaker? Prof. Broadhead—One who can talk fluently about nothing without any previous preparation.

She—Jub, were you very greatly flattered when you proposed to me? He—Yes. To tell the truth, I was so rattled I didn't know what I was doing.

"What is a figure of speech, Uncle George?" "Well, it is a 90 pound young man asking a 200 pound girl to fly with him."

"Bridget, I told you five times to have muffins for breakfast. Haven't you any intellect?" "No, mum; there's none in the house."

Tramp Entering taxidermist's—Do you stuff all kinds of animals here? Taxidermist—Why, yes. Tramp—Well, I wish you'd stuff me with a good dinner.
