CHAPTER XXXI.

He listened with a faint smile but a preoccupied manner. He was thinking of the earl's advice. Would it be better for him to give up all thought of Nora? It was too evident that she had fled from him because she could not bring herself to love him. Should he bury the past, with which she was so closely connected—the past which had rendered him so wretched? He was tired, worn, ill. He longed for rest—for some object in life, some settled purpose. Should he marry? And if so, whom? There flashed into his mind the words Senley Tyers had spoken of Florence Heathcote. Had he meant to insinuate that Florence would accept him—Vane—if he asked her?

A flood of light seemed to reveal the answer to him—the truth. Why was she always so gracious, so kind to him? Other men called her cold, immovable, "impossible"; but she always was glad to see him, always pleasant and friendly.

He glanced at her as his mind worked at the problem, and as he did so he met her eyes. There happened to be a pause in her soft-voiced talk, and she was looking at him—looking at him with the expression in her eyes which is more eloquent than words to him who can read a woman's eyes.

She met his questioning glance her eyes fell, and an exquisite blush rose to her face. She lifted her hand—screen she held and hid her face from him, but he had seen enough. He set his lips tightly as frowned at the fire. Should he ask her? He was poor; a younger son of a younger son, had nothing to recommend him. Perhaps she would laugh. But even if she said "Yes," what would the earl say? It was true she was her own mistress.

He turned to her, but at the moment her name trembled on his lips at the moment she recognized the sudden change in his face, and her heart beat a quick response, the earl woke and yawned. Vane had stretched out his hand as if to take hers, and, in fact, had touched it. He drew his hand away quickly as the earl sat up and spoke.

"What time is it?" he asked. "Oh, I don't want you to go, Tempest."

"Thanks," he said, almost hoarsely. "But he has gone—gone back to his ship."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

He found himself outside the house, scarcely remembering whether he had said "good-bye" to Lady Florence or not. His heart beat thickly and something seemed whirling round at the back of his head. He called a cab and lighted a cigar, and when the cabman, for the second time, asked him "Where to?" he answered, "Mount Street." He felt that he could not go home to brood in solitude. He felt that he could not go home to brood in solitude. He went up the stairs to Senley Tyers' studio and found him lying asleep, as Vane thought, in a chair before the fire. The sallow face had an expression in it which startled Vane, preoccupied with his own affairs as he was. It was the face of a man oppressed by a nightmare—a nightmare of unsatisfied longing.

Vane, as he shook him by the shoulder, noticed a faint smell of drugs in the room, an odor that pierced the usual atmosphere of perfume; and he saw that a small vital stood on the Oriental table beside the divan-chair in which Senley Tyers reclined.

"Sen, Sen, wake up!" he said, shaking him.

Senley Tyers roused after a moment or two, and opening his eyes, stared up at the haggard face above him, scarcely enough for a moment, then his face darkened and he sprang unsteadily to his feet.

"Curse you!" he exclaimed. "What do you want here?" then he faltered, passed his hand over his face and seemed to gain full consciousness.

"Ah, Vane!" he exclaimed. "What do you want here?" then he faltered, passed his hand over his face and seemed to gain full consciousness.

"Ah, Vane!" he said, in his usual manner. "It is you, is it? I fell asleep and have been dreaming, and I thought—well, I don't know really what I thought. Sit down. Take off your coat. What will you have to drink?"

Vane stood looking at him with questioning concern.

"Is anything the matter?" he asked.

But I've got to look in at the Chief's next door. There's a reception to-night—he glanced at the clock. "Oh! another hour yet," he grunted, and settled to sleep again.

But the spell was broken, and sadly Florence knew it by the way Vane rose.

"There is no hurry," she said. "I shall not go until past eleven. I don't know whether you care to come; they asked you, I know."

Vane stood looking down at her. He made another effort.

"Lady Florence," he began, gravely, but with a touch of excitement in his voice and eyes. "I have been wondering whether, if I said what I have been thinking of during the last hour, you would laugh or be offended."

She sat with downcast eyes.

"What is it?" she asked, and her voice, usually so calm and impassive, trembled.

He laid his hand on the back of her chair and bent over her, and as he did so her beauty, her grace, the indescribable air of refinement struck him with a sense of pleasure and content.

"Florence," he said, "what will you say if I tell you—if I ask you—"

The earl stirred and sat up again.

"There must be a devil of a fright somewhere in this room," he said. "I can feel it at the back of my neck. Going, Tempest?" He hobbled to his feet stiffly. "I wish you were going to this confounded reception instead of me. 'Pon my word, it's too bad!" He gave his knotted hand to Vane. "Come again as soon as you can. Oh! and bring that boy with you. What's his name—Ernest—Ernest Mortimer? I rather liked him."

The color died out of Vane's face. He felt as if a hand from the grave had suddenly been stretched out to snatch him from the brink of a precipice.

"Thanks," he said, almost hoarsely. "But he has gone—gone back to his ship."

"Is anything the matter?" he asked.

"The matter?"

"Yes. You don't look the thing. Sen and—What's this scent in the room? The place smells like a chemist's shop."

Senley Tyers smiled faintly.

"Oh, I've had the neuralgia!" he said, carelessly, "and have been taking a few drops of morphia. I suppose that is what you smell. Beastly thing, neuralgia. We men who habitually overwork ourselves always get it sooner or later. Be sit down. Any news?"

Vane leaned against the carved mantel, his crush hat still on his head, his hands thrust in his overcoat pockets.

"No," he said.

Senley Tyers poked up the fire, and passed his handkerchief over his face; it was moist with the sweat which morphia produces.

"No? Well, I'm not surprised. I told you. You won't hear anything."

Vane was silent a moment, then he said, quietly enough:

"I have been dining at Lord Warlock's."

Radway's Ready Relief

Rheumatism

Apply the Relief externally to the part of the body affected, as briefly as circumstances will permit. Where the joints are swollen, stiff or contracted, the Relief, with a few drops of castor oil, is the best remedy.

match for both of you; for you because you want—forgive me—money and for her because she wants—your See? And you hesitated?"

Rheumatic Pains Promptly Disappear

Relief Comes After Taking Few Doses of Croxone.

It is needless to suffer with rheumatism, and be all crippled up, and bent out of shape, with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys, that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and the only way to overcome it is to remove the cause.

Croxone does this because it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter the poison from the blood, and drive it out and out of the system.

Croxone is a truly remarkable medicine for rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. You will find it differs from other remedies. There is nothing else just like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it without results. Relief follows the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three losses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or urinary disorders.

Present Day Fashions

And Dances Denounced by Archbishop of Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 27.—"Plague of immodesty," "Bacchanalian paeon," "Ignominious dances," were some of the terms used by His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi during the course of a sermon yesterday, referring to present day fashions and dances.

"Modesty in dress is fast withering away with some people," he declared. "What is alarming is not that such a plague has to be dealt with, but that it is appearing in places where formerly it never dared to show its face. Vice has ventured beyond its accustomed haunts into the stronghold of Christian homes."

"Even the most enthusiastic optimist cannot shut his eyes to our danger; the most barefaced apologist cannot explain our shame away. Along our thoroughfares are seen young women who have discovered that dress is the means of suggesting immodesty."

"These ignominious dances are revolting to every feeling of delicacy and propriety. They are positively revolting and a disgrace to our christian society. Although a licentious side of life is too clearly in view, let us thank God that it is redeemed by the noble industry of self-denial, the purity and charity of virtuous legions."

SELF CURE NO FICTON! NO SUFFERING NEEDED NOW! THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY, THERAPION No. 1 is a remarkably short time, after a few days only, Cures discharged (either a sharp or injection) THERAPION No. 2 Cures blood poison, bad legs, ulcers, sores, painful swollen joints, &c. when no other treatment fails. THERAPION No. 3 Cures chronic weakness, loss of appetite, indigestion, &c. &c. &c. The action of this medicine is to drive out the impurities of the blood, and to restore the system to its normal condition. It is the only medicine of its kind, and is the only one that can be taken without any danger to the health. It is the only one that can be taken without any danger to the health. That is What the People Say

Pleasing the Convalescent.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

It is most unpleasant to be very sick. It is sometimes even more unpleasant to get well. Of course, you understand that I refer not to the fact of getting well, but to the process. A convalescent ought to be very grateful and happy, but he is more likely to be unhappy, impatient and very hard to please.

The way to succeed in pleasing the convalescent is to put yourself in his place, try to imagine his limitations, his weakness, and the scarcity of his interests, and then devise something which would please you under similar conditions.

An intelligent visitor suggested that her sick friend's bed be moved close up to the street without lifting her head from the pillow. This had previously been so placed that the convalescent could only look out when sitting up, and then on a patch of uneventful garden, instead of into the street with its movement and activity.

This convalescent received many gifts of flowers, fruit, magazines, etc., during her illness, but she afterwards declared that none meant so much to her as the gift of the intelligent suggestion. She was too weak to sit up or read much; she could not be constantly attended; and time hung cruelly heavy. To be able by merely turning her head on the pillow to see the simple but interesting drama of the neighborhood life as it was enacted on the street below, was an invaluable diversion.

Anything which occupies the convalescent's mind in a pleasant and not too exciting manner is invaluable. Instead of giving an invalid cut flowers, give him a growing plant with plenty of buds and half-open blossoms upon it. In addition to his pleasure in the beauty of the flowers he will also enjoy watching the development of the plant.

When giving books or magazines be sure to pick out those in which the print is coarse and there are plenty of pictures. When the body is weak, the eyes are likely to be weak also, and much steady reading is usually bad for invalids. A fashion magazine full of beautiful illustrations delighted a sick friend of mine more than any other of the reading matter she received, because it did not tax her eyes to look through it.

A bit of interesting news, an amusing story or a scrap of harmless gossip, often pleases an invalid as much as a material gift, because it gives him something to think about after his visitor has gone. A friend of mine who has had a good deal of experience in sick rooms, and is always a most welcome visitor therein, says that whenever she is going to visit an invalid she makes a point of gathering together all such interesting scraps from the four corners of her mind.

Youth, old age and convalescence are the days of little things. Little things disappoint and little things please. Remember this when you have to deal with a convalescent.

Ruth Cameron

Household Notes.

Things that are good for your skin are all green vegetables, particularly spinach, onions, eschaloats, eggs, and nearly all fresh fruit.

When baking pies, either fruit or meat, place the pie in a tin with a little cold water. It will save the syrup or gravy from boiling out.

Mussed pieces of tissue paper are excellent to clean mirrors. First rub the mirror with a damp cloth, then polish with the paper.

If table silver is placed in hot soapsuds immediately after being used and dried with a soft cloth, much of the work of polishing will be saved.

Rubber bands are inexpensive and are of great use in preparing lunches.

To fasten the waxed paper around sandwiches, cakes, fruit, etc.

The combination of potatoes with other vegetables to form a salad offers infinite variety and a chance to utilize small amounts of vegetables.

A safe laxative for children is two soaked figs that have remained in a little water overnight. These are eaten in the morning before breakfast.

When baking, the scissors are useful; a snip and the biscuit dough is quickly apportioned; a quick cut and the drop cookie falls into place on the baking tin.

Nothing will clean and sweeten a sink better than a strong solution of washing soda, and the refrigerator likewise should frequently be washed with this.

If you are arranging short-stemmed flowers, throw into the water a number of ordinary bottle corks. These will buoy up the flowers, keeping them in position.

To clean brass that has been exposed to the weather, make a paste of salt and common vinegar; rub the brass with the mixture and leave for ten minutes. Then clean in the usual way.

Even when there is cream in the coffee, the stains can be removed from the most delicate silk or woolen fabric.

Headaches and Heart Trouble

Nervous Prostration of Three Years' Standing Cured a Year Ago by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Anyone who knows the discouragement and despair which accompanies the helplessness of nervous prostration will appreciate the gratitude felt by the writer of this letter.

Mrs. H. C. Jones, Scotch Lakes, N. B., writes: "I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors, without obtaining satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and was completely cured by his treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my housework with pleasure and comfort, and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

At least some benefit is bound to be derived from each dose of this grand cure, as day by day it forms new blood, and builds up the system. 50 cents a box, 5 for $2.50, all dealers or Callahan, Glass & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Where's Mother.

When father came from work at night, Before he'd wash his hands and face Or hang his hat upon the peg,
His glance would wander round the place
And if dear mother's sunny head Was not within his vision's ken,
He'd search for her from room to room
He'd stop and ask:
"Where's mother?"
But if he found her in her chair
He'd pester of about the lot,
And pick a mess of early greens
Or fix a chicken for the pot;
He'd mend a fence, or set a hen,
Or do some other homely chore,
With only now and then a glance
Toward the half-open kitchen door.
That seemed to ask:
"Where's mother?"
When mother left us sorrowing
He followed her within a day;
And while we laid white flowers around
His smooth-brushed hair, as white as they,
We could but think that when the light
And beauty of that wondrous place
Burst on his newly-quickened gaze,
He must have raised an eager face
And simply asked:
"Where's mother?"

Heir to her Mother's Title.

None of the family histories of the British peerage surpasses that of the Duke of Norfolk in romantic interest. The first title in the family was the feudal title of the Earl of Arundel, granted about 1155 and confirmed in 1423. The seventh and eight earls were attainted and beheaded, and John Mowbray, the first baron of that title was proclaimed a traitor, but later was restored to favor. The 18th earl was attained, but the title was restored to the 19th, who later was created Earl of Norfolk.

The dukedom had its beginning in the house of Mowbray, the sixth baron of that title being made Duke of Norfolk in 1307. The fifth duke, dying without male issue, the title became extinct, but was later revived for Sir John Howard, who had married a daughter of the fifth duke and who also became earl marshal of England. The family suffered heavily under Henry VII and Henry VIII, several members of it being executed. The titles, too,

The Campaign.

In no way do we hold with the use of violence at election or other times, and we regret that Mr. Blandford was maltreated at Bonavista. Mr. Blandford has a legal right to be in the booth and see how illiterates voted, but other candidates have foregone that right, as it is an unpleasant position for a voter to record his vote against a candidate in his presence, and in order to avoid this unpleasantness, some candidates do not go into any booth at all on polling day, and so avoid exercising any form of personal influence over a voter. According to the Herald, Mr. Blandford says "the most appalling doctrines as to the treatment of opponents are being preached by the Coakerite chiefs in this and other northern districts." This we deny point-blank, and particularly in its reference to Opposition candidates. In Bonavista Bay and Trinity Bay the latter rarely mentioned or referred to the candidates opposed to them, and never in words of personal disparagement. At many meetings they were not even mentioned or referred to in any way. In Trinity Bay, at one or two meetings, the people were asked to give the most favourable consideration to the personal standing, character and reputation of the Government candidates, against which not one word was said, and then to consider the Government they represented, and after doing so, to weigh carefully whether they would support the Government by voting for them. That was the style of campaign in both Bonavista and Trinity Bays, and it is a mere hallucination for any one to state that any infamous doctrines were preached by candidates.

The man who used such a word as infamous in this connection has undoubtedly a hazy conception of the meaning of the word. As to what was done at Bonavista on the night before polling, we can speak with even greater confidence. Messrs. Abbott, Coaker and Lloyd held a large meeting, where nearly 1,000 men were present. We saw the Hon. D. Morison there. We did not see the Hon. S. D. Blandford, but we heard after the meeting that he was present. The meeting was most enthusiastic and the cheering was frequent and prolonged. The speakers were Messrs. Abbott, Coaker and Lloyd. Not one word of reference was made to the Tory candidates. No notice of any kind was taken of them. No arguments of a lawless character were submitted, although the Minister of Justice was present, notorious for the lawless argument Strong in reference to the sale of the Orange Bay property in which he was interested. We can state in conclusion that no cleaner campaigns were ever conducted on platform and in conversation than those conducted in Trinity Bay and Bonavista Bay by the Opposition candidates. Immediately after the meeting Messrs. Coaker and Lloyd left for the city by train. We repudiate the charge that either lawless arguments or anything else done by them led to the cutting of any wires. If Morison wants to know the reason of the unpopularity of himself and his government let him ponder over the facts which staggered ex-Governor Williams.

AT THE CATHEDRAL.—Rev. Dr. Greene occupied the pulpit at the R. C. Cathedral last night, and preached a very instructive sermon, referring particularly to the grand example set for us by the great Saints of the Church, who from the lowest depths have attained their exalted positions. He especially urged the congregation to set higher ideas, that they too may participate in the reward of these illustrious personages.

And Studies at Night on Grape-Nuts Food.

Some of the world's great men have worked during the day and studied evening to fit themselves for greater things. But it requires a good constitution generally to do this.

A man was able to keep it up with ease after he had learned the sustaining power of Grape-Nuts, although he had failed in health before he changed his food supply. He says: "Three years ago I had a severe attack of stomach trouble which left me unable to eat anything but bread and water.

"The nervous strain at my office from 6 A.M. to 6 P.M. and improper foods caused my health to fall rapidly. Cereal and so-called 'Foods' were tried without benefit until I saw Grape-Nuts mentioned in the paper. "In hopeless desperation I tried this food and at once gained strength, flesh and appetite. I am now able to work all day at the office and study at night, without the nervous exhaustion that was usual before I tried Grape-Nuts.

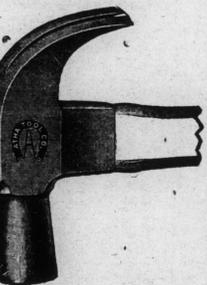

"It leaves me strengthened, refreshed, satisfied; nerves quieted and toned up; body and brain waste restored. I would have been a living skeleton, or more likely a dead one by this time, if it had not been for Grape-Nuts."

HOW EYESTRAIN CAUSES EYE DISEASES.

Eyestrain is the first cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent general weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way any eye disease, such as Cataract, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Ulcers, Glaucoma, Granulated Lid, etc., may be produced. Any of these diseases, if neglected, may result in blindness. The best time to treat the eye disease is in the "eyestrain stage." If you are having any trouble whatever with your eyes, no matter how slight, consult us.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT, GERMAN CROWN PRINCE TOO TALKATIVE.

LONDON, October 22nd, 1913.
As was very necessary in view of her weak condition the Duchess of Connaught, apart from the functions in connection with the marriage of Prince Arthur, has been living in complete retirement here since she recovered from her recent serious illness. When Her Royal Highness left London on October 17 for Canada, in the company of the Duke and Princess Patricia, she had the attention of Sir Edward Worthington, the Governor-General's medical officer, under whose care she made the journey home. The Duke and Duchess have had rather more than six months in England, and the two operations performed on Her Royal Highness took place in April, within a month of her arrival at Clarence House, but she was well enough to make the journey to Bagshot by the middle of June. All the suite, with the exception of the Duke's new military secretary, Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Fraquhar, accompanied the Royal party from Liverpool.

AUSTRIAN ROYAL ARCHDUKE TO VISIT ENGLAND.

I hear that the Archduke Francis Ferdinand is looking forward with the keenest interest to his visit to the King and Queen next month, and it is understood that he will be the bearer of an autograph letter to their Majesties from the Emperor Francis Joseph. It is understood further that the Archduke has made arrangements to bring with him for presentation to his host a collection of old silver ornaments for table decoration, while the Queen will be the recipient of some rare and exquisitely wrought lace and brocades suitable for Court gowns. The Archduke's visit, though having no direct diplomatic design, is considered in high political quarters to be of much significance, and the more so because of the somewhat cooler relations which have existed between the Courts of Vienna and St. James's since the Austrian coup in Bosnia in the autumn of 1908. The late King Edward is known to have entertained a keen feeling that he had been treated with a lack of confidence in that regard, but the fault for this was never imputed to the venerable Emperor.

Turning to another Royal heir it is clear that the German Crown Prince is getting on the nerves of the German people. A few years ago he was genuinely popular. His cheerfulness, somewhat simple humor, and enjoyment of sport and outdoor life left a pleasant impression of a healthy, unsophisticated, unspooled young man, who, if he had not much in him was at all events harmless and very engaging. His first outbreak was at the time of the Morocco crisis, when from the gallery of the Reichstag he loudly applauded an anti-English speech by a rapid Pan-German Deputy. The next indiscretion was his book, "Germany in Arms," in which he gave utterance to the crudest militarist and Jingo views. Last year he inflicted an atrocious insult upon General Hauptmann, Germany's greatest man of letters. There is little doubt that his latest escapade, on the Brunswick affair was at the instigation of his Pan-German and militarist familiars. In two years he has destroyed all the popularity that he once had, and the German papers are seriously discussing the question of putting some sort of a constitutional muzzle on him. But there is a difficulty. When in the fifties the then Crown Prince afterwards the Emperor Frederick tried to intervene between Bismarck and the Prussian Parliament, the Chancellor severely snubbed the Prince by informing him bluntly that a Crown Prince had no constitutional status. In Germany they are now beginning to think that it would be better if the heir to the throne had some sort of position in the Constitution that would put a bridle on his tongue and actions. If the Kaiser were to commit an indiscretion the Imperial Chancellor would have to bear the responsibility. A Crown Prince is sufficiently important—at all events potentially—that he, too, it is argued, should be put into some form of constitutional harness.

MEDICAL RECIPROcity WITH CANADA.

It appears that no immediate steps are contemplated to extend medical reciprocity further between this country and Canada. At present the qualifications given in four of the Provinces—Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, and Quebec—admit their holders to the British Medical Register. With the establishment of a Dominion Medical Council it was anticipated that before long reciprocal arrangements for medical practice would be established between the Mother Country and the other provinces. However, I am told that it has been found the medical opinion there, particularly in British Columbia, is averse to the admission of British medical men to practice without obtaining the local qualification. The value of British registration to Canadian medical men in the Eastern Provinces lies largely in the opportunity which it gives in obtaining hospital posts and experience on this side.

IMPRESSING THE PERSIANS.

I should not be surprised to hear that the ambitious French project of an aviation route from Paris to the Persian Gulf will discount to some extent the naval rivalry which for a good many years has been maintained in regard to that region. It may be recalled in passing that in the days when Russian and British spheres of influence in Persia were less clearly marked than they are now, the Russians hit upon the plan of sending a two-tunnelled cruiser to the Gulf with a view to impressing the dwellers upon the Persian littoral, and the plan for a time worked admirably.

Accustomed hitherto to gunboats with only one funnel, the Persians argued that a Power possessing vessels with two of these imposing adornments must of necessity be one of predominant strength, and for a season British influence was in danger of declining. But such things are not long hid from the sagacious officials entrusted with the duty of maintaining British prestige in these parts, and with very little delay a British warship with three funnels made its appearance in the Gulf and completely obliterated the impression produced by the Russian vessel. It is possible that some competition of the kind will eventually be disclosed in the matter of aircraft, and it might prove to be a sound political move to attach to the residency at Bushire a dirigible of sufficient proportions to outclass in the native eye even the substantial aeroplanes which will probably be needed to accomplish the route from Paris via Constantinople, Aleppo, and Baghdad, to Buzra.

SOCIETY'S TRAVELS.

There will not be much of an autumn season in London this year. People have waited for the Royal wedding to be safely over and are now rapidly making plans for scattering all over the world. "I'm just off to Khartoum—I've been ordered desert air." A young woman was heard to declare the other afternoon, and the statement struck the listener as the very last word in that interchange of gas and nonsense which occasionally takes place between rich, idle women and their distracted doctors. There is no end to the excuses which people discover nowadays for getting away from everything. "I'm going out to Pekin at the end of the month," a quite young girl announced not long ago. "Indeed? To stay at the Embassy?" she was asked. "Oh, dear no," was the reply. "I want a couple of Chinese dogs—the very rarest species. I cannot get them in this country, so I've got to go and get them for myself." It was undoubtedly the last Durbar which set this fashion. People found how easy it was, given time and money, to take a trip to Delhi, and now an invitation to join a party to Cashmere or a camping-out fortnight in some other remote part is not an uncommon arrival by post.

South African Bushmen in London.

"The recent visit (to this country) of an aboriginal Bushman from South Africa is a matter which will interest not a few of your readers," writes Mr. W. L. H. Duckworth to the Times. "The Bushman is accompanied by Mr. M. P. Epstein, on whose farm near Kimberley he has lived for some seven years past. He was found by Mr. Epstein in the Kalahari Desert. No other human being was seen in the locality at the time. Mr. Epstein states, also, that when discovered this Bushman was in pursuit of ostriches; and that he was armed with the bow and arrow which he still carries. "Having had an opportunity of examining the Bushman, I may say that I believe him to be a genuine representative of his race. His dwarf-like stature (about 4ft. 3in.) and other physical characteristics leave no room for doubt on this point. He speaks no known language."

Wedding Bells.

On Oct. 4th the bell of St. Michael's Church, Redcliffe, Bonavista Bay, rang out joyously in honor of the marriage of Mr. Wm. Pittman to Miss Ellen Maud Bishop, daughter of the late Rev. Wm. Kirby, of King's Cove. The bride, who was attended by her sister, looked lovely dressed in cream cashmere, with wreath and veil. She was escorted to the altar by her uncle, Mr. Fred Shears, who acted as father-giver. The groom was supported by Mr. J. C. Brown of King's Cove. After the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. S. A. Dawson, the bridal party drove to the home of the Messrs. Shears, Openhall, where a reception was held. The following day the happy couple left Openhall on the s.s. Dundee en route for their home, Montreal. The bride was the recipient of many choice and useful presents, and best wishes go with her from a host of friends, by whom she is beloved and esteemed.

Chimney Fire.

At 8.50 last night the Central and West End firemen were called to the residence of Mrs. T. J. Nurse, on Le-Marchant Road, where a large quantity of soot accumulated in the chimney had taken fire. The blaze was promptly extinguished and the "all-out" signal was sent in before 9 o'clock. Considerable anxiety was felt by citizens generally when the alarm came in, as the high wind of last night would have rendered fire-fighting a serious difficulty.

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.
 Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. "When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why."
 "Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Alta., writes: 'Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think the death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed.'
 "Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram.
 LONDON, To-day.
 The United Kingdom is in the throes of a miniature general election. There are five vacant seats for the Commons, four caused by recent judicial appointments and consequent changes in the Cabinet. The Government is quite naturally a little anxious, for in four contests it is on the defensive, and has to contend with a lot of dissatisfaction both with what it has done, and what it has failed to do. Unionists too, are making a determined fight in every constituency and are aided in some by the nomination of Labor and Socialist candidates who always draw votes from the Liberals. The greatest interest centres in the contest for the Reading seat which Sir Rufus Isaacs gave up to take the Lord Chief Justiceship here; the Unionists have the best chances in making a break in the Government defense; Isaacs, although a resident of the city, was otherwise popular and a strong candidate and always held his seat by only narrow majorities which at the last election dwindled to 99. Captain Leslie Wilson, who fought him last election is again Unionist candidate. George Peabody Gooch, is Liberal candidate. Kelfhley Division of Yorkshire, where Stanley Buckmaster has to seek re-election after his appointment to the position of Solicitor General, does not give the Government much concern. Buckmaster was returned only a year ago at the bye-election, receiving 825 over the Unionist candidate in a three-cornered fight. This time it is not expected there will be any official Labor candidate, so the new Solicitor General has to contest only against the Unionist, Viscount Lascelles, son and heir of Earl Harewood. Two Scottish elections will be fought, largely on Scottish issues, in both cases the Liberals are pretty certain of success. Robert Monroe, on account of his appointment as Lord Advocate for Scotland in succession to Alexander Ure, has to go back to his constituency to have his appointment endorsed. He defeated Sir Arthur Bignold in 1910 by a majority of 211. No Unionist candidate has yet been selected. The other Scottish contest is for Linlithgowshire, which Alexander Ure vacated to become Lord President of the Court of Sessions. He had represented the constituency for twenty years, always being elected by large majorities, last time by 2070, so it ought to be safe for a Liberal again this time. The candidate chosen by the Government Party is Mr. Pratt, former Bailie of Glasgow, a strong temperance advocate; his opponent will be James Kidd, Solicitor. There will be no contest at the bye-election for the Northern Division of County Cork where John Guiney has been nominated.

 The Small Investor Can Now Buy When Prices Are Lowest

A comparison of the prices of many of the securities in our October "Investment Offerings" with our issue for last March, illustrates the lowered levels now obtainable.

It is in such a time as this, when money is difficult to secure, that the partial payment plan is most useful. The general tightness of money results in lower prices and makes it impossible for the ordinary investor to take advantage of bargains.

But by our partial payment plan you can buy at this opportune period and pay for your purchases in easy instalments. You need the explanatory booklet now more than ever. A postal brings it.

The New Type of Woman.

"Whatever view may be taken of particular phases of the women's movement, it cannot be denied that as a whole it is the most challenging and vital development of our day," says the Christian Commonwealth. "For evidence that modern womanhood is disturbed excited, and restless as never before, it is not necessary to go far afield. The proofs are cumulative, spectacular, and not a little alarming to old-fashioned people. And the contagion has spread until it has affected popular discussion to an unprecedented degree.

A Ringing Assertion.
"Woman has emerged as a definite factor in modern life. She stands among us, indelible, erect, defiant, self-assertive. One marks the new type in the streets and at meetings of all descriptions. There is a free joy in swing about the carriage of her body, she looks you in the eyes with direct, level gaze, her greeting is the salutation of an equal. In co-operation with men she is a fine, frank comrade; in antagonism she is a gallant, indomitable fighter. By comparison the younger generation of men appear slack, self-conscious, and lethargic.

"According to a recent article in the New Statesman the inquiries conducted among young people of both sexes by several important journals in France show that the young women are becoming the dominant sex—the male youth are vaguely sentimental, reactionary phrasemongers beside them; there is a note of revolt, a ringing assertion about the young women of the present day which cannot be denied by anyone who has studied the type—not in books and plays, but in playing fields and parks and streets and public halls. The type has very definitely arrived; and as one sees the two sexes in contrast it is not fanciful to suggest that there is a distinct exchange of characteristics taking place between them.

Bored Males.
"Precisely in that period during which young women have been learning the lessons of self reliance and self assertion, their male contemporaries have unconsciously acquired a bored, relaxed, acquiescent pose, and have cultivated a featureless tolerance not very far removed from the 'indifferent' attitude towards life which their sisters have abandoned.

"The women's movement is essentially a revolt against the ideas and institutions which limit their individual development; an assertion of the elementary right of self-determination; and a claim for freedom to live their own lives and order their own individual destinies."

SAVORY ROASTER.

Our many customers who had the pleasure of examining and trying our sample of this very useful household article will be pleased to hear that we have just received a shipment, so that all orders can now be filled. What is a Savory Roaster? It is such a good thing that it must be seen to be properly understood. A Savory Roaster is a Pan for roasting meat; but it is more than this, it is a self baster. No torment of burning your fingers removing it from oven to baste the meat. You simply place your roast of meat in the roaster, close the pan—trouble no more about it until it is cooked. The meat is really steamed all through. None of the nutritious properties of the meat can escape. It is a marvel and the price is within the reach of everybody. 14c.

Harry Kemp.

When Britain sends her gifted bards to visit "Yankee" shores, we take them warmly to our breasts, even though we find them bores; we compliment their blooming lyres, we boost their blawed songs, and when they leave our bloody land they take our praise along. We feed them at our groning board, as though they might be earls, and introduce them to our aunts and all the spinster girls; we try to make them feel that British and Americans are brothers, true as steel. But when we sent to England's shore a bard without a lid, it was a burning, screaming shame, the things those Britons did. They didn't take him to their homes or to the banquet hall, they didn't hang his picture where it might be seen by all; they didn't drink the poet's health in brown October ale; they grabbed him where his clothes were slack and fired him into jail. A blooming jurist sized him up and muttered to the bard: "You'll 'ave to 'ump yourself in 'ock—three weeks of labor 'ard! And when your bloody term is hup we'll ship you from this shore, and don't come 'ustling 'ere again, or you'll get some more!" And shall the Eagle now submit or claw the Lion's tail? How can we boast about our flag while Harry Kemp's in jail?

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend. Its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well, you did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. "Too late then to talk of prudence, too late then to say: 'If I had only, etc., etc.'" That "if" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more than his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance, and with Percie Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

RESUMED DUTY.—Customs night boatman J. Cullison, who was injured recently by falling on the deck of a steamer, is able to resume duty again.

He Was With Damien

Father Conrardy Has Spent Forty Years With the Lepers.—Colleague and Friend of the Famous Hero of Stevenson's Essay Is a Striking Figure in the Clergy.—So Far He Has Escaped Contagion From His Unfortunate Patients at Molokai.

A remarkable personality in the priesthood is Father Louis L. Conrardy, missionary and medical doctor, who was Father Damien's companion and unflinching comforter in his closing days among the lepers of Molokai. For nearly 40 years he has labored among these sorely-afflicted outcasts of humanity and is at present caring for the lepers who are segregated on the Island of Sheklung, in the Kwangtung province of China. There are between 30,000 and 40,000 lepers in the province—10,000 in the City of Canton alone. The Canton government is aiding him in the erection of large houses on the island to accommodate over 1,000 of these wretched beings.

Some years of Father Conrardy's early ministry were spent in India, where his attention was first drawn to the condition of lepers. In 1887 he joined Father Damien at Molokai, remaining there until 1896, when Father Pamphile, a brother of Father Damien, relieved him of his charge. He then went to Canton and afterwards to Sheklung. Four nuns care for the women lepers on a separate island.

Father Conrardy has so far escaped infection, notwithstanding the many years he has spent among the stricken. Robert Louis Stevenson, after his visit to Molokai spoke of seeing "but ends of human beings lying about, almost unrecognizable breathing, an ordeal from which the nerves of a man's spirit even as his eye quails—a pitiful place to visit and a hell to dwell in."

Out in Canton, Father Conrardy says, the condition of lepers is 10 times worse than in Molokai. They are isolated and uncared for and left alone—no one to feed them when they no longer have the capacity to feed themselves. A jug of water and some rice is placed near them which they must get as best they can, as they lie on their backs. Only recently, in one of the interior provinces, the soldiers forced 100 lepers into a disused quarry, riddled them with bullets, afterward drenching them with kerosene, and converting the shambles into a dreadful holocaust.

Rossley Theatre.

Lovers of high-class singing, lovers of old plantation melodies, lovers of dancing, lovers of a good clean show have it at Rossley's The Dora Patterson trio are without a doubt the finest colored artistes in the business to-day. To-night their act is the oldtime plantation songs and dances that appeal to all. Miss Arkandy is also a fine vocalist and violin player, and never fails to receive many encores for her beautiful singing. Jack Rossley received one of the largest shipments of films by the S.S. Digby from England, where he now buys his films outright, and one is of special interest, that of our beloved King and Queen at Liverpool, the opening of the great Gladstone dock, their Majesties visiting the working people in their homes last July—the very latest pictures of the King and Queen—not a Graphic that is just flashed on and a fine curtain—but hundreds of feet of film, showing them at their best.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.
A German aviator, making a flight from Strassburg, took with him, as passenger, an ape, which he strapped to a seat. The ape was terribly frightened, screaming and trembling throughout the journey. When he alighted he was paralyzed with fear.

MONTREAL, To-day.
The Manchester Commerce struck an iceberg while passing through the Straits of Belle Isle on Saturday and sustained injuries which though severe, did not incapacitate her entirely for she was subsequently able to shape her course for St. John's Nfld. where she will be docked for overhauling and repairs.

ATHENS, To-day.
Italy and Austria presented a note to Greece, complaining of the fulfillment of Albania by the International commission being hampered by the attitude of the population under Greek incitement. Greece informed both Italy and Austria that she had instructed her representatives on the commission to regard as Albanian all villages where opposition is encountered.

HALIFAX, To-day.
Stormy weather along the coast retarded the run towards Halifax of the Survey ship Acadia, and the shipwrecked crew of the Alette which did not reach Halifax until to-day. Meantime no details of the disaster are available, excepting the following received by the Cunard company from Capt. Robertson, of the Alette: Alette beached in Nelson River; crew safe on board Acadia, which is due to arrive at Halifax on Sunday morning.

BOSTON, To-day.
The crew of the schooner Gypsum Emperor, dismasted in a storm, was picked up by the Hamburg-American liner Barcelona, from Philadelphia or Hamburg, according to a wireless message received here. Carnegie medals and cash awards were presented to 77 persons last night. Bert Yates, of Cornwall, Ont., received a bronze medal and $2,000 for educational purposes for saving Perovial A. Newman, aged 9, and Frank Shaver, aged 15, from drowning, on August 29th, 1909. Linn Wilcox, of Pennant, Sask., received a bronze medal and $1,000 for attempting to save Leroy A. Miller, a farmer, from suffocation in December, 1911. Miller fell 70 feet and was choked with fumes caused by a dynamite explosion. Wilcox was lowered to the rescue and almost lost his own life.

LONDON, To-day.
Capt. Granville Fortescue, who was President Roosevelt's military aide at the White House, and who studied the conditions of Latin American countries, for the Pan American Union, contributes a long article to the Daily Mail, presenting his viewpoint of the Mexican difficulty. He argues that lack of information is the only excuse that can explain Britain's misjudged policy. The Telegraph in an editorial, argues that for European nations, the question is not one of ethics, but practical politics. It readily admits, however, there is a great deal to be said on the other side, the whole matter is so perplexing and baffling that the only prudent course is to wait events. We believe we are right in saying that both France and Germany as well as Britain will take no decided action until the situation is clearer. The Graphic again urges the Government to refrain her steps in the Mexican affair.
