CLEANING THE STREETS.

It would be a waste of space to expatiate on the dirty condition of Toronto's streets, and it is much more pleasing to be able to announce that something is to be done to remedy this long felt evil. Street cleaning machines are now being used in many of the cities and large towns in the United States and England. In Brighton they do not wait a couple of weeks for the dirt to accumulate, but sweep the streets every night with a horse machine as regularly as the careful housewife applies the broom to her floors. RELIGIOUS REVIVALS IN ENGLAND. In view of the anticipated visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey the medical press of England have issued medical warnings:

The Medical Press and Circular: We are concerned in the interests of impressionable females and weak-minded young men to notice the arrival in England of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, of explosive revival fame. Former experience of the pernicious influence of the hystero-religious mania with which these clever men were identified lead us to hope that most people will guard against an undue preponderance of the emotional passion.

The Weekly Despatch of the 23rd ult. remarks that the medical papers are very properly warning parents against allowing their silly daughters—the silliness of sons does not generally take this shape—to run the risk of losing their heads by attending the Moody and Sankey ministrations which are beginning again in England. But cannot something be done by our zealous home secretary to prevent the Moody and Sankey disease from being propagated? We try to prevent people from giving their neighbors small-poor typhus fever. It is a worse crime for the "revivalists" to send thousands of weak-brained devotees into the mad-houses, as they do whenever or wherever they turn up.

TEN YEARS' RECORD. In a Life Insurance Company, conducted on the mutual principie (such as the Mutual Department of the ATNA LIFE), all the money paid in will, substantially, come back to the insured, with compound interest—except that portion distursed for working expenses. Some expenses are necessary, even in charitable operations. Other things being equal, those companies are usually found among the best—and live the longest, and return most value for the money they receive—which are most economically conducted.

Only three old companies (and they well grown previous to 1850) have shown better record in this respect than the ATNA LIFE. The following table, carefully compiled from the official reports, embraces all the other leading U. S. companies, also those of Canada, and lastly three British companies doing business in Canada:—

CHAPTER V. THE RUDIMENTS OF A MAN.

"Mother, I hain't no unison with it at all," said Farmer Atwood, leaning on the leakfast table and holding aloft a knife of fork—formidable implements in his ads, but now unemployed through pertion of mind. "I hain't no unison it—this havin' fine city folks right in family. "Twill be pretty nigh as bad visiting one's rich relations. I had a week of that once, but, thank the Lord, I hain't been so afflicted since. I've seen em up at the hotel and riding by too often not to know 'em. They are half-conceit and half fine feathers, and that doesn't leave many qualities as are suited "But it wo cupants." But it wo

Roger and me will have to be —what was it that lecturic 'possessor called it—'decolorized' every mornin' after feedin' and cleannir the critters. We'll have to put on our go-to-meetin's instead of sittin' down in our spirits, which it is and it's been agrowing on me ever since that clearly have to put on our go-to-meetin's instead of sittin' down in our spirits, which is been agrowing on me ever since that city chap persuaded you into being coes and clamborrand for his family." And Farmer Atwood's knife and fork came down into the dish of ham with an on-shaught that would have appealled 3 Jew.

"The governor is right, mother," said the young man referred to as Roger. "We shall alb be in strail-jackets for the sum more than trenty years ald, although in form he appeared a large which we have that hung in a corner of the large kitches, which, except on state occasions, also served as dining and sitting-room, it might be potent that hung in a corner of the large kitches, which, except on state occasions, also were as a fine figure and an asy bearing of the rustic, rough-and-ready style. Atwood got out the great farm-waggon and jogged down to the landing on the Hudson, which was so distant as to insure his absence for several hours.

It was a busy day for Mrs. Atwood and Susan. Fresh bread and cake were to be baked, and the rooms "tied up" once more. A pitcher that had lost its handle was filled with old-fashioned roses that persisted in blooming in a grass-choked flower-bed. This was placed in the room designed for Mrs. Jocelyn and the children, while the one flower vase, left unbroken from the days of Rogers' boyish carelessness, adorned the smaller apartment that Mildred and Belle were to occupy, and this was about the only element of elegance or beauty that Susan was able to impart to the bare little room. Even to the country girl, to whom the term "decorative art" was but a vague phrase, the place seemed meagre and hard in its outlines, and she instinctively felt that it would appear far more so to its occupants.

"But it's the best we can afford," she pride, and his well-tanned cheeks could not hide a faint glow of youthful color. One felt at a glance that his varying expressions could scarcely fail to reveal all that the young man was now or could ever become, for his face suggested a nature peculiarly frank and matter-of-fact, or at least unawakened. The traits of carcless goodnature and self-confidence were now most apparent. He had always been regarded as a clever boy at home, and his rustic gallanty was well received by the farmer's daughters in the neighborhood. What better proofs that he was about right could a young fellow ask? He was on such good terms with himself and the world that even the event which his father so deprecated did not much disturb his easy-going assurance. He doubted in his thoughts whether the city girls would "turn up their noses" at him, and if they did, they might, for all that he cared, for there were plenty of rural beauties with whom he could console himself. But, like his father, he felt that the careless and dress, and to teach the Jocelyas that country people had "as good a right to their ways as eitypeon his impatience to secure this four-

"That's it," snarled the farmer; "what little you make will soon be on your backs or streamin away in ribbons."

"Well," said Mrs. Atwood a little sharply, "it's quite proper that we should have something on our backs, and if we earn the money to put it there ourselves, I don't see why, you should complain; as for ribbons, Sue has as good right to 'em as Rodger to a span-new buggy that ain't good for anything bat taking grils out in."

Herefore the threatened invasion did not in the least prevent him from making havoe in the substantial breakfast that Mrs. Atwood and her daughter Susan put on the table in a haphazard manner, taking it from the adjacent stove as fast as it was ready. A stolid looking hired man sat opposite to Roger, and shovelled in his food with his knife, with a monotonous assiduity that suggested a lamonotonous assiduity that suggested her travelling dress for one filling a coal-bin. He seemed oblivious to everything aver the breakfast, and with the exception of filling his plate from time to time, he was ignored by the family. The men-folk were quite well along with their mean before Mrs. Atwood and Susan, flushed with their labors about the stove, were ready to sit down. They were no haste to reply or to fight over a battle that had been won already. Rodger led to a slight resumption of hostilities, however, by a disposition—well-nigh universal in brothers—to tease.

HEINTZMAN'S PIANOS.

To be Seen and Heard in Every Quarter of the Dominion—A Well Established Business.

A World reporter was walking on King street west yesterday afternoon, waiting for something to turn up, when his ear was filled with most delicious music from Heintzman & Co.'s piano warerooms. Being alover of the melodicous chord, the reporter dared to intrude and listen to the sweet strains as they came from a beautiful grand piano touched by the artistic hand of a pretty young lady. Mr. Heintzman welcomed his unexpected visitor, and when the playing had ceased invited him to make a tour through his factory, of which the old gentleman is justly proud. Always on the alert for obtaining information interesting to the public, The World man readily accepted the invitation and made a half hour's tour of the orderly and well managed premises, gleaning a number of facts from Mr. Heintzman as to his business on the way.

A walk through the factory impresses the visitor that it is managed in an admirably systematic manner. Every employee knows his workand does it, and Mr. Heintzman is here, there and everywhere exercising a persona suspicion over the whole, a task for which his musical tastes and mature experience have eminently fitted him. The value of Heintzman & Co.'s establishment to the city may be estimated when it is stated that it affords employment to upwards of eighty skilled and talented mechanics, who make good wages and are a highly respect-able portion of the community.

The Heintzman piano has always held a leading position among its Canadian competitors. It can be seen and heard in every part of the Dominion and is universally admired for its tone, touch, durability and workmanship. One of the secrets of its success is its individuality. "We copy from nobody" says the head of the firm "and spare no expense to make in the control of the secrets of its success is its individuality. spare no expense to make improve-ments." The Heintzman spends considerable time in drawing new designs and working out new improvements, the result being that the establishment turns out grand square, and upright instruments that compare by no means unfavorable. that compare by no means unfavorably with the best and greatest pianos in the world. Eminent musical authorities have accorded the Heintzman piano the highest praise, and testimonials of a very flattering nature have been received of other purchasers.

The wound which was dressed by Dr. Ball is not a very serious oue. It appears to be a serious oue. is not a very serious one. It appears to have been made by a buckshot or a couple of small shot passing across the forehead.

MILITARY MATTERS.

The Garrison Artillery Inspected—They Give a Good Account of Themselves.

The drill shed was quite alive with the military last night. The occasion was the inspection of the Toronto garrison artillary by Col. Strange of Kingston, assisted by Major Hebar. The corps turned out about fifty strong, under the command of Capt. Gibson, and their smart and soldiery appearance elicited praise from the inspecting officers and the onlookers. They were first put thorough the manual exercise which was well performed. They were not so successful in the company movements, but this fact does not detract very much from the merit of an artillery corps. The stroke of the evening, however, was the mounting and dismounting of the guns, and mortars. This was performed in a most satisfactory manner, under the direction of Sergt. Swanton, the late representative of the corps at Shoeburyness. On the whole the city and Capt. Gibson may well be proved of the corps at Shoeburyness. On the whole the city and Capt. Some Facts About the Gelebrated Manager the Enterprises He Has in Hand. The World yesterday enjoyed a pler chat with Mr. W. H. Morton, manage Haverly's Strategists company, which ar peared last night to a large and delighted audience at the Grand opera house. The conversation having turned upon the subject of Col. Haverly, Mr. Morton gave some interesting facts relative to the magnitude of his undertakings which certainly are surprising as examples of indomitable enterprise even in these days of advance ment. Sad experience has taught many a theatrical manager that one undertaking is quite enough, often too much to foster at one time, but Haverly already has eleven

EL PADRE ADIEU TO THE KHAN.

Adleu man of pencil and paper-Adieu thou poetical man, Whose thoughts rushed upon us like vapor, Pathetic, poetic, "The Khan."

Paralyze, postize and prepare them,
With something a coedingly new;
With something that has never been near
Until they at last struck on you. And tell them a friend in Toronto, Who wished the old Khan fond adieu, To Winnipeg would like to run to, And make a huge fortune there too.

MASONIC NEWS.

been called a "lucky man," but his success is really a monument to erterprise and the keenest of judgement. In reviewing the numerous undertakings of this celebrated manager one is compelled to wonder how one "small head" can bear so great a responsibility. He is certainly to the theatrical world what Gould and Vanderbilt are to the stock board.

He was received with the customary grand honors, and made an honorary member of the lodge.

A majority of the city lodges elect officers this month. The masters already elected are: Bro. Gibb, Orient; Bro. Williams, Occident; Bro. Gallow, Rehoboam; Bro. Postlethwaite, Ionic; and Bro. Wilson, St. George's.

THE POLICE WORLD.

Sping and Wilson, the alleged wool thieves, have been remanded till to-morrow. David Hudson for using insulting language towards Robert Waterhouse, was ined $2 without costs or ten days.

Justice Fisher of Brooklyn, in trying a bioycle case, said that he intended to protect the bicycle riders from interference, as they had a right to use the streets.

THE FILLIARD CHAMPIONS.

A group of bright-eyed, sharp-featured young men were assembled in New York last week. They were the most famous billiard players of the country, gathered together to discuss arrangements for the coming tournament. Among them were Schaefer, Sexton, Dion, Heiser, Gallagher, Slosson, Daly, Carter, Wallace and Morris. At the conclusion of the meeting, Richard Roche made a match with Henry Stedecker to play Schaefer against Sexton for $2500 a side, within three weeks after the tourna-SMITH, opp. St. Charles Restaurant.
