We are wearing away!

We are wearing away!

How this poor, tired he
Is besting and besting.

As if it wouldipart!

And these rigorous limbs

Grow weary and worn,

By working and wearing

From dawn until dawn;

We are wearing away!

We are wearing away!

And by gazing at troubles, In tearsdaily swim;

And the wrinkles are com So silently now—

We are wearing away!

We are wearing away!

O, I know it is so;

I cannot tell how

The "Big Store's" specialty Department is ready for the Christmas Trade.

This Department has certainly shown substantial growth since last Christmas. More space has been devoted to it and consequently a lot of new lines have been added. It is really surprising how quickly the shelves are emptied, calling for fresh stock. Don't you think this shows satisfactory service, don't you think this shows good value, and don't you think that in order to do yourself ordinary justice you should drop in to this Department next time you are down town and ascertain what is carried and what the prices are? If you do this you will be sure of securing everything that you will require for your Christmas dinner in this direction. There is nothing like seeing for remind-

All other Departments are in splendid shape to handle Christmas business. Lots of new, fresh stock, all at the very lowest prices consistent with quality.

GRAHAM'S EARLY DAYS

Proprietor of The Montreal Star Used to Run Off His Paper In a Cellar and He Bought Steam From His Next Door Neighbor — Wrapped Up Newsboys' Pennies to Pay

Graham as a newspaper proprietor, with a fortune said to be several mil-lions to his personal credit, stands in strange contrast to the circumstance of his early years. Those who have followed his business career from the beginning describe the heart-rending months when the first editions of The Montreal Star were none too satisfactory in its performances and breakdowns were frequent.

So pinched were Mr. Graham's finances in those days that he was unable to afford a steam boiler of his own, and arranged with his next door neighbor to run a pine through the own, and arranged with its next door neighbor to run a pipe through the wall and supply him enough to keep an old steam engine moving at press time. The small payment for the steam often fell behind, and, it is said, Mr. Graham day after day would said, Mr. Granam day after day would watch the coppers coming in from the newsboys until they grew into an amount sufficient to pay for the steam when he carefully wrapped them in his bandkerchief and bore them off to the hungry neighbor.

A Church Romane

Guildford, a pretty little English-like village on the upper reaches of like village on the upper reaches of the Swan River, twelve miles from Perth, Western Australia, is the cen-tre of a church-building romance which reads like a fairy tale. A beautiful church to be known as the Chapel of St. Mary and St. George, is almost completed, though Guild-ford, in its wildest dreams, never thought of nessessing such a temford, in its wildest dreams, never thought of possessing such a temple. It happened in this way. The Rev. P. U. Henn, an Anglican clergyman, sent out a circular in England, asking for assistance towards the building of a chapel in Western Australia. Within a fortnight a man, who has preserved his anonymity so far as the public are concerned, wrote to Mr. Henn as followed. cerned, wrote to Mr. Henn as follows: "I shall be delighted to build the church at Guildford myself. * the chirch at Guildford myself. * * I am very keen on the colonies. There is no doubt they are going to have an immense influence on our history." The "good fairy" then set about giving effect to his intentions. He selected an architect, had samples of stone sent from Western Australia to England, and made a choice. The church is to cost $150,-000.

Man-of-War's Hospital. The hospital on board a British nan-of-war, and which seamen call the "sick bay," is well equipped and modern in every respect. The hospital corps usually consists of two loctors, a steward and three or four assistants. The "sick bay" consists of a dispensary, an operating room, a medical ward and an isolation ward. The dispensary is up to date, and contains a complete outfit of drugs, which are official. Minor drugs, which are official. Minor operations as a rule are the only ones done on board a man-of-war while she is in port, but emergency operations are done on board while the ship is at sea. Ventilation in a ship's hospital is very good, and taken as a whole a hospital on board a man-of-war is a great deal better than the general public in civilian life believe.

On this date in 1881 Gladstone made the famous speech at Leeds warning Par-nell that "the resources of civilization were not exhausted," and describing were not exhausted," and describing the Land Leaguers as "marching through rapine to the dismemberment of the Empire." Ten years later, to the very day, Parnell died, and that same October 6 was the death-day of Sir John Pope Hennessy, the anti-Parnellite, who won the first bye-election in Ireland after the great split of the Irish party. October 6, 1896, brought the resignation of Lord Rosebery, and on October 6, 1903, Mr. Chamberlain opened the Tariff Reform campaign at Glasgow.

. Many down with pleurisy. Doctors say the country is full of it. First comes a chill, then cold develops the inflammation grows—you can't draw a long breath—lungs and sides get sore, and pleurisy sets in. A good home-cure consists in taking twenty drops of Nerviline every four hours. Supplement this by vigorously rubbing the sides and chest with Nerviline, and when warmth and circulation are established, put a Nerviline Porous Plaster over the sching spot. Nerviline Treatment is always successful in colds, neuralgia, and pleurisy. Try it yourself.

The Siege of the Seven Suitors

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON. Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nichol CHAPTER VIII-(Continued).

Octavia suggested was amazing. From eronautics to the negro question, from polar exploration to the political conditions in Bulgaria, she passed with the jauntiest insouciance and apparent-ly with a considerable fund of information to support her positions. She As we rose from the table Miss Octavia declared that she must show me the pie pantry. I was now so accustomed to her ways that I should not have been in the least surprised if she had proposed opening a steel vault filled with a mummified Egyptian dy-nasty.

"The gentleman who built this house," she explained, "had already grown rich in the manufacture of the famous ribless umbrella before he acquired a second fortune from a nostrum warranted to cure dyspepsia. He was inordinately fond of ples, and in order that this form of pastry might never be absent from his home, he had a special pantry built to which he might adjourn at his pleadure without any fear of finding the cupboard bare. She led the way through the butler's pantry and into a small cupboarded room adjoining the table linen closet At her command the butler threw open the doors and disclosed lines of shelves so arranged as to accommodate in the most compact and orderly form imaginable several dozens of ples. These pastries, in the pans as they had come from the oven, peeped out invitingly. Miss Octavia explained their presence in her usual impressive manner "It was one of the conditions of the sale of this house to me by the original owner's executors that the pie vault should be kept filled at all times whether I am in residence here or not. He felt greatly indebted to ple for the success of the dyspepsia cure. It had widened and steadily increased the market for the cure, and pie was to him a consecrated and sacred food. It was his habit to eat a pie every night before retiring, and on the nightmares thus inspired he had planned the strategy of all his campaigns against dyspensia. The man had elements of greatness, and these shelves are a monument to his genius. In order to keep perfect my title to this property it is necessary for me to maintain a pastry cook, and as I do not mysel is distributed among the people of the neighborhood every second day. The station agent at Bedford is a heavy consumer, and a retired physician a Mount Kisco has a standing order fo a dozen a week. My niece Hezekiah, of whom you have heard me speak, is partial to a particular type of pie, and one only. It is the gooseberry that de-lights Hezekiah's palate, and under G in file 3, in the corner behind you, there is even now a gooseberry ple that I shall send to Hezekiah, who, for reasons I need not explain, does not now visit here." "But there."

"But the dyspepsia man—you speak of him as though he were dead."
"Your assumption is correct, Mr.
Ames. The builder of Hopefield died only a few weeks after he had established himself in this house. Having entered upon the enjoyment of his well earned leisure and made it un-necessary that he should ever go pie-less to bed, he gave himself up for a fortnight to a mad indulgence in meringues and died after great suffering steadily refusing his own medicine to the end." We still lingered in the pie crypt after this diverting recital, while Miss Octavia entertained me with her views

"The soul color of pies varies greatly, Mr. Ames. It has always seemed to me that apple ple stands for the homelier virtues of our civilization. It is substantial, nutritious and filling. The custard and lemon varieties are feminine and do not, perhaps for that reason, appeal to me. Cherry ple at its best is the last and final expression of the ple genus, and where cooks have been careful in eliminating the seeds and the juice hasn't made sod-den dough of the crust a cherry ple meets the soul's highest demands. In the gooseberry I find a certain raci-ness or, if I may use the expression,

"Decidedly not, Miss Hollister. She gave me quite a different idea." "You relieve me greatly. Mr. Wig-gins' sense of humor is the slightest, and I should not in the least fancy him for Hezeklah. And besides, I am not yet ready to arrange a marriage for her."

She laid the slightest stress on the final pronoun. It was a fair inference, then, that Miss Cecilia's affairs were being "arranged," when they had been determined a husband would be found for Hezeklah. I did not doubt that Miss Hollister's intentions toward her nieces were the friendliest, no matter what strange devices she might employ to bend those young women to her pur-

"Oh, it was only that one historic day. She says the place was unbearable. She jarred the holiest chords of the divine lyre by harsh comments on the pre-Raphaelite profile. One of the devotees was so shocked that she dropped a plate or something and, to put it coarsely, Hezeklah got the bounce."

My description of Hezeklah's brief tenure of office at the Asolando seemed to amuse Cecilia greatly.

"There is no one like my sister," she said. "There never was and there never will be any one half so charming. Hezekiah is an original, who breaks all the rules and yet always sends the ball over the net. And it is because she is so inexpressibly dear and precious that I am anxious that nothing shall ever hurt her—nothing mar the sweet, beautiful child spirit in It was my turn to laugh now. Cecilia's manifestation of maternal solici-tude for Hezekiah seemed absurd, for Hezekiah in her way was older. Heze-kiah had raced with Diana and plucked arrows from her girdle she had heard Homer at the roadside singing of Achilles' shield. "Hezekiah is reasonably safe, should say, because she is so amazingly swift of foot and eye and so nimble f speech. She is not to be caught in a net or tripped with a word."

"I suppose that is so," remarked Cecilia soberly. "You thought her happy when you met her today? She did not strike you as being a girl with a wound in her heart? She wasn't particularly

"Not more so than sunlight on rip-pled water or the song of the lark as-cending." "Of course you made no reference to Mr. Wiggins? If I had imagined you would meet her I should have"—
She ended with an embarrassment that I now understood, and I broke in

"We did mention him. She asked me if I had seen him, and it was the thought of him that evoked her mer

She shook her head and sighed, then her manner changed abruptly. You delivered my message to Mr. Wiggins?"
"I did. He is badly out of gorts and

"Aunt Octavia has done nothing of the kind," she replied with spirit. "Mr. Wiggins has no right to speak of Aunt Octavia save in terms of kindness. If her wits are sharper than his, it is not her fault, that I can see. But there are matters here that I do not understand, Mr. Ames. I trust you, as my aunt evidently does, or I should not be talk-ing to you as I am, and I am moved to ask a favor of you, a favor of considerable weight, in view of the fact that you are a professional man, with, doubtless, many pressing calls upon your time." I bowed humbly before this compliment. My time had been lightly appraised by Miss Octavia and again by Wiggins. A long telegram from my assistant that reached me while I dress-ed for dinner had urged my immediate attendance upon my office. Some of my best clients, now reopening their houses for the winter, were in desper ate straits. But, Octavia Hollisters do not occur in the life of every young man, and both Cecilia and Hezekiah had taken strong hold upon my imagi-nation. Wiggins' place among the dramatis personae would in itself have compelled my sympathetic attention,

MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 8, 1918. Political bitterness in Britain.

"Far fields are always green," and "distance lends enchantment to the view," are trite sayings but expressive of truths which never grow stale. Even in the field of politics do they apply. Being right in the midst of the dust and smoke of battle in Cansida we are prone to believe that the dust and the smoke are not as thick elsewhere, and that in English politics, especially, the field is clearer and the atmosphere purer. It seems, however, that the view is too flattering. NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Although obserfulness is the recipe by which Mrs. Hannah Kocokoff says she has attained the are of 116 years, she constantly has a burial abroad folded beneath her bed. She made it herself 55 years ago, when she thought her time to die had come. To friends who congratulated her yesterday on her 116th birthday she proudly displayed the shroud and said that, thinking of her need for its soon, did not disturb her seresity one bit. "Old Hannah" is in the Home of the Daughters of Israel. There are so many old people in the institution that a line of 24 inmates, among whom there was none under 69 years, filed interfar room yesterday to greether. Someone suggested that each one in the party kiss her once for each year of her age, but when it was figured out that this meant 2,784 kisses, the idea was abandoned. She still enjoys health and retains all of her faculties except that she is slightly deaf. ATTRACTIVE SPECIALS FOR Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday

In fact, it was his speeches in 1886 and 1893 on the Home Rule Bills that first brought him before the public eye, and made Lord Rosebery then say of him, that he was a young man destined for a high place in public life in the future. No man can therefore with truth accuse him of inconsistency or sacrifice of principle. He is a great Englishman, who is actuated by high motives and who is naver ambiguous in his language. Incidentally I may say he has been consistent, too, with regard to another now pressing question. In 1894 he introduced in the Commons: "The Diseastallshment of the Church of Wales Bill."

SUBJECT TO DECISION.

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—The Ottawa Hockey Club has been suocessful in landing Wilson, the New Glasgow defence man. The Senators offered a certain sum for Wilson and on Saturday New Glasgow raised the rate a little. The Ottawas accepted it at once with the provision that the Maritime Province Club had authority to sell players. There is a possibility no money will change hands at all, as the New Glasgow club have given up the ghost, and it is up to the Hockey Commission to decide whether or not the players of the club are free to sign where they wish.

Manager Lesurer also announces he has signed Mike Murphy. This contract is also subject to decision of the Commission. sion.

The services at St. James church were very largely attended yesterday. The minister preached in the morning and Rev. B. J. Power, of Chalmers' church, Halifax, preached a sermon for young men in the evening. He held the close streation of his hearers throughout his fine discourse. "Religion" said he, "is the most important thing in a young man's life." He spoke on the subject under three heads. Religion must be real; it must be practical, and it must be noble. Nothing said the preacher is more real; more practical or more noble than religion, when taken in a right spirit. The singing by the choir was of the usual high order, the antem being well rendered. Mrs. Raiph Elliott's solo, "Abide, with me" was pleasingly rendered with fine effect.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 .- A wireless despatch NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A wireless despatch received in this city to-night from the Virginian Beach Station from Captain Dodge, of the steamer Suwanee, says that in answer to appeals for help from the steamer Rio Grande, he arrived alongside that vescel at 4 a. m. to day. The vessel was afire, and at that time was 205 miles northwest of the Diamond shoals.

The 197 passengers on the Rio Grande were taken aboard the Suwanee until the fire on the Rio Grande had been put out, and later were returned to their own vessel.

The captain of the Rio Grande was severely burned about the hands in fighting the fismes. Both the captain and wireless operator aboard the Rio Grande displayed great courage, it was stated, in remaining at their posts and fighting the fismes.

When the fire had been subdued the Rio Grande proceeded, ander her own steam. All aboard well.

LAST OF THE GIANTS

ellectual Leader of the First Hal of the Nineteetl, Century Made on immense Contribution to the Sum of Human Knowledge — Found Natural Selection While Collect-ing In Malay, Archipelago.

The closing years of the nineteeth century saw the ascendency of the financial giants. All over the world the development of the natural resources, the production of material wealth, vast combinations and accumulations of capital dominating indusulations of capital dominating indus-try and commerce were the achieve-ments of the big men of the era.

The first half of the nineteenth century was the age of intellectual glants. Our own brilliant Emerson and his lik were matched across the waters by Darwin and his contem-poraries waters by Darwin and his contemporaries.

The last of the intellectual giants is gone—Alfred Russel Wallace, who shares with Darwin the honor of the discovery and formulation of the theory of evolution. Darwin is credited with postulating the theory: Wallace simultaneously and independently promulgated the same thought. No single discovery in the world of science in the past century equals that of the theory of evolution.

It was while collecting specimens and studying natural history in the Maiay Archipelago in the '50's that Wallace followed a line of study which caused him to state the same principle of natural selection that Darwin stated in England about the same time. It was a remarkable exsame time. It was a remarkable example of two giant intellects follow ing the identical line of thought t

the same conclusion.

Another equally striking instance of the two minds working together occurred in 1858, when Mr. Wallace,

Biscuits nd fever in the distant archipelago suddenly thought out the theory of the survival of the fittest, which is Are different from the survival of the fittest, which is one of the bases of the Darwinian philosophy. He wrote out the theory while still in the grip of the tropical fever and posted it to Darwin.

"I never saw a more striking coincidence," wrote Darwin the day after he received the paper. "If Wallace had my manuscript sketch written out in 1842 he couldn't have made a better short abstract." Darwin was in a delicate position, as he wanted to do justice to Wallace and yet not slight himself. He finally put an abstract of his work and Wallace's an abstract of his work and Wallace's letter into the hands of Sir Charles Lyell, and they were published together.

From the same Highland clan of which Burns wrote "Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled," came this intellectual giant of the nineteenth century... Born-Jan. 8, 1823, at Usk, in Monmouthshire, Alfred Russel Wallace brought to the conflicts of brains the same compativeness his much-sone brought to the conflicts of brains the same combativeness his much-song progenitor brought to the field of arms. His pen was every ready for a joust on almost any topic. Vaccination, whose compulsion he opposed, Socialism, sprittualism, medical or ethical problems—they were all the same to him. He had his own independent ideas about them which he was ready to defend to the last drop of ink.

His immediately famil; was neither wealthy nor important. He had to

With characteristic independence and initiative he later conceived the idea of penetratng the region of the Amazon in a ing the region of the Amazon in a scientific exploration, then a new thing. Into the unknown wilds of South America he plunged with Henry Walter Bates, a learned entomologist, and there they were lost from 1848 to 1852. The resulting book, "Travels on the Amazon and Rip Negro, brought Wallace instant fame. Now a trained naturalist through. Now a trained naturalist, through his own efforts, he fared forth to the Malay archipelago, where he spent what he calls the best and most pro-ductive twelve years of his life in

JAMES ROSS' PICTURES.

Late Capitalist Was An Enthusiasti Collector of Art.

(People who knew the famous head of the Dominion Coal Co. only as a man of busifiess can have little conception of the man's deep and delicate love of art. In his office he was a financial leader, brusque in manner, await in decision, ruthless in attack. The big, shaggy head—truly leonine in claracter—had an air of adamantine resolution about it. There was no room there for sentiment or softness.

But meet him in the beautiful gal-But meet him in the beautiful gal-lery where he had placed his superb collection of great masterpieces, and he was an entirely different man. Then his brusqueness of manner was doffed like a suit of mail laid aside doffed like a suit of mail laid aside at the end of the fray. From James Ross, captain of industry, he became James Ross, art connoisseur. Nor was he argressively "arty," after the stipe of so many connoisseurs. He did not indulge in the lingo of the studios. And he did not launch into long technical disquisitions on the merits and methods of the painters and schools tepresented.

His attitude towards his pictures was one of silent joy in them. Just to see him look at one of them was to understand at one that they were to see him look at one of them was to understand at once that they were to him not mere bits of expensive wall decoration, but the pictorial expression of all the beauty and romance of life. He loved them—that is all. And he loved them too sincerely to the willing to talk much about them. At most he would indicate in a few words his personal liking for explain aspects and moods of ing for certain aspects and moods o the pictures. And he always spok of them as pictures, not as valuable possessions, which had cost a great deal of money—as they undoubtedly had—and lifed probably increased very greatly in value. He regarded them as a loyer of pictures, not as an art dealer.

The writer had the privilege of being shown, by Mr. Toss hinself through his gallery, and so had an opportunity of observing how delightfully this man of affairs could do the opportunity of observing how delightfully this man of affairs could do the honors of such an occasion. His joy in showing, his pictures to those who would, appreciate their beauty—and hardly appreciate his frankness. And what freasures he had to show!—a superb Rembrandt, a great glowing Rubens, Ruysdael's "Storm at Sea," a beautiful pastelle by Millet, one of the finest Raeburns in the world, a couple of Turners full of opalescent light, and a Reynolds marked by all Sir Joshua's characteristic dignity and charm. And these pictures were all perfectly lighted mand hung. The beautiful room was bealittle paradise for lovers of article of the superposition of the Exchange. The rich fund of sentiment and poetic feeling which lies at the base of even the most rugged types of Scotch character welled up. His love of them was really affecting in its utter simplicity and frankness. And though he did not say much about them, his tone was the tone of and though he did not say much about them, his tone was the tone of one who speaks of old and beloved friends.—Saturday Night.

New System Adopted.

Realizing that the demand for farmelp was only half way met the farmers in certain districts of the proince of Ontario have been organiztermed companies to further increas the supply of farm help. The method is for the farmers to club together is for the farmers to club together and share the expense incurred of having an agent in Great Britain secure young immigrants suitable for farm work who are to be sent directly to them. This is a plan which is still in the experimental stages, but those who have tried ft claim that the results are very satisfactory and well worth the expense involved. It is a system which promises to increase in popularity among Ontarlo. crease in popularity among Ontario farmers, and this coming season will probably see it still more extensively adopted.

Although the Dominion Government does much to promote immigration to this country, the plan of assisted passage is left to the Provincial Governments. In this the Ontario Government devotes itself exclusively to farm labor and the domestic classes. mestic classes, Surveys Were True.

On April 5 the heading of the first section of the C.N.R. tunnel from Mt. Royal Heights to the Maple avenue shaft met in Montreal.

So true had been the surveys that the headings were drilled through to such exactitude that they met on the swinging plumb line wire.

The announcement was cheered by an assemblage of Canadian engineers recently in Toronto. Engineer Brown, who recounted the episede, bewed and smilingly remarked that he would have been quite satisfied if they had "met within an inch." Surveys Were True made in connection with the exeavation work now in progress are as follows:

The circuit of the city measured about three miles, and the excavation enclosed an area of about 20 acres larger than Pompeti.

About half the public baths and the basilica, or town half, of the city, have been uncovered, the latter am imposing building, with a nave flopped with tiles in herring-bone fashion, and the aisles with geometrical patterns in mesale. It is about the same length as the basilica at Pompeti, but slightly narrower.

Part of the cemetery has also been dug out, and some interesting tombstones and other objects found; also four houses, evidently large shops, with portices on the street and dwelling rooms at the back.

There has also been uncovered a temple measuring about 95 feet by 55 feet, the entrance of which was under a portled of six columns. It must have been a fine structure, as many well-worked architectural fragments came from it. Portions of several statues, the head of a horse in stone, and parts of two altars were found in it.

The excavators are now uncovering a large building with a portice on the street of 115 feet. This building has already been traced back 200 feet. It contained many rooms, some with rough mosaic pavements and others with cement floors. Four rooms had hypocausts, or hot-sir heating apparatus. In the courtyard was a large, well, built of massive blocks of stone.

The heaviest fall of snow that ever took place in England occurred in 1615. The snow commenced falling on the 16th of January, 1615, and continued every day until the 12th of March following. It covered the earth to such a depth that passengers, both herse and foot, passed over gates, hedges and walls, which had been obliterated by the white sheet. On the 12th of March it began to decrease and so by little and little melted and wasted away till the 28th of May.

A heavy fall occurred in Scotland in 1620, the snow falling thirteen days and nights with little or no intermission. Big Snowfalls. sure of getting it if

The work has already yielded results of extraordinary antiquarian interest, and will, it is expected, greatly add to knowledge of the Roman occupation, and what was happening in Britain at that period.

Urlconium, or Viriconium—the latter was probably the more commonly known form — was situated at the junction of the principal Roman roads, one, from London and the southeast, and Wathing street, and the other passing through Kenchester and Church Stetton, from the legionary fortress of Casrleon in South Wales. There were also other roads leading from it to Chester and Wales, and the town must have formed an important centre in Roman Britain.

Signs of British Occupation.

There is an old saying that if ever the British were to leave India they would leave behind them "a pyramid of empty beer bottles and the Grand Trunk Road." Lord Crewe told recently of a young subaltern who died on a shooting expedition on the Malabar coast, and on whose grave the natives annually deposit a bottle of whiskey, two soda-water bottles, and a paper of cheroots. This is their conception of "something distinctively British, which would keep the spirit quiet."

MACKINLAY, selves were built for scientific purposes, the principal object being their use as immense theodolites to survey the land accurately after the boundary marks had been obliterated by the periodical overflow of the Nile. That they were used for astronomical purposes is also generally believed by those who have studied their construction.
