Dr. Sen Yat Sen, China's First President

Sun Yat Sen, revolutionist in the most conservative land under heaven, fugitive for fifteen years from the keenest and most relentless trailers of men, hidden spirit of strange, secret societies whose ramifications have made mole tracks through every land where Chinamen are this man is now President of the Republic of China by decree of the provisional military assembly at Nankin.

One of the underground passages of plot and intrigue, the nature of which no Occidental could hope to understand, and through which this wiry little man has been wriggling and back tracking for more than a dozen years, a new national figure suddenly jumps to command the attention of the world, says The New York Sun. During years past the world has occasionally caught glimpses of the round, black head and narrow, ascetic features of this Dr. Sen, now in Singapore, now in London, now in San Francisco.

There had been little paragraphs in the world's news about an agitator, a radical, a Chinese red, who seemed to be tilting with straws at the impregnable citadel of the Manchu clan in Pekin. The revolution began in China, and even then when the name of Sun Yat Sen was coupled with it people outside of China cracked jokes about a fakir, a charlatan, who was trying to capitalize the upheaval at home to his own benefit.

Then overnight things happened in China. The next morning the world learned at its breakfast table that out of the welter and uproar of revolution in old China a leader had risen to gird an ancient land under new harness of government.

And also became manifest that the revolution, which had started by concerted movements in the heart of China and spread with the rapidity of a powder train, and the little man who had been dodging and twisting through the world for so many years were one and the same.

Sun Yat Sen started many revolutions.
Each was stronger than the last; each achieved a little more. The final one, striven for and plotted through channels not yet known, has not yet succeeded.
Sun Yat Sen is the man of the hour in China.

Dr. Sen is 43 years now; he was scarcely more than 25 when he began to move for the spreading of a revolutionary spirit in the hearts of his countrymen. Just where he began and with what material nobody but the closest of his associates knows.

It seems that his first idea was for reform through peaceful means, if it were possible for the Chinese people to penetrate the jealous conservatism of the Manchu masters. To this end the little doctor began to organize clubs of advanced thinkers among the young Chinese of the south.

It must have become apparent to the young reformer early in the game that the Chinese could do nothing through peaceful means, for in 1896 he started his first revolution. It was a pitiful failure, badly planned and badly executed.
These are the few facts of the attempt that became known to the foreigners.

One morning a native chapel keeper in Canton received a note from some Chinese requesting the privilege of storing some cement barrels in the cellar of the chapel.

The missionary saw the note about the cement barrels and grew suspicious and carried it to the American Consul. He in turn gave the information to the Vice roy, and troops were sent to the chapel basement.

The barrels in the chapel were found to contain guns and ammunition.
Sun Yat Sen was warned of the failure of his plot in time to permit him to escape aboard a steamer bound for the United States.

Then the first reward was put on his head and his wanderings began. He spent several months in San Francisco preaching revolution to the Chinese in the great colony there; he allied himself with one of the tongs there and through his influence converted the whole secret organization to the creed of revolt.

After the Boxer uprising, which was not at all of Sun's doing, and was entirely out of sympathy with his schemes, the Empress dowager seemed to be bitten by the general sentiment for reform, and she promised much for China that raised the hopes of the new element.

Then the old woman forgot her dreams of reform and laid a heavy hand on all reformers within reach. Once more Sun escaped.

Back he came to America. He found a young graduate of Leland Stanford University, Homer Lee, who was military mad, and incidentally an enthusiast on the subject of freedom for China. Lee was made General of the Reform Cadets who were Chinese youths of San Francisco, fitted out with uniforms and guns, and taught to do the hayfoot-strawfoot in hired halls night after night.

The idea spread to other cities of the United States and to Manila. The reform cadets became a widespread organization. American drillmasters were hired to coach them; they had target practice and they gave exhibition drills.

When the last revolution began Dr.
Sun was in Portland, Ore. He came east first to Chicago then to Washington and New York, his movements could not be traced. He went to London next, and thence by ship to Shanghai.

The new president of China possesses a personality that is puzzling to the Occidental. He has been described by foreigners who have met him as almost commonplace in his appearance, with a thin, tightly stretched countenance over which no flicker of emotion is allowed to pass. His voice is pitched low and is flat and unaccented.—Toronto Globe.

The town council of Ayr, under the terms of the will of Mr. R. H. Smith, plasterer, Ayr, who died about 1888, have just become administrators of an estate of the value of nearly £5,000 for behalf of deserving unmarried women residents of the town. A life interest in the estate was left to two daughters, who have now died. The will provides that preference is to be given to such spinsters as have neither father nor brother alive to aid their support, but on no account shall they be granted more than £20 per annum.

Why it was thought impossible one it is so much nicer so far more satisfying in the grateful fullness of its flavor

In The House Of Domitian.

Interesting Discoveries in the Palace of a Roman Emperor.

Prof. Boni's explorations of the house of Domitian, on the Palatine between the house of Augustus and that of Tiberius, are leading to interesting archaeological discoveries. So far the researches have been limited to the areas of the atrium, or roofed court, with its prolongation, or tablinum, and to the triclinium or dining hall.

In the court a rectangular central piscina with remains of an octagonal basin inside of it has been discovered, while on the walls small niches and low marble pillars have been found, and these were evidently intended for small bronze statues, and figures of birds and animals, which served as ornaments to the fountain. All the marble facing of the piscina has disappeared and only the bricks which supported the marble slabs that covered the sides and bottom of the basins have been found.

The finds in the triclinium consist of a great portion of the pavement in small slabs of precious marbles laid over bricks placed upright so as to prevent dampness from damaging the marble, several large fragments of columns and broken pieces from the walls and ceiling. Evidently the building collapsed owing to an earthquake followed by a fire which completed its destruction. Perhaps some of the sculptures were saved from the ruin, but the building was left as it fell.

In time earth accumulated over it, and the grass grew. Pope Paul III, between 1534 and 1550 laid out the Farnese Gardens over the site where the house of Domitian stood. Two hundred years later the first excavations took place and the archaeologist Bianchini discovered the walls of the court and dining-room covered with rare marbles, which he removed.
He carried away sixteen Corinthian columns of Numidian marble of extraordinary size and excellent workmanship, colossal statues in marble and bronze and other works of art, some of which are in the museums of Naples and Parma.

A gentleman from Carbon asked us,
"Why does the ocean man?" After due deliberation we passed it up as being beyond us. "Because it has crabs on its bottom," is the answer. At one time we had one on our toe while bathing so we don't blame the ocean one blamed bit.—Ex.

The Medieval Kitchen.

It was the middle ages before the kitchen had been raised to the dignity of an established apartment. Strong odors went on in those medieval kitchens. Butchers slaughtered animals there, which were skinned and dressed as well as cooked in the kitchen. The family blacksmith kept his fire there and repaired the plows and wheels of the estate. Coal began to be used as a kitchen fuel in 1245, though not generally for 200 years after. The oven did not come into use until the year 1400, and then it was the old-fashioned brick oven, which persisted for hundreds of years. The stove when invented took the place of the separate oven and fire place, with its hanging pots.

Railway Car Wheels.

Everybody knows how the wheels of a railroad car are fastened to the axle. They are shrunk on—that is, put on hot and allowed to shrink in cooling so that they are practically a solid piece with the axle. These cars run around curves, and it will be observed that the outer rail covers a great deal more ground than the inner one, so that to turn the curves and finish even the outside wheel must of necessity travel considerably faster than the inner one. Yet it is fixed solidly to the axle and cannot make a fraction of a revolution more than the other one, yet the axle remains intact, and the curves are passed with untiring regularity.

An Ungallant Parliament.

All women of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, that shall from after the passing of this act impose upon and betray into matrimony any of His Majesty's male subjects by scents, paints, cosmetics, washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wigs, truss-stays, hoops, high heeled shoes or bolstered hips shall incur the penalty of the laws now in force against witchcraft, sorcery and such like misdemeanors and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void.—An Act of Parliament in reign of Charles II.

Vocation and Avocation.

"Avocation" is one of those unfortunate words that are constantly being used in a wrong sense. Strictly speaking, it refers to something that calls a man away from the ordinary occupation of his daily life. If you earn your living by drafting conveyances and interpreting legal subtleties and also are often seen in leisure hours with a camera in your hand and a dark room at home, then the law is your vocation and photography your avocation.—London Telegraph.

Beauties of Long Island.

A teacher tells me that at a Brooklyn school not long since the class in geography was asked, "What are some of the natural peculiarities of Long Island?" The pupils tried to think, and after awhile a boy raised his hand. "I know," said he. "Well, what are they?" asked the teacher. "Why, said the boy, with a triumphant look, 'on the south side you can see the sea, and on the north side you can hear the sound.'"

Race of Wise Men Found in Africa.

Berlin, Jan. 17. Dr. Nekes, an authority on Africa, has found in the neighborhood of the new German territory surrendered by France a tribe he describes as "the people of the future," assigning to them practically all the civilized virtues as well as the original strength and manliness.

The new nation is a branch of the mighty Fang race called Jaunde. They number half a million now and are rapidly increasing. The whole nation is pushing westward from its native region near the sources of the White Nile.

Dr. Nekes says the people are amazingly intelligent, very powerful physically, and are fond of work and have an astonishingly rich language, in which they can impress in native idiom the most modern things, such as cigars and telephones.

They are divided into three social classes, freemen, freedmen and slaves captured in war. Their religion consists partly of ancestor worship and partly of belief in ghosts. Considering that all evil comes from witchcraft and sorcery. They have witch finders.

Regarding women as the source of all mischief, when a chieftain dies they beat his wife to make sure that they punish the right one. Nekes regards them intellectually on the level of Europeans in the middle ages. He says they have the same fixedness of purpose, unspoiled by modern softness.

Strong efforts are to be made by the German government to persuade this rapidly multiplying people to settle in new German territory, where they will be carefully looked after until they are fully able to provide for themselves.

Does Your Stomach Work Properly.

There is no complaint so humiliating and tiresome as stomach complaint. The reason so many people suffer with their stomach is because they overwork it and do not give it a tonic.

Mi-on-a Tablets will tone the stomach and speedily remove the disagreeable belching (gas on stomach) sour taste and foul breathe. Dizziness, biliousness and headache all disappear when you begin to take Mi-on-a.

Mi-on-a is guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark who will refund your money if they fail to cure or do what we claim. Post paid from The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., on receipt of price 50c.

"I don't want to get my hair wet."
"Why don't you leave it in the bath-house, then?"

THERE ARE EXCEPTIONS.

"Do you believe that seeing is believing?"
"Yes, don't you?"
"Well, I see some people every day that I never could believe."—Catholic Standard.

Looking Forward.
"I hope to see the time when there is no money in politics," said the ardent youth.

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum, gravely, "when that time comes we'll simply have to go into some other business."—Washington Star.

Would Heed the Warning.
"Hortensia," cautioned the mother, "if that young Mr. Lovum were to call on me as he does on you, and were to ask me to kiss him, as he does you, I should show him the door instantly."
"Yes, mamma," replied the dutiful daughter.

After the young man's next call the mother asked Hortensia:
"Did you follow my advice with regard to Mr. Lovum?"
"Yes, mamma. I told him you said if he asked you to kiss him you would show him the door."
"Ah, and what did he say to that?"
"He said he wouldn't ask you to."—Chicago Tribune.

Not Strange.
"There was a strange man at the door just now, mamma, and I don't think he could tell the truth if he tried," said the maid.

"Why, no, do you know, do you know?" asked the strange man, Bridget, replied the old husband.—Yonkers Statesman.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

MANY a man starves himself to death trying to save enough money to keep out of the poorhouse.

The man who doesn't know his own mind needs a woman to introduce him to it.

It is a wise father whose favorite daughter can't twist him around her finger.

The woman who coaxes and cajoles her husband for money would perhaps rather hit him over the head with a club and search his pockets.

The husband of the wise woman is the one who knows that he is boss in his own house.

The only time that we can go sleigh riding is when it is more comfortable to sit by the fire.

It is one of the compensations of life that we can feel so very superior to the talent that entertains us.

Like many another climber, salt pert has risen above its old time friend and consumers.

An Artist's Criticism.
Probably no two artists ever criticised each other more severely than did Fuseli and Northcote, yet they remained fast friends. At one time Fuseli was looking at Northcote's painting of the angel meeting Balaam and his ass. "How do you like it?" asked Northcote after a long silence. "Norrmote," replied Fuseli promptly, "you're an angel at an ass, but an ass at an angel."

Chance For a Hero.

"As the challenged party, you have a right to the choice of weapons."
"I think," said the challenged one timidly, "I will meet him in a pie eating contest."

Explained.
"Why does a woman marry?"
"I don't know. Do you?"
"Certainly. To have a chance to begin every other sentence with 'My husband says.'"
"Oh, I see. Now, why does a man marry?"
"A man?"
"Yes."
"Huh! I thought about that. Why does he?"

WOMEN. Selection of Modern Life is One of Her Highest Ambitions. The woman of today does not have a father or mother to tell her what to do in dress, she does not have to be prepared to hang her full, plain, short skirt or a long, sweeping robe one or a and a striped, hobbles, one—but that she does have to do is to change the color of her kimono to carry out the Japanese idea of fashion. Color is the thing. Her kimono remains the same, but Madam Ninon may be horribly out of fashion if she dons a kimono that is pink when the season's dictator of women's fashions says that she should be wearing violet tones. Another peculiarity of Japanese fashion is that the older a woman of that country becomes the shorter and smaller must be her kimono sleeves.

Japanese women are further advanced socially than they were before the new code of 10 years ago, a condition which has been brought about largely through the difference in the marriage laws. Now divorce can only be reversed through mutual consent. Formerly a man could divorce his wife without any cause whatsoever. According to the present laws there are just two reasons for divorcing a woman—one is unfaithfulness and the other is if she has served a prison sentence of over a year's time.

The girls of Japan are brought up with different ideas of life from those held by girls in America. They are taught that their lives are to hold suffering and care; that whatever there is of happiness is an incident. Marriage is looked forward to as one of woman's duties and as a high service. Therefore she generally accepts her mother's choice of a husband without dissent, for she is brought up to believe that her parents' judgment is best until she is married. This explains why in that country marriages, for the most part, are satisfactory, while divorces are much less frequent than in America. Japanese women concern themselves not at all about politics, for it is not customary for women to know about such matters or to show curiosity about them. Whatever effort they wish to spare from attending the domestic duties is concentrated on philanthropic and educational questions. Domestic duties come first of all, however, for these women take the keenest interest in their home lives, the highest ambition of a wife being to perfect her own in this regard so far as she may be able.

Good at Arithmetic. "For goodness' sake, John, how long did you boil these eggs?" "Just as long as you told me to, my dear." "Impossible! They're hard as bricks." "I boiled them just twelve minutes." "Twelve? Why, I told you that three minutes was long enough for an egg!" "Yes, dear, but I boiled four of them." —Toledo Blade.

Siberia, A Future Rival Of Canada.

Russia's dramatic coup in the Far East by which she has deprived the Chinese Empire of the vast province of Outer Mongolia, will not only add a million square miles of territory and some 3,000,000 people to the Russian sphere of influence, but also means another step forward in the great scheme of Siberian expansion which has occupied the Government incessantly since the war with Japan.

Siberia, Russia's vast hinterland, stretching from the Ural Mountains to the Pacific Ocean, has long recognized as a land of immense potentialities. Once it was the land of the exile. Now it is the land of the emigrant, where the Russian peasant under his own flag may find a new home and new opportunities.

The policy of peopling Siberia received a set back from the war, but immediately peace was declared the Government again turned its attention eastward, and since then the tide of emigration to the east has been constantly increasing in volume.

Today the population of the 4,187,678 square miles comprising Siberia is 8,230,100, or under two people to the sq. miles. When it is pointed out that in European Russia the population averages sixty two persons to the sq. mile it will be understood what vast solitude there remain to be filled.

Riches of Siberia.

In the popular imagination, especially the imagination fed by melo-drama and sensational fiction, Siberia is a desert waste, icebound and snow covered, with salt mines dotted here and there, in which victims of Russian tyranny grind out their lives in daily misery. As a matter of fact it is a country with wide stretches of rich black earth, waiting only for the farmer to become fruitful, with vast hidden stores of coal, iron, silver, and even gold, and with magnificent forests, rivaling in their lumber possibilities the great woolen harvests of the American Continent.

Whether it be soon or late, it is a country destined to play a large part in the production of the world's food supply, and even today, when its development has but begun, it is producing 170,000,000 pounds, a pool equalling 261 pounds of cereals a year, while great flocks of sheep are being reared on its great prairies or steppes.

Despite the evidences on all hands, however, of the possibilities of the country, comparatively little has been done. Its cultivated area is but a patch on the vast tracts of virgin soil, its immense coal deposits have only been scratched; while its timber, in the Amur and Maritime Provinces alone there are 509,000,000 acres of forest land, is still uncut.

Many schemes for the creation of new industries and the exploitation of the vast mineral and agricultural wealth of the country have been put forward, but difficulties in the way have militated against success. The greatest want of Siberia is railways, and now that the Government is realizing this the new era for the country is beginning to open up.

A Matter of Millions.

The first great achievement in this direction was the construction of the Siberian Railway, in which over $700,000,000 was sunk before it was completed. It stretches from Moscow to Vladivostok, a distance of 5,327 miles, every inch, except the last strip across Manchuria, being in Russian territory.

This great achievement was but the foundation, as it were, of the Russian Government's plans for the development of its great eastern possession. Other immense railway schemes have since been projected, and in some cases decided on, involving the expenditure of further vast sums of money.

The great commercial possibilities of Siberia are already being recognized, in Europe, especially in Germany. Since the war the Russian objection to foreign consuls has been withdrawn, and the German government, ever wake to the interests of its trading community, has established consuls in all the important towns along the Siberian railway, while German commercial travellers are already to be found busily selling their wares from one end of Siberia to the other. A few British consuls are also to be found there, but so far the possibilities of the country have been recognized in but a half hearted manner both by the British government and British merchants. British Columbia Women Want Laws Amended.

The Local Councils of Women in Vancouver and New Westminster are co-operating to bring before the Legislature of British Columbia amendments to certain of the laws which they feel to be unreasonable and unjust. Among the laws to which they are endeavoring to secure amendments are those which make it legal for a man to will his property and children away from his wife. They also propose an amendment to the laws with reference to the marriage of minors. At present a girl of twelve years of age and a boy of fourteen years of age may be married, with the consent of the father, and in the event of the father's death, he may appoint a guardian in his will who has the power to consent to the marriage of a girl and a youth of those respective ages. The consent of the mother is not required, and it is this section which the Local Council of Women will seek to amend. They will also endeavor to make it illegal to solemnize a marriage of minors under the age of sixteen, except in exceptional cases. Another phase of the laws is that in the case of desertion, the mother is responsible for the maintenance of the children, yet it is impossible for the father to come and take the earnings of the children if they are employed. Another amendment they will also try to secure is to the inheritance act, so that in the event of no issue, the whole of the husband's property will go to the widow. These are laws with which few people are familiar, and the Council workers do not expect any difficulty in securing these amendments, at least the most of them.

OHIO WOMEN AFTER THE BALLOT.
Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—Following the State mass convention of the anti-alcohol forces yesterday, the advocates of woman suffrage had their innings here to-day. The purpose of the demonstration was to impress upon the members of the Constitutional convention now in session the strength of the popular demand for equal suffrage. Delegates from all over Ohio attended the meeting and applauded the speeches urging the incorporation in the new Constitution of a clause giving woman the franchise.

Electric Power From Grand Lake Coal.

A new Development That is Regarded as Probable.

One of the schemes in connection with the Queens county coal areas which there is reason to believe will materialize very soon, is the supplying of electric power and light. It is figured that the railroads would take all of the screened coal available. Coke ovens will, it is said, be built in which the slack coal will be made into coke. The gas, which is a by-product of the coke ovens, would be utilized for gas engines to drive the necessary dynamos. It is claimed that this system of generating power is cheaper than the hydraulic. It is further pointed out that the Queens county coal areas are within a radical distance of sixty miles of every centre of population in the province. Electric power is now being transmitted twice that distance in Ontario. With this source of cheap power available and a large iron smelting works in St. John the proposition of steel shipbuilding as well as many other important subsidiary industries becomes more feasible.—Globe.

MOTHER ON BENCH, CHILDREN IN SCHOOL.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 25.—The only woman judge on the continent, Mrs. Mabel Van Dyke Bell, to-day, for the first time exercised her judicial functions as a United States Commissioner.

Before going to the Federal Building Mrs. Bell spruced up her two children at home and got them off to school.

Judge Bell wore a white shirt waist, a brown tailor-made skirt and No. 2 shoes. She was bare-headed.

"Your honor," said Attorney Lungefsick, addressing Mrs. Bell in opening the case. She courted and looked very solemn.

Frank Steine was the defendant. He was accused of having seduced the United States mails. Mrs. Commissioner Bell promptly but politely held him in $500 bond for the Grand Jury. He looked pained as politely as he could.

THE DOMINION GRANGE, at its annual meeting in Toronto last week, discussed many matters of great interest to Canadian farmers, manufacturers and consumers generally. The great discrepancies between the prices which the farmer gets for what he has to sell and what the consumer pays to the retailer for these articles were keenly debated, and the retiring President's suggestions for more and better organization among the farmers, and co-operation in the sale of farm products, so as to avoid giving the middleman a big rake-off, were favorably received. That the members of the Grange are as staunchly loyal to reciprocity and the general lowering of tariffs was evident throughout all the sessions. The Grange movement is evidently taking on a new lease of life and activity.—Ex.

THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT knows no such term as "marking time." Its forces have been marshalled, and on Sunday nearly fifty laymen occupied pulpits in and near Toronto, while in hundreds of other places they also were the preachers for the day. Conferences and congresses are being arranged, and as never before in the history of the churches the laymen are taking up the work of seeing that at home and abroad the mission field is adequately covered.
