THE STANDARD.

"THE ALDINE for May is the most brilliant number of this superb magazine ever issued.
It opens with a magnificent marine picture,
"The Lee Shore," by M. R. H. de Haas, who stands by general consent, at the head of the marine painters of America, and who has never done anything so fine as this drawing.
The fury of the winds and waters that have driven the good ship from her course on the terrible lee shore is rendered with wonderful breadth and vigor, and vividly recalls the destruction which so lately overtook the ill-fated "Atlantic." We turn from this dreadful struggle of the elements to a delicious drawing after the original of Monginot. It is entitled "Unbidden Guests," and represents a group of kitchen maids at the table of an epicure and making havoc among the dishes. One, besides the six spirited illustrations of New Chicago; the first, a full drawing, being a noble architectural view of the "New Post Office," a magnificent structure—and the others similar views of the principal public buildings of Chicago as the "Pacific Hotel,"
the "Michigan Southern and Rock Island Passenger Depot," the "Chamber of Commerce," and the buildings of the "Times" and "Tribune" newspapers. Chicago ought to be proud when it sees what it has done for itself,
and what THE ALDINE has done for it, in giving such wide pictorial currency to these monuments of its place and enterprise. There is also an admirable view of "The Druseval,"
a noted fall in Thuringia; and a charming illustration by Dore, imbued with that grace which he knows so well how to infuse into his pictures when the subject demands. These are some of the masterpieces, for such they are, in this monthly gallery of the world's Art.
The Literature of the May number is as good as usual. Miss Lucy Ellen Guernsey contributes an amusing social sketch, entitled
"Mr. Bonnell's Match-Making," and Miss Kate Putnam Osgood a vigorous story of French peasant life, entitled "Pierre's Crime." Mr. W. W. Bailey has a pleasant little essay on "The Flowers of May," Mr. Frank Jacobs a curious paper on "Poe's Early Poems," which are almost unknown; and Mr.
Henry M. Smith tells us all about the rapid rise and growth of "New Chicago." The poems are "How he Saved St. Michael's,"
a ringing ballad of Charleston before the war,
by Mrs. M. A. P. Stansbury, and "May," a dainty little lyric by Mr. Henry Richards.
The editor goes about "The Lee Shore,"
"A Trout Brook," "The Pine Marten," etc., and discusses that important question, "What shall we Name the Baby?" Music, Art, and Literature are discussed with great intelligence and independence. Subscription price, $5 including Chronos "Village Bell" and "Crossing the Moor." James Sutton & Co., publishers, 58 Maiden Lane, New York.

Old Kilborne's Will.

Old Walter Kilborne died and left a fortune that aggregated nearly a million. The gloomy old house which had been the family residence for many a year, stood in one of the down town streets that had once been the site of the fashionable residence of New York city. But the wealthy had long ago removed to the avenues, leaving the old milllionsaire to hold his own among the growing business of the once aristocratic thoroughfare.
A bunch of black crape still hung on the bell
knob, four days after the funeral, when a bent wily looking man pulled it. Being admitted,
he was shown into the dingy room which Mr.
Kilborne had in his life used as an office—
This bent and wily looking man was Lawyer Whittemore.

Good morning, said the lawyer, as Robert,
a grand child of the dead millionaire, a young man who showed plainly enough the marks of rough social usage, entered and extended his hand rather listlessly.

Good morning was the reply. Well.

Will? echoed the lawyer.

You got my note?

Asking me to meet you here? Yes, what do you want?

You drew my grandfather's?

I did, two days before he died.

What were its contents?

I have no right to tell you, and Mr. Whittemore tried to look severe. It is with the Surrogate now, and you will know its contents

on Thursday, when it will be officially opened.

I couldn't think of violating my official—

Not unless you are paid for it, interrupted

the young man. I understand that perfectly well, and will be plain and brief with you—

As you are aware, my father and my cousin

Myra are the only living relatives of my grandfather. We have been brought up here in this house together, and each loves the other as much as possible. Now, I've no idea how the property is left, and I want to know. I am willing to pay for the knowledge in advance of the opening of the will, and you have it to do.

The lawyer assented with a cool nod of his head.

Then name your price, continued Robert.

One thousand dollars.

I haven't so much.

A note for a month will do.

The document was quickly written out,

signed by the young man, and transposed to the lawyer's pocket.

The will, then said Mr. Whittemore, is a strange one—as strange as the man who made it

—but he would listen to no advice, and I had not anything to do but carry out his wishes. He leaves all his property to Myra Kilborne.

D—n him! hissed Robert.

Hold, said the lawyer, until you hear the conditions. He leaves all his property to Myra, as I said before, on condition that she shall immediately sign an agreement to, within a year, become your wife. If she shall decline to fulfill this condition, the property belongs to you. The only other point is that in case Myra is married to anybody

before the will is opened, she gets the property before the will is opened, she gets the prop-

would not be any trouble, because we could get married before Thursday. What shall I do? I wish I had somebody to advise me—
And I can have—a lawyer is what I want.
They are up to all sorts of tricks, so they say.

Without a moment's delay she dressed herself for the street and went out. She knew no lawyer, but walked until she came to a building upon which she had often noticed an array of legal signs. Passing up stairs and selecting a name from the lot that chance to strike her most favorably, she entered a well furnished office. A middle aged, man sat alone writing at a desk.

Is Mr. Temple in? asked Myra.

Yes, said the man, looking up at his pretty visitor, and motioning her to a seat, that is my name.

I have come for some legal advice—some advice on a matter of the greatest importance to me, and—

If I am to do you, said the lawyer kindly,

you must speak frankly and unreservedly,

which you may do in the utmost confidence.

Thus encouraged, Myra told him the whole story of the will, the manner in which she had obtained information, and her feelings in the matter.

Of course, she concluded, I want to retain the fortune, but not at the price stipulated in the will. Can you help me?

Mr. Temple sat for a while in deep thought

—so long in fact, that Myra got fidgety with impatience. At last his face brightened with an idea, and he at once imparted it to his fair client. For an hour they were in close consultation.

That day and the next passed, and Thursday came. The will was to be read in the Surrogate's office; at twelve o'clock, a fearful drove up to the Kilborne residence. In it were Mr. Temple and two of his intimate friends. The former alighted and entered the house. In a moment he reappeared with Myra. She acted a little nervous, but seemed reassured by the presence of the lawyer, who helped her into the carriage, and all were driven away. They proceeded to the residence of a clergyman, where they were evidently expected, as they were shown promptly into the parlor. The reverend gentleman entered, and the lawyer stepped forward with

Myra.

We are the couple sir.

The marriage ceremony of the Episcopal church was performed, a certificate was made

out, the two friends signed it as witnesses,

and the quartette were soon again seated in the carriage.

Drive to the Court House, said Mr. Temple

to the driver.

The Surrogate, the clerk, Robert Kilborne,

Lawyer Whittemore, and a few others were in the surrogate's office when the wedding party entered. It was just twelve o'clock.

The will was read and Robert turned rather superbly to Myra for her decision.

Will you sign the agreement to marry me?

he asked.

No, she replied.

Then you resign the property to me? and

a gleam of triumph shot from his eyes.

No!

That will provide, said Mr. Temple, that she shall take the fortune if married at the time of its opening. She is married to me, and here is the certificate. The ceremony was performed an hour ago.

On the same day proceedings were instituted by Mr. Temple on behalf of Myra to obtain her a divorce from himself. When the divorce was granted, a few days later

Harry returned, and before the day appointed for his marriage to Myra she had obtained her divorce from Mr. Temple. The latter was one of the jolliest of the guests.

If it hadn't been for you—began the grateful bride.

Stop! interrupted Mr. Temple. I am to put it all in my bill. For the will suit, so many dollars; for the divorce suit, so many dollars—you see I am the one to be grateful after all.

But no bill for legal service was ever paid

with greater grace.

MISS DOLLY CORNERED.

I shouldn't be surprised any day, Dolly, to see

David Wiggins tying his horse at your gate, said

Mr. Blount, quietly, gathering up the reins.

Nonsense, brother! anything the matter with your hitching post? retorted Miss Dolly, turning in the doorway.

Mr. Blount laughed. Everybody felt bound to laugh at Miss Dolly's crisp sayings. She had kept her friends in good humor these forty years.

ing with the other down the length of his whip-stock, and lately he's been asking about you. You can put that and that together to suit yourself.

Fiddlesticks! said Miss Dolly, energetically.

I shan't say have him, or don't have him—the

there isn't a likelier man living than David—but I do say, you ought to give him a hearing. And having convinced himself beyond a reasonable doubt that the whip was all right, Mr. Blount ticked his sleepy horse with it, and drove away.

Oh, my sorrows! ejaculated Miss Dolly, closing the door with an afflicted countenance, and sitting down so quietly for once that a photographer

might have copied her then and there.

Not that he could have done her justice, for her expression was too quick and varied to be caught

by any trick of chemicals, and without it Miss

Dolly's physiognomy would have been rather characterless but for her prominent Roman nose.

Thiogagan gave tone to her face. By which I would not be understood literally, as saying that she talked through it in a nasal whine. I mean simply that in a metaphorical sense this bold feature spoke loudly of energy. And Miss Dolly had always had abundant need of energy—else why

the dose?

Every two years during her childhood she had been tipped into the east bedroom to see a new baby, till, at her mother's death, five little brothers fell for her charge to be coaxed and scolded into manhood.

You can't bring up them boys, croaked a dolorous aunt. They'll run square over you, Dorothy Almeda.

Dorothy Almeda was Miss Dolly's baptismal

name, but it was so manifestly too big for her

that most of her friends would as soon have thought of labeling a tiny homeopathic vial with a quack-medicine advertisement as of calling her

by it.

Let 'em run over me so long as it doesn't hurt

'em! laughed Miss Dolly, skewering her waxen

hair with a goose-quill, and tying a tow apron over her calico long-sleeved, preparatory to "bringing up

said youths.

From that day forward she went cheerily on,

making the best of every thing, though it must be confessed, she often had frowns and ends to work with, as people usually do have who are born with a faculty. Somehow she found time for all her duties excepting matrimony. If that were a duty, it was one she couldn't and wouldn't attend to

while her father and the children needed her.

Divers young men thought this a great pity, among them David Wiggins.

Don't be silly, David, said Dolly, when he hated as much to her, whereupon David went off

straitway and married Olive Searle, the plainest

girl in the parish. This happened thirty years ago, and now David was again wifeless, and again

the current of his thoughts turned toward Miss

Dolly, who still lived at the old homestead near the foot of Bryant's Falls. Her father had died some months before. Of the boys, James and Esau had settled on neighboring farms, and the remaining three were in the West. David's benevolent heart warmed with compassion as he remembered Dolly's lonely condition, and he felt that it would be exceedingly kind in him to offer

her a home, especially as he owned as good a place

as you'd find on the river, while the Blount cottage was fast falling to decay. He wouldn't let her former refusal of him tell against her, for

now he looked back, he really didn't see how she could have married any body at that period. She ought to be rewarded for the devotion she had shown to the family, and for his part, he felt magnanimous enough to give her a second

she darted into the kitchen to lift the boiling kettle from the crane.

But you don't mean that you won't marry me, Dolly? pleaded Mr. Wiggin, anxiously, following to the door. I've been looking on you at the head of things in my house.

Martha is a grand manager, said Miss Dolly coolly. Devil needsn't think he can buy me with a set of new buildings! asked she mentally, snapping down the lid of the pug-nosed tea-pot. I never did have the name of being croaking!

I tell you, Dolly, I won't have Martha; I don't like her turn! cried Mr. Wiggin testily, balancing himself on the threshold, yet not daring to step over it.

Miss Dolly gave her undivided attention to winging the hearth.

You know you was always the woman of my choice, Dolly, pursued Mr. Wiggin, as tenderly as he could consistently with the distance between them. And we were both young—

Yah! snapped Miss Dolly, scorching her wing; that's beyond the memory of man!

Mr. Wiggin's position was becoming painful. Evidently he had not touched the right cord as yet. Miss Dolly was not to be won by the attractions of wealth and position, nor even by tender allusions to the past. He would appeal to her kindness of heart.

I used to believe you had some feeling, Dolly, said he, tremulously; but you don't seem to have any for me. Here I am left alone in the world, children all paired off 'thout Matilda, and she'll go before the snow flies; house empty—

I suppose you can have a home with any one of your boys, and welcome, put in Dolly, faintly, still fluttering about the chimney like a swallow.

Yes, it worse comes to worst, I suppose I can, assented Mr. Wiggin, mournfully, anything but consoled by this reflection. It would break me down terribly, though, you may depend, to give up my place that I set so much by, and crowd myself onto my children.

No response save the clattering of the tongs.

And it's dreadful melancholy business for a man at my time of life to drag along without a partner. I'm getting to be old, Dolly. Mr. Wiggin brushed his sleeve across his eyes as a feral school-boy might have done. Yes, I'm getting to be old, Dolly, he repeated, brokenly; and it stands to reason that I haven't many years to live; but I did hope we might go down hill together, Dolly, you chirk me up with that airy way of yours that I always took to, and I carryin' the best of—

Here Miss Dolly gave a little sniff, nothing worth mentioning only for the effect it produced on Mr. Wiggin.

Can't you make up your mind to have me, Dolly? pleaded he, crossing the threshold in his hopeful eagerness. I don't see how I'm going to stand it if you can't.

Then Martha wouldn't suit? said Miss Dolly, archly, making a great pretense of wiping a cinder from her eye. What a shame, now, when she needs the property so much!

Hang the property! I'd mortgage the whole of it rather than not get you, Dolly! cried Mr. Wiggin, with a vehemence that quite closed her mouth.

And so at last he had Miss Dolly cornered. And it need scarcely be added, she became Mrs. Wiggin.

SUFFERINGS AT SEA.—The White Star steamer Tropic, which arrived at Montevideo on the 25th of February, homeward bound, had on board the captain and two other survivors of the British bark Elwell, who had undergone the most dreadful hardships during ten weeks in an open boat, until picked up in Magellan's Straits by the Tropic. The bark J. W. Elwell was of St. John's, New Brunswick, the property of Messrs. J. B. Troop and Co., and had a cargo of coal from Cardiff for Valparaiso, being a fine new vessel with a ship's company of 15, including the captain. After doubling Cape Horn the ship was discovered to be on fire from spontaneous combustion of the coal, and during five days the captain vainly tried to put out the flames or make progress towards some Chilean port, two of the sailors dying from over exertion or perhaps partly suffocated by the smoke. On the 6th or 7th of December they had at last abandoned the ship, which went down a few hours after they had left her. They were then some hundreds of miles in the Pacific ocean, distant from the nearest land. The captain had time before leaving the burning ship to procure 10 days' provisions, and then got into the boat with his 11 officers and sailors and the stewardess, the latter being the cook's wife. The westerly winds favored his making the Straits of Magellan, where he expected to fall in with some steamer going through. Unfortunately the rudder had got broken when leaving the ship, and, heaving a sail, the captain did his best to steer with an oar. Rain, hail, and snow were almost continuous both before and after reaching the mouth of Magellan's Straits, and the sufferings of the men were so dreadful that they began to succumb one after another, the survivors committing the corpses to sea.

It is impossible to describe the adventures and privations of these poor people in wet clothes for weeks together, and trying to obtain sustenance from mussels on the rocks of the islands. At times they ventured ashore for fresh water, regardless of the danger of meeting Fuegians. When all Captain Wren's companions but two had perished he still resolutely pushed through the numerous reefs for the main channel frequented by steamers, hoping eventually to be picked up before the little remaining strength was gone. The stewardess seems to have been a woman of remarkably strong constitution; she had now survived all but Captain Wren and the one remaining sailor. The steamer Tropic which had been detained five days by adverse weather from entering Magellan's Straits on the Pacific side, had come about 50 miles through the Straits when she saw a boat containing two men and a woman, who signalled for help, and were promptly taken on board, after 71 days spent in the boat. Captain Wren, his sailor, and the stewardess speak in the highest terms of the kindness shown them on board the steamer. As soon as Mr. W. D. Evans, the ship purveyor of Montevideo, heard the melancholy details he sent off a complete outfit for each of the survivors, who left the same evening in the Tropic for England. "If I can lie men" (say the Montevideo correspondents of the Buenos Ayres Standard) "could be seen some means of guarding against such cases of coal combustion on sea as we have just recorded, it would be a great service. No fewer than 20 vessels, with 4000 crew, have perished in this manner since our cruise within the last few years. It is only two years ago since the survivor of three vessels belonging to the same owners entered this port with the crews of the others (the Tapley) and was then scuttled to put out the coal fire under the hatchways."

LAUNCHED at Robinson, on the 25th inst., a beautifully modelled and thoroughly fastened vessel, which on entering her future element was called the "Nellie Clark," of about 226 tons carrying measurement. She was built by Mr. James Starkey, and is said by competent judges to be the best built vessel ever launched on these waters, and from her model will be a fast sailer. Capt. Nelson Clark is to be her commander.

The Examination of the Public Schools is taking place to-day. We will have something to say next week with reference to the studies and progress made by the pupils.

CHURCH STREET.—We trust the Commissioner of Streets, will have the street granted by all Saints' Church Corporation, in the old church block, graded and gravelled. In its present state it is unfit for vehicles or pedestrians.

ST. ANDREWS CHURCH CLUB.—The first regular meeting for this year, was held on Thursday evening last. Several new members were elected, and arrangements made for practice during the season. The following officers were elected for the year, viz:—

W. B. Morris, President; Thos. Williams, Secretary; E. Lee Street, Treasurer; C. M. Sills, Captain; T. H. Street, 2nd Captain.

Committee of Management.—Thos. Williams, E. Lee Street, C. M. Sills, T. H. Street, Elmer Stinson.

PROPERTY SALE.—The cottage and lot on Queen St., belonging to the estate of the late Richard Longmuir, was sold at auction on Saturday last, and purchased by Mr. Michael Clark, of the Railroad Hotel. This adds very materially to his property, as he has now a frontage on Water and Queen Streets.

The Surveyor General arrived in town on Saturday evening, and leaves again to-day. His arrangements for the reception of the Scotch emigrants are completed, and the Government has fulfilled every pledge they made. The clearing has been made, and houses erected. The "Daily News" and other St. John papers state that arrangements are being perfected to give the Scotch emigrants a right hearty reception.

Street Commissioner Hipwell has his men engaged in clearing out the water tables and repairing the streets, which are now as dry in most parts of the town, as in midsummer.

The recent Indian troubles in the States, where Gen. Canby and Dr. Thomas, the peace commissioners were brutally murdered by the Modoc under Capt. Jack, was it appears only the counterpart of similar conduct on the part of the whites who had been guilty of the same conduct three or four times—facts which account for the Indian hatred of the whites. The Indians are described as entirely peaceable, notwithstanding the murder in that part of the country had threatened to murder them. Capt. Jack, their commander, is described by the originator and chairman of the Board of Indian Commissioners, Mr. Walsh, as a full blooded Indian, as honorable a man as could be found, and speaks English well. The members of Congress from that region, and Commissioner of Education from Oregon, also testify as to the honorable character of the man. It is believed that there must have been some special cause of excitement, which led to the outbreak. Still such inhuman conduct should be punished.

SIR HENRY THOMPSON ON ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.—Sir Henry Thompson, the eminent surgeon, has addressed a letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, in which he says he has long had the conviction that there is no greater cause of evil, moral and physical, in England than the use of alcoholic beverages. "I do not mean by this," he adds, "that extreme indulgence which produces drunkenness. The habitual use of fermented liquors to an extent far short of what is necessary to produce that condition, and such as is quite common in all ranks of society, injures the body and diminishes the mental power to an extent which I think few people are aware of. Such at all events, is the result of observation during more than twenty years of professional life devoted to hospital practice, and to private practice in every rank above it. Thus, I have no hesitation in attributing a very large proportion of some of the most painful and dangerous maladies which come under my notice, as well as those which every medical man has to treat, to the ordinary and daily use of fermented drink taken in the quantity which is conventionally deemed moderate." Sir Henry therefore rejoices to observe an endeavor to organize on a large scale in the national Church a special and systematic plan for promoting temperance. "My main object," he says, "is to express my opinion as a professional man in relation to the habitual employment of fermented liquor as a beverage. But if I ventured one step further it would be to express a belief that there is no single

SAINT ANDREWS, APRIL 30, 1873

St. Andrews Hotel Company.

A meeting of the Hotel Company was held last evening at the Town Hall. Several influential stockholders were present. The President in the Chair. The Secretary read the Report of the Directors which went fully into the affairs of the Company. We have only space to notice a few items. The total amount subscribed exclusive of the Town Stock was $8,322.00.

Amount collected 6,626.15
Balance still due 2,395.85
The Town Bonds sold, realized 4,300.00
Total cash received 10,322.59
Amount expended 13,688.86
Cash in hand 2.80
Amount due Directors 2,869.27
Do Labour and material 684.12
Leaving unsecured liability 1,254.54

The estimate prepared of the amount required to complete the building ready for furniture is $7,000, which with the unsecured debts make a total of $3,500.

There would be no difficulty in obtaining a person to rent the Hotel.

A resolution was passed that $7,000 of unsecured stock be issued as preference stock, to bear interest at 6 per cent. to be payable out of rents of hotel on such terms as the Directors may determine. Want of space prevents our giving a full report as we could wish; but we are happy to state, that a favorable disposition is manifested to carry on the work to completion, and that the Directors are entitled to all praise for their liberality and exertions.

ADVANCED SALARIES.—It was intimated some months ago, that the salaries of the various public officers in the Dominion were to be advanced, and in accordance with this statement, Sir John A. Macdonald has given notice in Parliament to that effect; the Judges, Governors, Members of the Senate and House of Commons, and Civil Servants of the Dominion are to have their salaries increased. It is somewhat remarkable, that the Ministers of the Crown, holding office, are not included among the number! Have they not proved themselves efficient and able men, and are they in a condition to uphold their position, and extend that hospitality which Ministers of the Crown should do. Is it right or proper, that they receive a salary less than one-fourth of that given by joint-stock companies to their managers or chief clerks? Surely not. Parliament and the people would cheerfully accord an advance; and the financial propriety of the country would warrant it; and in justice to those gentlemen it is to be hoped they also will receive an increase of salary.

The large building purchased by the Trustees of Schools, is being enlarged and altered, and several modern improvements introduced, under the direction of Mr. Angus Stinson. The foundation walls are rapidly going up, and a handsome projecting entrance has been erected, giving the building an imposing appearance, and also answering for cloak rooms. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupation after the summer holidays.

habit in this country which so much tends to deteriorate the qualities of the race, and so much disqualifies it for endurance in that competition which in the nature of things must exist, and in which struggle the prize of superiority must fall to the best and to the strongest."

THE BELFAST RIOTS.—Judge Lawson is still engaged in trying the cases arising out of the Belfast riots, last August. Two men who had compelled an inhabitant of Lesson street, Belfast, to leave his house and go to another district, were sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.

THE INK PLANT.—Botanists are engaged in planting in Europe a new plant imported from New Grenada, which, if grown successfully, will be a formidable rival to our many-factured ink. It is known as "Coriaria Thymicola," or ink-plant. The juice which escapes from it has been given the name of "Changi," and is a little red in color, but in the space of a few hours after exposure to the air turns to an intense black. This liquid does not corrode steel pens as the ink in ordinary use, resists chemical substances, and will preserve its intensity for many years.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC WORKS.—Improvements of the River St. Croix $25,000
Herring Cove 12,000
Grand Manan Harbour 5,000
Breakwater, Wilson's Beach 4,000
(The local authorities furnishing an equal amount)

We are safe in stating, that the above amounts have been secured through the influence of the Minister of Finance, the Hon. Mr. Tilly.

CURE OF INSURABLES.—There is in the States an association for the cure of insurables. It has been in operation for about three years, and held its last annual meeting a short time ago. The members seem from their speeches on that occasion, to be very sanguine of the success of their efforts, and the reports from the various institutions established for the cure of drunkards appear to give them good ground for their hopefulness. In the New York asylum at Binghamton, the average number of patients during the year was 84. Of the 256 discharged during the course of the year, all were more or less educated. As many as 58 were merchants, 17 lawyers, 35 clerks, 16 book-keepers, 10 doctors, and 8 bankers and brokers. Almost all use tobacco in one form or another, which aggravated the evil; and as many as 125 had had intemperate parents. The average age of the patients was 34. In the vast majority of cases, the treatment pursued resulted in a permanent cure; only the usage of society throw a very strong temptation in the way of reformed inebriates when they come back from their retreat.

HOMERULE AND TENANT RIGHT.—Home Rule in Ireland is likely to be supplemented by renewed agitation on the question of tenant's rights. At a recent meeting in Queen's county, resolutions were passed in favour of "perpetuity of tenure, valuation of rents and free sale, as the only just settlement of the land question." The laws of primogeniture and entail were also condemned, and a call made on "the people of three kingdoms to re-claim gavel right candidates at the approaching general election" and "on the Irish people to paralyze at all times the efforts of representatives to consult together and vote together as Irishmen on every question of domestic interest, without reference to considerations of English party." Home Rule was recognized as the great central idea of Irish action; but, at the same time, the rights of tenants were pushed into the foreground as matters for agitation and decided action.

MRS. GLADSTONE.—The wife of the British Premier, according to a London correspondent, is an estimable churchwoman, but sadly lacks the social tact necessary to a person in her position. Distrust at all times, she is the cause of greater offence against etiquette than any one in London. Mrs. Gladstone is fond of telling how, on one occasion, in order to refresh her husband's memory, Mrs. Gladstone wrote on a card, which she placed in the frame of a conspicuous mirror: "Don't forget to invite those horrid Smiths," and how the "horrid Smiths," as well as Mr. Gladstone had the exquisite delight of reading the endearing epithet of the frank husband.

A JUVENILE INSURRECTION IN ENGLAND. A little incident of recent occurrence causes the "Pall Mall Gazette" to remark that few greater tribulations could befall England than an insurrection of boys. It seems that 400 lads belonging to ships of war were on their way by train from Plymouth to London. On reaching Exeter some 200 of them left the station and ran to the public houses in the neighborhood, where they remained until the train had started for London. On getting back to the station, they insisted upon proceeding by the express train. They engaged the policemen and the porters, and after a free fight with the railway officials generally, actually got possession of the carriages, and so carried their point.

COMMERCIAL PANIC.—Professor Jevons, a distinguished English statistician, has been writing a letter to the Manchester Guardian, in which he alludes to a predicted commercial crash, and says:—"There can be little doubt that the crises in the money market might be much mitigated if not avoided, were merchants and bankers accustomed to look not so much to the immediate accidents of the day as to the general tendencies and laws which may be detected by an investigation of past events. It may now be regarded as a well-established truth, which we owe in a great degree to the able enquiries of Mr. W. Langton and Mr. John Mills, that disturbances in the money market are more or less strictly periodic, and that the great crises tend to recur after intervals approximating to ten years. Now, the last great crisis occurred in 1866, and the previous one in 1857, so that we are still three or four years short of the time when we should expect a real collapse. However extensive may be the fixation of capital which is going on, and however illegitimate the speculation which is springing up, yet the bubble will probably bear a good deal of expansion yet before it bursts.

PRUSSIAN EXCLUSIVENESS.—Social position in Prussia would appear to be restricted wholly to the well-borne and military officers. However intelligent, and however wealthy, no one, unless nobly born, can rise in the social scale. This disgusting large numbers of the intelligent and of those who have made themselves wealthy by their industry, and must tend to lessen that support to the throne which otherwise they are inclined so cheerfully to give.

LOCK ON THE BANKS.—Icebergs on the Newfoundland banks seem to have made their appearance unusually early this year. Almost every steamer arriving from Europe reports passing these huge and dangerous monsters. The steamship Dogfishland, which arrived at New York on Monday last, from Bremen and Southampton, reports passing on the 15th instant, at midnight, on the Banks, no less than twenty two bergs in close proximity to each other.

The "Daily News" of the 23rd says:—"The river is now clear of ice. This morning the steamers 'David Weston,' of the Union Line, and the 'Rhesus,' of the Express Line, will leave Indiantown for Fredericton at 9 o'clock. Yesterday there was a considerable quantity of ice on the eastern side of the river about Long Island, but not enough to impede navigation."

WORDLY GRIEF.—It is said that the following letter was written to a lady by a bereaved and stricken widow in Durham:—"Our loss is night, congregation of the lungs. Our loss is his gain, I will join him on the other shore—I have ordered the choicest masher for the funeral, made with palm-rose and trimmed with real point lace. Loss covered by insurance, on ten years plan; will be paid in sixty days. I know you sorrow with me. We had four doctors, at two dollars a visit. Aunt Maria will not go into mourning, because she has just bought her fall and winter things. Her bonnet is straw. There is hair in Gilead, but my heart is nearly broken. Send me a cut paper pattern of that sequence of yours. Yours, SARAH."

H. W. BEECHER says: "I consider myself Calvinistic you know, and in this way: I believe what John Calvin would have believed if he had lived in my time, and seen things as I see them; my first desire is to know what is true, and then I am glad if John Calvin agrees with me; but if he don't so much the worse for him."

The Panama "Star and Herald" of February 16 contains an account of a marine animal, resembling in many respects the celebrated "sea-serpent" of the Northern Atlantic, which was seen from the deck of the steamer "Guayana" a few days before, when off the Pearl Islands, in the Bay of Panama. Its head was like that of a sea-horse (Hippocampus), and its length, estimated from the undulations of its body as they appeared above the water, was about twenty-five feet.

Capt. N. K. Clements had his leg broken while going on board his steamer "Linda" on Saturday night.

Some of the Danish emigrants have cleared out to the United States. Ungrateful fellows.

DEED.—At Bay Side, on the 24th instant, Mr. Peter Mowat, aged 23 years, fifth son of Capt. John Mowat, deservedly respected by all who knew him.

GONE!
Gone! yes he's gone, with no word of endearment,
Without a regret, or a tear, or a sigh,
No tender speeches to serve as a cement,
Embalming dead love with a soft spoken lie;
A word and a look—farewell, and they parted,
The fabric of years was dissolved in an hour;
Life is a blank to a girl broken hearted,
No warmth in the sunshine nor bloom on the flower.

Sad little heart,—no your hopes are all blighted;
Ah! trample out boldly the smouldering flame,
Think not again it can e'er be ignited,
That love unto you can be never the same!
Doubtless you'll love with a feeble sensation,
Regard on the ruins of love may be built,
Brilliant had ever a paste imitation,
Gold oft replaced by some base metal,—gilt.

Wearily gazing, like one who is dreaming,
Her deep grief yet trying to stifle with sighs,
Sad, bitter tears will be presently streaming
From sorrowing depths of those violet eyes.
Is man so noble, so priceless a treasure?
Or hearts of fair girls merely toys for the vain?
To love or to lose, or to break them at pleasure,
Like glittering trinkets you wear on your chains?

Gone! yes he's gone, though the birds go on singing,
Whist dreamily flutter the fast falling leaves,
'Tis over! yet still merry voices are ringing,
And reapers yet binding the bright golden sheaves.
Still the clear tide, where they wandered together
Flows on, though its color is changed to a moon
The same, but how changed is the bright sunny
weather
To one left down,—stricken and weeping alone.

Gone! yes he's gone, and she'll nourish her sorrow
In silence, and sharpness will dwell in her breast,
Sadness, as weary to-day as to-morrow,
The same mocking dreams were haunting her rest.
Man, in his anguish may publish his sadness,
And brazen it out by the force of his will,
To woman, 'tis given to laugh in her gladness,
To suffer in silence—to weep and be still.

Why the Valve Jar is Superior to all Others for Preserving Fruit.

1. Because it is the only one in which the contents can be securely fastened, and cooked while thus fastened, without risk of an explosion.
2. It is the only one that is Automatically Sealed, therefore, the only Self-Sealing Jar in the market.
3. It is so simple that no skill is required to use it successfully.
4. It is securely fastened when placed in the kettle, and being immersed, the fragrance of the contents is confined in the Jar, a more perfect vacuum produced and the handling of the hot jars entirely avoided.
5. It is well known that fruit jars which are closed with rigid fastenings burst by fermentation, and the effect upon the closet and surrounding walls is understood by many housekeepers.
The Cover of the Valve Jar being a perfect safety valve makes an explosion impossible, and entirely obviates every difficulty that exists in other fastenings.
