The conditions of the armistice are inspired by the principles of President Wilson, i.e., to render it impossible for the enemy to continue the war, and to prevent him from profiting by the armistice to withdraw from a difficult military situation.

UNITY PREVAILS AT VERSAILLES MEETING

Utmost Harmony Marks the Discussions at Supreme War Council.

Paris, Nov. 2. — Premier Lloyd George and the other Allied prime ministers now in Paris, together with Col. E. M. House, met again informally this morning. There were no definite indications today when their conferences would be finished.

London, Nov. 2.—The Express claims to be able to state that there is the most complete unity and cordiality at the Versailles conference where the delegates are quite agreed as to how Germany and Austria are to be treated. No differences on points of principle have developed, the newspaper says, and whatever hopes Germany may have had of discord among the Allies regarding an armistice will be completely dissipated.

Official circles believed last night that the conference would issue a statement in a day or two. It is known that the conference has put terms for Germany into something like final shape. They include stern naval guarantees. It is also definitely known that General Diaz received from Versailles the conditions to be imposed upon Austria.

DEMONSTRATIONS OF JOY MARK LIBERATION OF ITALIAN PEOPLE

Singing Is Heard Along the Canals of Venice for the First Time in Two Years—Thousands Are Returning to Repossess Their Homes.

Italian Headquarters East of the Piave, Nov. 2.—(By the Associated Press).—Italian troops continue to advance. The fighting along this front is but one continuous skirmish.

An unusual incident took place when Sacile was occupied. Because the English were unable to speak Italian, Arnondo Fraccaroli, a newspaperman, led the English across the Livenza River into the town. One of the last acts of the retreating Austrians was to shoot a woman who was attempting to cross the river to reach the British troops. The latter punished the Austrians severely as the enemy was retreating from the city. The joy of the inhabitants over their liberation is extravagant. It is said that they picked up bulletins scattered broadcast by airplanes, instructing the straggling troops of the 10th army to continue the advance, and remained up all night reading and re-reading the little sheets and waiting for the first signs of the approaching Allied troops.

In Padua and Verona, the street cars are covered with banners of Allied colors. There are demonstrations of joy in St. Mark's Place in Venice, and singing is heard along the canals of that historic city for the first time in two years, as on trains, highways and electric cars the refugees flow back to Venice and the other cities along the front.

Military roads across the Piave are thronged with people arriving from all points of Italy to repossess their hmeos. Mayors of cities on the Venetian Plain are returning.

LIBERATED ITALIANS CHEER THEIR KING.

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Friday, Nov. 1.—More than a thousand square miles of Italy's invaded provinces have been reconquered in the past week's fighting, but the greatest importance of the daring movement conceived by Gen. Diaz is his success in separating the Austrian army occupying the Monte Grappa and Trentino regions from that on the Venetian plain. At the same time he is threatening the Austrian contingents holding the section southeast of the Piave which may be enveloped or cut off by the Italians advancing toward Pordenone.

King Victor Emmanuel is always the first to share the danger with his troops. He divides his time between the Monte Grappa region and the section east of the Piave. His appearance always causes outbursts of enthusiasm. When recognized by his men they shout to him: "Viva, the soldier king!"

When liberated populations, with tears in their eyes, surround his automobile they shout: "Viva, our liberator!"

Amsterdam, Nov. 1.—German authorities have been notified by the Dutch Government that after today no refugees will be permitted to cross the Belgian-Netherlands frontier.

AUSTRIA FORCES ARE FLEEING FROM UDINE AND VENETIAN PLAIN

Rome, Nov. 2.—The Austrians are fleeing from Udine, about 50 miles east of the Piave, according to reports received here. They have abandoned a great quantity of war material in the region of Udine, which was Italian headquarters before the 1917 retreat.

The destruction of the Austrian armies continues apace along a front of 125 miles. On every sector of the long front the enemy is giving way before the smashing blows of the Allies.

When the Fadalto Pass was taken the way was opened to Belluno and the Austrian armies were separated. Simultaneously the 4th Italian army renewed its fierce attack in the Monte Grappa region so as to hold there the nine divisions and reserves between Feltre and Fonzaso, endangering both points. The Quero-Feltre Pass was captured, and the enemy is falling back, not attempting to defend himself.

In the Trentino the Austrians are seeking safety through the valleys of the heavy mountainous region around Trent. East of the Piave, the Austrians are retiring precipitately toward the Tagliamento, especially hard pressed by the Duke of Aosta's army on the south.

TEAM WORK IS SHOVING TOTAL SKYWARDS NOW

Wonderful Victory Loan Organization Begins To Count.

KHAKI LADS LEAD YET

Middlesex Is "Going Strong," Though Returns Are Slow—District Cities Hard at It.

Slowly but surely London's wonderful organization for the Victory Loan is beginning to count. Friday's total reached $226,250, making a grand total of $3,388,950 so far. The salesmen are going out today determined to make Saturday the biggest day yet. They are after $300,000, and they won't be happy unless they get it.

As on Thursday, the military men set the pace. The soldier total has now attained the respectable amount of $147,200 for 824 applications. Chairman George Reid and his organizers, J. A. G. Clark and Norman Tovell, are particularly pleased with the men in khaki The $1.10 a day experts apparently know how to save money.

Farmers Buying Readily.

"The Middlesex farmers, those who have been canvassed, are buying bonds readily," stated G. E. Cork, organizer for the county, last night. Our total so far is $275,200 for 669 applications. You must remember that we are from a day to a day and a-half behind in our figures, owing to the slowness of the rural mail. Although we are some $17,500 ahead of our returns last year at this time, yet owing to our increased objective we are really behind. This is partly due to 'the flu.' A number of our canvassers have been unable to do much work on this account, but we expect that next week will see our organization in good running order. Friday's mail brought us $98,550 in applications, of which we had 204. The average so far is about $500."

"What message have you got for the public tonight, Mr. Reid?" asked The Advertiser reporter of the busy chairman, as he and Mr. Clark were busy going over the day's grist.

Double Up! Double Up!

"Double up, double up, double up," roared the head of the London drive as he thumped the desk till it shook. "I tell you the people can't turn the country down. It needs the money, has got to have it; and we're here to see that Canada gets it, and the only way we are going to get it is by the people doubling their subscriptions and the canvassers doubling their efforts. I feel, though, that next week that we will have much better results. The people seem to be getting over 'the flu,' and will be able to turn their thoughts toward the Loan. We should make the fur fly the next few days, especially after a rest Sunday."

TRIAL FOR CRIVEA.

SOLDIERS' CENTRAL WELFARE BUREAU IS NOW IN OPERATION

Will Be Clearing Depot for All Charitable Work.

The formation of a central bureau for receiving and filing the names and addresses of soldiers or their dependents who received help, or will be receiving help, from the various civic organizations interested in their welfare was decided upon at a joint meeting of representatives of such organizations yesterday afternoon in the offices of the local branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, Royal Bank Building.

This is to avoid the overlapping which has been going on since these institutions started their work. Adjt. McDonald of the Salvation Army stated that he knew of one person in Ottawa, who, last Christmas, when the dinners were being distributed to the poor, had received parcels from nine different institutions, and that he had heard of persons who had received even more than nine charitable donations.

Had Clearing Depot.

The Salvation Army had a clearing house in Ottawa for some time, and found it the only way to overcome this trouble. He was of the opinion that London was badly in need of one at the present time. Some persons who had relatives in the army were far better off now than they ever were before, and still they were looking for assistance, he said.

Rev. Byron Snell, who represented the social service council at the meeting, did not think that he should be included among the workers of the bureau, as he is only secretary of the local branch of a Dominion-wide organization.

Considerable discussion took place when it was considered whether they would ask the city for a part of the appropriation made for charities, and take full charge of helping the soldiers, or have the citizens make donations to the soldiers' aid commission. It was decided to leave the matter over till next meeting, which will be held in about three weeks.

Use Filing System.

For the present a filing system will be installed in the ofices of the soldiers' aid commission, where this and all other organizations will be able to get reports on families of soldiers requiring help. All organizations are also requested to send in a list of the names of the families which they are assisting to Ed H. Lance, who was named secretary of the soldiers' central welfare committee, under which name the bureau will work.

The following were present at the meeting.

Salvation Army—Adjutant Sharpe and Adjutant McDonald.

Soldiers' Aid Commission—Mrs. F. F. Lawrason, Mrs. H. T. Edwards.

Great War Veterans' Association—J. W. Cunliffe, J. MacGuire, Lieut.-Col. W. G. Coles.

Soldiers' Wives' League—Mrs. A. A. Campbell and Mrs. G. W. Nelson.

The Great War Veterans' Association will add their weight to the general protest, owing to the fact that 600 of their number are employed by the Government in Ottawa. The average salary of the latter is $900, or less than the street cleaners' wages, as a civil servant pointed out.

ONE OF EARLIEST OF PAISLEY'S SETTLERS DEAD AT HIS HOME

PAISLEY, Nov. 1.—John Fraser, one of the earliest settlers of this district, and a well-known and highly respected resident, died last evening at his residence, Victoria street, after an illness of more than two years' duration.

Mr. Fraser was born 76 years ago in Belleville, and in 1854 came to Bruce County with his older members of the family, and were the first settlers to take up land in that fertile section of Saugeen Township, near Dumblane, where Mr. Fraser continuously resided until twelve years ago when he retired from the farm to Paisley, engaging in cattle and hog business. Two years ago he had a stroke of paralysis to which he gradually succumbed.

In religion Mr. Fraser was a Presbyterian, and all his life had been prominently identified with the Liberal party.

Mr. Fraser married Miss Jane Hanna who survives him, with four sons and one daughter, James in Winnipeg, Edward and Clarence, farmers in Saugeen, and Elderslee, Sterling in Paisley, and Mrs. Russell Brown, Lochersble; also one sister, Miss Fraser, and three brothers, Alexander in Paisley; Edward and James Fraser in Calgary, Alta.

Funeral on Saturday will be in charge of the members of Aldworth Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of which Mr. Fraser was a charter member. Interment will be in Paisley Cemetery.

MILK SOARS UP TO 12 CENTS A QUART

Apparently the sky is the limit as far as the high cost of living is concerned, for milk is now selling at 12 cents per quart. This was put into effect yesterday by the local milk dealers. This price is only guaranteed for one month, according to the report of one dealer. The price of milk to the consumer depends n the price which the dealer has t payo the prducers, and the milk is bought from them on a monthly contract price. The average consumer has fervent hopes that it will not go any higher.

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright, and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

A Sacred Duty

We owe it to our children and our children's children that no power will be able again to plunge the world into the chaos of these past four years. Only one thing can prevent such a disaster—Money. And it's the MONEY that you're asked to lend NOW. Canada's 1918 Victory Loan is the safest, surest and best investment in the world.

MRS. WILLIAM GILBERT, who died from the results of influenza, from which she had saved others before contracting the disease herself. She is said by her fellow-workers to have given her life for others.

STRATFORD DISPATCHER TAKEN BY INFLUENZA

STRATFORD, Nov. 1.—Jas. D. Craig, G. T. R. dispatcher, and one of the city's best-known residents, died today. He was born in Ailsa Craig 34 years ago and entered the employ of the railway when a boy of 17. For the past fourteen years he had resided in this city. Besides his wife, two children survive, also his mother, Mrs. Sarah Craig, and one sister Mary, both of Ailsa Craig, and three brothers, Wilbur, Malten; David, Toronto and High of Ailsa Craig.

A. B. Cullilton died at his home in his thirty-first year. He was a G. T. R. freight conductor. Besides his wife, two sons survive.

For the second time death has entered the home of E. A. Robertson in the past two weeks. A short time ago his daughter Mary died from influenza, and today Douglas Alexander Robertson passed away, aged 18 months.

Another child victim is Sarah Margaret Delooze. Her father is overseas. Her mother and several brothers and sisters live here.

FINANCIAL POSITION OF GAS PLANT WILL BE GIVEN AN AIRING

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 1.—There are some rather interesting matters to come before the regular meeting of the gas committee which is to be held on Monday evening next, and some drastic changes may be made in the various departments in connection with the work of supervising the gas plant. There will be some discussion as to the number of employees now at the works and the wages paid. Some of the aldermen will demand a financial statement of the earnings and expenses of the plant during the past half year.

According to present appearances and the discussions among the ratepayers of the city, this promises to be one of the chief questions at the next election.

EVENING STOCK LETTER.
Stocks.

E. F. Hutton & Co. wire Thomson & McKinnon:

New York, Nov. 2.—The market is rapidly adjusting itself to a peace basis. There is strength in the stocks which ought to be strong, like Southern Railway. This stock stands out in the railway group. It is earning more on its stock than almost anything listed on the exchange in that line, and of a similar character, in fact, its earnings show up today with stocks which are now paying 6 and 7 per cent dividends.

The steels are under pressure, as well as any other class of stock whose enormous earnings have been due to war conditions. There is accumulation in nickel, as this is a company which has not profited to any extent through the war.

Next Tuesday's election will have an important bearing on the market, because there are a great many people who believe that the reconstruction of the country can be accomplished better under the Republicans than under the Democratic party. The lid is clamped down tight on the money market, but there is a strong feeling that before long this will work itself out.

Grain.

Thomson & McKinnon wire their local office:

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Corn—There has been no improvement in the investment demand for deferred deliveries of corn, although there is a slightly better call from the east for the cash corn. Terminal markets east of here have been placed on the same permit basis that rules Chicago and western markets, because of scarcity of storage room. This embargo is on the 5st inst. There has been some talk of moderate sales to exporters, but nothing definite is discoverable. It is known that bids are in the market, but shippers do not deem them attractive. Such demand as appears for the deferred deliveries seems to come from former sellers, who were accepting profits as a matter of precaution, not only from any change of ideas. Illinois shippers are complaining of car scarcity. It is probable that goodly movement of old corn from that territory will continue until the supply is exhausted. Motives for invesement are still theoretical only.

Oats—Short coverings was in evidence in oats, being induced by claims of export inquiry. Bids were in the market, but they were below a working basis. The embargo referred to above applies to oats, as well as corn.

BULLETS FROM VICTORY LOAN MACHINE GUN

(OUR DAILY FIT—)
Johnny J. Foot, he is head of the teams;
He's a regular chap and, to us, it sure seems
That he is the man to shoot the bonds through,
Regardless of weather or fever or flu.
So off with your hats and make that cheer loud,
Jack Foot is a man of whom all can be proud.

A. E. Ferte and his six pretty helpers hold forth in a large room kindly donated for the use of the campaign by The O'Brien Business College. Mr. Ferte has the sweet job of tabulating and filing all applications. It is "some" job, but he has it down to a science.

Sid Little is not as slow with his team as he is with his cow, for the Gum-Sox still lead the "Macs" by a substantial margin. Atta boy, Sid.

P. D. Ball's team headed the list yesterday. The salesmen disposed of $66,900 worth of bonds in the residential districts Friday.

The Robinson, Little & Co. has set a record for bond buying that will be hard to equal in Canada. Every member of the staff down to the office boy has bought a bond, and not only that, but 40 per cent of the annual pay roll has been subscribed. The employees have just bought four times as many bonds as the industrial committee thought they would. Controller Sid Little may well have been proud to hurry from headquarters and post up the four honor flags that the company is entitled to.

Don't forget the A. M. Smith Company. For the second time in succession, the company has gone 100 per cent efficiency, every employee investing in a bond.

The salesman stated that this morning was a poor one for house-to-house canvassing, as the good wives were down at the market trying to save a little on their buying to help pay for the bonds they are going to buy.

The card filing system, in charge of Miss Marjorie Hedley at headquarters, is a wonder. By 10 o'clock each day, Miss Hedley has the result of every call made by the salesmen the previous day, tabulated and filed away.

The Oak Hall Comapny has subscribed for a $1,000 bond for the London branch. The same is being done for the other eight branches.

The hello girls are the saving and patriotic bunch. Ninety-five of the Bell Telephone employees have subscribed for $9,000 worth of Victory Bonds, and it is expected that they will raise $2,000 more.

"Many hands make light work," said Gordon Philip, as he looked over the following list of men who reckoned Friday's total: G. W. Blay, W. F. Harper, Trevor Holm, Leo Detwiler, H. R. Laurie, Geo. A. Sears, J. P. Moore, Allan McLean, S. Hudgell, C. L. Edy, O. D. Newton, C. W. Eastwood, C. D. McKenna, C. Lawton.

The Kauffmann Rubber Company London branch, subscribed $10,000 for bonds today. Wish we could stretch our subscription that much.

Competition among the employees of D. S. Perrin & Co. is at a high pitch. It is a case of Candy Factory against Biscuit Factory employees. Buying Victory Bonds is a sweet game.

A. E. Ferte pays the following tribute to the girls who are filing away the bond applications under his direction:
Jessie, Sadie, Dorothy and Kate,
Are always on time and never late
Watch out for conversions,
Be sure and don't miss them,
And then we'll be thankful,
And just say "God bless 'em."

"Lend me half a billion,"
Says Sir Thomas White,
"And I'll keep the factories
Working day and night."

Bill Martin doesn't think that brother Charlie works hard enough. Last night, when Charlie's returns for the day came in, William proceeded to tear his brother's collar off. Bill, apparently, has the courage of his convictions.

George H. Davis and J. M. McAuliffe sold the first bonds at the C. P. R. roundhouse to women workers dressed in khaki. Just another case of ladies first. Mr. Davis was so elated at the sales made that while his mind was up in the clouds, he fell into the pit of the turntable.

"How are you keeping?" said a voice over the phone this morning to "Cap" Kaplansky, the hustling secretary of the Industrials.
"Can't keep anything. I'm buying bonds," replied Michael, as he turned to his heaped-up desk.

The industrial committee wishes the working men of the city to know that it is just as easy to obtain money on a bond as it is to draw it from a bank account. If you have money in the bank, buy a bond, and get the extra interest until you need the money.

Any working man paying cash for a bond can borrow up to 90 per cent from any bank by paying current discount rates. Money invested in Victory Bonds is as accessible as money in a bank account.

BOARD OF HEALTH FEARS RISK OF OPENING BUSINESS COLLEGE

Members Refuse to Allow Ska tng Rinks to Resume Business on Monday, and Talk About Criticism of Their Actions.

Every day is better than the preceding one so far as the epidemic of Spanish influenza is concerned in London, according to Dr. Downham, M. O. H. Every day shows a slackening of number of cases, though there are many people very seriously ill. Patients will require the attention of nurses for days to come. The nurses who have been on duty are worn out, and today Mrs. J. B. McKillop asked the board of health to request the newspapers to include in their reports of the influenza situation today urgent appeals for bookkeepers, clerks, stenographers and other women engaged during the week to give their services on Sunday, to relieve the nurses. "Ask them to register over telephone 4816, Institute of Public Health," she said.

Thirty-six nurses were on duty last night and 22 nurses are out today, making 58 in all during the present 24 hours.

The question of lifting the closing ban was again intruded upon the board's regular meeting today, this time by W. J. O'Brien of the O'Brien Business College, and W. Trafford, manager of the Simcoe street skating rink.

Mr. O'Brien asked that he might be allowed to resume his classes this week. He stated that he would in every way comply with requirements of the board. His rooms are large and well ventilated, and the individual seats and desks of students well separated.

Further, he would not place more than twenty in a room at a time, and would be pleased to conduct his school under medical supervision. He added that classes are being resumed in an institution which is partially Government and partially civic on Monday, and that he had been asked to give his usual instruction to students of this institution. He pointed out that his school did not come under the jurisdiction of the board of education which might register objections otherwise to reopening.

Risk, Board Thinks.

Reference was made to the fact that if Mr. O'Brien should be allowed to reopen classes, so should Mr. Westervelt.

The board of health felt it would be a risk, even with all the precautions guaranteed. The young people were of the dangerous age in this epidemic. If the board permitted such a reopening it would be worried with other requests for lifting the ban. It had to consider the public health.

Mr. O'Brien pointed out that there would be much less danger in his school, conforming to regulations in the way of numbers allowed in the rooms and distance of seating, under medical supervision, than in theatres.

He was advised to get ready to reopen his institution upon the 11th.

Strong Argument.

It was then, and not till then, that he offered his last argument. He did not want to drag in the names of other institutions allowed to re-open. If the argument re loss applied to them, it possibly applied to him more. He did not charge pupils in absence owing to sickness. He had not taken in the price of a dinner during the closing down of his school, while his expenses went on the same. In view of the fact that he had only started up here a year and a half ago, investing everything in paying cash for equipment, etc., the loss to him was an exceedingly serious matter. "Perhaps if I were a bigger interest," he said, "this would carry more weight. As it is, I am willing to conform to every possible suggestion of the board to protect the students if allowed to reopen."

The board finally left it to the chairman, Mr. Russell, and M. O. H. Dr. Downsam to see the school and report, Mayor Somerville making the motion to this effect.

Mr. Trafford of the Simcoe Street Rink asked epermission to open on Monday. H. M. Douglass, who suggested that theatres be opened Monday, was opposed to granting such a privilege either to rinks or dance halls for the present, and moved that no definite date should yet be set, if the M. O. H. upheld such decision. Mr. Trafford was assured he would be notified in plenty of time to make his plans for opening.

Cities Withdraw Permits.

Referring to the length of time which it is probable nursing help and service from the diet kitchen will be required through the women's emergency organization, Mrs. J. B. McKillop mentioned that the epidemic will not be all stamped out in the next few weeks, and referred to the possibility of recurrence with the opening of schools, etc. A fresh outbreak has occurred in Windsor, she stated, and the opening orders are being taken back there. St. Thomas, she added, yesterday withdrew permission to open the churches on Sunday.

Chairman Russell maintained that the London board had been justified in the action it had taken; that it is most important to give people a more optimistic view.

Dr. Downham stated there had been a good deal of criticism from people concerning the reopening of the theatres. Mayor Somerville had heard criticism re the reopening of the churches from people who didn't mind about the theatres in the least.

Only Three Objections.

Chairman Russell said that of sixty or seventy doctors in the city, there were only three who had objected to the reopening orders, and the doctors had plenty of time to consider.

Mr. Douglass—Some doctors spoke to me as if they thought it foolish to open so soon. Some who were opposed to closing at all have changed their minds and said we did just right.

Mr. Somerville remarked that praise or blame for the board would depend upon whether everything turned out all right or not.

In the course of informal discussion towards the close of the meeting, reference was made to the slum conditions discovered in London through the emergency work necessitated by the epidemic. The view was held that some houses are not fit for habitation and should be cleaned out. Further, the chairman cited the case of a house of five rooms, into which 24 loaves of bread are delivered daily, an indication of overcrowding, and in the case of some overcrowding, particularly in buildings occupied by foreign-born citizens, it was pointed out, that conditions do not conform to Canadian ideas of what constitutes morality.

Hospital Questions.

The question was raised if hospital accommodation was keeping pace with the growth of the city. The building of the new Military Hospital, it was pointed out, will relieve the city hospitals of military patients.

At Victoria Hospital last night the death of a young man, MacKay of Egerton street, occurred. The young Piper boy, who has been hovering between life and death in the Emergency Hospital, Latter Day Saints' Church, died last night.

He is the third member of the family to be taken by the epidemic. His sister died in St. Joseph's Hospital early last week, and his mother in the emergency hospital on Sunday. His father is overseas.

The death of Mrs. Gilbert, a member of No. 4 Nursing Division, has brought a shadow to the hearts of the members of St. John Ambulance Association. The death of Dr. Stapleton has also brought a stern realization of the menace of the epidemic.

TWO REPORTED KILLED.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 1.—Sergt. Alfred Edwards, a former well-known employee of E. L. Cockshutt, was reported here today as having been killed in action. Pte. G. H. Marshall, a member of the 1st Brants, was also reported among the killed.

BULGARIAN MONARCH WHO HAS ABDICATED

KING BORIS III.

INVESTIGATION IS BEING HELD INTO RAILWAY WRECK

Motorman Lewis Admits He Had Never Been Over Road Before.

THE VICTIMS NUMBER 98

Thousands Attracted to Scene of Brooklyn's Greatest Accident.

New York, Nov. 2.—With the death toll at 98 by the Brooklyn police, rigid investigations were under way today by the commission, the district attorney and Mayor Hylan to determine the blame for the wreck last night on a Brighton Beach train of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company in the Malbone street tunnel, Brooklyn. Yesterday's strike of motormen and motor switchmen of the company, which was coincident with the tragedy, was settled during the early morning hours, company officials agreeing to reinstate 29 discharged union employees. The company previously had refused to obey the order of the war trade board and take back the men.

The investigation centred on William Lewis, motorman of the ill-fated train, who was arrested on a charge of homicide at his home early today, after he had fled from the scene in terror. Mayor Hylan, who visited Lewis in the Flatbush police station soon after his arrest, issued this statement:

"Lewis admitted to me that this was his first run over the road. He said he was going thirty miles an hour. No man should be allowed to run a train without at least three months training."

President Timothy S. Williams of the transit company asserted that although Lewis was a motor switchman, he was a trained man and capable of running a train. Lewis was pressed into service yesterday, it was said, on account of the strike.

Train of Wooden Cars.

Another phase of today's investigation that attracted interest was the fact that the train was composed of wooden cars, declared to be at least 25 years old. It was said there was not a steel-bodied car in the train of five cars, and when the death-dealing crash came most of the cars were reduced to splinters. In the opinion of members of the public service commission the death list would have been considerably smaller had steel cars been operated. The commission ordered the company to replace its antiquated wooden rolling stock with steel several months ago, but the company contended that it was impossible to comply with the order because of war conditions.

Identification of Dead.

Identification of the dead progressed slowly all through the day. Many of the victims were buried under the pile of wreckage in the dark tunnel, and were so badly mutilated that identification was almost impossible. A majority of the dead were local residents. More than 100 persons were injured in the crash, according to police estimates, and it was believed that a number of these will die.

All during the night thousands were attracted to the scene of the disaster the greatest traffic accident in the city's history. Hundreds of anxious men and women went to the police stations where the bodies were first taken. The number of those fearing they had lost relatives made the identification of the dead a slow and difficult process. The bodies were finally removed to the King's County morgue.

The striking employees of the transit company returned to work today, and traffic on the Brooklyn subway and elevated lines was restored to normal.

QUEBEC POSTMASTER DEAD.

Quebec, Nov. 2.—Arthur J. Turcotte, postmaster of Quebec, died here yesterday at the age of 68 years.

ARCHDUKE JOSEPH WILL TRY TO SOLVE POLITICAL CRISIS

Berne, Nov. 2.—Emperor Charles has appointed Archduke Joseph as his representative to approach political chiefs to examine the possibilities as to solving the political crisis in Austria-Hungary, according to Vienna dispatches received here.

The Austrian Government will issue temporary bank notes in denominations of 25 and 100 crowns to counteract the monopoly in currency which has followed the general panic in that country.

Cotton.

Thomson & McKinnon wire their local office:

Chicago, Nov. 2.—There was again moderate pressure in the cotton market during the early period of the session, but it was noticeable that offerings from the south became scarcer, while the demand from trade interests improved. As a result a fair rally followed. Whether this be a result of momentary technical conditions, or whether an actual turn for the better has occurred, is at the moment uncertain. The one fact that stands out prominent is that the short side is now surrounded by extra hazards because of the severe decline, but for investment buying would hesitate just a little, or until the attitude of the planter has become more certain.

EVENING STOCK LETTER.
Stocks.

Thomson & McKinnon wire their local office:

Chicago, Nov. 2.—It may be safely assumed that, technically, the market is in a fairly good condition. The public have had the entire week which to adjust their accounts to comply with the new banking requirements. With this out of the way, the next and most important question is, how long will the present restrictions continue? How soon we may expect an easing in money conditions? An answer at this is not easy, even from the most high interests, because we are passing through a period for which there is neither precedent or guide. All we can do is to feel our way along and adapt our action to conditions from day to day. Ultimately there must of necessity be a definite level of values, regardless of the monetary conditions. The end of the war is in sight. It may be a matter of a few hours, almost, or a few weeks. What will follow? Men of large affairs have attempted to answer this question and have expressed views mainly of an optimistic character, but their views, while they may be verified, are, at the moment, not convincing. The problem of world readjustment is complex, with thousands of angles. The one certainty upon which we can depend is that there must be a readjustment in business from a war to a peace basis, and readjustments are usually not conducive to a rising market. The one bright spot that we see in the market involves our railroads, which we regard with favor, and on declines recommend these stocks as investments.

Be Master of Your Health

ALMOST every man realizes in a general way that "success is to the strong."

But he does not always apply this rule in his own case and keep his own system in condition.

These days the worry and strain on the nerves is tremendous. Almost daily we are shocked by learning of the death of some prominent man.

The unusual strain has proved more than he could bear.

Many who have worked just as hard are standing the strain because of the attention they have given to keeping their vitality at high watermark.

Some are able to do this by outdoor exercise and a carefully regulated diet, while others find they cannot get back into condition without the help of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This is the most natural and most rational treatment imaginable, for it supplies in condensed and easily assimilated form the vital substances which go to form new, rich blood, and thereby feed the nerves back to health and vigor.

As an illustration of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing for business men just read this letter:

Mr. William H. Kennedy, Gloucester Street, Cornwall, Ont., writes: For the last two years I have been suffering from run-down condition of the system, gradually getting worse all the time. Last summer, during the hot weather, doing extra work brought on the climax. I was taken with nervous prostration, feeling dizzy, sick at my stomach, the nerves in my arms and legs twitching so that I could not keep still, while at the pit of my stomach the nerves would beat quite perceptibly. I have given many remedies a thorough trial, patronized several doctors, and spent hundreds of dollars without getting any relief. I was even in the hospital for a short time, living on eggnogs. I was told that there was no hope. I could not eat nor sleep, with no ambition to get around very much. I was so bad that I could not even ride on a train. While at the store a traveller advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and give them a good trial. After the second box I saw that I was getting better, so I continued taking them according to directions, until now, when I am on my sixth box, I am feeling fine, able to do my work, can eat well and sleep well at night. I feel that I cannot recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food too highly."

Any druggist will tell you what an enormous sale the food cure has attained. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Only the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

WATER DEPARTMENT PROFITS FAR BELOW LEVEL OF THE PAST

Estimated at $7,000 for the Current Year.

HAVE REACHED $35,000

City Clerk Thinks Department Escaped Lightly During This Year.

While the local public utilities commission expects a surplus in the waterworks department of about $7,000 this year this does not compare favorably with the surplus that some of the former years show. With the exception of the last three years, including 1918, and 1913, 1914 and 1900, the amount of the surplus in this department has never been below $15,000 since the year 1891.

In 1913 there was a deficit of $6,063.75, but Mr. Buchanan lays the blame for this to the fact that certain moneys were charged to operating expenses that year that should have been charged to capital account. The surplus for the next year was $6,668.68, and for 1916 and 1917 the amounts were $7,026.54 and $5,361.80. The sum of $15,526.14 remained in 1915 after all payments had been met, and the year 1900 gave $14,462.31.

Ten Fat Years.

During the years 1902 to 1912 inclusive only twice did the surplus drop below $25,000. In 1907 it was $19,009.42, and in 1909 the sum was $16,480.82. At the end of 1908 the commission had more than $52,000 to its credit, and in 1906 the surplus was more than $35,000. Previous to 1900 the surplus for three years exceeded $20,000, while it hovered between $18,000 and $20,000 for five years. This did not happen in successive years, however.

Clerk's Beliefs.

Regarding the surplus of last year $5,361.80, City Clerk S. Baker says that if all the money had been deducted that should have been, the figure would be somewhat smaller. He claims that between $1,500 and $2,000 more should have been charged up to the waterworks department of last year. He points out further that if the commission had depended on the revenue from the waterworks to pay the expense of the upkeep of Springbank Park there would have been a deficit, as, according to the auditors' statement, more than $11,000 was spent by the parks commission on the riverside park in 1917. If the recommendation of the board of control is carried out, the commission will have to pay for the work at the park out of the revenue next year.

Y. W. C. A. EXTENSION WORK TO BE RESUMED

Has Been Held Up By Influenza Epidemic for Some Time.

The extension work of the Y. W. C. A., which was temporarily discontinued on account of the influenza epidemic, will re-open again shortly. The various branches of this work, the physical, industrial and educational, as well as the social and religious, have excellent programs outlined for the coming season, and there is every possibility of a banner year in Y. W. C. A. work.

The first meeting of the Political Club, which was to have been held on Monday next, with Miss Una Sanders, general secretary of the Dominion Council, Y. W. C. A., as speaker, has been postponed, owing to the epidemic. On Monday, October 11, the physical work of the Y. W. C. A. will again recommence, and an effort is being made to open classes in swimming as well as physical culture classes. The industrial clubs, under the supervision of Miss Archibald, will also begin work again shortly.

At "Lenmore," King street, a most enjoyable Halloween party was held, the residence being gaily decorated in black and yellow, with many black cats in evidence, Halloween also influencing the refreshments.

Have You Friends Who Suffer?

You have friends who are discouraged, who seem to have lost all interest in life, and whose sufferings are acute—because they are afflicted with Kidney or Bladder trouble?

Here is your golden opportunity to be a real friend to your friends. Tell them about Gin Pills, what they have done for others, and about the thousands who have found relief by taking this remedy.

Persuade your friends to try them, if only a sample box. Mrs. James Harris of Port Rowan took the advice of a friend and wrote us for a free sample. Hear in her own words the result:

"My husband had suffered for some time with lame back and Kidney Troubles. He became so bad, work was almost impossible. So many remedies were tried without effect that he became discouraged. A friend advised him to give Gin Pills a trial, which he did, and to-day he is almost entirely cured."

The case of W. T. Baldwin, of Smithville, Ont., is similar in many respects. Mr. Baldwin suffered from a pain in the back for over three years. Finally on advice from friends he tried Gin Pills, with the result that he obtained relief from his pain after taking the first box.

There is no need for anyone to invest a cent in Gin Pills until they have received a sample free and tried them, as Mr. Harris did. Write to-day, telling us to send a sample box free to your friend's address.

SURPLUS OF $40,000 SOMEWHAT OF MYTH IS OPINION LOCALLY

Manager E. V. Buchanan Not Expecting Any Check.

That story of the neat little surplus of about $40,000 which is said to be to the credit of London in the books of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, is similar to the one told of the bachelor with a decidedly shady reputation, who informed his friends that he was engaged to the society belle of the town. The girl, when asked about it, denied that she had any knowledge of the engagement.

E. V. Buchanan said this morning that he had no word of the surplus, and he could get no information from Toronto concerning the report. He thinks that it has been accumulating since the first year hydro was used in London, and he evidently is of the opinion that it will still continue to accumulate as far as London is concerned. He does not anticipate a check to cover the amount.

GERMAN-OWNED MILLS IN U. S. TO BE SOLD

Property Valued at $200,000,000 To Be Disposed of Soon.

New York, Nov. 2.—Announcement that the German Woolen Mills of New Jersey and other large manufactories throughout the country, with an aggregate value of more than $200,000,000, will be sold within the next two months to Americans, was the answer today of A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, to the recent note from the German Government protesting against disposition of former Teuton-owned interests in the United States. German property seized in this country totals $800,000,000, and will soon reach $1,000,000,000, as compared with $14,000,000 worth of American interests taken over in Germany, Mr. Palmer said.

DEATH RATE DECREASING.

Ottawa, Nov. 2.—A 66 per cent decrease in the total influenza death rate was reported last night. During the 24 hours period ending at noon on Friday, only four persons died, compared with twelve the day before. This is the smallest number of deaths that have occurred in Ottawa in any one day during the past month. It is estimated that there are not more than 1,500 cases in the city now, the greater number of which are of a mild form. On Sunday there were more than 3,000 cases.

SUGGESTIONS OFFERED BY MEMBER FOR PROGRAM OF WORK FOR THE NEWLY-EXTENDED BOARD OF TRADE

As a typical group meeting of the reorganized board of trade, held last evening, the following is representative of one member's thoughts. After assembling, the thoughts of the entire membership, the program of work will be representative of the thoughts of the community.

David Ross of Ross', Limited, brought out these suggestions:

1. Meeting hall and adequate headquarters for the organization.
2. Centralize all community work by reference to the board executive, in order to arrange for discussion or membership vote as may be deemed necessary.
3. Arrange to have schools, during unoccupied evening hours, made educational centres for community service work.
4. That a citizenship training course be arranged in the higher classes of the ward schools and Collegiate Institute for all students.
5. That efforts at once be made to have a central provincial bureau formed to which cities and towns could apply for necessary expert assistance in matters of all city or town planning or improvement.
6. That action be taken to have legislation passed to empower (under statutory law) the city public health department to compel any necessary improvements in the public health interest, connected with roads, streets, building or other city spaces, whether expenses incurred be borne by the municipality or private individuals.
7. That legislation be enacted limiting to not more than ten hours in any day or sixty hours a week, the time which could be demanded from employees engaged in any industrial or commercial work within the municipality.
8. That suitable lodging accommodation and protection be provided for all girls and women coming into the city to engage in industrial, commercial or other work.
9. That the Provincial Government be urged to have a vacant land survey made of London and district with a view of utilizing all ground suitable for cultivation and that such lands be occupied by returned soldiers or other suitable persons desiring to enter upon the industry of land cultivation.
10. Outline a comprehensive system of publicly-owned traction roads, centreing in London, in order to further social, industrial, commercial and educational interests of the city and district.
11. That the Western University be raised to an equal plane in regard to conferring degrees to other similar seats of learning in the Dominion.
12. Demand that the present dangerous and progress-retarding railway track and station conditions in London be forthwith considered and a comprehensive and proper system be outlined in harmony with the present and future requirements of such an important social and industrial community.

TONY CAME BACK, BUT ONLY TO FALL INTO THE HANDS OF THE POLICE ON BOLSHEVIK CHARGE

He Is Remanded for Week in Spite of Counsel's Pleas, and Inspector Keenleyside Is Waiting for Him on Another Count.

Tony Andruke, alleged to be a member of the Russian Social Revolutionists, appeared in police court today charged with having Bolshevik tendencies. Tony was not home when the police raided little Russia three weeks ago. He folded his tent, like the Arabs, and silently melted away. However, unlike Jim Jeffries, the prizefighter, he came back, but the result was the same. He got into trouble. In fact, he is in a lot of trouble. License Inspector Keenleyside has a charge against Tony of keeping liquor in other than a private dwelling, and if Andruke gets by on the Bolshevik charge, he will be smothered in a $200 fine if the license inspector has his way.

Argument Ensues.

"I'll remand Andruke a week," declared Magistrate Graydon.

"There is no occasion to remand him that long. Monday will do," interposed W. R. Meredith, counsel for the Russian.

"Yes, there is. I'll remand him a week," came back the magistrate.

Mr. Meredith objected strenuously but to no avail. "We might make an arrangement like we did in the other case," he suggested hopefully.

Crown Attorney McKillop was not to be wheedled. "Andruke may not have tried to escape the morning we made the arrests, but he got out of town," stated Mr. McKillop.

"That doesn't prove anything against him," retorted Mr. Meredith, who thereupon retired from the fray.

Had No Papers.

"He keeps his papers in his good clothes," said Jacob Harris, in explaining why Paul Kozel, a Russian, in his employ, was minus his written right to walk the streets. Mr. Harris was downright peeved, and did all the talking for Kozel, who stood by with his mouth wide open.

It seems that the Dominion police, who, Mr. Harris maintains, have no heart, yanked the aforementioned Kozel off one of Harris' junk carts, hauled him off to headquarters and left the poor equine Kozel was driving to forage for himself by the roadside.

The Poor Horse.

"The police knew that this man was working for us," declared Mr. Harris, "and they knew we wouldn't keep him unless he had papers."

"The law says he has got to carry them," said the magistrate.

"I can't see why they should leave the poor horse to look after himself. I will complain—"

"Don't complain to me, Mr. Harris," interposed the magistrate. "I've got lots of troubles of my own. If this man comes up again he will be fined. He can go this time."

VALENCIENNES FALLS TO CANADIAN SOLDIERS WHO HAVE PASSED THROUGH THE TOWN

AUSTRIAN'S RETREAT CUT OFF.

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Friday, Nov. 1—Allied troops have reached the Grigno, five miles north of Monte Lisser. They have cut off the retreat of the Austrians in Trentino, except over mule paths in the mountains. The headlong flight of the Austrians continues on the Venetian Plain.

ITALIAN 10TH ARMY CROSSES THE LIVENZA BETWEEN MOTTA AND SACILE

London, Nov. 2.—Troops of the 10th Italian army have crossed the Livenza River, between Motta and Sacile, and have established a bridgehead on the east side of that river, according to an official statement on operations on the Piave front, issued by the war office here today. British troops are fighting with this army.

The text of the statement reads:

"Troops of the 10th army have crossed the Livenza River, between Motta and Sacile, and have established a bridgehead east of that stream. The Northamptonshire Yeomanry Regiment has captured twelve mountain guns and fifteen machine guns.

"The 48th Division, operating on the Asiago Plateau, is reported to have advanced its line two kilometres northward, but it is meeting with machine-gun resistance in the neighborhood of Monte Ixterrotto."

GOURAUD'S ARMY CAPTURES HUNS TO THE EAST OF THE RIVER AISNE

With the French Army on the Aisne, Friday, Nov. 1.—Gen. Gouraud's troops made important progress east of the River Aisne today. They captured several hundred prisoners, batteries of three-inch and four-inch guns.

The concentric movement of troops advancing northward from the region of Olizy and Beaureparie and eastward from the line of the bend in the Aisne has tightened their grip on the wooded region northwest of Grandpre. The forces advancing northward have reached the spur east of Trimat and the Broye Farm, one thousand yards north of Beaureparie, while those advancing eastward from the Aisne have occupied the villages of Rilly-aux-Oies, Somuy and Voncq, north of Vouziers, and Falaise, to the southeast.

The enemy's resistance has been particularly energetic east of Vouzieres, where he has been able to utilize the cover of the wooded region for his characteristic bush fighting. French troops have made satisfactory gains in that region, however, holding at last accounts the Wagnierie Plateau, the Malva Farm, Hill 193 and the southern branch of the Chalon rivulet.

ALLIES TAKE MOUNTAIN POSITIONS.

ADD WAR Tfccr..IY TTTAAETetaohr ditaoi fwytaofwy taoivbgqketaxzfififfaaa

Rome, Friday, Nov. 1.—Mountain positions held by the Austrians on the Asiago Plateau, west of the Brenta River, have been captured by the Allies, according to an official statement issued at the war office tonight. The text of the announcement reads:

"On the Asiago Plateau, the 6th Army and two allied divisions have carried formidable positions which the Austrians have held for many months. Monte Mosciagh, Monte Baldo, Monte Longara, La Meletia di Gallio, Sasso Rosso, Monte Spitz and Lambara are in our possession. Three thousand prisoners and 232 guns were captured on the Asiago Plateau today.

"Enemy resistance at Fidalto defile was overcome by our troops who have entered Belluno. The 3rd Cavalry Division has reached the plains north of Pordenone. The 2nd Cavalry Division is fighting hostile rearguards in Meduna. The infantry of the 10th and 3rd Armies have passed the Livenza River, between Sacile and San Stino."

THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS ARE TAKEN BY THE ALLIES IN ITALY

ROME, Nov 1.—The number of prisoners taken by the Allied forces in their drive against the Austro-Hungarians in Northern Italy is steadily increasing. More than 700 guns have been captured. Immense booty has been taken.

The statement issued today by the Italian war office says the battle is continuing and is expanding. The Austro-Hungarians are maintaining resistance from Stelvio Pass to the Astico.

Italian cavalry divisions have destroyed the enemy resistance on the Livenza River. They have re-established crossings over the stream and are marching towards the River Tagliamento.

Feltre, a town in the Italian mountain region, about ten miles north of the old battle line, was entered last night by the Bologna brigade.

The Official Story.

The text says:

"The battle continues to expand. The enemy maintains intact his resistance from Stelvio to the Astico, but he is vacillating on the Asiago plateau and in full retreat along the remainder of the front. He is protected more by interruptions in the roads than by his rear guards, who are irresistibly overwhelmed by our troops, enthusiastically occupied in the pursuit.

Intensive Shelling.

"Our batteries brought forward quickly with captured enemy artillery are intensely shelling the adversary, firing to the extreme extent of their range. Our cavalry divisions, having destroyed the enemy resistance on the Livenza and re-established crossings, are marching toward the Tagliamento.

"The sixth army yesterday entered into action with a brilliant advance by the Ancona brigade at the head of the Brenta valley, and this morning it attacked the adversary along the whole front.

"The fourth army is master of the Fonzaso valley. The Bologna brigade entered Feltre last night.

"The twelfth army, having gone through the Quero defile from the mountains, is joining up on the Piave course with the eighth army. The latter has descended the valley of the Piave to the south of Belluno, and has detachments engaged in the Fedalto valley.

DECLARATION DAY IS OBSERVED HERE AS PERIOD OF PRAYER

National Rejoicing Because of Holy Land Restoration.

Declaration Day, the national holiday of the Jews, today is being celebrated throughout the world in commemoration of the restoration of the Holy Land to its rightful owners. One year ago today the British Government issued a declaration, officially recognizing the right of the Jewish people in their age-long aspirations by authorizing the appointment of a Zionist Commission to proceed to Palestine in order to investigate the ways and means for establishing a national home for the Jewish people in Palestine, with the approval of the British Government.

Thanksgiving Day.

The Palestine Commission has sent a cable to Clarence I. de Sola, the president of the Federation of Zionist Societies in Canada, in which it asks that the new era for the Jewish people be observed in a manner worthy of the great historic event which marks the dawn of a new era for the Jewish people," is part of the message sent by the commission.

Great Preparations.

Millions of dollars have been subscribed in the United States for the purpose of setting Jewish national life upon a democratic basis under the Zionist flag. Already 100,000 workmen have been advertised for, to prepare the country for the home-coming of Jews from all parts of the world.

Day of Prayer

Today is indeed a day of rejoicing for the Jewish people. Locally the day is being spent in prayer both at the synagogue and in the homes of the people. Especially is this so among the Orthodox Jews. Those who have been spared to witness the restoration of the Jews are humbly thanking God for his goodness in fulfilling the Scripture.

NORTHERN TOWNS ARE COMPETING FOR SERVICES OF FIRE CHIEF BORLAND

North Bay Is Trying To Get Him Away From Timmins.

The Porcupine Advance has the following to say of "Sandy" Borland, former fire-fighter of London, and at present chief of the Timmins fire department. Chief Borland is also a veteran of the Northwest rebellion:

"In looking recently for a new fire chief, North Bay turned its attention to Fire Chief A. Borland of Timmins, once described by Councillor Pierce, as 'the best fire chief in Canada.' At the time many were of the opinion that Councillor Pierce was using strong language in this description, but since that day Timmins has had such valuable experience of the worth and ability of the fire chief as to share generally the enthusiasm shown by Councillor Pierce a year ago. Consequently, it was only to be expected that when North Bay invited Chief Borland to come down with the view of securing his services as fire chief at North Bay, Timmins should suggest that he make no definite arrangement without first giving this town opportunity to offset any offer from North Bay. Chief Borland visited North Bay last week, and the council there were very favorably impressed with his record and experience. He did not, however, close any agreement with them, pending the action of the local council, the majority of whom seem to agree with the citizens in general that it would be a serious loss to Timmins and to the fire protection and insurance rates of the town if Chief Borland were allowed to leave here at this time. The council meeting Monday did not deal with the question, probably on account of the absence of the chairman of the fire and light committee, so it is still possible that Chief Borland may accept the North Bay position and Timmins thus lose the most noted fire chief that has been in the North Land.

COUGHED, COUGHED ALL NIGHT LONG

Terribly wearing on the system is the cough that comes at night and prevents sleep. Sometimes it is a constant cough, that will not be quieted.

Sometimes it is a choked-up, stuffed-up feeling that makes breathing difficult and sleep impossible.

Whatever kind of a cold or cough you have, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you need to cure it, for the simple reason that this valuable preparation combines all the lung-healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with which is combined wild cherry bark, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks.

Miss Margaret Landly, Bristol, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you the benefits I have received from Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

"Last fall I took a severe cough and cold in my head. I was unable to do anything. At night I could not sleep, but cough, cough, all night long. A friend advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the second bottle was used I was entirely cured, and I have found this the best cough medicine I can buy."

Do not accept any other "pine" preparations when you ask for "Dr. Wood's." This remedy has been on the market for a quarter of a century. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Flight Lieut. Heard's Squadron Mourns the Loss of a Favorite

Chaplain Writes Relatives of Airman Here Expressing Sympathy.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Rivard of the London Club have received a communication from Capt. C. H. Mathews, chaplain of the 209th R. A. F. Squadron, to which their nephew, the late Flight Lieut. Murray Heard, belonged. Lieut. Heard was accidentally killed behind the front line on October 11.

"We were all so sorry at the death of your nephew," writes Capt. Mathews. "I was on the spot when the accident happened, and helped to get him out of the machine. He must have been killed instantly, as the base of his skull was fractured. I took him off immediately to a neighboring hospital and buried him near there that afternoon. It will be possible, if you so desire it, to obtain a photograph of the grave.

"The squadron will place a cross made out of a propeller, with an engraved brass plate up it, over the grave. Assuring you of my deep sympathy and that of the squadron, with whom he was extremely popular, faithfully yours,

"C. H. MATHEWS, Chaplain."

WRITERS OF CITY TAKE PRELIMINARY STEPS TO ORGANIZE PRESS CLUB

Aim Is Mutual Improvement and Raising Standard of Work.

Preliminary steps towards the organization of a London Press Club were taken at a meeting of members of the journalistic profession of the city, held on Friday afternoon in the rooms of the local Typographical Union in the Dowler block. The aim of the new organization is to promote fellowship among members of the writing craft, for mutual improvement, and to raise the standard of the profession. Only those who are paid writers will be eligible for membership, and of these there are some 60 in London, several of whom are prominent in the literary world.

A provisional executive committee, including a provisional chairman, secretary, conveners of sub-committees and two additional members, will proceed with plans for organization, which will be completed at a meeting to be held in the Typographical Union rooms at 4:30 o'clock Friday, October 8.

Harry Link, Free Press, was appointed provisional chairman; Vincent Perry, Globe representative, secretary; Miss Helen McMillan and W. R. Brake, Advertiser, additional members of the executive. The three sub-committees are: Industrial—W. J. Y. Hardy (convener), Howard Broughton and V. D. Rowell; educational—John Stronach (convener), H. H. Pickett, Bert Penny; social—Miss Isabel C. Armstrong (convener), Mrs. E. C Bowker, Miss Helen Hamilton.

Arrangements to secure quarters for the club will be made in the immediate future. The program in mind is a diversified and interesting, as well as an ambitious one, including addresses by prominent writers and recognized authorities on newspaper and magazine work; discussions, study classes in journalism, exchange of experiences and social intercourse. From time to time the club will entertain visitors of prominence in the artistic world.

W. J. Y. Hardy presided at the meeting yesterday.

The question of forming a newswriters union or guild will be considered later.

CANADIANS AND BRITISH "BOTTLE UP" THOUSANDS OF HUNS IN VALENCIENNES

Between Two and Three Thousand Germans Captured in a Sudden Blow on Both Sides of City—Currie's Troops Planned the Drive, and Were Supported by a Heavy Barrage.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Attacking on a front of six miles south of Valenciennes, English and Canadian troops captured between two and three thousand prisoners and inflicted extremely heavy losses on the enemy. This announcement was made in the official report from Field Marshal Haig.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Nov. 1.—2 p.m.—Valenciennes today was bottled up as the result of a lightning blow by the British on both sides of the city. Only immediate retirement from the place, or something in the nature of a miracle can save the German troops, who at noon had only a narrow gateway open to them to retreat toward the east.

Meantime the French and British and Americans from the Pacific coast and Ohio, along the Deynze-Avelghem front in Belgium continued successfully the advance begun yesterday morning. The heavy resistance encountered on the sector yesterday died out during the night.

A Terrific Barrage.

The main attack at Valenciennes was south of the city, just above Famars. The Canadians, who planned the drive, were supported by one of the heaviest artillery bombardments of the war. The gunfire was terrific, and this made the going easy for the overseas infantry, which followed.

The idea of the Canadians in using this great barrage was to crush the resistance as quickly as possible, so as to save Allied lives. The bombardment had the desired effect, for the opposition offered by the enemy was not strong and the Canadians pushed rapidly through to their objectives, which gave them the whole of the railway line running south from Valenciennes.

Enemy's Losses Heavy.

The enemy casualties were heavy, and the little Rhonelle River was lined with German dead. About noon the enemy massed for counter-attacks from Saultain. According to the latest reports the Canadian artillery was dealing with the projected assault.

At the same time the Canadians attacked with other British troops, and drove forward north of the city and forced a crossing of the Scheldt.

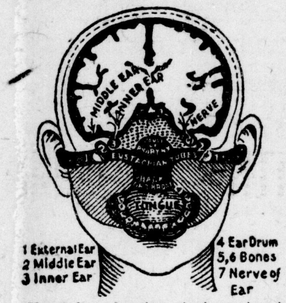

Audenarde was gravely threatened today. The fighting yesterday was of a different nature. The German artillery maintained a heavy fire throughout the day, and German machine gunners, scattered in great numbers throughout the sector, fought stubbornly, until they were killed or compelled to surrender. The main resistance came from these sources.

The battle waged more or less over open ground, among hamlets and farmhouses which still are inhabited by Belgian civilians. Enemy machine gunners were stationed in practically every house, and the civilians, who had no protection but their homes, cowered indoors while the fierce fighting swirled about them.

THE FRENCH ATTACK.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The fourth French army, in conjunction with the Americans on their right, launched an attack this morning on the Aisne front to the north and south of Vouziers, according to the official statement issued by the war office tonight. The attack was on a front of about twelve and one-half miles from the region east of Attigny to the north of Olizy.

under any condition, nor for any consideration We prefer not to make it at all, rather than do that.

There is no substitute for CEETEE Underclothing—it is in a class by itself. No other underwear like it is being made in America.

But, owing to the Government regulations regarding wool, which allow a very small percentage for civilian purposes, also the scarcity of available ships, we are only able to supply about half the demand for Ceetee, which is made from finest Australian Merino Wool.

However, if our many friends are unable to secure their usual CEETEE Underclothing, we suggest that they try some other Turnbull brand. We guarantee it will give excellent satisfaction.

Turnbull's underwear in all sizes is sold by most good dealers, for men, women and children.

We have been making high quality woollen underclothing for over 60 years.

TURKEY'S ACCEPTANCE OF ARMISTICE TERMS MEANS UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER

Turks Must Release All Prisoners At Once, Turn Over War and Merchant Vessel to Allies, Hand Over Garrisons, Cut Loose Absolutely From Teutons, and Evacuate the Captured Territory.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The armistice accepted by Turkey amounts to "complete and unconditional surrender." This statement was made by Lord Robert Cecil, assistant secretary of state for foreign affairs, to the Associated Press tonight.

The terms of the armistice granted by the Allied powers to Turkey follow:

"FIRST.—The opening of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus and access to the Black Sea. Allied occupation of the Bosphorus forts.

"SECOND.—The positions of all mine fields, torpedo tubes and other obstructions in Turkish waters are to be indicated, and assistance given to sweep or remove them as may be required.

"THIRD.—All available information concerning mines in the Black Sea is to be communicated.

FREES ALL PRISONERS.

"FOURTH.—All Allied prisoners of war and Armenian interned persons and prisoners are to be collected in Constantinople and handed over unconditionally to the Allies.

"FIFTH.—Immediate demobilization of the Turkish army, except such troops as are required for surveillance on the frontiers and for the maintenance of internal order. The number of effectives and their disposition to be determined later by the Allies after consultation with the Turkish Government.

SURRENDER ALL VESSELS.

"SIXTH.—The surrender of all war vessels in Turkish waters or waters occupied by Turkey. These ships will be interned in such Turkish port or ports as may be directed, except such small vessels as are required for police and similar purposes in Turkish territorial waters.

"SEVENTH.—The Allies to have the right to occupy any strategic points in the event of any situation arising which threatens the security of the Allies.

"EIGHTH.—Free use by Allied ships of all ports and anchorages now in Turkish occupation and denial of their use by the enemy. Similar conditions are to apply to Turkish mercantile shipping in Turkish waters for the purposes of trade and the demobilization of the army.

"NINTH.—Allied occupation of the Taurus tunnel system.

"TENTH.—Immediate withdrawal of Turkish troops from Northern Persia to behind the pre-war frontier already has been ordered and will be carried out.

"ELEVENTH.—A part of trans-Caucasia already has been ordered to be evacuated by Turkish troops. The remainder to be evacuated if required by the Allies after they have studied the situation.

"TWELFTH.—Wireless telegraph and cable stations to be controlled by the Allies, Turkish Government messages to be excepted.

"THIRTEENTH.—Prohibition against the destruction of any naval, military or commercial material.

"FOURTEENTH.—Facilities are to be given for the purchase of coal, oil, fuel and naval material from the Turkish resources after the requirements of the country have been met. None of the above materials are to be exported.

"FIFTEENTH.—The surrender of all Turkish officers in Tripolitania and Cyrenaica to the nearest Italian Garrison. Turkey agrees to stop supplies and communication with these officers if they do not obey the order to surrender.

SURRENDER ALL GARRISONS.

"SIXTEENTH.—The surrender of all garrisons in Hedjaz, Assir, Yemen, Syria and Mesopotamia to the nearest Allied commander, and withdrawal of Turkish troops from Cilicia, except those necessary to maintain order, as will be determined under Clause Six.

"SEVENTEENTH.—The use of all ships and repair facilities at all Turkish ports and arsenals.

"EIGHTEENTH.—The surrender of all ports occupied in Tripolitania and Cyrenaica, including Misurata, to the nearest Allied garrison.

"NINETEENTH.—All Germans and Austrians, naval, military, or civilians, to be evacuated within one month from Turkish dominions, and those in remote districts as soon after that time as may be possible.

"TWENTIETH.—Compliance with such orders as may be conveyed for the disposal of equipment, arms and ammunition, including the transport of that portion of the Turkish army which is demobilized under clause five.

"TWENTY-FIRST.—An Allied representative to be attached to the Turkish ministry of supplies in order to safeguard Allied interests. This representative to be furnished with all aid necessary for this purpose.

TURKISH PRISONERS.

"TWENTY-SECOND.—Turkish prisoners are to be kept at the disposal of the Allied powers. The release of Turkish civilian prisoners and prisoners over military age is to be considered.

"TWENTY-THIRD.—An obligation on the part of Turkey to cease all relations with the central powers.

"TWENTY-FOURTH.—In case of disorder in the six Armenia vilayets the Allies reserve to themselves the right to occupy any part of them.

"TWENTY-FIFTH.—Hostilities between the Allies and Turkey shall cease from noon, local time, Thursday, the 31st of October, 1918."

NO SECRET PACT WITH THE TURK

LONDON, Nov. 1.—With reference to rumors circulating here to the effect that the armistice with Turkey included clauses by which Turkey would retain sovereignty over Armenia and other provinces, the foreign office authorizes the statement that there is no truth in the suggestion that any secret political agreement is annexed to the armistice with Turkey.

AUSTRIA OFFERS TO LEAVE ALL VENETIA PLAIN

ROME, Nov. 1.—It is understood that the terms of the Allied nations for an armistice for Austria-Hungary are now in the hands of Gen. Diaz, the Italian commander-in-chief.

The text of the Austro-Hungarian communication to the supreme Italian command asking immediate suspension of hostilities according to the dispatch reads thus:

"If hostilities are suspended the evacuation of the Venetian plain, now in a good state of cultivation, would be accomplished without any damage whatever to the country. For this reason the Italian supreme command is asked to take the necessary dispositions with a view to the immediate suspension of hostilities."

GODERICH COLLEGIATE BUYS PROPERTY

Capt. and Mrs. Fox are to have a change of appointment, which will take place next week. They are quite well known in Goderich, having worked in co-operation with other congregations in town since he came here two years ago. A farewell has been arranged for them and a good time will be enjoyed in the Salvation Army Citadel Sunday evening.

SCORES KILLED IN CRASH NEAR NEW YORK CITY

Rear-End Collision of Trains for Coney Island.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Between 75 and 100 men and women were killed and probably double that number injured in a rear-end collision tonight between two Brooklyn Rapid Transit trains in the cut near the Prospect Park station on the Brighton Beach line. The crash occurred when the train ahead, said to have been in charge of a "green" motorman, jumped the track at a switch, and another train, running in the same direction, plunged into the rear cars.

The tragedy marked the first day of a strike called by the company's motormen to enforce the reinstatement of 29 discharged members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as ordered by the national war labor board.

Cause Unknown.

Officials of the company professed three hours after the accident to have no definite information as to its cause. They said no reports had been made to them by members of the train crew.

District Attorney Lewis of Kings County declared all the officials of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and every person connected in any way with the accident has been ordered placed under arrest.

According to survivors of the wreck the motorman evidently was not accustomed to the road, as he was compelled to back at one point when he had taken the wrong switch. Both trains were jammed with passengers.

CONSERVE HARD COAL, URGES THE FUEL BOSS

Public Advised To Use More Soft Coal and Wood.

OTTAWA, Nov. 1.—That there is imperative need of conservation as regards the use of anthracite coal in Canada was stated tonight by Mr. Magrath, fuel controller.

A dispatch from Washington, which was published recently in the Canadian newspapers has to some extent been misinterpreted in that it has created the impression that there would be plenty of hard coal available.

Whilst the statistics of shipments from the United States were approximately correct as stated in the dispatch, it is necessary to emphasize the fact that the total tonnage which has been allotted to Canada still remains about one million tons lower than had originally been arranged for, the reduction being practically one quarter and being due to demands in the United States owing to the increased war activities there. He urges that soft coal and wood should be used as far as possible, so as to conserve our limited supply of anthracite coal.

SAN FRANCISCO MAN GAINED 24 POUNDS

Fred Sanders Suffered Thirty Long Years—Spent Hundreds of Dollars.

"When I began taking Tanlac I only weighed 136 pounds," said Fred W. Sanders, while in the Owl Drug Store at 710 Market street, San Francisco, recently, "and I now tip the beam at 160, which gives me an actual gain of 24 pounds in two months' time."

Mr. Sanders is a boilermaker by trade, which occupation he gave up on account of ill-health. He is employed by the Glidden Varnish Company, and lives at 702 Vallejo street. He has been a resident of San Francisco for 40 years. In describing his trouble, which caused him so much suffering and loss of weight, Mr. Sanders said:

"I have suffered with my stomach 30 years or more. In fact, almost as far back as I can remember, I have suffered from indigestion and constipation, and these troubles have had me down and out many a time, especially during the past fifteen years. My stomach was so upset that nothing agreed with me, and at times I couldn't even retain water on my stomach. I was bloated nearly all the time by the gas which formed after my meals, and I simply suffered torture from the pains caused by it. I have tried about every diet a person could be put on. I could eat no fruits or meats, and the very sight of eggs would upset my stomach. At one time I had a nervous breakdown, caused by these same troubles. I was laid up for six months at this time, and spent over $700 for treatment and medicines before I could get to work again. Since then I reckon I have spent twice that much more without getting more than a little passing relief. I finally had to give up my trade as boilermaker, because the constant pounding and jar affected me so I was afraid of another breakdown. I got so I couldn't sleep at night, and fell off until I weighed only 136 pounds.

"Seeing Tanlac advertised in the papers, and as it was a new one on me, I decided to try it. Now, just let me tell you, it has done me more good than all the other medicines I have taken in the past ten years put together. And eat! Why, I have the best appetite I have had in years, and my gain in weight shows how well my food agrees with me. My food all seems to digest perfectly, and I never feel an ache or a pain. I sleep like a log at night, and get up in the mornings thoroughly rested and ready for a big day's work. Tanlac certainly is some medicine, and you may just count on me as one of the biggest boosters on the coast. I only wish I could have had it 30 years ago; it would have saved me a world of misery and pain I have been through all these years."

Tanlac is sold in London by Standard Drug, Limited, and by an established agency in every town.

A Message to Men Who Feel Weak, Played-Out and All In.

It is a true saying that "A man is as old as he feels." Brigham Young used to say he never felt old and he lived up to his boast. He used to say that no man need feel old if he cared to take the trouble to keep young. The same means he used to keep young, strong and vigorous is obtainable by anybody who will take the trouble to ask the Standard Drug Company or any other reliable druggist for Brigham Young's Invigorator. It is made according to Brigham Young's original and private formula, and has only recently been made obtainable by the public.

It is perfectly safe and harmless, and it never fails to produce satisfactory results. Your druggist will give you your money back if it fails.—Advt. N. 2, 14.

THE RELEASE OF TOWNSHEND.

THE GODS who are custodians of the fortunes of chivalrous and gallant soldiers must have smiled the other day. They could look down upon a spectacle for which history may be searched in vain to discover a parallel. General Townshend, heroic defender of Kut-el-Amara, taken prisoner by the Turks, aided by their erstwhile ally and recent enemy, Famine, carried the peace proposals of the Ottoman Empire to the British command in the Aegean. He it was who acted as the plenipotentiary of those who had been his jailers.

Townshend was forced to surrender to the Turks during those dark days of 1916 when Allied fortunes met reverses on many fronts, that time of testing around Easter when it seemed that "muddling through" methods had been the downfall of commands east and west. The relief force was coming within reach of the general and his sorely-pressed army, but the vultures of the desert had already picked clean the bones of many British soldiers who succumbed to sheer starvation. A sob welled in the British throat when this brave force was taken, but there was nothing so calculated to inspire the same British nature with the desire to carry on in bitter extremity as the impulse to effect the rescue of Townshend and to redeem the loss of Kut.

How bravely Maude and Allenby "took up the torch" is a matter of fresh history. They have driven on through the desert lands of Mesopotamia and Persia until gradually dawned upon Constantinople the menace of the dogged forces that struck beyond Jerusalem, and in an incredibly short time reached Allepo. British arms have never been made more resplendent in hundreds of noble deeds than by the campaign that followed the fall of Kut and the capture of the general and his army who had fought to the bitter end, and would have died but for the confidence of a better day to come, and the horror of such a needless sacrifice.

Townshend returns to share the honors of the victors. His release is symbolic of the change in the fortunes of the Allies.

VIOLENT INDEPENDENCE.

Sixteen pages of the Canadian Official Record use about as much newsprint as seven pages of the Daily News. We persist in believing that the publication of this Government bulletin once a week is an indefensible waste of pulp at a time when that commodity is scarce and dear. We find nothing in the publication which has not been "covered" by the telegraphic advices from Ottawa, save that some news, wisely condensed by the correspondents, is here given in laborious and wearisome detail. Thousands of Canadians have questioned the wisdom of supplying at public expense verbatim reports of parliament. If "Hansard" is regarded by many as an unwarranted extravagance, what can be said of an official newspaper between sessions? Why not ask General Fotheringham to suppress it?—Toronto News.

THE COUNTRY should send up a silent prayer for such independence of thought as is expressed by this ultra-Tory, super-Unionist paper.

The News has been known to disagree with the Government once before, and on this the second occasion of its violent insurgency, due credit should be given.

But is it not striking that the News should select one of the pet hobbies of Hon. Newton W. Rowell to single out for attack? Are there no other serious wastages about which it could insurge?

It is more likely that there now is a fairly definite movement toward the elimination of Mr. Rowell. A story is told of a man in a dining car who ordered ham and eggs and potatoes. His table partner told the waiter to bring the same order, but to "eliminate" the eggs. The waiter went away puzzled, coming back soon to ask if the traveller would not take the eggs scrambled because "our eliminator was busted, suh."

Mr. Rowell got into the elimination business, first with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and later, it is whispered, with Sir Robert Borden as his objective. His "eliminator appears to have been "busted," but not before he had scrambled eggs that cannot be unscrambled.

INACTION IN THE EPIDEMIC.

A NUMBER of physicians and others interested in the war on the Spanish influenza epidemic have entered violent protests against the reopening next week of a number of public places such as churches, theatres and poolrooms. They have seen the ravages of the disease as have no others, and they believe that another week would serve as a margin of safety and a buffer between the public and the disease. Despite protests from some of those who believe the board of health alone should speak, The Advertiser has permitted a free expression of views on the matter. A newspaper that is deaf to the feeling of the community on such an occasion is not fit to be circulated, and, as it is scarcely necessary to state, the health of the public is the primary consideration.

But while the prospects are that the epidemic is dying out, there are some questions that should be asked of those who are strongest in their protests. In the first place, is this disease communicable? Every authority is willing to admit that it is.

If this be true, then the greatest sin this community has committed is not the premature reopening of public places, but its failure to properly quarantine the cases which existed. The closing of public places is a theoretical method of checking the disease. That is, it is only presumed and not definitely known that people infected with the disease will enter public places. The precaution is taken on the assumption that they will attend.

But the failure to quarantine and placard houses where the disease was existent does not admit of any theoretical suppositions. It was a fact, it was Exhibit A, that the disease existed in certain houses. It was known that the disease was communicable, yet no effort was made to bring about even a partial segregation of the cases. While the most deadly visitation in the history of the city was raging, we were quarantining and placarding homes in which milder forms of disease existed, and there was no serious demand from those who should have spoken to stop the chief and practical sources of infection. Children from a house which was not infected played with children from a house where cases existed, and the disease was passed on before parents were aware of the existence of the influenza in the neighborhood.

Toronto officialdom, with which the tradition of the Seven Sleepers holds good in most every crisis, smugly folded hands and said there were no laws to cover the following contingencies during a plague which filled the cemeteries with new graves:

The reporting of cases by physicians.

The reporting of deaths by undertakers.

The quarantining and placarding of houses during the epidemic.

Lieut.-Col. Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, chief officer of health for the Province of Ontario, did not wish to make any laws nor break any rules, and he has a good deal for which to answer. The communities outside the inactive provincial health organization are not blameless, either. It may not have been a serious matter whether or not physicians and undertakers reported cases and deaths, but it was a serious matter that homes remained unquarantined for Spanish influenza, while they were marked for a half dozen other diseases that have a small percentage of fatality. A health officer should be an opportunist in the public welfare if anyone should be, and the communities of Ontario will have come to appreciate the necessity for making their public health officials and boards capable of meeting an emergency. There has been plenty of sacrifice and heroism shown during the epidemic, but much of it may have been misdirected because of a lack of leadership from those who should be able to make a way when they cannot find it in the book of conventional regulations.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Soon there will be a rush to the presses of the country, and a few days after peace is declared we shall read "Agents Wanted—To sell a complete history of the recent war."

When Austria announced a "withdrawal" from Italian territory it sounded like the alibi of a bushleague ball player.

"Westward, the path of empire takes its way." Canada should be prepared for a tremendous influx of immigration, but the gift of vision does not come to the famous cabinet council.

Why not present the kaiser and his sons with a submarine and let them go scot free if they can evade the assembled navies of the world?

Winnipeg has decided to institute the placarding system as a preventive measure for influenza. This is one of the first precautions any community should take.

Speaking of non-essential occupations at the present time, what about a few of those Ontario license board commissionerships?

In the same issue of a local paper appear two articles. One states that the surplus of the hydro is $40,000, while the other states the surplus for ten months is $68,000 and will be $90,000 for the year. How are we to know?

ACCORDING TO PLAN.

Civilians! there lies in the virtue
Of patience an infinite balm;
No rumor of horrors can hurt you
If only you smile and are calm;
Though you find us apparently waiving
The offensive we lately began,
Bear up; we are simply behaving
According to plan.

Did you suffer a pain in your liver
When you saw some invincible corps,
After gallantly crossing a river,
Resume the original shore?
'Twas a mere reconnoitering excursion;
We went and we saw and we ran;
Yes, we did it (including immersion)
According to plan.

In those very identical regions
That sunder the Marne from the Aisne
We advanced to the rear with our legions
Long ago and have done it again;
Fools murmur of errors committed,
But every intelligent man
Has accepted the view that we flitted
According to plan.

If you doubt our traditional fitness
For hacking our way in the West,
Chateau Thierry may serve as a witness
That our culture is still of the best;
For our Prussians made hay of its treasure
(As only a gentleman can Whose duty is one with his pleasure)
According to plan.

With feats such as these to inspire you,
Don't talk of the turn of the tide;
With the fame of our record to fire you,
Let patience be sister to pride;
Though the look of affairs be misleading
(Like your bread, which appears to be bran),
Rest assured we are always proceeding
According to plan.

NO TIME TO LET UP.

"Recent events have enhanced, not lessened, the importance of this loan, and I hope that my fellow countrymen will let me say this to them very frankly; the very best thing that could happen would be that the loan should not only be fully subscribed, but very greatly oversubscribed. We are in the middle of the greatest exercise of the power of this country that has ever been witnessed, or forecast, and a single day of relaxation in that effort would be of tragical damage alike to ourselves and to the rest of the world. Nothing has happened that makes it safe or possible to do anything but push our effort to the utmost. The time is critical and the answer must be complete."—President Wilson.

A TIDY BATTLEFIELD

BY H. F. GADSBY.

Third in a Series of Articles Written for The Advertiser.

When the joyriders of the world visit the scenes of the war after this bloody Armageddon is over they will probably divide battlefields into two kinds—untidy, hideously pocked and pitted ones, like Vimy, and tidy ones like Amiens or Arras.

O.. Canadian part in the battle of Amiens covered a plot of ground fifteen miles long by five miles wide—seventy-five square miles of French territory relieved of the Hun oppressor,—and when I saw it two weeks after the event it had been neatly brushed and combed and was in good shape to receive company. What I liked about it most was its accessible character—rolling land, gentle valleys, woods not too thick, no rivers to wade, few trench systems to cross, just enough shell holes to make it interesting, and that devil's weed, barbed wire, rolled up and out of the way.

It was such a terrain as Wellington might have enjoyed at Waterloo, firm foothold and smooth going, and at the same time such a terrain as made possible the modernest enginery of war—tanks little and big, and the airplanes hovering low like hawks as they circled above the conflict. The battlefield, which begins some five miles yonder side of Amiens, was in fact, one big wheat field, studded with hamlets and villages, before war made it a battlefield, and it still has that gentle aspect. It does not sear the eyes and cramp the heart like the murdered landscape of Vimy and Ypres, where every foot of ground has been killed and rekilled a dozen times. It had not been No Man's Land very long before the Germans were driven back. If it had been the good brown earth would have looked more like a series of confluent ulcers than it does now.

Over our five o'clock tea, General Macdonald of the second division showed me his little contour map of the action. A very good map indeed—and some day a vivid souvenir for the general's den—but it did nothing more than emphasize the bird's-eye view of the battlefield which was already in my mind.

An orderly battlefield, window-dressed, so to speak, for visitors who can tramp over it now without getting their feet wet, their boots muddy or their breeches torn. Under that placid earth which would fain carry in its breast nothing sedder than a poppy, lie the ensanguined bodies of many thousand brave men who died for freedom's sake. The Canadians alone overwhelmed four Hun divisions and "took on" sixteen, inourring eight thousand casualties in one short week, so that it must have been a battle of proportions. But what of that? One battle in many hundreds of battles, each with its trumpet tale of courage! Besides the dead men are decently out of sight. It was, as little Peterkin's grandfather would say, a glorious victory—the kind of victory we have for breakfast every morning nowadays—so let it go at that. Nature has forgotten it already—she has given us a day all blue and gold and shimmering radiance for our pilgrimage. Let us look about us.

"Here," said Lieut. Robert Watt, A.D.C., indicating two hundred grim, black mouths, muzzling skyward, "are the guns we took."

The guns have been taken in many poses. Airplane photographs have made them familiar to the public, but no picture speaks like the sullen silence of these Hun monsters who will raven no more. They are of all sizes, from machine guns to super-howitzers. Two-thirds of "the bag" fell to the Canadians, but the biggest one of all was the prize of the Australians.

I pointed it out to Lieut. Watt, whose local pride was nettled. "Sheer luck!" he snorted. "It happened to be on their side of the railway track."

All captured guns are now under the management of a trophies commission whose duties will be largely simplified by the cards that Tommy leaves behind: "Hhe 42nd Ontarios took this," "Property of the 10th Royals," "This goes to Toronto," and similar instructions crisp and to the point. The one thing that will not happen to captured guns is to be beaten into plowshares or other warful objects. They will salt the earth with their messages. Every littlest town in the whole white world that fought for democracy will claim one for an ornament and a shrine, to tell the remotest ages what was done in the Great War and who did it. Somewhere about the middle of the battlefield we glimpsed a mired tank. "Good ground for tanks here," Lieut. Watt explained, "but that fellow struck a soft spot."

Soft spot! Well rather! Pow, ow. Behemoth had simply wallowed into it snout down tail up—like a plesiosaurus burrowing! It had died a hard death too—all red, blistered and shell-torn. The tank crews work for twelve hours at a stretch in a temperature of 120 degrees plus petrol fumes so overpowering that men not fully trained could be rendered unconscious in two hours. As it is they are often lifted out unconscious at the end of their day's trick, with their skins as black as coal. They are real salamanders, the tank crew, but even a salamander can't stand up to a German battery, pumping salvos of five point nine at point blank range.

Poor old behemoth has got his! I judged from his remains that have received more than one direct hit fair in the bowels and that the brave fellows inside have been burnt to a crisp. Your tank may be a little better than the wooden horse of Troy, but it's no boudoir at that.

"How about the whippets?" I asked. "Is it true that a whippet can catch up with a Gemran colonel, galloping hell for leather, and flatten him out like a pancake?"

"That sounds wide," said Lieut. Watt, "but some of these German colonels have damned good horses. I should say that the whippet story wasn't more than twelve miles behind the truth."

There had been hard fighting at this spot and a neat little graveyard of white crosses looked like the harvest.

"No," said Lieut. Watt, "these were the German lines for a year and naturally they developed a little graveyard of their own. There's always a certain number of sudden deaths in the trenches you know. Our own fellows are tucked in further back. All the battle did to this graveyard was to unbury it.

"Of course," he added, "we covered them up again. We didn't like to see the poor fellows staring defeat in the face."

And this is the story of every grave in every battlefield. There is no rest for the weary. The dead do not win peace. After life's fitful fever their slumber is more fitful still.

At Beaucourt we came across our first ruined village—a rubbled heap, brick slide, a grey and leprous chaos. Here and there a wall stood up—the ribs of a once happy home. Half the church was gone, but what was left spoke vilely of what the Huns do to churches when they are in a playful mood. They have stabled their horses in it—they had polluted two high altars with unrameable filthiness.

The cure had once had an orchard and a garden, but the cure's orchard and cure's garden had met the fate of all orchards and gardens in the war zone. The trees, blasted by high explosives, were the livid hue of dying faces. Their naked branches agonized to heaven. Convulsed with pain, they had given up the ghost. The torment of their wounds had been more than human.

The garden was a trodden mass of battle litter—old boots, old tins, old bottles, old shells,—those flowers of evil. But over against the South wall was a little bush and that one little bush flaunted a challenge to the sky, a red rose. A French colonel pondered it sadly.

"A red rose, Monsieur" he said, "not a white one. No flag of peace. Oh, you brave little flower!" And he patted the rose as if it were a gallant comrade who had just won the Croix de Guerre.

"Stop!" muttered Lieutenant Watt, who perhaps did not see as far into a French colonel's heart as an older man might.

"Next summer," I said, "the cure will be back in his garden and the rose will have company."

"Please God, yes," said the colonel, raising his cap to his prayers.

"This used to be a nice town," said Lieut. Watt edging away from sentiment. "I had a rest billet here once. The girls were very pretty and the band played every night except Sunday."

Where are those pretty girls now? Flotsam on the charity of France. Sadder than that—perhaps.

Just outside Beaucourt was the salvage dump of the sweepings and scourings of the fight—helmets, haversacks, blankets, water bottles, swords, guns, shells, flares, booms, grenades, bayonets, boots, overcoats, all the sodden miscellany of an enemy in swift retreat.

Watt, as being once a bombing officer had to dissect the flares and the other little shells to see how they worked from the inside. I once read a book called Helen's Babies, and those babies were forever taking things apart to see "how the wheels go wound." One of those babies, grown to young man's estate, is Lieut. Watt, A. D. C., who will have his head blown off some day through his insatiable curiosity. I declined with thanks his offer of several grenades and bombs "with the stingers taken out"—I have no wish to become an arsenal—but I accepted a German helmet and a German bayonet as being safe and portable.

The German helmet is camouflaged in brown and green. It is the latest style in German helmets—the pickelhaube with the glittering spike on top having been discarded long ago as a dangerous clue for the enemy. It is a heavy helmet—perhaps five pounds before a battle and a hundred pounds when in flight—and it is awkward to wear. Our own helmet has it beaten forty ways, being light, comfortable and not unsightly.

The best thing about this German helmet is the dint in the spot where the Hun forehead would naturally be. If our idea of a safe democracy didn't kill him outright it at least knocked hard at the front door of his intellect. I notice many of these German helmets doing duty as flower pots outside our field hospitals and swung in chains they make neat containers for geraniums and such a sweeter sort of kultur than anything those helmets harbored before.

German shells, searching the woods to our right, cut our visit to the salvage dump short. It was plain that Fritz knew just about where his lost goods were and he didn't want us pawing them over. Not wishing to imitate him I suggested that on our way to Roseries there was a metal dump which Henie had left behind on his way back to Hunsland.

The metal dump was a curious collection—crucifixes, alarm clocks, church bells, horseshoes, old stoves—everything meltable for miles around. Fritz must be starving for gun material. How the treasures of that metal dump—now in the hands of the foe—he advertised from time to time with a big shell. About every ten minutes he would wallop one over just to show that he parted with that metal dump with the greatest reluctance. One half the house which sheltered the metal dump having taken fire, and a thoroughly dead German under a rubbish heap in a corner doing his best to make the place even more disagreeable, I called a halt to further research and started back for dinner.

Our motor—a Sunbeam—that's a name for a ray of hope that goes back on you—seized this opportunity to puncture a tire. Sayers was all for a mending job—it would take twenty minutes, he said—but into four miles of front line to go and the vesper strafe closing in, I decided that we could wait—or if necessary go on on the rim. Which was done accordingly—but that is another story.

At all events it was a tidy battlefield and by now it must be safe enough to visit. But don't eat your pie while its smoking.

As a shell whined overhead I happened to say to Lieut. Watt, "This war isn't healthy, is it?"

"Well," replied that militant young philosopher, "if you come to the front you've got to pay frontage."

OH, YOU OBOE!

By Archey Cameron New.

Fuller and Fenton did their last steps and retired to their dressing-room, and the close of the Olympia's Monday morning "rakeover"—sometimes called rehearsal—was betokened by the awakening of Andy Scobell, the property man, advancing with a broom. O'Brien, in the fiddle pit, laid down his baton.

"Guess that lets us out," he announced to the others in the orchestra. Shawter started to close his piano, when O'Brien, with a twinkle in his eye, stepped once more upon the dais and called to a wrinkled individual on the stage, "Oh, I beg pardon, Charlie. Boys, one verse of the funeral march. Charlie's doin' a single, entitled 'The Death of a Dying Brain.'"

A roar of laughter from the pit brought Charlie Zepp, the Olympia's press agent, from a huddled position on a packing box in the rear of the stage to his feet. He advanced to the footlights with a savage frown.

"Lad-ies and gen-tle-men," he announced, over O'Brien's head, to the empty house beyond. "The Olympia, as always, leads the rest. To encourage the success of amateur nights, we have placed an amateur band to play for you."

At a signal from O'Brien taps were rolled on the trapdrum, and amid the laughter that followed Zepp retired in defeat.

O'Brien beckoned to Wallace Mackay, who played the oboe, and the young man followed him out under the stage. When they were alone O'Brien turned to him with a frown.

"Wallace, old scout," he began, apologetically, "I hate to tell you, but you're looking awfully seedy. Th' boss thinks it looks bad for the house. Better get a new suit."

"But, Bill," objected Mackay, ruefully regarding his worn-out clothes, "I can't do it right now. I haven't the money. Besides, why th' new clothes? Only the first two rows see us, an' they're generally travelin' men."

"Not this week they ain't," answered O'Brien in the best queen's English. "Forrest's trying out that Lawder kid; she's a local bird an' all th' home folks will be down front all week t' give her th' up an' down. It'll look bad for th' house if th' orchestra look like bums. Get the new stuff on tick, or somehow, but get it. Get me?

Mackay nodded dumbly, and wended his way despondently to the stage floor. Pausing near Charlie Zepp, he was talking to the latter, meanwhile strenuously brushing his spotted tuxedo coat, when a golden-haired little vision floated by, attired for the street. She smiled merrily at the two men.

"Oh, you oboe!" she greeted Mackay cordially, then her eyes lighted on Zepp.

"Oh, Mr. Zepp!" she cried, eagerly. "Please give me a big write-up, will you? I want all my friends to see me here this week. Please do."

"What've you done?" demanded Zepp bluntly. "Y' can't get big write-ups outa gir, y'know. Small-time acts gets small-time write-ups."

"And small-time press agents generally have small-time brains," she retorted, good-naturedly. "But maybe you can stretch yours." And, flitting away, she tossed from her pink fingertips a kiss to them.

Mackay glanced at Zepp unhappily.

"I guess she's right," he said, sorrowfully. "I do look like a hobo. Even O'Brien told me to get a new suit. And just for her, too. So's her friends won't think th' Olympia is a cheap joint."

"Don't let that worry y' none," sympathized Charlie, howbeit sourly. "There won't be many t' look at her. I'll fix that."

Mackay started, for a vision of her wistful face floated across his mind.

"Oh, Charlie, have a heart," he pleaded. "Don't ruin th' kid's fun just 'cause you're in a bad humor."

"She's a cheese!" growled Zepp, and, reflecting on the orchestra's laughter a few minutes before, he added savagely, "An' so are you. So mind your own business."

t • • • •

Helen Lawder, stepping out of Forrest's office about two hours later, heard two men wrangling in the lobby, stepped back again and peeped through the crack in the door.

Mackay had gripped Charlie Zepp's arm and pushed him away from a large picture frame. In his (Mackay's) hand was Helen Lawder's picture, and as she saw it the girl behind the door started violently.

"Put that back!" thundered Mackay, holding out the picture.

"I won't!" refused Zepp, heatedly. "She sassed me, and she gets no notoriety for it, see?"

"Then I will," announced Mackay, and he replaced the photo in the open case and snapped the door. "And it stays there. Get me?"

"You're a nut," growled Zepp, taking another tack. "Y're ruinin' yerself, 'at's all. Ain't she settin' y' back th' cost of a new suit? An' didn' she call you a hobo?"

Mackey smiled ruefully.

"I guess she's right there," he admitted. "Anyway that's no reason why the poor girl should suffer. Why, Charlie, this engagement means a lot to her. It'll give her a big boost. Be a sport, Charlie. Give th' kid a chance. Th' mere fact that it's costin' me a new suit, just 'cause her town folks are gonna hands—after a night show two weeks be here ain't makin' me sore. An' besides, it's costin' me money, an' you not a red. C'mon, be a sport. I'll go you fifty-fifty. You give her five lines, an' I'll buy th' suit. What d'ye say?"

Charlie faced the young oboe player shamefacedly, and held out his hand.

"You win," he said, huskily, and hurried out of the lobby.

Helen, having heard every word, turned with a white face and a sob in her throat and opened the door to the manager's private office.

"Mr. Forrest, please, can I see you a minute?" she pleaded, and Forrest, noting her anxious face, banished his frown and bowed her smiling to a chair.

"No, I can't sit down," she told him hurriedly. "I want to tell you something." And then, into attentive ears, she poured everything she had seen and heard. "And now, Mr. Forrest, can you —will you do me a favor?"

"I'll try," he promised, smiling. He, too, couldn't resist the appeal of those soft blue eyes.

"Will you call Mackay in and give him a present of $50?" she asked. "He's done so much for me, and I want to repay him. Here it is." And she held out some bills to the manager, who waved them aside.

"Take 'em away," he replied gruffly, to hide a choke in his throat. "I'll give it to 'im myself." He choked off her protest quickly. "Nonsense, it's nothing. I'll charge it up to house expenses. And now—I'm busy."

"Thank you—so much," she whispered and then turning fled from the office.

In a little restaurant around the corner—patronized largely by the Olympia Theatre family, from stars to stage-hands—later, two men sat nibbling at a late supper, and nodding meaningly at a young couple nearby. One of them, Charlie Zepp, laid a chicken bone on his plate reverently, and whispered to the other.

"Forrest's an awful gossip," he confided to his companion, the O'Brien of the fiddle pit. "He did that."

"Stop choking and say something," urged O'Brien, tartly.

"I am sayin' somethin'," insisted Zepp, warmly. "Forrest's spilled th' beans."

"Look this way," ordered the other. "Y're seein' things. D. T.'s again?"

"Naturally y' wouldn't see nothin'," retorted Zepp. "I'll wise y' up. See th' flasher th' Lawder kid's got on her left hand?"

O'Brien looked and nodded disinterestedly.

"Forrest gave her that."

O'Brien, being nearsighted, leaned a little forward.

"G'wan," he snorted. "That's Mackay with her. He's th' fall guy."

"Fall guy, h——th' dickens!" Zepp corrected himself hastily as two ladies eyed him reproachfully and lowered his voice. "It wuz Forrest, I tell y'. Young Mackay did 'er a good turn. She asks Forrest t' slip Mackay fifty fish fer a new willie-rig. Forrest thumbs down on her roll, get's glassy in th' lamps an' slips Mackay a fake rulee. Then he spills it to the oboe boy that Lawder's ready t' retire from th' three a day to a nice li'l Harlem flat, providin' she ain't alone."

"Well?"

"Well, she ain't playin', is she?" demands Zepp. "An' she ain't alone, is she?"

RIVET your eyes on this picture of a Belgian mother and child, until you feel the full horror of the situation! Thousands of these orphans, dying of starvation, might now be living in comfort and plenty, had their soldier fathers not flung themselves into the breach when the Hun invaded Belgium.

The fathers died to save us. Are we going to let the orphans starve?

Conditions are simply ghastly. The United States loans to the Belgian Government finance the general relief work, but this only provides a bowl of soup and two pieces of bread to each person per day.

What is that for a growing child?

The Slaughter of the Innocents is less terrible than what is now occurring in Belgium—practically a whole generation of the Belgian nation in the grip of Consumption, Rickets and other ills all directly due to insufficient nourishment.

The Canadian Bureau in Brussels will administer funds, and provide means for getting the ailing children into Holland and into orphanages where they can be saved from a hideous death.

The Adventures of the Little People of the Great Forest.

MIRROR PON D IN RUINS.

When Sammy Muskrat was knocked into the air by the great waterspout passing through his tunnel, which he dug under the dam of Mirror Pond, there was a great roar of water. You would have thought it would have awakened the Beavers and all the little people from their slumbers.

But this strange thing happened at the time the waters were rushing out of Mirror Pond through that tunnel. There came on a tremendous thunderstorm, the thunder rolled and the lightning flashed, and the roar of the great storm drowned all other noises.

So you see, the Beavers and the other Little People did not hear the roar of the water rushing through Sammy Muskrat's tunnel under that dam. No, my friends, no one knew about that mean trick of that scamp of a Sammy Muskrat.

You know that usually the Beavers go out to work all night in the fall to chop down trees. But that evening the thunder was so terrible and the flashes of lightning so blinding, that Father Beaver said to all his family: "Now, on account of this awful storm, we'll no' go out tonight to chop down trees, and all can go to sleep, and we'll get up early in the morning and go to work."

So all the Beavers turned over in their beds and went sound asleep. Father Beaver had also heard the wolves prowling around outside their houses in the storm, but he did not speak of this new danger, for he feared it might give the little Beavers the nightmare or bad dreams.

And all the Little People of the Great Forest around Mirror Pond went to bed early that evening, and slept very sound, in spite of the terrible roar of the great storm outside. But all night long, in the roar of that storm, something terrible happened to beautiful Mirror Pond. What do you think it was?

The thunder rolled and the lightning flashed, and the roar of the great storm drowned all other noises.

Why, early next morning there was no Mirror Pond! It had disappeared in the night. And hundreds of Little People would be awfully sad and unhappy when they woke up.

The very first one to discover that Mirror Pond had run away in the night was Mrs. Jenny Blue-Jay. She came to Mirror Pond, as usual, very early in the morning. It was only four o'clock, when most people are in bed in deep sleep. She went to make her very pretty toilet, and to bathe and get a drink of pure, cool water, and to look in the water mirror and fit her handsome blue dress, and tie her white lace necktie and white lace collar. Now a great surprise was about to happen.

WINTER SUITS

French Influences on the Season and New Lines Developed by the Lengthening Skirts Demanded by the Mode.

(By MME. FRANCIS)
(The Famous Creator of Fashions, New York City.)

A walk in the Avenue du Bois in the morning always reveals the smart Parisian in a costume that is above reproach as far as cut, finish and all the details that should go with a street gown.

Smart French women never make the mistake of wearing very elaborate clothes for practical use. It is only when they are making calls or attending receptions in the afternoon that they indulge in such clothes and jewels. With all their simplicity, however, they are the essence of all that is chic, for to begin with, they are neatness personified. Their well-groomed shoes, spats, gloves and veil are above reproach, and with a smartly cut gown, chic hat and rich furs, they impress one as being thoroughly well turned out and yet appropriately so.

The French conception of a tailor-made gown has heretofore differed from the American, the latter being plain to a degree of severity that was almost masculine in its style. But now a touch in the way of a gay little waistcoat, fringed apron or trimming of fur gives the street gown that little air that is so essentially like the frocks worn in Paris this year, and makes a pleasing contrast to the semi-uniforms, which so many women must wear part of the time while carrying on their war work.

While light colors are not seen so much, still there is a tendency to wear tones that are not necessarily sombre and so the old-fashioned hue known as wine color has come in again. Trimmed with furs this makes a rich costume on a winter's day. Take, for instance, a wine-colored duvetyn suit trimmed in beaver, a fur that is more fashionable than ever, a variety to the straight lines of the coat being given by the way the front opens to show a waistcoat of wine-colored velvet, its plainness relieved by being embroidered in colored wool. The skirt is long and narrow and with the high fur collar and cuffs, makes an effective design that will be popular this season.

The woman of the bronze locks is always interested in a brown costume and will surely welcome an original design also fashioned in duvetyn. A brown waistcoat is edged with an apron, as it were, of a long graduated chenille fringe that gives a decided novel note, the coat laps across the centre and is held closely together with one large button and with a long narrow skirt completes a charmingly girlish costume. As this is not fur-trimmed, one has the advantage of being able to use a handsome neckpiece that may be worn with several costumes.

As there are some women who always affect black street clothes, a rather severe but very smart model in black cloth must fill their need. The particular beauty of this design is in its lines, which are particularly becoming to the figure and give it that very desirable slim look. To add the necessary relief to the sombreness, the collar and cuffs are embroidered in a braid effect and the front is finished with a double-breasted appearance. Lynx, the fur used for the collars and cuffs, has just the glossy finish that further brightens the black cloth.

Blue velvet is effectively used for a costume that may be worn either in the afternoon or morning. A quaint coat is edged with embroidery and squirrel, this same fur being used to form the buttons down the front that are fastened with cord loops which add much to the charm of the design.

Velvet is being much worn and when made in a design like the one just described is not inappropriate for morning wear and yet smart enough for afternoon function.

The hat is always an important part of the street costume and assists in making it more or less dressy as the occasion demands.

Furs and a bright bit of color given by a dainty handkerchief tucked in the tiny pocket on many of our gowns complete the costume of the chic woman as she makes her daily promenade.

THE FASHION FORECAST.

The waistcoat, always a smart addition to a costume, has evidently come to stay, and is to be worn with some of the smartest street frocks this winter, and is even to be made of fur, of course, of a close, short-haired type.

DESCEND NOT TO PEASANTRY, BUT RISE TO EQUALITY

Margery Mills Urges Farm Neighborhood To Cease Backsliding.

What are the standards by which we women estimate each other? Are the standards of necessity different in town and country, and does this account for the lack of sympathy too often apparent between us?

Not long ago I heard a town man discussing a farm neighborhood of my acquaintance, and comparing it with another near a large city, and he said: "These farmers are so uncultured." But I disagreed with him. These homes have nearly all a fairly well selected library, musical instrument and someone who can play it, some copies of good paintings. These people are comparatively well-informed upon the topics of the day. It is not culture they lack, but polish.

Of course, the little mannerisms that so many of our country folk are so ignorant of and indifferent to show up prominently among people who regard these as essentials, and we country people are judged accordingly and put down as belonging to a somewhat lower order of society.

Do Not Depend on Grooming.

Now, to all this we strenuously object. I defy any town or city to produce a company of representative men who are any more alike in appearance than were our farmers in convention last June, and very few of them depended on "grooming" for their good appearance. They were certainly a brainy, capable looking crowd. Wait till we get our organization in full swing, and then we'll have time to cultivate some of the little niceneesses that are so highly valued in some quarters, and that certainly have their advantages everywhere.

Big Interests Centered in Farmers and Laborers.

Someone has pointed out that the town stands for progress and the country for stability. Now, before we accept that statement we'll just examine it a little. What is progress? Are we as a nation progressing when we are allowing any one class to slip back little by little perilously near the conditions which forced our forefathers to leave their homes and seek freedom in this and other lands? Some of those folk went to New Zealand in the forties. Their children and grandchildren have progressed there. The same is true of Australia, particularly some sections of it. Those countries legislate for the big interests, too. But they have the sense to see that the big interests of any country are centered in the farming and laboring class, and not in those who have accumulated wealth by the work of what we in democratic Canada characterize, mentally at least, as the "lower orders."

"Soft, White Hands" Standard Not Progress.

The highest standard of manhood and womanhood may be found in any class, but when we are standardizing, it will not do to give too many points to "soft, white hands" and grooming, and yet that very standard prevails, especially in towns and cities. Is that progress? I doubt it. I believe that every person owes it to himself or herself and theirs to present as good an appearance as is consistent with their occupation and financial standing. But I am the same person in whatever attire I may appear, and so are you.

There certainly are distinctions which are and should be made among people, but these should be based upon mind and character, real lasting personal attributes, and not upon mere outside appendages which can be changed at will.

Some Farmers Progress Backward.

I greatly fear that some of what are called progressive farm neighborhoods are like Pat, "progressing backward," and letting the enemy retreat on them in this matter of standards. On the other hand, the country does stand for stability with a stolid vengeance, that is for one kind of it, and we are beginning to hope that at last they will become stable and stand upon the dignity of their calling for their just dues, instead of being as unstable as water where these rights are concerned. Are the farmers of Ontario going to stand together? Some day I'll tell you the class that won't stand with the others. But if the towns have been progressing and growing, and they surely have, remember, the country neighborhoods have not been standing still. There is no such thing as stagnation. We have been going backward steadily, and our goal is peasantry. If we do not stand shoulder to shoulder, men and women, and train our children to stand with us, we shall awake to find outselves a peasant class, and our costume will be that which has already received semi-official recognition—the one the "farmerettes" wore. Very picturesque, eh! And some future poet will be writing a companion piece to Wordsworth's "Solitary Reaper."

Let Us Raise Our Standards.

Let us raise our standards of and for country life. People's position in the country really depends upon merit rather than possession, which is vastly better than the money standard, upon which it is to be feared the so-called aristocracy of our nation is based. Our hospitality, too, is informal, but real in a greater measure than is that of the towns. But we must as a class insist upon the recognition of our rights as a class. That cannot be too often repeated. Learn our worth and value ourselves accordingly, and persistently require all other classes to accord us fair treatment. We need not demand it in words; there are other far better ways in which to secure it.

Town Folk Will Meet Us Half Way.

It will not be long before the townsfolk will be ready to meet us at least half way, instead of with this patronizing air of superiority which is exasperating.

But when I get talking of these things I am like Ned's graphophone at the church social: They started it, and it had to be carried out, for they could not make it stop. Following it came the speech of a long-winded clergyman, and a naughty boy called out: "Better carry him out, too." The preacher stopped short; so will I. MARGERY MILLS.

LANG—HOWARD.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place on Wednesday, October 30, at 8 p.m. at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Howard, 793 Adelaide street, city, when their only daughter, Florence Marguerite, became the bride of Mr. William Ainslie Lang of Toronto.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a navy blue tailored suit with blue georgette blouse and blue and gold travelling hat. She carried an arm bouquet of Sunset roses and lilies of the valley, and was attended by Miss Lillian McKenzie, who looked charming in blue georgette crepe and silk, carrying yellow mums. Mr. Edward Howard, brother of the bride, assisted the groom. Throughout the service Lohengrin's wedding march was softly played by Mrs. (Rev.) T. B. Howard.

Rev. T. B. Howard of Tillsonburg, uncle of the bride, performed the wedding ceremony. After the service a wedding breakfast was served.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful set of black fox furs.

Mr. and Mrs. Lang will reside on Palmerston Boulevard, Toronto.

Miss Emeline Armstrong, 385 Princess avenue, entertained a number of the boys in khaki at a supper party on Friday evening in honor of Miss Margaret Smith of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. W. Griffith and little daughter, Olive, formerly of this city, were visitors with Mrs. E. J. Griffith, York street, on their way back from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE UNIFORM LESSON FOR SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 3.

ONE GOLDEN TEXT SUGGESTION.

By Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.

Appetite and Greed (World's Temperance Sunday.) Genesis, xxv., 27-34

QUESTIONS FOR TODAY.

16. Verses 30-34—How do you account for the folly of so many, who barter their happiness for time and eternity for the gratification of some temporary physical desire?

17. Jacob, while mindful of the present, looked more to the future, while Esau seemed to live in the present only. Which and why is the more excellent way?

18. What are some of the chief lessons to be learned from the lives of Jacob and Esau?

Golden Text: Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things. Now they do it to receive a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.—I. Corinthians, ix., 25.

OUR INCORRUPTIBLE CROWN.

The crowns of this life are sometimes made of garlands of roses, and although they are beautiful, and their fragrance sweet, such crowns last but for a day. The crowns of earthly monarchs are made of jewels, of gold, and of precious stones, and are worn only for show, but, alas! it is true in most instances, that "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." There is therefore but little or no real satisfaction in such things. But our incorruptible crown, which we receive here for right doing, is composed of satisfaction, delight in having done the right, and the favor of God, and by-and-bye we shall have placed upon our brow the crown of life, composed of bliss and never-dying satisfaction.

The ladies on the packing, purchasing and executive committees packed the Christmas boxes for the boys overseas on Friday, November 1.

FIRST AMERICAN JOCKEY LOSES LIFE IN FRANCE

James Mulrenan, Who Formerly Rode For McAvoy, Killed.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 1.—Former Jockey James Mulrenan, who once rode for J. H. McAvoy, a well-known turfman, has been killed in action. His relatives here have just received the sad news.

Mulrenan enlisted last year and went to France with a regiment of infantry. He was the first American race rider to lose his life on the battle line. Many English and French jockeys have been killed in the war.

Boxing Bouts Are Banned in National Sport Drive

Sunday Competitions Are Forbidden—Golf Players To Take Part in Campaign.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Professional boxing and all sporting competition planned for Sundays during the drive of the United War Work campaign next month were rejected by the executive committee in charge of the drive yesterday. At a meeting of the committee, of which John R. Mott is chairman, held at the University Club, a resolution was passed which provided that the sports committee of the campaign should sanction boxing activities only in army camps and at naval stations of the country. The resolution also provides that the committee will not approve of any sporting competition held on Sunday.

John D. Rockfeller, Jun., told the committee that protests against boxing as a means of aiding the war fund had been received from ministers in all sections of the country. This action means that the country-wide program which has been planned by James W. Coffroth of California, will have to be cancelled unless the boxing promoters decide to conduct the benefit boxing shows through independent committees of their own.

Although it was pointed out at the meeting yesterday that the boxing show for the Red Cross at Madison Square Garden netted $60,000, and that the present extensive boxing campaign was expected to raise at least $1,000,000, the committee frowned upon the sport. Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, who has charge of the athletic activities in the training camps, pointed out to the committee that the action of Jess Willard and a few boxers who were arbitrary about offering their aid, did not represent the prevailing spirit among the professional boxers, but that the majority of them were prompted by a sincere patriotic purpose of offering their services for the drive. Nevertheless the committee decided that it did not want to accept money from any benefits in which professional boxers appeared.

The action has placed Coffroth, who came here from San Francisco at the request of the sports committee, in an embarrassing position. He has enlisted the services of boxers and promoters in all parts of the country, and had a movement under way which would have resulted in the greatest demonstration of pugilistic activity ever known in this country. As the matter now stands the whole project will have to be abandoned. The committee may now ask Coffroth to promote the boxing shows at the army camps. At these events, the committee has not yet decided whether or not it will sanction the participation of professional boxers. It may confine the shows to bouts between men in the service only.

While the decision against boxing was a hard blow to the plans of the sport committee, of which Herbert L. Pratt is chairman, and William W. Roper secretary, the decision against sanctioning Sunday athletic activities for the fund will be even a harder blow.

The Professional Golfers' Association will hold a meeting on Monday at the Martinique to make plans for the pros' part in the drive, and it was part of their program to play Sunday matches. The Amateur Athletic Union had planned to hold Sunday meets, but these plans will have to be abandoned. One A. A. U. meet was held at City College Stadium last Sunday at which a collection was taken up for the drive, but, according to the decision of the committee, these funds cannot be accepted.

The committee was not unanimous in its action against the boxers and Sunday sports, as some of the members stated last night that they did not deem it fair to prevent the boxers or any other athletes from doing their bit toward the movement in their own way.

It was rumored several days ago that the opposition of John R. Mott, chairman of the committee, to boxing would result in its being dropped from participation in the drive, but when the sports committee broke away from the main committee and started to do business as a separate organization, it was believed that this objection had been overcome. The attitude of the executive committee yesterday in decreeing that no committee having any connection whatever with the drive would be permitted to hold benefit shows for the drive or conduct Sunday games in its behalf, has, however, revealed the contrary.

It is known that not all of the co-operating organizations which make up the United War work Campaign are opposed to accepting the aid of the boxers and the organizations which expect to conduct their games on Sundays for the Jewish Welfare Board, the National Catholic War Council, and the Salvation Army, have encouraged aid from these sources at all times.

TORONTO WAR VETS WANT HOCKEY TEAM

Good Material Among Returned Soldiers in the Queen City.

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—If some influential and hustling returned man who has had experience handling hockey teams would only take hold Toronto could have a hockey "team to cheer for." There are right now in Toronto a score or more good hockey players who have returned from overseas who are anxious to get into hockey again, and a khaki club just suits their ideas. A lot of these boys come from out of town, and are either in the military hospitals here or attending re-educational classes, or have remained in the city after being discharged. These lads are so keen on forming a senior or intermediate O. H. A. team here—preferably a senior team—that they have asked H. Payne, who managed the Veterans' ball club, to handle the project temporarily for them.

"The prospects for a good team are superb, but I want it distinctly understood that I will not have any official connection," said Payne today. "I had my fill of baseball this summer and want a rest. However, the boys are very keen, and all they need is a manager who knows his way around the hockey sector without a guide. They will show him plenty of good hockey. And, say, wouldn't a vets' team make a hit! Why, every man in town behind a service button would be down cheering his lungs out for the 'buddies' on the ice, and the boys from the hospitals and home would have something to take a real interest in the long winter days. It certainly looks good to me."

Around town some of the Vets are hankering for Major Hugh Sinclair, of No. 2 Garrison Depot Battalion, a 'Varsity hockey and football player, to take hold, and by the same token a high-class right-hand man to help him out, and a lad who knows his business, Teddy Marriott, is also back in town. Teddy would be a drawing card himself. He has a host of friends in town and he is an astute hockey man. Why, there are rumors from France that Teddy tried to start a hockey league up along the Vimy front. He proposed to play on the pond behind Mount St. Eloi, but Heinie kept the puddle so persistently agitated that even a veteran icemaker like Marriott could not get ice.

McKAY AND BURGESS both played first-class hockey last winter and expect to be on the ice again this winter, when the bell rings.

JOCKEY SCHUTTINGER GETS HANDSOME SUM

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—One thousand dollars for one minute and twelve seconds of work was the reward of Jockey Andy Schuttinger for his great ride on Eternal in the latter's victory over Billy Kelly at the Laurel track on Monday. This is the biggest riding fee paid a jockey in many years. When the other jockeys heard of it, their tongues began to wag. "Snapper" Garrison, he of the whirlwind finish that landed many a forlorn hope in front when their backers' hearts were like lead, said: "Gee, that's all I got for riding Boundless, the winner of the $50,000 American Derby. It was no minute and twelve seconds of work either. I was an hour and fifty minutes at the post, and then, in the boiling hot sun, had to drive Boundless every foot of the mile and a half route. Compared with that ride, Schuttinger had a nice easy glide down a toboggan slide. Owners are more liberal with their money these days.

TORONTO SOCCER MEN TO GO TO NEW YORK

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—The Sportsmen's Patriotic Association of Toronto, through its president, P. J. Mulqueen, today sent a telegram to New York to the war welfare committee of the United States, offering to send a Canadian soccer team to New Yor kto compete against the United States champions at the Polo Grounds in the first of the international events in the great nation-wide movement in the United States. The Toronto team will be selected by the T. and D. and Provincial League directors.

It is expected that there will be a return international soccer game in Toronto following the match in New York for the benefit of Canadian patriotic funds.

BOB MOORE, RACE DRIVER, RETURNS FROM FRANCE

BATTLE CREEK, Nov. 1. — Bob Moore, an American automobile racing driver, is one of the few men who have been tumbled from the skies in combat with German aviators who have lived to tell "how it felt." Moore, who is recuperating here, was reported killed on the western front. He was "shot down in flames" and in his fall broke four ribs, punctured his lungs, broke his right hip, and so injured one eye that the sight likely will be impaired. He spent some months in a hospital in Paris. Moore was a member of the French Escadrille.

ETERNAL RETIRES FOR SEASON

LAUREL, Md., Nov. 1. — Eternal has run his last race this year. He goes into retirement with six out of eight races to his credit and a victory over Billy Kelly to top it off.

In the words of his owner, Jim McClelland:

"Eternal will be seen under colors next time in the Kentucky Derby next spring—at least that is my hope and my plan."

He added that Eternal, apart from a slight soreness from time to time, was as sound as the day he was foaled. He is growing too, and, barring accident, will confirm as a three-year-old the greatness he has established as a two-year-old.

He cost $2,000 as a yearling, and Mr. McClelland picked him out himself.

LONDON WILL HAVE FAST HOCKEY TEAM THE COMING WINTER

Five 1917 Players Will Be On the Junior O. H. A. Lineup.

London should have one of the fastest O. H. A. junior teams in the district this coming season, as five players who were on the line-up last year will be out on the ice again this winter, and a number of other lads will also try out for the team.

Archie McKay, Johnny Burgess, "Doc" Cline, Art Gillies and H. Smith will be back again this winter. Herbert Smith has returned to the city recently. He was out west all summer, but is back, and will guard the goal for the locals. Archie McKay and Johnny Burgess are in the city, and will turn out. These boys showed great speed on the ice last season, and will show up again this winter. Art Gillies and "Doc" Cline are a good combination.

It is expected that a number of soldiers in training in this district who are not over the age limit will try out for the junior team, and it is likely that a few of them will be fast enough to make the team.

Who will handle the local junior team this season has not yet been decided. It has been rumored that the Orient Club may take out a team, but nothing definitely has been decided.

One of the men who was interested in the L. A. A. two years ago stated to The Advertiser that he was not averse to backing a team here this winter. If the Orients do not take charge of the juniors it is a pretty good bet that this man will form a club and take out a team.

LEMON JUICE WHITENS SKIN

Girls! Make beauty lotion at home for few cents

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best bleaching and skin whitening lotion and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, and see how tan, redness, sallowness, sunburn and windburn disappear, and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. Yes! it is harmless.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

How Every Good Doctor Prevents Blindness in Babies

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG, A. B., M. A., M. D., (Johns Hopkins University.)

DR. HIRSHBERG

Recently in Chicago two nurses were tried and found guilty of having neglected to drop two drops of a 1 per cent solution of silver nitrate into the infant's eyes at birth.

Many states have properly and correctly passed laws which require doctors and nurses to instill a preventive solution into a baby's eyes the moment of its birth. While it is true that most youngsters would be born without danger of blindness, it is a fact that these specific antiseptic drops absolutely prevent inflammation of babies' eyes, which so often causes blindness.

Although almost a generation has elapsed since the French physician, Dr. Crede, discovered this simple, safe and sure method to reduce the number of cases of blindness, so "slow and sot in their ways" are some parents that they hardly know of "ophthalmia neonatorum," aa blindness in the newborn is called, much less its dangers and case of prevention. They fail to realize their dereliction of duty, honor and justice, when they neglect to put the harmless drops into the new-born's eyes which do only good and prevent blindness.

Moreover, parents who do not insist that these silver eyedrops be used, may hereafter, in the enlightenment which these facts bring, consider themselves guilty of criminal negligence.

Acute Germ Disease.

Ophthalmia neonatorum was once foolishly called "catarrh of the new-born." Beware always of the words "catarrh," "nervous" and "rheumatism"—they are a Joseph's coat of many colors used to cloak many hidden dangers.

This kind of inflammation of the eyes in the new-born is an acute infectious germ disease. If the two drops are not inserted at once at birth, matter at the corners of the baby's eyes is apt to be seen on the second or third day after birth. The eyeballs are soon affected and the glazed surface of the cornea soon becomes rough, corrugated, dull and seriously damaged. Treatment begun at this stage may arrest the trouble short of blindness, but the disease will leave its marks.

Is Not Inherited.

The best method of prevention, therefore, is to cleanse the baby's eyes with normal salt water or boric water and then drop two drops of a 1-per cent solution of nitrate of silver into the little one's eyes. These silvery drops disperse the unseen germs before they multiply as they may do in two or three days.

Blind asylums until very lately were largely populated with men and women whose blindness harks back to ignorance, carelessness and indifference. Ophthalmia neonatorum was blamed then, as were many other maladies, upon ancestors. However, it is not an inherited infection. Infections and contagious diseases are never inherited. They are perhaps at times congenital, as is this disease.

Answers to Health Questions

C. S. Y. Q.—Kindly advise what to do for anaemia.

A.—Sunlight, fresh air, sleeping on a porch outdoors, eating fresh fruits, no canned foods and eating something every three hours, bathing and swimming help quite a bit in cases of anaemia. An examination should be made of the teeth also. Sometimes a blood transfusion helps.

A NASHVILLIAN. Q.—Kindly advise what to use to make hair curly.

A.—Apply a little of the following to your hair:

Glycerine	1½ ounces
Gum arabic	1½ ounces
Carbonate of potash	1½ ounces
Rosewater	2 pints

J. B. Q.—Kindly advise what to do for a leaky valve.

A.—Inside of the chambers of the heart there are draw curtains called valves. These flap open to allow the blood to come in, and close automatically when blood has filled the chambers. When these curtains shrink from an infectious disease or some other trouble they do not close fully, and then cause flow of the blood between the chambers. It is not a serious condition at all.

A READER. Q.—Kindly advise what is good for poison ivy.

2. Also please give me something for the itch.

A.—If the little, multiplied water blisters of true poison ivy are present and not eczema, this will heal it:

With a camel's hair brush paint the effected parts with fluid extract of grindelia robusta one part to four parts of water.

2. Apply a little of the following for the itch:

Pink calamine	2½ drams
Zinc oxide	2 drams
Glycerine	2 drams
Phenol	30 drops
Limewater	2 ounces
Rosewater	2 ounces

A SUBSCRIBER. A.—You must have a thorough examination made to find out if your heart is in good condition.

READER. Q.—Kindly advise what to do for perspiration in the arm pits.

A.—The causes are numerous, but the remedy is often a teaspoonful of formalin and five drops of essence of rose to a quart of water. Peroxide of hydrogen, orris root left on a minute or two, then 15 grains of tannic acid to a tumbler of bay rum as a wash might help. Charcoal internally to sweep out the intestines and to absorb the bad odors in the stomach have been known to do good.

MRS. C. E., London, Ont. Q.—Kindly advise what will take nits out of children's hair?

A.—Wash the hair in acetic acid and water. Then brush the hair thoroughly. Repeat this several times on successive nights.

SUBSCRIBER, St. Vincent, Ont.: Q.—Kindly advise what to do for infected tonsils?

A.—Have a thorough examination made by a throat surgeon, and if necessary, have the tonsils removed.

X. Y. Z., London, Ont.: Q.—Please tell me what to do for dandruff?

A.—Use a little of the following for your dandruff about three times a week:

Sulphur	1 dram
Resorcin	10 grains
Salicylic acid	10 grains
Sulphate of quinine	10 grains
Petrolatum	1 ounce

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silcox

BLINKY AND WINKY BROWN BEAR.

One bright, beautiful morning Winky and Blinky Brown Bear asked their mamma if they might go out into the woods in search of nuts.

"We'll not go far," whined Blinky Brown Bear.

"All right," laughed Mamma Brown Bear. "But be sure not to touch anything that belongs to anybody else or you might get into trouble." Tying on their little bonnets Mamma Brown Bear kissed her two little ones goodbye.

Blinky and Winky Brown Bear trotted along the road until they reached a grove of beechnut trees. Blinky climbed into the tree and shook down the beechnuts, while Winky gathered them all into a pile. After eating all they wanted the two little brown bears ran on into the woods to see what else they could find.

At last they came to a tree swarming with bees.

"I'm quite sure where there's bees there must be honey," whispered Blinky. "And if there is, we're going to have some, for I certainly do love honey."

"Yes, so do I," replied Winky Brown Bear. "But do you think it would be right to help ourselves to the honey without asking the bees?"

"They'll know nothing about it," laughed Blinky Brown Bear. "We'll just wait until they've all gone away from home, then we'll go up and help ourselves."

At first Winky Brown Bear didn't want to take the honey, but after her sister Blinky assured her the bees would never know who did it Winky curled up under the tree beside Blinky to wait until the bees had gone away.

The two little bears, tired from their long walk, soon fell to sleep. When they awakened not a bee could be seen any place, so Blinky and Winky climbed into the tree and soon found the hive just bubbling over with honey.

The two greedy bears, not satisfied with the honey on the outside, took their paws and knocked over the hive. Then, dear me, such a scramble as there was! Bees came from everywhere and lighted all over Blinky and Winky, jabbing their tiny swords into the naughty bears' skins.

Winky and Blinky Brown Bear dropped from the tree and took to their heels, bees flying around their heads, stinging them as they went. At last they came to a river and into the water Blinky and Winky Brown Bear plunged, and there they stayed until the bees swarmed away. It was two sorry little bears that crawled into their mamma's house late that afternoon. Their faces were swollen out on a level with their ears, and neither could see. They had lost their bonnets and torn their brown fur coats.

Mamma Bear never scolded, for she knew they had been punished enough. She put them to bed and gave them a nice, hot dish of porridge. The next day Blinky and Winky declared they never would disobey again.

According to a French journalist who has made a study of the history of the automobile more than six centuries ago a man endeavored to build a "horseless carriage." As early as the thirteenth century a Parisian carriagemaker worked upon it. In 1769 a French mechanic, Joseph Cugnot, succeeded in propelling by steam a small wooden car of his own design, and developed it to a point where it drew a piece of artillery a mile in 20 minutes.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, NOV. 3-4.

Sunday's planetary aspects point to a day of activity in the family and social circle, and also in romantic interests, all prospering under the benignant Venus in conjunction with Lunar. The luminaries also in conjunction bring benefits from superiors, dignities, honors and esteem. Certain aspects call for very circumspect conduct, with cool acts and speech.

Those whose birthday it is should have an active and prosperous year, both in business, domestic and social affairs. A child born on this day will be interesting, kind, affectionate and popular.

Monday is likely to be a day of perplexity, growing from unusual situations, but with the discernment to cope with these it should eventuate in good fortune, as the fruitful Jupiter assists over difficulties through this trine position toward the moon—one of the most favorable astral influences. Change, journeys and removals may well be shunned, and also some erratic conditions concerning contracts and writings. Much care is advisable in all dealings.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of success and increase if they carefully handle their affairs and avoid change. A child born on this day will be kind and generous, but perhaps difficult to understand, owing to its original and adventurous mind.

MY SOLDIER HUSBAND

ADELE GARRISON'S CONTINUATION OF

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

Why Is Madge's Father So Horrified at the News of His Daughter's Need?

Days of forced cheerfulness, nights of restless tossing and worrying—this was my life in the week following my mother-in-law's revelation of the secret hidden in Dicky's personal checkbook.

Dicky, himself, evidently ashamed of his outburst of temper, yet resentful of what he still believed to be my spying upon him, was coldly impersonal in his manner toward me, never remaining a moment in my vicinity if he could help it. Not even to see the baby did he deviate from this rule, but I knew that whenever I was absent from our little son's cribside Dicky was sure to seize the opportunity to make a surreptitious visit to him.

How to get the money to settle our indebtedness—that was the question which pursued me constantly. My first thought had been to consult Lillian, but I knew that if I did so she would insist upon stepping into the breach herself, and that I couldn't permit. So I was denied the inestimable benefit of her wise and tender counsel.

Of course my father was the logical person to whom I should apply, but he had been for so comparatively short a time known to me as a father that I felt a curious shrinking in asking him for money. It was almost like borrowing money of some family friend or distant relative.

Opening the Way.

But as the days rolled on and the inevitable day of reckoning of our debts came nearer I saw clearly that an appeal to my father was my only hope. And so one day I slipped across the lawn dividing our home from Mrs. Durkee's, which was still leased to my father.

A Japanese servant—real this time, but always bringing back memories of the spying Kato—admitted me and conducted me to the library where my father, in heavy dressing gown and slippers, sat huddled over the fire.

"Well, little daughter!" My father rarely calls me by my name, using generally some affectionate diminutive. "I've been wondering when you were going to honor your aged parent with a visit. You haven't been over here since the baby came, and he surely isn't so badly behaved a youngster that he takes all your time."

There was distinct reproach underlying the raillery, and I felt an added distaste for my errand. It was true that I hadn't been to see him since the baby's birth. I had tried to persuade myself that it was because of my complex duties as mother and nurse, but I knew better. I could have made the visit easily were it not for one reason, which I was reluctant to admit even to myself, and which I put aside for later consideration as I braced myself for the unpleasant task of telling my father that my first visit to him since my baby's arrival was for the purpose of borrowing money.

"Please believe, father, that I've wanted to come," I said penitently. "Some day I'll tell you why I haven't been here before."

My father looked at me shrewdly, and while there was the ghost of a twinkle in his eye, yet there was also a shadow, as of sadness.

"Perhaps I'm not as blind as you think, daughter," he said quietly, and the words made me flush unaccountably. My father, with his courtly, old school courtesy, ignored the flush and busied himself with drawing an easy chair up before the fire, and summoned the Japanese servant, to whom he gave a low-toned order for "tea and cakes."

"And now, tell me all about it, child," he said kindly, when after a few minutes' desultory conversation, the servant had reappeared with steaming tea and little cakes, to which, after his dismissal, we were doing full justice.

I raised startled eyes to his face.

"All about what?" I parried.

"The purpose of your coming over today," he returned soberly. "Don't feel unhappy because I've divined that you must have had a special reason for coming or you wouldn't be here. That's what fathers are for, to understand things before they have to be told. So just unburden your heart, little girl, and see if your father cannot straighten things out for you."

His wonderful tenderness seemed to wrap me round as with a warm cloak. I felt my worries slipping from my shoulders, and I raised my eyes to his face without a trace of the embarrassment I had anticipated in the telling of my story.

"It's a tale quickly told, father," I said with the comforting remembrance of the competence my father possessed. "Not wanting to bother Dicky with financial matters, I have used up all my own money, including the sum you left for me when you went away, and now I find that Dicky has spent all his, and—"

My father sprang to his feet, on his face a look of horror out of all keeping, it seemed to me, with the news I had told him.

"You mean that you're in need of money, child, and you want me to help you out?"

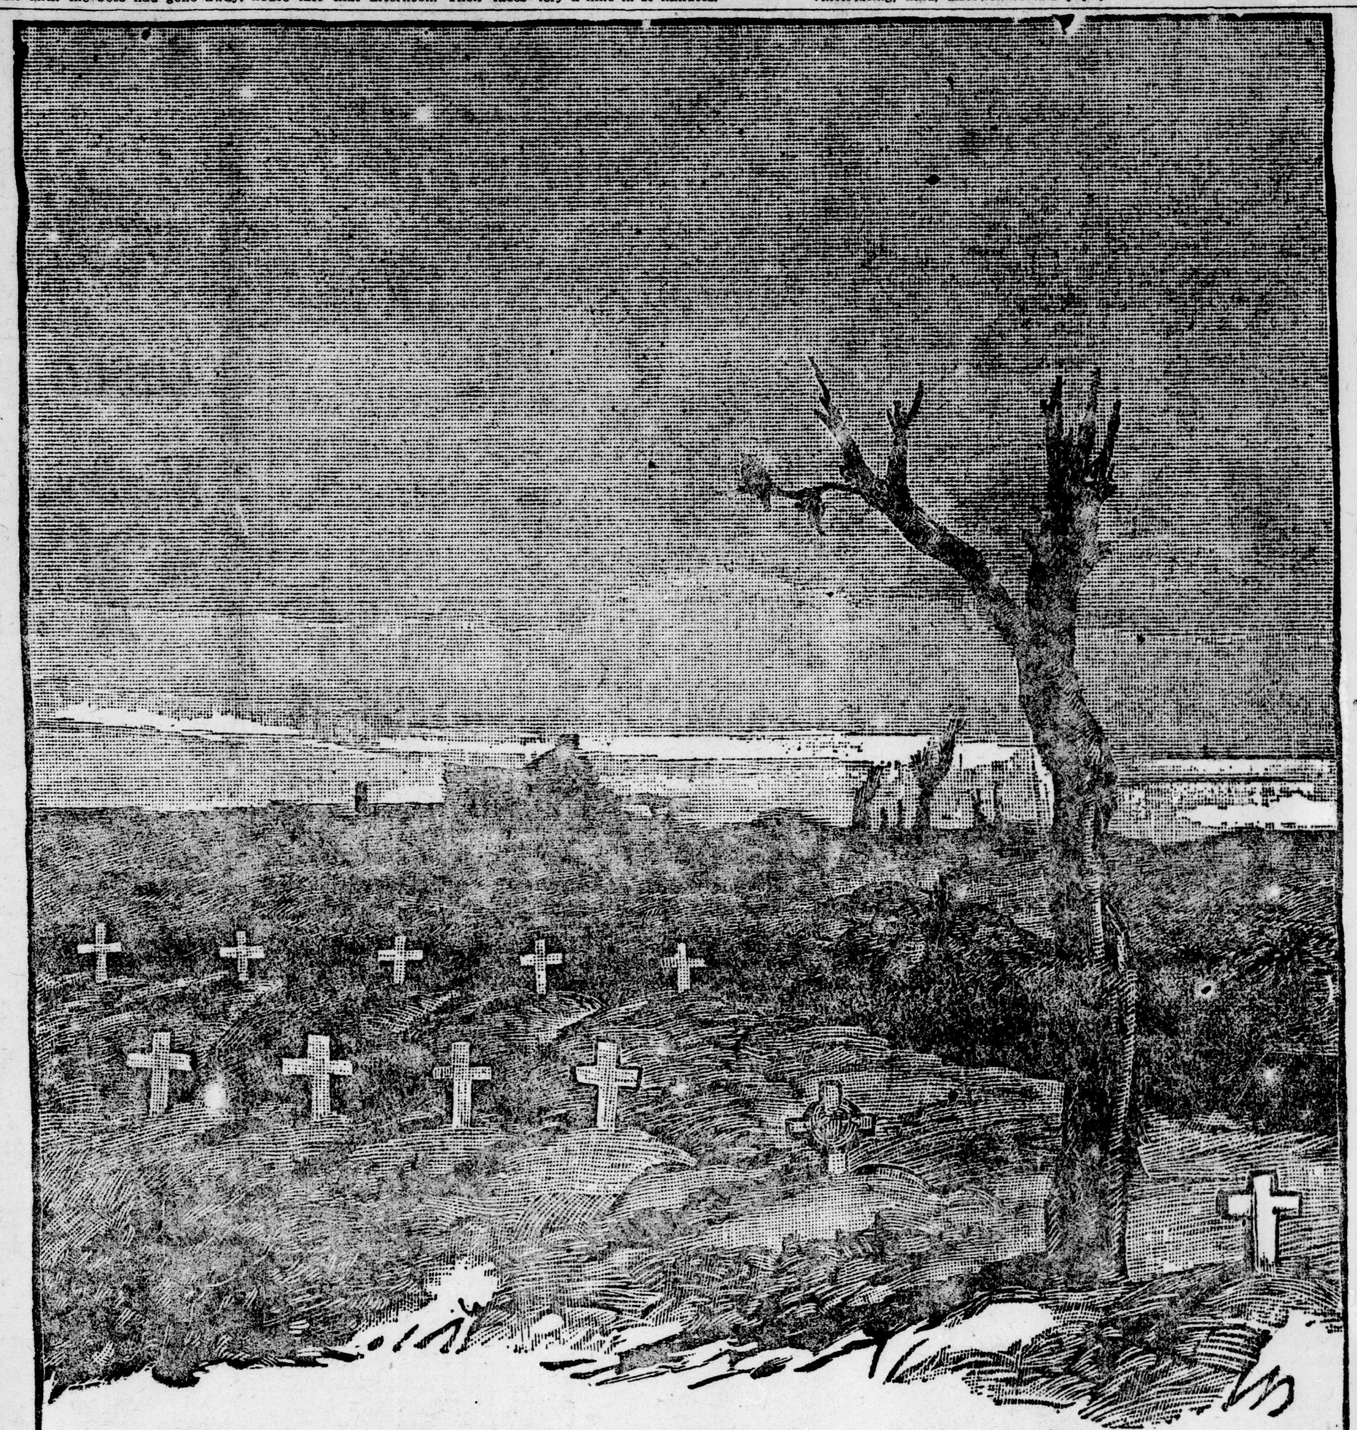

And then, under his breath, he uttered a name which he thought I did not hear, but which my fear-sharpened ears caught distinctly. It was a sacred name, and his manner of uttering it was a desperate appeal for help!

"For your To-morrow they gave their To-day"

(Inscribed on a cross in Flanders)

And we who live in tranquillity amid all the comforts of peace and plenty, knowing little of sacrifice, nothing at all of fear of death or violence—are we worthy of the sacrifices those crosses in Flanders mutely remind us of?

Are we doing our duty to our noble dead—those gallant, high-souled boys who interposed their bodies against the assault upon civilization by brutalized might?

Are we living, thinking and acting as people for whom great things are being done, tremendous sacrifices made? Are we accepting in a proper spirit of humility the bloody sacrifices and the agonies of the battlefields; the sorrows and heart aches of Canadian mothers, wives and sisters whose loved ones lie beneath the poppies in Flanders?

Do we realize that we, each one of us, as individuals have a personal share and interest in the issue for which our boys fight, bleed and die in France.

If we do realize this, then our duty is clear—a duty to ourselves, our country, our glorious fighters, and our heroic dead—to help by every means in our power to bring Victory for our boys in battle.

MOTION PICTURE STARS ARE HELPING TO PUT CANADA'S VICTORY LOAN "OVER THE TOP"

Photoplays, Serious and Comic, Produced in the Interests of the 1918 Loan Campaign, Will Be Shown at the Majestic Soon.

Twenty of the world's most famous motion picture stars are helping to put Canada's 1918 Victory Loan over the top. They have produced a great variety of plays, serious and comic, and these will be shown on all the leading screens in Canada during the next four weeks. The plays are distinctly Canadian in character, and many of the artists have excelled themselves in the ability they have displayed in this great patriotic effort. Trial exhibitions were given at the Allen Theatre, Toronto, recently, the audience consisting of Victory Loan workers, and the one opinion at the conclusion of the performance was that, outside of the Loan appeal the plays would stand up in comparison with many of the best productions shown at our best picture houses.

When the Victory Loan Drive was projected, the question of motion picture help was discussed, and a committee composed of Jule and J. J. Allen and Clair Hague, known as the Motion Picture Distribution Committee, was appointed. Every branch of the industry fell into line. Telegrams to all the leading artists brought prompt response, expressing their willingness to co-operate. The result is we are to have a series of plays bearing Canadian titles and dealing with Canada's prominent part in the war and the necessity of maintaining the struggle on the home front. Mary Pickford, who is a Toronto girl, is going to give us "One Hundred Per Cent Canadian." Then there are such artists as Charlie Chaplin, Lillian Gish, Douglas Fairbanks, William Farnum, Geraldine Farrar and William S. Hart, and many others. Thirty-three prints have been made of each production, making 500 in all. This method of bringing the Victory Loan to the notice of every man, woman and child in Canada is one of the best and cheapest advertising ideas that has come out of the mass of suggestions for boosting the Loan.

FAMOUS STARS IN SCREEN'S GREATEST PRODUCTIONS AT THE MAJESTIC REOPENING

London's Popular Playhouse, Thoroughly Fumigated and Disinfected, Opens on Monday — Fred Stone, Dorothy Gish and Shirley Mason on Next Week's Programs.

Fred Stone In "The Goat" Is the Attraction Billed for the Majestic Theatre on Monday and Tuesday at the Reopening.

Mr. Stone portrays the past of Chuck McCarthy, an iron worker, who earns $3 a day and supports his father and mother. He loves Molly O'Connors, a stenographer employed with the Filmcraft Studio. He is sent to do a construction job at the studio, and becomes enamored of the life of a motion picture actor. Chuck had done some amateur acting at an Undertakers' Picnic, but when he announces his determination to become a movie actor, his friends believe he has gone crazy. He returns to the studio and chases a pet monkey belonging to Bijou Lamar, a movie queen, along the rafters and finally captures the animal. Bijou thanks him, and he decides to quit his old job. He tells Molly, who, after a quarrel, sadly returns their engagement ring to him. The next day, at the studio, seeing several actors wearing German uniforms, he attacks them savagely, and is finally overpowered. The following day he is given a small part, and for two weeks he does gruelling work. He is "the goat" for everybody, but his ambition blinds him to the inconveniences of his position. He finally is glad to double in a war drama in place of Marmaduke X. Caruthers, who refuses to risk his life and limbs in a certain military scene. Swathed in bandages to hide his identity, Chuck does several stunts, but in the final scene, that of a battle between American soldiers and Mexican bandits, his horse falls and he is severely injured. He is carried into the studio, hidden away, and Marmaduke is bandaged and removed to the hospital in his stead. The actor is lionized in the newspapers for his supposed bravery, while the real hero is at home, painracked and despondent. Molly brings him flowers, and Chuck gets a check for $1,000 to keep silent regarding his injuries. Chuck and Molly renew their vows, and Chuck decides to return to his old job.

There will, of course, be the special added attractions of Weekly Films and a big Mack Sennet two-reel comedy entitled "The Summer Girls."

"The Hun Within," Featuring Dorothy Gish, at the Majestic Next Wednesday and Thursday.

It is not often in the history of motion pictures in London that a demand is made to play a return engagement of a photoplay, but such is the case of "The Hun Within," the super film attraction of that great master-mind of motion pictures, D. W. Griffith. So great has been the demand that "The Hun Within" be again presented to London audiences that it has been brought back to the Majestic for Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

"The Hun Within" is an absorbingly interesting story of how the Germans within our gates seek to help the fatherland. This is no picture of fancy, but fact. The records of the secret service are filled with just such black and damnable schemes as are engineered by "The Hun Within."

In this picture you see the devil's spawn of Germany actually at work within our gates. You see that they stop at nothing, that they plot coldly and malignantly for the wholesale drowning of our troops, the destruction of our ammunition works and essential industries. See for yourself the way the Hun-snakes work, see their cunning, and then rejoice in that swifter, alerter brain of the secret service, which checkmates them by night and by day. You will grip your seat and thank God for the efficiency of the secret service.

Starring in the film is Dorothy Gish and the famous Gish sisters, George Fawcett and many other popular and well-known stars.

The special attraction besides the usual news film weekly will be a two-reel comedy of that well-known and popular laugh-producer, Harold Lloyd.

Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex In "Come On In," Showing at the Majestic Next Friday and Saturday.

Dainty Shirley Mason, a screen player of prominence and winsome beauty, and Ernest Truex, a comedian celebrated in musical comedy, will make their first appearance as co-stars in Paramount pictures in a patriotic John Emerson-Anita Loos production, written especially for them by John Emerson and Anita Loos, which will be presented at the Majestic Theatre on Friday and Saturday of next week. The play depicts life in the soldiers' training camps, and its theme is intensely patriotic.

In this photoplay, Miss Mason portrays the role of a patriotic stenographer who decides to do her bit for her country by exposing and tracking down Hun spies. While she is doing this, she herself is hunted by a rascally spy who has been drafted into the United States army, and she is rescued from his clutches just in time to save her by her real sweetheart, the part played by Mr. Truex, a small but intensely patriotic soldier, full of pep and ginger. After a series of highly interesting adventures the couple foil the spies and find happiness in their mutual love.

It is said that this comedy of the training camps is the first which pictures the life of the soldier at the national cantonments, and it has much educational value. The photoplay was directed by Mr. Emerson, and no expense was spared to make it one of the best of its kind ever produced. The co-stars have been provided with an excellent cast of supporting players, all of them being of the highest artistic calibre.

TO KEEP EUROPE FREE, GERMANY'S HOLD ON SMALL NATIONS MUST BE BROKEN FOR ALL THE FUTURE

Permanent Peace Can Be Only Through the Spread of International Justice, To Which Germany Will Have To Subscribe.

By Frank H. Simonds

Author of "The Great War," "They Shall Not Pass."

(Copyright, 1918, Tribune Association, New York Tribune.).

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A few days ago there met in Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, the representatives of some sixty millions of people in Europe, members of half a score of enslaved races, which in whole or in part have been included within the limits of that grandiose German scheme of Mitteleuropa. These representatives of the races, which the German has characterized as "inferior people," and upon whose permanent slavery he founded his hopes of world empire, in the most historic of American buildings, made appeal to the American people to lend their aid in making this war a true war of liberation. And it is to this phase of the peace settlement that I desire to turn in the present article.

The Mitteleuropa, which the victories of Allenby and d'Esperey have recently all but annihilated, extended on the map from the Baltic to the Persian Gulf; it included more than 150,000,000 of people, and of these but half were German; the balance belonged to a score of races, and of these the Magyar, the Osmanli and the Bulgar were admitted to a degree of partnership. In the German conception the Austro-German and the Magyar were to be the overseers of the Slavs and Latins of the Hapsburg empire, the Bulgar the padrone of the Balkan races, the Osmanli Turk the agent of the German master in Asia Minor.

Kaiser's Dream Ended.

This Mitteleuropa has been broken; Bulgaria has surrendered, Turkey is on the point of capitulation. Austria, in the happy phrase of a German orator, "is disbanding." On the negative side, we, the nations in alliance against Germany, have prevailed. We have broken the German conception, but this is obviously only the first step. We have now to finish the fight with Germany herself; to achieve that victory which must be achieved before there can be real peace. But beyond this step lies the next, which is of appalling magnitude. We have to prevent a recurrence of the German attack of megalomania, of lust for world empire.

How shall we achieve this end? Obviously, it is not possible to destroy any considerable fraction of the German race, even were there moral justification for such a course. We cannot in any considerable measure partition or enslave the 75,000,000 members of the Teutonic race inhabiting Central Europe. To do this would be merely to create a new Alsace-Lorraine or a new problem such as that of Italy in the last century. That this great mass of German people would ultimately regain its unity, and until it did regain that unity Europe would be in a state of instable equilibrium, is patent.

By contrast, it is not now possible to small percentage of whom were willing subjects or allies. An alliance between 45,000,000 Britons, 40,000,000 French, 35,000,000 Italians, together with the 180,000,000 Russians, of the days before the Russian revolution, would have constituted an obstacle too great to be passed. Germany risked her frightful adventure solely because of her mastery of other races.

To Break Hun Hold.

If we can break the hold of Germany upon subject races, if we can transform this war into a real war of liberation, if we can free some 60,000,000 of men and women from the yoke of Germany, we shall have created an obstacle too great to tempt the ambition of the most avaricious and empire-hungry German. By contrast, if we fail to do this all history points to the probability that at some other time Germany will return to the charge, as France, in the days before the unification of Italy and of Germany, placed similar obstacles in the pathway of her imperialism.

In its simplest terms the problem of those who are to redraw the map of Europe is to erect such barriers to German expansion at the expense of the right and liberties of other races, that Germany herself will recognize the impossibility of the undertaking, and become what used to be described as "a good European." We cannot do this by taking German territory. Here, again, history is eloquent and unmistakable. The unity of the German people is a permanent factor, doubtless to be extended in the future by the entrance of the Austrian Germans into the Teutonic family establishment.

Our solution must inexorably be found in the just and proper recognition of the rights and aspirations of those millions of people who were yesterday Germany's helpless slaves, whose men supplied the cannon fodder, whose fields yielded the food, whose factories furnished the machinery for conceive that the 75,000,000 Germans would, in the past, have undertaken their gigantic attack upon civilization had they not excised complete control over an equal number of people, only a the present war, whose collective contribution to the German side alone made this war possible. We must set them free, we must provide them with the necessary resources for separate national existence, and we must guarantee them our protection during that relatively short period necessary to their organization.

An Act of Justice.

We should do all of this as an act of justice. We owe it to the Poles, the Rumanians, the Greeks, the Serbs, to the people of all the enslaved races, to bestow upon them those blessings, to preserve which, so far as we were concerned, we took up arms against Germany. But aside from the moral aspect, which should be controlling and rarely is in international relations, there is the material consideration. Unless we do liberate and fortify these races we shall have to fight the German again, and he will again be able to throw these people against us and to use their labor and their lands to support his war upon us.

The question of the league of nations involves other considerations; yet even here, we may be sure that no league of nations can have even a ghost of a chance of success, if it is not founded upon the doctrine of equal rights for all races. As a mere insurance against war this league of nations will be as impotent as the holy alliance or the more recent concert of Europe, if underneath it there exists an ulcer, such as the Eastern question or the problem Italy presented after the Congress of Vienna. If we make peace without bestowing liberty upon any race, that race will repudiate our agreements, seek its own rights, and, inevitably, overset our league of nations as the Balkan States overturned the concert of Europe.

Permanent Peace.

To make peace permanent we must abolish evils, which are a menace to permanent peace, and the greatest of such evils is the survival of international injustice expressed in the denial of liberty to any race or nation. The refusal of Europe, divided by its own selfish ambitions, to do justice to the small Balkan States, led the Balkan States to act for themselves, led inescapably through Serajevo to Armageddon.

The question of Poland, of Rumania, of the Austrian Slavs, is not, then, a remote and relatively unimportant question for Americans. On the contrary it is the most vital of all questions once Germany has been beaten and forced to surrender. Our mission, if we are to have a mission, in the making of peace, must lie in resolute championship of the rights of all the peoples, whose condition in the past has been such as to make a world conflagration possible, inevitable. If we do not desire again to send our boys to Lorraine and to Champagne a generation hence, we must see to it that the protection against a new German assault upon our common civilization is made impossible. And we must do this, not by making Germany weak —a thing which cannot be done permanently in any case or wisely in any degree—but by making strong those peoples who collectively supply the one sure barrier to a recurrence of the German attack.

It is with this situation in view that we must consider the problems supplied by Poland, by Rumania, by the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugo-Slavs. It is with this consideration in mind that we must examine the map of Europe, studying in the boundaries not merely the political boundaries between existing states, but the ethnographic map on which are written the boundaries between races, to find the solution. If Germany is not to fight the world again, harnessing to her war chariot the Poles, the Slavs, the Rumanians, it must be because we have so written our European settlement that she can no longer control these races and that these races joined voluntarily and logically with us, will make a force too great for the German to challenge.

So much for the material considerations. We in America are so remote from the battlefield and from the questions which through the centuries have plagued European statesmen, that it is not strange that neither on the military nor on the political side is there any general grasp of affairs. And yet it is essential that there should be some grasp, now that a new phase is to open. To the information of his fellow countrymen the President had contributed much by his references to various problems in his celebrated "Fourteen Points," which, so far as they concern the righting of wrongs and the bestowal of liberty, have the unanimous approval of all mankind.

But we in America must not think that the settlement of the Polish question, for example, or the liberation of the Austrian Slavs, is a remote and intricate European affair. There are no longer any exclusively European affairs, as our course in this war has proven. It is no longer possible for Europe to fight a general war without involving the United States, and henceforth our frontiers of interest, if not of geography, are European as well as Asiatic. If the present settlement does not abolish the German peril, we shall have to join in the next battle to resist it, and therefore it is for us to contribute what we can to the erection of barriers against such a new German eruption.

The New Europe.

A new Poland, a unified Rumania, two new Slav states, one on the Adriatic and one along the old frontiers between Russia, Germany and Austria; four states, whose combined population will exceed 55,000,000, a population far greater than that of France, of Great Britain or of Italy; these will be barriers to any new German dream of expansion through the Balkans to Asia, while in Asiatic Turkey, other states, Armenian, Syrian and Arabian, guaranteed and protected by France and Britain, will present no opportunity for German exploitation.

And without these things, without these liberated races, our victory, however complete on the battlefield, will have no permanent value. Germany, foiled, will return, no matter what burden be placed upon her and no matter what form of league of nations be framed. Certainly Germany must indemnify France as well as Belgium for her wanton devastations, just as she must restore Alsace-Lorraine and liberate her Poles and the 200,000 Danes of Northern Schleswig; certainly she must pay the bill for illegal submarine depredation, whether ton for ton, or by money payment. Unmistakably the demand for an unconditional surrender of her military and naval establishment must be made good upon the battlefield, if the surrender is refused now. But not all of these things will permanently shackle a nation of 75,000,000.

As to partitioning these 75,000,000 Germans, shackling them by economic or political chains imposed by the victors, this is a combination of madness and nonsense. The thing is impossible, it is also immoral. But in a free Europe the 75,000,000 Germans will not be a menace. They will be a minority far too feeble to yield to the temptations of the past. To make the world safe for democracy we have first to make it free. Having made it free there is no race among all the races which can hope to dominate the rest of mankind.

A War of Liberation.

It is not the territorial aspect, however, which I wish to emphasize in this statement, covering ground already discussed frequently in these articles. To me this war is before all else a war of liberation. The fact that a just and honorable settlement will set free some sixty millions of human beings from a slavery which for their respective races has endured over centuries, that it will bestow unity upon other races, that it will draw a map based not upon the ambitions of kings nor the appetites of imperialistic nations, is for me the supreme fact, which goes far to justify all the great suffering of the last four years.

If we are to have a "federation of the world" we can only have it when all the world is free. If we are to have an end of the practical menace of the "superior race," the dream of "world power," we can only have it when in place of half a score of helpless and enslaved nationalities between the German frontier and the Golden Horn we have as many independent nations. The whole German ambition was founded upon the notion of conquering by the aid of subject races, of defeating Russia and dominating Europe by using 30,000,000 subject Slavs. The liberation of the smaller races will thus destroy the whole German opportunity automatically.

League of Nations.

And whatever the possibilities of a league of nations, and after the present terrible world tragedy all men will eagerly hope that it may succeed and advocate the most loyal and earnest trial of the plan, it must remain an experiment, while the results of liberation are already proven. To give liberty to a race is to give it instantly a promise of material prosperity following moral health. One has only to see in what fashion even the little Balkan states have developed, with but a modicum of freedom, one has only to recall the miracle of modern Italy, to grasp what a new Europe is to come when sixty millions of people are set free.

The league of nations is a great and noble inspiration; it may be translated into the most splendid fact in human history. But it cannot even have a chance to succeed if it crushes beneath its foundations the unhappy body of some little people. If we do not make the world safe for all democracies, for all races, for all peoples; if we don't see to it that the Pole, the Rumanian, the Southern Slav and the Bohemian Slav each is assured his rightful place in the sun, then our whole edifice is built upon an untruth and is a substantial denial of the truth it pretends to express.

It is not a little thing to liberate sixty millions of people. It is not a minor fact to see the world at last on the point of redressing wrongs centuries old. Each wrong against a people has brought its punishment for Europe. The nations which were guilty of the crime, the nations which permitted it by allowing it to go by without protest, all have to suffer. But now, on the morrow of the defeat of the greatest menace since the end of the days of the other barbarian inroads, we have the opportunity to undo wrongs almost without number.

A Long Struggle.

The ink of the signatures to the final document of the Congress of Vienna was hardly dry before the struggle began to undo its iniquities. The struggle has continued to the present hour. We are at no distant date to frame another document of even greater moment to mankind. Today the whole tendency in the American public is not to discuss the practical and physical facts, but the impalpable consequences. We are talking in terms of Utopia at the moment when it is possible to assure the liberation of millions of men and women, who must be set free before anything else becomes even a remote possibility.

We have fought and are winning a new war of liberation. We have come to the point where we can free sixty millions of slaves. Their hands are stretched out to us, their fate is in a measure in our keeping. Age-long tyranny has begun to crumble and the masters of the old regime are on the run. The last chain which Metternich and those associated with him put upon human liberty at Vienna is breaking. If one could only recall now the millions of men and women of the subject races who have suffered and dared and died, maintained through all their agonies by the hope of the coming of the hour which has come, one could gain a more accurate notion of the splendid possibilities of the day in which we live.

The Prizes of War.

In other times, after wars, coalition wars or contests between individual nations, the prize of the victor was a province, the control of a continent, the power to impose one nation's will upon another. Today, as there draws to its close the greatest of all wars, the plain opportunity is within our grasp to reach a settlement which will go far toward making a new world war impossible. But we cannot do this merely by international agreements. The Holy Alliance and the Concert of Europe are good examples of the futility of such insurance policies.

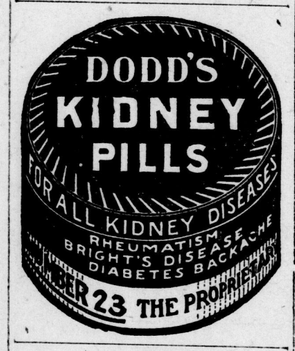

If we do not erect strong and homogeneous states across the pathway of German ambition, if we do not enable the Poles, the Rumanians and the Serbs to defend their own independence and thus to protect the world against a new Mitteleuropa, there is nothing in history to suggest that at a later date the great German nation, which will in any event survive this war, will resume its old worship of power and its old lust for expansion. We cannot and we should not take German territory from Germany. This will create a new evil. Even the suggestion that we should take the German fraction of Schleswig-Holstein—and it is by far the greater faction—from Germany and bestow it upon Denmark seems merest madness. Denmark could not keep it, and we should sin against our own light.

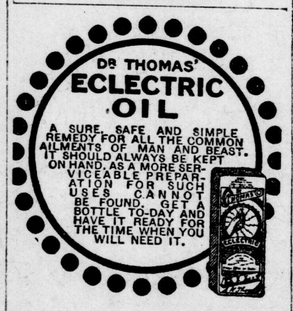

It is not by taking German provinces and German people from our present foe that we shall prevent his return to the attack. Napoleon found this out in the case of Prussia. In a free world a united Germany will be in a helpless minority to enforce imperialistic ambitions. In a free Europe the very extent of the states which would be threatened and would fight would veto the attempt. But if we deprived Germany of her own brethren, neither time nor numbers would lead the Germans to despair of a restoration of their "lost provinces." France has proved all this in the last half century.

Europe Unbound.

For me the liberation of Europe is the first and the necessary step toward a league of natins. But it is not merely desirable as a step tward something else. If it is achieved, if Europe is unbound, this great human fact will justify the sacrifice of the last four years, and it must lead toward an eventual revolution in international relations. To add sixty millions to the number of free men and women in Europe is to increase by just this much the potential barrier to future imperialistic ambitions of any one race. The development of Poland, Rumania, and Jugo-Slavia in half a century will automatically abolish those German ambitions which seem so terrible to us, exactly as the unification of Germany and of Italy put a term to those French imperialistic aspirations of Napoleon and Louis XIV., which troubled Europe in other days.

We have to finish the task of defeating Germany; this is the first duty. We have then to redraw the map of Europe in such fashion as to liberate the subject races, to set free the sixty millions who were to have been eternal slaves of the Germans and have been temporary victims. These things done and rightly done, the task of erecting the league of nations must be undertaken, but it can be hopefully undertaken then.

DIES IN DETROIT.

THAMESFORD, Nov. 1.—John Brock of this village received word from Detroit today of the death of his niece, Edna Brock, in that city, on Thursday, of pneumonia. She was the daughter of Milton Brock of Detroit, and was 17 years old. She had many friends here, having attended Woodstock Business College last year. The funeral will take place Saturday on the arrival of the 2 o'clock C. P. R. train at Thamesford, to the Anglican Cemetery here.

CIVIL SERVANTS ARE BADLY IN NEED OF INCREASED SALARIES

Government Wrong in Its Attitude, Charges Grierson.

OTTAWA, Nov. 1.—Mr. Frank Grierson, president of the civil service federation, in a statement issued today states that the announcement in the press that the Government does not consider the application of the civil service federation for a war bonus as just and reasonable comes as a shock to him. The statement continues:

Civil Servants Loyal.

"In order to bring the salaries of its employees up to the level of the cost of living, the Government should not only pay each civil servant about $2.25 per day, but should also pay interest on a portion of that amount due since the year 1914. Instead of asking for that amount the federation, out of loyalty to the Union Government, asked for $1 per day (less than one half). The Government, it appears, is willing to give only 50 cents. It has, on the other hand, insisted that other employers of labor shall give the full $2.25. Knowing the temper of the service as the officers of the federation know it, the Government is being advised not to enter upon a course that will be hazardous to say the least, for men are but men. The wolf is at the door of thousands of homes of civil servants, while luxury abounds on all sides. The Government orders that there shall be no 'strikes. Louis XV. gave similar orders to the starving peasants of France.

"Philosophically speaking, the Government is cursed as the inheritor of its predecessors. The fathers of Confederation permitted political patronage to load the public service with thousands of unnecessary appointments and the present innocent Government in its generation has to pay millions of dollars as the cost of the folly of previous governments. Will the Government repudiate its legacy and its responsibilities, or will it pay the price?"

U. S. GOVT. TO CONTROL OUTPUT OF PAPER TO HELP SMALL DAILIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Government control of the newsprint industry by which paper will be distributed to all newspapers in the country to protect the smaller newspapers is being considered by Chairman Baruch of the war Industries board. December 1st is the date the control would become effective under the present plan.

A tentative plan has been worked out by the pulp and paper section of the board for Chairman Baruch's approval.

Operation of paper mills by the Government is contemplated, but the entire newsprint output of the country would be allocated according to each newspaper's requirements, thus assuring a supply to the smaller papers, now said to be having difficulty in obtaining newsprint from the mills.

It is considered probable that the new plan, if accepted, will supersede the present restriction of the use of newsprint, which reduced the news space in daily newspapers fifteen per cent and Sunday editions twenty per cent.

TRANSPORTATION TO BE DISCUSSED

LAMBETH, Nov. 1.—The Victory Loan canvassers, R. M. Piper and Frank Evans, report a splendid response thus far from the Lambeth district.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Bannatyne have taken a house in London for the winter months.

A number of the young people motored in to the city tonight and enjoyed a pleasant evening with the Misses Bernice and Theda Walker on Becher street.

The influenza epidemic is showing signs of abatement. No new cases have been reported since Monday.

A meeting of the villagers will be held soon to discuss ways and means for the transportation of all those whose duties take them to and from the city. It is confidently expected that suitable arrangements will be made so that there will be no need for anyone to leave this village.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A large fleet of the latest types of British mine-sweepers today began the tedious task of clearing the Dardenelles of mines and other obstructions. This work, together with other safeguards which the Allies consider to be necessary before the Allied fleet enters the waterway leading past Constantinople and through the Bosphorus to the Black Sea, will take several days, in the opinion of the British admiralty.

A fortnight ago the Allied fleet tested the efficiency of the forts inside the Dardanelles by dropping a few shells on them. The reply of the Turks was quick and fairly accurate, showing that the fortifications are still probably in good shape. The 50-mile passage through the waterway is a veritable sea of mines and other obstructions, which it will require some little time to remove. In addition, the mine-sweepers will be hindered by the swift currents, which are stronger at this season of the year than at any other.

GOOD WORK CONTINUES.

INGERSOLL, Nov. 1.—Big results were again achieved today by the Victory Loan canvassers. Ingersoll's total subscription since the opening of the campaign is close to $240,000, and indications point to a continuance of the phenomenal degree of success. At all the factories the employees are showing a keen interest and subscribing freely. The enthusiasm is being maintained by the committee, and a big street celebration of unusual interest has been planned for Saturday night.

Doctors Fail

TORONTO MAN WINS THE VICTORY POEM CONTEST

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—More than 1,100 poems were received and judged by Rev. M. W. Wallace in the Victory Loan competition. The first prize went to George H. Maitland, of Toronto, whose contribution, entitled "Then Grudge Ye Not," was considered to possess the greatest merit.

Entries were received from every province in the Dominion, from the United Kingdom, and from many of the American states.

A contribution by Mrs. Mary F Secord, 199 Brant avenue, Brantford, Ont., received honorable mention.

NO SERIOUS CASES AT THORNDALE

THORNDALE, Nov. 1.—The township board of health met on Thursday afternoon and decided to keep all the schools, churches and public buildings closed for another week. Although no serious cases of Spanish influenza have developed in this district the authorities believe that it is better to prevent public gatherings until all danger has passed.

A new consignment of books has been received by Thorndale Public Library and will be ready for circulation when the library is reopened. The library is also being renovated.

118 MILLIONS IS VICTORY LOAN TOTAL

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—With a grand total for the Dominion of $118,404,150, Canada has done itself proud in the first five days of the Victory Loan campaign. Last year at the end of the fifth day of the drive the figures reported stood at $57,316,000, or over $32,000,000 less than in 1918.

HURON SUPREME COURT POSTPONED

GODERICH, Nov. 1.—The supreme court sittings for Huron County, which were to have been held in Goderich on November 4, have been postponed until January 6. This action was taken on account of the prevailing epidemic of influenza.

AUSTIN—STANTON NUPTIALS.

INGERSOLL, Nov. 1.—Rev. E. Sheppard officiated at a quiet wedding at the Methodist parsonage, when he united in marriage Eva Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stanton, West Oxford, to H. Taylor Austin of Ransomville, N.Y. The bride was attended by Misses Marjorie Stanton and Amy O'Dell.

HENSALL MAY OPEN SUNDAY NEXT

HENSALL, Nov. 1.—It is probable that churches will reopen Sunday, November 3, and schools also on the coming Monday.

Resident of this village are continuing to lay in a good quantity of wood for the coming winter, owing to the shortage of coal.

Mrs. Fowler received a message on Monday last advising her of the death of her husband, who had gone out west some months ago to work, and who was attacked by the epidemic. Much sympathy, indeed, is felt for Mrs. Fowler and her young family who were so suddenly bereaved.

T. Murdock was recently awarded a renewal of the mail contract for a term of years between Hensall postoffice and railway station.

Miss Alda Dinsdale has been appointed librarian of the public library as successor to Miss Ina Hudson, who intends going to Courtland to learn telegraphy.

FUNERAL OF DR. J. MACDIARMID.

HENSALL, Nov. 1.—The funeral of Dr. J. Macdiarmid, which was a private one owing to the influenza epidemic, was held Saturday afternoon last, and the pallbearers were brother Masons and Oddfellows, in the persons of Wm. McKay, G. C. Petty, G. Brown, J. Priest, J. Fitzgerald and G. J. Sutherland. The casket bore beautiful wreaths from the Oddfellows, Masons and Rebekah lodges. Rev. Mr. McConnell of Carmel conducted a short service, in which he paid a high tribute to the worth of Dr. Macdiarmid, who, he said, had never refused to answer any call no matter what the condition of the roads or weather, and without thought as to whether he would receive any remuneration. He was one with whom honor and a desire to do good counted more than money. The remains were interred in Hensall Union Cemetery.

GRANTED ALIMONY.

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—Judgment has been given by Justice Masten at Osgoode Hall, granting Juanita Conway alimony amounting to $360 a year against her husband, Francis H. Conway, a farmer of Kent County.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening grey, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

DIET KITCHEN MUST BE CONTINUED FOR ANOTHER WEEK YET

More Donations Needed To Keep Up Work.

It will be necessary to continue the work at the Alexandra school diet kitchen next week, so that donations of both food and money are still most necessary. Even yet the number of baskets of food being sent out go over the 100 mark, and 80 nurses' lunches are delivered daily. Although the speedy recovery of many cases in the city makes the situation seem brighter, the diet kitchen must still be kept up, as there is danger of pneumonia should patients be compelled to get up and begin preparing their own food too soon. A great number of sealers and bowls have been sent out to various homes in the city, and the fact that many of these have not been returned greatly inconveniences the workers in the diet kitchen. People who have received food are asked to return the dishes as soon as possible.

Donations.

The following donations have been received at the kitchen during the past two days: Mrs. Frank Whetter, shank beef; Mrs. Wainwright, chicken broth, pates; Mrs. C. H. Merryfield, cake, fruit, apple sauce, 2 loaves bread, jelly; Miss Sangster, apple sauce; 188 Oxford street, pot meat, apple sauce; Miss Dillon, spiced tomatoes, spiced grapes; Mrs. Milton Jackson, 4 pounds sugar; dozen lemons; Miss Kessack, $2; Mrs. John Greene, $2; Mrs. A. H. Brener, 9 quarts chicken broth; Mrs. J. P. Booth, vegetables; Mrs. J. Puddicombe, oatmeal, lemons, biscuits, sugar; Mrs. Fitzgerald, 2 quarts tomatoes, 2 jars honey ;118 Oxford street, 2 quarts soup, rice pudding; Mrs. Keenleyside, cake; Mrs. E. S. Mayor Supperfield Er--Summerfield Is Not G.W.V.A. Head

Incidentally, C. R. Somerville Has Not That Post.

Mayor C. R. Somerville has been made the president of the London Great War Veterans' Association by a correspondent in Leamington, who sent a letter to the mayor's office this morning. He made a slight mistake in the name, however, and addressed the envelope to "Mayor Supperfield," president of the Great War Veterans' Association. Possibly he thought this was a mistake, for in the body of the letter he gave his worship the name of Summerfield. He no doubt thought one of the names would suit Mayor C. R. Somerville. Mr. Somerville, while appreciating the compliment paid him in adding another honor to his list as official head of the city of London, says that he will simply have to decline this latest courtesy on account of the press of business. He is also inclined to be flattered on account of the correspondent tacking the flowery name of Summerfield to him, but he opines that he will stick to the name that has stood by him through past years. The letter, which he thought should not be given the public through the press, will be turned over to the local offices of the G. W. V. A. for attention.

ANARCHY GRIPS TURKEY; PEOPLE ARE STARVING

Amsterdam, Nov. 2.—A state of anarchy prevails throughout Turkey, according to information received by the Armenian correspondence bureau here. Hundreds of thousands of deserters are subsisting by means of robbery of the mass of the population. Constantinople is declared to be literally famished and impatiently awaiting the arrival of allied forces.

RETURNED OFFICERS RECALLED TO DUTY

A number of Canadian officers who have seen service overseas and who were returned to Canada to recuperate from wounds, and afterward reported at local militia headquarters for duty, have been notified by the department to hold themselves in readiness for overseas service once more.

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, A. A. G., stated this afternoon that there were several officers in this district affected by the order.

WILL GIVE HEED TO DEMANDS OF BOARD

The Grand Trunk Railway system is making an investigation of local conditions, so far as the alleged insanitary condition of the station is concerned, and will take whatever steps are necessary to improve the situation to comply with the requirements of the board of health. This announcement was read to the board by City Clerk Baker, contained in a letter sent from the headquarters in Montreal.

A letter from Postmaster Peter MacDonald also was read, stating he was bringing to the attention of the proper Government authorities the conditions under which the letter-carriers sort the mail, owing to the lack of sufficient space.

LOCAL NEWS

"HEARTS OF THE WORLD" AGAIN.—"Hearts of the World," the great D. W. Griffith attraction, which created such a sensation during Western Fair week, will play a return engagement at the Majestic soon.

TWO SECTIONMEN KILLED.—Two Italian sectionmen met instant death this morning near Cooksville, when they stepped from behind a freight train before an onrushing G. T. R. passenger train. Local Grand Trunk authorities stated this afternoon that they had received no report of the accident.

PERMITS START. — November has made a good start in building permits, as $8,550 is the amount of the permits issued to date since the beginning of the month. The London Hosiery Company has taken out a permit for an $8,000 boiler house and two smaller permits make up the remainder.

PROFIT OF $68,000.—Up to date, the operation of the city's electrical department shows a profit of $68,000, according to the estimate of E. V. Buchanan, general manager of the public utilities commission. He expects that the total for the year will be about $90,000. Basing the profits of the two remaining months on the average of the previous ten, the surplus for the year would be about $81,000.

TO REVISE BYLAWS.—A committee formed to revise the bylaws of the County of Middlesex and composed of Reeve J. L. Robson of London Township, Reeve A. J. Blakie of Westminster Township, Deputy-Reeve J. Cousins of the Township of Westminster, Warden D. A. Graham and Reeve D. Smith of Dorchester, will meet at the county buildings on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

ACTION NOT DECIDED YET. — What steps Fuel Controller J. W. McCallum will take in regard to the farmer who got away with two tons of coal, and the dealer who sold it from a local coal office cannot yet be learned. The names are known to Mr. McCallum, but the matter is being left over until his return from the north. The farmer purchased the coal without a permit the day following the issuing of the order forbidding the sale of coal to farmers without a permit from the local fuel controller.

AFTER THE SPEEDERS.—Those auto owners who make a practice of speeding on the county roads are finding to their sorrow that the county police are very active; in fact, some autoists who have been fined for breaking the traffic bylaws, are of the opinion that the police have been carrying on a special campaign against those who try to break the records of Barney Oldfield. Several speed demons appeared before Squire Chittick this morning and contributed various amounts to the county coffers.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

THE LOCAL MARKET

The local market today was larger than it has been for some time, as the farmers have got the most of their work finished. Potatoes are still holding fairly firm; at Mount Brydges they retailed at $1.40 a bag, while here they sold at $1.75. There was more poultry on the market this morning than there was before Thanksgiving. Dressed hogs are selling at $24 per cwt. The grape crop is over.

WALL STREET REVIEW.

New York, Nov. 2.—Further readjustment of values from a war to a peace basis was the outstanding feature of the week in the securities market, the transition being attended with some unsettlement.

The declining tendency in industrial war shares as a whole derived additional momentum from the reduction of the United States Steel's extra dividend from 3 to 2 per cent, a condition due not so much to decreased earnings as to the enormous appropriations required to meet federal taxes and excess profits. Trading was attended by less activity, the outcome of restrictions upon loans recommended by the local money committee, but this barrier was overcome to a degree later in the week when call loans fell to 4 per cent, the lowest rate in three months.

The effect of the money committee's suggestion, that the financial institutions advance their margins on loans from 20 to 30 per cent, and which becomes operative next week, is already apparent in a heavy contraction of brokers' loans. This was made possible by the closing out of many speculative accounts, especially in stocks of non-investment character. Accompanying this movement was an inquiry instituted by the officials of the stock exchange to minimize activity in stocks controlled by pools.

With the approach of peace leading financial interests are giving much thought to business, which at the moment shows much hesitation, mainly in relation to the question of labor.

WALL STREET.

New York, Nov. 2—Wall Street, 10:10 a.m.—Stocks were irregular at the opening of today's market, further selling of oils forcing other active issues to lower levels. Shippings were easy, but rails and steels yielded fractionally.

New York, Nov. 2. — Further selling of speculative issues, notably oils, unsettled the market again in the early part of today's short session.

Mexican Petroleum dropped ten points and Royal Dutch nine. United States Steel fell to its lowest quotation in many weeks, together with war shares, and rails and metals lost one to two points, while shippings, motors, tobaccos and sugars fell one to four. Only a few of these recessions were regained in the short covering of the final dealings. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 400,000 shares.

10:30 a.m.—Mexican Petroleum's further decline of 10 points and United States Steel's recession of 1⅝ to the lowest quotation of the current movement, were the noteworthy features of the early trading. Losses of one to two points also occurred in such active issues as Bethlehem Steel, Baldwin Locomotive, American Smelting, American Car, Studebaker, Industrial Alcohol, and fractional gains in coal shares were offset by moderate reactions in Pacifics and other rails.

USING VACCINE.

ESSEX, Nov. 1.—Essex has been suffering similarly to other parts of the country the past two weeks by the outbreak of influenza. There has been but one death in this town so far. The Ontario Government, through the provincial board of health, is supplying free preventive vaccine. Dr. Doyle, health officer of health, has been vaccinating many this week. The schools have been closed all week, and no public meetings are allowed.

Narrow Ankles—No Wrinkles

On account of the war, very few of the fine imported lines of hosiery are at present obtainable in Canada. But women can now obtain Canadian hosiery that is superior in finish and fit to the most luxurious pure silk, mercerized lisle, cotton and cashmere lines produced abroad.

We took advantage of the situation created by the war and installed wonderful new machines. They knit Mercury Hosiery with a narrow ankle that fits without a wrinkle, a full-fashioned shapely calf, a widened top that gives utmost freedom and comfort—and seamless from toe to top.

The more fastidious you are the more you'll revel in this elegant Mercury Hosiery. Black, white, browns, grays and the other fashionable shades.

Iron Recommended After Influenza.

Doctors recommend that people take iron to build up the blood after an attack of Spanish Influenza. One of London's best-known physicians remarked several days ago that hundreds of people who have had influenza will contract pneumonia this winter if they do not build up their systems properly. The germs of this dread malady impoverish and poison the blood, and as a result the system is left in a weakened condition. The limbs feel weak, and the man or woman recuperating from "Flu" find they have no inclination to perform their duties. The best and most modern way known to science to take iron is in the form in which it is put up in Tonal-Iron Capsules, the new French gelatin remedy, and hundreds of people are using it after an attack of influenza with excellent results. These capsules are soft and dissolve very quickly in the system, and all the iron they contain is quickly absorbed. This remedy also contains several other non-narcotic stimulants, and creates an appetite, as well as working on the bowels, liver and kidneys. Tonal-Iron Capsules are guaranteed by the manufacturers, and are sold by all druggists in Canada and the United States for $1 a box, or mailed anywhere in Canada on receipt of the price. Tonal-Iron Company, Box 184, London. ywt

GNR. JACK WOOLLEY IS AMONG WOUNDED

Gunner J. Woolley

Gunner Jack Woolley, who is attached to a trench mortar battery, has been wounded and admitted to hospital. Word to this effect was received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos Woolley, Richmond street. Gunner Woolley enlisted with the 72nd Queen's Battery from Kingston. Previous to enlisting he was employed as bookkeeper with the Briscoe Motor Company in Brockville.

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSED SEVERE HEADACHES

The duty of the liver is to prepare and secrete bile and serve as a filter to the blood, cleansing it of all impurities.
Healthy bile in sufficient quantity is Nature's provision to secure regular action of the bowels, and when the liver is sluggish it is not working properly, and does not manufacture enough bile to thoroughly act on the bowels and carry off the waste products from the system, hence the bowels become clogged up, the bile gets into the blood, constipation sets in, followed by sick and bilious headaches, coated tongue, bad breath, heartburn, water brash, bad taste in the mouth in the morning, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, etc.
Miss Dian Clark, Myer's Cave, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but I got better after I had used a couple of vials of your pills."
Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretion, clear away all waste and effete matter by acting directly on the liver, and make the bile pass through the bowels, instead of allowing it to get into the blood.
Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

V. A. D. NURSE FALLS VICTIM OF DISEASE SHE HELPED FIGHT

Mrs. Ruth Gilbert of No. 4 Division Is Dead.

Yesterday No. 4 Nursing Division, St. John Ambulance Association, lost its first member through the epidemic, one who literally made the supreme sacrifice to save the lives of others.
From the time the nursing division recognized the seriousness of the epidemic a month ago, and the members volunteered their services, Mrs. Ruth Gilbert, wife of William Gilbert, of 551 Talbot street, gave herself whole heartedly and unreservedly to caring for the sick. In this she manifested marked ability as well as courage and untiring zeal.
A week or so ago she began to feel ill, but insisted upon staying on duty. Three days ago pneumonia developed, and though she had every care and attention, she passed away at her home last evening. Since she literally died on active service in the St. John Ambulance ranks, and owing to the wish of her stricken husband, the funeral on Sunday at 2 o'clock from the family residence at 551 Talbot street will be under the direction of the St. John Ambulance Association. She will be buried as a nursing sister of the order, and last night tender hands of sister nurses arrayed her in the uniform she had honored.
Mrs. Gilbert was 31 years of age, and is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Birch, and four brothers, George and Joe serving in France; Walter and Sidney of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. George Coomber and Mrs. H. Dear, also of this city.
The nursing sisters will assemble at 404 Talbot street at 1:30 o'clock on Sunday and parade to the house. All members of the order in the city are extended an invitation to join in paying the last respects to this V. A. D. Interment will be made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

BOARD OF TRADE HAS NEW MEMBERS

The Total Roll Has Now Reached 805.

Citizens of London are continuing to enroll as members of the reorganized London Board of Trade. The membership roster now contains a total of 805 names, which makes the organization the largest and most representative body in London. Since the close of the membership campaign on October 21, 28 additional names have been added to the roster.
London has in less than a month united its citizenship and equipped it for patriotic service to the nation, for constructive help to the Province of Ontario, and for a greater and better city. The reorganized board of trade is now equipped with a working membership, which represents the greatest force in the community.

To Consider Work.

During the past week the entire membership has been called out in small groups to consider and discuss a comprehensive program of work for the organization. The two questions presented for the thought of the membership were:
1. What in your opinion is the thing of first importance that should be undertaken by the board of trade to improve the trade conditions and opportunities in your own line of business?
2. What, as a citizen, do you believe that the board of trade should first undertake for the good of the city at large?
To those who did not appear at the first call to group meetings, a second opportunity will be extended. It is urged that the membership take this matter seriously and come out to express themselves on this most fundamental and basic project in the reorganization.

New Members.

The following are the names of members who have joined the organization since the close of the membership campaign:
F. H. Butler, Dr. A. D. Craig, W. T. Donohue, A. E. Ferte, Col. W. M. Gartshore, Dr. C. A. Harris, Henry H. Humeston, Mrs. C. B. King, Dr. John C. Lindsay, James McCormick, R. M. Mcherson, Ernest E. Mills, C. S. Morse, J. F. Maine, R. D. McDonald, Fred D. McMahon, J. A. McNevin, J. McClary Moore, J. M. Moore, Very Rev. D. O'Connor, George Pernokis, J. K. H. Pope, W. H. Smith, D. Steele, George Simmers, Leonard Tait, J. W. G. Winnett, B. C. Weissbrod.

DR. J. L. STAPLETON PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Prominent Physician Fails To Recover From Influenza.

After an illness extending over a couple of weeks, James Leonard Stapleton, one of London's leading young physicians, passed away at 11 o'clock Friday night at his home, 398 Dundas street. Dr. Stapleton was taken sick a couple of weeks ago with Spanish influenza, which developed into pneumonia. His case had been considered most critical for several days, and little hope was held out for his recovery. He is survived by his wife and little daughter Marsha, his mother, Mrs. C. O. Stapleton of Toronto, who came up a week ago owing to his illness, one sister and three brothers—Mrs. George C. McIntosh of Toronto, Will of Toronto, Harry of Denver, Col., and Benjamin of Detroit. Arrangements have not yet been completed for the funeral, which will take place on Monday.
Dr. Stapleton lived practically all his life in London, was born here, educated in the public schools and Collegiate Institute, and graduated from the Western University Medical College in 1908. He was subsequently a house surgeon in the Lackawanna Steel Company's hospital in Buffalo for six months, on the staff of the Hamilton Hospital for the Insane for a time, and chief house surgeon at Victoria Hospital for a year and a half. He has been practicing medicine in London for eight years.
Ever since beginning to practice here, he has been a member of the staff of Victoria Hospital, and was chief anaesthetist. He was also the hospital historian and for a time was attached to the staff of the Western Medical College.
Profound regret over his death was expressed today by officials of the Victoria Hospital who paid eloquent tribute to the valuable services rendered by him to the hospital. One of the promoters of the interest in all that tended to raise the standard of his profession. Popular with his brother physicians, the nursing profession and the public to whom he was known, his death has caused genuine sorrow to a very large number in the city, and is regarded as a great loss to the medical profession here.
The funeral, which will be of a private nature, will be held from the family residence, 398 Dundas street, on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

He had been in France only a few weeks, having gone overseas the beginning of the present year.

WESTERN "U" GRADUATE DIES IN ENGLAND

CAPT. T. R. GUILFOYLE.

CAPT. T. R. GUILFOYLE PASSES IN ENGLAND; A PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Graduate of Western Medical School—He Served in Saloniki.

A few hours after receiving a letter from Capt. T. R. Guilfoyle stating that he was well, his mother, Mrs. Mary Guilfoyle of 682 Adelaide street, received a telegram Thursday evening announcing his death from pneumonia at Whitley Camp, England, on October 28.
Besides his mother he leaves a widow, Mrs. Ruth Guilfoyle, who is nursing in New Belford, Massachusetts, three sisters, Mrs. W. R. Struthers of West Moncton, Ont.; Mrs. P. Lichtenberger of Stevensville, Ont., and Miss Annie Guilfoyle, principal of the high school at Erin, Ont., and one brother, C. W. Guilfoyle of the Royal Bank at Santa Domingo, West Indies. Dr. R. W. Shaw of London is an uncle, and Miss N. Shaw of 682 Adelaide street is an aunt.
Capt. Guilfoyle graduated in medicine from Western University in 1913 and spent one year in the Guelph General Hospital as house surgeon before going to Belgrave to take up a practice. Signing on with the C. A. M. C. in June of 1916, he went to Salonika, where he was stationed until December of 1917. While there he was attached to the base hospital. In February of this year he came home on a short furlough. He went to England in June where he had been working since.
In his last letter which was sent from Whitley Camp, where he was stationed, he says that he was well, but there was a great deal of sickness there.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE DR. BEAL.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
Will you kindly permit a few words of personal tribute to the late Dr. Beal. I was greatly shocked and saddened to see an account of his death in The Advertiser. Personaly, I will never forget Dr. Beal, for it is very largely through his skill and constant attention during my very serious illness last winter in London that I am alive today. His cheerful disposition, his bright, optimistic manner in the sick room was most helpful to the patient. He was a marked success in his profession as proven by his large and constantly increasing practice. Dr. Beal loved his work, not from any monetary consideration, but he loved to fight and master disease; he loved to make sick people well and bring brightness and hope out of darkness and despair.
London has not only lost one of her c.everest physicians. She has also lost a true friend, a manly man. I am sure the entire family will have the sincere sympathy of the great host of friends and admirers of the late Dr. Beal. Sincerely,
WM. GIBSON.
Toluca, Ill., Oct. 31, 1918.

A LONDON GIRL'S VIEWS.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
Read with interest Mr. McElheran's letter in The Advertiser about a week ago, and would like him to know that there is one who seconds it, and would appreciate shaking hands with him.
I am surprised that the people of London are so slow as to let a few men run this fair city and by their actions are letting it go down deeper into sin instead of uplifting it.
What does God think of the men who are issuing orders to open the theatres and poolrooms and close the Sunday schools? If they had their way I suppose the churches and Sunday schools would be closed forever, while the shows and poolrooms would be open day and night—seven days in the week.
Most other cities kept places of amusement closed until the epidemic was entirely banished, but the people of London are so weak-minded, and a few men are so anxious for a few dollars that they would allow these places open before the danger is past.
I hope some day these men's conscience (if they have any) will tell them of the sin they are committing in allowing the shows and poolrooms to be opened wide, while they order the Sunday schools and places of worship to be kept closed. Yours truly,
LONDON GIRL.

BRANTFORD VETERANS, VICTIMS OF "FLU," TO BE BURIED TOGETHER

BRANTFORD, Nov. 1.—Under the auspices of the G. W. V. A. and the Patriotic Association a plot will be secured in Mount Hope Cemetery for the placing together of all the returned soldiers who have died here recently from the Spanish influenza epidemic. A shaft will be erected, on which the names will be inscribed. The city is being asked to provide the ground.

THE AFTER EFFECTS OF DREADED LA GRIPPE

Worse Than the Disease Itself—Victims Left Weak, Nervous and Worn Out.

La Grippe, or Spanish Influenza, as the epidemic now sweeping over all America is called, is one of the most dangerous diseases known to mankind. Anyone who has felt its pangs is not likely to forget the trouble. La Grippe, or influenza, starts with a slight cold and ends with a complication of troubles. It lays the victim on his back, it tortures him with fevers and chills, headaches and backaches. It leaves him a prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, consumption and other deadly diseases. Its after-effects are often more serious than the disease itself. It is quite possible to avoid la grippe by keeping the blood rich and red by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—a tonic medicine which enriches the blood, and strengthens the nerves. If, however, the disease attacks you, the patient should at once go to bed, and call a doctor, before complications set in. That is the only safe thing to do. But to recover your strength after the severity of the attack has passed, you will find Dr. Williams' Pink Pills an unsurpassed tonic. Through the use of this medicine all the evil after-effects of this trouble will be banished. This has been proved in thousands of cases throughout Canada, where in previous seasons la grippe has attacked them. Among the many thus restored to full health is Miss Irene Bootes, Portsmouth, Ont., who says: "I take much pleasure in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because I have proved their worth in my own case. Last winter I had a severe attack of la grippe, and it left me weak and all rundown. I had severe pains in the chest and under the arms, palpitation of the heart and with the feeling that life was scarcely worth living. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and began their use only on the principle that I would try anything that might better my condition. I had only been using the pills a couple of weeks when the pains began to leave me. Gradually my strength returned, my appetite improved, and in a little more than a month I felt my old-time vigor had returned. I am sincerely glad I was persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I shall always have a good word to say for them."
Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only cure the disastrous after-effects of la grippe, but are also a specific for all troubles due to poor blood, such as anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion women's ailments, and the generally worn-out feeling that affects so many people. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.
