Last winter, however, at a series of special meetings held on the Upham Circuit, she allowed contrition she offered her heart to God. The young heart thus laid upon the altar was accepted, and soon peace and joy filled her soul. From that time her walk and conversation were christian-like.

In the month of May last, her liver became affected to such an extent as to excite apprehension in the mind of her physician. The complaint made alarming progress, and soon it became apparent that she must die. But she did not fear. To her mother who was with her for several weeks, she once said, " I do not want to die. I sm not afraid, but I want to live and serve God a little longer; and I want to be better, holier. But I know that if I die I will go to heaven." Questioning her upon the ground of her hope, I found it the same as with all true christians—the atonement of Christ. "I trust John, &c. in Jesus," she said, " Christ is my Saviour."

I explained to her the nature of patience and mother, " Pray for me, that I may have grace. and a little more strength to bear my sickness say, when one was about to pray with her, work." For the Provincial Wesleyan. Saying Lessons to God.

In a recent number of "The Sunday Magaine," (Feb'y 1867) edited by Rev. Dr. Guthrie, are some pleasant lines representing a bright group of children gathered round Aunt Fanny, one sunny Sabbath morning. Texts had been repeated and hymns sung; yet some time was eft before the Church bell would summon them to public worship. Longing for a quiet interval before joining in the service of the sanctuary. Auntie dismissed the little ones, but so earnestly did they plead for one more Sunday story, that she was just commencing, when her sister came to the rescue, and told the children she would give them a story, for "Aunt Fanny had all her own lessons to say" This was a most astonishing announcement, who in the wide world could there be to require lessons from Aunt Fanny. At length little Alice's face grew grave, and whispering low she asked, "Does Auntie say thought, well might her Aunt write: "How little the import deep she knew, Of those baby-words so sweet and true; Little she knew how they unfold A treasure of happy thought, A tiny casket of virgin gold With jewels of comfort fraught. Great mens' wisdom may pass away, But Alice's words in my heart will stay.'

And the words have found a place in the hearts of some who have not the pleasure of knowing little Alice, and many of the precious Bible sayings have they brought to mind. " All thy children shall be taught of the Lord," says the prophet Isaiah, (liv. 13,) and very beautifully is the result of such Divine teaching expressed -" great shall be the peace of thy children." 'I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the tions, conscience educated for a holy immortalear," exclaims the patriarch Job, "but now mine ity; trained to bring glory to Him who has eye seeth Thee, wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes."-Job xlii. 5, 6. What repeating of lessons, what intimate communion must there have been during Enoch's long walk with God for three hundred years. What heart-converse with Him, who dwelleth not only in the high and holy place, but also with the man who is of a humble and contrite spirit, had David known, ere he could say, I was dumb, I opened not my mouth, because Thou did'st it."- Psalm vyviv 9. In the Heavenly Teacher there is full appreciation of the learner's difficulties. He knows what is in man, and gives lessons as the disciples are able to bear them. He remembers how sin has disordered our faculties, and dimmed our perceptions, and with Divine forbearance compassionates failures, while he perceives that our hearts are steadfastly set to learn and do His will. No one with whom we have to do is so easily pleased with us, as our loving, pitying Saviour, our reconciled Father in Heaven, and the Good Spirit who delights to lead us in the her lessons all to God?' It was a beautiful land of uprightness. "The Lord taketh pleasure in His people, He will beautify the meek with salvation." But how the withering glance of the eye, which is like a flame of fire, discerns and rebukes all hypocrisy. The Lord's throne is in heaven; His eyes behold, His eyelids try the children of men. The PAIN KILLER is by universal consen allowed to have won for itself a reputation unsurallowed to have won for itself a reputation unsur-passed in the history of medicinal preparations. Its instantaneous effect in the entire eradication and extinction of PAIN in all its various forms inci-dental to the human family, and the unsolicited written and verbal testimony of the masses in its written and verbsi testimony of the masses in its favour, are its own best advertisements.

The ingredients which enter into the Paim Killer, being purely vegetable render it a perfectly safe and efficacious remedy taken internally as well as for external application, when used according to directions. The slight stain upon linen from its use in external applications, is readily removed by washing in a little slockel. moved by washing in a little alcohol. This medicine, justly celebrated for the cure of so many of the afflictions incident to the human family, has now been before the public over twenty years, and hes found its way into almost every sorner of the world; and wherever it is used, the
