For His Own House

No one knows better than a professional painter what poor economy it is to use cheap paint. Sometimes he is compelled to use it on other people's buildings, in order to meet their demand for a low price; but when he paints his own house, he chooses the best paint he can get—knowing it not only makes the best-looking job at the beginning, but is also the cheapest in the end.

Shadow.

I am sitting to the leeward, While the current runs to seaward
Soft and slow:
Where the sleeping river grasses
Brush my paddle as it passes
To and fro.
On the shore the heat is shaking
All the golden sands awaking
In the cove;
And the quaint sandpiper, winging
O'er the shallows, ceases singing
When I move.
On the water's file pillow
Sleeps the overhauling wren,
Green and cool,
Where the rushes lift their burnished
Oval heads from out the tarnished
Emerald pool.
Where the very water slumbers,
Water lilies grow in numbers
Pure and pale:
All the morning they have rested,
Amber crowned and pearly crested—
Fair and frail.
Here, impossible romances,
Indefinable sweet fancies,
Cluster round;
But they do not mar the sweetness
Of this still September sweetness
With a sound.
I can scarce discern the meeting
Of the shore and stream retreating.
So remote;
For the laggard river, dozing,
Only wakes from its reposing
Where I float.
Where the river mists are rising,
All the lollage baptizing
With their spray;
There the sun gleams far and faintly,
With the shadows soft and saintly
In its rays.
And the perfume of some burning
Far-off brushwood, ever turning,
To exhale;
All its smoky fragrance dying
In the arms of evening lying.
Where I sail,
My canoe is growing lazy,
In the atmosphere so hazy,
While I dream;
Half in slumber I am guiding
E.eward, indistinctly gliding
Down the stream.
—Pauline Johnson.

A Working Girl's Problem.
Anna Newcombe was a pretty little girl with brown, curly hair, in which the gold shone. A little corkerew curl hung over one ear most bewitchingly, and it was this and the pretty brows eyes with their appealing expression, as well as her petite figure, that made everyone who was not prejudiced to think of her as 'a dear little girl.' In reality Anna was twenty two.
Many people were prejudiced, however, for Anna was a maid. How meekly and with the stiffness suddenly evaporated from her backbone, Anna would confess to an enquirer, 'I'm a maid.'
'I just wish I could say out stoutly, like you do,' she told a friend in the cafeteria one day. It was on an occasion when her friend had come late for tea at the Y. W. C. A. lunch on their afternoon out. Some strangers and other acquaintances were seated at tables nearby.
'My, but you look pale!' they chorused, as the girl came in.
'You would look pale too if you had been doing up preserves all day, she retorted.
'Why, do you just stay at home all the time?' someone inquired.
'No, indeed I don't,' she answered. 'I'm a cook general. I get twenty-two dollars a month and my board, and I paid ninety-five for this hat.' She tossed her head defiantly. She was handsome and well dressed, and determined to assert the financial superiority of her position. The other girls looked at their almost shabby apparel.
'Just the same, I wouldn't do house work,' one said to another in a low voice.
It was then that Anna had whispered to her friend her admission of her courageous assertion.
Anna had not always been a maid. Over in England were friends who thought she was living in comparative luxury. Her letters painted her existence in quite rosy colors. Anna's father had been killed in the South African war, and a year later her mother died. Her youngest sister inherited the pension, and Anna was taken by her aunt and taught dressmaking.
A story of high wages and new prospects brought her to Canada, where she found work in a small dressmaking establishment. The companionship was quite pleasant but the hours were long and the air too good, and as a developed backache, Lower back and shoulders ached, and oh! how they ached! It was not very long before Anna was in the hospital.
When her illness was over, housework seemed to be the only thing to which she could turn and she was not very well experienced. She met some hard rebuffs.
'You don't know how hard and cross some ladies are,' she would conside to her half-timid way. 'Why one day I worked for I cleaned her whole house through, and whenever she came near me it was only to scold and find fault. I suppose it was not my place of me but I ran away from there two weeks. But I lost my money and she got her house cleaned for nothing, so I got the worst of it. I should not stand her scolding.' At last Anna got into a good home where she stayed over a year. She was very neat and clean naturally, and did her work well, and this mistress taught her to cook. She was a good cook, and she was quite happy, save for one thing—that was her social position. Not in the house—she did not mind that; she gladly tended door and phone, waited on table, and preferred to take her meals by herself; but it was among those who should have been her friends that she felt it.

Such a nice girl she met when she first came to Toronto! They became friends at once and all the church meetings sought each other out. It was after Anna had begun domestic work that this girl suddenly asked, 'What kind of work are you at, Anna? I have always forgotten to ask.' Anna explained. The face of the other girl changed color and expression.
'She was always polite after that,' Anna would relate, 'but never the same again. She never wanted to talk to me or have anything to do with me. I suppose if you could have other friends you would not choose a person who was a maid at So-and-So's house.' Anna would add with wistful philosophy.
In the good home where Anna was established were two small boys whom she used to take skating often in the afternoons. The young men would skate with Anna, and she was having a glorious time. Then that old cloud of social position obscured her sun again.
'Who is that pretty girl you bring down here to skate?' one of the young men asked the boys.
'Why that's Anna, our housemaid,' the elder exclaimed in surprise, as if all the world should have known.
'No, it isn't,' the younger corrected innocently. 'That's Anna. She lives over at Mr. Jones's house. She's a working girl for our mother. Temporarily laid aside' while battles are being won. A great ball full of soldiers last night acclaimed with a great shout when I stated that the reward a soldier would rather have than anything on earth is not money, food, luxuries, easy days—but the little cross on his heart that enables him to believe he too, has, if only momentarily, trodden in the foot steps of Jesus Christ.
—WILFRED T. GREENFELL.

Be Ready for Emergencies.
The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Limes and Turpentine in the house ready for emergency. Then when coughs or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cared before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.
One of the features of the millinery trade of late has been the increase in the demand for velvet hats, for outer wear, in all the popular colorings. Velvet and haters' plush shapes are still very much in the fashion, but are being used more for dress wear. All kinds of shapes seem to be moving, small and medium, straight brims, flares and mushroom. Tans are doing well with the more popular priced trade. The out put of velvet hats is being hindered somewhat by the difficulty experienced in getting sufficient velvets in the most wanted shades which include purple, brown, navy, taupe, bottle green and wine. While purple is still a very popular color, it is said to be losing ground a little in millinery lines in favor of brown, which is expected to be the best shade of all when the weather gets a little cooler and furs come into general use.
'Now,' said a Boston school-teacher to his class in English, 'each one give me a word ending in 'ous,' meaning full of, as 'dangerous,' full of danger, and 'hazardous' full of hazard?'
For a moment there was a dead silence. Then a small boy raised his hand.
'Well,' queried the teacher, 'what is your word?'
Then came the reply, 'Pious, full of piety!'
'Doesn't this boat tip a great deal?' asked a timid young woman of the steward.
'The vessel, ma'am,' said the steward, 'is trying to set a good example to the passengers.'

Fighting for the King of Kings.

A LETTER FROM DR. GREENFELL.
I expect this summer to again reach the coasts of Labrador and North Newfoundland, made lovelier and sadder by the drain of so many of our youth and manhood to this great war. We shall need new courage and more help to attain ends some of which we were beginning to feel were in reach. I want here to once more ask our friends to remember the launch the 'Northern Messenger,' which carries us from home to home, doing what we can to relieve the terrible suffering of the people of Labrador. We have the cost of running it to meet, and we have never yet appealed to you in vain.
The news from our little 'front,' where we are trying to fight for the King of Kings is all good—the best incentive for us to 'go forward.' 'Ah, said someone to me the other day 'you do not have such discouragements and set backs as we do.' It is not that a lie which every human being engaged in the real fight of human life is apt to believe? No—rather let us be glad God has given us opportunities to win the cross for valor; dangers and difficulties to bring out and strengthen what good is in us; and sometimes humiliations to remind us we have need of help and fellowship with the Master of men. Often I have seen our wounded, temporarily laid aside' while battles are being won. A great ball full of soldiers last night acclaimed with a great shout when I stated that the reward a soldier would rather have than anything on earth is not money, food, luxuries, easy days—but the little cross on his heart that enables him to believe he too, has, if only momentarily, trodden in the foot steps of Jesus Christ.
—WILFRED T. GREENFELL.

Childless Homes.

Many years ago a woman in very moderate circumstances, the wife of a carpenter, had two beautiful daughters who were to her as the apple of her eye. But death took both of them within a brief space of time.
For while it seemed as if the mother would lose her mind, but religion and an inherent richness of nature brought her in time to a calmer and therefore a more reasonable condition. She went to an orphan asylum, a lected two little girls about the age of those she had lost, and adopted them. In a little while they were as her own flesh and blood, and the bond of affection grew stronger as the years passed. Both girls grew to a happy womanhood, and both married well.
Once more the house was desolate, and once more the mother sought the orphan asylum, adopted two more children and began a third life of motherhood, which is not yet finished. In the meantime her success in healing the grief of bereavement and in regaining her happiness attracted the attention of others, and she herself urged her friends to follow her example. As a result more than twenty children have found good homes and more than twenty families are happier.
Why is it that so many childless people give freely of their material resources and so few give at all of the maternal or paternal riches that would make many of the orphan asylums unnecessary? Fear is probably the main reason. You know nothing of the parentage of the adopted child, or at least nothing of its innate disposition. It is too great a risk. It is just as great a risk with children of your own; no greater. The statistics of adoption are among the most heartening in the world.
Besides the fear the feeling doubtless enters: This is not my own child. I could never feel quite the same towards it as I should toward my own blood. Those who have adopted children say otherwise and they should know.
Parenthood is, or should be, something more than love for the child of your body. Far more truly it is the divine wish to mould the mind and morals of another human being to all that you are able to do. It is the highest and best—there is no higher and better—than to have an intellectual and spiritual heir; and that is possible without being a parent.

War Sensations.

In 'The Magazine of the Trenches,' an article in the September Century, Gellert Burgess quotes from one of those improvised newspapers that break the monotony of trench life the following list of 'greatest sensations of the poilu at the front,' sensations every one of which, as Mr. Burgess says, has been lived through by hundreds of thousands of men:
To eat one meal only, day or night, for eight days running.
To go over a field of battle two days after an engagement.
To sleep, with no trenches, in the open air near the enemy.
To live for forty-one days in water in a trench without getting out.
To stay for six long days in water half way up to your knees, with only one meal (at night) and no shelter.
To endure for twenty four hours a precise and capacious bombardment by the enemy's big guns.
To watch for the first time the seriously wounded taken to the rear.
Not to wash for fifteen days.
Not to shave or change your linen for thirty-five days.
To keep awake every instant for three days and three nights.
To spend a night as sentinal beside a cow that has been dead fifteen days.
To sleep, sheltered only by branches under the snow for eighteen days.
To be grazed by a spent shell that your very side.
To see your best friends killed at your very side.
To be awakened in cantonment by a shell bursting on the roof.
To crawl three or four hundred feet on your hands and knees.
On patrol at night, to be suddenly illuminated by a light bomb a few feet from the enemy's barbed wires.

Used for Shaving.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.
If business was never booming before in the bead and spangle line, it is this season. Not only is the demand the heaviest leading factors in the trade have seen, but goods are about the scarcest they have ever seen. Steel beads are particularly in demand and they are so hard to get that prices have advanced on them from 7 cents a bunch to 19 cents or more. Cat steel beads are especially scarce, being in demand for trimmings on shoes, dresses, hats, yowns and other wearing apparel, and on velvet and crocheted bags. Steel beads in all colors, some 30 shades in all, are also much called for, many of the colors being hard to get now. Oriental and French pearl beads are much wanted for use in necklaces. In the spangles, jet and iridescent effects are in heavy demand for use on evening dresses. Prices on all kinds of beads now average 25 to 30 per cent higher than normal.

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

You may find that your appearance indicates that the writer of this letter and be encouraged to get Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the relief of neuralgia or the nerves since.
You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does, it is bound to do you good.
Mrs. J. A. Jensen, Gwynna, Alta., writes: 'About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for several months so bad that I could not get a night's rest. I used several medicines recommended by the druggist. My doctor also prescribed, but nothing gave me brought any relief. Instead I got worse and worse until I could scarcely do anything or bear the least bit of noise. My nerves were all upset.

Editorial Brevities.

An automobile trip across the continent in less than five days and four hours is an achievement justifying on the part of the car makers strong claims for the strength, speed and general character of their machine.

German statements that the British 'tanks' are a failure are directly at variance not only with British official claims, but with the war messages of neutral correspondents, who are still telling stories of amazing things done by these war engines.

The Municipal Election.

The electors of Kings county are in a few weeks to have the duty and privilege of exercising the franchise in the selection of men, who will have in charge the affairs of the municipality for the next three years.

The object of the election should be to secure a body of intelligent, God-fearing men, who, putting aside all selfish considerations, will work for the highest welfare of the municipality. The Christian standard is set forth in Romans the thirteenth chapter as follows: 'For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to evil.'

The Alliance holds that the ideal condition is that municipal affairs should be kept out of party politics. A suitable man should be selected for councillor irrespective of his party leanings, and he should be expected to keep himself free from the machinations of petty partisanship.

Someone advertised in a New York paper the other day for a book-keeper and salesman who 'must have one leg shorter than the other.'

Someone advertised in a New York paper the other day for a book-keeper and salesman who 'must have one leg shorter than the other.'

What strikes us, however, is that we should like to see more advertisements of the same kind from employers who have no such self-interested reasons.

'A pushing salesman wanted, with one arm, if he left the other in England.'

'Gardener's job open to an ex-soldier needing out-door life.'

'Munitions making. Highest pay. Injured soldiers preferred, if able for the work.'

The Military Hospitals Commission is doing its best to fit our convalescent soldiers for whatever work they are best suited for; but when they are ready to come out, restored as far as possible to health and strength, employers should come forward to receive them.

The Provincial Commissions and Committees aim at getting work for the returned soldiers, but every manufacturer or other employer should co-operate with these organizations.

Letter from Lieut. A. H. Chute.

I the Field, Sep. 14, '16 To-day I have been watching the faces of innumerable squads of men marching up to the trenches. The major sent me down the line after ammunition, and all the way I met these chaps who, before another day, will have done their part and paid their price for another British advance.

I went down into a dug-out where in were gathered a group of subalterns, two of whom were old friends of mine at home. As I stood at the door of the dug-out I felt like one about to enter the death-cell to encounter those condemned to die.

Liner.—We have fought one of our most successful battles, and I thank God I am safe and sound. At the dawn this morning I was in a valley that looked as much like hell as anything that imagination could frame.

Great Forest Fires of History.

The Northern Ontario forest fire of July 29 last takes rank as the third most serious fire catastrophe in the history of this continent. The Hinkley fire in Minnesota, 1894, was responsible for 418 lives and the burning over of 160,000 acres. The famous Peshtigo fire in Wisconsin, 1871, killed 1,500 and devastated 1,200,000 acres of timber.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

From all parts of the world we receive words of praise for Gin Pills as the great remedy for kidney trouble. The following is from Jamaica where Gin Pills enjoy a 1912-1916 sale. 'I was a clerk in a store in Jamaica but had to give up my position on account of kidney trouble. I purchased one box of Gin Pills from a local druggist and before it was out of my hands I recommended them to a friend who was also in a similar condition and he tried them with the same good results. I tell you I tried many remedies in Jamaica before I got your Gin Pills. Yours very truly, Thomas Price, Bog Walk, Jamaica.'

If We But Knew.

If we but knew that through the closing door
Some one we loved would enter never more,
Would we not hasten with our richest store?

If we but knew!
If we but knew that from the market place
Soon we should miss some kind,
Familiar face,
Would our cold greeting not be touched
With grace?

If we but knew!
If we but knew some heart beside our own
Had walked in dark Gettysburg
Alone,
Oh, with what largeness would our love
Be shown!

If we but knew!
Dear Jesus, patient, understanding,
Kind,
We are Thy lost sheep in a winter
Wind,
Forgive us that we are so wilful
Blind!

Teach us to know!

W. C. T. U. Annual Report.

The question is sometimes asked "What is the Wolfville W. C. T. U. doing?" A few extracts from the interesting report given by the secretary, Mrs. G. B. Taylor, at the annual meeting held in August, will doubtless answer such inquiries, assuring us also that the Union has not been idle during the year just ended.

The number of members is 64, but only a small percentage attend the meetings. —Though all contribute toward the work and upkeep of the Society. Members of the Union have been active in assisting the Red Cross Society, and the eighth battalion, then in training in Wolfville, was entertained one evening in vestry of the Baptist church, for which the Union was given a hearty vote of thanks by officers and men. Work for lumbermen is in charge of Mrs. Kempton who has forwarded one barrel of literature and the comfort bags.

The Union has also placed Testaments in the bedrooms of each hotel in Wolfville. Especially good work has been done in the department of Labrador work. Two large barrels and one box were sent on June and 1916. These contained articles and about 100 useful articles of clothing, etc. A note of thanks from Dr. Grenfell was much appreciated by the Union, as it will, no doubt, interest others, and we give it here in full: St. Anthony, Nfld., Aug. 1st, 1916.

My dear Mrs. Fielding:—Our office has just reported to me the safe arrival of the splendid gift of the W. C. T. U. and before starting out again on my hospital steamer I wanted to send this line of thanks personally to you, and say how much we appreciate the generosity and thoughtfulness that prompted you to remember our work with such excellent clothing. But for the continued help and interest of friends like yourselves we should not have sufficient 'power to our elbow' to continue our work.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excited; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion cures just such conditions.

It possesses in combination the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it. Scott & Bown, Toronto, Ont.

ADULT FLY SUPREME: MUST COMBAT LARVAE

How Shall World Fight This Driest of Insects—Many Practical Methods of Warfare

The house fly is the driest of all vermin. It visits the filthiest places imaginable and then distributes the filth over our food. It carries the germs of typhoid, infantile diarrhoea, and other intestinal diseases, and probably assists in the spread of tuberculosis. Hence, it is not merely very dirty but exceedingly dangerous as well. Scarcely a day goes by without the adult fly being seen in our homes, and doors and windows may be screened, fly papers, traps, "swatters," and poison may be employed to kill those that do enter the house. But these purely defensive measures are not enough. The war must be carried into the enemy's country; the fly must be exterminated.

To wage war with the adult fly is to go into a ceaseless battle that can never be decisive in nature. For the flies form generations that all in a single season and a very short time, are able to produce an equally numerous host the following year.

Clean Up Always.

The only way to exterminate the fly is to attack it in the larval or pupal form. Flies lay their eggs in manure or garbage, ten days from the time of hatching the maggot emerges. A winged insect, fully equipped to distribute disease-bearing bacteria. But a city with clean streets is a clean stable premises would be a flyless city, for it would have applied the flies' breeding grounds. The plan of campaign against these annoying and dangerous pests is thus plain: we must clean up once or twice a year, but all the time.

City by-laws should require all owners of stables to keep manure in a fly-tight, covered box and to have it removed at least twice a week. A stable law should apply to the disposal of garbage. Persons with dirty back yards should be prosecuted. Privies should be abolished wherever possible and where allowed, should be kept continually disinfected and cleaned twice weekly. The piling of refuse in disgusting and unsightly "dumps" should never be permitted. If the town cannot afford an incinerator, the refuse should be burned.

Borax Treatment.

Experiments have shown that the fly larvae in manure and other refuse may be killed by treatment with borax, one pound of borax being sufficient to treat 12 cubic feet or nearly 12 bushels of manure. If used in larger quantities, the borax would be very injurious to plants. The borax should be sifted over the manure, particularly near the surface of the pile, which should then be sprinkled with four gallons of water. This treatment will kill 88 to 99 per cent of all the larvae in the manure. At 11 cents per pound for borax, it is estimated that the cost would be 2 cents per horse per day. This cost could be very greatly reduced by employing riched colemanite instead of borax. If the former were reported in large quantities, one pound of colemanite will treat 11 bushels of manure and its larvicidal action is as effective as that of borax.

INFLATION OF TIRES

Over-inflation is Much Better Than Under-inflation

In a contribution to the records of the Society of Automobile Engineers, an expert and one of the foremost authorities on matters giving some very valuable advice to the car user as to how best to meet the problems of tire care. He says very positively that under-inflation is the thing to watch out for and guard against—not over-inflation. If it is found necessary for comfort and protection to carry a lower pressure than that recommended, it should be done by all means, he explains, but it should be the same time be plainly understood that one always takes a chance with any means of reducing the pressure, never can be excused by considerations of temperature of any other minor cause tending to increase the pressure. If for any reason the pressure must be lowered, it can be done and durability maintained only by the use of larger tires.

In fact, this authority says that it is practically impossible to hurt tires by over-inflation, provided the tires are not previously being damaged by over-tightening and under-inflation. They are built with a very high factor of safety, and in tests they have been inflated to as high as 300 pounds per square inch pressure without anything harmful happening to the tire. The rim finally giving away. This is a general belief that is quite erroneous. It is a dangerous thing. The bursting pressure is seven times the pressure which is recommended.

Of course, there are limits to which the inflation should be carried for comfortable riding, and obviously a too highly inflated tire defeats the purpose for which it is used. The tire makers have set down pressures which are the best compromise between the lack of resilience on the one hand and under-inflation on the other.

A Russian priest was trying to get on a crowded train car on which were many officers. One of these said to him, "Why don't you ride an ass as you Master did." The priest retorted as the car moved on without him, "So many of them are in uniform these days there is none left for me to ride on."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

An English correspondent was giving an American correspondent an account of one of the battles at the front, which he described in graphic terms. When he finished the American characterizedly remarked: "Some fight! Yes," replied the Englishman: "Some don't."

FOWL ON GARDEN LAND

How to Care For Fowl—Don't Use Fowl Land

There are two methods by which fowls may be kept on the garden plot. If the plot is large it is on the small side, it will be necessary to keep the birds confined to their shelters during the time such land is under cultivation; but if there is a good sized piece of ground at one's disposal, and it is desired that the birds shall account for hatching eggs in season, then one portion of such ground may be run over whilst the other portion is being cropped. In adopting this method, the house and scratching shed should be erected at the south end of the plot, and the latter should be divided by means of wire netting fixed to suitable stakes, a boarded fence two feet high being fixed to the stakes to prevent the birds from becoming restless through being unable to get at the produce on the other side. A thing likely to result if they were allowed to see such produce. By having the house provided with two outlets, the attendant would be able to let the birds out into the run if it is intended they shall occupy.

Should the plot of land be in arid, say, twenty yards square, then it is a good plan to erect the house and scratching shed in its centre and divide the land into four parts, three parts being put under vegetable cultivation, whilst the other part is being occupied by the fowls. This would be allowed to occupy the land in turn, the several plots being cropped in rotation. Portable fencing would be necessary when adopting this method, such fencing being of such a kind as to facilitate any erection around each plot in succession.

Many there are who possess good sized plots of garden ground and devote them entirely to the use of poultry. This is a great mistake, and one that, unfortunately, is only discovered when disease incident to fowl land breaks out among the stock. Where a good sized plot of land exists there is no reason why the fowls should suffer through tainted ground, if it is managed on the lines indicated above.

When the birds are confined to a plot of land on which they are unable to feed upon the manure, and so sweeten the soil ready for occupation again by the fowls, fowls run on the land recently cleared of crops breed exceedingly well, the eggs being strongly fertilized and the chicks about and quick growing. This is due, no doubt, to the fact that the birds have fresh land to run upon, and, in addition, an abundance of insect life to consume—just the thing to invigorate and strengthen the reproductive organs.

RAISING ORPHAN LAMBS

Rich Milk is One Secret of Shepherd's Success

A problem is the proper care of the orphan lamb. If the flock has been badly wintered many ewes will fail to supply the milk of the lamb and will disown their lambs. With such flocks the shepherd's days are full of trouble. Unless the lambs are supplied with milk from a rich source, they will not thrive.

Cow's milk is not nearly so rich as ewe's milk, and for this reason should not be diluted with water. In fact, the chemists find that ewe's milk has but about three times as much butter-fat material as cow's milk.

Use, therefore, the richest milk possible. Give it often, warm, and in small amounts. The young lamb is unable to swallow more than a few ounces and the ideal way is to give from three to five tablespoonfuls every two hours.

This, of course, is for the first few days, and the space of time between feedings should be gradually lengthened out. Always be sure that the milk is given warm and clean, and in small amounts rather than too large amounts. Be sure that the nipples and bottles are perfectly clean, and that they are able to raise their orphan lambs to weaning time with practically no losses.

HALIFAX: WORLD PORT

Because of its geographical location, because Halifax is the most easterly of the Canadian ports, and because, too, strangely enough, it is never closed by ice, Canada through its Department of Railways and Canals, is square high pressure in the world's port developments in the world. Work to the amount of $7,000,000 has been contracted for, and a total outlay of $10,000,000 is contemplated. The development at Halifax is attracting the attention of engineers everywhere. There is being built an entirely new railway entrance to the city, which means a re-location of the railway station and six miles of approach track through virgin territory within the city limits. Furthermore, a rail-line to the city is being constructed, and this line is being introduced as a study in commercial development and national self-sufficiency for the port of Halifax, when completed, will be the climax of the grand Canadian transcontinental railway scheme, which is now fructifying for the past decade; the transshipment point which is intended to guarantee that Canadian goods will be carried entirely on Canadian soil; the link in the British "All Red" intercontinental transport—"New York Times."

Conservation

A factory for extracting oil from herring waste has commenced operations at Lunenburg, N.S. It expects to produce 750 barrels of oil and 800 tons of fish scrap in one year. The supply of raw material will be secured chiefly from the St. Stephen district of New Brunswick. The utilization of this waste will still further increase the value of the smoked herring industry of that port.

SIGHT-SEEING IN THE ROCKIES

The enormous height of the mountains through which the Canadian Pacific passes is such that passengers are apt to miss the majesty of the scenery unless they are able to look up and see these snow-clad peaks.

Mount Sir Donald, for instance, is a mile higher than the railway track over which it towers. Those who sit on the platform of the observation car of course see everything, but the space here is limited. A great hit has therefore been made with the new type of open observation or sightseeing car which was placed on all-through trains this summer on certain of the most picturesque districts in the Canadian Pacific Rockies, and on the local trains between Banff and Lake Louise.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy." — Mrs. Wm. Gamm, 232 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana. There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy. If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The merchant who does not advertise catches no trade. He is fortunate if he can retain what he has, because he is never progressive, so his more alert competitors who do advertise, gradually get all the business. Advertising is an evidence of alertness and generally the advertiser gives better value and prompt service. As a consequence he seldom has awkward goods to dispose of. It pays to patronize the advertisers.
