

MUTINY ON A GOLD SHIP.

It was our last Friday night at Castle Bluff boarding school. Most of the girls were gone, and the few who lived in or around New York, and were obliged to remain until Saturday morning, were counting the hours of captivity.

It was a dismal night. The rain beat a ceaseless tattoo upon the piazza roof, while the honeysuckle scraped an accompaniment upon the panes; the wind piped shrilly, and every now and then, as it shifted, we could hear the roar of the breakers at Fortora Hope. We were huddled together, seven girls, in the study parlor, grumbling because the evening train for New York was an express, and so did not stop at Castle Bluff.

"I would have cut the closing exercises and taken the two o'clock train if the 'General' would have let me," said Sarah Priest, frowning.

"The General" was our name for our principal, Mrs M., whose imposing carriage suggested the title which Dickens bestowed on one of his characters.

"Our sacerdotal friend seems pensive tonight," I remarked, mischievously. "What entertainment would your Reverence be pleased to countenance?" I added, turning to Sarah. The poor girl had to answer to a great many punning variations of her name. Indeed, we all bore school names. Mine was "Gaul," given me by the class in "Caesar's Commentaries," as an improvement on "France," otherwise Frances. Minnie Walsh, the most diminutive girl in school, was "Cardiff Giant," abbreviated to "Cardie." Jennie Shepherd was known as "Shepherdess," or "Bopeep"; Bertha Hein, who was always "willin'," was "Barkis"; "Lib" Chamberlain, a high-spirited, independent girl, was called "Liberty."

I had been reading aloud from "Our Mutual Friend," but finding my audience too restless to listen, I closed the book and walked to the window.

"No use to look for the steamer tonight, girls," I said; "you couldn't sight the Great Eastern a boat's length away."

I remember that we were just five months and three days from Phillip's dock, Liverpool.

"Our freight was gold dust for the return trip, and the worst of it was that we could get a crew only of convicts. Our own sailors caught the gold fever, which was running very high then, and while the ship was lying at Melbourne ran away to the gold fields to prospect for themselves. These convicts were old sailors who had been transported for crimes, but who had served out their terms and wished to return to England by working their passage. David—that was my husband's name—said we could do no better than to take them, and he hadn't the slightest fear that they would make any trouble; they were too anxious to get back to England.

"All seemed to go well for a time, but after we had been out at sea for some time, it seemed to my husband that the Bonanza was a little off her bearings; so the first bright day he took an observation. He was shut up for about an hour making the calculations. When he came out I saw by his face that something was wrong. He went aft and spent some time with the helmsman. He had found that the Bonanza was off her bearings, sure enough. The man at the helm told him that she was not, as true to the helm—that she was water-logged. This got about among the passengers and they began to be nervous; so my husband announced that he would make an examination, and invited two of the passengers to accompany him into the hold, where the ballast is stowed, and found the slip was all right. The captain sent the boatman aloft to give out through the trumpet that the report was false.

"After this I could see that David was uneasy, although I did not then understand why.

"I awoke one night just before seven bells struck. When I heard the bells, I knew that it was only half-past three, and was trying to get asleep, when my ears, which are exceptionally quick, caught a peculiar scraping sound under the berth. There would not seem to be anything alarming about this, for most ships have rats, but the fact was that the gold tank was built into the ship just under the captain's berth, the only entrance being by a trap door. If this scraping came from the tank it could not be rats, for no rat who had any respect for his teeth would be likely to experiment on the zinc lining. A few nights afterward I heard the noise again, and felt sure that it was some sharp instrument working on a metallic surface. I awakened David, but he could not hear anything, and said that it must be my imagination.

"Soon after this, I noticed that a curious change had come over Arnie, our cabin boy. His whole name was Arnold McIntyre. He was very young for the place, but I had been pleased with his appearance and indeed my husband took him. This was the boy's first trip. His father had been a prosperous squatter in Australia, a Scotchman by birth, and a fine man.

"One night the father was awakened by the barking of the dogs, and on going to the door found a gang of bush rangers surrounding the house. They evidently knew that he had been selling cattle that day and had brought home a large sum of money. It is not likely that he intended to harm him, for it was only the money that they were after, but he showed fight and knocked two of them down.

"Well, the end of it was that the poor Scotchman got a bullet through the head, and the bush rangers rode away with everything valuable. Mrs McIntyre was never the same again. She lost her wits, let the baby fall on its head (in consequence of which it died not long afterward), and took no notice of Arnie after that, and it seemed a pity that he should go to destruction, so I took care of him. He was very fond of us, and I took great pleasure in teaching him, for he was very grateful and a quick scholar.

"All at once, as I said, a great change seemed to have come over him. He came into the cabin one morning as white as a piece of canvas, and I noticed that his arms shook so that he had to carry the captain's coffee with both hands. He declared he was well, and seemed to be startled when we spoke suddenly to him; but during breakfast I often noticed that he was gazing at us with an indescribable expression. I have seen something like it in the face of a dumb animal when it is trying in vain to make itself understood by a human being.

"I was sitting on deck with my work, one pleasant morn'g soon after, when, happening to need a book which was below, I sent Arnie down to get it. When he handed it to me there was a folded slip of paper between the leaves; a single word was scrawled upon it—the word 'Mutiny.'

"That day, when we had finished our dinner, the captain rose in his place and made a short speech. He said something like this:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I wish to have a few earnest words with you. I do not wish to cause alarm, and hope there is no occasion for any, but I think it best that there should be a fair understanding between us, as to how matters stand. I have reason to believe that all is not right on board—that there is mischief brewing among the crew. If I can have the support of the passengers I feel sure that I can manage the men. There must be no panic among you. It is absolutely necessary that all be calm, watchful and self-controlled. I believe that you will be. I think I can trust you and shall expect you to stand in line with me in any emergency. We will look this danger in the face, and we shall see whether a dozen true Englishmen can be cowed down by a gang of convicts!

"The speech had the effect my husband desired. The passengers felt that he trusted to their honor and courage, and the gentlemen all promised to be ready to stand by him in any emergency. The captain had all hands piped on deck, and we followed. The crew were a hard looking set of fellows, most of them, with rough, unshaven, scarred faces, which glowered at the captain from under their eyebrows like wild beasts.

"My husband was not much of an orator, but when a man's blood is up he can talk, if he ever can; and I assure you he laid down the law to those men in words they could understand.

"There is not a man of you," he said, "who dares look me in the eye and say that he has received anything but fair play from me, or the subordinate officers, since he shipped on the Bonanza. Your past lives have not been such as would lead a man to put confidence in you. The world has not been the better for your living in it, but I have treated you as if you had been the most honorable men in England. You have had a chance to show that there was something of true manhood left in you, yet now, how have you returned this? I will tell you! You mean mischief! I understand this as well as you do. Your plot is known to me and the time has come for you to give an account of it. You will find that I am not a man to be trifled with. I am master of this ship, and I intend to remain so. The Bonanza is freighted with gold dust, and I shall defend her with my life! I command you all, as true British sailors, to bring forward your arms and lay them on the captain's table."

"You may not know that it is against the shipping articles for sailors to carry arms; one of the first questions asked when a man ships before the mast is, 'Have you any weapons?' There was silence among the men when the captain ceased. We could hear the soft flapping of the sails overhead, and the occasional scraping of a heel, as some one eased his muscles by shifting his weight from one foot to the other. I was standing by the main shrouds, looking over the side, as at home. Those who respect their parents will respect what is worthy and good in you, and those whom the little ones of home love and trust you may regard as worthy your confidence. Respect for parents and love and care for little ones are rarely found in hearts that are very bad.

"Choose true Christians. They live from principle, and believe that God's eye is upon them. Being friends of God, they will bring you into the best company; and they will be likely in their prayers to keep you before the mind of the Almighty, so that you may share in their own blessings. Their friendship will last. They are over-estimating friends, for heaven—the place you hope for—is their home. You never need say a last 'Good-bye' to such friends.

"I closed my eyes, but when I looked again I could hardly see the top of the captain for the bowie knives and pistols that covered it!

"Then the captain thought of Arnie. He said, 'I understand you have got Arnie in tow. Bring him up.' He was brought up, pale as death.

"Now, says the captain, 'you've got to tell all you know about this business.' 'The child's lips quivered. 'If I do they will kill me,' he said.

"The world judges us by the company we keep; judges all by the worst of the company. 'Nor is there anything but fair play from me, or the subordinate officers, since he shipped on the Bonanza. Your past lives have not been such as would lead a man to put confidence in you. "Choose those who you know. You would hardly trust strangers with property; will you trust them with that which is more precious than your life, your reputation, your life your soul? Choose such as you can trust. He who deceives or flatters others may flatter and deceive you. If he be unfaithful to another, what assurance can you have of his faithfulness to you? Choose such as you can trust, you kindly, yet frankly your faults. Only true friends will do that. 'Faithful are the wounds of a friend.'

"Choose those who respect their parents and are loved at home. Nowhere is there such an opportunity given to study one's character so closely as at home. Those who respect their parents will respect what is worthy and good in you, and those whom the little ones of home love and trust you may regard as worthy your confidence. NASAL BALM

My wife suffered for five years with that distressing disease, catarrh. Her case was one of the worst known in these parts. She tried all of the catarrh remedies I ever saw advertised, but they were of no use. I finally procured a bottle of Nasal Balm. She has used only one half of it, and now feels like a new person. I feel it my duty to say that Nasal Balm cannot be TOO HIGHLY recommended for catarrh troubles, and am pleased to have all such sufferers know through its use they will receive instant relief and CURE CHAS. THE BRAIN (from a photograph). It Healthy Condition. With Paresis Lesions.

There are many well known men confined in our Asylums who but a short time ago were prominent among our business and social circles. Why are they there? Paresis! Did it come on at once? Not at all. It was a gradual but positive growth. They overtaxed their powers, their brain tissue, was too great, and they gradually but surely sank under it. The things they did to bring this sad end about are precisely the same things that are being done by thousands of men and women to-day. It is not necessary to name them. They all end disastrously unless checked or regulated.

Prof. Phelps, of Dartmouth College, knew this fully when he began his experiments, which resulted in the discovery of the wonderful Paine's Cerebrum Compound. He realized that paresis (consumption of the brain) was our great National weakness. He knew that the brain and nervous system must be fortified to meet the great strains which modern life bring upon it. He saw that men were becoming debilitated and women weakened by the pressure and demands of life, and he sought and discovered the remedy Paine's Cerebrum Compound. If rightly taken, it will renew the brain and build up nerve tissues as fast as they are exhausted. It is not a narcotic. It contains no drugs, no opium, no alcohol. It is perfectly pure. It is absolutely harmless. The high character of its discoverer guarantees this, and the endorsement of the medical and chemical professions prove it.

Requires no description, since, with rare exception, all at some time have experienced their twinges. Rheumatism is not easily dislodged, only the most powerfully penetrating remedies reach to its very foundations. The most successful treatment known, and it is now frequently resorted to by medical men, is the application of our famous remedy for pain—Polson's Nerve-Liniment. It is safe to say that nothing yet discovered has afforded equal satisfaction to the suffering. A trial can be made at a small cost, as sample bottles of Nerve-Liniment can be had at the drug stores for 10 cents, large bottles 25 cents.

Spirits of ammonia is the best thing to clean hair-brushes with, as it does not soften the bristles like soap or soda.

The ordinary method of scraping or burning off old paint is hardly expeditious enough for general purposes, and is also laborious.

Charcoal is a great sweetener of the breath, and besides that it strengthens and whitens the teeth, removes the tartar, prevents toothache, and gives the gums and lips an attractive color.

Fainting proceeds from different causes, the commonest being a disturbance in the circulation of the blood in the brain.

When you want to send the blood back from the heart to the brain, and so the flat posture is absolutely necessary.

Bitting the lips frequently makes them sore, and for hard, dry lips a little pure glycerine, lightly rubbed in at night, is often beneficial.

black, and whether under the Catholic or Protestant regime, the fagot and the flame, and the bullet and the knife have always been for the weaker side.

But these things all occurred in a darker period of history—in a more cruel and less enlightened age—and can be attributed not to religion, but to the want of it.

Not to the religion of mouth and tongue, but to the religion of heart and soul; not to the religion of zeal without knowledge, but to the religion of light, and hope, and peace, and joy, and brotherly love between all men, irrespective of creed or dogma, can we look for happiness and rest.

And as it was in the past, so we have it today. True, the thumbscrew and the rack, the stake and the gibbet have been relegated to the dark ages, but the voice of intolerance, the gibe of the scoffer, the sneers of opponents are as bitter and malignant as ever, and the Gospel of "Peace on earth, good will to men," is as much eschewed today as it was when the ribbet and the knife did their cruel work.

A celebrated English bishop once gave the following definition of orthodoxy: "Orthodoxy is my doxy; heterodoxy is the other fellow's doxy," and that definition seems yet to prevail.

The Catholic may look upon the Protestant as a heretic; but the pious Protestant is just as firm in his bigotry of feeling, and believes the Catholic is a brand that unless plucked from the burning by the aid of his "doxy" is no better than a heathen.

A little charity on each side would be a beneficial thing. Christianity today is torn with internecine strife just as much as it ever was, and the fire of discord, instead of being quenched, is having fresh fuel added to it by the unguarded words and actions of many whose vocation should be to follow in the footsteps of Him who said that not once, but seventy and seven times should the brother be forgiven.

Into the discussion of the so called Equal Rights agitation we will not now enter, as the highest legal authorities in Canada and the Old Land fail to recognize it as a legitimate issue.

Suffice to say, the subject, with all due deference to its exponents, has not been handled in the calm, judicial spirit that should animate them. The promoters of equal rights all profess to be true Christians, but they do not approach the question in a truly Christian spirit.

"Do unto others" is the motto of the Christian. "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you," is the motto of the Great Exemplar. The Sermon on the Mount is not for one but for all—not for the Protestant or for the Catholic, but for the people to the ends of the earth.

Our advice to all who would stir up religious strife, either in Quebec or in Ontario, Manitoba or the Maritime Provinces, is to work on the lines laid down by the Founder of Christianity—and especially if they profess to be his followers.

HE IGNORED THE FACTS. A Dunganon correspondent writes: "It appears that at the Equal Rights meeting held on Thursday last in this village, one of the speakers charged the Ontario Government with giving right of way of some public road near or at Niagara to the Roman Catholic hierarchy."

As such a statement will be a material point at next election of the Province, you will please explain whether it was said to them or given as a bait for support, and give particulars in detail."

Rev. John Young, of Drummondville, is the speaker referred to. He made a similar statement at each of the other meetings which he attended, and at Goderich endeavored to create the impression that the entire road between Chippewa and Queenston had been closed to traffic at the instance of the hierarchy, so that seclusion would be had by the convent in that vicinity.

In reply to our correspondent we would say there is no ground for the statement of the reverend gentleman, so far as the influence of the hierarchy having been used in this case is concerned. The hierarchy or the local authorities had no more to do with closing up the road to traffic than had Rev. John Young.

As a matter of fact, the road is not closed to traffic at all, and the "old Portage Road," from Queenston to Chippewa, one of the finest drives in Canada, and giving a magnificent view of the river, "as Mr. Young eloquently put it in his address, is still utilized as of yore. Some time ago the Canada Southern built a branch of railroad in the vicinity spoken of, and having occasion to make a crossing close to where a deep cutting had been made, the company applied to the Government to close the road at that point, owing to liability to accident to travellers, and to make the entrance to the Old Portage Road by the regular concession road, about an eighth of a mile farther down, where there would be no danger to vehicles and pedestrians from accident while crossing the track.

The Government, by an order-in-council, acceded to the request of the company, and that is the true statement of the case concerning the Old Portage Road. The Road as a public highway from Chippewa to Queenston is not closed; the hierarchy or the convent had nothing whatever to do with changing the entrance to the road; the change was effected in the interest of safe travel and at the instance of the Canada Southern railway, and the speaker, being a resident of the Niagara section ought to have known the facts of the case when he made his statement. Mr. Young is evidently a new man on the stump. He has been in the habit of making his weekly statements in a place where nobody challenges what the preacher says, but if he thinks the same immunity will follow rash utterances on a public platform—and we could under existing circumstances use a harsher phrase—he will find that he will be brought to book every time.

Rev. John Young is one of the most conscientious of the men who are at present working in the interest of the so-called Equal Rights agitation, and when he could so distort facts in connection with the Old Portage Road, what are we to expect from the exponents of Equal Rights who hope to derive emolument, place and power to themselves in the event of the scheme being successful?

THE JESUITS' ESTATES ACT. The Opinion of the Law Officers of the Home Government.

The following is issued as an extra of the Canada Gazette on Friday last: DEPARTMENT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE OF CANADA.

The Secretary of State of Canada has been instructed by His Excellency the Governor General to cause it to be published for general information the following two reports, made by the Attorney General and Solicitor-General of England, on the Act passed by the Legislature of the Province of Quebec, intitled "An Act Respecting the Settlement of the Jesuits' Estates."

Law Officers to Colonial Office, Royal Courts of Justice, July 9th, 1889.

We have taken the matter into our consideration and, in obedience to your Lordship's commands, have the honor to report that in our opinion the decision arrived at by the Governor General not to interfere with the operation of the Provincial Act in question is right and constitutional. We have, etc. (signed), RICHARD E. WEBSTER, EDWARD CLARKE.

Right Hon. Lord Knutsford. Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Knutsford.

ROYAL COURTS OF JUSTICE, 31st July, 1889. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honor to report that we are of the opinion that the Act was clearly within the powers of the Provincial Legislature, and that there is no ground for a reference to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. We have, etc. (signed), RICHARD E. WEBSTER, EDWARD CLARKE.

Right Hon. Lord Knutsford. To the Citizens of Goderich. Desiring to assist in making the coming Northwestern Exhibition a grand success, and to add to the pleasure of our visitors during that week, and to the reputation of our beautiful town, the Board of Trade, at its meeting last Friday evening, decided to formally ask the assistance and co-operation of our citizens to that end. The plan proposed is to decorate our places of business and residences during the three days of the Fair with flags, banners, etc., for the days, and illuminate with Chinese lanterns during the first and second evenings, Sept. 17 and 18. This can be done at a trifling expense to any one, and if united and general action be taken in this way the effect will be not only pleasing to our visitors and our citizens, but a paying advertisement as showing the enterprise and progressive spirit of the town.

This plan has been followed in the larger towns and cities with the most pleasing results. Let us keep the lead and send everyone away with one conviction, that we were glad to see them and did our best to make their visit a pleasant one. JAMES MITCHELL, R. S. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

A CLOWN'S ROMANCE.

A Sketch from Life—The Tips and Downs of a Harlequin's Career.

It was Christmas time in St. Giles' Workhouse, and there was quite a large party of us engaged in waiting on the old people and in ministering to their creature comforts. We gave them a sort of entertainment afterwards—songs, recitations, some amateur conjuring, and instrumental music. After the dinner came the entertainment; and just before the entertainment an ounce of tobacco or snuff, whichever they pleased, was presented to each inmate. As I handed the tray containing the little packet, he stretched out a shaking hand and thanked me in a voice which seemed familiar. "I think we must have met before, my friend," he said.

"How bless you, Mr Nibbs!" said he; "I used to see you most every night before my misfortune—my misfortune as brought me here," he added wearily. "Good gracious!" said I, "why, it's Molino."

"That's me, sir," he said, "or what's left of me." I set rid of my tray of tobacco and snuff, and then I came back to the old man. He wasn't an old man in years, but he looked seventy at the least. We had been rivals once, Molino and I. When I first began writing for the stage—and I began at twenty—I did a good many things for the 'Bird of Prey.' I was glad to write comic songs for gines. I know what poverty was; but I was perfectly happy for I was in love with an angel. And so was Molino. I was nobody—an outsider, a "mug." He was somebody; for he was "the great little Molino," the celebrated clown; and of us two she certainly preferred Molino. There was no doubt about her preference, for she was engaged to be married to him; and then knowing how the case stood, I, as an honest man, gave up my suit. And then I lost sight of her for some years, and Molino dropped out of my memory altogether. She was certainly the most graceful dancer I have ever seen. The school of dancing at the "Bird of Prey" used to be quite an institution, and it was a tradition there that the best dancer always played Columbine at Christmas. Talk about poetry of motion—talk about aerial grace and rhythmic movement; never before or since have I seen such dancing as Lina's; and I don't believe I ever shall, if I live to be a hundred.

"You heard how I came to grief, sir, I suppose?" he said. "It was along of beer." "Why, you were a most sober man," I remarked.

"Ay," he replied, "barley water was my drink at those days, sir. A clown don't do much good unless he is a sober man; but it wasn't the beer I drank, sir, that settled me—it was the beer I had to give to other people. Clowning was a very different thing in those days, sir, wasn't it? Why, there wasn't a house in London as didn't run its pantomime, and it was the comic business they went to see, sir, then, and not the ballets and the processions and the gentlemen and ladies from the music halls. They used to go to hear me sing "Hot Codlins" and "Tippety Witchee"; ay, and I got a treble encore for 'em every night, too—as you know, sir. Where are the clowns gone to now-a-days, sir? I can tell you," he said, in a solemn whisper—"to the workhouse, sir; that's where they're gone. Why, there's three of us here. It's the music halls that did it. If the public sees clowning all the year round there, and uncommonly bad clowning too, they don't want to see it at Christmas; and that's the secret, sir. I don't suppose there was a bawpian man in the profession," he continued sadly, "than I was when I was playing clown in "Harlequin Fe-to-fum." I had saved money. I had furnished a little house in Hoxton; and we were to be married in a week, Lina and I. The pantomime had only three more nights to run, and "Luke the Laborer" and "The Murder at the Red Barn" were billed for the following Monday. I had a big jump through a clock-face in the second scene of the harlequinade. I was very proud of my jumps; they were longer and higher than those of any other man in the profession; and there was no secret, no hidden springboard or r'dgerly, about it. I took an honest run from the footlights, and I used to go clean through that clock face, though it was seven feet from the ground, head first, every night; and four supers used to catch me in a blanket the other side. She was on at the time; for when I had taken my jump, which always brought down the house, she used to dance the Varsovianna, which was a new thing then, with old Brown the harlequin. The beer for the supers used to be a pretty heavy tax; and if one didn't pay for it, it meant getting knocked about or breaking one's neck. My four chaps were always pretty particular, for they got their beer money regularly. If I hadn't been quite so liberal it would have been better for me. That night, sir, those four supers were stupid drunk. I took my jump; and as I flew through the clock-face I heard the beginning of the tremor-shout which came from the front of the house; and then, instead of being caught in the blanket, I shot head first into the brick wall at the end of the theatre. Those four chaps had forgotten all about me and were talking together with the blanket in their hands; because, as I tell you, they were stupid drunk.

It wasn't till three weeks afterwards that I came to myself; and then I was in a bed in Bartholomew's Hospital, and I was light-headed and as weak as a child. The next day was Wednesday, Wednesday is visitors' day at the hospital, and Lina she came to see me; and she sat by my bedside and she cried as though her heart would break. And then she told me how it all happened; and how she loved me; and I must make haste to get well, that we might get married; as we were under engagement to do; and she cried fit to break her heart. She looked prettier than ever, poor thing! And every Wednesday she'd come and try to cheer me up, and say how hard it was that our wedding had to be put off. She was a good girl, she was. But our marriage was put off for good, and all; for I was a cripple—a cripple for life, mind you, and as weak as a child. My memory came back right enough. But how was I to get right

A Little Romance, Now and Then, It Reminds us of the "Bird of Prey."

A GOOD BAPTIST.—A well-known and amusing story is told of Sheridan, who was no sportsman. Having gone out on a shooting excursion every few weeks, he had a gun, and he was very anxious to secure something for his bag. On his return home with an empty bag he saw a man, apparently a farmer, looking over a fence at a flock of ducks in a pool. "What will you take," said Sheridan, "for a shot at these ducks?" The man looked at him with astonishment. "Will half-a-crown do?" The man nodded, and Sheridan gave him the half-crown, taking his shot at the ducks. About half-a-dozen fell dead. As he was preparing to bag them he said to the man, "I think, on the whole, I have got a good bargain of you." "Why," said the man, "they're none of mine!"

HE HAD BEEN THERE.—Friend Meek had a very good horse and a very bad one. When riding the latter it turned out that his better-half had taken the good one. "What!" said a bachelor friend, "how comes it that you let your wife ride the better horse?" "Friend," said Meek, "when these best married the'll know!"

HE WANTED TIME.—A notorious pauper was brought up recently before the Sheriff Court at Jeddburgh for engaging in his nefarious practice of illegally killing salmon. He was found guilty, and fined 30s., or ten days' imprisonment. Pleading inability to pay the fine, the Sheriff asked him how long he would require to make it up. "Well, my Lord," returned the culprit, scratching his head, "that depends on hoo the fish come up the water."

HE'S DEAD.—A worthy couple had lived long together ere the guidman was forced through a severe illness to take to his bed. Very reluctantly the husband consented to have the advice of a doctor, and his partner was forthwith despatched for one. The good woman, who was very anxious about her husband's condition, said a great deal to the doctor about his state, and the latter, through a severe illness, was pretty sure there was little wrong with him. However, when he had examined the sick man, who had never moved or looked up, the doctor said—"This is a sad case, he's dead." "You've made a mistake," broke in the sick man; "I'm not dead, but leavin'!" "Whist, Jamis," said his wife, "the doctor knows better than you!"

DR. TAYLOR OF NEW YORK AND ROBERTSON OF IRVINE.—In the week which the minister of the Broadway Tabernacle has been once more proving his powers in the Scottish pulpit it may be not out of place to recall an amusing anecdote of the late lamented Dr. Robertson of Irvine, which Dr. Taylor has been heard to relate. When the latter was a student he happened to pay a visit to Robertson, who straightway sought to secure his service for a sermon on the following day. The tyro modestly declared that he was quite unable to undertake such a heavy responsibility, confessing that he had but one sermon. "But it's a sermon I prepared for the hall, and it's on Justification," said the protesting student. Robertson would accept no excuse, and, wholly against his will, the modest youth mounted the pulpit of the most eloquent orator in the West of Scotland, and as best he might fired off the scholastic proposition which he had prepared for the professors. At the close of the service, when the youthful divine entered the vestry, "Well," exclaimed Robertson, "I am glad I asked you to preach, Taylor; adding, with a peculiar twinkle, 'it is not often my people hear a sermon like that!'"

Thoroughly Tried.—Having given Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry a thorough trial, I do not hesitate to say that I believe it is the best remedy in existence for all summer complaints, diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, etc. Mrs. R. S. WAITE, Springfield, Ont.

Mr. Gladstone's library at Hawarden is one of the finest private libraries in England. It has more than 20,000 volumes. Mr. Gladstone lends his books out to any one in the neighborhood who writes to request them. Formerly people could keep them as long as they liked, but a few years ago a rule was made that a book could be kept for one month only. It is the regular free library of the district.

With smokeless and noiseless powder, such as it has been claimed has been invented in England, in the wars that are to be death will take on still more terrible. The first notice of the presence of an enemy will be in the sudden sinking down of men as though smitten by a pestilence. The sentry will die at his post and give no sign. The sun will shine down serenely while the battle rages, and no canopy will obscure the butchery. Battles will be silent executions, save when trumpets sound and feroce men shout and wounded men moan. There will be nothing to kindle the battle ecstasy; no booming of hotly worked guns will give notice where the battle is sorest. With the battle clamorous and the battle canopy driven away, it will require more nerve to be a valiant soldier than ever before. The soldier will not only have to face the danger in sight, but also have to contend with the terrors that his imagination will paint him.

The curfew bell is still rung at nearly a hundred places in England.

Henry Shaw, the St. Louis philanthropist, who died recently, left nearly his entire estate, amounting to $2,500,000 of more, to the city of St. Louis. While clearing away the remains of an old building at St. Augustine, Fla., the other day, workmen discovered over $1,000 in doubloons, and an active search is being made for more.

A society has been started in London to promote the development of the science of mesmerism and of the application of hypnotism to practical medicine. The oldest Admiral in England is Sir Provo Wallace, aged 98. He was in the fight in 1812 between the Shannon and the Chesapeake, but he never commanded a steam vessel.

A funeral was announced recently in Connecticut to which relatives and friends were regularly invited, but it was also announced that the burial would be "at the convenience of the family."

George Fawcett Rowe, the noted playwright and actor, died at New York recently, aged 60. He had been ill for some time with heart disease, complicated with Bright's disease.

Miss Anna Jones, aged 87, died at Livermore Falls, Me., on Wednesday. She had been invalid for seventy years and had been confined to bed for sixty. She retained all her faculties to the last.

The jury in the Maybrick trial, who were carefully locked up and kept by themselves from the time the case opened, were on the Sunday taken on a trip in a specially chartered steamer from Liverpool to Llandudno, on the Welsh coast. During the trip they were under the charge of two of those court officials who go "on circuit" dressed out in suits of gorgeousness passing description, and carrying halberds, more show than useful.

The American rage for baseball is, after all, weak compared to the English craze for cricket. The last match between the two greatest of the county elevens, Surrey and Nottingham, which took nearly three days to play, 60,000 persons went to see it and Surrey's victory. The batting of Lockwood and Abel, who together made 159 in Surrey's second innings, was so important toward winning the match that the collection taken up for their benefit amounted to £41, £5 of which was in penny pieces.

A Free Use of a Bath Tub.—Julius, a western darkey, having landed at Chicago, saw an advertisement of a bathing establishment notifying those who wished to be clean that they might get a good wash for a quarter, resolved to avail himself of the privilege. Accordingly, Julius arrived shortly afterward with a bundle under his arm, and being shown into a bathroom, was left to his ablutions. Considerable time elapsed and Julius did not come forth, and after waiting for about an hour, the keeper of the baths went to the door and screamed out, "Yes, darkey, are you coming out?" "Yes, sah, as soon as I git froo wid my washin'."

THE POET'S CORNER.

In The Woods. Such beautiful things in the heart of the Flowers and ferns, and the soft green moss; Such love of the birds, in the solitudes,

Where the swift wings glance, and the tree tops toss; Spaces of silence swept with song,

Which nobody hears but the God above; Spaces where myrads ceatures throng, Sunning themselves in His guarding love. Such safety and peace in the heart of the woods,

Far from the city's dust and din, Where passion nor hate of man intrudes,

Nor fashion nor folly has entered in, Deeper than hunter's trail hath gone,

Glimmers the tarn where the wild deer drink; And fearless and free comes the gentle fawn,

To peep at herself or the grassy brink. Such pledge of love in the heart of the woods,

For the Maker of all things keeps the heart; And over the tiny flower broods,

With care that for ages has never ceased; If He care for this, will He not for thee—

Then, whatever thou art to-day? Child of an infinite Father, see; And safe in such gentle keeping stay.

Constant Care. Constant care is necessary against unexpected attacks of summer complaints. No remedy is so well known or so successful in this class of diseases as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Keep it in the house as a safeguard.

Dick's Signature. Little Dick Howell was a boy who often surprised people. They called him "Lazy Dick," because he loved to get into sunny corners and think, and he was not always ready for work such as little fellows can do. But one day he said: "Pa, I want lots of money."

"Yes, Dick, I have known other folks who have felt so. Go to work and earn it."

"How!" asked Dick, who really was in earnest, for he longed for a little expression. "Oh! weed the garden," said Mr. Howell, growing absent minded, as he often became. He remembered suddenly a business letter he must write, and so when Dick said:

"Will you give me a penny for every big weed?" his father said "Yes."

Well, that night Dick amazed his father by presenting him with four hundrd big weeds, and eagerly claimed four dollars. Mr. Howell never broke his word to a child; he said he did not think what he was promising, because he knew that there were too many weeds in his garden for such a bargain; but he paid the money down, and Dick had the prettiest cart in town. Not long after his father said: "Dick, you and I ought to have made a written contract about those weeds. If we had, I should not have agreed to such terms as I made. A man thinks when he signs his name. If I had been dishonest, too, I could have said I never agreed to pay you a penny a weed, if you could not have proved that I did. You must learn to write your name before I do any more business by contract with you. Then we can each sign our name." And so Dick's father went on to tell him that solemn promises not to be broken were made in writing, and men who broke such promises were men whom nobody could trust. Dick hated to read and could not write a letter, but after that he used to climb up on the woodshed roof with his dear little sister Nelly. She did her best to teach him, and the first word he ever wrote was Dick, the next was Howell. Such funny business contracts Dick made that year with his father, and such a pile of nickels as he earned. First, five for every week that he never forgot to shut Sweating the Farmer.

A Plum Creek, Man., settler writes to a Brandon paper that there must be something wrong with the Customs department, because "they certainly charged me more than the 35 per cent. duly authorized by Parliament upon certain agricultural implements which I recently imported from Chicago, and Racine, Wisconsin." This settler does not seem to be aware that the Customs department wields what is virtually a taxing power, distinct from that vested in it by the people's representatives. A farmer or an implement agent imports machines from the States. The Canadian duty, as stated above, is 35 per cent. but the customs officials are authorized to fix the valuation of the article, and by adding ten, twenty or thirty per cent. to the invoice price, they largely augment the duty paid by the settler. In this way, too, they contrive to harass and destroy the import trade, with the result that the settlers are left completely at the mercy of the Canadian makers. In spite of this system, however, a considerable number of American implements are still brought into Manitoba and the Territories. In a recent report to the Washington Government, Mr Taylor, the United States Consul at Winnipeg, says that nearly 15 per cent. of the implement business is done with American houses. This of itself is an answer to the protectionist fabric, that the N. P. enables the Canadian maker to turn out a better and a cheaper article than his competitors.

The revaluation system is, in fact, an additional prop to monopoly. Some time ago a firm of implement manufacturers in Western Ontario wanted five car loads of nuts and bolts. There was a combine among the few Canadian nut and bolt makers, and the firm wrote to the secretary of it, offering to pay the American price at Cleveland, O., plus the Canadian duty, for a consignment. The secretary refused to accept this figure, whereupon the firm imported the five car loads direct from Cleveland. But on its arrival at its destination the shipment was seized for undervaluation by the Customs authorities; and on enquiry the firm found that the secretary of the combine had been in communication with the Customs department, and had really prompted the seizure. The firm lost nothing in the end by this act of robbery, for of course the additional price was collected from the Canadian farmers who bought the implements into the manufacture of which the nuts and bolts entered. The farmer is the victim of last resort in all such transactions, and even the monopolists who prey upon him are beginning to ask how much longer he is likely to stand it.

The distressing paleness so often ob-these necessary little blood constituents, and the best yet discovered is Johnson's Festiveat Rite.

Oakloosa, Kansas, has had a year's experience of female rule, and it may be interesting to sum up the results of a mayor and council of women were first elected, it was regarded by some as a joke, but without any flourish of trumpets the mayor and council began their official duties. That they have discharged them without fear and favor is clearly manifested in the fact that they have made enemies as well as friends. Many obstacles confronted them in the beginning, the most perplexing of which was that the town was in debt and there was only 85 cents in the treasury. Another obstacle was that the marshal would not obey the ordinances, but that was overcome when Mayor Loman promptly removed him and appointed a man upon whom she could rely. Then began such a crusade as never before had been known. It was found that the ordinance relating to Sunday closing was not observed. Out went an order to the marshal to arrest any merchant who was caught selling goods on Sunday. The hotels, livery stables, and barber shops alone were permitted to remain open, and druggists were allowed to sell medicines. The sale of cigars and tobacco on Sunday was entirely prohibited. The proprietor of a bakery and ice-cream parlor asked permission to keep open, but was refused. Consequently a Sabbath is now rigidly observed in Oakloosa. Then the Mayor and council turned their attention to bad boys. For years the young toughs of the place had been allowed to loaf about the streets at night, and they had cut up all sorts of capers, and moving signs from one place to another and rolling grindstones from in front of hardware stores to private residences. A proclamation was issued commanding all boys under 18 years of age to be off the streets at 8 o'clock in the evening under penalty of arrest. Since then one cannot find a boy who refuses to accept this warning. The ladies were greatly exercised over the subject of tobacco chewing, and looked carefully through the statutes for an ordinance that could be used to stop men from squirting tobacco juice on the sidewalks. They failed to find one, but some of the ladies were of the opinion that the ordinance relating to public indecencies would cover the nasty nuisance. They asked the city attorney what he thought about it, and he told them that tobacco-chewing was a person's liberty and beyond the reach of municipal legislation. The ladies were therefore disappointed, but the next best thing they could, and that was to personally request every tobacco-chewer in town not to expectorate on the sidewalks.

This had just as much if not more effect than an ordinance would,

for the men are so respectful of the wishes of their female guardians that they unhesitatingly complied with the request, and now a lady may fearlessly sweep her skirts over the sidewalks without any danger of having them stained with filthy nicotine. Some of the men have even "sworn off" chewing.

ERRORS OF THE TYPES.

Instances of Amusing Errors Appearing in Prints.

In large newspaper offices it is the custom to give out but a few lines of copy at a time to any compositor. In the absence of the context, it is therefore often impossible to get the full meaning of the matter in hand. If the copy chances to be in the least blind the hurried type setter is apt to make a wild guess at the writer's meaning, for as most printers are paid by the piece, the time spent in deciphering a crabbed hand-writing is so much dead loss to them, and make an appreciable difference in the length of their "strings" of duplicate proof for measurement at the end of the week. The "machine printer," or "blacksmith," is one of the chief obstacles with which writers have to contend. He it is who sets up whatever the copy looks like to him, regardless as to whether it makes sense or not. Such a one it was who set up "Gambetta" as "I am better," and made a heading intended for "Bridge Carried Away by a Drive of Logs" read "Bridge Carried Away by a Drive of Hogs." Another of this ilk made an advertisement which read, "The Christian's Dream; no cross, no crown," appear as "The Christian's Dream, no cows, no cream." A reporter of a Chicago paper once mentioned an intelligent craftsman as a "thinking tailor," but the machine printer who got the take made him appear as a "thieving tailor." The proof reader was of course responsible for the error, but the vengeance of the irate tailor was visited upon the unfortunate reporter. Another Chicago writer described an acquaintance as one "whose manners would adorn a drawing room," but the unthinking compositor made it read, "whose manners would alarm a drowning man."

The Cincinnati Enquirer once created a genuine sensation by stating, in display type, that a gang of American counterfeiters had been "shaving the queen," when "shaving the queer" was evidently what was intended.

One of the worst instances of mis-prints caused by bad chirography was where the heading "A Honeycomb Act Short," was printed in full face as "A Hungarian Cut Throat." Another equally disagreeable blunder, to the parties interested, was where a distinguished traveller was reported as having recently died "in the richness of sin." The paper, however, apologized for this candid admission the following day, by saying that what the editor intended to write was "the interior of Asia." Perhaps no newspaper writer was ever more disturbed by a trifle than was the society reporter who, in describing the belle of a recent fashionable party, intended to say "she looked as fat," but found that an unfeeling blacksmith had made it, "she looked all feet." Of all editorial blunders, Horace Greeley was most noted for illegible copy. On one occasion the "modern Franklin" penned something about "Suburban journalism advancing," but the type setter, thinking it was one of his famous agricultural articles, launched out wildly with the words, "Superb Jerusalem strawberries." It is somewhat singular how often the omission of a single seemingly insignificant letter will alter the meaning of a sentence. For instance, several errors have been recorded where the letter "w" has been omitted from the word "winnow," invariably placing a "widow" in some embarrassing position, as where, on the occasion of a street pageant, a gentleman unwittingly advertised "widows for hire," and the even worse blunder, in a religious newspaper, which gratefully recorded the fact that "Mr had very generously placed a stained

It would be a great accommodation to people from this locality desiring to get to Blyth, Clinton or Goderich, as a person could go to Goderich and transfer their baggage, and return the same evening. As it is the afternoon train is our only connection. The morning train spoken of would wait for our morning accommodation, getting at Clinton about noon. The public will wait with the hope that the G. T. R. authorities will comply with the request.

BENMILLER. From our own correspondent. We learn that the friends on the Benmiller Circuit are taking steps to hold a harvest home festival at a date not very remote.

ST. AUGUSTINE. From our own Correspondent. CATHOLIC PICNIC.—The picnic under the auspices of St. Augustine church, which was held on Island Grove on Wednesday last, was largely attended, and proved to be highly successful. From far and near vehicles had come laden with human freight on pleasure bent, and each and every one had enjoyed to the heart's desire. A commodious platform had been erected for the benefit of the young people, and during the afternoon was well patronized by merry feet keeping time to the music of the orchestra. The repast provided for the guests reflected the highest credit on the culinary art of the ladies of the section, and the quantity of the good things proved that the providers had a clear conception of the appetites with which the guests were blessed. Early in the afternoon a heavy thunder storm broke over the picnic grounds, and for fifteen or twenty minutes there was a heavy downpour. The people had to betake themselves to the covered carriages and other places of shelter until the rain ceased. After that Old Sol once more broke through the clouds, and the festivities of the day were resumed with unabated vigor. About three o'clock the platform was taken possession of by Rev. Father McGee, the popular parson, who called upon his people to listen to addresses from a number of gentlemen present. Mr. P. Kelly, of Blyth, was the first speaker, and he was followed by Mr. M. C. Cameron, Q. C. of Goderich, Mr. James Johnston, Reeve of East Wawanosh, and Mr. D. McGillicuddy, of Goderich. All the addresses were couched in a congratulatory strain, and they were well received by the large audience. After the speeches the platform was again taken possession of by the young people, and the jollities of the day were continued until the evening shades fell. We learn that the picnic was a financial success, and congratulate Rev. Father McGee on the result of his efforts at the first picnic under his control at St. Augustine.

AMBERLY. From our own correspondent. Miss Kate Morrison paid Kenneth McIver a flying visit last week. Harvesting is now about completed and threshing will soon be starting. Mr. John McDonald's new house is about completed and is a credit to the 12th concession of Ashfield.

Mr. Andrew McDonald has arrived home from his trip to Scotland and has brought with him a fine Clydealite station. We wish him success with his latest purchase.

Misses Kate and Ann McIntyre, of St. Thomas, are paying their sisters, Mrs. Frank Bayne and Mrs. Archibald McIntyre, a visit.

Mrs. Greer McLennan and her son Charles paid Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McRae and Mrs. Wm. Kempton a flying visit, last week.

Miss Maggie McLennan and Miss Flora Finlayson (Lochish dress makers), paid Mrs. McKay, of Bell's Corner, a short visit last week.

Rev. Mc McLennan, of South Kintosh, preached in Ashfield Presbyterian church last Sunday. Mr. McDonald is expected before next Sunday.

Mr. Finlay McLennan, Lake Range, met with a serious accident last week. As he was taking the cows home in the evening he was attacked by an angry bull, which threw him to the ground. Mr. McLennan escaped with numerous bruises and scratches, but was senseless when found in the field by his son. He is improving.

Obit.—In Kintail, on Sunday, Sept. 1st, Hannah, sister of the late Alex. Campbell (who died three weeks ago). Her remains were interred in the Kintail cemetery on Monday last. AUCTION SALES. All parties getting their sale bills printed at this list up to the time of sale.

Sale of farm stock and implements of Thos. Murrish, on Lot 7, con. 7, Colborne, near Smith's Hill, on Monday, Sept. 16th, at 1 p.m. John Knox, auctioneer.

A couple of weeks ago Mr. Peter Cole, Goderich township, noticed his dog chase something across a field very wickedly, and going to see what was wrong, found that it had tread a good-sized bear. He could hardly believe it at first, but there it was, up a twenty foot sapling. Hastily securing his gun, he fired three discharges into it, but as he had nothing but slugs and small shot it did not hurt his bearship very much. Some of the neighbors, being attracted by the commotion, knocked the animal out of the tree, and finished him with pitchforks, clubs, etc. It was a good sized one, supposed to be somewhere about a year old, almost jet black, but did not hurt his bearship from no one knew, as such an animal has not been known running wild in the township for twenty years. Mr. John Middleton bought the carcass and distributed it among different persons, who can say they have feasted on bear's meat—he is having the skin tanned.

COLBORNE. From our own correspondent. Another champion has arisen for the single handed championship for quoiting of Goderich and Colborne, and we are desired by R. Simmons, of Salford, to say he will meet the present holder of the championship, W. J. Nevins, of Goderich, on the quiting ground of his town on Saturday, the 14th inst., at 5 p.m., and play him three games of quoits, each game to count 21 points. The winner to be best two games out of three. In next week's local press of Goderich we hope to see the acceptance of this challenge, and the champion of the Salford village will be on hand to try and take the honor to Salford.

DUNLOP. From our own correspondent. Mr. and Mrs. W. Macdonald, of Goderich, visited friends here this week.

RETURNED.—John Jardine has returned to our burr, after an absence of 11 months, from Hagarville, Wexford Co., where he has been residing.

PERSONAL.—Mr. J. Whately, of Londonboro, and family spent several days here last week, and were the guests of R. Quaid. During their stay with their host they took in the mammoth picnic of the A. O. U. W. and Foresters at the Point Farm in Leeburn, on Friday last.

LEEburn. From our own correspondent. Mrs. Brennan, of Hullett, and child were the guests of her uncle, J. Healy, for several days last week. As the welcome notes of the voluntary died away, the familiar figure of the pastor, Rev. J. A. Anderson, was seen once more in his accustomed place after an absence of six Sundays, by a large congregation in the Presbyterian church. He preached an impressive sermon. Steps are shortly to be taken to have a tea meeting in aid of the church funds to try and reduce the present debt. The new system of weekly giving from different families has proved very successful.

The slumbers of some of our residents were rather disturbed one night about the middle of last week by a crowd of full-grown nothings going home drawn by a favored team belonging to a liveryman on South st., in the quiet town of Goderich, who amused themselves firing off firearms, and shouting in a high key, two horsemen receiving rather a better share of their noise than the others, as shots were fired at the watch dogs, which missed their mark, and also at the barns. There are seven or eight persons in Goderich and the Salvation Army. We hope they will tell their flocks to be orderly when away from home, and the words may fall on the ears of some of the revellers of last week.

DUNGANNON. From our own correspondent. Weather here continues to be very dry, and warm.

The anti-Jesuit organization meeting, which was to be held on Friday last, did not take place, but was further postponed. Quite a number of our farmers are busily engaged in sowing fall wheat and consequently are very busy with threshing, etc.

It is pleasing to be able to note that Mr. John Pentland, of the Nile, who has been very ill for some time past, is gradually becoming convalescent, and is able to take a drive out.

Harvest Home festivals have commenced in this locality, which we presume are a little too soon for the season, as the farmers are very busy, to which matter we will allude in our next.

Mrs. Welsh, sister of Messrs John and William Varcoe, having been visiting relatives and friends at Port Hope, her former place of residence, returned home last week much improved in health and appearance. She enjoyed her visit very much.

Mrs. Wm. Wilson, of the 4th concession of West Wawanosh, is very ill, having received an injury some time ago to one of her hands. It gradually became worse, until an operation was necessary, which was the amputation of her arm on Tuesday. We hope that she will get better.

We regret to have to state that Charles Girvin, Esq., ex-revee of West Wawanosh, and president of the West Wawanosh Mutual Fire Insurance Co., is somewhat indisposed. We hope that his illness will be of short duration, and that he will be soon able to go around as usual.

Another of the pioneers of Ashfield, in the person of William Irwin, commonly known as the cognom Big Bill Irwin, on account of his being a large, powerful man, died on Wednesday of last week. The remains were followed by a large concourse of relatives, friends and neighbors to the place of interment, Dungannon cemetery. Rev. Dr. Strong conducted the obsequies in a very impressive manner. The deceased was aged 69 years, 3 months, and was widely known and popular, as also a good citizen. The widow, family, and relatives have the deeply felt sympathy of the entire community.

A severe Test. When a manufacturer, from years of observation, has so completely satisfied himself of the universal satisfaction given by his products, that he feels fully warranted in selling them under a certificate of guarantee, it is very natural to believe that such a producer has implicit confidence in the merits of his goods, and that, too, not without good reason. Such confidence is possessed by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., in Dr. Pierce's Family Medicine, and hence his "Favorite Prescription" is sold by druggists, as no other medicine for similar purposes ever was, under a positive guarantee, that it will in every case give satisfaction, or money paid for it will be refunded. It cures all those distressing and delicate ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is not necessary to enumerate the long catalogue of derangements, both functional and organic, of the female system which this marvelous remedy overcomes. They are, alas! but too well-known to most females who have attained womanhood, to need more than a hint to make them plain to their understanding.

KINGSBRIDGE. OBITUARY.—It is with feelings of deep regret we announce the death of Mrs. Frances Lloyd Egan, which took place on Wednesday, Aug. 21st. The deceased lady came to Canada with her husband over forty years ago, and resided at Kingsbridge for nearly nineteen years, occupying the position of postmistress during the period of her husband's absence. Mrs. Egan was a devoted Roman Catholic and was gifted with an amiable, charitable disposition. Having received an excellent education she was accustomed in early life to associate in high circles of society. We sincerely hope she has gained the reward promised to those who, like her, have borne their sufferings with sweet patience and resignation, and that she will meet her husband where sorrow is unknown. The funeral took place from her late residence on Friday. The remains were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery, at Ashfield.—Com.

Even in Newport, where wealth is at a discount, the diamond and pearl necklace worn on state occasions by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has excited the greatest wonder and admiration. The striking feature of this necklace is that the diamonds are pierced through the centre and are strung alternately with pearls. It is said that it required many weeks of patient labor to pierce each stone.

On Tuesday afternoon, last week, Mr. Geo. Rumball, of the 13 con., Goderich Twp., met with a painful accident which nearly cost him the loss of an eye. He stooped down to pass under the wagon rack, and just as he did so a splinter splintered from the rack and pierced his face just below the eye, almost forcing the eye ball from the socket. He had the wound dressed, and anticipates no serious results therefrom.
