CHAPTER XXIII.

Decima uttered a low cry, and attempted to rise; but Mrs. Sherborne's hand forced her back into her chair. "Do you think that is too strong, that it is unjust?" continued the strained voice. "It is not. I know him; you do not. There is no cruelty he would not be capable of. My poor child, he could make life a hell for you—and he would do it!"

Decima could not speak; she could scarcely breathe.

"I have known him since he was a boy," said Mrs. Sherborne, with a long-drawn sigh. "He has been cruel to me, though I have never thwarted him; he will have no pity for you; for there is nothing that rouses the devil in a man like Theodore than to find that the woman he loves dislikes and fears him."

Her voice died away, and an intense silence reigned in the luxurious room. Mrs. Sherborne drew her hand away, and sat with bent head, staring at the fire.

Decima could not speak. It was as if a hand had torn aside the veil which shrouds the future, and had revealed it to her in all its hideousness. "Well, I have told you!" said Mrs. Sherborne. "Do you believe me? It is quite true, quite true! What will you do?"

Suddenly her tone altered, changed to one of feverish imploration.

"Child, there is yet time to draw back! Do so at any cost, at any cost—before it is too late! Better be lying out there in the church-yard, better be wandering in the streets, homeless and shelterless, than marry a man you don't love!"

Decima rose, supporting herself by the back of the chair. Her face was very white; there was horror in her eyes, in the drawn and parted lips.

"It is too late!" she said. "I—I have given my word. I must do it. I can not draw back!"

She went, with uncertain step, to the couch, and got her out-door things and began to put them on with trembling hands.

Mrs. Sherborne watched her. All the fire and earnestness had died out of her face and manner, and she was again the apathetic, constrained, and reserved woman.

"You are going?" she said in her old way.

"Yes, yes," said Decima. "I must go outside. I want air."

"And all I have said is no use?" said Mrs. Sherborne, with a kind of cold resignation. "Well, I have done my duty—I have tried to save you. If you are resolved—"

Decima threw out her hands with a piteous gesture infinitely girlish, infinitely despairful.

"I can not help it!" she murmured. "I have given my word. Good-bye."

She got out of the room and through the gorgeous hall and into the open air, for which she seemed dying. Mrs. Sherborne's words rang in her ears; the truth of them rang like a knell in her heart. But what could she do? If it were all true, she must go through it for the sake of those she loved.

She went home, and as she went about those duties which make up the routine of a woman's life, and which must be got through though that woman's heart were breaking, she tried to forget the awful words of warning which Mrs. Sherborne had spoken.

But they were not to be forgotten. They haunted her day and night, and gradually there came upon her the feeling that unless she spoke to some one, unburdened herself of the dread weight which was crushing her heart, she must go mad.

She had not written to Lady Pauline. Why should she not go and see her?

There, at least, was one who loved her, who could help her. It was not the first time Decima had thought of her aunt during this crisis; but she knew that Lady Pauline was not rich, certainly not rich enough to lend or give the money that was necessary to save her father and Bobby. And pride, a not unnatural pride, had prevented her confiding their joint trouble to Lady Pauline, who would have suffered all the more because of her incapacity to render assistance.

But now Decima resolved that she would go to the woman who loved her so tenderly.

"Father, I am going up to Aunt Pauline," she said, one morning. "I want to see her. I want to tell her about—about my marriage." Her lips quivered. "I can come back to-morrow or the day after."

Mr. Deane looked up from the piece of iron he was sawing; and regarded her with an absent and preoccupied stare.

"Very well—very well, my dear," he said. "Give my kind regards to Lady Pauline. Most charming woman, but lacking in intelligence. I never could make her understand. Would you mind standing out of the light, Decima?"

Decima sighed and kissed him, and went out.

On her way to the station, she saw, through the window of the closed fly, Mr. Mershon going toward The Wood-bines. She had not told him that she was going, for she knew that he would have insisted upon accompanying her. And why not? It was his right. She shrunk back into the corner, and closed her eyes.

She reached London about four o'clock, and took a cab to Lady Pauline's. When she rang the bell, her heart beating fast at the thought of seeing her aunt again, the door was opened, not by a spruce servant, but a shabby-looking charwoman. Decima walked in as she put the question mechanically:

"My aunt—Lady Pauline—is she at home?"

"Oh, Lor', no, miss!" said the woman. "Lady Pauline ain't here! She's at Walfield. She went yesterday."

Decima's heart sunk, and she glared at the woman aghast.

"I did not know," she said. "I have just come from the country, and expected to find my aunt here."

"Ave you now, miss?" said the charwoman. "Ow, disappointin'! You must be Miss Decima, as the maids is always talkin' about?"

"Yes," said Decima, droopingly. "When do you expect Lady Pauline back?"

"Well, I don't rightly know, miss," was the reply. "It's too late to go to Walfield to-night," said Decima, more to herself than to the woman.

"Yes, it is, miss. And of course you can sleep here; I can get a room ready for you in no time."

Decima's heart rose a little. "Thank you," she said; "I will stay here to-night, and go on to Walfield to-morrow. I ought to have telegraphed."

"Which it would have been safer, miss," said the charwoman, taking up Decima's bag. "I'm afraid I haven't got anything in the 'ouse fit to eat," she added, as Decima followed her. "But I can make you a cup of tea."

Decima stopped short. She had suddenly remembered Bobby.

"Wait!" she said. "My brother is in London. He is living at Prince's Mansions. I will go straight to him; he will bring me back here to-night. Where is Prince's Mansions?"

The woman said she did not know, but that any cabman would find it; and eventually Decima found herself in a hansom rattling toward the rooms Lord Gaunt had lent Bobby.

A page opened the door to her and gazed at her after the manner of his kind when she inquired for Mr. Deane.

"I don't know whether he's in, miss," he said; "but I will step up and see."

"I will come, too," said Decima. "I am his sister."

The page opened the outer door of Gaunt's flat, and Decima followed him through the hall into the drawing or sitting-room.

A fire was burning in the grate; there was an odor of cigarettes. The page looked round.

"Mr. Deane ain't here, miss, but I expect he'll be here directly."

"Very well," said Decima; "I will wait."

She sat down in a chair beside the fire and looked round the room. It was beautifully warm, and its luxury and air of taste and refinement struck upon her gratefully. She noticed the exquisite pictures, the rare bronzes, the fur rugs of leopard and bear skins. Then she remembered that the room was Lord Gaunt's, that he had lived there, and a strange feeling stole over her.

Presently there came a soft knock at the door, and a maid, a neatly dressed London maid in black alpaca, with white cap and long strings, entered with some tea things.

"Wouldn't you like to take your things off, miss?" she said, respectfully. "And I have brought you some tea."

Decima assented gratefully, and the maid let her into Bobby's bed-room; that is to say Lord Gaunt's. Decima looked round with a curious feeling as the maid helped her to remove her out-door things and went for some hot water.

There was an odor of cigarettes in this room also; a dress-suit of Bobby's lay folded on a chair; a peculiar perfume arose from it. It struck Decima unpleasantly. A copy of a sporting paper was on a chair beside the bed, as if Bobby had thrown it down just before going to sleep. There were etchings on the wall, delicate, delightful bits of art, which reminded her of Lord Gaunt, as Bobby's clothes and the cigarette fumes and the sporting paper had reminded her of Bobby.

She washed her hands and face and brushed the soft, wavy hair, and went back to the sitting-room, and found had placed the tea-service on a gypsy table in front of the fire, and Decima poured herself out a cup, looking round the room musingly and with intense interest.

It seemed to her elopement of Lord Gaunt. Her mind dwelt upon him. He had lived in this room; had sat in this very chair, perhaps; and drunk out of this cup. Where was he now? she wondered. She sighed and leaned back. If only he had been here, she could have told him of her trouble; he could have helped her, advised her. Not for the first time, her heart ached with a yearning for his presence.

French Miners Threaten Strike

Imperial Co-partnership Foreshadowed--General Wrangel Abandons Portion of His Defences--Hunger Strikers Quit on 94th Day--Ottawa Has Smallpox Outbreak--Geddes Declares Canada "The Binding Link."

MINERS ISSUE THREAT.

PARIS, Nov. 12. The French Federation of Miners to-day decided to send out a general strike order unless the companies agree to a discussion proposed by the Federation concerning an increase of the miners' wages before midnight to-morrow. The strike, it called, will become effective Monday.

CRITICAL SITUATION IN CAUCASUS

PARIS, Nov. 12. Reports to the French Foreign Office to-day vindicate that General Wrangel has given up certain parts of his first line defences more difficult but not vitally weakening his position. It is regarded here, however, that the entire situation depends upon the White Army holding the Crimean Isthmus. The Allies as well as the French are said to be concerned over developments in the Caucasus. Reports to the Foreign Office confirm the signing of an armistice by Armenians and Turks, and the fear is expressed that a possible imminent junction of the Bolsheviks in that region with Turkish Nationalist followers of Mustafa Kemal Pasha might have grave consequences, even resulting in an eventual clash of Bolshevik forces with Allied troops in Turkey.

TIMES DISCUSSES MEETING OF COLONIAL PREMIERS.

LONDON, Nov. 12. The Times to-day discussing the calling of a conference of Premiers of the Empire for next June, points out that this gathering was foreshadowed as long ago as May, 1917, in a resolution which gave a clear view of the international position of the component parts of the Empire as a collection of self-governing states, bound together by the common tie of the crown and conducting common affairs of their national partnership through periodic consultations of their leaders. This conception of the Empire, the paper adds, has certainly captured the imagination of the Dominions, but the importance of it is far too little recognized in England, as yet. There has, it thinks, been a tendency since the signing of the peace treaty for Dominions to slip back into seeming acquiescence in their representation by the British government in internal affairs. This is no more than natural as all Dominions have been largely absorbed in the readjustment of their internal affairs since war, the Times says, but adds that it is convinced that the Dominions will not be content to return to their pre-war international status. In this view the Empire government must be a government by consultation on the equal status principle which was tried in war time and found workable.

HUNGER STRIKE OFF.
CORK, Nov. 12. The hunger strike of nine Irish prisoners of Cork jail was called off to-day, the ninety-fourth day of the strike. This was revealed when a message received by Lord Mayor O'Callaghan from Arthur Griffiths, founder of the Sinn Fein organization was given out. "I am of opinion," read the message "that our countrymen in Cork prison have sufficiently proved their devotion and fidelity, and that they should now as they prepared to die for Ireland, prepare again to live for her."

SMALLPOX AT OTTAWA.
OTTAWA, Nov. 12. There are seven cases of smallpox in hospital on Hopewell Island, and the epidemic of smallpox in this city does not appear to be on the decline. New cases are being reported to the local Board of Health at the rate of six each day.

DECREASES IN STOCK MARKET.
NEW YORK, Nov. 12. Quoted values in the Stock Market continued to crumble to-day. Selling for both accounts, in which involuntary liquidation probably predominated, carrying the list to the lowest levels of the year. Many popular shares were twenty to forty points under the maximum of a few months ago.

AGREEMENT REACHED RE PARATIONS.
PARIS, Nov. 12. A definite agreement concerning the procedure to be followed with regard to reparations due to Germany was reached to-day between French and British Governments. The agreement calls for a meeting in Brussels of Allied technical experts with Germans, and also a meeting of Allied Premiers in Geneva in the first half of February to discuss the total amount due and Germany's capacity for payment.

CANADA THE BINDING LINK.
NEW YORK, Nov. 12. The position of Canada as a link which holds firm the bonds of friendship between Great Britain and the United States, was emphasized by Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador at Washington, in an eloquent speech delivered at a dinner given in honor of the Canadian Club of New York at the Hotel Biltmore to-night. Canada has by force of circumstances, the duty and privilege of being the interpreter of Britain to the United States and of the United States to Britain, said Sir Auckland. Canada's great deeds and achievements having predestined her to be a leader in securing cordiality between her partners and her neighbors. In a glowing tribute to the Dominion he declared that Canada could not fail in this great task. "Read the manner of men Canadians are," he said, "and you will never associate the idea of failure with their national effort."

DARING ROBBERY.
KINGSTON, Ohio, Nov. 12. In a daring daylight robbery three men in an automobile to-day secured four thousand dollars in currency and between fifty thousand dollars and seventy thousand dollars in government bonds from the First National Bank here, shooting right and left as they made their escape from the town.

THE ANSWER.
A stage-struck youth had pestered a manager for a hearing, and at last got one.
"Tell me," commenced the manager, "do you aspire to comedy or tragedy?"
"Tragedy," blurted the youth.

Striking an absurd pose the aspirant began, "To be or not to be."
"Not to be, undoubtedly," said the manager, showing him out.—London Opinion.

Safety Razor
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

The Shaving Service for Everyman—Everywhere.

The Psychology of a Clean Shave

(Part of an Editorial in Collier's)

Shaving as it is practiced today marks a step forward in civilization.
This statement may sound ridiculous, but it isn't. Here's proof: Each of our soldiers who went abroad took as part of his regular equipment, and by order of his government, a safety razor. *
There were two reasons, the military authorities say, why a soldier had to be clean shaven. First, it enabled the gas mask, which was worn almost constantly at the front, to fit more lightly over the face. Second, a clean shave kept up the morale of a soldier and of an army.
You know how it is yourself. You know the direct bearing a clean shave has on your personal morale. Compare the way you feel in making an important call or attending a special meeting when you are freshly shaved with the way you feel with a day's growth of stubble on your chin. There's all the difference in the world. It seems a trivial thing to have such an effect upon you, but for some psychological reason, it does have that effect—and you know it. f . . . . .

What has brought about this change in men's habits? It's not so long ago but that we can remember the beard in all its varying degrees of opulence. Every family album shows how prevalent it was.
There are two reasons—just two. **
The safety razor made shaving easy. It transformed shaving from a fairly long, decidedly unpleasant and slightly dangerous operation to one that was finished before the bath water had ceased running.
It saved time. Compared with the old style razor it saved several minutes. While individually these minutes may seem unimportant, taken in the aggregate, multiplied by the number of days in the year, and again by the millions of men who owe to the use of the safety razor, the amount of time saved is enormous. †

"Finished before the bath water had ceased running."

*In all the allied armies during the war, more Gillette Safety Razors were in use than all other razors put together.

†Keep count for one day of the number of times you stroke your chin. So many times do you develop confidence—or the reverse—according to the smoothness of your chin.

**The Gillette not only makes shaving easy, but it abolishes stropping and honing—two exceedingly delicate operations in which few shavers are really successful.

‡Five dollars invested in a Gillette means ten minutes saved each day, or an ordinary day's working period saved every 48 days or so.

There is a Gillette dealer waiting to show you Gillette Safety Razor sets—today!

PROMPTNESS.
I went to James Augustus Jones, and from him borrowed fifteen bones, the which I needed sore, for all my aunts were sick in bed, my divers children cried for bread, as they ne'er cried before. I said to Jones, "November 8 you'll see me waddle to your gate, to pay you every red; November 8, at half-past 10, I'll pull your latch-string once again, or you may know I'm dead." And Jones, he heaved a sickly smile, for he was wise to human galle, to promises that fall; and doubtless in his soul he sighed, "I'm stung again, dingbust my hide I'll never see the kale!" November 8 dawned bright and fair, a hint of frost was in the air, the wind was east by west; and to the residence of Jones I toiled my worn and aching bones, the boodie in my vest. The clock was striking half-past 10 when I produced the iron men, and paid him every bean; and after one astonished yell, poor Jones, he had a fainting spell, with spasms in between. His senses once again restored, "My faith in human men," he roared, "you've surely bolstered up; my jaded soul you've filled with peace, and you may wed my fattest niece, and use my pointer pup." And Jones has given me renown in all the byways of the town, as one who keeps his word, and wheresoever I may go, the people say that I'm a Jo, a looloo and a bird.

The Scots at "Y" Ravine.

One of the most prominent of the many fights on the Flanders Front during the great war was that of the Y Ravine on Nov. 13th, 1916. The date was first given as the 14th, but the Scots themselves say that the ravine was entirely in their hands before the night of the 13th. The attack was begun at six in the morning while yet dark, and after a preliminary artillery bombardment. There was only one spot on all the front which the Scots attacked at which the elaborate wire defences were not swept out of being. While abysmal shelters of the ravine were little damaged, ordinary trenches and positions were battered to pieces, so that one of the chief inconveniences was that the mouths of the dug-outs could not be found. One German officer surrendered to a Scots private who had lived in Germany; the private was too "canny" to take him quietly, so he led his prisoner along the ravine to a suspected dug-out, and bade the officer put his head into the entrance and order the men inside—if there were any—to come out. The officer thundered his order—and out came 50 tame Germans! At another point a Scots lieutenant and party penetrated through the German lines, searching harrows as he went and dropping men to hold the

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup
 Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.
 Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugist, pour it in 16-oz. bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.
 It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membrane, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and crouped cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, pneumonia, croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.
 Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.
 Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded.
The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

bits of trenches. When he reached his last trench he had only two men left and these he posted in the trench while he investigated the dug-outs. In one he found a battalion commander—a Uhlán—and his staff, and called on them to surrender, but seeing he was alone, they said it looked to them that he must call himself their prisoner. Just then a man entered with a periscope, and announced that the British were all around them, and that it was useless to resist. "So," said the lieutenant, "I think you are all my prisoners," and he marched them out in triumph. At another place a man of the Signals Corps was running telephone wires up, and he had just reached his goal in a captured German trench when he was hit and collapsed at the mouth of the dug-out. As he did so, a German officer came up from the depths below and "Signal" could see that there were more behind. He pulled himself together and called on the first man to surrender. The German promptly did so. What strength he had left the Scotsman telephoned back over the line which he had just laid, and explained the situation. Then he stood guard over the German in the doorway, keeping the others blocked behind until help came up. In the ravine was found a large ration store, with immense quantities of tinned meat, and in the dug-out of officers were cigars and such alluring trifles. There are reliable accounts of soldiers who were seen bayonet fighting with big German cigars in their mouths. Most of them picked up a meal of German rations in between whiles, and some who had found a store were actually discovered in process of putting on clean shirts. The Scots, as a whole, took 1,400 prisoners, while 50 machine guns were soon gathered in.

Still Young at Ninety.

The falsity of the dictum, that all men whose age is over fifty years, are no longer fit for work is continually being proved by facts. Lord Halesbury's next birthday will be his ninety-eight, but he remains as keen and active as any men half his age. Lord Strathcona, who lived to be over ninety, was a worker to the end, and his cousin Lord Mount Stephen, was ninety-one last June. Sir Clifford Albutt, who was president of the British Medical Association at their last annual meeting, possesses, in spite of his eighty-four years, the energy of a young man. Titian, greatest of all portrait painters, lived to be ninety-nine years old, and painted his last picture at that age. Sckety painted a picture for the Royal Academy when he was ninety-four; while Madame Rosa Bonheur was seventy when she painted her famous picture, "Horses Trampling Out Wheat." Goethe was over eighty when he wrote the second part of "Faust," and Disraeli and Chateaubriand were both making love at seventy.

The Evolution of Names.

(From the New York Evening Post)
 It takes a brisk pace to keep up with new names in the geography. Old Korea is now Korea. Serbia has become Serbia, and the Servians are Serbs. Roumania has dropped its "o." Romantic Rheims is now Rheimts. The process is familiar—an American's memory need not be long to reach back to Dacotah—but it has been hastened by the war. It grieves old-fashioned souls. They ask us when will pedantic snobbery compel us to band writing Marco for Morocco, Gand for Ghent, and Roma instead of Rome. But as times and nations change is it unfitting to have names change with them? "Korea" called up an impression of the Hermit Land of 1890, with straw-batted farmers in rice-fields and Buddhist priests clanging temple bells, in placid ignorance of Japanese reforms and Japanese oppression.

evoked the atmosphere of three generations ago by speaking of Australia as Van Diemen's Land, and of still remoter generations by referring to Muscovy, Barbary and Cathay. Footballers' Armour.

The modern football player clothes himself with armour more varied than any of the ancient crusaders. First of all the proceeds to bandage any part of his body that may be specially weak or liable to accident. Around each ankle or wrist he winds a narrow bandage of silk or cotton, binding it as tightly as is consistent with comfort and flexibility, in order to prevent dislocation of the joint. His knickers are strongly made of stout fustian, moleskin, or some similar tough fabric with a thick quilted lining of cotton-wool or some padding equally light and elastic. In addition to this quilting, the knees, hips, and other vulnerable parts are further protected by thick padding. The jersey or jacket is of similar material, sleeveless, and thickly lined and padded to protect specially vulnerable parts of the body. Inside his shoes, which are entirely made of the best leather, and which lace high, he wears anklets of leather, and over his stockings he adjusts a pair of strong shin-guards of leather, strengthened by pieces of cane, and attached securely around the calves by straps. To protect his nose, he encases it in a shield of indiarubber, perforated to allow free access to the air; and to the nose-shield is usually attached a similar shield, also perforated which is gripped by the teeth and protects the mouth. Each ear is protected by a circular piece of leather, perforated and padded, and kept in position by a strap which goes around the head. Then the knight of the football walks on the field prepared to do or die!

Bull-Running at Stamford.

From the time of King John to about 1840, the citizens of Stamford, Lincolnshire, were accustomed to indulge on November 13, in a sport called bull-running. Every year the church bells began to ring at a quarter to eleven, and at eleven o'clock precisely a bull was turned into the main street, which was barricaded at every opening. The barricades were every other point of vantage were crowded with people who threw hats and sticks at the bull to make it furious. When it seemed sufficiently savage a barricade was opened, the infuriated animal rushed out, and the whole crowd of men and women, boys and dogs, rushed after it and chased it round the streets. Frequently the bull turned on them and they had to do a little running or climbing to places of safety. The bull was finally driven on to the bridge over the river Welland, where the men then closed it upon it, and by main force threw it over the parapet into the river. It would then swim to shore and land in the swampy meadows, where those of the crowd who still pursued it soon became splashed with mud and water to the great delight of the spectators. When everyone was tired the bull was killed and cut up, and the people finished the day by feasting on their victim. Till near the end of the 18th century it did not occur to anybody that bull-running was anything but a noble sport. Bulls were given by mayors, candidates for Parliament, and other gentlemen. In their default the churchwardens bought one. In 1833 the S.P.C.A. appeared on the scene, and in the next seven years the 13th Nov. saw a fine squabble between the officials of the Society, backed by police and military, who tried their best to put down the sport, and the town folks, who were determined to have it. The police always made sure that there was no bull in the town, as they thought, but the town folks usually concealed one in some backyard, and managed to procure it at the proper moment. The expense of police and military increased each year till it came to £300 per annum. The mayor and corporation then thought that bull-running was getting too expensive, so in 1839 the last bull was run, after which the sport was finally abolished.

For the year 1909, I suffered with weeping eczema on my hands which caused me very much pain and worry for I could not use my hands for but very few things. I tried many remedies but they all failed to give me any relief and I was obliged to give up my work and came South, at the same time continuing to use any preparation recommended to me, but my hands continued to get worse until I was told to try D.D.D. Prescription, also Soap, which I at once did, and the first two or three applications gave me the greatest relief, and when I had used but half a dollar bottle's my hands were healed. Lost Everything.

At four o'clock on Thursday evening, as stated yesterday, the double-house on Newtown Road, occupied by the Thompson and Miller families, was entirely destroyed by fire. Mr. Arthur Thompson, nephew of the trusted and veteran mail courier of the General Post Office, Mr. John Coughlan, lost everything he has owned, except a sewing machine, which his wife carried as she was escaping from the house with her children. This case of Thompson and his family is an extraordinary sad one, as neither his wife, his eleven children (most of them very young) saved anything except the clothing they had on at the time. Arthur Thompson is a most industrious and reliable man, and was for several years employed by his uncle, Mr. Coughlan, in conveying the mails to Ferryland and otherwise employed in Post Office work. For some time he has been employed, with his horse and cart, at the Butterine Factory, and is held in the highest esteem by his employees. Mr. Thompson and his very large family will now have practically to begin life anew, and we feel convinced that he will meet with the sincere sympathy of the people of St. John's, who are ever ready to extend a helping hand to those who have suffered misfortune through no fault of their own. The origin of the fire is unknown. There was no fire in Mr. Thompson's house for a long time past, except the one in the kitchen, and it obviously originated from the roof of the double house.

THOUGHTS.

Did you ever stop to think about the queer-ness, the wonderfulness, the illuminability and the endless multiplicity of your own thoughts?

That's a funny idea, isn't it—thinking about your own thoughts? But never mind if it is funny, try it some time.

When you've been sitting in a trolley or thinking about one thing and another, stop the flow of idle thought for a moment, and look back over it and rehearse what you have been thinking of for the last few minutes.

And not only the number, but the quality. It has probably leaped a dozen times from one subject to another which would appear absolutely irrelevant to one who did not know the subterranean connection which exists between the two for you.

We Think a Bookful a Day. Suppose a very rapid court stenographer could listen in on your thoughts for a single day and make a note of them, just think of the number of subjects that record would cover and the great length of it! I am sure the record of an average person's thoughts for a day would be at least as long as an ordinary book, probably much longer. Just think that means you think a book every day!

Perhaps you would not want to have the stenographer listen in. I can't blame you at all. I know I wouldn't. There are many times when I wouldn't want to share my thoughts with anyone in all the world. And yet I doubt if I'm more than an average wicked. I used to think I was. But as I have grown wiser, I have heard and read so many admissions of the same state of mind by other people that I have come to feel that almost all average men and women have some thoughts that come from the part of them that they try to keep under.

Could You Keep Them From Thinking of a Million Dollars?

That brings me to another angle on the subject of our thoughts—the great matter of thought-control. No one in the world can entirely control his thoughts. A story that excellently illustrates this was a fanciful piece of fiction of which the plot was that a man had been offered a million dollars if he would not think of a million dollars for a week. Hard as it would be to make a million in the ordinary way, (whatever that may be) I suspect it would be even harder to make it that way. And yet one's thoughts need not be as utterly uncontrollable as many of us let them be. One may not be able to prevent the thought of a million dollars coming into one's mind, but one can drive it right out again if one will teach oneself to do so.

Can You Think Steadily of one Thing?

And one can learn to think steadily of one thing when there is any reason to. The men and women who achieve big things in any walk of life always have this ability to think steadily of one thing—in other words to concentrate.

And one can get rid of, or at least fight, foolish thought habits, such as the habit of holding arguments in one's mind with various people, or going back over past decisions, or fretting over decisions which cannot yet be made.

We are all the ruler of our own kingdom, the kingdom of our minds.

And it is just as true to-day as it was in Milton's that the "mind is its own place and in itself can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven."

Postage Stamps Make Sticky Change.

Postage stamps now replace French silver coins, as they did in the United States in 1861. While using postage stamps for small change is not a new idea it still causes comment. In Paris you buy a copy of Le Figaro, hand the man a franc note to take out the six centimes, and he hands you back 90 centimes in French postage stamps. Then in a fruit store you hand a 5-franc bill for a 2-franc purchase and you receive as change three envelopes, each containing 1 franc in stamps of various values.

In the hotel you receive some of the bills issued by the Chamber of Commerce of Paris. Waiters and taxi drivers' tips are in postage stamps.

Unless you have been in Paris, or with the A. E. F., you will be surprised to hear that these bills are worthless in Rheims, Lyons, Havre or Marseilles. The men of the U.S. expeditionary force experienced some trouble in this way. On the march from one place to another they would buy something at one place, get some of this "pretty paper" and march on. At the next stop in another district, their paper was refused. The men would then have to break another government 5-franc bill or leave the place.

Why was all this inconvenience caused? When the war came the silver coins disappeared. The people having them held on to them, and before the government realized it there were none to be had. Dealers and others now find it extremely inconvenient.

The cause defined, it is very easy to see that the trouble is not a new one. The United States had to go through the same inconvenience during the Civil War. The shortage of silver coin was then due to the exportation of the metal to Europe and Canada; a timid few who desired to have something of value should the Union be wrecked; and, last but by no means the least, speculators who cornered the supply of silver for their own gain. Trade actually suffered from the want of small change and in many places milk, bread and stage tickets were sold.

Trouble on a Stage.

One man relates his troubles in this line in New York city, the winter of 1861-62. It was a cold, wet night and he took a stage to go to his home. The fare was six cents and he gave the driver a dollar note. There was a hole in the front wall of the stage that separated the driver from the patrons, and through this the driver passed back the change in postage stamps to the passenger. He had to ask the driver to put his hand back the second time so that he could pull all his "change" off the latter's wet glove. He finally got them all only to drop several to the wet straw-covered floor. A hunt of a few minutes and he had all his stamps, but peace was not yet his. He had to sit and hold them until they dried.

Soon someone suggested that a wax paper envelope be used. Everyone by this time realized that the postage stamp was intended for everything but a circulating medium, and they would stick to anything as readily as they would to letters for which they were invented by Sir Rowland Hill.

Russia, a year or so ago, did about the best possible thing when their metallic circulating medium was gone. They had the postage stamp designs stamped on a thin cardboard and perforated like the stamps, but no gum was used. On the back was the inscription that these were redeemable in coin.

Fads and Fashions.

Black satin and bright colored net appear together in the evening. Small Egyptian turbans for evening wear are made of silver cloth. The prominent colors in woollens are gray, beige, sage green and navy. Spangled tunics in panel and apron effects are used for evening wear. Wide sashes of ribbon are overhung with loops of the ribbon or dress fabric.

The Elephant Slaughter

Sentence of death on elephants and other big and small game is now being carried out in two areas within the Union of South Africa. This slaughter is being strongly resisted by South African naturalists and scientists.

Mr. A. K. Haagner, director of the Pretoria Zoological Gardens, who has enlisted much practical sympathy for the victims, even in the United States, has just reached London. "The one herd of elephants in the Union of South Africa," he said, "in the Addo Bush, near Port Elizabeth, was ordered to be wiped out because they damaged crops. We protested, and the Cape Provincial Council promised to spare sixteen animals only. When I left, 88 elephants had been shot already."

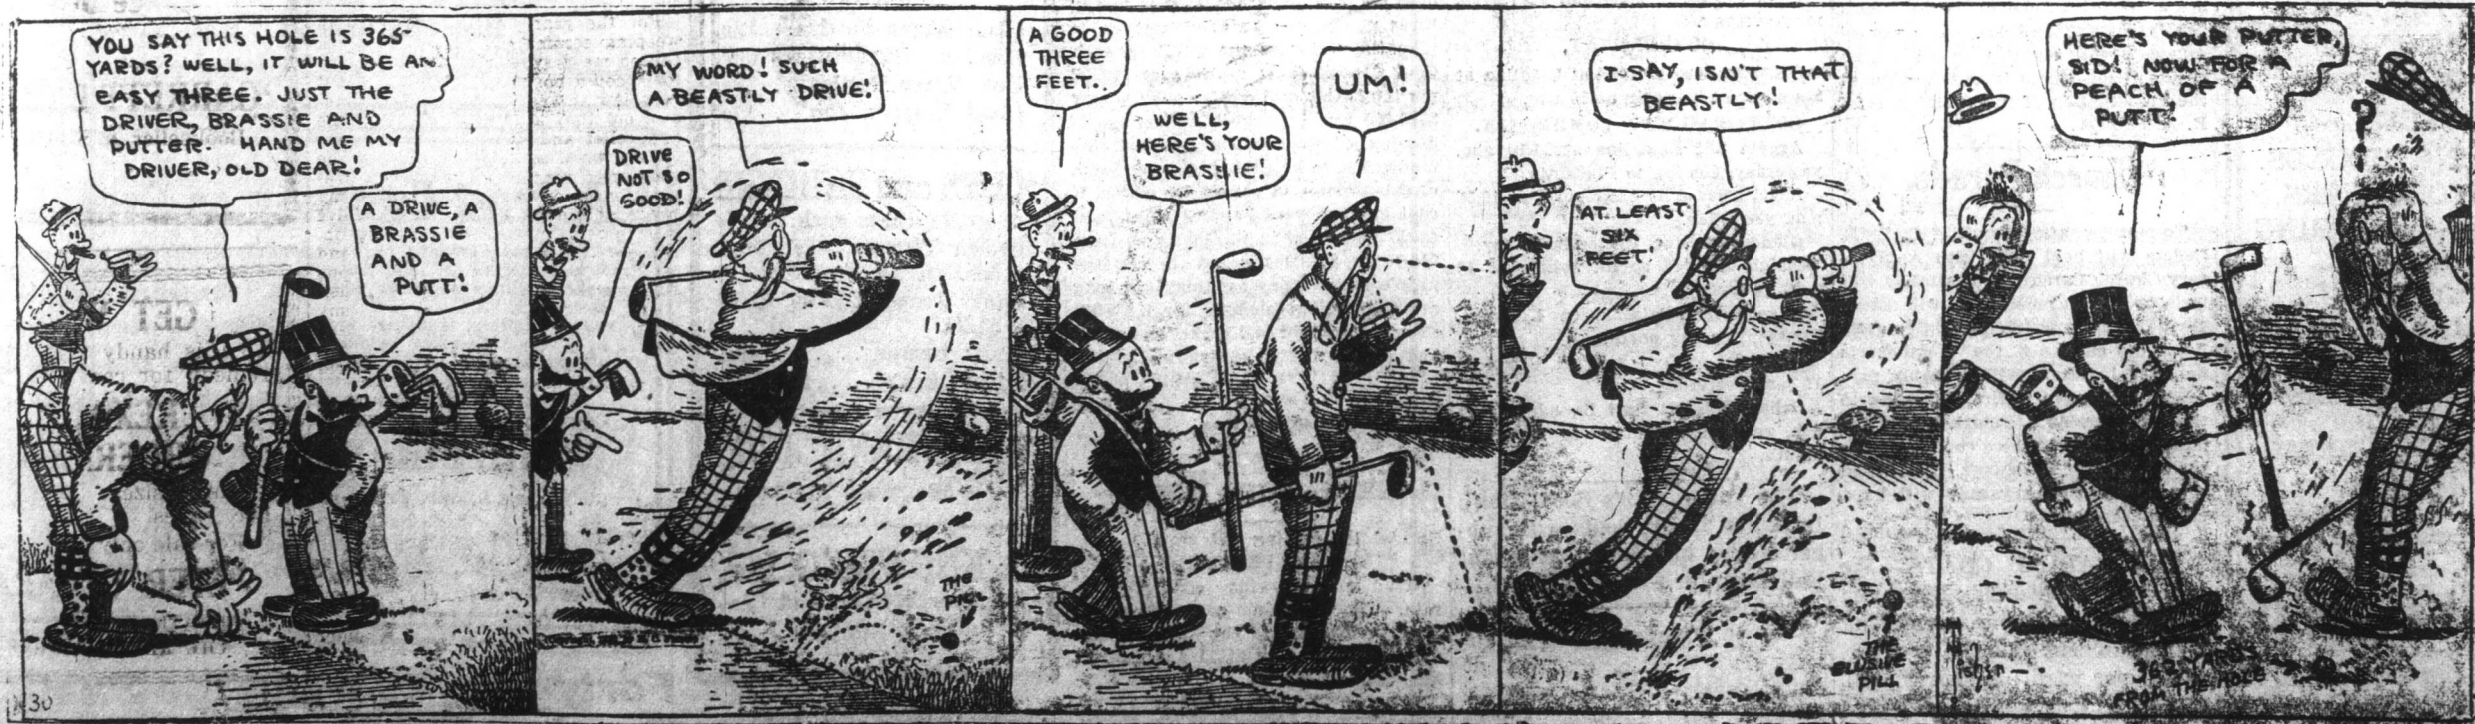

"In another case (in Zululand) the Natal Provincial Council has ordered the extermination of game because it was believed that these animals played a part in the life-cycle of the Tse Tse fly, which, infects cattle with the terrible 'Nogana' disease (a scourge allied to sleeping sickness in man)."

"After this edict 8,000 zebra hides came down for export, and the bridled gau, kodoo, wildebeest, rhinoceros, buffalo, and others are on the condemned list."

Fishermen Discontented.

Notwithstanding the highly colored picture presented daily by the personal organ of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, with the accompanying legend of good times and general prosperity thrown in, fishermen are not accepting the Advocate's explanation of good things to come as a really trustworthy promise, nor can they be led to believe that the Fishery Regulations are anything but a barrier and obstruction to trade. In St. John's to-day are some hundreds of toilers who are staggered by conditions which present themselves to their notice. Keen observers of the trend of the times, these men are now witnessing personally the collapse of their season's endeavors. They do not have to be either told or shown by the Opposition press that their one-time friend and adviser has deserted them and renegaded. They now know for themselves how great is the defection of their former advocate, and how base the betrayal of their interests by the President of the Fishermen's Protective Union. Traitor to his former followers, he cannot longer hope to beguile them by his specious argument and cajoling tongue. They have seen him as he is, have regarded him as disloyal to themselves and are now appraising him at his real value, without the fictitious enhancement of bygone days and deeds. The veneer has been rubbed off and the man appears in his true to nature role.

There has been much talk among the outport men now in the city, during the past week, of organizing a demonstration as a protest against the manner in which the fruits of their toil are being sacrificed to benefit certain interests. These men have expressed strong opinions on the way in which they have been treated, and are entirely disgusted with the idiosyncrasies of Mr. Coaker. They have repeatedly called at his office but their visits have proven futile. They cannot see—or are not permitted to see—the All-Highest. Their personal protests have been disregarded and they now are unanimous in sentiment that the time is ripe for organization into a popular demonstration. The spirit to carry this on was never more strong among fishermen than at present, and it only needs initiative on the part of schooner masters and crews to successfully carry to a conclusion one of the greatest processions ever seen in St. John's. The spirit of such a move would amply prove the unpopularity of the Fish Regulations amongst the fishing community, and it would undoubtedly tend to direct vice regal attention to the antagonism which has developed against the present advisers of the Crown's representative in this dominion. There is no way out of the difficult position into which the fishermen have been placed, other than that of popular protest, generated through the medium of a mass meeting, and no time should be lost by the leaders of the toilers in bringing this to a head. As a matter of fact this project has been received with considerable favor from some of those who are yet friendly disposed toward Mr. Coaker, and numbers of fishermen have been advised by these friends to go ahead. But—an ulterior motive was at the bottom of their desires—and that was the sinister suggestion made to some Bonavista Bay fishermen that they incorporate into their resolutions a condemnation of the Opposition press. This suggestion, we need scarcely say was repudiated with scorn by the toilers, who see, in the press opposed to the Government, their best friends, as having shown them the real facts of a real situation, and given them many thoughts meet for reflection. Considering the present situation we venture to advise the many visitors now in the city with fish to sell, that a gigantic demonstration organized on a proper basis, and conducted by capable leaders, will have more effect in relieving the present stringency, caused by the Fish Regulations, than any thing else that may be contemplated.

Bakeries Stock Up.

Owing to accumulating stocks and poor sales the biscuit bakeries are now running short time, and it is feared that if trade conditions do not brighten that many of the employees will have to be paid off. So little baking is to be done that the management of two of the concerns in order to keep their men on have given them work outside their trade and each day during the past week the bakers may be seen painting, cleaning and whitewashing the premises in which they are employed. Of course the St. John's "Daily Puzzle" and the White Nape" Advocate will say this is not a sign of the times but is in anticipation of the homecoming of the Premier, Hon. R. A. Squires.

Church Parade.

To-morrow afternoon the C. L. B. Cadets will hold their 29th Anniversary Church Parade. The battalion will form up at the armoury and will attend Divine Service at St. Mary's Church. After the service if the weather is fine, the battalion will probably parade around town before returning to the armoury. At 8 o'clock to-morrow morning there will be a communications parade, also at St. Mary's. It is hoped that the afternoon parade will be a record turn out.

Rock Cut 18 Feet Deep.

The work of digging the cut for the new water line to supply the Jensen Camp, Model Farm and Lunatic Asylum is progressing under the direction of Mr. Geo. Quigley. Some fifty men are now engaged blasting; the work being very tedious, owing to the hard nature of the rock. An immense amount of blasting has to be done in many places. The rock cut is 18 feet deep, and the whole extent of the blasting to be done is about 500 feet. The water pipes have nearly all been conveyed to their destination. How many thousands of dollars more than the estimate, the work will cost is not known.

Meeting Places in St. John's.

Up to a few years ago there used to be say half a dozen well known meeting places in St. John's; Rawlin's Cross for one, the General Post Office is another. Don't you remember pacing to and fro up and down the sidewalk waiting for A— or B—, or Aunt Mary or Uncle Ned? They never seemed to be punctual (bless them), or if they were by any chance that happened to be the one occasion on which you were late and had to waste time in explanations and apologies as to the cause of the delay.
There were other places too, in different localities, at which the conditions were the same, and the wonder is that the pleasure of meeting was not marred more than it was by pains and penalties endured in the process.
There's another meeting place now though, and the cold gusty conditions of the other places have gone into the times of forgetfulness, and long may they stay there. This meeting place is situated in the East End of Water Street. The building is light, airy and warm, there is always plenty to see, and if one is kept waiting (and one must allow for accidents) the time passes quickly amid pleasant surroundings. Of course you know the place—everybody does. It is The Royal Stores. "I always meet my friends at The Royal Stores," a lady said to me the other day, and as I wandered through the store one afternoon, looking about me, I began to understand why it is one so often hears that remark. To begin with, there is the general atmosphere of the place. It's an atmosphere of friendliness, of bright, cheerful energy. In the second place there is no need to waste time at The Royal Stores. Suppose you find yourself with half an hour to spare, it's too early for your appointment, but come to The Royal Stores and the time will fly all too quickly; you may rest in the Gramophone Parlor, listening to the latest music, or you can visit the spacious Showrooms and examine at your leisure beautiful afternoon and evening gowns, blouses, &c., and when the time arrives you can meet your friends, feeling warm, happy and in the best of tempers. It is one of the ideals of this Store to be regarded as a social as well as a shopping centre. How near the ideal come of fulfillment can be judged by the frequent repetition of this sentence, "I always meet my friends at The Royal Stores."
THE CLEANER.

Wonderful Progress.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir—I was very much surprised on looking over the papers yesterday evening to see a clipping from the Western Star in which it said that the trucks recently shipped to the South Branch Coal Mine were now in operation and that they were delivering coal to the station to the amount of 14 tons per day.
As a native of the West Coast and where I have visited lately I wish to say that it was currently reported during my visit there, and I think the report was correct, that up to a short time ago there were two engines and two pumps at work and they failed to keep the little shaft free and another engine and pump were installed, and at the present time there are now three engines and three pumps going full blast night and day, making to all appearance one last and desperate effort to see the bottom of the well.
It is also currently reported that up to the present they have not raised coal enough to drive the engines and that men are kept continually cutting wood to keep the fires going.
I have also seen in the papers that three more trucks have arrived to carry coal from the mine to the railroad, and that they will proceed there shortly.
How long are the people of this country going to listen to such dope? A short time ago we were told that a Mr. Hatch cut a 4 ft. seam of coal at Howley, the correctness of which is questionable. If the public is to measure out such information why doesn't Mr. Hatch give us something over his own signature. If it is taking three pumps and an army of men to take the water of the South Branch Coal deposit, how much over $20.00 per ton is this coal costing the Colony? $500,000 was sanctioned at last year's Session of the Legislature and this money has to be paid by the residents of this Colony, in return for which, if coal matters were handled right, coal could be landed in St. John's at from $10.00 to $12.00 per ton. Seeing the people have to pay for this, how long are they going to stand for it? Talk about sugar, this coal racket has sugar and codfish beaten a thousand years.
Yours truly,
M. G.

TRINITY.

In my observation walks around Trinity this week, I was attracted by a roof covered with purple and green slate; and the slate took me back in thought to Britannia Cove, Smith's Sound, fifty odd years ago. The Curries—David, Pierce and John, were the leading men in their day and generation, and in addition to their technical knowledge of the quarrying of slate, they were men above the average in their knowledge of other things, that made men a valuable asset to any community. As Welshmen they were more than ordinarily musical. When, during a visit to Smith's Sound in my boyhood days, I attended service in the church at Britannia Cove on a Sunday, though I was reverently interested in the prayers and sermon of Rev. Mr. Harrington—it was the singing, especially the bass voice of Mr. David Currie that absorbed my attention; for in addition to its being rich and true enough to please a professional ear, it was the first time I had heard such part singing. I can still recall the smile that played over Mr. Currie's face, when, after the service, I asked him how he managed to do it. He was prepared to give him my limited stock of cash in return for the secret—the possession of which would enable me, on the next Sunday, to sing like that in the choir of the old church in Trinity. But, alas!

Mr. John Currie was, I believe, the most musical of the three. At least, he was the best known to the general public, for he used to visit Trinity, and other places regularly, to repair and tune musical instruments. Some one asked him if he was fond of music, and he replied: "I would like to live in the belly of an organ."

The Williams brothers—Morris and Elias, are also associated with Britannia Cove, and with Trinity of those days; for they were expert slate workers; and Morris Williams married Chrissy Facey, and Elias married Jessie Grant, both of Trinity. They, too, were very musical, and they gave freely of their talents in connection with church and social work. Mr. and Mrs. Elias Williams are living in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Morris Williams have gone to their eternal rest. Our best wishes, and prayers are for them all.

We are continuously reminded of the slate quarries of Britannia Cove, by, at least twelve roofs in Trinity that are covered with some of its excellent production. The possibility of getting slate for this purpose years ago, was a boon to those who were building at the time; and to-day, the roofs that were carefully slated by men who understood the work of putting on the slates, are "things of beauty and a joy for ever." The quarries are now silent; but the little settlement of Britannia (for the word Cove has been wisely dropped) is one of the prettiest of the many pretty spots along the shores of Smith's Sound. The roofs of the buildings there are covered with slate, and the walls of several are coated with a paint, made, I presume, by grinding the slate and mixing it with oil. Though several of the old names have died out, the Curries are still represented, and members of the third generation are carrying on the general business, begun by the old people. Some day the boundless slate wealth of the hills of Britannia will be developed again, and it and Trinity and other places, will benefit thereby. "So mote it be."

Owing to the illness of a brother Magistrate, Mr. Somerton's jurisdiction has been temporarily extended to Fort Blandford. He has just returned to Trinity after a few days of official work there. He carries a stereotyped death-sentence for any partridge, that, in unofficial hours, is foolish enough to cross his path.

The Grant-Palmer Motor Co., reports the daily passenger service to Trinity East and "Dunfield" as encouraging, and with prospects of a dividend at New Year.

Rev. Llewellyn Godden, who has been the assistant priest in the parish of Trinity, has been appointed by the Bishop to the newly formed Mission of New Perlican and Winterton. We are sorry to have him leave this parish, where he has been held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. His record of years of faithful service in the diocese, guarantees a useful future in his new sphere of responsibility. Headquarters of the new mission will be at New Perlican. Mr. Godden's household furniture was landed at Trinity from the Prospero this week, and will be forwarded to Perlican.

A patch of new shingling around the roof stove-pipe of the Roman Catholic school house, proclaims the fact, that some one saw a fire there, just in time to prevent a more serious one.

The general business conducted by Mr. William S. Lockyer, in the building owned by Mr. A. W. Earle, on High Street, Trinity, is a representative one in its own class, and has a history of twenty-four years. Then, Mr. Lockyer lived in the house now owned by Mr. James Collis; and in addition to the shop of the present, he opened up one in connection with the house in which he lived, using a waterside premises in Fisher's Cove for his landing and shipping requirements. Seven years after, his brother John, with several years of practical experience in the leading shops on Water Street, St. John's, came to Trinity and threw in his lot with the business. Under the firm-name of Lockyer Brothers, the business underwent extensive, and progressive changes.

Mr. William bought a dwelling house in the Doctor's Cove. The shop in Fisher's Cove was closed, and whilst the general business was confined to the present location, a branch of the fishery was added to it, with head-quarters at their new waterside premises in Doctor's Cove, and another newly acquired fishing room at Crouse, on the old Treaty Shore. Mr. William took charge of the schooner and crew, and prosecuted the fishery, whilst Mr. John looked after the general business at home.

After twelve years of partnership, Mr. John was called to his rest. Mr. William then bought out his brother's interests, and the whole business reverted to him. The fishery part of the business was discontinued: the fishing-room at Crouse was sold; and (together with two assistants) Mr. William has devoted his time to the business on High Street. The business is conducted on the cash system, and with the addition of one or two lines of goods in the recent past, it is as comprehensive as a business in its class needs to be. In common with the greater business firms, it has been affected by the ebb and flow of commercial tides; but the high water mark of each succeeding year, has been steadily creeping upwards, till, to-day, the business is double that of ten years ago, and well established for the practical requirements of the future. Success to it.

Mr. Baxter Peckham, who has been teller in the Royal Bank of Canada in Trinity, has been ordered to report for duty to Mr. Arthur White, Manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, at Marystown, Placentia Bay. Mr. Peckham has served here under three managers—Bishop, Mosher and Rankin. He has ability and capacity, and we wish him well.

In the death notices of the St. John's papers last week, we were sorry to read that of Captain W. J. Cook. William John Cook, son of George and Elizabeth Cook, was born in Trinity, August 24th, 1887; received his early education here, and moved to St. John's with his parents. He visited Trinity last year in his schooner, and his many friends were glad to meet him, and to renew acquaintance. May he rest in peace.

Ryan Bros. schooner, Tipperary, arrived from Labrador last week, with a cargo of fish. As soon as a permit can be obtained, the cargo will be taken to Europe.

was laid to rest in the Church of England Cemetery on Tuesday—till the resurrection morning. He was a member of Royal Albert Lodge, L.O.A., and the brethren attended the funeral. Patrick Crocker, son of Stephen and Catherine Crocker, was one of a family of fourteen children. Four are still living, viz., Aubrey, William, Ellen and Chrissey. He was born in June, 1841, and baptised in old St. Paul's on September 5th, 1841, by Rev. David Martin. He was married to Miriam Morris on January 2nd, 1866, by Rev. Benjamin Smith.

In view of this event of nearly fifty-five years ago, it may be of interest to some, to know that the witnesses to the marriage were: James Morris, Margaret Crocker, Joseph Morris, Louisa Green, Jacob Crocker, Phoebe Ann Morris, Henry Charles Morris and Christiana Crocker. For over twenty years as "Skipper-Pat" he was in charge of a schooner in the prosecution of the Labrador fishery; and for sixteen years he occupied the same position in connection with the Bank fishery. He was an industrious man, with a quiet disposition, and a reverent appreciation of his duty to God and man. He was always in his place in church on Sundays as a worshipper. On Sunday week, the Eve of All Saints' Day, he listened reverently, and intelligently to the sermon on the position and work of souls in the Paradise of God, and our duties towards them; and on the next Sunday morning his own soul was sharing in that intermediate life. May he rest in peace.

His widow and three children survive him. The facts, that at one time there were fifty-six Crockers living on the North West shore of the South West Arm, and that to-day there is not one of the name there, will give me an inspiration for remarks on the subject next week.

The freight trains of Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning, were cancelled, in order to give the engineers time to put in place the permanent spans at the loop.

HOW TO COLLECT STAMPS.

How to Identify Stamps.—As most stamps bear the names of the countries of issue on them, naturally that is the first thing to look for in classifying a stamp. In a great many cases, however, this name is in a foreign language, and may thus prove troublesome to the beginner. Furthermore, there are a great many stamps which have not got the names of their countries of issue on them, and in these cases one must look for other means of identification, such as values, etc. As regards English speaking countries, no difficulty should be experienced as practically all except Great Britain itself, have the name already shown. Here are a few aids to the identification of troublesome stamps.

Africa corrales, Portuguese Africa. Head of Mercury, without any inscription, Austrian newspaper stamps. Emp. Ottoman, Turkey. Espana, Spain. Filipinas, Philippine Islands. Helvetia, Switzerland. India Post, Portuguese India. Island, Iceland. Majyar kir posta, Hungary. Nederland, Holland. Norge, Norway. Reichpost, German Empire. Sverige, Sweden.

With the aid of the above a beginner ought to have no trouble in identifying his stamps.

SECOND ISSUE, 1860.—In 1860 all the values of 1857, with the exception of the 1d., 6½, and 8d. were reprinted on thinner paper and with the exception of the 3d., in new colors. A 6½d. stamp was prepared for use but was never sent out to the colony. The 1½ orange vermilion is found printed on "laid" paper, but this is a proof. All the stamps of this issue are very scarce in used condition. The 1½ is included amongst the world's rarest stamps, being catalogued at £120.

THIRD ISSUE, 1861-62.—In 1861 all values of the first issue were reprinted in new colours. On the stamps of this issue a watermark consisting of a part of the papermaker's trademark "Stacey Wise, 1858," is occasionally found. Nearly all these stamps are fairly common in mint condition but, as they are rather scarce, used, collectors should look out for forged postmarks, many of which are to be found.

FOURTH ISSUE, Jan. 1864.—In 1864, owing to the currency having been changed from shillings and pence to dollars and cents, a new issue was made necessary. These stamps were engraved and printed by the American Bank Note Company, New York, the name of the firm being printed on the bottom margin. There are six values, each value bearing a different design, as follows:—
2c. Cod. (This cod has no split in its tail.)
5c. Seal on Ice-floe. (The seal has forepaws instead of flippers.)
10c. K. Edward VII. as Prince of Wales.
12c. Profile of Queen Victoria in garter.
13c. Atlantic schooner.
24c. Portrait of Queen Victoria wearing crown.
These stamps were first issued on thin yellowish paper, and later the 2c., 10c., 12c., and 24c. were printed on medium white paper. The stamps are perforated 12.

Mr. E. Simmons has been confined to his home for the past few days during this week, suffering from a slight cold, but his many friends are pleased to see him out again to-day.

The schooner Innovation, Captain M. H. Randall, came off dock this morning, and moved up to the premises formerly occupied by the Newfoundland Shipbuilding Company, to reload her part cargo of fish, in drums which she had to discharge in order to go on dock. This ship will proceed on her voyage to Bahia, Brazil, as soon as she finishes reloading.

The S.S. Sagona, on the way to Labrador, arrived here this morning early, and having taken on board a fair amount of freight and passengers, left port again after a short stay.

Master Graham French, son of Mr. and Mrs. William French of the West End, arrived home a few days ago from the General Hospital, St. John's, where he underwent an operation some weeks ago; and is now on the mend. We wish this bright little chap a speedy return back to health again.

Menue Not Rich Enough

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—On looking over the menu at the proposed banquet to Premier Squires I fear it is not nearly good enough for one who has for months been residing in one of London's most exclusive and expensive hotels namely "The Savoy." It would be no honor to our Premier to put up such a common "feed" as you propose, you must remember he has been living in luxury like an "Oriental potentate" in rooms, the rent of which are $100 per day, surrounded by powdered funkies and others ready to execute his slightest wish. In the gilded and magnificent dining room he has been accustomed to a light and delicately prepared breakfast costing at least $5.00, now you propose to tickle his cultured appetite with "corned beef" and cabbage, salt fish, etc. This is nothing short of an outrage for one who has been working so hard for us trying to get some seal-pup skins dyed and "laboring on the Labrador" question, the work on which was all done long ago, and anyhow no negotiations could be started till the arrival of the Canadian Ministers, who only left for London a few days since.

Yours truly,
INDIGNANT.

The Prime Minister's Dream.

A PHANTASY WHICH PROVES THAT EVEN PRIME MINISTER'S ARE HUMAN.

The Prime Minister felt tired and sick—the lower buttons of his waistcoat were strained to bursting point. Under his breath he cursed the hospitality and enthusiasm of his well-intentioned friends who had dined him, not wisely but too well. He had been a fool to indulge his appetite, (which judging by the amount he had eaten was gargantuan) to the extent that he had—but then, who could abstain from such delightful dishes as White Naped fish and Salted Sugar—why—to keep up his reputation as an epicure, he had no other course open to him. But, pleasant as had been the dinner, the after effects were decidedly the opposite. Even prime ministers are human and this prime minister was no exception. Yes, there is no doubt about it, he was ill. Very ill. He suffered the agony for some time, but at last he could bear it no longer. As a last recourse, he decided to go to bed and forget his troubles in the arms of Morpheus. But Morpheus was in a bad humor that night, and the premier turned over and over in his bed, restless, suffering, until finally he dropped into troubled slumber. He awoke with a start and opened his eyes. At first everything was black—he could see nothing. Then, a dim shape seemed to rise from the nothingness. The prime minister clinched his fists, but try as he might, he was powerless to move. At last, he found his voice. By this time the thing had changed from a blurred greyish mass into what looked like a triangle standing on its apex. "Who are you?" asked the terror stricken premier. His words sounded hollow in the darkness. They were followed by a short silence. Then, the thing spoke. "I am the spirit of White Nape," he said. The premier tried to scream but he could not utter a sound. After some time, he found his voice: "What do you want?" he whispered huskily. "I have come," answered the spirit, "to teach you the error of your ways. You told them to make me but I am not wanted—no one has any use for me. Those who made me cannot obtain any recompense for their labour and you, you alone are responsible." "I'm not, I'm not," croaked the premier. "I tell you it was Coaker. He forced me to it. I tell you. Go away, go away!" "What utter nonsense you talk," retorted the spirit, "Are you Coaker's slave that you should do all that he wishes you to? However, I shall go away, but there are others who have as much against you as I have. You shall meet them yet. In any case, remember that I am not through with you. Remember, remember," and with this the spirit faded away with into the inky darkness.

The premier sat up in bed and drew the sleeve of his pyjama jacket across his wet brow. He switched in the light over his head—nothing out of the ordinary met his gaze. He tried to laugh, but he could only manage a raucous croak. He was only the victim of a hallucination, he told himself, brought on by over indulgence at dinner. He switched off the light and again entered into a troubled sleep. Suddenly a noise, very like that made by a heavy sack drawn over a carpet, came to his ears. He opened his eyes again, and once more he could see nothing. The sweeping noise continued—then, gradually, he saw another dim shape advancing on him. It seemed to take the appearance of a man drawing after him a heavy sack. The premier felt a cold shiver pass all over him—the spirit of White Nape had spoken of others. Was this what it had meant? The thing advanced towards his bed and halted by its side, towering above it, and shrinking premier. To save his life, he could not utter a simple sound, his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth. This time the visitation did not wait for him to speak. In a deep voice it addressed the trembling minister. "I am the spirit of the Consumer," he said. "I have with me the spirit of Salted Sugar. We have come to call you to account." The premier managed to whisper a simple sentence. It was addressed more to himself than to the spectre. "I knew it, I knew it," he groaned. "Yes, and well you ought to know it," replied the unwelcome visitor. "Here am I, representative of those who were forced to pay twice as much as they should for their Sugar, thanks to your interfering. Here, again, is the spirit of Salted Sugar, sugar which you permitted to go to ruin. Sugar which was allowed to become food for rats, Sugar which was permitted to become wet and salty. "Yes," here the spirit pointed an accusing finger at the shrinking premier. "Yes, it was you who did it, and soon you must pay." So speaking he slowly withdrew, and vanished into the blackness, dragging after him the spirit of Salted Sugar. Hardly had he gone, however, when a new spectre began to take shape, a visitation which appeared to be a man dressed in robes of pink. It advanced upon the powerless premier, now reduced to a quivering, shrinking mass. "I am the spirit of Public Opinion," it said. "I have come to pronounce your doom!" It gazed sternly at the premier who, unable to move or speak, could merely stare at his tormentor studiously. "Some time ago," it said, the voice of Public Opinion was raised in your behalf. You succeeded in attaining the post you desired; you promised much to get my help but what have you done? I have been cast aside. You thought that you were through with me—that being of no more use to you, you could cast me aside. You were mistaken, however, and now I am going to crush you with your own weapon." He raised a huge square thing above his head which looked like an enormous book. The premier, staring at it, saw written across it in huge capitals, "THE DAILY STAR." He shrank away from it with an attempt at a startled cry but hardly a sound could come from his dry throat. The spectre towered over him with its missile raised aloft. The premier could not remove his eyes from it. The thing descended. It seemed to grow larger and larger, he felt it approaching and tried to cower away from it. Down, down, it came and then a voice like thunder sounded in the premier's ears. In quick succession a Kaleidoscopic vision seemed to pass before his eyes—the spirits of white nape, consumer and salted sugar flashed before him but dominating all he saw the towering figure of Public Opinion. Suddenly all was blank—then, with a start, he awoke. It had all been a dream—a nightmare brought on by an attack of indigestion. In spite of this he still could scarce dismiss it as an hallucination. He still saw the spirit of Public Opinion towering above him, and he knew in his heart of hearts that soon, its prophecy would come true.

Police Court.

There was a full docket at the Police Court this morning. The first case called was that of a drunk. He was discharged.

A young man was charged with being drunk and disorderly. The constable who arrested him stated that he had been called to the Total Abstinence Hall Club Rooms where the defendant had been behaving in a disorderly manner. He found the man on the street shouting and swearing, and took him to the police station. His Honor told the prisoner that the Total Abstinence Hall was "no place to go to unless he wanted to take the pledge," and fined him $2 or 7 days.

A woman who was put in for safe-keeping, said that she had gone to the fire hall looking for a night's lodging and had been taken to the police station. She did not want to leave St. John's, and pleaded with the Judge not to send her to the Penitentiary, saying that she had the "Grace of God with her." His Honor: "You're more sure to lose it if you stay around St. John's." She was given a chance to find a place.

A man charged with being connected with the larceny of four barrels of beef belonging to Mr. T. Smyth, valued at $140, was present. Two other men are also held in connection with the same case. The Inspector General intimated that the Dept. of Justice would be ready to proceed with the case on Monday, and asked for a remand. Mr. Higgins will represent the defendants.

A motorist who drove for some distance along Water Street without putting his lights on, was fined $5 or 10 days.

A truckman was charged with driving a cart with no name on it. He stated that the name had been washed out. He was fined $1 and ordered to see that the name was put on.

A young woman, a former wardmaid at Jensen Camp was charged with the larceny of a gold watch, the property of a housemaid in the same institution. The defendant claimed that she picked it up, but as she had made no efforts to find the owner, the Judge could not accept her statement. His Honour, however, decided to give her a chance to reform and placed her under bonds for her future good conduct.

Inter-Collegiate Football

The postponed game between St. Bon's and Meth. Colleges was played on Thursday afternoon, the M.C. defeating the champions by 1-0. The game was exciting throughout and it was not until ten minutes from full time that a score was recorded. This game was the last of the series. All three teams were more evenly matched this year than they have been for some time, and as a consequence their exhibitions of football left nothing to be desired.

Dangerous Practice.

Some time ago a revolver shot was fired through a window on the house of a prominent Government official, the bullet cutting its way through the glass pane, then hitting the woodwork of a chair and glancing off onto the floor. The gentleman of the house had only just left the chair a few minutes before and fortunately so as there is scarcely any doubt but that the bullet would have hit him. The matter was reported to the police at the time, but so far the party or parties responsible have avoided detection.

welcome home . . . . .

TO HON. W. B. GRIEVE, O.B.E.
Among the passengers by the S.S. Digby is our worthy citizen Hon. W. B. Grieve.

The past few months have been a trying time for him that might well wreck the spirit of any ordinary man, but without alluding to his sorrow for which we all have the deepest sympathy, we extend the glad hand to welcome a leader in our commercial life who is badly wanted at this critical stage in the affairs of our country.

The following extract from an article published by our local historian, Mr. H. P. Shortis, some years ago when referring to his firm, will not be out of place at this season.

"There is one firm with us to-day, Baine Johnston & Co., that dates back for probably one hundred and fifty years. To give an account of the Scotchmen in Newfoundland without particular notice to this firm would be like describing the play of Hamlet with the role of the Prince left out. In the two great fires of 1846 and 1892 this firm lost almost every old record, but the traditions are handed down faithfully, and well may the survivors of this old firm be proud of their illustrious ancestors.

Greenock has always been headquarters for them. We find the firm under the name of Lang, Baine & Co., at Port de Grace in 1780. The business was removed to St. John's about 1800. Mr. Lang was then senior partner, and after his death Mr. Johnston of Moffat, Dumfriesshire, was accorded his place.

Mr. Walter Baine was at one time M.P. for Greenock, and he owned the premises where the firm still carries on business, besides other properties in St. John's. About the year 1835 Mr. James Johnston Grieve a nephew of Mr. Johnston, was admitted a partner in the firm, and later Mr. Walter Grieve, Mr. Charles Philip Hunter and Mr. Robert Grieve. In the year 1871 Mr. Walter Baine Grieve, in 1875 his brother Mr. James Grieve became partners. The latter has been an invalid, and the management has always depended upon Mr. Walter B. Grieve.

When we consider what worry, torment and anxiety he has passed through in the past forty years in the upheavals and vicissitudes of carrying on the very extensive fish business that this firm has always done, we may well understand the grit and determination of the real Scotch character. In no other trade will you find such exercise of faith, in a prospective chance of catching fish, and then again the good will and faith to be born of hope, but resulting only too often in heart-breaking disappointment. It is impossible to go through so many troubles without treading upon some person's toes, but when we meet the principal of this firm to-day with his smile, we may well trace back his history to find where his optimistic spirit finds its progenitor. There is rarely a public gathering but you will find him taking part. His bon-mots and words of wisdom are the thoughts that you carry away after all have had their say.

In my intimate acquaintance with Mr. W. B. Grieve, I have seen many of his good deeds that must be recorded in Heaven. He would never forgive me for publishing what his left hand knows nothing about.

Mr. Grieve has served the Colony in both Houses of our Legislature with honor and credit to himself and our Country. His father, Mr. J. J. Grieve was one of her Majesty's advisers in this Colony before the days of Responsible Government and served her faithfully. I might go on to enumerate many things that any of us would be proud to have our name connected with, but in this article I can only glance over these items; possibly at another time I will give a more extended history of this firm, which dates back to the very commencement of the Scotch firms in this country, and has outlived them all. The vitality and survival of the fittest gives it a standing here to-day that everyone from the Governor to the humblest fisherman is proud of.

My hopes and prayers are that it will go on for hundreds of years more, producing grand men as it has in the past, who understand the business and needs of our country in a way that outshines its rivals as does the red gold other metals."—COM.

PRESENT "THE MASTER MIND."

Last night the Clark-Urban Company presented the first crook play during their engagement, namely "The Master Mind." Judging from the enthusiasm displayed by the audience the piece immediately won the appreciation of all present. The costumes and scenery were all very elaborate and greatly added to the success of the production. The opening scene, was particularly attractive presenting a splendid appearance of the apartment of Walter Blonnt, New York City: Mr. Billy Webb very capably takes the part of Walter Blonnt. Mr. Harden Klark did some of his finest work of the season in the role of Courtland Wainwright, whilst Miss Masie Cecil as Lucene Blonnt delivered this role wonderfully and, Mr. Bower as The Master Mind certainly excelled and deserves special mention. The remainder of the company were quite at home in their respective roles which were as follows: Parker, Chas. Palazzi; John Blonnt, N. S. Scoville; Mrs. Blonnt, Miss Lillian Dean; Professor Forbes, Louis Everette; Susan Leonor Leslie; Mr. Marshall, J. Wainwright; Jim Greegan, Craig Neslo. The play is very thrilling in parts with strong emotions. The story deals with the adventures of the younger brother of a big man of the underworld who is condemned and executed for a homicide, for which he has pleaded to the unwritten law for justification. The older in his pursuit to avenge the harm done his brother is befriended by a young girl of the streets. The crook known as "The Master Mind" in pursuit of his revenge manages to secure the girl's release on a suspended sentence. He then sends her to Paris for a four years education. The action of the play begins upon her return, a beautiful and accomplished young woman. This afternoon there will be a matinee when this play will be repeated and also to-night. On Monday "Civilian Clothes" will be presented.

SQUIRES—FOLLETT.

Wednesday, Nov. 10th, St. John the Evangelist Church Topsail, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, by Rev. Mr. Pittman, when Miss Annie Squires, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Squires, Manuels, was joined in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Archibald Follett, of Western Bay. The bride looked very pretty as she entered the church leaning on her father's arm, and was gowned in a handsome costume of navy serge with hat to match, grey fox furs and battleship grey boots, and white kid gloves, carrying a beautiful bouquet of white chrysanthemums and fern. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Susie Squires, who looked charming in a dress of V-rose silk and hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums and fern. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Charles Squires, brother of the bride. After the ceremony the happy couple, accompanied by about sixty guests, motored to the home of the bride's grandparents, where a sumptuous supper was served and on arrival of the shore train they left for their future home where, on arrival, a reception awaited them and songs and music were indulged in until midnight. The groom's present to the bride was a costly set of fox furs and a gold pendant, and to the bride-maid birthstone ring, and best man gold cuff links. The presents received were many and costly, including several pieces of gold and banknotes. Numerous telegrams of congratulations were received during the evening, testifying to the popularity of the young couple.—COM.

KENDAL—OSMOND.
A very quiet wedding took place at Western Bay, on Nov. 8th, the contracting parties being Sarah Jane Kendal, daughter of Samuel and the late Mary Ann Kendal, and Cyrus Osmond, son of George Osmond, of Carbonear. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride, by the Rev. J. W. Winsor. Mr. Moyles Loveys was father giver. The bride looked neat in a pale blue dress, with bridal veil and wreath. Miss Edith Kendal attended the bride, the groom being supported by Eugene King.

"OPPORCHUNITY"

By PETER FINLAY DUNNE, et al.

As the poets say,
Opporchunity knocks at every man's dure want,
On some men's dures it hammers
Till it breaks down the dure,
An' then it goes in and wakes him up,
If he's asleep,
And iver afterwards it wuzruks fr him
As a night-watchman,
On other men's dures it knocks,
An' runs away,
An' on the dures iv some it knocks,
An' whin they come out
It hits them over th' head with an axe.
But ivrywan has an opporchunity.
Th' porr are th' people th'at've been at wurruk
Whin Opporchunity knocked,
And there are others
Th'at have been star fasting,
But now we tell of an opporchunity for everybody,
And we want you to tell your friends
