SAINT JOHN, N. B., DECEMBER 11, 1926. THE DUNCAN REPORT

WHAT will be the reaction of the Dominion at large to the report of the Duncan Commission? That is a question which is being asked on every hand in the Maritime Provinces today. The report is before the country, and its recommendations must now be considered by Parliament and by the people of the other provinces. It justifies the agitation which led up to the appointment of the Commission, and establishes the fact that the Maritimes were not unreasonable when they declared things could not go on as they There will be some, perhaps many, who will feel that the Commission might have gone farther; and that, in view of the conditions which it reveals, and which they believe are entirely due to unfair treatment since Confederation, it might reasonably have declined to assume that the people themselves are to blame for stagnation in any direction. However, much has been conceded, and If the report is supplemented by adequate legis-lation our people will have a more hopeful out-their minds regarding at least some of the gifts

If it falls short in any to have in advance some knowledge of what is particular, there should be no divided counsels in offered, and a careful study of this issue of The seeking a remedy. The country at large now Times-Star will undoubtedly be helpful. will be that there will in the future be less disposition to discount representations made in behalf always looking for favors from the Government. If Parliament and the country are well disposed our people will do their part, and there will be made possible the development of a national spirit hitherto sadly lacking in this part of Canada. The people of the other provinces, as they read the Duncan report, will understand better why a spirited people resented any insinuations that they were themselves to blame for existing conditions

The matter is now referred to the different organizations. If their answer is favorable, as there is no reason to doubt that it will be, the Board of Trade has generously agreed to finance a survey by Dr. Brittain, following which representatives of the organizations will again be called together to decide whether in their judgment the plan should be adopted here.

The Associated Charities asked the Board of Trade to consider this matter, the Board promptly took action, and the whole question will receive the fullest consideration. There will be no undue haste, but the most careful consideration before final action is taken.

PARLIAMENT

THE work of the new Parliament has begun. having participated in the Imperial Conference. The Speech from the Throne has been submitted, and next week the House of Commons will get down to business. The country at large will be disappointed if there is a prolonged debate on the speech. The session before adjournment for the holidays should be made as business-like as pos-With memories of previous sessions still fresh, the people want action, and not merely words. It may be assumed that the Government has its business well in hand, so that progress may be made and delays avoided. It should also be able to restrain its own followers if they show a disposition to talk overmuch, and the opposition will gain credit for itself by being content with legitimate criticism, with no disposition to obstruct. Of course there are more than two parties in the House, and that does not make for brevity in discussion; but if all the members know what their constituents are thinking they will readily consent not to use a thousand words where ten will serve. This ought to be the most fruitful session of Parliament the country has witnessed for quite a number of years.

OSMAN DIGNA is dead at the ripe old age almost forgotten Osman the Bearded One; the exemption from criticism or reply. rising generation hardly knows his name, yet in the eighties of last century he was one of the finest fighters living, who gave the British and the Italians more trouble than any man in Africa, and trained an army of "Fuzzies" who by sheer fanatical bravery accomplished what no civilized foe has done, the breaking of a British square. Tommy Atkins almost loved his worthy adversary:

'E rushes at the smoke when we let drive An,' before we know 'e's ackin' at our 'ead 'E's all 'ot sand an' ginger when alive,

Anyhow he became the generalissimo of the Mahdi's forces while Sheik Tahner supplied the spiritual link between the False Prophet and the tribes. Sheik Tahner preached a holy war; Osman Digna carried it out. In the end he was ound to fail, and with typical oriental fatalism he appears to have accepted defeat and has lived in Berber. So passes a fine warrior.

On the heels of the Brittain report comes that of the Duncan Commission. Both are of the utmost importance to the people of Saint John. Because they come in the very midst of the season, they may not get for a little time the full attention they deserve; but they mean so much to the future of Saint John that very many of the citizens will find time to give them careful study. So far as the Duncan report is concerned, and any legislation to be based thereon, the essential thing is that the Maritime Provinces stand as a unit in relation thereto. It is equally desirable, so far as Saint John is concerned, that the Brittain report be considered without prejudice, and that whatever civic policy

Mr. St. John Ervine's reminder, with all the weight of authority as a foremost dramatic critic, that the word "some" is used, exactly in the sense in which a modern American uses it, by Shakespeare in "King Henry VI," (Part II., Act ii., scene 2) when Prince Hal refers to Doll Tearsheet as "some road," may be matched by two other surprising proofs that there is nothing new under the References to the Atlantic Ocean as "the herring-pond," far from being an up-to-date bit of slang, dates from the reign of George I., when it was used by none other than the celebrated Mr. John Gay, of "Beggar's Opera" fame in our own time, in his "Polly," while British schoolboys' favorite epithet of "topping," instead of being the senseless device of present-day youth for concealing thought, goes back to Stuart times.

Pet Snatchers. Quite a commotion has been caused among Londoners, who are as a rule great people for domestic pets, by the revelations regarding the systematic thefts of cats and dogs for vivisection purposes. All the suburban old maids who keep favorite Tom cats, and all the Bloomsbury flappers who own toy dogs, are much exercised about things, and are taking all manner of extra precautions to safeguard their pets. But, as a matter of fact, the stealing of domestic cats has long been precarious means of livelihood for some indiviiuals in London. But these brigands of the quiet suburbs, who prowl round with mysterious-looking bags, and rob many a pleasant home of its hearthrug purrer, steal for commercial and not scientific purposes. A good cat skin, in these days of demopurposes. A good cat skin, in these days of demo-cratic furs, may be worth anything from 9d. to 2s.6d., and in some suburbs a man who loiters with a big black bag is given the widest of all possible berths by discriminating pussies of sophis-

Cenotaph Flowers. It is remarkable how fresh are the flowers on the Cenotaph since Armistice Day, but it is doubtful whether this would have been so but for the phenomenal rain of the last ten days, which was bound to have a freshening effect on this glorious great bank of floral tributes. A fortnight has passed since Armistice Day, yet each morning sees a fresh stream of pilgrims slowly encircling the flower-strewn base of the Cenotaph. There are some magnificent wreaths there—tributes from all sections of the community and every conceivable kind of organization. But the real heartbreaking pathos which these tributes represent lies in the pations which these tributes represent lies in the little bunches of English flowers—almost hidden under the weight of more elaborate and costly tributes. One such pathetic little token that the writer noticed had attached to it a name that could have only belonged to a member of a Somer-set family, so typical was it of the West Country. The card showed that the lad was killed in action—aged seventeen. Tragically intimate glimpses such as these reveal something of the Cenotaph's

The Raison D'Etre.

Needless to say the growing challenge to Oxford's proud academic supremacy by "the place called Cambridge" continues to exercise many superior minds. This year Cambridge tops the 6,000 membership total for the first time, and indubitably there are signs of a growing tendency indubitably there are signs of a growing tendency. to favor the Light Blue University. It has been argued that this is due to Oxford's admission of the woman undergraduate, but though this fact may explain something, I am told that it does not account for all. It is the Rhodes scholars who are causing Cambridge to attract an increasing number of our own public school boys. Though some parents may favor Cambridge because it is "a man's university," still more do so, if they are enthusiastic old athletes and Blues, because Oxford has all the Rhodes man. "At Oxford." ford has all the Rhodes men. "At Oxford my boy would be crowded out of any chance of a Blue," is the common argument, "but at Cambridge he will stand a fair chance." In support of this theory it may be cited how nowadays Cambridge is getting most of the promising young sports.

Canadians In West China

SINCE the right of the Dominions to full control of their foreign, as well as domestic, affairs has been explicitly laid down by the Imperial Conference, the responsibility now falls directly upon Cnaada and the other Dominions of looking after their foreign interests, including the safety of their people in any part of the word. Presumably, then the Canadian Government is giving serious consideration to the position of the considerable number of Canadian missionaries in Sze Chwan provential of the considerable number of Canadian missionaries in Sze Chwan provential canadian canadian missionaries in Sze Chwan provential canadian ince in West China, 2,000 miles up the Yangtse

Had they withdrawn from that area they would probably have invited the destruction of their homes and institutions. But if serious trouble should develop down toward the coast between the Chinese and the foreign powers, they would be in a very precarious position, considering the strong feeling that has grown up against all

It would seem, therefore, that the Canadian Government should have some voice in determin-ing whether the Canadians should remain in West na, and should also keep in touch with the China, and should also keep in touch with the British Government so that any drastic action taken by Britain and the other powers, if that should become necessary, would not be taken without consideration for the safety of the Canadians far up the Yangtse River.

A SOUTHERN fundamentalist now claims it is a sin for women to bob their hair. His reason for saying so is that Eve didn't bob hers. An exphance onings that when one thinks of the state of the standard months of 28 days each, the 28th falling on Saturday. The new month would be inserted between June and July. The soft has yell day of the year would be December 29, but it would have no week day name. HUNTER'S GUN ROUTS BEAUTIFUL SPECIES

PARTRIDGE in our northern states, and pheasant of the south, the ruffed grouse has always been one of the south.

If, by virtue of a favorable season or two, they seem to be holding their own in numbers, the hunter shoots them. If they are scarce, he says that the foxes and skunks have caught them in the snow, and so he declares war on the foxes and skunks also, and keeps on shooting the birds. Presently they are almost gone. they are almost gone. Such has been on much of its lormer range, the fate of our ruffed grouse. Originally abundant, it was tame and confiding in the early days of our settlement. On being approached it would walk or run away, for its natural foes of the ground were slow or helpless in the trees. Gradually it grew scarce.

Now that it is probably too late, we are investigating the causes of its growing scarcity, but as we investi-

In the same way the Scout should be loyal, not only to the King, but also to every one who is above him—his parents, his officers, or employers and he should stick to them through thick and thin as part of his duty. If he does not intend to be loyal, he will, if he has honor or manliness about him, resign his place. No Scout who is an

POINTS TO JACK CORNWELL

"A true Scout is loyal to his friends and should stand by them in evil times as well as in good times. Loyalty to duty of the highest order was shown by Jack Cornwell, the Boy Scout hero, who met his death at the post of duty in the great naval battle between the British and German fleets off the Jutland coast, known as the battle of Horn's Reef, on June 1, 1916. His act of loyalty was spoken of very highly by Admiral Beatty as well as the captain of the "Chester," The Victoria Cross, the highest award for bravery, was presented by the King to Scout Cornwell's mother in recognition of her son's heroism.

"His fine example has also been commemorated in the Sout movement through the institution of a special award known as the Cornwell Scout Badge. Jack Cornwell proved by the manner of his death, as many other Scouts did during the great war, his loyalty to the second scout last of the process of the pack of the ward his loyalty for which scouting stands."

Dorothy Dix Foolish Indeed is the Wife Who Objects to Her Husband

Showing Kindness and Sympathy to Other Women, for as a Man Treats Women in General, So Will He Treat His Wife-Only More So.

A WOMAN complains to me that she is very miserable because the man with whom she is in love sympathizes with every woman who is in distress and tries to help her. My correspondent considers this a grievous fault in the man and asks if I can tell her how she can cure him of it.

A fault for a man to be sorry for a woman in trouble? Want to break him of it? Want to change him? Woman! Pluck the mote out of your eyes, so that you can see that you will have a gentle, chivalrous man for a husband and go down on your knees and thank God for your good for-

> A MAN who sympathizes with every woman in trouble, whose heart softens within him at the sight of every softens within him at the sight of every gray-haired, old woman he sees staggering along the street under her burden of heavy daily work, of sweat shops or scrubbing, a man who pities the frail, little, white-faced girl working next to him and helps her with her tasks—that man is one of nature's noblemen, and happy, and fortunate is the woman who happy, and fortunate is the woman who gets him for her husband.

FOR pity's sake—and for your own sake, don't try to break him of the habit and kill his desire of sympathizing with women, for the time will come, sister, when you will need, if you marry or are married, to call upon all the tenderness and sympathy that this very man can possibly supply. He will treat you as he has treated others.

OF COURSE, you think that, no matter how callous and hard your husband is to other women, he will overflow with comprehension toward you. But this will not be, for unless a man is filled with divine pity and understanding of all that women must suffer and endure, he turns toward his wife the same stony attitude that he has for the rest of her sex.

EVERY woman in the world believes that she will be vouchsafed the mirace of marrying a man who is all warmth to her and icicles to every other woman, a man who is iron to the world and clay in her hands. But no voman has ever inveigled this phenomenon of nature as

AS A MAN is in his treatment of other women, so is he in his treatment of his wife, only more so.

THE man who is harsh and unfeeling to his employes is brutal to his wife. The man who is considerate and kind with his girl clerks and strongraphers surrounds his wife with every loving care and protection. The man who tramples roughshod over women to grab the best seat in the street car is the sort of man who gobbles the best on the table and riles in a taxi while his wife has to walk to save a street carfare.

THE man who sympathizes with every woman in trouble has for his wife a feeling that is as all-enveloping as the tender-

Don't try to change a man who is sorry for women and who kind to them, sister. There are too few of them in these days at k of chivalry. If you admire the street-car-hog type of man, arry him, but don't try to change a gentleman into one. It's a EVICENTLY the trouble with my correspondent is that she is jealous. She doesn't object to the sympathy of the man when it is showered on her, but she does not want any other woman to have a share of it.

SHE is a foolish feminine monopolist who believes that she can establish a copper riveted trust in a man's heart so that he will be oblivious to the fact that there is another petticoat on earth.

THERE are plenty of women like that. They demand that they be all

THERE are penty of women like that. They demand that they be all in all to a man. They are not satisfied with being the best beloved, the one he has chosen from all the world for his wife. They are miserable if he even notices another woman, if he is sorry for a woman who weeps or glad for a woman who rejoices.

Before marriage these women go into hysterics if the man is civil to any woman whom he happens to meet. After they are married they treat their husbands to curtain lectures if the poor man so much as pays a compliment to another woman. Inasmuch as men and women are thrown constantly together in the ordinary course of life and in business, such women force their husbands to become liars and deceivers, for no man is going to tell the truth about the women he sees if he knows it is going to precipitate a storm.

AS A PLAIN working proposition any woman can write it down in her little book that no one woman can be everything to her own husband. She can't take him off to a desert isle where she would be the only woman, and, if she did, he would get so tired of her that he would drown himself to get rid of her.

THEREFORE it is up to every sweetheart and wife to meet the "other woman" problem with a little common sense if she wants to keep the man she loves from regarding her as a tyrant whom he is doomed to

CERTAINLY a woman can choose no surer or more expeditious way of killing love than by always nagging at a man about another woman, by showing herself so small of soul and so little worthy of a generous heart as to begrudge even the sympathy that a chivalrous man shows to the weak and helpless of her own sex.

FOR my part, I think that one of the most beautiful acts I have ever witnessed was when I saw a young man pick up a poor old drunken woman from a restaurant floor. He spoke to her gently, as a son might speak to his mother, and in his face was a compassion which glorified it.

Know that that man makes a good husband, because he has pity for all women, even the erring.

THE scurrying, mauling, heaving subway crowd of the rush hours is a nervous body that needs but little DOROTHY DIX The other day I happened to witness an incident that explains how SCHOOL SOCIETY CONTRACTOR SOCIET wars are started. A Jewish couple were making their way along as best they could when a hurrying negro stepped on momma's foot. Poppa remonstrated and the words mounted high. While they were arguing, a train roared up to the platform and momma got on. Poppa, continuing the argument, just turner in time to make it, jamming himself inside just as the door slammed shut. The colored man behind rammed his nose into the glass in his impetuous that. But you can't break a window in a subway train while an Irish guard is watching you and walk right away brushing off your sleeves. That isn't the way the subway drama is written.

HEALTH SERVICE-All Pains About Heart Not Heart Disease

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

A person who suddenly has a pain in the heart or in the region of the heart is likely to become frightened because of the importance which this organ has long held in the public mind in relation to disease and death.

Dr. Alexander Lambert pointed out that reurotic pains and pains of slight degree originating elsewhere in the body may be referred to the region of the heart and may easily bring about a condition of fright or worry. They arouse fear of sudden death, which is common in many nervous persons.

HARD TO DISTINGUISH

, Physicians understand that all pains in the region of the heart are not necessarily due to heart disease and those due to other conditions in the region of the heart cannot be differentiated, however, except by some one with scientific knowledge of body structure and the symptoms of heart disease.

In cases ir which the heart itself is affected, there are likely to be physical symptoms related to the accomplishment of work, to breathing, and to the body nutrition.

Dr. Brittain told how budgets were scanned by the central committee which gave advice where needed. It was found that instead of resulting in a curtailment of city grants it had actually stimulated them. While in Toronto there were still some tag days, members of the associated organizations were not permitted to hold them and campaigns, such as the sale of tuberculosis seals, unless purely educational, were not approved.

OBJECTION TAKEN TO PUBLICATION

Local Teachers' Association Takes Up Articles About Saint John

"The Canadian Teacher," a Toronto publication, came in for some sharp criticism at the meeting of the Saint John Teachers' Association held last night in the Natural History Society rooms, with H. C. Ricker, president, in the chair.

It was reported by Miss Caie that this magazine had first published the statement that for a great part of the year Halifax was the only port in Eastern Canada. When that error was brought to its attention it made some remarks about Saint John chiefly to the effect that in this city the visitor was impressed most by the foreign sailors from many ports, and that in walking through the streets the visitor looked down on the roofs

The traveler in New Brunswick was also said to be going to Fredericton in order to view the residence of the Lieutenant-Governor. At last night's meeting strong disapproval of the articles referred to was voiced by those present, and the teachers stated they would cancel their subscription to the magazine. No other action was taken. ADDRESS HEARD

The program of the evening was arranged by the teachers of the manual training and domestic science departments. The address was by A. P. Paterson, who spoke on Maritime Rights, and was heard with much interest, and appreciation. The other terest and appreciation. The other items of the program which were also much enjoyed were a piano solo by Miss Lorna Cochrane; reading, Miss Muriel Curren; vocal solo, C. H. Coch-

SCALLOPER FOUND WITH BROKEN GEAR BY PATROL SHIP

Fisherman Towed Into Harbor at Digby Town For Repairs

DIGBY, Dec. 10—Coming into port this morning, the Government patrol boat in charge of Capt. Baker, stopped near the Lighthouse when a scallop boat was noticed flying a distress signal Upon investigating it was found that the boat was helpless with propeller broken. She was towed into Digby harbor for repairs. The scallop boat, operated by Gerald Syda, taking advantage of the calm weather of last night, had been dragging until early morning when the boat struck a sunken log and put the propeller out of commission. The boat drifted helpless in the bay until the patrol boat passed.

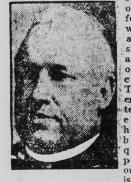

the patrol boat passed. The patrol boat was on the way to Digby where it will be tied up for the winter. The scallop boat was towed to Digby where it will be repaired.

IN VIEW OF LIFE STATION. Where the accident occurred is not far from the Bay View Life Saving Station, and if the station had been open and the life boat in commission, the plight of the vessel would have been noticed. This accident adds one more to the number that have occurred within the past few weeks, and they have all happened within a short distance of the Life Saving Station. Fishermen are expressing the hope that the station will be reopened soon.

ST. GEORGE, Dec. 10—To the older generation in St. George the death of Peter Clinch brought many expressions of sorrow. He was born here and during all the years of his active life in Saint John, watched with interest and affection any moves made to advance the welfare of his native town. An occasional visitor, he loved the old landmarks about St. George, knew all the old families and took a deep interest in the welfare of their descendants Nothing pleased him more than a chat with a St. George native. His home was filled with old-time mementos of his early days in St. George.

BUREAU ASKS $16,000 BALM FOR SLANDER

Canadian Press Despatch. HUMBOLDT, Sask., Dec. 10-Damages totalling $16,000 are sought in a slander suit which has been started in behalf of Jacques Bureau, K. C., former minister of customs, in the Court of King's Bench here against Milton Campbell, M. P.-elect for MacKenzie, and W. J. B. Smith, of Invernay, Sask. Eight thousand dollars each, together with the costs of the action, are sought from the defendants. The statement of claim bases the suit on certain remarks alleged to have been made by the defendants in addresses during the recent federal political campaign.

Railway Board For Early Disposal

Canadian Press Despatch. OTTAWA, Dec. 10-Consideration of the application for an early disposal of the coal rates schedule between the Provinces of Alberta and Ontario was given by Chief Commissioner McKeown and Deputy Chief Commissioner Vien at this afternoon's session of the Board of Railway Commissioners.

Finally Chief Commissioner Mc-Keown decided to postpone a decision until Tuesday next at 5 p. m., when Mr. Woods would be able to report on the result of his trip to To-

H. P. Duchemin, K. C., enquired on behalf of the Province of Nova Scotia, if the eastern coal rates case which had also been referred to the board by a separate order in council, would have to be taken up, too. His government preferred that the eastern rates case be deferred until the general freight rates investigation had been lisposed of. The board assented his proposal.

KEENER and more general interest in the preservation of the game life of the province, leading to larger membership in the New Brunswick Fish and Game Association, was strongly advocated in the annual report of the president of the Saint John branch, D. King Hazen, submitted at last evening's meeting. Again it was advocated that this whole matter be freed from the influence of party politics.

An interesting review of the year's work was made, showing that there Canada, in carrying out the provi-

James Dunn's representatives, and members of your association appeared before the government on May 26, last. Two weeks after this meet-26, last. Two weeks after this meeting a notice appeared in the Royal Gazette that the fishing rights on part of the Tracadle would be sold on June 24. The upset price was fixed at $300, one hundred dollars more than in the first notice. It was apparent that our protests had failed to alter the government's decision. The day before the sale was to take place, it was stated in the press that it had been cancelled.

The reason the sale was cancelled have been making a practice of supwas not because this association opposed it, but because Sir James Dunn informed the government he did not want the least on account of the above want the lease on account of the objections that had been raised. It is well for the members of our associations are successful to the members of our associations of the members of the member well for the members of our associations to keep this fact in mind, as no doubt applications will be made in future to obtain exclusive leases of these privileges that are limited in number, and this association must be on its guard to oppose such applications.

Although our protests have not re-sulted as yet in a change of policy on the part of the government in respect to our angling waters, we have the satisfaction of knowing that through our efforts this river did not pass into private hands. Sir James Dunn, in reply to a letter the president of our association sent him, set-ting forth our objections, said that he had a good deal of sympathy with the man who lived in a locality famous for its fishing and was not allowed to fish on the public domain; that in his on the public domain; that in his opinion, it was the way to make poachers, and that so far as he was concerned, he did not want the lease of the Tracadie if it was against the wishes of the people who lived along its banks, and who in his opinion were the first ones who had the right to fish it.

The policy of granting exclusive leases is considered unfair to the people of New Brunswick, and bad from the point of view of tourist business. In Nova Scotia there are no such leases, and good fishing is obtainable.

MIGRATORY BIRDS.

Geese and ducks on their way north to mate last spring were obliged to spend a much longer time than usual in this vicinity owing to the fact that the season was late, and lakes and rivers remained frozen. These birds have been saved frozen. These birds have been saved from extermination by the Migratory Bird Treaty made between Canada and the United States a few years ago, which prohibits spring shooting and the sale of birds. The number of officials employed by the Dominion government to enforce this treaty is limited, and as it was found impossible to send one to this district at the time, our branch employed a man for a short time at its own expense to protect these birds. It also, through the courtesy of the New Brunswick Publishing Company, Limi-ted, had items inserted in its papers that called attention to the law and the penalties for its violation. A let-ter was received from R. W. Tufts, migratory bird officer for the Maritime Provinces, expressing his appreciation of the action we had taken.

COMPLETE TEXT OF ROYAL COMMISSION REPORT ON MARITIMES

COLLOWING is the complete report on Maritime Province claims prepared and submitted to the Government by the Royal Commission composed of Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, London, Eng., chairman; Judge W. B. Wallace, of Nova Scotia, and Professor Cyrus MacMillan, of McGill University, Montreal.

Introduction

Governments of New Brunswick to follow the abrogation of the Reci-Governments of New Brunswick procity Treaty which was practically coincident with Confederation. It took too little account also of all the other ernment of Nova Scotia opened their case with a historical survey of the events leading to Confederation in 1867, and of the trade conditions prevailing before and since that date. Independent and unofficial witnesses, and ndividual citizens whom we met privately in all three provinces added to our understanding of the general setting. This part of the evidence was of considerable value in helping us to appreciate more completely, not only the point of view from which the problems of these provinces must be approached, but also the spirit and the thouse of our report, we for them to adjust themselves to changer that the very fact alone, it was more difficult for them to adjust themselves to change.

If, in the course of our report, we iwelt rather upon the nature—and the prospects of solution—of the difficulties now to be surmounted to ensure economic welfare and the development of trade and commerce in the three Maritime Provinces, and touch only briefly upon the history of the past, it is because the evidence as a whole left a clear impression upon our minds,

These are all aspects which it is it is because the evidence as a whole left a clear impression upon our minds, first, that the faith and interest of the Maritime Provinces in the general prosperity of Canada are beyond question, and, second, that the Maritime Provinces are sincere in the opinion that a solution of their own problems can, and should, be found within the policies of the Dominion. We feel, howcies of the Dominion. We feel, how-ever, that it would not be right to pass over entirely the historical argument mention. It would not be straining unable to take the view that Confederation, is, of itself, responsible for this fact. The trend and nature of economic development generally throughout the last sixty years has made within the Maritimes changes in the structure of business and employment which are unrelated to Confederation, and which would have taken place whether or not the Maritime Provinces. whether or not the Maritime Provin- the history of the Maritime Provinces, ces had been independent units out-side of Confederation. Even with Con-earlier than 1867, leads to the view federation there has been such a meas-that Maritime faith was strong in the ure of responsibility resting on each future of the Dominion of Canada as that Maritime faith was strong in the future of responsibility resting on each province for its own development that much at least of what has happened within the Maritime Provinces must be related to their responsibility and not to the responsibility and not to the responsibility of the Dominion.

We are far from saying that the Dominion, within its sphere of control, has done all for the Maritime Provinces which it should have done. But it must not be overlooked that the task which has been placed upon the Federal authorities in bringing such a vast territory as Canada to its present point of growth and prospect has been colossal. The calls made upon its attention and resources by that task may well have prevented it from rendering to the older and well settled communities of the East as much as these communities were entitled to expect, or as much help as it has afforded to other parts of Canada. It is provinces today are different in the structure of the Dominion of Canada as a complete and cemented constitutional at entity, and as an integral part of the great British Empire. The faith was strong in the future of the Dominion of Canada as a complete and cemented constitutional entity, and as an integral part of the great British Empire. The faith was as strong as it was in the minds of those who ultimately accomplished Confederation in 1867, and whose declaration in the British North America Act, that such a Union "would conduce to the welfare of the provinces had been and provinces the interests of the British Empire. The faith was as strong as it was in the minds of those who ultimately accomplished Confederation in 1867, and whose declaration in the British North America Act, that such a Union "would conduce to the welfare of the provinces had been and provinces the interests of the British Empire. The faith was as trong as it was in the minds of those who ultimately accomplished Confederation in 1867, and whose declaration in 1867, and whose declaration in the British North America Act, that such a Uni pect, or as much help as it has afforded to other parts of Canada. It is provinces today are different in the not possible in such an undertaking as the making of Canada, with its geographical and physical conditions, and its variety of aettlement and development, to maintain always an accurate balance, apportioning to every section of this extensive country the exact quality of benefit and quantity of advantage which would be theoretically and justly desirable. But reasonable balance is within accomplishment if there be periodic stocktaking. We venture to regard the present occasion as such a period of stocktaking, so that in the future progress of the common great enterprise the prospects of the Maritime Provinces may be brought into line with the prospects of the Dominion as a whole.

It has been represented to us that, in their colonial days with independent governments and their own customs control, the Maritimes were prosperous self-supporting communities, each with a bright future, and that their entry into the Canadian Union has inevitably created disabilities for them without assuring to them the advantages which the statesmen of the

It is not charged that the pledges and promises which ware and promises which was a promise which w and promises which were made to the Maritimes in 1867 were made in good faith, but rather that they have failed From the the production is a distribution of the fill of the production is the state of the fill of the production of th of fulfilment, whereas the doubts and fears that the Maritime Provinces over entirely the historical argument without expressing certain conclusions we have reached as a result of our study, both of that part of the evidence as it was submitted to us and of such information as we have been able to obtain for ourselves from contemporary sources.

The outstanding fact, it seems to us, is that the Maritime Provinces have not prospered and developed, either in population, or in commercial, industrial and rural enterprise, as fully as other portions of Canada. We are unable to take the view that Confederation, is, of itself, responsible for this

I. Money Grants to Provinces

Official Summary of Duncan Report

THE following is the official summary of the Duncan report issued by the Dominion Government:

1-The commission thinks that the provinces have made out a case for a revision of the grant from the Dominion in support of the government's machinery and activity.

2-The commission agrees with the contention of the provinces that they have been and are being dealt with differently than the western provinces and think that they are entitled to have their allowance reconsidered.

-The commission feels that the claim for allowance in lieu of public lands, though belated, is one that should be looked at in the general financial revision or readjustment which they are suggesting.

4—The Maritime Provinces have a genuine claim to a readjustment of financial arrangements and in any readjustment their territorial limitations entitle them to still further consideration. While not possible to make a final recommendation as to the increase and form of Dominion aid (which are obviously a matter for detailed determination and assessment), the commission recommend immediate consideration of the whole subject with a view to a complete revision of the financial readjustments as between the Dominion and the Maritimes. In the meantime, pending such reassessment, they recommend that immediate interim lump sum increases should be made in the payments as follows: Nova Scotia, $875,000; New Brunswick, $600,000;

Prince Edward Island, $125,000. These interim payments should be continued until the Dominion government has had time to complete its reinvestigation.

5—The commission find that comparing freight rates of 1912 with present rates, the increase on Intercolonial rates amount to 92 per cent., that is their 100 has become 192. The estimated average increase of rates for the rest of Canada is 55 per cent., that is their 100 has become 155.

6-Reference is made to the fact that the Intercolonial Railway is two hundred and fifty miles longer than what would have been necessary if commercial rather than strategic conditions had prevailed, that the rates before 1912 had been fixed, taking into account national, imperial and strategic interests and that these have apparently been abandoned since that date.

7-The commission recommend an immediate reduction of 20 per cent. (so that 192 will become about 155) be made on all rates charged on traffic which both originates and terminates at stations in the Atlantic Division of the Canadian National Railways, (including export and import traffic, by sea, from and to that division), and that the same reduction be applied to the Atlantic division proportion of the through rates on traffic originating at stations in the Atlantic division (excluding import traffic by sea), and destined to points outside the Atlantic Division.

8—For this purpose they think the divisional points should be Diamond Junction and Levis, instead of Riviere Du Loup, and Monk.

9-The cost of the relief should be definitely borne by the Dominion government, who would reimburse the Canadian National Railways through the medium of the Canadian National Railways budget.

10-The C. P. R. would also be entitled to equitable consideration if they should find themselves prejudiced as a result of the reduction proposed.

11—The commissioners express the view that the railway commission in passing upon freight rates should be definitely authorized to take into account national interests, both producing and consuming, and that if this is not the original intention of section 320 of the Railway Act, it is the intention which should now be imported into it so that the railway commission could, on the ground of national interests, alone, authorize reductions in rates for the particular section of the community, even where such reduction might on purely commercial consideration, be regarded as discriminatory and if from public policy they felt that an experimental rate should be conceded they should be free to constitute the rate even although it might not, at the time, or of itself, give reasonable compensation to the railway company.

12-That the horizontal increases during the war have borne heavily on the long distance traffic and they recommend that the railway commission should be authorized to consider the question afresh and should be relieved from the necessity of regarding themselves ae bound to make reduction horizontally because the increases have been made

13-The commission state that the difficulties in regard to transportation for Prince Edward Island to be overcome require a measure of capital expenditure and they recommend that the railway administration make a survey as to requirements and the department provide the capital for the improvements to be undertaken as soon as possible.

14-They also recommend that the question of an additional car ferry or a special freight boat be gone into with a

A TON THE PROPERTY OF THE PROP

Charlottetown, Georgetown and Summerside, particularly as to wharfage and storage accommodation with a view to adequate accommodation being made to meet the needs of the Island's produce, the work to be undertaken by the Department of Public Works and not by the railway.

17—The commission record the opinion expressed by New Brunswick witnesses that a trade treaty with the United States covering forest products, would greatly benefit the industry. They were asked to recommend the negotiation of a mutual trade treaty to secure free entry into the United States of pulp and paper other than newsprint.

18—The commissioners record opinions expressed by fishermen and dealers that an effort should be made to secure a treaty giving fresh fish free entry to the American market, and removing or lowering the duty on manufactured fish in the American market.

19—The commission state that the establishment of coking plants under the assistance of the Dominion Government for the coking of Canadian coal would go far toward solving the coal problem and refer to the proposal for by-product coke plants submitted before the royal commission on coal mining last year. 21—The commission refer to the necessity for prompt action in the matter of steel tariff. They state that it was submitted that the tendency of the tariff, as affected by successive alterations, had been to lessen the protection on the primary products of iron and steel.

22-The commission recommend a bonus on steel when Canadian coal is used in its manufacture, the bonus to be calculated on the basis of present drawback paid on imported

Note-The commissioners support the recommendation of the 1926 parliamentary committee that early consideration should be given by the government to the advisability of renewing the 1924 subvention in favor of Nova Scotia coal. In this connection they point out that the railway rate from Montreal to Ottawa, a distance of one hundred and seventeen miles, is almost twice the cost of the water rate from Sydney to Montreal aprpoximately eight hundred and fifty 23-In regard to agriculture, the commission say: "We feel that the responsibility for its backward condition rests primarily upon the industry itself and upon the provinces. They make no recommendation involving additional cost to the Dominion, but refer to the growth of Maritime public realization of the independence of organized distribution and co-operative marketing.

26-After reviewing the history of the Saint John and Quebec Railway and, based on change of plans made in 1916, at the instance of the Dominion, the commission feel need for further investigation as to the alleged promise of the Dominion to take the railway over, or into the grounds upon which the belief that such a promise was made is founded. They recommend an ad hoc tribunal to enquire into the circumstances surrounding this matter with power, if they are satisfied that the circumstances justify it, to arrange terms and conditions on which the railway should be taken over by

It might be contended that a flat rate reduction of the amount we name, and in the manner we name, is open to the objection, that it does not restore the pre-1912 relativity of rates within the provinces themselves, and that it is not an accurate assessment of the charges that arise from the consideration in mind. We do not believe—and the Canadian National Railways have informed us that they also do not believe—that any more accurate or equitable result could be obtained by minute and scientific investigation, which would, in any

We recommend, therefore, that an immediate reduction of 20 per cent. (so that 192 will become approximately 155) be made on all rates charged on traffic which both originates and terminates at 'stations in the Atlantic Division of the Canadian National Railways (including export and import traffic, by sea, from and to that division), and that the same reduction be also applied to the Atlantic Division proportion of the through rates on will traffic which originates at stations in the Atlantic Division proportion of the through rates on will traffic which originates at stations in the Atlantic Division for traffic by sea), and is destined to points outside the Atlantic Division.

For this purpose, we cannot regard the Atlantic Division as ending at Riviere du Loup and Monk, which are its present western limits. The divisional points should, in our view, be Diamond Junction and Levis, Diamond Junction being the point at which the Transcontinental Railway meets the old Intercolonial Railway meets the point to which, in 1879, and Levis the point to which, in 1879, the Intercolonial Railway was extended.

Financial Statement Shows Debit Balance of $10,181.11

All members of the staff of the General Public Hospital and all heads of departments were re-appointed at the annual meeting of the Board of Com-missioners held yesterday, when amond much other business, it was decided to award the contract for soft coal to R. P. & W. F. Starr, whose tender of $5.60 per ton, was accepted. Only two firms tendered. Although there were two vacancies on the staff of physicians no new appointments were made. No applications for appointment were received. A special meeting was called for Dec. 29 to pass December bills.

INTRODUCING DANIEL CUPID, ESQ., WHOLESALER

Unlike lightning, Mr. D. Cupid often strikes more than once in the same place. If he's ever struck as many times in a single spot as in the Mayrovitz family, of Philadelphia, love's legends contain no mention of it. Half of these principals of five matches, , which are to culminate in marriage on as many successive sundays, are related. The benedicts and their fiancees are (left to right), Louis Mayrovitz and Sarah New Charles Mayrovitz and Rose Friedman; Benjamin Mayrovitz and Ida Bernholz; Rabbi Finokur, the Mayrovitzs' uncle, who is to perform the ceremonies; Pauline Mayrovitz and Maurice Rich, and his sister, A.o.iy Rich and Martin Hopkins.

Dr. C. M. Pratt, commissioner for the month, said a complaint had been made that an out-door emergency case had been kept waiting for 15 minutes and had gone away. On inquiry he found the out-door department doctor had been called away for a serious case of collapse of a hospital patient at that moment and the out-door case was a walking patient. Dr. Pratt had satisfied the complainant that the facts justified the calling of the out-door doctor.

Dr. Pratt spoke of the unnecessary expense in the purchase of high priced drugs and suggested before any doctor was permitted to request the purchase of any very expensive special preparation the permission of a commissioner be secured.

Dr. White thought the hospital bill for drugs could be halved.

A special committee has the matter in hand.

BOARDERS WANTED Iwenty Maritime Athletes Are Granted Cards

> FIRST CLASS SENSATION in amateur circles was sprung last A FIRST CLASS SENSATION in amateur circles was sprung last night when the report of the national registration committee, as given by W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, carried the names of 20 athletes from the Maritimes Provinces who will be given a clean bill of health in amateur circles. Mr.. Hewitt, in introducing the Maritime section, expressed the opinion that the decision would go a long way to helping amateurism in the Maritimes. S. F. Doyls, president of the M.P. B., and H. E. Blakeney, vice-president, who presented the Maritime case, were highly delighted with the treatment accorded them by the committee after the recommendations had been adopted without a dissenting voice. MINING EXCHANGE I A D D IS BROADENING OUT taking place in some of the lower priced industrial stocks. In this respect the committee has changed the rates of commission on such shares to conform with those charged by the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

International Nickel was the first break. This issue had always been looked upon as an industrial mainly, rather than a mining stock, but lately there has been quite active trading in Nickel shares on the Standard. The shares of Joseph Seagram & Sons are also traded in on the Mining Curb and it is expected that similar facilities will be provided for trading in Gooderham & Worts and Canadian Industrial Alcohol.

value, the old shares selling yesterday at 189 and the new shares, selling on the Curb on a "when, as and if issued" basis, at 127 3-8. This means an actual market value of the 1,300,000 new shares of $165,587,500.

On issuance of the new stock the company will have outstanding $97,500,000 in common stock, or all except $2,500,000 of the total amount which has been authorized by stockholders.

SAINT JOHN RETAIL TRADE IS IMPROVING

WINNIPEG, Dec. 10—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Limited, reads as follows:

Halifax—Wholesalers continue to report fairly satisfactory volume of business.

Saint John—A fairly satisfactory volume of saint John—A fairly satisfactory volume of saint John—A fairly satisfactory volume of the company that the whole of the present vear and promises to continue for a long time to come.

The unusual activity that has pre
MONTREAL, Dec. 10—From the standroint of nroduction and sales the current year, Financial Counsel learns, will not only far exceed last year, but will bring Canada Cement Company's will bring Canada Cement Company's will bring Canada Cement Company's will production well up to the record totals of such pre-war years as 1912 and 1913.

Ordinarily speaking, such a statement would carry with it a conclusion that the profits of the company were in a like prosperous condition, but the sharp slashing of prices as a sesuit of the price "war" that developed with a rival concern, naturally has had a serious influence on operating profits. This latter situation, however, is only an incidental one, that can be modified by an agreement being reached between the two parties concerned. The really important point is the prosperity of the industry as indicated by the heavy increase in demand that has existed practically throughout the whole of the present year and promises to continue for a long time to come.

The unusual activity that has pre-throughout the whole of the present throughout the whole of the present throughout the whole of the present the way of the unusual activity that has prevalled in the Province of Ouchec this year as well as last, in the way of new construction of power plants and pulp and paper mills, has stimulated the use of cement to a very great extent. The Canada Cement Company found the Duke-Price Company a very large consumer, and although construction work on the power plant at Isle Maligne is near an end, other new work up the Saguenay has taken its place, such as the newsprint mill for the Port Alfred Corporation, the new additions to Price Bros and the neucles of the tremendous development of the Aluminum Company at Arvida. This last will, consume a very large amount of cement when the power plant is under construction. Just at present a much larger customer has been the International Paper Company on its two big enterprises, on the Gatineau and the Ottawa, the power plant and the newsprint mill. It was to supply these two developments that the Hull plant of Canada Cement was reopened after being shut down for some years, and being re-opened, it has been supplying the needs of the district, which otherwise would have come from the Monitreal plant or one in Ontarlo. Developemnts such as the Manitoba Paper Company's mill and the new unit for the Manitoba Power Company have come from the Winnipeg plant.

ROMANCE OF THE ORANGE GIRL WHO BECAME THE FAVORITE OF ENGLAND'S KING

THE SUPER BRITISH PHOTOPLAY

ATRUE-LIFE ROMANCE, SPARKLING WITH COMEDY, SPICED BY COURT INTRIGUE, SET IN THE SLUMS OF LONDON AND THE MAGNIFICIENT WHITEHALL PALACE OF ENGLAND'S GAY BACHELOR KING, glamorous with the alluring charm of Dorothy Gish, and with a supporting cast of the leaders of the London stage—that, briefly describes "Nell Gwyn." Strangely enough, Herbert Wilcox, young English director, was fortunate in securing Dorothy Gish to play the name-role and the little star journeyed to London for the picture. Miss Gish is truly magnificient. A well-chosen cast includes Randle Ayrton, Juliette Compton and Sidney Fairbrother, all British players of note. All deserve a hearty welcome to the Canadian screen.

The story discovers Nell, ragged, but happy, about to start for the Drury Lane Theatre where she sells oranges. Counting the hoarded coins in her stocking-purse, she tells her droll mother she will soon have enough saved to buy silk stockings and slippers. Laughing at the good dame's injunction, "Silk stockings ain't respectable—only them court ladies wears 'em' Nell fares forth to her fate—merry King Charles, out for a lark with a few cronies. How she spends her savings in paying for the supper to which the royal rogue invites her—and later holds her own in court intrigue amid a battle of hearts with beautiful, unscrupulous Lady Castlemaine, emerging victor with the King's heart, makes one of the most entertaining films seen here in some time.

angels sang, over a world so full of pride, and hatred, and lust: look to pride, and hatred, and lust: look to the Divine Birth in the city of David. There is this little tiny thing come into the midst of it all; and it makes the great change. Darkness; and the Star. Confusion out of which there seems no way; and, "A little Child Shall Lead Them." Thank God again for that today—Glory to God; and coming—ah! how slowly during the centuries—but coming surely because the idea of it is living, vital, now that once it has been started among men—Peace.

I will not dwell upon the different reading of what the Gospel gives of the angels' song—"Peace on earth: goodwill towards men;" or, as the Revised Version says, 'On earth peace among men in whom He is well pleased;" or in its margin, "many ancient authorities read "peace: good pleasure among men," or as the great majority of Christians throughout the world read it, according to S. Jerome, "on carth peace to men of goodwill." After all, all the versions must mean in the end very much the same thing.
God is only pleased, surely, with men of good will: in them only can He have pleasure: and there can be no peace—that is a fact—except among men of goodwill.

That is certain from the life of Our Lord on earth. It was a life of love. Not one moment in it but was full of devotion to God and man. God with us: yes, and that means Love with us. God is love. THE LOVE OF THE FAITHFUL

When the Incarnate Son was with men on earth love came only to Him from men and women of goodwill; the Holy Family (as the old painters called them), yet even there it seems that sometimes here was a question among those whom men called His among those whom men called His Brethren: the Apostles, most of all the beloved one who lay on His breast at the last supper: the disciples, but even among them there was a traitor; the last kiss was a betrayal: the faithful women, most of all perhaps she who washed His feet with her there are and dried them with her hair. tears and dried them with her hair these, and the poor, and the maimed the halt and the blind, loved Him: they were men of goowill. But the others, the cruel people, the leaders, priest and lay, ready to believe ill of One whom poor folk loved: read to condemn One who went about doing good; there was no goodwill in them—and their condemn-goodwill in them—and their condemnation, and that of those like them, is written in flaming light across the whole Gospel of the Saviour. There can be peace only to men of goodwill. And that is the meaning of world war. It is the proof that our Lord's kingdom has not yet come upon earth, that the world still holds thousands the whole God connet give peace here. to whom God cannot give peace, be cause they are not men of goodwill. But what the Church of Christ exists for is to soften the hearts of sinners: to appeal to that inner goodness which is not very far away from anyone of us; to preach peace, that is, to them that are far off as well as to them that are night to declare God's promise to have at Christm men of goodwill.

It is the object of the League of Nations to turn men throughout the world into men of goodwill. And the surest hope for In England Christmas is still the festival of home; and it is that, because from the first Christmas Day it has been the festival of love—at all times of life, in sorrow as in happiness, love to God, and, through that, in that, love to men. The day links together the love of God and the love

"No, Miss, not yet," she said in a moment or two, and Vivien half shrugged her shoulders as though to get rid of some invisible weight on them.
"I wish he'd come before Harry arrives," she thought: "Well, I must dress" and she acceded. dress," and she rose, dropping her negligee back over the chair and standness waiting for Mary to slip her trock over her head.

And the maid, with bitterness scorching her heart, with a torrent of seething emotions hidden under the mask of her impassive face, had to admit that she was indeed beautiful.

'No wonder he loves her," she thought bitterly; "she's perfect; flaw-less china, oh! what an awful thing life is," and she felt that the beating of her heart must be heard, that her mistress must suddenly feel the wild currents that were eddying round the

But Vivien was too deeply engrossed by her own thoughts to be affected by anything outside herself. As she stood in front of her dressing table she only noticed that her new maid claid in plain black silk, wearing a dainty apron and discreet black bow in her dark brown hair, was looking handsomer than ever.

"She really is extraordinarily good looking," she thought; then once again was lost in her own reflections. In a few moments the telephon

"Answer it, please," she said, and waited, putting on her rope of pearls.
"Mr. Vanderhof's very sorry, Miss, he's kept by important business and can't be back until about 11 o'clock.
He has sent a message to say will you and Sir Henry go to the theatre and he will join you at the Finbassy for supper. And Sir Henry's in the drawing room Miss."

"Fate's certainly not going to let me shelter behind Daddy," thought Vivien with a wry smile. 'Well, after all, breaking off an engagement's been done before now; what a coward I am!" And for a moment she felt quite

"I should have laughed," she thought "If anyone else had told me they'd felt like this just because they weren't going to marry a man and were girls do it three or four times. I'm certainly a coward. But I just can't help it. I hate hurting people." And she frowned quite deeply.

When she was ready she lifted up a small gold bag containing her enamelled box and ridiculous little hand-kershief edged with Honiton lace, and leaving her bedroom walked down the heavily carpeted corridor of their suite until she came to the drawing-room. Here she paused for a moment to rick my courage then opened the door pick up courage, then opened the door and walked in.

The room she entered was lovely, no one could have believed that it was just a hotel sitting room. A fire built up of cherry logs burned in the wide, open grate, throwing out a delicious smell, silken reproductions of Jacobean embroideries covered the chairs and sofas, there were great vases of massed flowers on the tables, through the big windows, from which the curtains were drawn back, could be seen the Thames, and the lights on the embankment shining through

A man was standing by one of the windows, intently gazing out, but at the sound of the door closing he turn-ed round, and came towards Vivien with a smile.

"A happy Christmas Eve, Princess mine," he said. "Here's something to put in your stocking!" and he held out a little packet done up in crisp white paper.

"How exciting!" said Vivien, taking it with a smile, the while she thought: 'I can't possibly say anything at this moment, no one ever breaks off their engagement hyreaks off their engagement while heyre being given a Christmas present!" And she undid the packet.

Inside the paper was a blue velvet case, about three inches high and six inches long, and when she opened it she gave a gasp of pleasure.

For lying in the case was a tiny manger of the most perfect workman-It was of dull gold, precious stones

Sir Henry Replingham smiled, a pleasant, open smile that lit up his dark, rather sombre face, making it chance, and had trained. He's an extraordinary fellow, if I believed in reincarnation I'd certainly think he'd come out of Cellini's workshop; he can come out of Cellini's workshop; he can achieve work as fine as any medieval Italian, and has the same pride in what he produces as they had."

"And Princess," his voice became lightly mocking: "As you possess everything that a mere male can think of in the way of jewellery, I had this made for you instead."

As he spoke a faint flush rose in Widen's cheeks

Harry kissed her hand. "Forgive you!" he answered. "Why, Princess, there's nothing to forgive! Love's not a thing to be forced. I know that very well," and he stared before him a the crackling logs.

"Harry," said the girl suddenly. "I want to ask you something. I know you are a rully fond of me; but you don't really love me, do you?"

The man smiled at her tenderly.

"No Princess." he said: "not in the "No, Princess," he said; "not in the story book manner. That comes only once in a life time; sometimes early, sometimes late. But it's been to me, "What happened," asked the girl softly. "Did she die?"

Sir Henry shook his head.
"I don't know," he said.
Vivien sat bolt upright in her chair and stared at him.
"You don't know!" she exclaimed.

Whatever do you mean?"

He smiled somewhat ironically at "I just don't know," he replied. "She disappeared. But why disinter ghosts?"
Vivien was still siting upright, gaz-Vivien was still siting upright, gazing at him with wide eyes.
"You said it was a night for ghost stories," she said. "Tell me this one."
Firelight played on her as she spoke, showing the gold of her hair, picking up the gold in her dress, lighting her little golden shoes. And the expression on her face was very sweet, very tender, it was clear that sympathy, not curiosity, caused her to pathy, not curiosity, caused her to

How To Give A Children's Party

By ROWLAND GREY.

AS Christmas approaches, certain questions which are hardier perennials ecen than the pearl-white Christmas rose itself, crop up with the inevitability of the festival. Among these, one query is invariable. How should I give a children's modern poet exquisitely calls "The Little Exquisite People."

The first—and really it is the conclusion of the whole matter—is do not give a children's party at all, unless you are capable of enjoying it yourself. For it is a blessed truth that joy is gribe as nifectious as boredom.

Lady Ritchie—Thackeray's daughter—has in her memoirs painted a vivid picture of a children's party with Dickens as master of the revels, and lord of misrule. She maintains that every-one was happier there than in any other house simply because the host himself was happies to fall. She further relates how she and her sister sorely afflicted with ugly bronze boots and long is a children's party with Dickens as manaster of the revels, and lord of misrule. Dancing should not be stopped too long for those who like brisk movement. Vanished are the days when the boys affected to despise it. to be called Old Maids are often found to be in their element at a children's party. Though they are frequently of the New Poor, they have such a knack of planning ingenious surprises, that their own simple gatherings have a supprising success. One of these once gave a party to a battalion of adopted patients and nieces for no better rephews and nieces for no better reasons than because it was her one idea of a personal Christmas dissipation. It meant economy first. Yet as George Eliot truly says: "We must lamented that she had had no present

A NOVEL PARTY

A NOVEL PARTY

The neighborhood was a rich one. Competition with Christmas trees bearing real gold bangles, and conjurors bringing aeroplanes out of their hats was out of the question. It was a hard white winter and she still owned a big country garden, finding an old fashioned invitation card with a robin bearing a sprig of holy, she added this inscription: "Christmas garden party, 4-6 Snow boots and old frocks." Everybody not in bed with numps or measles accepted, and that garden rang with peals of laughter all the afternoon. There were Londoners who had never before known the rapture of a snowball match with dry powdery snow, one patch was covered with a ground slide by a pail or two of water overnight. There was a short but sweet toboggan course down a steep slope with trays for sleighs. There was the making of a magnificent snow-man, a very glant in the land pallid in the moonlight before the tea-There was the making of a magnificent snow-man, a very glant in the land pallid in the moonlight before the teagong "left him alone in his glory" bear-

The plentiful tea was not elaborate, appetities do not become critical after exhilerating sports in frosty air-cheeks were rosy, eyes sparkling, and cheeks were rosy, eyes sparkling, and tongues waggling. On every plate sat a small home-baked loaf with the owner's initials in currants. Beside it the British lion in fresh churned golden butter. An abundance of crackers was its one link with ordinary parties, and a grand fussilade was the finale.

A little heiress very patronizing when she came, rather meek now she had found out the others played things better than she could, commented thus. "I can't make out why, but this has been the jolliest party these holidays. It was funny to come in an old frock, but it was a change.

Before he had quite decided the issue, Graham found himself turning in the direction of the little street in Aristide's staircase, he experienced a reaction, and began to debate whether he should intrude.

His deliberations were cut short by the opening of the door, and the emergence of Aristide himself, dressed in his ceremonial clothes, a intile faded, and obviously of French cut, the kind in an old frock, but it was a change.

HRISTMAS...Childhood's fondest dream! What memories it brings to us whom the years have passed by...whose hair, perhaps, is sprinkled with a bit o' gray...but whose hearts are ever youthful through this glorious Yuletide season.

Let's all be "little tots" for just a happy moment. 'Member that Christmas "way back when" we just couldn't wait for the day to dawn. How we counted the hours 'til the night before when we eagerly sought a place for our stockings by the fireside...only to be rushed off to bed a few minutes later. How Mother, when tucking us under the covers, would admonish us to "keep quiet or Santy won't leave anything. Go to sleep now, maybe by morning..."

But our youthful curiousity got the best of us. We'd close one eye but keep the other open for a glimpse of cheery old Santa en route to the chimney. And we'd lie there and wait for sounds of his sleigh bells...and wait...until the Sand Man closed our drooping eyelids in dreamless sleep.

Later, perhaps, we'd be aroused to greet his jovial majesty...Sant a. Nervously we'd toddle into his presence...only to be caught up in his arms there to answer what we thought were a million questions before he'd open that bag of Gifts we were so eager to look into. How it all thrilled us...what neverto-be-forgotten Happiness it brought us!

Time, alas has passed those joyous moments on to other generations. Christmas to us now has a more significant meaning. It's that spreading of good cheer where'er we can...extending the Yule-tide Spirit to all mankind in fulfillment of the Christmas message of "Peace on Earth...Good will toward men!"

A SEASONABLE TALK ON THE GIFTS OF THE MAGI

there is a great defensive dyke set about Christmas, a dyke, which, even where religious influence seems to fail, would be done by, is indeed a great where religious influence seems to fail, yet protects ancient custom and sustains Christmas as the festival of the home. Christmas or no Christmas. home. Christmas or no Christmas, where is to be found a better refuge from the unkindly December weather than the home? Who, in the most luxurious hotels, or in the gayest restaurant finds the rest and protection Kingship does not support itself with though we may in our foolishness, ig- TO every Briton whose lot has and peace which every normal human desires at such a season?

HOME IS BEST.

So the few may trip away. We, the majority, are satisfied that no Christmas can be better than ours, spent in the glow of the Yule fire and the happy music of children's voices.
Christmas is the festival of the home because it is the festival of the children. Even those who pay inadequate attention to religious observance, even those who effect to find Christmas a tiresome burden will tell you, "Well, it's the time the kiddies look forward to, and you can't disappoint them." Thereby, they recognize, unwillingly perhaps, the religious basis of Christmas, for they turn their thoughts to the child, and to a child Christmas

Among the time-honored customs of Christmas, in England, superficial and trivial though they may seem, are many that will stir deep thoughts. There is that old-fashioned practice of bringing a conjurer to entertain the children, or of taking them to see a modern magician. The conjurer has his busiest days at Christmastide; it is particularly his crowded season. If we consider this curious connec-tion of Christmas with the "magi-cian" we find we have stumbled upon a direct link between our own times and that all-important night nearly two thousand years back.
The shepherds watching their flocks were not the only observers of that crilliant star which proclaimed the Nativity. Far away, wise men, holy men, known in their days as Magi, also read the heavenly sign, and set off on a lengthy journey to find the Child. The caste called Magi, those wise and holy men of Persia, did not maintain their exalted station. With the passage of time they degenerated, they became merely magicians, and, despite their antiquity they still have their part in the Christmas festivities, the everyone else to share the feast with With the advent of so many men there was a spirit of gaiety apparent in the little place, and wherever we visited we found a party of cheery Europeans. Some of them, however, were of a temperament who found little pleasure in "mixing" thus, and it was on several of those lonely souls that my wife and I concentrated in an attempt to bring them good cheer. Our efforts in preparation for the great day commenced at least two weeks before. Good things had been ordered months in advance, as our nearest contact with a railway was 500 niles away. Luckily, on the 22nd of December we received the welcome news that many cases of stores had arrived for us, and our Persian butler was de-spatched with two mules to fetch

A TERRIFIC BLIZZARD

On the twenty-third a terrific bliz-zard raged the whole day and went on into the night. Thick snow drifts rendered the roads almost impassable, and the thermometer dropped down to the zero mark, and with these threatening signs our spirits dropped also. On the morning of the twenty-fourth the weather improved a little, but as it was obvious that the car in which our friends were coming ould not get a yard on the roads, we therefore harnessed a pair of horses to our carriaige and sent it off for its long struggle to fetch them if possible.

Nothing happened throughout the day, and our spirits were at the low-From our verandah, which com-nanded an uninterrupted view of the city far away, there was not a sign of anything, and the weather again became threatening. At dusk, however, we espied three tiny specks on the vast white carpet in the far distance. It was too dark to determine what they were even with the aid of the glasses, so donning our snowshoes we set off through the deep drifts to meet and help whoever it might be.

To our joy it proved to be our trusty butler, but he had had a hard time in executing his trust. Those 16 miles had taken him ten hours to cover, and had taken him ten hours to cover, and he was on the point of exhaustion. He had hurried to make the house before dark, as after that time the herds of hungry wolves were a great danger to both man and beast. His moustache was frozen into a solid mass, and large icicles hung from his eye-lashes and nostrils. I feel that we must have embarrassed the poor felw with the welcome we gave him and with the help that he had from us

In the beginning of December there seems to be so much time. "I'm not going to do much time. "I'm not children," we say comfortably, at this point.

It is not until about the 18th that we begin to squirm. All very well to say one isn't going to do much, but with twelve persons for dinner the big table-cotoh has to be pressed. And now, even though he had fallen to the professional ignominy of a department store Santa Clause, the instincts of his calling were strong.

Sixty-four, of course, is not actually old. If you're well off and established, people say, "Getting on in years a bit, but he's going strong. Doesn't look over fifty." But if you need work, they tell you to your face that you're old. They tell you so often that you begin to think you are.

He visited the dramatic agencies to the professional ignominy of a department store Santa Clause, the instincts of his calling were strong upon him. If he must masquerade in a red coat and a white occura, at least let him do it well. No cheap, streetcorner impersonations if he could help it.

Only necessity, in the form of a long unpaid bill at Mrs. Hollin's theatrical boarding-house in West Fifty-first Street, had brought him to Morris Brothers.

"Could you, maybe, let me have forty dollars, Mr. Dunstane? On account, you know?" Mrs. Hollins had asked this in an undertone of apology, meeting him on the stairs, one day back in November. "I wouldn't mention it, but there's the rent and the coal bill—"

Even so, when I at last got to the bettom, I couldn't deliver fay presents—the gas stove blocked up the entire fireplace. Not that it mattered much," he idded, sadly.

"Children's tastes in presents have altered too," he observed. "The things that used to send your and your artist confederate half off your rockers with boyish delight are simply sneezed at by the modern child. What was it the boys of your time used to want in their stockings?"

AMONG THE HOMELESS BACHELORS Christmas In London's Mysterious Clubland

bring some happiness.

Though it may seem paradoxical, it would not be superfluous to spare a thought, too, for some of the rich and comfortably-off, for there is a small section of these who, though relatively section of these who, though relatively free from financial cares, are, neverthe less, extremely poor in the factors that create happiness.

At no time does their unhappiness make itself more apparent than at Christmastide, and the tragedy is that there are so few people in their vicinity to note their distress.

So, this Christmas, I would plead that when duty has been done to the so, this Christmas, I would pleat that, when duty has been done to the poor and needy, a thought might be spared for the unhappy people who spend their Christmas in the London clubs, locked out from the happy glow of the family fireside, cut off from the gleeful shouts of children and the irresponsible fun making youth, isolated from the humanizing influence of the Christmas spirit.

UPHOLSTERED GLOOM.

The best London clubs never close, save for a short period for cleaning during the summer season, and, even then, their members may "lodge" at another club near by. Even on Sun-days, when the hour of three booms from Big Ben into thousands of wire-less sets, when the thoughts of most of us are miles away from city streets and workaday habits, there are lonely men seated in the leather upholstered gloom of London's clubs, reading, writing and even snoring, pictures of neglect and boredom.

And even at Christmastide, the clubs to its members, and it is to some, alas their only home.

There are Christmas dinners given in the clubs, feasts full of good fel-lowship, splendid fare and hearty laughter, but those take place many days before December 25th, and, afterwards, the attendance of members begins to fall off. The luckiest ones retreat into the country, to the Continent or to the seaside about a week before the festive day. Others pop in and out until Christmas eve, and, even on that joyous night, there will be a fair sprinkling of members, mostly business men who cannot escape from the claims of their offices until the last moment. One by one, these take their greatcoats and suit-cases from the cloakroom, and, with a cheery greeting to the servants, taxi

THE REMNANTS

Then you may see the pathetic ones, the few who must remain in this roomy and sometimes gloomy abode while the rest of the world is making merry by the Yule fire. Mere is one who sighs as he hids goodbye to some who sighs as he hids goodbye to some hearty father, off to rejoin his wife and family. As the doors of the club swing to behind the retreating figure, he turns to the tape machine which, normally, is restlessly typing out news from all parts of the world. But the machine has nothing to say to him. For once it is silent. He looks at the fruit of its earlier labours, white slips of paper pinned upon a green barze. And let me suggest that if you are

The loung is so deserted that sounds can be heard coming from the servants' quarters beyond. Someone is laughing. In a club this noise is as unseemly as the sound of whistling in a church. The member breaks it by pressing the bell at the side of one of the two great fireplaces, and a waiter enters. "You're making a great din out there! Bring me a whisky and soda, there! Bring me a whisky and soda, be obtained strings of popcorn and

Traditionally, Christmas is the season when we think of the poor, and there are few so poor that they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they cannot find someone poorer than themselves into whose lives they can bring some happiness.

Minute Hints

Who can be grouchy at Christmastime and, like old Scrooge, mut-ter "humbug," when one is wrapping fruit of its carlier labours, white slips of paper pinned upon a green barze board. But here is nothing new. He has read all this news, such as it is in the evening newpapers, hours ago.

With a sigh, he saunters into the billiard room. Save for a single pale light, it is in darkness. The tables are not in use, and even the servant who acts as marker, is absent.

The door closes behind him with a thud which seems to echo through the building.

In the library, there is a rustle of a newspaper as he enters, and a odd head rising above the back of a big armchair, turns towards him. He re-ent of the club, and a manous bore.

By there the loneliness of the billiard room, better the oppressive emptiness of the lounge than the garrulity of this dreadful person.

Royal Securities Corporation, Limited, was incorporated in 1903 under the laws of the Province of Nova Scotia, and the first office of the Corporation was established in the City of Halifax.

In its earlier days, the Corporation's entire activities were devoted to the successful financing of Maritime Province enterprises, as well as certain West Indian and Cuban utilities in which Maritime investors are interested.

During the intervening period of twenty-three years, Royal Securities has grown to be one of the largest investment banking organizations in Canada, with completely equipped offices located in important financial centres throughout the Dominion.

In addition to taking a keen interest in the marketing of Maritime government and municipal securities, the Corporation has continued to be the leading investment banking house concerned with the financing of important industries in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Our offices in Halifax, Saint John, Charlottetown and Saint John's are equipped to render an all-round investment service to clients in their territories. The supplying of information and quotations on all types of securities is facilitated by our direct contact with markets in Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

where there's a will there's a way. At a little country house last Christmas an ingenious guest discovered that by opening another door it could be extended into the kitchen. After that, dancing round the kitchen table became the ambition of every couple. It began to be treated like a variation of the old game of musical chairs, for while it was considered quite proper to have one's description. The simplest way is to have these arranged on a buffet table so that guests may help themselves. If the simplest way is to have these arranged on a buffet table so that guests may help themselves. If the simplest way is to have these arranged on a buffet table so that guests may help themselves. If the dance room is cramped, the refreshment should be placed in a different room. Sometimes it is well to have two refreshment rooms—one where the men may smoke and share their drinks and another where the ladies may rest after their exertions. Proper cloak room accommodation and "make-up" facilities are also matters that will not escape the careful hostess.

turkey needs his memory freshened up a bit. It's surely an art any man may be proud of, to neatly and skillfully carve a roasted bird.

The placing of the turkey on the table is important. The head should be toward the left hand of the carver. This brings the drumsticks to the right and the side of the bird directly in front of the carver.

Insert the fork firmly over the breast bone at the highest point. Do not remove the fork until the carving is done.

First remove the whole leg, thigh and drumstick in one piece. To do this make a circular cut around the joint close to the body. With the blade of the knife press the leg back and cut through the ligaments, holding the thigh bone to the back. A quick little twist of the knife easily severs the joint. Are We Losing Dickensian Spirit

By SYDNEY DARK. "THhe ideal of comfort," says Mr. Chesterton, "belongs peculiarly to England; it belongs peculiarly to Christmas; above all, it belongs pre-eminently to Dickens." Mr. Chesterton goes on to explain that this English comfort is really "cosiness", and when one comes to think of it, there is no great difference between cosiness and stuffiness, the characteristic of the homes of most of us who live in little houses in which we love, particularly at Christmas time, to give large par

The Dickens idea of Christmas was something very private. Only the family sits down to dinner, but none of the family is outside the door. The strugfamily is outside the door. The strug-gling cousin and the rich uncle are both invited, and the struggling cousin is given the parson's nose. That is to emphasise Christmas equality. I do not forget the Christmas parties at Dingley Dell to which all sorts and conditions of people were invited. But it is Bob Cratchitt's Christmas party that it the real Dickens Christmas, the family party with the windows tightly shut, and the door safely locked, and outside world forgotten

GAINS AND LOSSES.

It is suggested, with not a little truth, that we are losing the Dickens spirit, the spirit of Merrie England re-vived by Dickens in the drabness of the nineteenth century. It would be interesting to compile a list of the gains and the losses of the past hundred years, and the result would show a tragically heavy payment for our crystal sets and you find no difficulty in believing it is quite possible to love everybody else. But the family is going. In Russia, the Bolshevists who, whatever else they are, are logical and ruthless, began to destroy the family as the first step in the destruction of Christian civilization. Children were promptly, taken from their parents. The whole idea of parental authority and responsibility was attacked. Without logic or revolution, the same thing is going on in England. The children of the well-to-do are rarely with their parents, even at holiday time. The children of the poor are taken from their parents by one local authority or another on the filmsiest excuse. Viic dren of the poor are taken from their parents by one local authority or another on the flimsiest excuse. Vilc housing makes decent family life impossible. The multiplication of amusements lures from the home. The working-class father goes to the football field on Christmas Day afternoon when he ought to be eating roast chestnuts, and, in defiance of all doctors, giving little bits to the baby. A man's entire outlook on the universe would be made clear by his answer to the question, "Is it better for the baby on Christmas afternoon to be dandled on his father's knee before a fire in a stuffy room and occasionally to be given nibbles of roasted chestnut, or to lie in a hygienic coi in a hygienic communal nursery carefully and perhaps drink a little more than they do when there is no they do when there is no more than they do when there is no the more than they do when there is no they do when there is no they do when they do when there is no the done has the chance of a second helping? Norway there is a pretty custom of providing a good dinner on Christmas Day for ail domestic animals. The farmers give their horses and cows an extra supply of fodder, while sheaves of corn and dishes of grain are put out in the yard for the benefit of the birds. When children in Holland hang up their stockings in readiness for the visit of Santa Claus (who, by the way, is there known as St. Nicholas), they place a carrot in them. This is done for the benefit of the horse on which the old gentleman rides when going from house to house with his sack of presents. When the rider sees that his faithful steed is thus remembered he is believed to become more kindly disposed himself, and to increase the number and value of his gifts. The family is indeed condemned by unpleasant modern phllosophers because it is irrational. But that is its splendor. We love the members of our family unreasonably, as God loves us.

Here are some actual statistics. One undred turkeys, 200 large plum pudlings, 3,000 mines pies, 3 barons of beef, 3 boars heads, 200 lbs. of grapes and 4,000 oranges were among the list of good things last Christmas on the Majestic, the largest ship in the world. In addition to these dainties Berengaria carried on a similar trip: 350 decks, 200 snipe, 400 grouse, 100 gecsc, 8,000 quail, 25 kegs of oysters, 5 turtles, 100 lbs. of cavaire, 15 calves, 500 bottles of wine and 600 bottles of I quors. Truly a magnificent larder! At the beginning of the voyage, the pa sengers usually form a committee amongst themselves, and work in con-junction with the ship's officers to arrange the many festivities. Their first thought is, of course, the child-ren on board—on one trip I rememren on hoard—on one trip I remember we carried 135 boys and girls. The passengers subscribe to a general fund to provide them with toys and gifts, to help them enjoy the traditional Christmas atmosphere. These presents can be bought at the barber's shop, but many of the seasoned travelers, like the ship's officers, purchase a collection of toys before embarking on the youage.

HOLLY AND MISLETOE.

The youthful passengers are always provided with a Christmas tree of their own, to which are fastened the gifts. The Chief Steward contributes a handsome supply of unusual dainties and the baker supplies some toffee of his own manufacture.
On Christmas Eve, the passengers' committee are busy completing and re-hearsing the arrangements for the morrow, the ship's carol singers are enlivening the various public rooms and corridors with selections from their repetoirs, and the sailors are busy putting the finishing touches to the deco-

Christmas Lights And Their Symbolism

By P. M. CROF TS-MOLLAN.

THE children's night—the Christ mas Tree, and all its wondrous candle lights! How eyes brighten at the thought, and sighs are breathed from little hearts-waiting for the psychic moment of the illumination.

When the Prince Consort came to live in England, his first thoughts were to do all that lay in his power, for the happiness, as well as the prosperity of the subjects of Queen Victoria. And in carrying out this resolve, he thought of the happiness of the children of the realm, as well as that of their seniors.

It was he who first introduced the | ing year in the following curious man-

It was he who first introduced the continental custom of the Christmas tree into these lands, which has now become so dear to the youth of all parts of the Empire as well as to those of the United States of America. It is a happy sight to watch the children standing round the huge holly all aglow, with eager looks in their little eyes, and expectation in their little hearts.

But in spite of lamps and gas, the tree would only remain a dark pageant, were it not for the many colored candles, which are deftly fastened all over it, and which, when lighted up, make it for the young people a thing of beauty, and a joy—for that night at least!

The candle was used for more purposes than to give light in the centuries that are passed; and in the early Saxon times its light was sometimes a signal of life or death. Such was the case when on one occasion one of the Ratriarch Job—almost burst into his presence with the words:

"Sir, I have bad news. A number of your subjects have rebelled, and taken up arms against you. What can be done?"

It was surely a moment of anxiety.

There is a curious and romantle hister was therefore a prominent family, which is a curious and romantle histers we have for a prominent family, which is a curious and romantle histers we have for a prominent family, which is a proportioned for the next year to the applicants each drew an apple from a bag, and so the land marked with the same marks as those on the apple were apportioned for the next year to the applicants each drew an apple from a bag, and so the land, and similar marks were made upon a certain number of apples. It was surely a moment of anxiety, but the Sovereign, summoning his principal advisers, took such measures that he had soon an efficient army under his command, and with it he speedily overpowered the rebels, who left many of their dead behind them, as they fled to take refuge in the mountains and the forests.

Then the king—who was no blood-thirsty vandal, issued the following proclamation: "To make known my desire to show mercy and clemency even to my rebellious subjects, I will put a candle in my window, and proclaim that all of them who come in before the candle is burned out, shall be freely forgiven."

RELIGIOUS LIGHTS.

There is a curious and romantic history about a prominent family, which has come down to our own times. This family rose to rank and position through the diligence and forethought of an ancestor who gave his earnest attention to founding and consolidating a huge tallow-candle business. Working steadily, he soon found a ready and receptive market. Wealth flowed in, and the merchant rose in position and influence, which enabled him to give his son an education among the rough the rose of the land.

The young man passed through college, and then entered the army, where he rose in rank. But ever the odor of tallow seemed to haunt his susceptibilities, like an intruding spectre. He dreaded the very name, and the rose in rose in the rose in rank. But ever the odor of tallow seemed to haunt his susceptibilities, like an intruding spectre. He dreaded the very name, and the rose in ro riched with a carving of the Holy Trinity, on top of which three candles shall be burnt, on Sundays, and feast days, so long as the means of the Gild allow it."

Alfred the Great, who came to the throne in A. D. 871, had candles made with rings and belts of different breadths and colors; by burning which down to any of these marks, he knew he had employed long enough at whatever business he was then engaged in. But as the wind often produced serious irregularities in his measurements, he was constrained to think out another remedy and so he contrived special kinds of lanterns to obviate this difficulty.

But although Alfred, and even Saxon kings before him, set the example of candles, it is surprising to read that so many centuries after them, in the reign of Henry the Third, tallow can-

RELIGIOUS LIGHTS.

The general use of candles at Christmas time, and the feast which takes the name of Candlemas, was instituted in the very early centuries of our era, with contempt. He determined to munish the young man's pride and trace the game of Frogs.

Here is a good variation of musical Alberta, Canada, by P. Burns, Alberta cattle baron. Arrange the chairs as for that game or in two rows, back to back, so that there is a seat for all but one player, who is called the Horseman When everyone is scated, the Horseman passes along and gives each player a name which has something to do with horsemanship (if preferred players can make their own choice). For example, one player might be the bridle, another the stirrup, another the saddle, and others the whip, reins, bit, and so on.

When all are named, the Horseman ontinues his walk and calls out the name of one of the sitters. Say, "Whip." That player rises at once, takes hold of the Horseman's coattails, and both march on round the

As each player is called, he hangs on to the coat-tails of the player When all have been summoned, the Horseman starts running round the empty chairs, everyone hanging on be-hind and running after him. After circling the chairs a time or two the Horseman shouts, "Crack!" and sits Horseman shouts, "Crack!" and sits down on one of the chairs; where-upon his followers scramble for the other seats whose positions must not be changed. One player, of course, is left standing, which means that he is out of the game. A chair is then removed, and the game continues as before, until only the Horseman and one player remain.

King George's Yuletides

"A RIGHT, royal time" is the popular way of describing a joyous Christmas. It is a phrase which smacks of bounteous feasts and hearty fun; of boars' heads, barons of beef, of minstrels and jesters. Yet strange to relate, it would not be possible to describe many Christmases spent by the King and Queen "as right, royal times." Too often tragedy or state troubles have intervened about Christmastide to prevent

This year, however, there is the promise of a Christmas without a shadow of any kind for King George and Queen Mary. It is not surprising, therefore, that their Majesties have been looking forward to this, the seventeenth Christmas of their reign, with special pleasure. In some ways it will be unique.

This year's Royal Christmas party will be the most interesting family gathering since the days of Queen Vic-toria. All the Princes will be there. From the Prince of Wales to Prince the full enjoyment of the festive sea son.

From the Prince of Wales to Prince George, they have all kept their high spirits, and this will be the first time for many a long day that they have all been together. Princess Mary will be there with her husband, and there is a possibility that not only the two sons of the Princess but also the daughter of the Duchess of York will be present to complete three generabe present to complete three genera-tions of the Royal family.

OTHER CHRISTMASES.

For the first time, too, the King and Queen will be able to have the yule-tide we all desire. A keen sense of loss, consequent to the death of Edward VII, hung over the first Christmas after King George came to the throne. Inevitable changes were in progress, many of which were painful. The Queen-Mother was not yet reconstituted the painful ciled to her altered position, and there was tense anxiety as to the effect of was ther sorrow upon her health. No one could be festive in the fine old English way. Her Majesty has been heard to confess that the happiest yuletide of the three before the war was that of 1911. In that year Alexandra Day was instituted and a new zest for livation was instituted and a new zest for livation was thus given to the Queen-liament, who has been recuperating on the island of Ischia, Italy. He and his dependently, had the idea of devoting a great deal of time and labor to augmenting the good work of that the interval of the first of the fi a great deal of time and labor to augmenting the good work of that movement by a personal round of the hospitals and by special gifts. Queen Mary spends hours every day before Christmas, in visiting hospitals, or making plans for a yule-morning sur-prise. On Christmas morning scores prise. On Christmas morning scores of sufferers had a gift from the Queen, with a message from the Royal hand. California experienced one of the worst football campaigns in many sea-sons. The Golden Bears won but three of their nine games. They count ed 106 points to 167 for the foe. A QUEEN PACKING PARCELS NO .300 HITTER

Who can forget the many yuletides Who can forget the many yuletides of the years of war? Family parties, were, alas, impossible. Thoughts wandered over the seven seas, and into the trenches, and could not fix on festivities. We shall always remember with pride that the King and Queen shared those yuletides with their people. For three of the seasons they cut out the good round of porties and pleasures. one .800 clubber last season. Flagstead and Jacobson topped the Beantown usual round of parties and pleasures, yet took special care to maintain the customary gifts to the tenantry and servants, while the King paid welcome surprise visits to his soldiers, and took a kindly interest in their Christmas a kindly interest in their Christmas fare, the Queen packed parcels. For five days before one war Christmas, Her Majesty sat with paper and string among piles of seasonable presents—her own messengers of remembrance to hundreds of wives and mothers of fighting men. Even when the thers of fighting men. Even when the thers of fighting men. Even when the victorious end was reached Fate robbed their Majesties of a completely happy yuletide. In 1919 they were watching with tender concern the frailty of their youngest son, little Prince John, who passed away in the following month. Over the following Christmastide hung the shadow of the following month. Over the following Christmastide hung the shadow of the painful illness and subsequent death of Princess Margaret of Connaught.

At last, or so it would seem, the shadows have passed. The King and Queen have the faith to believe so. Hence this is to be the merriest Christ-mas the Royal Family have enjoyed BRITISH GIFTS Their Majestles are giving a record-number of gifts, and it is worthy to note that all are of British production. The King has made his selection from The King has made his selection from samples sent to the palace for his inspection, but there are also many items which are the outcome of notes His Majesty has made of things seen during his visits to trade exhibitions during the year. Queen Mary began her yuletide shopping as far back as July, and her clever hands have been busy too. She has prepared quite a stock of garments and delightful woolly playthings for little patients in three hospitals, and for the children of Royal employes.

Royal employes.

Not all of these gifts will go out in advance. Their Majesties share the traditional and popular ideal of a truly happy Christmas Day, as being without formalities, and they will be able to indulge it this year. On Christmas morning the Queen will bestow her useful gifts of winter clothing with her own hands, and the King will take his morning walk to chat with his take his morning walk to chat with his tenants and workers. Thereafter they christmas. For both the King and Queen it will be the happiest day of the year, for, unless some crisis arises, it is the one day on which no business intrudes, and the Royal home because like every other happy home in comes like every other happy home in

CAROL SINGING

Divine service opens the day, a service in which the old English carols are heard and in which is included a special prayer for all homes throughout the Empire.
Christmas dinner at Sandringham this year will be something in the nature of a family farewell to the Duke and Duchess of York who, soon afterwards, will leave for their visit to Australia. There will, however, be no note of sadness in the farewell. The Duke is eagerly anticipating this ex-Duke is eagerly anticipating this experience, anxious to emulate his elder brother's service to the Empire. On Christmas Day, in the Royal circle, exalted rank seems to fall away. Here is just a happy British household whose members are enjoy-ing themselves in homely fashion and without the restraint which the limelight of publicity imposes.
On the Boxing Day it is different. On the boxing Day it stands of the Commonial festivities must begin. State duties once again claim attention. That is one reason why their Majesties do not allow the family Christmas party to extend far into the Christmas party to extend far into the common of the com night. There is no "midnight oil" for

Terry Malone Proves There's a Santa Claus =

The one thing that, sooner or later, concerned every one was that Billy Frothingham should keep his faith in Santa Claus. As Billy w s five years old, and an iconoclast of nine had been trying to persuade him that Santa Claus did not exist, this was of the first importance. There were obstacles, however. Such as, nor example, the wreck of a freight train, that piled up traffic for hours on a great trunk line, and drove the operating staff of three railroads almost mad before they got passenger trains going around a hundred-mile detour. Such, as, again, the temporary obtuseness as, again, the temporary obtuseness of Patrolman Terence Malone, of the Nineteenth Precinct—although for the trouble he caused Terence made noble amends, as is to be shown. Moreover, the criminal law, which is not clastic, had to be considered. Only it wasn't. But enough had been anti-

Pudge and Billy Frothingham were old friends. Pudge had known Billy for about four and pine-tents.

for about four and nine-tenths of Billy's five years, and the friendship was hereditary, because Billy's father, Jack Frothingham, had been in college with Pudge. And there were who said, too, that Pilly's mother had hesitated quite a wille between seek and Pudge, and that this wis the reason Pudge had remained a buckler, though he hadn't gone in at all for being one of the cynical, grouphy sort. chy sort. Anyhow, there wasn't a family in all America with which Pudge, exiled from his own home, and condemned to a solitary Christmas in New York, would rather have cele-brated than the Frothinghams.

But he didn't know there were any Frothinghams in New York. Jack and his wife and Billy usually spent while he was lamenting his lonely es-

But this year business had nated such a trip, just as it had they were so wretchedly different. would have improved everything, he about the wreck and Jack's business would have improved everything, he about the wreck and Jack's business would have improved everything. errand to the West, and all the other things.

while he was lamenting his lonely estate in the lobby of the Santa Clara, on Christmas Eve, Billy was sleeping soundly, perhaps three miles away as the taxicab flies, and his mother was sitting at the window, wondering why the deuce Jack didn't get home, and worrying just a little, already, about Billy's Christmas. She didn't know about that freight wreck, nor about the frantic telegrams Jack had been sending. And it was getting later all the time.

About ten o'clock Pudge couldn't thought.

For the twentieth time he racked his brain to think of some one upon whom he could descend for the next they were to some through what to them was simply an orgy of conventing why the deuce Jack didn't get home, and worrying just a little, already, about Billy's Christmas. She didn't know about that freight wreck, nor about the frantic telegrams Jack had been sending. And it was getting later all the time.

In the lobby of the Santa Clara the winted thing he racked his brain to think of some one upon whom he could descend for the next they were to some then through what to they were to some through what to they were the sad simply.

had been sending. And it was getting later all the time.

In the lobby of the Santa Clara sat Pudge chewing on the second cigar he had lighted since dinner. He had been annoyed, of course, at first, when he had found that ne must pass up all the Christmas fun at home. No one who has any sort of home ties at all spends Christmas in a hotel from choice. But he hadn't realized quite how bad it was going to be. Pudge was a good deal of an optimist, really, but the Santa Clara was—depressing. It mightn't have been so bad if the hotel had ignored the fact that it was Christmas Eve altogether. The management wasn't wise enough to do that, however. It rubbed Christmas in, so to speak.

Around the big gold and onyx pillars dreary, pessimistic bell boys had strung festoons of the sort of greens that look as if they hadn't been properly dusted off since last Christmas, in the disillusionment the Santa bar was, but it did help to finish the disillusionment the Santa bar was, but it did help to finish the disillusionment the Santa bar was, but it did help to finish the disillusionment the Santa bar was, but it did help to finish the disillusionment the Santa bar was looking for it, and maybe he had some vague idea of emulating the heroes of some of the Christmas stories he had read. He was nursing a secret, ashamed sort of hope that hereos of some of the Christmas stories he had read. He was nursing a secret, ashamed sort of hope that hereos of some of the Christmas stories he had read. He was nursing a secret, ashamed sort of hope that hereos of some of the Christmas stories he had read. He was nursing a secret, ashamed sort of hope that hereos of some of the Christmas stories he had read. He was nursing a secret, ashamed sort of hope that hereos of some of the Christmas to end of the proper one. He got bluer and bluer.

The shops ought to have been better, but they weren't. The aisles were full enough, and a lot of the people, of course, were happy and cheerful. But time after time he looked into the faces of pale, worn g and brought up against a couple so that hey contain. At one end of the live some bored electricians were street with bell boys carrying bundles for them, and reminded him to do it.

There weren't many people around. Only the Santa Clara's regulars were spending Christmas, it seemed. There were a few old gentlemen, one of whom growled portentiously when a bell boy made him move to get at a pillar and then went back, as soon as he found another chair, to the stock market report. Worst of all, there were a few children, and Pudge decided that parents who would so arrange their lives as to make their children spend Christma in a hotel ought to be boiled in oil. Dreadful children they were, who came in from the street with bell boys carrying bundles for them, and reminded him gone to a theatre. He felt that it couldn't very well be worse. He would n't go back to the Santa Clara. He dipped into a restaurant or two, but the efforts of Broadway to be gay seemed ghastly. Broadway, he decided, might do very well with New Year's Eve, but when it tried to embellish Christmas it tackled a contract too big for it. And so he just wander-ed around. He distributed dimes and quarters pretty liberally, where they seemed likely to do some good. And just before midnight, he saw a girl, in Forty-second Street, looking wistfully into the window of a store that sold jewelry—cheap jewelry, at that.

Moved by an impulse of giving, he performed the madness of addressing her. He wanted to buy her a Christ-mas present, he said. But just then he young man emerged from the adjoining cigar store, and the passing crowd paused to enjoy a scene that brought no enjoyment at all to Pudge. The final—and charitable—judgment was that he was drunk or mad, or both. But it may be that the breadth strain the young man's desire to as-

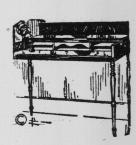

Pudge hurried east, simply because most of the crowd was going the other way, and reached the Grand Central Station calling himself choice solace he sought at a certain, select place he knew, one of the drinks he had been unjustly accused of imbibing already. It was his first of the evening, as a matter of fact, and it didn't taste right, because he felt so utterly friendless and forlorn. But as he turned away, after finishing it, Jack Frothingham, whom he supposed to be hundreds of miles distant, emerged from a telephone booth, perspiring crimson. He looked like a man in

On, Christmas in New York was a long way from being as bad as Pudge Morgan thought it was! His mood had grown worse, and he was looking at everything through dark glasses.

He almost wished now, unat he had gone to a theatre. He felt that it sed him so that he missed the infinite a toy store, and got a regular Santa human. He wouldn't let me explain, forty-seven wires, telling her to rustle

"If you're not above running a taxical, you needn't stop at burglary," said Pudge scornfully. He turned to his friend.
"I might as well go to jall as home—without the goods," said Frothingham.
"And me—I'd rather go to jall than spend Christmas in the Santa Clara," said Pudge firmly. "Oh, 'twas Christmas on the Island!" he began to chant. "Remember that, Jack?"
Frothingham grinned feebly. This was the first line of a ditty popular in colleges, but not, ordinarily, sung in polite society. Between them they finished verse and chorus, to the great edification of Hank, who was also cheered by a glance at the meter. "But, look here, gents," said Hank. "Why pick on White's? Why not take some store with less class to it?"
"No," said Pudge, very firmly. "Pike's Peak or bust! Besides it's safer. If you ever want to rob a bank, Hank, pick out the biggest, prosperousest one you can find—because they won't be expecting you. It's the little, dinky, two-by-four joint in a side street that worries about burglars, and taxes its precautions accordingly. The big fellows don't think any one would have the nerve to tackle them."
"I side with Hank, though," said Frothingham. "They'll have a watchman and burglar alarms and all sorts. hings—"

It was a neighbor who roused the alarm whilst Rumble was undressing.

"Mr. Rumble, your cab's afre!" came the voice, and Rumble hurriedly ran downstairs and down the garden to the garage, whilst his wife looked on aghast from a back window as the flames shot up, casting a warm, orange lames where work solvested in frosted chocolate may be used in frosted chocolate before the customer complains?

"But some hired you and saw nothing?"

"Yes, one or two. They must have been blind," replied Rumble.

"Not at all" corrected Mr. Martin.

"If these things are seen at all they are only seen by certain people who have some kind of affinity with the subject—but there, it's most difficult to explain, most difficult."

"So I should think," agreed Rumble.

This is a very old game, but is always a very great favorite. The more the players, the greater the fun. The way to play it is as follows: The players sit in a circle and begin to count in turn, but when the number 7 or any number in which the figure 7 or any multiple of 7 is reached, they say "Buzz," instead of whatever the number may be. As, for instance, supposing the players have counted up to 12, This is a very old game, but is al-"So I should think," agreed Rumble heartily. "But what about me and my cab. "Very good," replied Mr. Martin.
"And if you're sharp you may be home in time to wish your wife a Merry Christmas. I suppose you live near here?"

"Buzz" at the proper time, he is out. The game then starts over again with the remaining players, and so it continues until there is but one person remaining. If great care is taken the numbers can be counted up to 70, which, according to the rules before mentioned, would, of course, be called particle.
