

CANADIAN EX-M. P. TALKS PLAINLY TO PEOPLE OF U. S.

Canada Left to Fight Against Article X.—Anglo-Saxon Must Lead World.

A message of Canada's friendship for the United States, a presentation of the Dominion's problems, and an exposition of her progress, were given to the Canadian Club of Boston this week by E. M. McDonald, former member of parliament from Pictou county, N. S.

"There should be if not a definite yet an understood alliance or federation of all Anglo-Saxon people in the world," he declared. "May we not work together in amity and union, so that all principles for which we have stood may prevail throughout the world. What the world needs today is leadership animated by Anglo-Saxon ideals."

Canadian feeling toward the part the U. S. played in the war was also discussed by the speaker.

"Today there are people on our side who say, 'The United States was tardy,' he said, 'and on your side there are those who assert, 'America won the war,' but when your extremists say this they are not accurate at all. Remember the effort and sacrifice of our Canadian boys who, not with conscription, but voluntarily, went out 400,000 strong and held the line at Ypres, staying the effort of the Hun, and preventing his success."

"On the other hand, your performances at Chateau Thierry, and in the Argonne are splendidly recognized and commented upon in Canada by those whose hearts were really in the war. All honor should be given to the U. S.; but for her great aid the war would not have ended when it did."

"The end of the war brought a responsibility to your nation. Your country has a traditional desire to be free from participation in the affairs of Europe. But the events of the war compel you into a position from which you cannot escape. With your virility, your great wealth and your powerful position has absolutely changed since the war."

Canada's real concern at the Geneva Conference to abide by the provisions of Article Ten of the League of Nations covenant, and her assumption of the British navy, were mentioned by Mr. McDonald as problems of the Dominion that have been solved.

"After all your struggles as to Article Ten," he said, "it was left to Canada to declare for the elimination of that article."

He said that although the Dominion's share in the British navy indicated a desire for a widening autonomy, it did not mean a lessening of devotion to the British Empire "to which we are proud to belong, to which we always hope to belong." The Dominion must still consider the burden of her debt and the railroad problem, he said.

Canada and the United States had come closer together than they realized in the last few years, Mr. McDonald asserted.

"There's always a large delegation of Canadians at the games that decide the championship of your baseball leagues," he continued. "Your books are in our shops, and your court decisions are eagerly watched by our lawyers."

The position of Quebec in the Dominion had been misrepresented in the last ten years, he declared. The task of assimilating the French-Canadian population had been difficult, but he added that "no province occupies the position of Quebec, where wealth is safe and property secure. All feeling of bigotry has gradually disappeared, and it seems as if all men of all parties are vying to forget all feeling of racial division."

Thousands of men and women, broken down in health and vigor, owe their recovery to the famous brain and nerve remedy Phosphonal. In every part of Canada reside those who can attest to its benefits. PENSIONS AND DISABILITY. Brantford Expositor.—In the main the Canadian pensions are adequate. For the widows and dependents of the men who died overseas, they are of such degree as to bring little complaint. It is the returned, partially disabled veteran who, in special cases, suffers an injustice under which, assuredly, the people of Canada do not wish him to labor. A man disabled from his normal occupation, which disability also bars him from any work such as is now available, should at least be given special consideration in abnormal times.

THE NEW AND OLD Treatment of the Delinquent and the Dependent Classes.

(Halifax Echo.)

The recommendations of the Canadian Mental Hygiene Committee after their survey of Nova Scotia, are exactly in line with the best modern thought in dealing with the sub-normal, whether delinquent or not. The dawn of a new day in the treatment of delinquent and dependent classes has reddened the eastern sky of civilization for some years past. Only those who are asleep in their minds and souls have failed to notice it.

Jails are no longer places of torture or of debating idleness. Offenders against the law are no longer creatures of a race other than human. They are simply mentally or morally diseased persons, and their places of detention are hospitals for the mind and the soul, or both, as the case may demand. One of the greatest boons for this sort of sick person is work suited to his physical and mental condition, and no more baneful thing could happen to such a person than to be kept in idleness, brooding over fancied wrongs or planning further mischief.

The world is indebted to the war for the revival of the gospel of the salvation of mankind. Many a shell-shocked broken bit of humanity has been restored to normal living through the training of eye, hand, brain to do something new and different. Human delinquents are victims either of the sins of others or themselves, and in a great many cases can be worked back to sane and moral living through the salvation of work suited to their capacity. Of all the varieties of work yet tried out in the sporadic efforts to treat delinquents as real human beings, none has been so effective for so great a number, as working in the soil. It recalls the old fable of Antaeus, who in his struggle, gained fresh strength every time he touched the earth. Man is essentially a land animal, and the wholesome influence of cultivating the earth from which he sprang and to which he must return, is natural and undeniable.

For this reason jails and prisons should never be located within city limits. Sojourn there should not be regarded as "drainage vile," but rather as being treated in a hospital, designed to cure the diseased mind and heal the sick soul. And if this be true of real delinquents, how much more essential must it be to the feeble-minded, the mentally and morally irresponsible are concerned? So far Nova Scotia has no record in regard to this class of which she can be proud. That will no longer be true if she finds enlightened cooperation enough to enable her to complete the Survey programme.

Those who have given most attention to this matter, realize also the necessity of establishing a psychiatric clinic as one of the most effective and urgent first steps. Only through the agency of such a clinic could it be definitely determined just who among the delinquent and backward would be fit candidates for institutional treatment, which ones are capable of earning a living in the outside world, and which could be safely left to the care of their own families. The value of such service to the province would more than offset the comparatively slight cost of $3,000 for its maintenance for one year. Out of a population of nearly half a million such a sum could be subscribed without it being felt. If only 6,000 people in Nova Scotia contributed fifty cents each, the money could be obtained in less than two weeks. So there can be no question of cost to interfere with the founding and maintaining of such a clinic. Nova Scotia has at last come to the place where she wants her defective citizens properly cared for by her effective ones. It is a big step forward, and nothing should be allowed to halt her progress.

Minard's Liniment For Colds, Etc. DIVORCE MADE EASY. (San Francisco Argonaut.)

Here is the divorce proctor for Seattle, who says right out in the open meeting that "We have nothing but a system of trial marriage in this state. Many persons marry five or six times, and some others ten or twelve times before they settle down to the humdrum life." It seems that the State of Washington has been quietly forging ahead in the divorce business. Hitherto we have supposed that Reno held the balance of the divorce trade, but Washington has simply beaten Reno out of the field. It just shows what our progressive coast states can do when they sit up and take notice. Reno granted 991 divorces, or three a day, during the first eleven months of last year. But Washington granted 2,430, or 7.2 a day, during the same period. Energy, enterprise, and ambition have crowned the northern state with a deserved pre-eminence. Washington seems to have courted the success that has come to her. She has the most attractive divorce laws in the country. All that you have to do is to express a wish to be divorced from your husband or your wife, as the case may be, and the decree is made absolute on the spot. Almost any reason will do if the judge has a fellow-feeling for you and wants to help and not hinder, to boost and not knock. All the statu-

5c. a Day $1.50 A MONTH FOR Hood's Sarsaparilla

The best family medicine treatment that will purify your blood. Small dose after each meal. Economical and efficient. A month's supply in every bottle. More Than This. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and assimilation, and makes food taste good. A wonderful remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, catarrh, to build up after the flu, grip, and fevers. A word to the wise is sufficient. Take Hood's and only Hood's. Hood's Pills, small doses, a mild laxative; larger, an active cathartic.

Many causes for divorce have been swept away in Washington, where they have what they call a blanket proviso by which the judge may accept any reason that happens to look good to him. It is true that there is a residence clause in the Washington law by which an applicant must live in the state for one year before he can apply for a divorce, but the law can easily be circumvented by becoming the nominal tenant of a dwelling and then going wherever you wish until the year has expired. Then, too, there is a law that forbids divorced persons from re-marrying within six months, but that, too, is easily circumvented by means of a trip to British Columbia.

HAD TO EAT WITH THE DOG

Young Wife Says Husband's Parents Were Pro-German and Beat Her.

(N. Y. Times)

That she was compelled to share her food with a dog, the food being placed on a plate on the floor, was one of the cruelties which Mrs. Emma J. Helm testified were practiced on her by her husband's parents, Frederick B. Helm, in an action for the annulment of her marriage before Justice Faber in the Queens County Supreme Court yesterday. Justice Faber granted the application and directed that Helm should pay his wife $15 a week alimony for the support of herself and her sixteen months old child. The source of the trouble in the family, Mrs. Helm testified, was that the Helms were German sympathizers and they were cruel to her as soon as they learned that she had a brother in the American army. Mrs. Helm was married in October, 1918, when she was 16 years old. Being a minor she had to bring the action through a guardian. She said that her husband is a chauffeur and after their marriage they went to live with his parents in Woodhaven. Her husband, she said, beat her twenty times. He never gave her any money until the day she left his home in June, 1920, and he only gave her one dress and coat during their entire married life. Her father-in-law she declared, attacked her one day while she was washing the baby's clothes and beat her with a bucket.

A check for $50 payable at the Bank of Montreal was picked up outside the Imperial Theatre last evening.

Y. W. P. A. REORGANIZED AS CHAPTER OF I. O. O. F.

After five years of splendid patriotic service as an association the Young Women's Patriotic Association was reorganized as a chapter of the I. O. O. F. at the fifth annual meeting last evening in the G. W. V. A. rooms. The same motto, "Not for myself, but for God and the King" was used, and the faithful officers were installed in different offices. Miss Alice Fairweather, retiring president, was elected regent by acclamation. Mrs. E. Atherton Smith, organizing secretary, was present and officiated. Several letters of greetings were read after the secretary, Miss Frances Alward, gave her report. She spoke of the efficient service rendered by Miss Fairweather, and said that the sum of $131.95 had been received through the work of the ushers at the Imperial Theatre. Miss Upham, convener of the canteen committee, was complimented on her work and which has netted the association the sum of $476.88. In reviewing the work of the last five years, Miss Alward stated that the association had earned $10,924.57, with which it

WAR SECRET OUT

The German Intelligence Department were notified as to how the Allies were able to transport hundreds of thousands of HORSES and MULES from America to the war zone with practically no loss, even during the stormy winter months. It was noticed that a lump of ENGLISH ROCK SALT was placed in the feeding trough at the head of each animal and the information is now forthcoming that the wonderful tonic properties of this salt mined in its natural state kept the horses in the best of health not withstanding the hardships which they were subjected to.

The treasurer, Miss Shortt, submitted a satisfactory financial statement. Mrs. E. Atherton Smith gave an eloquent address, and a vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Smith and Miss Fairweather.

The election of officers for the chapter resulted as follows: Regent, Miss Alice Fairweather; first vice-regent, Miss Charlotte Dodge; second vice-regent, Miss Alice Hatch; recording secretary, Miss Frances Alward; Echoes secretary, Miss Bolton; educational secretary, Miss Irene Barber; treasurer, Miss Shortt; standard-bearer, Miss Winifred Upham; councillors, the Misses Sheldon, Sandall, Harriet Smith, Collins and Pauline Baird.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. E. Atherton Smith and Miss Alice Fairweather in a few impressive words thanked the new chapter for the confidence placed in her and promised to do her best as regent. She spoke feelingly of the loyalty, reliability, sincerity and self-sacrifice of the members of the former Y. W. P. A. and asked that they carry on the same traditions as members of the I. O. O. F.

Chief among these was "The Big Event" cafe which had been operated by Jack Johnson, one time heavyweight champion of the world.

Some days he has a thousand automobiles to watch—busy days, those are, like the Fourth of July, when the estimates placed the number who visited the resort at 100,000.

All set, he repeats, as he spins the wheel, and a dozen look on anxiously to see where it is to stop.

Women Play in Casino. All over the place it is the same. There are, or at least there were when I visited Tia Juna, a total of seventy games in the Casino.

Whiskey that nobody ever heard of before could be had at 2 cents a drink; the brands that were standard in the United States before the war were 35 cents, for three for $1.

Women stood at the bar along with the men. Most of them drank whiskey with ginger ale, in highball form, some preferred gin drinks and they could be had, too.

At the rear of the place there was a dance hall, with a negro orchestra of four men, and a piano.

Set among a series of souvenir postcard shops and "hot-dog" joints, there were more pretentious structures, also of frame, with lurid signs on the front.

Employers' Secretary Has Pronounced Views

Says Wages Must Drop—Choice is Longer Hours, Less Money, or Increased Production.

(Toronto Globe.)

There must be a reduction in wages and an increase in the hours of labor or a material increase in production during the present working day before the wheels of industry can hum again.

Thus, after giving what he believed to be the cause of the present trade depression, James G. Merrick, secretary of the Employers' Association of Canada, concisely summed up his reply to the demands of President Tom Moore of the Trades and Labor Congress, and other international trade union leaders, that there should be no wage reductions.

Mr. Merrick charged trade union leaders with only "skimming" the problem. Industry During War.

The basis of our present depression is not a reflex of Canadian trade conditions at all. It has its origin in war production, and has been caused mainly through the advantageous position of the United States and Canada to the theatre of war," said Mr. Merrick. "The almost total inclusion in the European armies of the man power of these countries and the absorption of all others, including women, into work, centered on the production of munitions of war, placed Canada, and particularly the United States, in the position of not only supplying the world's trade, which was deprived of its productive centres of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Germany and Austria, while being forced at the same time to produce to the highest degree to supply foodstuffs and munitions for the conflicting armies."

Mr. Merrick pointed out that the re-ent strong enough to fight the award, although the government was powerful enough, but politically very weak. Mr. Merrick attacked building trades unions, whose members, he said, had legislated themselves out of work by raising wages and restricting production, and criticized employers of the industry for their short-sighted policies.

Big Credit Balances.

The termination of the war, Mr. Merrick said, found the United States and Canada with big credit balances, and debtor countries unable to discharge them long with consequent reduction of their currencies as compared with the United States and Canadian dollar. European countries were faced, in trading with America, with enhanced prices, due to increased wages caused by war necessity, and percentage advance through the depreciation of their currency.

The Open Shop. Mr. Merrick was not greatly concerned over the open shop campaign, which the American Federation of Labor is now preparing to fight. He said Canadian employers had contended for and maintained the open shop for twenty years.

The open shop is no new system of industrial arrangement," said he. "It is the natural basis of employment. Any one is privileged to work without the creed or race. No one is compelled to pay tribute for the security of his employment. The open shop is the natural and fundamental basis of employment for the individual or collection of individuals."

The Fair Wage Clause. Mr. Merrick criticized the fair wage clause of government work, which is the centre of the dispute between the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company and metal trades unions, on the ground that fair wages were generally fixed by political expediency. Governments were not as responsible for their actions as private corporations were to their investors.

The McAdoo award to United States railroad workers, which was adopted on Canadian railroads, is responsible for present difficulties more than any other influence, according to Mr. Merrick. He did not know of an organization at present strong enough to fight the award, although the government was powerful enough, but politically very weak.

HAS STUDENTS FROM FORTY-TWO COUNTRIES

The present year marks the largest enrollment of foreign-born students in the history of the University of Chicago.

There are 403 such students, representing forty-two countries. Russia leads with 100, while China comes second with 75. Canada and the Philippines follow next in order with 44 and 39 respectively.

Wallace Heckman, business manager of the University of Chicago, reports that recently the University has received additions to its funds from donors who have made the University trustee of large amounts, the income of which, or a portion of it, is to be expended for the benefit of specific persons during their lifetime, and which, at their death, become part of the University endowment.

MONUMENT TO EUGENE FIELD

Writer of Childhood Poems Started as Newspaper Man — Noteworthy Humorist But Looked Like a Tramp.

(Toronto Mail and Empire) Chicago is about to erect a monument to one of her most distinguished sons the late Eugene Field; and we dare say that when the announcement was made a lot of Chicago people thought it was intended to honor Marshall Field. In the twenty-five years that have elapsed since the death of this gifted poet and humorist, a new generation has arisen, knowing little about these precious poems of childhood which made Field famous. Yet there can hardly be many persons above fourteen years of age who understand the English language and who have not heard "Little Boy Blue" or at least that little classic "A Peach". They have been reared on thousands of concert platforms, but we dare say that most people who have enjoyed hearing them never troubled to enquire as to the authorship. The "Child's Garden of Verse" of Stevenson is better known than the equally delightful verses of Eugene Field. According to literary standards the gems of the Stevenson collection may outshine the gems of Field, but we do not believe they are capable of bringing more joy to the hearts of children and the parents of little children, and this is the safest test after all.

A Famous "Columnist." Like many other writers who have attained fame, Field began as a newspaper reporter. His rhyming gift and his humor led to his development into what is nowadays called "columnist", an abominable word that is supposed to describe a writer who conducts a column of verse and humor, mainly contributed. The more successful it is, the less work the man who gets paid for it does. Columnists like F. P. A. of the New York Tribune and Don Marquis of the Sun are clever enough and well liked enough to have established authors and poets send them scraps. Not long ago a Chicago columnist said that he received on an average more than a hundred letters a day from persons who desired to have one of their witticisms published in the column. It is supposed to set a seal on a person's pretensions as wit to have a joke printed in these columns. People strive for it as for a knighthood.

A Bohemian. Well, as we were saying, Field was one of the earliest and best of the columnists. Those who have followed him have been as witty, but none of them could write verse like Field. For twelve years he conducted his "Sharp and Flats" in the Chicago Daily News. In the next column, George Ade was just breaking in as a humorist. Some of Field's poems were first published in his column. They were widely copied and eventually appeared in book form. He belonged to the Bohemian generation of newspaper writers, now extinct, and gave the casual impression of being extremely lazy. He never started work until late in the afternoon but then worked with great facility. The morning he spent in dropping in on his colleagues and other friends who might be likely to afford a suggestion, and in digesting what he had read in the paper. Anyone meeting him quite at this time of day would suppose he was a sort of a tramp. Later, he would return to his desk, and turn out one of the brightest columns in the country. Yet he was a hard worker. His poems were composed usually at night, or rather in the early morning, when he lay in bed. His columns are said to have hardly needed revision. His poems, however, he polished with the greatest care, although often he deliberately left in minor flaws which he thought would enhance their charm or give them a greater appeal to the youngsters for whom he wrote. The reading public thinks of him chiefly as a poet, but his associates knew him quite as well as a humorist and practical joker. Some of his verses have a strong anti-Eighteenth Amendment flavor, such as

"The Clink of the Ice in the Pitcher the Boy Brings up the Hall," but we believe that they would be delightful today as when they were read, though having more reminiscent character. A Humorist. Field himself was a free liver, and is may be that his untimely death at forty-five could be attributed to this laxity. He was both a free borrower and a free lender. Often he borrowed for no other reason than that he might lend to a friend in distress. Frequently these friends turned out unworthy and Field was faced with the responsibility of paying back the money he had advanced to them. On one occasion, when he was working in Denver, Oscar Wilde was due to arrive in town. Field impersonated Wilde, and was met at the station and driven in state through the chief street or street carrying a lily in his hand. B temperament he was a true Westerner and inclined to sneer at the Westerner who aped the manners of what then we called the effete East. At heart this humorist was a melancholy man, oppressed by a sense of loneliness. He needed friendship and yet he could not refrain from being humorous at a friend's expense, despite which fact but few were alienated, for his nature was essentially lovable and human.

Bringing Back the Canada Dollar to its Higher Buying Power

That every Canadian dislikes the aspersions cast upon the Canada Dollar by the adverse exchange rate goes without saying. It helped to make the tax on thrift so unpopular that the Government repealed it. I am going to do my share in making the Canada Dollar equal the par value of the Yankee Dollar. The only way to do that is to make the Canada Dollar have the greater buying power—an equal buying power to that of the Yankee Dollar. For a full month I will sell good clothes—Suits, Overcoats and Haberdashery—for much less than like quality can be bought for in the best shops of London or New York—or anywhere else in the world.
