tailsof these stocks. It seems we're always talking of Dress Fabrics of one kind or another, but it is not to be wondered at with such a collection -not such another store within your reach that shows such a wealth of Dress Fabrics. It is our gauntlet. We challenge all competition. The gathering of stylish wares surpasses all former competing collections. It isn't possible, in the limits of a newspaper, to picture the exquisite taste and unique effects of new Dress Goods, Clever genius has been at work, and improved machinery has helped to make stuffs better than they were. We'd be slow indeed to offer you this season the counterpart of what you had last. Among the more exclusive lines we would like you to see our range of Holland & Sherry's Dress Tweed Suitings and Vestings. They are confined to us for this section and cannot be had elsewhere. Of all desirable weaves this season, perhaps, those English Covert Cloths take the lead. There is a feel about them that is almost irresistible. We have them in all pretty shades of fawn, tan, brown, gray and blue, also black. English Broadcloths for street wear are among the quick-selling things. We have them in 21 different shades, 58 inches wide, 51-2 yards to the dress pattern, only one of a color. To finish off with, all we can say is that if you want to know what is the fashion we have here the very extremes of present styles. Not a penny wasted in buying them. It's hardly possible for anyone to own the stock for less than we, which means lower pricea than others can afford. Colors are good, styles excellent, qualities perfect, and values better than ever.

IN OLD ANTWERP. A Few Pleasant Glimpses at the Little

European Exposition. The Antwerp International Exposition, now drawing to a close, has been only a very mild and unsensational affair, chiefly devoted to advertising exhibits. The most pleasing feature of all has been the reproduction of "Old" Antwerp. Even in new Antwerp there is a good deal that is pretty old; but at the exposition the special endeavor has been made to represent the Antwerp of the 16th century, somewhat as "Old Vienna" was shown at Chicago. Our manufacturers and artists have been A Vain Attempt to Lower Eis Record scantily represented at Antwerp, and the attendance, though it has made a busy summer for the "little Paris," can show no figures like those of the 1893 World's Fair. The Grand Hotel has been the favorite resort of English-speaking people; in fact, the influx of visitors during this exhibition time has been so great that they have had to turn many away. A story is told that an anxious guest one morning claiming his bill was asked where he had slept, and replied querulously that he had been obliged to sleep on the billiard table. "One franc fifty an hour," said the pro-

The grounds of the Exhibition extend over about 150 acres, on which there are 80 different buildings. The main structure, with its great central dome, is 1,500 feet in length, decorated in colors with majolica. It contains, in the centre, the Belgian part of the industrial exhibition; to the left, the German and British sections, with that of Canada, and the department of military science; to the right, France, Russia, Austria, Hungary, and Italy; beyond which, at a turning in the direction of the line of building, are the Navigation or Maritime section, and those of Spain and Portugal, Sweden and Norway, Bulgaria, Persia, Japan and China, the United States of America, and the Netherlands, or Holland. The Machine Gallery is at the east end of this main range of buildings. In the grounds or gardens, in front of it, is the interesting historical reproduction of "Old Antwerp," and the spacious Fine Arts Galleries. To the left are the Turkish, Syrian, and Egyptian quarters. The revival of the architectural splendor of Antwerp in the 16th century, its ancient houses, its jousts, its pageantries, its dress and its customs, is the great attraction of the Antwerp Exhibition. A hint of this is had from the sketch, Shaving in Old Antwerp. In the 16th century the chief city of the Netherlands, the commercial capital of the world, was Antwerp. Verona, Venice, Nuremberg, Augsburg, Bruges, were sinking; but Antwerp, with its deep and convenient river, stretched its arm to the ocean, and caught the golden prize as it fell from its sister cities' grasp. No city, except Paris, surpassed it in population; none approached it in commercial splendor. Its government was very free. The sovereign, as Marquis of Antwerp, was solemnly sworn to govern according to the ancient charters and laws. The condition of the population was prosperous. There were but few poor, and those did not seek, but were sought by, the almoners. The schools were excellent and cheap. The city itself was one of the most beautiful in Europe. Placed upon a plain along the banks of the Scheldt, shaped like a bent bow with the river for its those of deceased members placed on the string, it enclosed within its walls some of minutes. the most splendid edifices in Christendom, and thus it has been faithfully reproduced by the celebrated painter Frans van Kuyck and Mr. Max Rooses, the curator of the earliest printing press in Europe, at the Musee Plantin, one of the most beautiful and interesting houses in Europe. From an enthusiastic pen picture by a Lonwail of pipe and cornemuse is wafted A. Archer, O. W. Chamberlain, W. G. across the roughly-paved market place as I Foster, Robt. Marwick, James Cameron, write, and the dull roll of the big drums, the braying blare of trumpets strike my ear as the night-watch in their slashed scarlet jerkins, wide breeches, and stiff white ruffles, with dull-gleaming halberd on shoulder, march with a heavy tramp through the time-grey town, lit on their way by flaring torches, that cast strange shadows on the old-fashioned walls and up unexpected corners; and awakening the echoes from the wooden-fronted, peakroofed houses, brave in their forged iron signs and their wells, from the yawning Kipdorp Gate, the raised portcullis, the the uneven jutting ledges and sills, and making tremble even the little windowpanes of lead-secured bottle-green glass of the frowning Town Hall. Go and see this as I did from the Town Hall windows while mine host Herr Vaessin provides you with an excellent lunch at very reasonable prices, and a glass of excellent Rhine wine in the cunningly-fashioned high green goblet to boot. Strange it sounds to hear him tell you in fluent English that he has been conducting a large restaurant at the Chicago Exhibition; and here to talk of chops and steaks and entrees, with the gloomy old town around you, and your sight and brain filled with mediaeval his-

Is his work legal under the new act? ANS. -Strictly the engineer was not appointed under the act, and his award is liable to be set aside as the whole for that reason. HAS A SUNDAY NURSERY.

Novel Improvement Made at a New York Church.

[New York Times.] The Rev. J. A. B. Wilson, of the Eight eenth Street Methodist Church, preached ast evening on "The Poor Man's Sunday." He called attention to the tact that to his church poor persons of all kinds were welcome. To make it easy for mothers who nad no one with whom they could leave their small children, a private room of the building was reserved, and young women were in attendance, who would care for the children while their mothers attended the service.

"Some one sneered at one of our trustees." he said: "'I see you are turning your church into a Sunday nursery.' Yes, thank God, we are doing that thing, and it has become necessary to put racks and books in the gallery pews to accommodate those who come to the Sunday nursery. God bless that young lady whose happy inspiraon it was to suggest the Sunday nursery

She learned much easier than the average man.'

Chicago boasts at present about 25 female artists in this line, several of them owning their own establishments, while others work side by side with their husbands. Cottage Grove avenue, between Thirty-first and Thirty-ninth streets, is especially fortunate in this direction, as three shops rrace that particular locality. At 45 Thirty-first street Mrs. M. E. Willard has held her own for twelve years, and at present has two assistants, the only masculine attache of the place being the ebonyfaced young wielder of the whisk broom. Rev. Evans Davis, for many years recte of St. James' Church, Esuth London, and well and popularly known throughout the Diocess of Huron, is now archdeseon c London, the position having been tendered him by Bishop Baldwin. The erremony o inducting the new archiencon was per formed in St. Paul's Cathedral hast night in the presence of a fair-sized congrega-tion. The induction was of a very simple character, and occupied only a short time. The elergymen in attendance beside the bishop were Reve Dean Innes, J. H. Moorehouse, G. B. Sage, Canon Davis, E.

The second qualification was loyalty to the great principles enunciated at the reformation, as any person who was true to these would hold the oracles of God as the sole guide and power to right. Lastly, there was needed one who would be wise, judicious, and careful in the conduct of his duties, And in the selection of Canon Davis the bishop believed these qualities were found, and he asked their humble prayer that he would receive the benediction of God.

Social Distinctions Are Puzzling in Eng land.

A "Mother" writes to the London Telegraph from a district in North London under the following circumstances: "Our vicar," she says, "has two Bible classes-one for what he calls young ladies and the other for young women. I keep what I flatter myself is a very genteel boarding house, have often the very best of society staying in my rooms, always pay the rates and taxes, have a fair balance in the bank, and the house is my own; but, being the widow of an officer who died in India. I have to work for my livelihood. My two daughters were admitted into the young Twenbscriptions, in one remittance $4 women's class and attended very regr with, I hope, benefit. One stays at home and keeps my books, and is a very hardworking girl. The other has gone in for higher education, and recently passed, with high honors, a very stiff examination. Since then she has been invited to join the 'young ladies' Bible class, while her sister is still kept in the other. Unfortunately, she accepted the invitation, and there has been no peace in our once happy home since, for the two are continually quarreling over the social distinction, and I don't know how it will end. Would it not be possible to call them all 'young ladies,' or if that can't be, only use 'young women' when speaking of Bible classes or religious subjects ?' The subject raised, comments the Telegraph, is a curious one, but carnot be easily settled off-hand. Man was, of course, made a little lower than the angels, and his place is therefore defined, for there is no mention of "gentlemen" in the Bible. In the book, however, both the words "hadv" Mr. A. B. Moler's school for barbers has and "woman" are given, but it is rather hard on the sex to have their appropriation made by an outsider. It is a pity that such a small matter should cause discord in a

THE CITY ELECTION.

A good deal of speculation has been indulged in regarding the appearance of Mr. Alexander McKay, M. P. for Hamilton, at the meeting of the London Conservative Association last night, when action was resolved on looking to a contest in the election for the Legislature now pending here. Mr. McKay is Ontario whip for the Dominion Government in the House of Commons. His zealous interest in the election of a member for the Legislature for this city is in strange contrast with the conduct of himself and his associates in the Hamilton local election a month or two since. Mr. McKay came to London to tell his political friends how they could best prevent this city from working for its own interests by returning a candilate to support the Government of the day. But in the election for East and West Hamilton, for the same House, Mr. McKay and the Conservative Association of his own city had nothing to say. They abdicated their functions to the P. P. A. and declined to nominate a Conservative standardbearer. Many London Conservatives doubtless think that Mr. McKay would be better employed settling the trouble in his own constituency than in meddling with affairs which, strictly speaking, concern the electors of London. The people of London want no dictation as to bow to perform their duty from either

Ottawa or Hamilton. Association have decreed that there shall be a contest. We have held that it would have been reasonable to permit of the return of Mr. Hobbs without opposition. After the last contest, it was conceded, even by the strongest of his opponents, that if any other man in the Province had been pitted against him, Mr. Hobbs would have been elected by a substantial majority. Mr. Meredith only won the seat at last election by a majority of 137. Thus a change of 70 votes in the entire city would have secured his defeat. In all probability but for Mr. Meredith's acceptance of office, thus voiding his election without the expense or trouble of a trial, it would have been proved that this majority had no substantial existence. In view of these facts, it is evident that the simulated jubilations over an alleged coming victory in this city for the leader of the 26 Conpervatives in the Legislature is a trifle pre mature. Rather are they calculated to impress us, as independent surveyors of the situation, as well-feigned efforts to retain the support of many electors who, voting for Mr. W. R. Meredith on personal grounds alone, have no disposition to give their votes to any one of the candidates from the ranks of the Opposition that seek

Even at this early day, however, it is well to warn the friends of Mr. Hobbs, who will in all probability be the citizen candi date in the ensuing election, not to be everconfident. They should understand, from their experience in provious campaigns that they must hold their own at every point, and work to prevent irregularities everywhere, if they would secure that substantial majority for their candidate which is known to exist in this Western capital. More than anything else must the supporters the Government of Ontario guard against over-confidence.

TWO MURDER MYSTERIES-ONE SOLVED, THE OTHER YET UN-RAVELED.

Toronto's murder mystery is yet unraveled, though half a dozen detectives and a large number of lynx-eyed reporters have for eleven days been following up likely "clues," and the coroner's jury has met on two occasions and heard all kinds of evidence but conclusive testimony as to the cause of the tragedy. There is, it must be confessed, as yet scanty testimony to support any of the hundred and one theories as to the motive for Frank B. Westwood's tragic taking off. The deceased was a bright young man of 18 or 19 years of age. He lived with his parents at the foot of Jameson avenue in the suburban division of Toronto known as Parkdale. The residence was that of a substantial man of business. It was not on the street, and there was a fence with a gate along the front of the mansion. On Saturday, Oct. 6, about 11 p.m., according to the story told by the assassinated man, Frank Westwood heard the front door bell ring. He went down to open the door, but before doing so lighted the gas in the back part of the hall. He opened the door, but not knowing who might be there, as he explained afterwards, he placed his foot against it to prevent its opening too wide. Then he saw a man standing on the platform at the top of the steps. As soon as he opened the door the visitor shot him. The man did not say a word. When questioned by Dr. Lynd, the medical man first to arrive, the deceased described the man as low sized, wearing dark clothes and a dark hat. The man was young, with a thin mustache, but the murdered man said the deed was done so quickly he did not chiefs, and men, in the enthusiasm of t get a look at him and did not recognize him. When young Westwood recovered from the first effects of the shock, he said he fell in the lobby, but quickly picked himself up, and walked upstairs to his room, as he feared that he would faint before he got there. When the medical men arrived, they found the young man with a dangerous revolver wound in the region of the heart, and from the first there was little hopes for his recovery, Such, in brief, are the circumstances under which young Westwood was fatally wounded. Many witnesses have been examined before the coroner, the county crown attorney and the police bringing every witness with an "idea" before the jury. First one theory and then another has been exploded. But so far no one has been found who actually saw the murderer in the vicinity. One strange feature of the case is the fact that several persons who were in the immediate vicinity of the Westwood residence at the hour when the deed was done heard two revolver shots-the first as forcement of such an ordinance wild if smothered; the second from ten minutes to a quarter of an hour later. The question is, did the assassin fire both shots, and, if so, why, seeing the victim only heard one report? It has also been proved that the perpetrator of the crime did not leave the premises by the front gate or he would have been seen. Then, though there have been rumors that the deceased may have inflicted the wound himself, the doctors who reached the scene in a few minutes after the tragedy was enacted assert that there The managers of the Conservative is no evidence to support the theory of suicide. Nor do many now believe that the deceased in his ante-mortem statement, in which he failed to give any clue to unravel the mystery, kept anything back that would throw light on the matter. The young man, like most of his fellows, had his likes and dislikes, but he asserted that he knew of no reason why he should be attacked, and his parents have indorsed his statement, and no evidence has been adduced to show that he had the enmity of anyone, or had done anything to deserve it. It may have been that the murderer mistook the residence of Mr. Westwood for that of another man, and that the shot was intended for some one else. That appeared to be the idea entertained by the Westwoods when the doctors first arrived, but no evidence has been brought forward to either confirm or discredit this view.

strange affair. No one can believe that any man in his senses would deliberately walk up to the door of the residence of a reputable citizen, ring the bell and shoot down in cold blood the first person who came in sight. The absence of a clue to the guilty one leaves the remarkable case in mystery, although it does not follow that it may not yet be cleared up. After the extraordinary developments in the Gibbs murder case in Buffalo, chronicled in our telegraph columns within the last week or two, we see how little faith can be placed in mere theories, however tenaciously held by reporters or detectives, and how necessary it is, in every case of this kind, to patiently wait and watch for the thread that shall unravel the mystery. Lawyer Gibbs was assassinated on one of the leading avenues of Buffalo early one evening last spring. His death was as great a mystery as that of young Westwood. The detectives followed up every clue presenting, but few believed that the man was The medicinal properties of the apple are killed by highway robbers, as none of his regularly discussed with every fresh har- valuables were known to have been carried vest of this delicious fruit. City Conservatives Convene and

On the Question of Nominating Candidate for the Legislature.

Nemination Wednesday, October 24-Speeches by Mayor Essery, R. M. C. Toothe, I. F. Hellmuth, Ed. Meredith, T. G. Meredith, A. McKay, M.P., Joseph Judd and Others.

The Conservatives of this city will nominate a candidate for the Local House on Wednesday, Oct. 24. This was decided on at the meeting held in the banqueting hall of the Masonic Temple last night. The meeting was a "special general" one, and it had been earnestly requested that both senior and junior Conservatives should attend. The hall was well filled, but the 'juniors' were conspicuous principally by their absence. Bald heads predominated. As no nominations were made and no names mentioned, everything went off smoothly and harmoniously. The speeches might have been all prepared by one man as far as sameness was concerned. They all had the shoulder-to-shoulder stamp, and each urged the other to be up and at it early and late, and no matter who the candidate was to support him through thick and thin and thin and thick; to give a long pull, a strong pull and such a pull altogether as would take the Liberals completely off their feet, and then trample on them so hard that they would never be heard of again. From the center of the platform beamed the chairman of the evening and the president of the gallant "Seniors," Major Thomas Beattie. Away to the extreme left sat the representative of the "Juniors," President T. W. Scandrett. Beside him was Dr. Roome, M.P., Dr. Mitchell and a quiet looking gentleman-Alex. McKay, M.P.-who had been brought up from Hamilton to do some enthusing. To the right of the chair were I. F. Hellmuth, F. A. Fitzgerald, T. G. Meredith and Mayor Essery. Scattered around the hall were Ald. Joseph Judd, Ald. W. C. Coo, Richard Toothe, Ed. Meredith, P. H. Bartlett, High Constable Schram, Richard Bayly, Henry Macklin, Jas. Crawford, Jas. Hook, W. E. Hiscott, W. E. Fitzgerald, John Wright, G. M. Graydon, John Troleaven, Charles Ruse, Charles Webster, Gilbert Coombs, Walter

Blackburn, Henry Coombs and others. The chairman, in his usual sauve manner and quiet voice informed the gathering of the position of affairs, and led the way with a kindly-worded obituary of Wm. R. Meredith as London's late M. P. P. More nice things could not have been said if Mr. Meredith had been called up a good deal higher than the bench of common pleas. Like all good things, Mr. Beattie's address had to come to an end. Then Mr. I. F. Hellmuth took the floor. His enthusiasm quickly worked up to the bailing point and bubbled over into political eloquence. Like Mr. Beattie, he paid tribute to the chief who had been called, and then waxed confidential as he told his bearers that even though they had lost the very strongest man they had, they could still "lick them (the Liberala) out of their boots." All that was necessary was to neminate a man and stand shoulder to shoulder, etc.

Mr. B. Meredith was vigorously applauded and he lost no time in telling them to nominate a man-a 400 or 500 majority man. He spoke of the necessity of a close personal canvass, and calmly admitted that W. R. Meredith had hardly been in London 24 hours during the June campaign. He hinted significantly that Mr. Hobbs was out canvassing at times as early as 6 o'clock in the morning, and he urged with emphasis that the Conservatives had to win the coming contest. They must win it, and by winning it they would so dishearten the Liberals that they would be beaten for all time to come. Of course this pleased the crowd. Mr. Meredith then went on to tell them of the mountains they would have to climb on the road to victory. How they had to overcome the influence of Government money spent, he stated, without tenders. How they must nullify "the influence of license commissieners, asylum officers, bailiffs and bum-

Mayor Essery is to be the Conservative nomines if the applause that greeted him when he rose to speak is any omen. He jumped on the neck of his friends the enemy on the very start, and said that there was no doubt who their candidate would be. "I ney are not like us, democratic," he exclaimed proudly. "We have conventions where every man has a right to say who his candidate will be, and where every man who is worthy of a name and desires to be a candidate can sink or swim the valuable animal was left for 48 hours by the vote of the convention." It was inst here where Mr. Essery got off his shop-worn joke en the rainbow. "I don't care whether he's black, white, vetlew or red-the man who shall be the Conservative standard-bearer in the contest in the city of London." Then Mr. Essery proceeded to eulogize Mr. Meredith, and it is safe to say that Mir. Meredith has really no idea how good he really is or he would not be satisfied even with the chief-justice-"On the beach they will find," said Mr. Essery, "that he will be fearless, and head and shoulders above them as he has been among us in the past. But we are not going to get scared because he has gone. There never was a rain yet that the clouds did not disappear, and just as the rain drops into the stream, there are coming up from the ranks men willing to take their place. We want to pick cut a man to follow in their footsteps. We have hundreds of them. We have them everywhere. They are not moneyed men, but they are honest men in the workshops and in the streets. They are everywhere. What we want is a man whom we are ready to gather around, and that man can be found in fifteen minutes after the convention has been called." Then Mr. Essery remembered William R. again. It would have been a crying shame to have allowed the Liberals to defeat the coming high chief justice at the late election. The speaker then passed beyond the late election, and touched a period supposed to have been during the Fenian raid. "Don't lay by with stacked arms," he implored them. Get your convention delegates appointed and let them be ready when the bugle calls. 374 Richmond street, opposite Masonic The minute we but our candidate in the Tempie.

The speeches that followed were remarkable for many new thoughts. F. A. Fitzgerald spoke mildly and to point. The point was "convene and r inate." Mr. T. G. The walls of Peking are sixty feet thick at the bottom. These walls are faced inside and out with bricks, and the space between is filled with earth and stones so rammed down that the ages have made the whole one solid mass. They are built, in fact, much like the great wall of China, and the bricks of the two are made almost exactly the same. I have before me a brick which I brought from the great wall. It weighs about twenty pounds, or as much as a two-year-old baby It is blue-gray in color, and it is covered with patches of white lime mortar, just like those that I saw in the broken places of the walls of Peking.

In approaching Peking, long before you get to the city, you see the immense towers which stand on the top of this wall over the gates which enter the city. They rise nine stories above the wall, and they have roofs of blue tiles. They were used in the past as watch towers, and they have many port holes for cannon. There are thirteen gates which lead into the city, and the towers and the walls near these are plastered over with proclamations and bills much like a theatre bill-board. The gates of Peking are merely holes through this wall, and they are about as wide as the ordinary street and perhaps twenty feet high. They are lined with stone and are beautifully arched. They are closed at night with great door sheathed with iron, and they are paved with heavy slabs of stone. The walls of Peking are twentyseven miles long, and the area which they enclose is irregular in shape, and consists of two big parallelograms. The one a the north is the real capital of China, for it contains the Tartar city, the great government departments, the foreign legations, and the imperial city, in which, surrounded by from 5,000 to 10,000 cunuchs, the emperor lives. The lower parallelogram joins the Tartar city. It has has half a dozen temples, including the Temple of Heaven, which was burned down not long age, and which is now being rebuilt.

The Chinese city is where all the mercantile business of this great capital is done. It is cut up into parrow streets, and it is filled with all sorts of stores. It has markets of all kinds, and its fur market covers several acres.

The most interesting part of Peking, however, is the big Tartar city. It is the capital of one third of the population on the globe, and in it lives the son of heaven. the Emperor of China, to whom all his subjects must bend their knees. It contains the thousands of Manchu officials, the foreign legations, the government departments and all the paraphernalia of this queer Chinese court. It is the most interesting city on the face of the globe, and its sights really beggar description. From the walls the whole city looks like an immense orchard, with here and there one-story buildings shining out through the trees. In its centre there is a walledoff inclosure filled with reassive buildings, reofed with yellow tiles. This is the imparial city, in the innermost parts of which a brick pen inclosing several square miles, where the emperor lives, surrounded by eunuchs. He is perhaps the rarest bird in the whole Chinese aviary. He is kept apart from Chinese and foreigners, and you might live in Peking fifty years and not see him. He really knows nothing about his people or his surroundings, and he is a sort of a puppet who stands still or dances when his highest officials or the old empress downger pulls the string.

No botter idea of the condition of the by a trip through the Tartar city. It is one of the oldest towns in the world. It was founded more than a thousand years before Christ, and it has been the capital of millions for ages. It ought to be the greatest city on the face of the globe, but there is no spot more filthy and slimy and foul. The city knows nothing of modern improvements. It is cut up into wide streets, but the roads have no sidewalks, our western plains has a greater regard for the exposure of his person than have these pig-tailed, silk-dressed, gaudy, fat Pekingese. The city has absolutely no sanitary improvements, and the street lamps are framework boxes backed with white paper, and they are seldom lighted except during full moon. It is absolutely unsafe to move about in the night-time without a lantern, if you wish to keep your feet clean, and you have to balance yourself during the day to keep out of the mud. All of the houses are of one story, and the government departments look more like broken-down barns than the offices of a great empire. Peking is a most cosmopolitan city. We have in America only the Chinese of South China. These come from the hot countries at the southern part of the empire, and they are small and lean in comparison with the people of the north. They dress differently, and they have a different dia-lect and different habits and customs. Peking is frozen up for six months of the year, and you can have ice-sledging on the Peiho at Christmas I found the people of every Chinese state different, and the dialects are as various as the languages of Europe. Here in Peking you find representatives of every Chinese State, and there are celestials from all the big cities. Thibet, Mongolia, Manchuria and parts of Afghanistan are all tributary to China, and the people of a half dozen religions jostle each other as they wade through the

There is one gate in Peking which is always crowded with beggars, and one of the finest bridges in the city, a structure of marble, has been given up entirely to beggars. It is full of the lame, the halt and the blind, and men with festering sores, women without eyes, and persons possessing all sorts of horrible diseases crowd together upon it. They push their way from it into the city and threaten to cut themselves if you don't give them alms. Side by side with these beggars walk the gorgeous officials, and poverty and wealth march together in pairs. There is no place in the world where the contrasts are so great, and for nine-tenths of the people it would seem to me their condition could not be worse. These Chinese are as industrious as any race on the globe. They are peaceable and easily governed, and if the celestial officials, including the emperor and all his court, could be wiped from the face of the globe, the people would quickly grow rich and China would be one of the most favored spots on the face of the earth. Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance. Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

COMMERCIAL. Local Market.

Reported by A. M. Hamilton & Son. LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 17.

WEEKLY REVIEW. Today's session closed one of the quietest ceks that the London market has seen in lany months. The uncertainty of the leather has been the ruling factor in prevent. ig the usual amount of business being done. he demand for all kinds of produce and ereals was as good as ever, but the supply was maller and the consequence was many orders were filled with imported stock that would ave been purchased here had there been ufficient receipts.

Wheat ranged from 80c to 90c all week.

here was a predominance of low-priced stuff, ne or two loads of Democrat sold at 92c to c. This wheat, now that it is almost out of kistence, seems to have had at least one merit that of being of good million graviting and the second stuff. kistence, seems to have had at least one merit that of being of good milling quality, and is agerly sought for, selling at a premium of 4c of per 100 lbs over other white kinds. Outs have shown more strength, and at tour's session there were few loads soid at under c. During the week, and particularly the st half, 78c was the ruling figure, with light ads selling down to 76c and in a few cases 75c. Barley was both higher and lower. Malting darley was both higher and lower. Malting es brought from 8ce to 90c: well colored lots at had to be classed as feed sold down to 77c, denced by the price of oats and wheat. eas have been scarce. Sales were made at to 85c, according to sample.

Beans quiet. There was only a small amount business done in this line. Holders are so impletely taken aback at the low prices that be yellowed by mill probably need some little time to like the inevitable. Some of the western propers got another wild fit on a month or so and went traveling around offering very horices. Whether it was done to prevent by selling on the part of our growers or h prices. Whether it was done to prevent by selling on the part of our growers, or ether they really thought bears were to be hand breadstuff so low, is hard to say. One ng is sure, few growers made any sales; y never do. It is only natural to suppose them don't go scouring the country for cial lines unle-s they think there is money than dueless the grower is perfectly posted. t, and unless the grower is perfectly posted h situation it is foolish policy often to sell. 5 market is today 1 aying 75c to $1, accord-

TORONTO, Cet. 17.—Receipts at the western cattle market yesterday were not heavy, only 43 carloads all told. These included 344 sheep and lambs, 936 hogs and the usual que'a of calves. Buyers were in only fair attendance. There were 6 carloads of Manitoba cattle on the market. There was practically no buying in export cattle, the season being over. Prices are no better, 34c per lb being the top. Most of the cattle intended for exporters were taken as feeders. In butchers' cattle the market was quiet and steady. Prices ranged from 24c to 34c per lb, according to quality. Not many really choice butchers' cattle received. Stockers and feeders was the line receiving most attention yesterday. Buyers who have been dealing in export cattle and butcher cattle buyers are operating in this line now. There were not enough in to supply the demand. There are several byres to fill and the proper class of cattle are hard to get. Although some few really choice heavy cattle brought a fraction over 3c per lb, that was about the outside. Poor stockers sold away down, some as low as 15c per lb. In hogs, although offerings were not quite as heavy as they have been for some time, the market remains weak, best bacon hogs for the export trade fetching only $4 60; fed and watered, about $4 70, weighed off the cars. In sheep and lambs the feeling continues weak. Export sheep were selling from 3c to 34c per lb, according to quality, only one or two fancy going a slight fraction over these figures.

TANGLED <--

'Nothing!' Ellen glanced up at him. His face wore the haughty look; his mouth betrayed scorn enough for ten proud Bohuns put together.

She did not answer.

"If he was saying 'nothing,' why should you be looking as you did?—with a blush on your face, and your eyes cast down?" 'He had really said as good as nothing, Arthur. What he might have been going to say, I - I don't know. He had only that moment come in." "As you please," coldly returned Arthur, walking into the garden in his turn. "If you do not think me worthy of your confidence,

The Bohun blood was bubbling up fiercely. Not doubting Ellen; not in resentment against her - at least only so in the moment's anger; but in indignation that Seeley, a common village practitioner, should dare to lift his profane eyes to Eilen Adair. Captain Bohun had suspected the man's hopes for some short time past; there is an instinct in these things; and he felt outrageous over it. Tom Graves' venture had filled him with resentment; but he at least was a gentleman and a man of posi-

Ellen, wonderfully disturbed, gently sat down to write again, all she did was gentle. And the diary had a few sentences added to

"That senseless William Seeley! And after showing him as plainly as I could, that it is useless — that I should consider it an impertinence in him to attempt to speak to me. I don't know whether it was for the worst or the best that Arthur should have come in just at that moment. For the best because it stopped Mr. Seeley's nonsense; for the worst because Arthur has now seen and is vexed. The vexation will not last, for he knows better. Here they are."
Once more Ellen closed her diary. "Here they are," applied to the doctor and Mrs. Cumberland. They were walking slowly towards the window, conversing calmly on her ailments, and came in. Mrs. Cumberland sat down with her newspaper. As Mr. Seeley took his departure to visit other patients, Arthur Bohun returned. Close upon that, Richard North was shown in. It seemed that Mrs. Cumberland was to have many visitors that morning.

That Richard North should find his time hang somewhat on hand, was only natural; he, the hitherto busy man, who had often wished the day's hours doubled, for the work he had to do in it. Richard could afford to make morning calls on his friends now, and he had come strolling to Mrs.

Cumberland's. They sat down; Arthur in the remotest chair he could find from Eilen Adair. She had taken up a bit of light work, and her fairy fingers were deftly plying its threads. Richard sat near Ellen, facing Mrs. Cumberland. He could not help thinking how lovely Ellen Adair was; the fact had never struck him more forcibly than today.

"How is the strike getting on, Richard?" Mrs. Cumberland laid down her newspaper to ask the question. No other theme here so much present interest in Dallory. From the time that North and Gass first established the works, things had gone on with uninterrupted smoothness, peace and plenty reigning on all sides. No wonder this startling change seemed as a revolu-

"How the men are getting on, I don't like to think about. The wrong way, of course."
"Your proposition, to meet them halfway, was rejected, I hear."

"What do they expect to come to?"
"To fortune, I suppose," returned Richard. "To refuse work and not expect a fortune, must be rather a mistake. A poor look-out at the best.' "But, according to the newspapers, Richard, ene-half the working classes in the country are out on strike. Do you believe

"A great number are out. And more are going out daily."
"And what is to become of them all?"

"I cannot tell you. The question, serious though it is, never appears to occur to the men or their rulers."

"The journals say - living so much alone as I do, I have time to read many of them, and I make it my chief recreation—that the work is leaving the country," pursued Mrs.

"And so it is. It cannot be otherwise. Take a case of my own as an example. A contract was offered me some days ago, and I could not take it. Literally could not, Mrs. Cumberland. My men are out on strike, and likely to be out; and I had no means of performing it, and therefore could only reject it. That contract as I happen to know, has been taken by a firm in Belgium. They have undertaken it at a cheaper rate than I could possibly have done it at the best of times; for labor is cheap there. It is quite true. The work that circumstances compelled me to refuse, has gone over there to be executed, and I and my men are playing in idleness."

"But what will be the end of it?" asked Mrs. Cumberland.

The end of it? If you speak of the country, neither you nor I can toresee the end."

"I spoke of the men. Not your men in particular, but all those that we include under the name of British workmen; the great bodies of artisans scattered in the various localities of the kingdom. What is to become of these men if the work fails?"

"I see only one of three courses for them," said Richard, lifting his hand in some agitation, for he spoke from the depth of his heart, believing the subject to be of more awful gravity than anythat had stirred the community for some hundreds of years. "They must eventually emigrate-provided the means to do so can be found; or they must lie down in the streets and starve. As and Sunday School Mission, at Rome, Italy, I live. I can foresee no better fate for them." this? - if the work and the workmen leave

Richard North shrugged his shoulders. It was altogather a question too difficult for him. He would have liked it answered from some one else very much indeed; just as others would.

"Lively conversation!" interposed Captain Bohun, in a half-satirical, half-joking manner, as he rose. It was the first time he had spoken. "I think I must be going," he added, approaching Mrs. Cumberland. Richard made it the signal for his own departure. As they stood, saying adieu, Bessy Rane was seen for a moment at her own window. Mrs. Cumber and nodded. "There's Bessy," exclaimed Richard, "I think I'll go and speak to her. Will you pardon me, Mrs. Cumberland, if I make my exit from your house this way?" Mrs. Cumberland stepped outside herself, and Richard crossed the low wire fence that divided the two gardens. Arthur Bohun went to the door, without having said a and was returning. when Mrs. Cumberland came in again. "Won't you come and say good bye te me here, Ellen?" The invitation was given in so low a tone that she gathered it by the form of the lips rather than by the ear; perhaps by instinct also. She went out, and they walked side by side in silence to the open hall-door. Dal-Ham, in its primitive ways and manners, left its house-doors open with perfect safety by day to the summer air. Outside, between the house and the gate, was a small bed planted with flowers. Arrived at the door, Captain Bohun could find noth; y better to talk of than these, as he s od with her on the crimson mat.

"I think those lilies are finer than Mr "Mrs. Cumberland takes so much pains with her flowers," was Ellen's answer "And she is very fond of lilies." They stepped out, bending over these self-same lilies. Ellen picked one. He quietly took it from her.

"Forgive me, Ellen," he murmured.
am not a bear in general. Good-bye." As they stood, her hand in his, her flushed face downcast, Mrs. North's open carriage rolled past. Madam's head was suddenly propelled towards them as far as safety permitted; her eyes glared; a stony horror sat on her countenance.

"Shameful! Disgraceful!" hissed madam. And Miss Matilda North, by her side, started up to see what the shame might be. Arthur Bohun had caught the words-not Ellen-and bit his lips in a complication of feeling.

But all he did was to raise his hat-first to his mother, then to Eilen—as he went out at the gate. Madam flung herself back in her seat, and the carriage pursued its course up the Ham.
