sadness as the climax to the week's carnival looms in sight.

On the eve of their departure London has prepared a fitting sendoff to her genial visitors. Yesterday set a new mark for real oldtime abandonment to joy. But tonight will eclipse ment to joy, But tonight will eclipse all past records. Realization that but few hours remain before a return to the cities of their adoption becomes imperative, old boys everywhere look with relish on the prospect of "painting the town red" this evening. No carnival had given greater pleasure ing the town red" this evening. No definite program other than that planned by the executive committee has been arranged, but almost anything may develop.

The good-bye masquerade this evening, it is predicted, will attain new heights of revelry. An orgy of dancing at Queen's Park is scheduled and speciators may look forward to the newly-formed international dancing at Queen's Park is scheduled and spectators may look forward to a demonstration far surpassing anything yet seen. The procession will line up in the market square at 7 o'clock, proceeding via Dundas street to Queen's Park. Prizes will be presented for the best costumes. Then the fun commences.

The police have been urged to be contennial of 1926. As president of the newly-formed international organization, I can assure the citizens of London we will do our part to make the 1926 affair the biggest in history. The executive intend to work a year ahead, and if the home guard do their part, there is no question but what the centenary will be a world-heater.

The police have been urged to be extremely lenient, and those old boys who take part will literally be given the freedom of the city. The evenling will be devoted to impromptu merrymaking, and the ammunition used will include horns, bailoons, and and one instruments which contribute so much to the success of such exhibitions. One Hundred Register.

This morning a hundred Old Boys registered at headquarters who apparently thought the formality necessary before departing the home town to see one of the finest displays of fruit and vegetables from Middlesex farms in history.

"It was a funeral such as may be seen every day on the streets of London except that instead of 100 people being present, there were a hundred thousand."

That, in brief, is G. Russell Taggart's opinion of the funeral of the late President Warren G. Harding, who was buried yesterday at Marion, Ohio, his home town, and which Mr. Taggamt attended in his capacity of American consul to London.

The keynote fo the ceremonies for the zest with which they entered into the spirit of the carnival, it could not have been the success it is. "We do not propose holding a farewell banquet. RISE WAS RAPID

Special to The Advertiser.

Mitchell, Aug. 11 .- Born in Mitchell, some 45 years ago, Fred L. Thomson spent his boyhood days romning in the woods and enjoying to the fullest all the delights a lad finds in a small town. He was just like any other red-blooded Canadian boy with the same inclinations, the same joys, and the same trials. But Fred was ambitious, so when he finished his secondary education he decided to enter McGill University at Montreal to study for a coctor.

He graduated in due course, practiced for a while in the United States, and now he has come back to his home town to celebrate the Old Boys' reunion, but not a doctor. He is a millionaire Texas oil operator now, and the head of the Grayburg Oil Company of San Antonio.

Two Premier American League Sluggers Are Running Neck and Neck.

BOTH GOING STRONG

By JOHN B. FOSTER. Special to The Advertiser.

New York, Aug. 11 .- Which will it e. Babe Ruth or Harry Heilmann? There is much ado about the race between the two American League sluggers for the batting champion ship of the organization. As the season has some weeks to go it is hardly worth while to become overwrought about the matter. Either is likely to develop a hitting streak that will put him ahead, and the streak may not appear until late in September.

Take a glimpse at the records and you may come to the conclusion that Ruth will have a time to outhit his rival. Ruth never has led the league in hitting, and Heilmann has. The Detroit star batted .364 for the San Francisco Seals in 1915, and that is one of the reasons the Tigers grab-bed him. He had been hitting fur-iously in Portland before going to

San Francisco.

The same season Ruth batted .315 in the American League. The next year, 1916, Ruth slipped under .300 and so did Hellman. Then the latter hitting .282 at Detroit, Ruth's average with Boston was .272. In 1917, Ruth batted .325, and Hellmann failed to get above .300, making only .281. The next year Hellmann again failed to enter the select class, his mark being .276, while Ruth made an even .300. In 1919 Ruth and Hellmann 300. In 1919 Ruth and Heilmann almost ran a tie, the Boston pitcher -for pitcher he was then-batted .322 and Heilmann hit .320. The next year 1920, Ruth playing in the outfield, began to rap the ball with all the power of his big frame. He ran up an average of 378 while Heilmann dropped back to .809.

Petrolia, Aug. 10.—It is estimated that the upkeep of the Petrolia High School this year will take $4,000 more than last year. This is due to the fact that owing to the growth of attendance the Jubilee Public School has been rented to hold the pupils. The upkeep of the old High School lost the board of education a great deal, having stood for over 50 years.

Princess Kourakine's Escape From Soviet Russia

Fake Marriage to a Bolshevik and Twelve Million Rubles Enabled Princess To Reach Russia's Border.

Princess Kourakine having given, in her preceding articles, an account of her hardships in Soviet prisons in Kiev and Moscow, and her release after eighteen months of physical and mental torture, today concludes her enthralling narrative with the recital of her flight from Russia. In this final chapter she describes the hazards of escape.

The Last Six Days.

Today London says good-bye. Her Old Boys who came home for a while are scattering again to the one hundred and fifty or so cities in which they have formed new interests.

By tomorrow night the reunion will be a memory mingled recollections of laughter, confetti, blaring horns, clowns, dust, noise, old friends, souvenirs, flirtations, crowds, sideshows, hot dogs, parades, baby shows, races, dancing and traffic cops.

These are the outward and visible evidences of the past six days. Beneath them are hidden other things more durable and of greater value. Sincere and deep emotions are both concealed and expressed in all this outward tollity.

These men and women did not come back to London because they wanted to blow horns and throw confetti. They could have done that in Chicago or Scranton. They came back because of that mysterious instinct which makes every man want to go home, again, because every man clutches at his youth, because every man recollects with a reverent happiness the days when he was a child, when all the world was good, when life was kind, when he believed in many things he now is afraid from his associates in the city council early in the co-operative attitude, and there is not a doubt in the "public safety commission"—in short, an amalgamation tion and, if worthy, would be acted upon, if such were of the police and fire departments.

Now Ald. Drake's ideas may be all right, or they proposal. His worship goes farther and states just ment at any time, notwithstanding. how many should sit on this commission and whom they shall be—the mayor and two members each from the deed, sought. Destructive criticism is to be avoided as finance committee and the board of works.

So far, so good. The mayor insists that the new body, with sole authority vested within the city council. shall not conflict with the duties and rights of the police commissioners, appointed by legislation which W. E. Raney and members of the late Drury administration refused absolutely to upset.

How far afield then will the members of the new commission be permitted to carry their jurisdiction? The mayor has made a very significant statement, to in," said Sullivan when told by his trainer that the the effect that a "safety commission" will serve the ebb tide off the French coast would prevent him making purpose until a provincial parliament grants the people the shore inside four hours, and later, when his feet

Is it to be presumed that the Sullivan waived him away with "Nothing doing; I'm ents. ddition of another commission would simplify matters, going to finish this alone." if any irregularities now exist? At the present time rests with the members of the police commission, who, always one of this number.

The situation in this respect, whether right or wrong, must remain unchanged until such time as the legislature at Toronto sees fit to authorize something different.

This leaves the fire department to be considered. which branch of municipal endeavor is, at this moment, without further enactments or commissions, under the direct and absolute control of the mayor and twelve aldermen-and none others, except the people themselves, who may remove their representatives from time to time as they see fit.

It will be for the council to decide whether they still feel themselves capable of handling the situation as a whole or whether they should act as suggested by Ald. Drake and seconded by the mayor, and sub-let the work to a special committee of themselves.

"When Labor Rules."

Recent by-elections in Great Britain have shown significant return of Labor members to parliament. The victory of Robert Smillie by a plurality of 7.000 votes may be taken as a striking indication of the changing political opinion since 1918, when Lloyd George candidates were returned by overwhelming majorities. Observers who have returned from England after a study of political conditions there have stated that a Labor ministry may be the next in power there and that this will mean handing the country over to the "radicals," but this is not borne out by the proceed ings in the recent Labor conference, a report of which is to hand. At that gathering of Labor men from all sections of the United Kingdom a resolution asking for the reduction of the king's allowance was introduced and rejected, and a second, condemning military expenditures, was roundly condemned by no less a Labor leader than the Rt. Hon, Arthur Henderson. From this it would appear that the Labor party in England, as elsewhere, is careful to safeguard the old traditions.

It cannot be forgotten that prominent members of the British Labor party served with acceptance on the privy council while the nation was at war, or that such men as C. L. Clynes and H. Thomas are regarded by Liberals and Conservatives alike as sane and sensible leaders, whose judgment can be safely relied upon in periods of political or industrial crisis. Taken in all. it is probably safe to say that much of the alleged fear of chaos "when Labor rules" arises from an imperfect knowledge of the facts or is the product of nervous Indigestion.

Ruskin Was Right.

Service, ever more service, is the catchword of the modern corporation. At the time Ruskin was laughed to scorn. Though he admitted himself that he was in advance of the times and that he could never hope to see his ideas of social justice put into effect, the passing years are seeing a surprising change in the ideas of the average man as to commerce and the returns due the man in the street.

Community service is even now expected from the owners of large businesses, not as far as Ruskin suggested, but nevertheless some measure of community co-operation. Service, that is the slogan of modern advertising, may yet become the nucleus of a duty that the public will some day demand from the captains of

The Love Letters of SARAH BERNHARDT to Victorien Sardou

"Men Under Thirty Seldom Know How To Love," Wrote Sarah, and She Couldn't Be Bothered Teaching Them-An Amazing Philosophy.

Through the publication of Sarah Bernhardt's love letters to the Poet-Playwright Victorien Sardou, the people of two worlds will be given new insight into her extraordinary character. Her frankness in dealing with this love affair—in dealing with any affair—is perhaps not unexpected. But never before have her scorn for the conventional, her wit, her unique and audacious philosophy had such free scope. In Sardou she found what many of her acquaintances believed was her perfect rover. In him were combined the debonaire boulevardier, the dreamy poet, the practical dramatist. He accepted her attentions—she frankly states it is he woman's part to do the pursuing—and to him as her intellectual equal she poured out her inmost thoughts.

One afternoon Sarah Bernhardt found herself there in the company of a man whose presence was inadequate. He could not hold her attention to himself alone.

She looked about and met the eyes of a young man seated at a table not far away, who was in serious conversation with a beautiful woman, As she declared some time after, he had cause they were younger than myself the most beautiful hands in the world. "They had a language all their

And then, back in Paris, six month later, their eyes again met in a cafe in the Rue Royale. Sarah was seated at a table, and it was the first time she had gone out after an lillness that had confined her for several weeks to her rooms.

Sardou was standing at the bar, not far away, talking to an army officer, cab waiting at the door for her. She had on bedroom slippers in the cafe and hid her feet underneath the table in order not to be seen, and when she

"Men younger than thirty seldom know how to love, and if there is anything in the world that I hate it is to be an initiator. I would rather teach arithmetic than to teach how to love-and this may sound strange because I know far more about love than about figures.

Bike Talent In Today's Meet | FRENCH ATHLETES IN Makes Thrills, Action Sure

Province's Best Pedallers Gathered For Close of Old Boys' Sports Bill.

The bicycle race meet today at Queen's Park is the wind-up of the London Old Boys' week's program of sport, but by no means the least important. It brings together all the crack pedalers of the province, and several provincial titles will be wheeled for this atternoon.

Bounsall, McCarthy, the 44-year-old veteran and champion at various distances for years; Bill Coles, local boy, and 10-mile Dominion champ; Webster, Brown and a host of others, not so well-known, but comers, make up a great array of talent who will be seen in action.

known, but comers, make up a great array of talent who will be seen in action.

As an example of the enthusiasm the pedalers arouse in Toronto, and more especially of McCarthy, the veteran's spirit, take the following from the Toronto Star:

"Earl Rogerson, secretary of the C. W. A., started one large, sized ruckus last Tuesday night at the Scarboro Beach bicycle meet, when he called off the unlimited team pursuit race at 9½ miles, with Fred McCarthy and Norman Webster still on the track. The veteran, McCarthy, though he had lost his partner, Brown, at five miles in a spill, had ridden down every other team single handed and was riding Webster's tail for a mile and a half when Rogerson signalled the "cease fire." McCarthy could not pass Webster, but he had the latter in a nice place, for he could 'sleighride' him in all his sprints. He only had to poke his wheel in front to win, while Webster had an entire circuit of the track to make up before he could earn the verdict. Naturally McCarthy is a bit peeved. He has demanded that he and Webster be placed out on the track in the same position and let finish it out on next Tuesday night's card."

Everything is in readiness for the meet. The track has been rolled and scraped, watered and rolled again, and is in great shape.

The officials, all prominent in wheeldom, are as follows:

still stands as the world's best for the distance.

The success of Henry Sullivan of Boston in swimming the English channel has brought him much praise for his determination and perseverance, but it is perhaps forgotten that Burgess, the Englishman, who holds the distinction of having conquered the tricky tidal water between England and France with Sullivan and Captain Webb, made no less than 15 trials before he was successful. Sullivan succeeded on his seventh attempt, and others may equal his feat this season if they are favored by the tides.

Sullivan has specialized in distance swims for years, and is peculiarly fitted physically for such a test. He is short, only a little over 5 feet, 6 inches, but has a magnificent girth of chest and his body is overlaid with plenty of fascia, or flat bands of tissue to keep him warm.

Down the Line In All Sports

A Canadian manager who would search the bushes of Ontario instead of some of the states on the other side of the border for baseball material might be a means of prolonging the Michigan-Ontario League indefinitely as it is composed at present. London has a start in the fact that Jack Beatty, present manager of the Tecs, is a Canadian.

Buzz Wetzel, who is just as good a developer as he is a purchaser when it comes to baseball players, brought Pinto, Churry, Coogan, Curry and some others out of a small radius with Columbus, Buzz's home town, as a The O. B. A. A. offers a good field for a raid by any Mint League

People like Billings might pitch a number of no-hit, no-run games, but they are "prophets" and too close home.

The officials of the Ontario branch, A. A. U. of C. have concluded that hey will run off events in the Ontario track championships in which Americans competed here last Saturday. This is another type of Toronto "legislation." The officials gave their sanction as far as Americans running was concerned, but made the stipulation that the visitors wouldn't be eligible for titles. Therefore the events that were run off without competition from the Toronto clubs who withdrew are "official," as in each case the first three Canadian entries to breast the tape were awarded the official honors.

The fact that Western Ontario helps pay some of the salaries paid to Toronto residents who hold down jobs in athletic organizations seems to has gone blooey. escape notice at times.

Hamilton Spectator:

"Wetzel has been a prominent figure in the M.-O. League ever since it was organized. He won the first pennant for Saginaw and then shifted over to London and built up the Cockneys so that within a year they came from the bottom to win the flag. The London club's profits for the first season Wetzel was with it was over $20,000, the sale of young players helping to swell the surplus. The proposition looked so good to some of the London directors that the small shareholders were practically 'frozen out' and the majority of the stock is now owned by one man, President Heard. Only a few days ago Heard accused Wetzel of violating the rules of the league and of organized baseball, and the Saginaw pilot intends to have a showdown during his present visit to London. Wetzel has been in organized baseball too long to be caught violating the rules."

Lee Fohl sitting on the sidelines at the Yankee Stadium had a chance to brood over the ingratitude of baseball magnates and baseball fans. Taken all in all, Fohl was as good a manager as any of them and handled the material given to him to make up the Browns about as well as it could

Other managers have had quite as rough a time of it. Patrick Moran won a pennant for the impossible Phillies, and was rewarded by being dis charged. Bill Donovan handled the Yankees, such as they were, after Ruppert and Huston bought them and was let out. He was taken on as manager of the Phillies and was put out again before he had a chance to do anything with them. Subsequently Wild Bill took charge of the New Haven club and made it the greatest team in the minors.

In places like St. Louis they are impatient for results. They take their paseball with intense seriousness. Last year they expected a pennant They did not get it, but they came close enough through the management of Fohl to look for a goat in connection with the last-minute failure, so they picked Lee Fohl.

Only the results count in the baseball game.

A baseball play came up in New Orleans the other day that has attracted a great deal of attention, and John B. Foster, the Star's baseball authority, has received scores of letters from fans asking him how about it. It was described in press reports as a "catcher's balk." The batter could not be sent to first on a balk, and if the umpire ruled the pitcher had made a balk the umpire was wrong in sending the batter to first. As he permitted a run to score and the batter to go to first, the supposition is that he ruled that the catcher had interfered with the batter and the latter was sent to first, all runners advancing, since the bases were filled. That ruling doesn't come under the balk rule. Had the umpire ruled it was just a plain ordinary balk, the ball not having passed over the home plate, the runners would advance but the batter would remain where he was. There is nothing unusual about a catcher interfering with the batter.

Special to The Advertiser. New York, Aug. 10 .- Jack Bentley has not succeeded in winning many games for the Giants on their present western trip, but he presents an interesting case for the baseball scalp

He leads the National League in batting, and leads it indisputably. True, he probably will not get the honor of being called the league's best batter because he has not played in enough games as compared with the famous longhorn hitter, Rogers Hornsby, but he is miles over Hornsby in what he has done, for he is the only baseball bald eagle soaring at the heights of .450.

Bentley has won ten games for the Giants and lost seven. He was going better than he had been until Pittsburg and St. Louis bumped him. Had e shown ability to win on this trip he might have led the National League pitchers as well as its bat-

Bentley is not much on the base paths, and it has been necessary on several occasions to put on a fleet runner in his place. But take him all in all, Bentley affords a striking example of what can be done with a player who is used for the best that is in him without trying to overdo it. One of the best minds in the International League said that Jack Dunn had made a winning player out of Bentley by putting him in the right

The hopes of England in the 1924 Olympic games, however, have been somewhat dampened by the refusal of Liddell, one of the most promising of the British sprinters, to enter. Liddell, who is a Scotchman, objects strongly to Sunday competition, and if successful he probably would be called on to perform on that day. However, this disappointment has been made up in part by the work of Stallard, the old Cambridge miler, who recently covered the 600 yards from scratch in a handicap race in 1 minute, 11 1-5 seconds, only 2-5 of a second behind the great mark of Mel Sheppard of New York, which still stands as the world's best for the distance.

Referee To Handle Ontario
Cup Game.

Maple Leafs have raised a howl because the O. F. A. has benignly appointed a Toronto referee for today's Ontario

The referee question is an important one to the Leafs, who figure they didn't get any too many of the breaks against Ulsters Red Handers, and now that Ulsters have lost their chance at the Connaught Cup it is natural that Toronto wants one soccer cup to show for a hard, strenuous season of soccer and legislation, especially the latter.

Despite the fact that C. N. R. A. A.

ed a Toronto referee for today's Ontario Cup game with the Willys-Knight eleven of Toronto, but late last night
Bobby Muir, secretary of the august football body, apparently had his ear muffs screwed on tight.

Other howls go up about the same thing from all over Ontario, but the
O. F. A. goes on its way unheeding.
The Leafs were also stewing about some registration forms for two new players they will inject into their lineup for this afternoon's fixture, which starts at five o'clock at the C.
N. R. A. A. grounds, but the O. F. A.,
as far as these registration forms go,
has apparently gone on a vacation.
However, the local team intends to play the new men.

Despite the fact that C. N. R. A. A. grounds are not familiar to most of the soccer fans, it is believed that they'll make an extra effort to find out where the grounds are in order to see this tilt, the best that's been provided this season hereabouts.

THISTLES WIN FROM HALL-ACME GIRLS 23-5

London Life Defaults-Crucial Game, Thistles vs. Brownies, Next Friday.

Thistles defeated Hall-Acme last night in the only game played in the Y. M. C. A. Girls' Softball League, the final scores being 23 to 5. London Life defaulted to Hamilton Road Spark defaulted to Hamilton Road Spark Plugs.

The Thistle win keeps them in the running for the championship of the league, dependent, however, on the result of the much-postponed Thistles-Brownles game, which is to be replayed next Friday night. If Thistles win it will tie Thistles and Brownles for first place, and a play-off will be necessary. The line-ups for last night's game were as follows:

Thistles—I. Graham, I. Curuoe, D. Thorne, A. Hazelgrove, A. Speiran, B. Williamson, M. Colbert, M. Biggs and A. Percy.

Strathroy, Aug. 10.—R. Northgraves and his St. Marys rink in a last-end effort defeated Tubman of Stratford by 16 to 14 tonight and carried back with them the Faill Trophy. At the second last end, with the score tied, Tubman counted one. In the last end Tubman was two more to the good when Northgraves first shot carrier the kitty and game to St. Marys.
C. McIlhargey successfully defended the Ingersoil Trophy against an Embror rink skipped by F. Johnson. The score was 16—16, but as the Embro rink were the challengers, and failed to have a majority score, the trophy remains in Stratford.

Thrice Winner of British Ladles' Open Championship.

For some unknown reason, nine strokes has become the recognized handicap for women when playing men, but personally I go as far as to say that the difference will never be known by the stoke method of allowance, and that the only satisfactory way of bringing the play of the two sexes into line is by bisques. Of all the games I have played against first-class amateurs and professionals, the most interesting were those in which bisques were being conceded to me instead of strokes.

It is almost entirely a matter of luck whether the strokes are of any use to the recipient. She may just happen to play the holes at which they come so badly that they are of no assistance to her, or, on the other hand, a receiver of strokes on winning a match is sometimes heard to remark, "Yes, and what is more, I hardly used a single stroke."

At croquet, tennis, billiards, and numerous other games one could mention, the recipient of the handicap?

CHAPTER XXVI. A New Julia.

She was to have such fairylike bright colors, after deep mourning. But mother had hated black.

Terry had worn it more because it gave her a kind of screen, set her apart from the loud gayeties of the Blue Moon, than because it was the conventional thing. She would not have been human, and seventeen, if her clothes and her jewels hadn't enlivened the weariness of waiting.

Miles Sheridan never communicated with Miss Divine, but Hartley Phillips telephoned occasionally to the flat.

It was always her maid, Emmeline, who answered. According to her, "madam" happened to be out, or engaged, or lying down with a headache; and at last Phillips' suspicions

The state recognizes the right to enjoy private property only so long as that private enjoyment and use are not against the public interest.

Principles of Taxation. The Labor government will be guided by these principles, and it will apply them justly and without unfair discrimination between different indi-viduals and classes. I will summarze under four heads the canons of

1. Taxation should be in proportion o ability to pay, and to the protec-tion and benefit which the individual derives from the state. 2. No taxation should be imposed on an individual which encroaches

LABOR WILL ADVOCATE A CAPITAL LEVY

In the following article Mr. Philip Snowden discusses the probable financial policy of a future Labor government. A Labor government would be expected to reduce food taxes and as quickly as possible to applied the standard in employing labor to abolish them altonether. With rewould be expected to reduce food would be expected to reduce food by taxes and as quickly as possible to abolish them altogether. With regard to the capital levy, Mr. Snowden thinks that if the commercial classes will not agree to it, the Labor poses, it would employ more labor, and would raise the standard of life the workers, who are now poor of the workers, who are now poor because so large a part of what they earn goes to maintain a parasitic Wealthy people very often write to me about my economic heresies, and point out to me how the public ownership of the great national services, a Labor government would pursue a financial policy aimed at diverting for social purposes that part of the national product which is now appropriated by the idle classes.

Incresses, and point out to me how their expenditures upon servants, motor cars, and luxuries, finds employment, I usually reply to them in the words of a very orthodox political economist—Professor Carrns—who wrote: "That useful function which same profound writtens." It must not be assumed, however, that a Labor government would impose taxation merely for the purpose of penalizing those who now enjoy.

undoubtedly too high on earned in-comes, and it will be the aim of a Labor government to reduce it. It would do nothing by taxation to hinder the development of useful trade and em-ployment, or to discourage a man from working hard to increase his income to save for a modest competence, or to restrict saving for capital investment That is why the Labor party advocates a capital levy for the reduction of the ational debt. If the Labor party comes into power with the national debt at anything like its present dimensions it taxation which the Labor government will be bound to deal with the problem will observe: ity of any substantial reduction of taxation so long as over £300,000,000 a the interest upon the debt. There will he no question of a Labor government repudiating the debt. Nor will it give any support to the suggestion which needs, or to prevent him from being has been made in some quarters that the rate of interest upon the debt should be summarily reduced. The capital levy is a proposal to meet an unparalleled situation. It could not be justified except for the purpose of debt reduction. It would be more unwise to impose a capital levy for ordinwere feared that it might be repeated commercial enterprise and saving would be disastrously affected. debt reduction because it is convinced that, on the whole, it would be bene-ficial to the country. If, of course, the commercial classes, and those who would have to contribute to a capital levy will not have it, but prefer to go on paying a high income tax without any hope of any substantial reduction. they must bear it, and a Labor government would have to look in other directions than the capital levy for revenue to enable the food taxes to be removed, and to finance schemes of social re-orm.

And there is one other direction in which they would find an unexhausted source of revenue, namely, by an in-crease in the death duties. Whatever may be said in support of the right of c. man to make as much money as he likes, and to spend it as he likes during his own lifetime, there is little to e said in favor of the right of a man to capriciously dispose of a large for-tune at his death. The dead hand should not be permitted to rule the living. A dead person can leave in-structions which millions of unborn men and women will have to obey. He can confer upon his descendants, or upon anyone he likes, the right to levy tribute on their own generation and upon the realth produced by contemporary labor. (Copyright. All rights reserved.)

Prepared for Trouble. Morning found the order disobeyed by demonstrators taking advantage of "Constitution Day," the anniver-sary of the adoption of the Weimar constitution, which made Germany a republic in fact as well as in name to express their disapproval of the present government and the food and money shortage. The threat of the monarchist uprising, which has given no little concern of late, was almost forgotten today, and the Cuno government took steps to prevent trouble for the other directions-the Left.

There was a midnight conference called by Ebert at the President's palace in the Wilhelmstrasse to which Chancellor Cuno and other govern-ment leaders were bidden. They met behind locked iron gates where soldiers paced, rifles on shoulders and ugly, squat machine guns pointed their nozzles toward the wide sweep of street from which trouble — if the Communists started it — would

C. L. Jeffery's Greenhouse Is His Play-time House PARISIANS TRY TO PICK

Here He Hybridizes Beautiful Varieties of Begonias After WINNER FOR NEW TR Banking Hours-Has Three Thousand Gladioli.

Three thousand gladioli just ready to bloom in all the beauty of their 120 odd varieties. That is what you'll see if you peep down over the riverinto C. L. Jeffery's lower garden behind his home on the Ridgeway. For Mr. Jeffery has made a obby of gardening and gladioli have been one of his specialties.

Beginning with 100 bulbs 20 years ago, Mr. Jeffery has increased his stock, ever introducing new varieties and growing many of his own from seed. He has still a great number of bulbs, the product of the original 100. And that gladioli increase very rapidly under proper care is illustrated by the fact that two "War" bulbs purchased 10 years ago had become over 700 by last year. Of course Mr. Jeffery gives them the best of care and they grow for him accordingly. His display this year is later than usual, because circumstances prevented him from planting them as early as is his custom. But wher they come they will present a mag-nificent sight,

Mr. Jeffery sends away for rare varieties of this beautiful flower. He mentions a new variety, for which the producer is asking $1,000 a single fun of all, for after all a hobby isn't admits that he has not a hobby unless it is fun.

Mr. Jeffery is trying for new varieties himself and this year has 400 or 500 seedlings. About 120 of last second year's growth and by next year will show what they are worth. But Mr. Jeffery's garden is not only the home of gladioli. Throughout the whole season, the place, uphill and down, is a mass of bloom and lovely foliage. There are 28 varieties of lilacs, not to mention peonies, zinnias, and almost every other type of flower, shrub and tree. But just where the upper garden garden on the river's edge is the most interesting spot of all—Mr. Jeffery's workshop. It is a small, but wonderfully complete greenhouse, with tiny furnace to supply the heat in the table, shrub and flower, and Mr.

The Doo Dads—An Exciting Time on Main Street

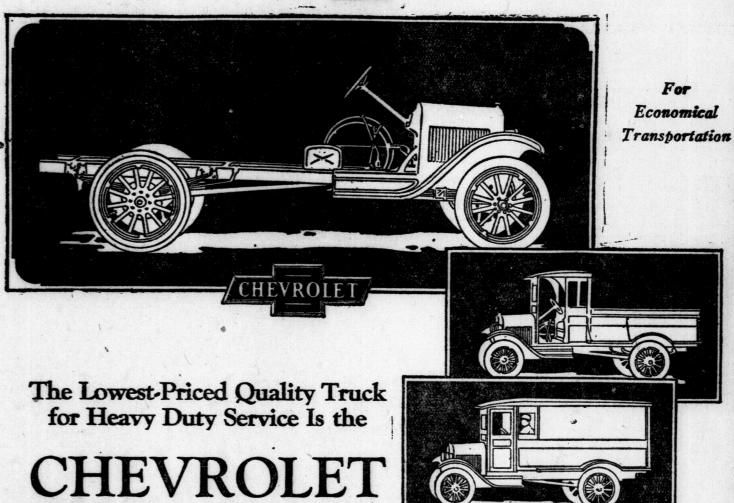

By Arch. Dale.

It was hot in Dooville. It was dry in the land of Doo. The potato tops in Old Man Grouch's garden were turning brown, and the pansies in Mrs. Malone's front yard wilted in the hot sunshine. On the roadsides, the ragweeds were covered with dust, and in Dooville the little Doo Dads sought shady places under the trees. It was so hot that butter grew stale in the pantries, and the milk soured, and the little baby Doo Dads had no dinner. Doctor Sawbones was sure that this would never do. He lost no time. In almost less time than it takes to tell it, Doctor Sawboncs placed some ice-making machinery in the old sawmill sheds, near the outskirts of the village. He hired some little Doo Dads, and soon the Dooville Ice Company was turning out great crystal-clear cakes of ice by the wagon load. Doctor Sawbones hired Nicholas Nutt and Tiny to deliver the ice, and here they are with their first load. The little Doo Dads at the factory had filled the huge wagon with the big, slippery-cakes. Nicholas stopped Tiny, and went to the rear of his wagon to get a cake of ice for Mrs. Malone. When he let his end gate down, things began to happen. Out came the big, slippery, slidy blocks. The first one slid right out over Nicholas' head. It hit the street, and whizzed past the big fat man on the opposite corner. Then it turned and started after Old Man Grouch. Poor Old Grouch! His cane has been knocked out of his hand, his feet out from under him, and now he is taking a ride on the huge ice cake. What an undignified position he is in! Flannelfeet has blown his whistle, and is motioning for Mr. Grouch to stop, but Mr. Grouch doesn't seem to have his vehicle under control. I expect Flannelfeet will arrest him for not obeying his signals. So far, Sleepy Sam seems to be enjoying his nap. I just wonder what will happen to him and his ice cream cart! The little Doo Dad riding his little brother just barely managed to get across the street in safety. He surely had a narrow escape. Doctor Sawbones is astonished. He cannot understand how these innocent cakes of ice could have caused so much trouble, and the two little Doo Dads under the tree are fairly amazed. Roly and Poly think it a good joke on Mr. Grouch, but it is far different with Mrs. Malone. She is wondering if she will ever get any ice to cool the milk for her baby.

HERE is a Chassis at the low price of $745.00 (f.o.b. Oshawa), which fills every need for a heavy truck combining speed, power, capacity, and economy. It hauls heavy loads quickly and economically. DOUBLE SERVICE IN WANT ADS

You Can Telephone Your Answers As Well As Your Ads to The Advertiser.

Readers are often interested in Classified Advertisements in The Advertiser that do not carry the name and addresses of advertisers. These are known as "blind addresses," but are genuine advertisers who prefer to use box numbers. To answer them, in the case of most newspapers, involves writing a reply and mailing it or carrying it to the news-

For the accommodation of those readers who find this inconvenient, and to serve the advertiser better, the efficient and courteous "Want, Ad Takers," who have made it so easy to insert advertisements in The Advertiser will take your answers to "box numbers" over the telephone. They will note your interest in the proposition offered. your name, address and telephone number and see that your message is delivered to the advertiser when he calls

This Advertiser Service Is Available Every Day From 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. (Sundays 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.)

Germany's "Collapse" Will Have But Small Effect in America.

EXCHANGES HIGHER

By STUART P. WEST.

Special to The Advertiser.

Wall Street, N. Y., Aug. 11.—There was nothing very significent in today's transactions in the financial markets. In view of Friday's suspension it was hardly to be expected that during the two hours session today the exchange would reflect any change of view on the financial or industrial situation.

Traders renewed their attack on certain of the oil and rubber stocks, but that was only a continuation of a movement in progress for some time.

Much was made of the poor reports as to the sales of automobile tires and the accumulation of inventories. As to the oils, the actual outlook is no worse, and probably is better. There was not fresh information to serve as a pretext for depressing prices.

Outside these two groups stock quotations moved in a desultory fashion. For any reaction in the market to the news from abroad, it will be necessary to wait until next week, Even then the answer may be only a negative one. It is hard to see how the "collapse" of Germany, whatever that may be, could effect business here any more unfavorable than it already has done. There are men who do not look for any collapse in an economic sense at any rate. Quotations for European exchanges were slightly higher, but not enough to indicate any change in sentiment. It is rather curious that the spread between the Belgian and French france should have become so much wider of late to the disadvantage of the Belgian currency.

ate to the disadvantage of the Belgian currency.

Belgian government finances are not dependent upon the reparations in the same degree as are those of the French and there is not execution in French foreign trade to account for the slump in French exchange.

It all shows how large a part sentiment plays even in the exchange market, the commodity markets were almost as dull as the stock exchange. Both cotton and wheat, however, were moderately higher. What little news there was with regard to the trade situation was favorable. Bradstreets reports that retail trade as a whole shows a gain in July of about 20 per cent over a year ago. cent over a year ago.

And in the last analysis it is the conservative demand represented by the retail trade which will determine the business outlook for the fall and win-

WALL STREET REVIEW

New York, Aug. 11.—President Harding's death and funeral services exercised a restraining influence on trading in this week's security markets. Frices pointed appward earlier in the week in reflection of the financial community's confidence in the new Washington administration, but publication of a few unfavorable trade reports and announcement of Chancellor Cuno's policy in the Ruhr turned prices heavy again in the later trading.

Price changes generally, however, were regarded as inconclusive. Owing to the absence of a number of large traders and the natural disposition of others to defer extending their commitments until after the day of national mourning the real test of the market's inherent strength is not expected until next week. Wood, Gundy & Co. furnish the fol-owing prices and yields: Saturday, Aug. 11.

mourning the real test of the market's inherent strength is not expected until next week.

Forecast of Crops.

One of the most significant developments of the week was the publication of the government's crop forecast, showing the condition of spring wheat to be 69.6 per cent of normal, or approximately three points below earlier estimates. This was interpreted as bullish by the grain trade.

Another sharp collapse took place during the week in German marks, which were quoted as low as 17c a million, as compared with 90c a week ago. The weekly Reichsbańk statement showed an increase of nearly twelve trillion marks in note circulation. French and Belgian francs also dropped to new low levels for all time in response to the unfavorable political and economic developments abroad.

Leather Shares Drop.

Active leather shares dropped to a new low price for the year as a result of unsatisfactory trade conditions, the principal companies still operating under a deficit. Shippings and chemicals also had another sinking spell. Motors and motor accessories improved somewhat on publication of excellent earning reports by some of the smaller, companies. Coppers held firm on heavy domestic demand for the red metal.

Good buying power developed in the rails as a result of the excellent earnings and traffic reports by some of the non-dividend paying roads. Northwestern Railway, which had been heavily depressed, also displayed a firmer tone. Placing of American Locomotive on a 6 per cent basis helped the equipment shares.

Money rates showed no important changes.

nent of Chancellor Cupo and his ministry seems foreshadowed in consequence of the decision of the United

TODAY'S OPENING PRICES.
Chicago, Aug 11.—Highest prices in several weeks were reached by the wheat market today during the early dealings. Wet weather, delaying the Canadian harvest and increasing the Chances of damage to late wheat, had a bullish influence and so likewise did absence of hedging sales here. Besides, country offerings in all sections were light. The opening was followed by slight further gains, and then a moderate reaction.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Winnipeg, Aug. 10.—A light trade was passing in the wheat market here today, but light offerings and a little short covering helped to keep prices firm! October advanced to a high of 97, and offerings then appeared more freely, causing prices to ease off fractionally, but they came back and closed strong. The close ranged from %c to %c higher. On the high for the day May reached the $1 mark but did not nold the gain, closing at 99%c.

The coarse grain markets were firm, but only light trading was reported. Values were ranging fractionally higher. Exporters were in the oat market. The flax market was quilet, prices closing 1c lower for October and unchanged for December.

Light stocks held up active trading in cash wheat today.
