THIS WONDERFUL STORY

Was Told Mr. Frank H. Colley,
Local Editor of Acadian, N.S.

"For 15 years I have been a sufferer from Salt Rheum of head, with its attendant itching and burning. Crusts 1/8 inch thick would form over my whole scalp, crack and bleed. I also had a general Salt Rheum on my body from which I suffered torture. My food distressed me badly and a severe palpitation of the heart added to my suffering, and untended me for labor."

Physician called in to examine EZZE-
KIA, a man, HART TUGBINE, and DY-RETTA, in a severe form. I used many remedies, but received no permanent relief. After taking 6 bottles of SCODA'S DISCOVERY, WITH LITTLE PAIN, the rheumatism disappeared, and I feel myself perfectly cured. Medically trained physicians have examined my heart and pronounce it normal in all its functions."

How can we tell
That the eyes which give back to us
Smile for our smile
Often find in their depths deepest Anguish the while,
That their lips whence gay laughter so
Merely flows,
Would be white, did they dare let the World know their woes?

How can we see
That the face which is turning so coldly
Bears the look of an infinite love it must Hide,
That the passionate air which seems cold
As the stars
May conceal a strong passion that beats
Against its bars?

How can we know
That the lives we deem selfish and Worldly alone
Only hide breaking hearts that are mak-

That what in our blindness we judge as

The Lord of the harvest will garner as

SELECT STORY.

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

BY HENRY CLEMENS PEARSON.

CHAPTER III.

In the office of the file-works sat Mr.
Lamson. On all sides beautiful finishings, the oaken paneling, the handsome desk, and the stained glass door, bespoke
the thriving business. The gentleman, however, at the head of the firm, and lord of the gem of an office, did not seem content. A restless, dissatisfied look that partook also of perplexity, expressed itself in his features; something was wrong. One so schooled in complacency as the crafty lawyer, would not worry over nothing. Tossing a bell he summoned a boy—
"Call Sam," he said.

A few moments a tall, broad-shouldered man stood looking at the doorway. Six feet three in his stockings, Sam Putnam. Among all the strong men who worked in "the iron," he was the most muscular and the best proportioned. In his coat working clothes, which consisted of a short-sleeved undershirt, dark blue pants, and slippers, the bulging muscles swelling on arm and chest, he looked the personification of strength.
"Come in and close the door," said
the agent.

"There is no one near. I don't want to be cooped up in that little pen," returned Sam, eagerly.
"The gentleman flushed and frowned, looking as if he were about to give some sharp command, but instead said—
"How does young Chamberlain come out?"

"All right," was the short answer.
"Does he really learn all he is set at or is he shunning?"
"Oh, he learns thoroughly enough.
Works as if his life depended upon it."
"Do the men like him?"
"They always like any one that makes his own business."

"How do you take to him, Sam?"
was the next question, accompanied by a searching glance.
"The giant returned the look with a half-contemptuous smile, saying—
"I think he is a likely chap, Deacon;
a trifle too pious, perhaps."

"Pious! You don't know him," exclaimed the other.
"Hump! Perhaps you do," was the reply.
"Sam," said the agent, impressively,
"if this young Chamberlain learns the whole business, it will be the worst thing that ever happened to you and me."

"What do you mean?"
"I can't explain, but remember this,
he is here for a purpose, and if he accomplishes it, you and I some of the rest are going to be much the worse
for it."

"I suppose you would like to make a second Tam of him?" remarked Sam,
with a return of the old ironical smile.
"A look of hate sprang to Lamson's face.
"How many times have I told you never to mention Tam to me?" he said, angrily.
"A good many times," replied the other, with a laugh.
Lamson grew white with rage, but the look that he turned upon the imperturbable figure in the doorway

entirely without effect.
"Speaking of Tam, is he still about the mill?" said the agent at last.
"Of course."
"Well, I won't have it," exclaimed Lamson, breaking out afresh. "He is no use here. He is a positive damage.
I won't have him around here any longer."
"When he goes, I go," remarked
Sam, with a gleam in his deep-set eyes.
"Sam," said Lamson, suddenly receiving his self-poise, "we cannot afford to quarrel. We are necessary to each other. Now it would please me exceedingly if you would concede to my request in this matter, and allow me to remove Tam to a place where he could be cared for, and where he would be much happier than he is here. Perhaps, too, he might be cured."

The giant always felt ill at ease when his employer addressed him in court phrases. He therefore remained silent.
"You surely won't object?" said Lamson.
"But I will. You hate the sight of him, and no wonder; but you had better not lay a finger on him. Tam is going to stay," said Sam, with sudden emphasis.

Turning on his heel the man strode away, muttering angrily to himself.
The agent closed the door with a slam, and began pacing the office floor with a most disagreeable frown on his brow. He was accustomed to success when he attempted to manage men.
He understood Sam perfectly, yet he could not twist him as he did many others. The thought made him impatiently wrathful, so much so that few of the acquaintances of "good Lam-son" would have recognized his changed face, had they happened in upon him
just then.
Sam had called him "Deacon" with a sarcastic emphasis that brought the blood to his cheeks and the fire to his eyes.
So the help knew it, do they, he thought, "Deacon Lamson!" That sounds well, does it not? Yet his cheeks burned at the thought of the comments of the men. In the town above, where were churches, schools,
and wealthy families, he had caused no surprise when he had been elected deacon of the largest church. He even had felt a deal of self-satisfaction, and possibly the shadow of a thrill of piety and resolve for future usefulness. Down in the mill village, however, it was entirely different.
There he was known. To be sure the deceased owner of the works was still boasted for the mastery in the desolated town, and for the grinding of the operatives. "Old Skiffins," as Robert Plint was generally called, was still hated, and his memory often cursed,
but little by little the keen-eyed survivors were discerning the fact that suffering Lamson was perhaps a little harder, and more merciful, than the owner had been. When it was known that he had become deacon there was a breath of comment throughout the mill village.
"I tell you, my friend," said Gaffney,
from the steps of "Hobbs in the Wall,"
from the popular saloon, "he deserves to be a deakin. Ain't he got capabilities in the way of being a deakin? 'Tisn't he slippery deakin? Course he has.
He's bound for the Kingdom, he is,
'cause he owns a pew, an' a hymn-book.
A pew is a reserve seat for Heaven; a hymn-book is the check for it. I don't blame him. I'd be a deakin myself, if I had money enough. Here come Sam Putnam, my friend, an' I invite you all to take a drink at his expense, with this sentiment: 'Health to the Deakin!'"

Most of the dwellers on Steep Street agreed with Gaffney that Lamson was fitted to be a deacon, which to their minds meant a hypocrite. They felt that it was a move either to pull wool over the eyes of his fellow-men or the Powers above; either of which, to their misgiving minds, was deemed equally possible.
There were to be sure a few faithful hearts, cowed by a furious struggling against the prevalent unbelief, who secretly cherished the hope that a new dignity might be a forerunner of a reign of justice, but they were soon disappointed. Their longings were never expressed in words, and no one but the great and faithful Searcher of hearts knew of the faith-gram that ever awakened

Miss host of the American House, ever anxious to provide for the comfort of his patrons, is having a commodious verandah constructed in front of his house. The American is a favorite resort of tourists, and this addition will no doubt make it more attractive than ever.

A special meeting of the Municipal Council is called, to be held at the Court House, Kentville, on Wednesday, July 5th, at 10 o'clock a. m., to consider the propriety of erecting a new Post Office building in connection with the township of Horton. A full attendance is desired.

"That tired feeling" that so much is said about and is so common can be cured by using Sarsaparilla Blood Purifier, 50c. per bottle at the Drugstore.

Our well-known druggist, Mr G. V. Road, is now putting up and has on sale an excellent article in the way of a summer drink—"Tonic Root Beer Extract." We have been favored with a sample bottle, and find it to be all that is claimed for it. The price is only 20 cents for a bottle, which makes four gallons of beautiful, pleasant, sparkling beer.

The Nova Scotia Methodist camp meeting association begins this year at Berwick Grove on Thursday, July 27th. Rev. H. N. Brown, one of the most noted and successful preachers in New England, is secured as the leading worker. John Northery, the singer and evangelist, is also expected. This will probably be a great year at the Berwick camp ground.

Dr. DeWitt has moved his residence and office to the house on Main street lately occupied by Mrs J. I. Brown. Office hours from 9 to 10 a. m., and 1 to 3 p. m.

On Sunday morning last occurred the death of Mrs Coboon, wife of Rev. A. Coboon. She has been an invalid ever since coming to Wolfville, less than a year ago, and at last she has found relief. The funeral services took place on Tuesday at 2.30. After appropriate services at the house, which were conducted by Rev. T. A. Higgins, assisted by Rev. S. B. Kempton, the remains were carried to the grave. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community generally.

Mr T. F. Higgins has leased the old wharf and is having a building erected thereon for use as a coal shed.

There was no service in the Methodist church last Sunday, owing to the absence of the pastor, who was in attendance at the Conference meeting.

The band occupied their stand on the campus on Wednesday evening. We do not have an opportunity of listening to them as often as many would like, but their playing is always appreciated.

The agent of the Grand Division will speak next Sunday, July 24, at Avonport and Horton Landing; Gasperau, Tuesday, July 4th; Lochartville, Wednesday, 5th; Berwick, Thursday, 6th.

The members of "Evangeline" Division, S. of T., are advertising a strawberry festival, to take place in their hall on Tuesday evening next. The past record of the society in such matters is a sufficient guarantee of a pleasant time for all who attend.

It is reported that the protest entered against the election of Mr W. E. Anderson, of Gasperau, to the Municipal Council has been withdrawn. We understand that no protest would have been entered had it not been for interference from without the ward.

Boy wanted at once. Apply at Post Office.

The death of Miss Bessie Forsyth, daughter of Mr Geo. E. Forsyth, formerly of Wolfville, occurred very suddenly at Halifax, their present home, on Tuesday of last week. Miss Forsyth was apparently in her usual good health early in the day, but about noon she expressed while reclining on a sofa. The deceased was a frequent visitor to Wolfville and had many warm friends here, who regret deeply her sudden demise. To the sorrowing friends the ACADIAN tender, heartfelt sympathy.

Wedding Bells.

The very pretty wedding of Miss Mary G. Brown, daughter of Mrs John L. Brown, to Mr Hubert L. Grey, of Boston, Mass., took place in St. John's Episcopal church, Wednesday morning at nine o'clock, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Canon Brock, rector of Kentville. The bride wore lawn color, trimmed in brown, which was exceedingly pretty and becoming, while the bridesmaid, Miss Laura Sawyer, also looked very nice in cream chaille with heliotrope trimmings. The groomsmen were Mr Walter Brown, brother of the bride; and the ushers were Mr Rupert Pratt and Mr Harry W. Brown. The church was very prettily decorated with roses, etc., by the choir, of which Miss Brown had long been a valued member, and by whom she will be greatly missed. The bride was the recipient of many handsome and valuable presents. Mr and Mrs Grey took the morning express for St. John, intending, we believe, to visit Ottawa, Quebec and Montreal before taking up their residence in the United States. The ACADIAN tenders congratulations.

Saturday's Windsor Sports.

The Windsor sports on Saturday will prove one of the most interesting Dominion day celebrations in the province. In the morning there is to be a grand bicycle race, when 100 wheelmen will be in line. CANADIAN PLUCK. A Successful Canadian Business Extended to England.

Although but a Short Time in that Count... The Press Pronounces the Success Phenomenal.

We have much pleasure in reproducing the following article from the Montreal Witness, relative to the success in Great Britain of a well-known Canadian firm.

"The phrase, 'British pluck' has become an adage, and not without good reason for whatever enterprise, courage or 'bull-dog tenacity' is required to sweep away or surmount opposing obstacles in order that the pinnacle of success may be reached, your true Briton never flinches, and facing all obstacles works until success has been achieved.

This 'British pluck' is a characteristic of the native born Canadian, and there are very few walks in life in which it does not bring success in the reward.

It bears every indication of being a well-known Canadian name. When it was announced a few months ago that the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, intended establishing a branch of their business in the motherland, there were not a few who were inclined to be skeptical as to the success of the venture.

"There would be an objection," they urged, "to taking up a colonial remedy," "their business methods differed from those of Canada," "the field was already crowded with proprietary medicines long established, and well advertised."

These and many other objections were urged as reasons why the venture was a doubtful one. But the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. was not to be deterred by any objections that might be raised.

They had unbounded confidence in the merit of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and the pluck to back up their confidence with their cash. This latter is well known to Canadian newspaper men, who know that less than three years ago the company first put upon the market in the form of Pink Pills a preparation which had previously only been used in private practice, and with a skill and audacity that has not been surpassed in the annals of Canadian advertising, pushed it in the van of all competitors.

Of course, the remedy had to have merit, or this could not have been, and it was the company's sincere belief in the merits of their remedy that endowed them with the pluck to place their capital behind it.

and he had always been debilitated and more or less feeble. On giving up the work at Messrs. Ashwell & Co's factory work at Messrs. Ashwell & Co's factory work at Messrs. Ashwell & Co's factory work...

The Rev. Walter Cooper, Wesleyan Methodist minister, whose flock have their spiritual habitation in a substantial building in High street, Old Bedford, took a great interest in the case of this unfortunate man, and is acquainted with the circumstances from almost first to last.

It is often saddening to note how hard it is for some young men to keep their seats on horseback and how easy it is in a crowded street car.

Attention is drawn to the circumstance that every fact in the above remarkable history is vouched for by independent evidence, which it would be morally impossible to doubt. It is shown by conclusively attested evidence that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine in the ordinary sense but a scientific preparation, from a formula long used in regular practice.

What curiosities there are in our use of language! We speak of going away to spend the summer, when in reality we go away and spend our money; or, as Jerome wrote in the guest's book at Bermuda, "I came to Bermuda for change and for rest. The waiters got the change and the landlords got the rest."

That string on your finger means "bring home a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT."

Scraps for Odd Moments.

Minard's Liniment is the Best. Bad habits need no cultivation. One breeds another.

Garfield Tea cures sick-headache. The average farmer's boy leaves no stone unturned, except the grind-stone.

Minard's Liniment cures La Grippe. People speak of the face of a note, when it's really the figure that interests them.

Garfield Tea is sold by all druggists. When money's tight it means it's locked up. It's sometimes this way with a man.

Minard's Liniment for Rheumatism. The early strawberry may look pale and weak, but you will find there is a great deal of grit in him.

Minard's Liniment is the Hair Restorer. When we don't spend our money we are economical; when other people don't spend their money, they are stingy.

Perhaps some expert in color effect, can explain how it is that a man often looks bluish when he is in a brown study.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the Great Blood and Nerve Remedy. The man who insists that his pastor must have more religion than he is willing to have is not on his way to heaven.

A boy who stammered once went into a chemist's shop for some ipsecauanha wine. "If you please, I want a p-p-p-p-p of ip-p-p-p-p. Boy behind the counter—"Hooley!"

If you do not know how good a remedy Garfield Tea really is for constipation and sick headache, send a postal card to Dr. Denmore & Co., 271 Queen Street, East, Toronto, for a free, trial package.

The summer girl may equally love the mountain, the country or the shore, but of all spots on this earth she hates freckles most.

Barker cannot afford a hired man and a nurse girl, neither does he care to row his lawn himself. He is ingenious, however, and is about to take out a patent on his new daisy cutter baby carriage.

A Punny and Fretful Baby. This is now quite unnecessary. Like many other things, it is being done by baby fat, laughing and happy. If you give it Scott's Emulsion, Babies take it like cream.

It is often saddening to note how hard it is for some young men to keep their seats on horseback and how easy it is in a crowded street car.

"Perhaps, but you see there is so much talking done through hats now."

Mrs D. A. Campbell, North Segon, Ont., writes:—"I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. My daughter was a terrible sufferer with sick headache for twelve months, and no medical aid could relieve her, but by the use of two boxes of your Pills, she is completely cured."

"And now," said the coming graduate, as he drew for $50, "the old man's been cuttin' up his shins lately. I must put a check on him."

"Marie," said the old man, as he looked drearily on the landscape, "that that dog; there's a draft comin' in."

Ladies continually scan the fashion plates for some new and becoming design in dress to enhance their beauty and charms. There is nothing more becoming than the healthy glow, bright eyes, and the firm elastic step of vigorous womanhood.

Next meeting in Temperance Hall, Thursday, July 6th, at 3.30 P. M. The meetings are always open to any who wish to become members.

...Gospel Temperance meetings, conducted by members of the W. C. T. U., are held every Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock, in the vestry of the Methodist Church. All are welcome.

One day, when the lesson was the tale called, "Ale and Beer Measure," a little boy, remarkable for his correct lessons, was quite unprepared.

"How is this, John?" said the teacher. "I thought it was no use," said John. "No use!" said the teacher. "No, sir; it's ale and beer measure," said John.

"I know it is," said the teacher. "Well, sir," said the little boy, "father and I think it is: use to learn about ale and beer as we mean never to buy, sell or drink it."
