CHAPTER XXXVIII.

THE EVIDENCE OF A CRIME.

"It—it is a lie!" he cried, pushing Nagle from him—"a lie! Do you think I am a fool to be deceived by such a clumsy trick as that?"

Nagle walked up to the book-shelves, and took down a volume, and, opening it at a certain page, pointed to a line in it.

Clifford Revel snatched the book from him, glanced at it for a moment, then, with an oath, let it fall to the ground, and stood dazed and crushed, as if he had received a death-blow.

"You see?" said Nagle. "And now you understand? Revel, it is my turn to offer advice. Lose no time, but leave England to-night. You have been playing with edged tools, and they have turned against you. You are in danger—danger that increases with every hour. Take my advice, and seek safety in flight."

Clifford Revel pointed to the door. "Go!" he said, hoarsely and brokenly. "Leave me to myself!"

Nagle started, and looked at him, and Clifford Revel understood the look, and smiled.

"No, I shall not commit suicide," he said in a hollow voice that still had a trace of its old sardonic irony in it. "I will take your advice. All is not lost yet. Go!"

CHAPTER XXXIX.
THE HAND OF HEAVEN.

"Upon my word, I think you have, all of you, made a great deal of fuss about it," said Lord Edgar, with a laugh. "It isn't half so bad as the other cropper I got when I broke an assortment of limbs. From what the doctors say, I suppose it was concussion of the brain, and, seeing that I haven't any brain to speak of, why, it hasn't mattered much."

A fortnight had elapsed since the accident, and Lord Edgar was seated in an easy-chair in the drawing room of the villa, a mild—a very mild cigar in his lips and a glass of barley-water and chablis by his side.

At the window sat the marquis looking out onto the Badmore course, which had been so nearly fatal to his son.

Lord Edgar wore a black patch on his forehead, where the hair had been cut away, and looked rather thin and pale, but otherwise there did not seem much the matter with him. Of the two the marquis looked the most absorbed and serious. And for a very good reason. At present, Lord Edgar knew nothing of the false marriage and Clifford Revel's other villainies, and the marquis was dreading the moment when concealment would be no longer possible.

And that moment was drawing very near.

"I can't quite understand yet how it all happened. The beast must have swerved and flung me down from sheer ill temper."

"Very likely," assented the marquis. Lord Edgar sighed.

"I must ask Clifford when he comes. Let the reason be what it may, that slip caused me to lose the race, and, I am afraid, an immense sum of money, sir."

"What does that matter?" said the marquis, shortly, his eyes fixed meditatively on the heath, his thoughts with the poor girl in the next room. "The suddenness of the fall must have been rather startling," said Lord Edgar. "Thank Heaven, my darling was not there to see it!" and he drew a breath of relief.

The marquis' lips tightened. Should he tell him that Lela was there, and did see it?

Strangely enough, very little had been said between them about Lela. On recovering consciousness, the first thing Lord Edgar knew was that Lela was kneeling beside him and that his father was standing by the bed, and he took it as a matter of course that his father had now become acquainted with their marriage. Since that time he had always spoken of Lela as if she had been fairly acknowledged by the marquis, and was not surprised to see that they appeared on excellent terms together. Once or twice, indeed, he had caught the marquis glancing at her with an expression that was almost one of pity; lover like, he gave Lela the credit of softening the marquis' heart.

"It is strange Clifford does not come down," said Lord Edgar, sipping his wine and frowning thoughtfully. "Yes," said the marquis, between his teeth.

"He used to be able to get leave whenever he wanted it. Can't you write a line to one of the big people at the office?"

"No!" said the marquis. Lord Edgar smiled.

"You are emphatic, sir!" he said, good-temperedly.

There was silence for a moment, and Lord Edgar rung the bell.

"Love, go to her ladyship's maid and ask if her mistress is awake yet, and how she is."

Love departed and returned presently.

"My lady is awake, my lord, but has a bad headache, and would like to be left undisturbed, my lord," said Love, in a low voice.

Lord Edgar sighed, and a look of vague uneasiness came into his face; he sat silently for a moment, biting his lip and looking at the marquis' calm face, as if he wanted to speak, and at last out it came:

"Father—it was another strange thing that ever since his illness Lord Edgar had called the marquis by the gentler title.

"Well!" said the marquis. He knew the moment was approaching.

"I—I scarcely know how to put it into words; but—but I am uneasy about Lela."

The marquis leaned on his stick and frowned out at the heath.

"Is she simply knocked up, poor darling, with nursing me, or is it something more serious? Ever since I got out of bed I have not seen her. She keeps me at arm's-length, as it were. Surely she is not dangerously ill, and you are keeping it from me?"

The marquis was silent, but shook his head.

"Whatever it is," said Lord Edgar, "you and she must know that, now I have strength to crawl about, I must go to her! What is it you are keeping from me, father? Do you think I have not noticed that you are acting in concert with her? What is the matter with your poor darling?" and he half arose, discovering his weakness in the uncertain movement of his limbs.

This appliance has a peculiar concave shape purposely formed to fit snugly over joint and eliminate friction and pressure from footwear, and at the same time also prevent the enlarged joint from forcing shoe out of shape.

Is superior to old-fashioned leather and felt protectors, as it is made from an antiseptic rubber, and being worn right on bunion inside bootery it excludes air, forms and retains a moisture pocket which keeps the joint soft and pliable, removes that hard skin or callus that so often accompanies and increases the irritability of the enlargement, also reduces inflamed condition.

SCHOLL Eases the Feet

"Sit still," said the marquis, in his grave voice. "She is not well enough to see you, and you are not well enough to go to her."

"Send the doctor who is attending her to me," said Lord Edgar, quickly. The marquis bit his lip.

"No doctor is attending her," he said.

An impatient sigh burst from Lord Edgar's lips.

"No doctor! And she so ill that I may not see her! That she can not come to me! Great heavens, sir, I—"

"Leave the bell alone," said the marquis, rising and hobbling to the door. "I will go and inquire how she is."

He summoned Lela's maid and begged permission to see Lady Fane, and presently she took him to the dining-room which Lela had used for her own.

She was sitting by the table, with writing materials before her, but the pen had fallen from her fingers onto the paper and made a great blotch, and that was all. She arose as the marquis entered, and stood, white as marble, with her hands clasped together, but outwardly calm.

The marquis was silent for a moment.

"I have come," he said, "because the hour I have been expecting has arrived. Your husband—my son—insists upon seeing you."

A spasm of wistful pain crossed her pale face, and her lips quivered.

"He is, naturally, growing suspicious. I am surprised he has not insisted upon coming to you before this. This morning he said: 'If you were so ill how would it be possible for you to go to Faneworth the day after tomorrow?' What am I to say?"

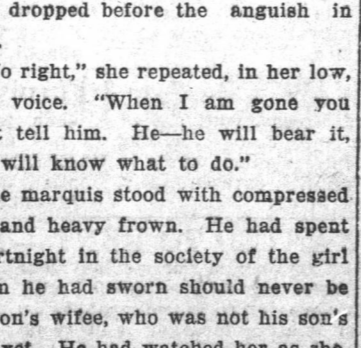

And the great marquis, whose name for diplomacy and strategy stood so high, leaned upon his stick and bit his lip, utterly perplexed and nonplused. Then Lela spoke.

"I have been thinking"—she had been doing little else, poor child, since the moment she had known the truth—"and I have come to a decision. I must leave this house at once, my lord. I—I have no right here, now that Lord Edgar has recovered."

She said it with such simple innocence and pathos that the marquis' eyes dropped before the anguish in hers.

"No right," she repeated, in her low, rare voice. "When I am gone you must tell him. He—he will bear it, and will know what to do."

The marquis stood with compressed lips and heavy frown. He had spent a fortnight in the society of the girl whom he had sworn should never be his son's wife, who was not his son's wife yet. He had watched her as she with a devotion no woman could have excelled, had nursed the man whom she thought she married—her husband; and, though he had often seen the tears come into her eyes and roll down her cheeks, he had never heard a word or a moan of complaint. She had behaved like an angel, a saint; in her innate purity, she had even refrained from bestowing one kiss or caress, beyond a touch of the hand, on the man whose life she was watching over.

And, thinking of it all, as he stood and looked at her, the marquis' heart melted.

"You will go!" he said. "Where?" She sighed.

"To Germany"—she touched the blotted paper with her finger. "I—I have been trying to write to my grandfather, but I—I can not! I can not!" and her lips twitched. "But, if I can find strength to tell him, perhaps he will love me still—he will let me stay with him. You will take Edg—Lord Fane—to Faneworth, my lord? Will you—shall I be asking too much if I ask you to let me know how he—"

She could go no further for the tears, but turned her head aside.

The marquis, for the first time in his life, was guilty of uttering an oath before a lady.

"By heaven and earth!" he exclaimed—the gout was coming on—"this is too much! I can not stand it any longer! Child, come with me!"

Lela shrunk back as he extended his white hand.

"No, no! I could not bear to say good-by!" she said.

"Come with me, I say!" he said, almost sternly, though his voice shook; and, grasping her arm, he drew it within his own, and led her into the room where Lord Edgar sat perplexed and troubled.

"Lela!" he exclaimed, rising and forgetting his weakness. "Are you better?"

He would have crossed the room and taken her in his arms, but that the marquis put up a hand and stopped him.

"Wait!" he said.

"What do you mean?" demanded Lord Edgar, his face paling—he was still weak. "What is it, Lela? Why do you not come to me?"

For answer she looked at him sadly.

"I will tell you," said the marquis. "Sit down, Edgar. Child, you stay by my side."

Edgar sunk into the chair, his eyes fixed on Lela anxiously, but glancing now and again at the marquis' haughty face with a half-born fear and doubt that he was about to snatch Lela from him.

"Edgar, the reason the child can not let you come near her is an all-sufficient one. If it were possible, I would have kept the truth from you until you had regained your strength, but it was not possible. At any rate, I suppose you will be man enough to bear the shock, and to decide on a course of action."

Typing by Electricity.

New Invention's Novel Features.

An invention has lately been completed by a Bristol man which it is believed will be of inestimable value in the business world.

It is an electric typewriter, which besides enabling the operator to work at a much greater speed, is said to be absolutely noiseless. It will be of an entirely new design and consist mainly of a keyboard and carriage, the mechanism of the ordinary typewriter being done away with.

The machine will have visible writing and take paper of any width without bending, while a novel feature will be variable type, by means of which different languages may be written on the same machine.

No special electric installation is necessary, as all the current required can be obtained from an ordinary electric lamp fitting.

The inventor claims that a much greater speed will be possible than on existing machines, while the energy required to operate the electrical typewriter will be considerably less than one-half the amount necessary for a "hand-driven" model. For instance, while the finger pressure used in striking an ordinary typewriter key ranges from two and a half to five ounces, according to the machine, the electrical typewriter will only need one ounce of pressure, even for stencil cutting, or where several carbon copies are required.

The new invention, it is stated, will not cost more, if as much, as the ordinary typewriter, and will certainly not get out of repair so easily.

German Caretakers Sink Interned Ships.

Hoisting of Red Flag the Signal — Peace Treaty May Be Signed To-Day — Winnipeg Under Martial Law.

GERMAN WARSHIPS SUNK BY CREWS.

LONDON, June 22. The German officers and sailors forming the complements of the German ships interned at Scapa Flow sank most of their fleet to-day. All the big ships, the battleships and battle cruisers excepting the Baden, and numerous craft were sunk while others went ashore in a half-sunken condition. Eighteen destroyers were beached by tugs. Four are still afloat while the remainder went under. The wholesale sinking of the German ships which came to Scapa Flow under the terms of the Armistice was carefully arranged by the officers and crews. All explosives had been removed and therefore the only means of destroying the fleet was by opening the sea cocks. The ships went slowly down with the German flag, which the crews had hoisted, blowing at the mastsheads. The crews composed entirely of Germans under the terms of the armistice which did not permit of British guards aboard, took to the boats when the vessels began to settle. While making for the shore the boats were challenged and called upon to surrender. Some of them ignored the summons and were fired upon, a few casualties resulting. This stroke apparently was a surprise and the first news reached London through a correspondent who was informed by farmers in the neighborhood that they had seen the German ships sinking with their flags aloft. The German officers and crews have been made prisoners. None of the officers to-night would offer an opinion as to how they are to be dealt with. The Admiralty at first denied the report, but later confirmed it and issued an official statement. The statement says:

"According to the latest reports from Scapa Flow, all the interned battleships and battle cruisers have sunk, except the battleship Baden, which is still afloat. 5 light cruisers have sunk, but three have beached. Eighteen destroyers were beached by local tugs. Four destroyers are still afloat. The rest of the destroyers have sunk. A German Rear Admiral and most of the Germans from the ships are now in custody aboard British ships. Some boats from the ships refused to stop when ordered and were fired upon. A small number of Germans were killed or wounded. In accordance with the terms of the armistice the German ships were interned with skeleton crews as caretakers and without British guards aboard."

The first news of the sinking of the German fleet was contained in a Thurso despatch to the Exchange Telegraph. Early in the afternoon a report was circulated by the Exchange Telegraph Company that virtually the whole German fleet at Scapa Flow had been sunk, but a few minutes later the News Agency asked that the despatch be cancelled. A later despatch by the Associated Press from Thurso said, "The hoisting of a red flag at noon was the signal for the crews to scuttle the German warships in Scapa Flow. The crews took to the boats and rowed towards the shore. The guard ship fired at the Germans who jumped overboard and swam ashore where they were rounded up."

FAVOR SIGNING PEACE TREATY.

BERLIN, June 22. The German National Assembly by a vote of 237 to 138 has decided to sign the Peace Treaty. The assembly to-day gave a vote of confidence in the government of Herr Bauer 238 to 89. This means that the treaty will be signed. Sixty-eight members of the assembly refrained from voting.

A PLEA FOR WILLIAM.

PARIS, June 22. After receiving a vote of confidence the new German cabinet will ask that the Allies waive their demands for the surrender of the former German emperor and for Germany to acknowledge responsibility for the war; but no matter what their reply the Peace Treaty will be signed, according to advices from Weimar to the American peace delegation.

GERMAN SENTIMENT.

PARIS, June 21. The German Provincial press is strongly urging the speedy signing of the treaty. Berlin advices summarizing the situation in Germany up to midnight show the sentiment throughout virtually all Germany to be in favor of accepting the peace terms.

WITH RESERVATIONS.

PARIS, June 22. Communications from the Germans to the Council of Four relating to the vote of the assembly at Weimar, reached here at 7.45 o'clock this evening, and are now being considered by the Council. One of the communications is understood that the assembly voted in favor of signing the treaty with certain reservations.

A FEW REQUESTS.

BERLIN, June 21. Mathias Erberger is reported to have sent a note to Clemenceau asking whether the Allies will agree to accept the immediate admission of Germany to the League of Nations, also if the Powers will consent to the limitation of Germany's indemnity to one hundred billion gold marks and reduce the effort to have former Emperor William surrendered.

INSIST ON UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

PARIS, June 22. The German Government has appointed Dr. Hansel Von Hatthausen of the Peace Delegation to conduct the peace arrangements at Versailles. It is understood that the Allies insist on absolutely unconditional acceptance of the terms, falling which the armies will begin to advance Monday evening.

RIOTING IN WINNIPEG.

WINNIPEG, June 21. The Riot Act was read here this afternoon when the strikers and sympathizers insisted on holding a parade contrary to Mayor Gray's proclamation. One man was killed and several wounded when the mounted police charged into the crowd and fired among them. Armoured cars are now held in readiness with machine guns and the situation is believed to be under control.

NO FURTHER ALTERATIONS.

PARIS, June 21. The Council of Four has definitely rejected the German suggestion that further alterations be made in the Peace Treaty.

MARTIAL LAW IN WINNIPEG.

WINNIPEG, June 21. Winnipeg went under martial law when the riot act was read, but not before one man had been killed and others wounded by revolver shots fired in their defence by mounted troops. It is reported that three hundred of the rioters have been rounded up and are now in the police cells. The troops of the Royal North-West Mounted Police engaged numbered only 59 men and few of these escaped without wounds or contusions, the worst being a broken ankle. The horses suffered in like degree, one of these being blinded by a lump of concrete.

TO SETTLE DIFFERENCES.

LONDON, June 21. (Via Reuters.)—The National Joint Committee has been considering the application to the civil services of the so-called Whitley system for preventing or settling differences between employers and employees. It unanimously recommends the establishment of a national council of 54 members, appointed half by the government and half by the groups of staff associations with subsidiary departmental councils and district committees and a works committee.

DISGRACE TO CANADIANS.

LONDON, June 22. (Via Reuters.)—On behalf of the Canadian Red Cross Society the Chairman of the Epsom Council was handed a check for £2200 to the family of the late Police Sergt. Green who died of injuries received in Tuesday's riot. A letter from the chief commander of the society to the chairman expresses regret for the cowardly attack made on the police station last Tuesday night, and added how deeply all resented the disgrace which this handful of men brought on Canadians overseas.

BAUER IS NOW PREMIER.

BERLIN, June 21. A new German cabinet has been formed under the premiership of Herr Bauer, former Minister of Labor, with Dr. Herman Mueller, the majority Socialist leader, as minister of foreign affairs.

LLOYD GEORGE ILL.

PARIS, June 21. Lloyd George could not attend the meeting of the Supreme Allied Council yesterday, because of sore throat. His place at the conference was taken by Arthur Balfour.

ANOTHER SYMPATHY STRIKE.

VICTORIA, June 21. The local longshoremen have struck in sympathy with coastwise seamen.

SERIOUS FIRE AT MOVIE.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 21. Sixty people were killed and fifty seriously injured in a fire in a motion picture theatre at Mayaguez. Many women and children were trampled to death in the panic.

WATCHING MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, June 21. Developments on the southern border have caused a radical change in the attitude of the U. S. Government toward Mexico. Watchful preparedness has been substituted for watchful waiting, and plans have been perfected to throw a strong punitive expedition across the Rio Grand should the need arise.

NITTI ASKED TO FORM GOVT.

ROME, June 21. King Victor Emmanuel has requested Francesco Nitti, former Minister of the Treasury, to form a cabinet. Giornale d'Italia announces semi-officially that former Premier Titton will be foreign minister.

CANADIAN GRAVES DECORATED

LONDON, June 20. (Reuters' Ottawa Agency.)—The impressive ceremony of the laying of flowers on the graves of Canadian soldiers at Shorncliffe Cemetery, by 4000 school children, took place to-day in the presence of an enormous crowd of spectators. Speeches were made by the Mayor of Folkestone and General Percival who in speaking of the Canadians said no troops had fought more gallantly.

Wise Men Say—

That news is an enemy of success. That news over the teacups travels faster than over the wires. That the fellow who isn't fired with enthusiasm is apt to be fired. That the best way to destroy your enemy is to make him your friend. That if you are only suspicious enough you will always find what you are looking for. That if we were only as perfect as we expect others to be, heaven would be at our very doors. That while one man says of a thing, "It is impossible!" and contents himself with saying so, another one passes him and does it. That we cannot say of anything that it is impossible in this marvellous world of invention and endeavour. We can only say, "It has never yet been done." That the gold of life does not lie hidden in mines; it sparkles in tiny sands all along the common path of every day. He only who gathers it bit by bit from daily duties and pleasures and opportunities and friendships will find himself the possessor of the real treasure at last.

Aerial Accidents.

How They Take Place.
In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, we are told, a pilot only realizes he is going to crash about five seconds before the actual event.
There are three great causes of crashes—the failure of the man, the failure of the engine, and the failure of the machine. The first is by far the most frequent, for the human element is always liable to add danger to the safest exploits, and in flying it often causes fatal accidents. It is not so much the physical failure of a man in a fainting fit, or a sudden attack of sickness, as error of judgement and over-confidence that so often causes disaster.

Fatal Confidence.
The largest number of accidents are caused in landing, as it is there that the great skill of flying lies. The pilot has to touch the ground at a speed of forty or fifty miles an hour, and if he does not do it carefully he is liable to have a severe smash.
Again, he may get off the ground and start to turn and climb at the same time, thus losing so much speed that the machine slideslips to the ground. This is one of the commonest of accidents and is very often fatal. The airman may have done this climbing turn a hundred times, but the day comes when he is over-confident or careless and does not allow himself enough speed. Less than a minute after he leaves the ground he lies in a splintered wreck of wood and wire.

Again, an airman may dive very steeply at a great speed and then carelessly pull the stick back with such a jerk that the tail breaks off, and the machine and pilot drop to the ground like a stone. That and similar accidents are cases of man failure, and happen through over-confidence and through putting too much trust in the machine.

Bad Landings.
Engine failure compels the airman to land at once. He has to choose quickly a landing ground, and it very often happens there are no flat fields within gliding distance of the machine, and so it has to be landed on bad ground and is crashed.

The nearer to the earth the machine is when the engine fails the greater is the danger, as the pilot has less choice of landing ground. If the engine stops when the machine is very low, it is possible that it will crash into a house or a tree, thus causing a fatal accident.

Crashes due to machine failure are fortunately rare. Modern machines are very strongly made, and every piece of wood and metal fitting are carefully tested and inspected, and it is very rare for the wings of a machine to give way or for its tail to break off. Aeroplanes are made to withstand three or four times the normal strain of flight, and consequently this last danger, the obvious to the non-flying public, is fortunately the least apparent to those who fly.

A King's Prayer.

At the cross-roads of Oost Capelle were a dozen children—nervous, suspicious little people, lean from starvation, roughened by prolonged exposure. The party walked in single file, not talking, obviously in charge of the oldest girl. Anxious eyes scanned the sky for enemy air-men or falling missiles.

They were scholars from some cellar school, delayed in their homing by the Germans' abendessen—the evening shelling.

Some way behind the children strode a Belgian officer absorbed in identifying the detonation of distant guns. "There is the evening gun!" said Marie, suddenly.

"I am afraid!" "The German bombs!" "Save us!" cried the children.

"Shame to you!" said the girl-guardian of the trembling group. "We must be brave. Let us say our prayer."

They ran and knelt before a shell-smashed Calvary by the roadside. A dozen dark heads bent over as many pairs of small folded hands. Beyond them vast volumes of dust and fumes from titanic battle-fronts hummed in silver-grey curtains. Homes pounded to powder, rent earth blown heaven-high, made a stupendous and splendid spectacle in the sunset. The little group, praying beside the ruined shrine, stood out dark before the golden sky.

"We must say the Lord's Prayer," she said. "Our father, which are in Heaven." High voices chorused the next phrases. "Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses as—" Then silence. Accusing eyes looked from Marie to the ruined homes and ravished fields.

"And forgive us our trespasses," prayed Marie. Then one voice responded:

"As we forgive them that trespass against us," said Albert the King.

New Relief For Constipation,
"LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandria leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not so delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

Still Abhorrent.
(New York Tribune.)
Thought of Germany as a member of the league properly is highly offensive. The smell of blood is still on her hands. The smoke hardly has blown away from the towns she has burned. To sit down with such a nation when there is no pretence of repentance is profoundly abhorrent. It seems a mockery of the peace and to compromise honor. So emotions arise against what looks like a betrayal.

A Sea Romance in Court.

(From the New York World.)
The acquittal of the Pedersens, father and son, in Federal Court, ends one of the most thrilling sea stories New York has listened to in many a day. It is, in fact, two sea stories at variance. The prosecution's story was of the tyranny of a cruel captain and a Bucko mate, beating and abusing their crew until one of them jumped overboard. As he grasped the log-line, repenting his suicidal act, the captain it was said, refused to put the ship about to save him. This follows good Clark Russell lines, but the captain does not look like that kind of a man; he had character witnesses and there was a defence. It was that the Pedersens had a touch crew to handle. Here were the familiar characters:—The "sea-lawyer," the man who "makes his mark" to a lie; the bully, and, besides them, a less hackneyed figure in tales of the sea, the I. W. W. man, the political agitator. As for putting about in a heavy sea, grizzled cap-mn swore that it couldn't be done; it would have taken the sticks out of her, or something like that. Nor could the man have lived to be picked up. The jury accepted this view of the case. So, lying at the world's great gateway between sea and land, New York gets an occasional revealing glimpse of the grim adventures lives men live who carry the commerce that makes the city great. Fiction, conning such tales of struggle, goes to school to fact.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

World's Largest City.

According to statistics published in the United States, New York is bigger in population than London by a quarter of a million, the figures for 1919 being 8,045,000 in New York against London's 7,787,326.

For many years before the war the area and population of New York was steadily increasing and the margin between the size of the two communities growing less and less until, in 1917, New York gained the lead.

The land area of Greater London is 693 square miles, while Greater New York covers 690 square miles, of which, however, ninety-five square miles is uninhabited marsh land. Like London, the population of the business capital of the New World is densest at the centre, where there are 105,000 people to the square mile compared with London's 80,000.

It should be noted that New York's claim to be the greatest community on earth is based on estimated figures, which in view of the fluctuations of the war may be found to be quite inaccurate when the next census is taken.

Indeed, if a census were taken now, it is probable that the population of Greater London has been inflated by the war to an extent far greater than is generally supposed and when more houses are available the number of people living in the Metropolitan area is certain to increase still more.

What He Called Her.

"What is your name?" asked the mistress of her new Chinese cook. "My name is Wang Hank Ko," was the reply.
"Oh, well, as I shall not be able to remember that I shall call you John," remarked the lady.
"Valley good, ma'am," acquiesced the Chinaman. "And what is your name, ma'am?"
"My name is Mrs. Swankton de Vere."
"Me no remember that," quoth the Chinaman. "Me call you Sally."

The Promised Spoils.

When hysterical men and women are tempted to feel sad over the terms of peace offered to Germany, it would be a spiritual and mental gain for them to think over what the Germans has done and what he intended to do if he proved the conqueror. One of the most enlightening statements in this regard has been made by August Thysson, one of Germany's greatest steel manufacturers who was present at a number of conferences preceding the war, where the Kaiser made eloquent speeches and individual offers as well. Mr. Thysson was personally offered a free grant of 30,000 acres in Australia, and also a loan of 150,000 pounds to develop business. Several other firms were promised great concessions in India. This conquest of India seemed to be a subject over which the Kaiser would always enquire, and in the course of a speech he exclaimed: "India is occupied by the British and in a manner governed by them, but it is by no means completely governed by them. We shall not merely occupy India; we shall conquer it, and the vast revenues that the British permit to be taken by Indian princes will, after our conquest, flow in a golden stream into the Fatherland. In all the richest lands of the earth, the German flag will float over every other flag." There are many other things said by the Emperor in 1912, proving beyond the shadow of a doubt that the war was deliberately planned and prepared for that far back.

Two friends, a Londoner and a Scotsman, happened to be lunching together recently in a certain restaurant. The latter, true to his natural habit, kept turning round to see that his hat and coat remained still on the peg where he had left them. "You are a suspicious chap," said his friend at last. "Who do you think is going to walk in here and steal our coats?" "Can't say," replied Scotty, "but I'll take good care nobody gets mine; yours went ten minutes ago."

A TYPICAL PROBLEM
A letter friend of mine wishes me to answer a question which it seems to me is of general interest because it is typical of a problem many people have to face.
She is a woman of over fifty. Her married daughter, who lives in a town several hundred miles away, wishes her to give up her home and come to live near her. She loves the daughter deeply and wants to go and yet she hesitates. She has lived in her present home forty years! She has many dear old friends and several relatives nearby and she loves her church work. Do I think she will be happy to go?

If she had asked me that ten years ago I think I should have said at once, "Don't your daughter and her children mean more to you than all your friends and relatives, and can't you work in some other church?"
To-day I am not so sure. And one reason is that I happen to know of two somewhat similar cases.

She Fairly Worshipped Her Daughter

In the first case the woman was a widow with one daughter whom she truly worshipped. The mother lived in Virginia. The daughter after her marriage went to New York to live and wished her mother to come and live near her, which the mother finally decided to do. She gave up her little home, and took a small apartment in New York. When she got there she found that her daughter was wrapped up in her husband and had many social and other duties and could not be with her as much as she had pictured. And when she was alone she was so lonely and so wild with homesickness that she simply couldn't stand it. Fortunately her daughter brought back her old home and sent her back there.

But They Were Town Bred People.

The other case is of a man and wife whose daughter had married and gone to live in the country. They too, sold their home and followed her to a home nearby. After three or four years they found that bred as they were to town life, they were not happy and they too have gone back to their old home.

Of course there are also many cases where such changes have brought happiness.
It boils down to this
I suppose it really boils down to this. If you are the sort who have no life outside of your children it is foolish to drag out the years away from them. If you are of the sort who have kept your friends and your interests and hobbies, will you not be happier to make your headquarters where these interests and friends and hobbies are, and to go and see your sons and daughters and have them come to see you now and then?
Also, if one possibly can try out these schemes before making them permanent that is always best. So many things look well and fair on the surface that do not work out quite the same when we try them out.

A Puzzled Prelate.

A good story of John Strange Winter (Mrs. Stannard) is told by Frank M. Boyd in a "Pelican's Tale." It was when the famous authoress' most successful story, "Bootle's Baby" was at the height of its popularity, and Mrs. Stannard, meeting the then Bishop of London at a certain function, sought to introduce herself to him.
"My lord," she said, "I am John Strange Winter."
Then, seeing the good prelate gaze upon her with a puzzled expression, she added, "You know, 'Bootle's Baby.'" Then the Bishop fed.
anon, meeting his hostess, the Bishop took her on one side, and said: "Do you know, Lady—that you are entertaining a lunatic. She came up to me a little time ago, and first of all stated that she was a man, and then that she was a child!"

"Now, how do bees dispose of their honey?" he enquired.

SERMONS WE SEE.
I'd rather see a sermon than to hear one any day.
I'd rather one should walk with me than merely tell the way.
The eye's a better pupil and more willing than the ear.
Fine counsel is confusing, but example's always clear.
And the best of all the preachers are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put in action is what everybody needs.

I can soon learn how to do it if you'll let me see it done.
I can watch your hand in action, but your tongue too fast may run.
And the lectures you deliver may be very wise and true.
But I'd rather get my lessons by observing what you do.
For I may misunderstand you and the high advice you give,
But there's no misunderstanding how you act and how you live.

When I see a deed of kindness I am eager to be kind.
When a weaker brother stumbles, and a stronger man stays behind,
Just to see if I can help him, then the wish grows strong in me
To become as big and thoughtful as I know that friend to be.
And all travelers can witness that the best of guides today
Is not the one who tells them, but the one who shows the way.

One good man teaches many, men believe what they behold,
One deed of kindness noticed is worth forty that are told.
Who stands with men of honor learns to hold his honor dear,
For right living speaks a language which to everyone is clear.
Though an able speaker charms me with his eloquence, I say,
I'd rather see a sermon than to hear one any day.

Lake That Disappears.

In Georgia, near Vladosta, there is a lake which disappears every three or four years and then comes back again, no matter what the weather is like.
The lake is three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, with an average depth of 12 feet of water. There are natural subterranean passages beneath it, through which the water passes off.
It takes two or three weeks to disappear, when a mammoth basin is left in its place, which furnishes a beautiful sandy beach. After a month or so the water begins to return, and then in a couple of weeks it is the same magnificent stretch of water as it was before.

His First and Last.

It is not at all uncommon for members of the House of Lords to confess to feelings of mortal terror when facing Parliament for the first time; but the frankest is easily that of Lord Gifford, son of the famous Lord North. He appears to have been considerably handicapped by the high expectations hanging on his family name.
He brought out a sentence or two before the fatal mist rose before his eyes. "I then lost my recollection, and could see nothing but the Speaker's wig, which swelled, and swelled, and swelled, till it covered the whole House. I sank back upon my seat, and never attempted another speech, but quietly accepted the Chiltern Hundreds, assured that Parliament was not my vocation."

Puff! Puff! Puff!

Why does a locomotive engine puff? And why does some seem more athletical than others and puff more?
It all depends on the size of the driving wheels, which govern the number of puffs which the engine gives in a certain distance.
For every turn of the wheel it gives four separate puffs. It has been reckoned that if the circumference of the driving wheels is twenty feet and the train is going at fifty miles an hour, an engine, on an average, gives 880 puffs a minute. The puff is really due to the abrupt emission of waste steam from the smoke-stack. When there are more than eighteen puffs a second the human ear cannot distinguish them separately.

The Price of Living.

The present state of unrest all over the world is almost inconceivable. Near and far there are upheavals and strikes brought about by changed and changing conditions, the chief cause of all being the difficulty of men on wages, to make weekly pay meet weekly expenditure. The price of life is more than the equivalent of man's earning power, and for this reason the universal demand is for shorter hours and more pay. The war created the profiteer, which might be defined as a species of human vampire, fastening on to and sucking the blood (money) from all with whom it had dealings. This creation is hard to kill. It is endowed with many lives, and down it in one place and it springs up in another. It is the hydra of modern life and requires united action if it is to be destroyed. Hence the determination of workers the world over to kill this monster which is preying upon them in all its hideousness and rapacity.

The war is over: the strain of years of conflict has lessened, but the fight for life and the means of living continues. Prices are unchanged—if anything they are in excess of those obtaining during war times. How then can there be a return to normal, when the dollar earned is equal in value to the dollar spent. Sociologists are concerned greatly over this difficult problem, and its solution is fraught with complexities. If the root of the trouble is with the profiteer, then the profiteer must be eliminated, not by force, but by every legal measure that can be discovered. If he is the menace, remove him and the evil is remedied.

The dangerous discontent which is in evidence everywhere is the real, the natural, outcome of present day prices for the necessities of life. Men cannot earn sufficient to feed, clothe and educate their families, all their wages being but sufficient to provide the wherewithal for existence. More wages is, consequently, the demand. And more wages means a proportionate advance on the articles of consumption. Where then is it going to end? The wage earner cannot agree to a reduction in stipend while prices are high, and on the other hand the merchant, the manufacturer, the farmer, claim that they cannot begin to lower the price of their wares and products while the scale of wages to employees is kept at top figures. Obviously then, there is a deadlock. The question is whose business or duty is it to break that deadlock. The man who receives a weekly or monthly salary is patently not the one to begin coming down and working at a lower rate. It is difficult enough for him to subsist as it is, and to work for less money than he is at present receiving would be ruinous while high prices are maintained. The merchant, manufacturer and farmer will argue that they also cannot afford to begin cutting prices, because their source of income would thereby be curtailed.

Out of it all must be reached the conclusion that real adjustment can only come by an endeavour to increase the margin of wages above the cost of living, and that can best be brought about by increasing the efficiency of general organization, to put it briefly by doing big business in output and by co-operating in industrial buying and selling. An agreement must be reached between employer and employee, (no matter what the status of either) and inter-organization and full co-operation brought about, the outcome of which would make for the common good. Unless something is done along the lines suggested we shall have "a tower of Babel that will pierce the clouds and make life impossible for millions of people." But to be beneficial this inter-organization and co-operation will have to be world-wide. No one section or country can begin and carry it out alone. It must be universal. Is it possible of accomplishment?

Particulars of Railway Accident.

Particulars of the Railway accident, mentioned in this paper Saturday, are now available. The accident occurred at 12:35 p.m. Saturday, when about a half mile east of Topsail station. The last-first-class-car containing about 40 passengers, jumped the rails with the train travelling at a fair speed, and overturned once, bringing up against a stout telegraph pole before overturning for the second time. There was considerable excitement as the car rolled over, several women fainting. No one was killed although several were cut and bruised. Miss Bartlett was bleeding about the face, a portion of the chain of her eyeglasses having become embedded in the flesh. The injured passengers were put aboard the other car and a report of the occurrence wired on to the Despatch Office. Dr. Paterson was sent by motor car to meet the train and attend to the wounded. In the meantime arrangements to have five of the injured taken to Hospital were made, these being Pte. Wm. Peach, of Carbonear, who received a deep gash near his ear, necessitating three stitches; Misses Kelly, Clarke, Hawco, Power. Passengers on the train consider the cause of the accident to have been the breaking of the coupling. Conductor P. Lee, was in charge of the train, and rendered aid when the accident occurred. The official report of the accident is as follows:

"Train number 10 from Carbonear, in charge of Conductor P. Lee, got one first-class passenger car derailed and over on its side about half mile east of Topsail station at 12:35 p.m. to-day. It being the rear car, passengers were transferred to the other cars and train arrived at St. John's 2.00 p.m."

The Women Cook It.

All the cooks employed by the California Fruit Grower's Exchange in the manufacture of Sunkist Marmalades are women. A Scotch woman, a connoisseur of marmalades and preserver who brought the recipes employed to California superintends the cooking. She instituted "the small stove method" saying that it was the only way to make good marmalade or jelly in any quantity. Thus Sunkist Marmalades are cooked on small individual stoves—less than four gallons being cooked at one time in order to be sure that the cooking is done just right.

This Scotch lady selected women-cooks exclusively as her assistants, because "no man, no matter how able was ever a cook by instinct." Thus in the manufacture of Sunkist Orange Marmalade, Sunkist Orange Jelly and Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade there are three recipes followed: "Home Materials," "Home Stoves," and "Home Cooks," with the sole object of getting "the real Home Taste."

Nursing Sister Returning

Miss Beatrice Moores, who has been in France, attached to the Nursing staff of the First Canadian General Hospital, is a passenger on the incoming express. She arrived at Quebec on the Megantic on the 2nd inst., and after proceeding to London, Ontario, in charge of 92 hospital cases, returned to Montreal, where she was demobilized. Miss Moores has been in France since 1915, and was at Staples during the German raids on that town in the early months of last year, when several of her sister nurses were killed. Miss Moores is a sister of Mrs. J. C. Puddister.

Baptism by Immersion.

With about two thousand people present, some ten members of the Bethesda Mission of New Cover St., were baptized by immersion in Mundy Pond at 3:15 yesterday afternoon. Rev. C. E. Baker, travelling evangelist of Montreal, performed the ceremony of dipping, being attired in a long black, waterproof gown, with long rubber waders. A submerged, sloping plankway made it easier for the neophytes to reach a proper depth of water in which to be immersed. Of the ten, seven were women and three men.

Personal Mention.

Lieut. Loyal Reid, son of Mr. R. G. Reid, who has been in training at Kingston Military College, arrived by last night's express.

Miss Fanny Harvey, of Botwood, left by Tuesday's express for Montreal where she will spend the summer with her brother.

Miss Violet Morgan, who has been absent from her home the past seven years, in Canada and the United States, returned by Saturday's express, on a visit to her parents.

The S.S. Lady of Gaspé got away yesterday morning for Halifax and Boston, taking a small quantity of freight.

LUNCHEON TO ALCOCK AND BROWN.
LONDON, June 22. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Editor of the Daily Mail presided at the luncheon tendered Capt. Alcock and Lieut. Brown, and there was a large and distinguished gathering present, including the American Ambassador, the Greek and Serbian Ministers, Col. Winston Churchill, Secy. for War, Lord Reading, the Dominion High Commissioners and leading officers of the Air Force. Col. Churchill in presenting a cheque for $50,000, from the Daily Mail, and $15,000 from other donors said the achievement was one of the greatest triumphs ever known, and also showed the heroic qualities of bygone times. It was no disparagement to Hawker and the United States Navy to say this flight has a greater significance in drawing together the peoples on both sides of the Atlantic. This significance is very real and deep. We are united in one harmonious association of English speaking, free, Democratic peoples, constituting a sure promise for the future security of the world. Col. Churchill dwelt also on the great services of Lord Northcliffe and the Daily Mail to Aviation. Capt. Alcock said his impressions of the journey were very few. He spoke of the interest taken at the start by the people of St. John's and then repeated his account of the flight. Capt. Alcock said that after the first forty minutes they only got the sky for half an hour, but got very anxious when they had to drop to a very low altitude, but fortunately saw the sea when at a hundred feet. During this dive, the indicator, which had stopped, restarted working. Subsequently the petrol gauge became covered with hail which he chipped off with his knife. For several hours he flew, trying to get above the clouds, and at 11,000 feet got a glimpse of the sun at about six o'clock in the morning. He then descended near the water and so remained until they saw land. Lieut. Brown in a modest speech said the fact that they had accomplished what they had set out to do was the greatest satisfaction. He eulogized the work of the authorities in supplying Meteorological reports, which however were often unavoidably late. He detailed the Meteorological conditions of the flight and said that at the height which they flew snow and hail froze to the airplane.

People Indignant.
The residents of Alexander Street are complaining that the condition of the drains on the street are in a most unhealthy condition, and are unanimous in asking that the civic authorities have them flushed without delay. They have not had this done since the winter, and their state may be better imagined than described. Now that the summer is about here and the days are getting warm it behoves the Council to get busy and flush the drains, not only of Alexander Street, but of every street in the city.

Latest From Neptune.
The Minister of Marine and Fisheries received the following message from Captain Joyce of the Neptune this morning: "Position W.N.W., 15 miles off Southern Grey Islands; ice very heavy, close jammed; no water in sight; people getting very impatient. All well at present."

Housing Problem.
We understand that Miss Harris will attend the public meeting this evening, and a general invitation is extended to all ladies interested in the better housing conditions of workmen, Returned Soldiers and Sailors.

S. S. Fern Refloated.

Special to Evening Telegram. KING'S COVE, To-Day. The S. S. Fern was refloated yesterday at three-thirty and towed here by S. S. Ingraham, and is now tied up to the Government wharf with one pump keeping her free. Before refloating, her deck load had to be discharged and 50 pieces from her hold. The Majestic.

To-night's show at the Majestic Theatre consists of the big picture "The Still Alarm" and the real comedy "The Amateur Highwayman." Featuring Thos. Sauchl, the great actor, The Pioneer Film Corporation's presentation, as pictured from the novel by Joseph Arthur, "The Still Alarm" has been aptly described as "the greatest melo-drama of all ages." All who see the picture must agree with the description. It is replete with splendid acting, striking situations and the power to interest. The comedy needs no word from us. The Majestic comedies never do.

Souvenir Post Cards.

The Telegram acknowledges with thanks the receipt of a series of splendid post card views of the Vickers-Vimy biplane, which successfully made the non-stop trans-Atlantic flight. The pictures were taken at the Quidi Vidi drome, and are on exhibition in the window of Percie Johnson, Ltd. As souvenirs of the biggest event ever pulled off, no person should be without a set of these cards.

Co., however, we were informed that there was no news whatever of the strike.

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, June 23, '19. Hypozone will deodorize anything that has a noxious odor, from fetid perspiration to bilge water. It deodorizes because it is a real and genuine disinfectant, destroying the germs which cause the foul smell by liberating ozone in abundance, without leaving any odor whatever behind. Its use as directed will prevent and cure Spanish Influenza, Hay Fever, and Catarrh, many skin diseases, and boils. As a wash for sores and cuts it is quite unequalled. In bottles, 45c. Larger quantities at prices that make Hypozone the cheapest as well as the strongest of disinfectants.

St. Mary's Church Diamond Jubilee.

The services held in this church yesterday will long be remembered by those who attended. At eight o'clock there was a celebration of the Holy Communion, the Rector being celebrant. At 11 o'clock a large congregation assembled for Mattins which was followed by Holy Communion. His Excellency the Governor, attended by Lieut. Feld was present, and in view of this coupled with the fact that Sunday was the eighth anniversary of the King's Coronation, the National Anthem was sung immediately after the processional hymn.

The office of Mattins was taken by the Rector, the Rev. H. L. Pike (a former Curate of the Parish) reading the Lessons. At the celebration of the Holy Communion Rev. Canon Bolt, the first elected Rector of St. Mary's, was celebrant assisted by Rev. A. B. S. Stirling. The Rev. Canon Bolt was preacher, and delivered a powerful sermon from Joshua iv. 21 "What mean these stones?" It was noted that the stones which the Israelites erected in the midst of Jordan, according to God's commands, were to be a perpetual memorial of God's goodness and mercies in the past as in the future. These stones constituted the Israelites' first sanctuary after their wanderings and were intended to set future generations thinking. They were to learn from the past.

It is so with us. What does the Sanctuary of St. Mary the Virgin mean to us? "What mean these stones?" The preacher then spoke retrospectively as one whose connections with St. Mary's church is certainly unique. His words found a responsive chord in many hearts for memories came crowding into the minds of men and women as they thought of the days that are gone. Nor did the preacher omit to refer to the days which are to come when undoubtedly the church will be obliged to meet greater demands than ever before. The bodies and souls of men are in the care of the church for Jesus redeemed both. The keynote of the age will be service for others—the call is for sacrifice, and it is no new call but the old one becoming more insistent.

In closing, the Rev. Canon exhorted the congregation of St. Mary's to take their part in this universal work—in accordance with a broad view of life. The whole sermon constituted a stirring appeal to all in the Name of the Lord.

Co. The "Atlantic" is fully completed and ready for the flight, but must perform await favorable meteorological conditions. These, we understand, are not yet forthcoming and the flight will not take place to-day.

Simonds on "The Great War."

Nothing seems clearer in Paris today than that whether Germany signs or refuses to sign the treaty, more than sixty millions of people will remain sullen, hostile, and resentful over a period of from fifteen to thirty years by external pressure—literally compelled to work for nations they have wronged, and actually deprived of a large fraction of those resources on which modern Germany was built. That these millions of people will accept it in the future, except as their incapacity for resistance makes resistance impossible, cannot be believed. If the United States and Great Britain withdraw their guarantee to France, nothing seems more certain than that Germany will seek to escape the burden of costs of this war by a new attack. Austria deprived of her Czech provinces and become an insignificant state, Hungary reduced to the condition of Portugal, Bulgaria shorn of all her hopes, will remain ready allies of the Germans for a long period of time, while the certain survival of Italian-Jugo-Slav hostility will provide further material.

In other words, while we have passed a just sentence upon the Germans, moderate in its territorial demands, inferior to our deserts in the economic field we have no less imposed a sentence from the consequences of which the German will seek—directly or indirectly, certainly—to escape. For him to join the League of Nations now would be to accept a period of economic servitude extending for fifteen years at the minimum, and involving transfer of the larger part of his earnings to nations he has wronged. The time may come, after Germany has discharged her obligations, when German entry into the League of Nations loyally and unreservedly may be possible; but until that time comes the League of Nations means exactly as much as the United States, Great Britain, and France—the three great liberal powers of the world—choose to make it mean.

And in a very real sense this League (so far as it accepted at all) under our leadership will remain what we choose to make it. President Wilson has seen this clearly, and has made his pledge to France accordingly. If we withdraw our material as well as our moral support, I do not think there is anybody in Paris who believes that the League of Nations will endure. On the other hand, if we, intimately associated with the English, stand surely pledged to support France against new German aggression, that aggression will in all human possibility be avoided. From "Issues of the Peace Conference," by Frank H. Simonds, in the American Review of Reviews for June, 1919.

To Rebuild Rheims Cathedral.

A scheme initiated in Denmark to sell special stamps, like the well-known Christmas stamps, for the purpose of procuring money to rebuild Rheims Cathedral as a monument to lasting peace, is being put into operation. Committees have already been formed in different countries. In Denmark the honorary president of the committee will be Princess Margrethe; in France, Mme. Poincare; in England, Queen Alexandra; in Sweden, Princess Ingeborg; in Finland, General Mannerheim. The stamp will be printed and distributed from Denmark. The first edition of 400,000,000 is expected to bring in 20,000,000 crowns. The stamp, with a picture of the cathedral, bears the inscription, "Pax, Veritas, Libertas, Justitia," and a motto for the different countries.

Red Spies Are Worse Than the Old Regime

If Russia under the Tsars suffered from espionage and threw off the hateful yoke of the secret police, it is not to be wondered. What did surprise the investigator was that the Bolsheviks should have restored the system of espionage with twice its terror says Langdon Warner, in the June Scribner. When I say twice its terror I ask to be taken literally. In the old days the suspect was visited, his house searched, a document (possibly planted there by the police) found, and the poor wretch dragged off never to be seen again by his wife and children. That was sometimes the fate of the rich men or even occasionally of the bourgeois; almost any public servant of the upper classes was liable to it. But it never happened in the house of the present.

Under Bolshevik rule the peasant is as likely to suffer as any one else. He, too is dragged off without much ceremony, but he is more often shot than imprisoned—not that it makes much difference. Not only does he suffer but his wife and his eldest daughter are outraged by the officers of justice, who lead off the cow and drive the pigs down the lane, and fill with bullet-holes the objects which are not worth stealing. Next day the neighbor who has lodged the complaint feels justified in taking charge of what is left, and in tilling the abandoned fields. If indeed he belongs to the class which tills.

Thus it came about that the peasants could not be called sincere Bolsheviks once they had tasted the bitterness. I saw many who dared Lieut.-Col. Collishaw May Go to Russia.

Lieut.-Col. Raymond Collishaw, the famous Canadian aviator, who hails from British Columbia, but who recently returned again to England, inspired with the desire to fly across the Atlantic, is certainly a true patriot. Upon returning to England to bring back that huge Handley-Page machine, the Russian situation caught his attention, especially the fact that Canadian and British soldiers were still fighting there, and he at once offered his services to command an air squadron in order that he might give further aid to the world's great cause. Whether he will go to Russia or return to attempt the trans-Atlantic flight, remains, at the time of writing, to conjecture. Much of interest may be said of this hero.

His squadron—numbered 203—before the amalgamation of R.F.C. and R.N.A.S., "number three naval"—has not an ordinary squadron. His fight commanders and pilots may, to the casual observer, have looked ordinary, but they were not. Their one idea was to serve him, and the best way to serve him—and the way he appreciated best—was the shooting down of Huns.

After a successful scrap, "Collie," as he was known to his friends, was always to be found in the anteroom of his squadron mess eagerly listening to the story of the fight. To his pilots the mere honor of "shooting down" a Hun machine was nothing compared to the pat on the back that "Collie" generally administered after a successful fight.

The code of honor of his squadron, built up by himself of course, was very high. Here is one little incident that helped to build that code.

He was returning alone one evening, and had just enough petrol in his tank to carry him back to his aerodrome. As he crossed our front line he casually glanced back, and found a broken-up formation of our long-distance bombers gallantly fighting a big patrol of Huns.

Without hesitation he turned back and climbed up to the fight. Without his assistance the bombers would have had very short shift. As it was he fought the Hun scouts all over the sky, and shot two down. By then the bombers were safely across our lines. At 14,000 feet, five miles into "Hunland" Collishaw's engine "knocked out" through his petrol supply having run out. Twisting and dodging his assailants, who realized that his engine had stopped functioning, "Collie" glided back west, and effected a perfect landing a quarter of a mile inside the British lines!

There are scores of other tales of his personal gallantry that might be told, but it is unnecessary to tell them, for the Canadian public already knows his true worth.

If he goes to Russia, in preference to attempting the Atlantic flight, it will mean that he considers the world can be helped along better by his doing his little share in straightening out Russia's tangled locks, rather than coming into the world's limelight as the first man to cross the Atlantic in an aeroplane.

Hero of the sea, the air, and the Antarctic, we watch Collishaw with a kindly eye for his next sphere of adventure.

For those who do not know, his decorations,—so far—are—D.S.O. and bar, D.S.C., D.F.C., Antarctic medal, (snow white), Mons Star, and Croix de Guerre, with two palms.—Canadian Motor Boats.

An Arctic Without Ice.

WASTED WARMTH FOR ICEBOUND COASTS.

Down the coast of Labrador sweeps a current only second to the Gulf Stream in power, but while the Gulf Stream is warm, this pours straight out of the north and bears with it the cold of the Arctic. It is owing to this current that all that coast from Newfoundland down to New York suffers from so severe a winter climate. The cold of the Labrador current meeting with the Gulf Stream causes the constant fogs, which are so great a danger to trans-Atlantic traffic. These two currents meet on the banks of Newfoundland, and the effect on the Gulf Stream is disastrous. It is not only cooled, but spread out thinwise, so that it loses three-fourths of all its power for good.

It is soberly suggested that, by building a jetty 200 miles long across the shoals, which extend eastward from Newfoundland, the Labrador current would be turned eastward into deep water, where it would naturally sink, and no longer interfere with the Gulf Stream.

This warm, blue river would then pass unchecked on its northward course and striking against the Arctic ice fields would melt them away. The whole climate of the Arctic Circle would be changed, the British Isles and all Western Europe benefiting enormously, while at the same time

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

THE JUNIOR LEAGUE.

To relieve any misapprehension, we did not mean to infer in Friday's column that the B.L.S. were to enter the juniors. They will play the Lions tomorrow night as scheduled.

YOU SAID IT.

Some of our players prefer batting around all night instead of around 300.

NOBODY LOVES A LOSER!

Lives of baseball stars remind us,
we may toil with brain and mitt;
and, departing, leave behind us, footprints where we used to sit.

"NUTS."

All the Lions needed was Nutting
Ellis—and Nuthin' Else.

LAST WEDNESDAY.

The B.L.S. Athletic Association sold their manager pro tem, listened to the howls of the fans (both of them —John L. and M. J. D.), heard the thud of the green-legs hitting the bottom, and called it "The end of a perfect day."

LOYALTY!

It's easy enough to be pleasant,
When your team's in a winning streak
But the fan worth while—a freak who

Is the one who sticks to a losing team.

THE WEEKLY MAIL.

We received in Friday's mail the following unsigned communication:
"Editor Baseball Column: Do you ever realize that in many cases a bad batting average of a player is due to the Umpire-in-Chief, who, when, the pitcher delivers the ball to the catcher, the Ump closes his eyes and sleeps till the ball hits the catcher's mitt; then, coming to himself, he in many cases, calls a ball "a strike."

In reply we have only to say that it is quite evident that the old Turk All B.I. is going to be with us again this season, but we would say to our correspondent that he is undertaking an impossible task in endeavouring to explain to the fans that the above is the reason why Fred was obliged to sweetly warble "Three strikes—yer out."

KEEP OFF THE DIAMOND.

Sporting Editor, Evening Telegram: It was very gratifying to note the large attendance at the baseball game on Wednesday, despite the adverse weather, and it is to be hoped that a large attendance will continue to be the rule rather than the exception at all football and baseball matches—considering especially that the proceeds will be used principally in keeping the field and stand in A1 condition.

One thing, however, which stood out prominently in yesterday's game was the fact that the small boy element over-ran the field and made themselves a general nuisance. I am quite sure that both Leagues would not object to permitting all schoolboys to come in to the games free, as these are the boys that will eventually make the games successful. At the same time, if it is necessary to engage a couple of policemen to keep them in order, and thus add unnecessary expense, then this privilege should be rescinded.

Another thing is the destruction of fences etc., which have been rebuilt and strengthened at great expense, and it is up to the boys themselves
now to prove that they should be admitted to these games by behaving themselves in a gentlemanly manner.—Very truly, yours—FAN.

Of course, like "the poor," the ubiquitous small boy "we shall always have with us." The crowding inside the fence could be obviated if the groundkeeper were instructed to put the players' benches back to the enclosing fence on either side of the eastern goal. Vandalism, however, is rampant and it is only through instruction at school that this evil can be remedied, but it is regrettable to have to state that "the small boy" is not the only offender in this respect.
—Editor.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S GAME.

The Lions and B.L.S. will clash tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in the second game of the series. The lineups will be published to-morrow and it is rumored there will be some changes in both.

dancing were indulged in until midnight when supper was served by the event was brought to a close by wish-singing of Auld Lang Syne.

The Lure of "Society." Included butterflies dancing around the glare of our presence. All conditions will be levelled and we shall be only asked what service we rendered while upon the earth. The chimney sweep will have a chance with the traction magnate and the poor seamstress with Lady Clara Vere de Vere. Therefore, the lesson taught by the great war should not be forgotten. It is service that counts and social ambition is the maddest of mad delusions. There is nothing in the blue blood business. The greatest criminals of the age have been "aristocrats" and in many instances the saviors of humanity were from the poor and lowly. When you are tempted by senseless longings for social preferment and fill with regrets that your parents were not the sons of robber barons, think of the lowly Nazarene, who from all classes and conditions of men chose to be born in the household of a carpenter. Think of the rail-splitter, Lincoln, he of the shambling stride and uncouth personality, and then tell me whether you believe the so-called aristocrat was the superior of these. Your answer, if you are normally constituted, must be in the negative for these were real kings of men, the others merely parasites born as examples of misdirected purpose. Three Community Nurses are needed to do the public health work here and attend to all the calls received. About three thousand dollars are necessary to finance this proposition for next year and the rest of this one. What are you going to give towards it? June 19, 14

The Empire. (From the Toronto Star.) The British Empire exists because it ought to and must exist, in the best interests of all the countries included in it. Those who try to keep up the fiction that it exists because a few people here and there are on sleepless guard, in constant touch with each other, and earn titles and honors by their mighty labors against the separatist tendencies of entire populations—those who live and thrive by keeping up that fiction will find their occupation gone. Canada is in the British Empire because it is, and ever has been, the desire of the overwhelming mass of her people that she should be in it.

Hold-Up Men Get $15,000. Take Diamonds and Jewelry in Robbery in New York. New York, June 10.—Money, diamonds and jewelry to the value of about $15,000 were taken from Cuban and Syrian diners in the coffee house of Joseph Naumair, 95 Washington Street, when six gunmen successfully made their getaway after one of the boldest daylight hold-ups in recent months. Thomas Donohue, said to be one of the robbers, was caught by the crowd and had to call for protection of the police as he fled from the rough treatment the robbers resorted to was being given to him. The street was crowded with late afternoon shoppers when the six young hold-up men entered the basement cafe. They ordered Naumair and his customers to the rear at the point of revolvers. They forced them to deliver their money and jewelry and when any of the thirty men who were robbed did not have enough valuables to satisfy the thieves they received a blow on the head from a black-jack. When they collected all the valuables they rushed to the street, pursued by the men who had been robbed. The thieves dodged into the hallways and buildings. Patrolman Kilmee followed one man from the scene of the hold-up to 69 Washington St. The robber climbed the stairs to the roof of the building and just as Kilmee was about to collar him he jumped across a six foot air shaft to the roof of the adjoining building. On the other side he told the policeman what he thought of the New York police department. The robbers were evidently familiar with the Washington Street lace district and had Naumair's customers spotted. When the robbers backed the men to the rear one of them stood on a chair and picked out the men with the valuables. "Get that man; he's got the diamonds," said one of the bandits, pointing to Antonio Stephen, a Cuban diamond merchant of 105 East Fifth-street. They relieved him of $6,000 worth of diamonds which he carried in a wallet, and $110 in cash. They also got $2,000 in diamonds from Stephen's partner. Next to be robbed were Jose Slori, a diamond dealer, living at the Hotel American in Fourteenth Street; Elias Ruten, George Foder, and Joseph Shanny, Joseph Borababy and Affad Kawaja, two of the men who only had a few dollars in their pockets, received severe beatings. SAVE THE BABIES should be our slogan. "Child Welfare Week" has been instituted for the purpose of bringing home to all of us our responsibility for the conditions under which the poorer children of this city are born. June 19, 14

LIFT OFF CORNS! Drop Freezone on a touchy corn, then lift that corn off with fingers. Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an itching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic! No humbug! A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

TRANSIENT. The rosebush blooms a little while beside my cottage door; a week or two it puts on style, and then it blooms no more. With lovely things 'tis always, they're doomed to swift decay; a little while they stay with us, and then they fade away. And while I toil the passing bell, a bird sings in my ear, "You would not love them half so much if they were fixtures here!" If roses spangled every lawn, as dandelions do, we soon would wish the blighted things gone, and countless rags we'd chew. Today has been a perfect day, soft breezes zipping by, and not a sullen cloud or gray obscured the azure sky. The birds put up a sweet refrain, their voices sweetly blent; and everything was safe and sane, so far as climate went. But if we knew that every day would be the same as this, would such a weather program pass, would it insure our bliss? The order of the universe is change—let that suffice; we always know there's something worse in store for us, on ice. The rose that blushes by your door must shortly meet its doom; but in a day or week or more bull-thistles there will bloom.

Mooring Towers for Dirigibles. The ship of the air must be preserved from contact with the ground just as carefully as the ship of the sea is prevented from touching bottom. The many cases in which airships have been wrecked when upon the ground proves that the only safe way to anchor an airship is to moor her head on to a lofty mooring mast or tower. She would then ride head-to-wind just as a ship rides head-to-sea when anchored. Hot Water Supply Problem. We can solve all of them, from the 2 1/2 gallons per minute proposition for the bathroom, to the automatic storage system providing 1000 gallons of hot water per hour for hotels and large establishments. We can greatly improve existing systems by providing copper-coil heaters with automatic control, auxiliary to your coal range hot water tank, and insure a constant supply of hot water at all hours. This outfit works only when the coal range fails to heat the water, or if the range is not in use. Phone 97 or call at our Showroom where all particulars will be given. ST. Parliamentary Dunces. Somehow geography has never been a strong point amongst Members of Parliament, so Mr. Lloyd George was probably quite right when he recently assumed that few of his hearers knew anything of Teschen. There was once a well-known M.P. who demanded that the British Fleet should be dispatched to the Caspian Sea; while an equally well known Minister of the Crown was hugely surprised to discover that Cape Breton was an island. Then there is the case of Sir John Rigby, who, as Attorney-General, was one day holding forth on the subject of Antigua. "Where is Antigua?" interjected a member. "I'm hanged if I know," confessed Sir John. When you want something in a hurry for tea, go to ELLIS'—Head Cheese, Ox Tongue, Boiled Ham, Cooked Corned Beef, Bologna Sausage. Cochrane St. Church.

CLOSES SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

Cochrane Street Methodist Centennial Church has evidently had a banner year, according to the tabulated results prepared for the coming sessions of the Methodist Conference, for the Church year, which ended on the 31st May, and as read by the minister, the Rev. Dr. Bond, (at the request of the Official Board) during the service last evening. The results are most satisfactory both as regards the Church membership and finances. There has been an increase in the membership of seventy-five. The Women's Missionary Society as well as the Women's Association have done noble work, the former having raised ten hundred and twenty-three dollars, nearly twenty-five per cent. over the previous year. The Layman's Missionary Committee worked splendidly, the objective of three thousand dollars was raised with an additional increase of eighty dollars. The grand total of all monies received was twenty-six thousand five hundred and eighty dollars, truly a gratifying and magnificent amount. The duplex envelope system at the Sunday services works well and weekly and systematic giving has added much to the success of the year. Although this church carries a very heavy debt on its new building, its congregation is very optimistic. We congratulate Dr. Bond, the officials and the whole congregation on the splendid report both as regards the increase in membership and finances.

The Congregational Pulpit.

"Life's most important question?" was the Rev. Dudley B. Ashford's subject on Sunday night. If we could take a census of people's views on this question, what a variety of opinions we should get. Some would say that life's most important question is "How can I get rich quickly?" Others would answer "How can I manage to get a 'script' or 'When is the next dance?' or 'how can I escape death?' Such are some of the questions which men consider to be important to-day. In Matthew 22, we find some of the questions which troubled men in the time of Christ. On the face of it they were all asked by people who were manifestly insincere. There was the question of the Pharisees for example. The Pharisees were the ultra-patriotic party who hated the Romans like poison. They asked Jesus "Is it right to give tribute to Caesar or not?" They were merely seeking to entrap Jesus in his speech. In answer Jesus simply said, "Show me a penny." "Whose is the superscription?" "Caesar's," they replied. "Then render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things which are God's." It was a crushing reply. Then came the Sadducees, who did not believe in the Resurrection, with their question about the woman who had seven husbands. "Whose would she be in the day of the resurrection?" Jesus replied that in Heaven there is neither marriage nor giving in marriage. Next came the Lawyers with their question as to which is the greatest commandment, to which Jesus replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart."

Gallantry of a Naval Lieutenant. Brilliant deeds of valor under the Ensign were wrought by three officers who died in action, and whom the V. C. has been awarded. One of the trio is, Lieut. Richard Bisset Smith, R.N.R., who showed great gallantry and devotion in command of the ship Otakei on March 10, 1917. The Otakei, which only carried one 4.7 inch gun, sighted the German raider Goupe, which called upon the Otakei to stop. This Lieut. Smith refused to do so, and a duel ensued at ranges of 2000-3000 yards, and lasted for several minutes. The Otakei scored considerable damage and starting a fire, which lasted for three hours. She sustained several casualties and received much damage herself, and was heavily on fire. Lieutenant Smith, therefore, gave orders for the boats to be lowered to save the crew to be rescued. He remained on the ship himself, and went down with her when she sank with the British colours still flying, after what was described in an enemy account as "a duel as gallant as naval history can relate." Lieut. Commander Geoffrey Saxton White, R.N., showed conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as commanding officer of H. M. submarine E-14 on January 28, 1918. E-14 left Mudros on January 27 under instructions to force the Narrows and attack the Goeben reported aground off Nagara Point after being damaged during her sortie from the Dardanelles. It was not found, and E-14 turned back. At about 8.45 a.m. on January 28th a torpedo was fired from E-14 at an enemy ship; eleven seconds after the torpedo left the tube a heavy explosion took place, caused all lights to go out, and sprang the fore hatch. Leaking badly, the boat was blown to 15 feet, and at once a heavy fire came from the forts, but the hull was not hit. E-14 then dived and proceeded on her way out. Soon afterwards the boat became out of control, and as the air supply was nearly exhausted, Lieut. Commander White decided to run the risk of proceeding on the surface. Heavy fire was immediately opened from both sides, and after running the gauntlet for half-an-hour, being steered from below, E-14 was so badly damaged that Lieut. Commander White turned towards the shore in order to give the crew a chance of being saved. He remained on deck the whole time himself. Lieut. Frederick Parslow, R.N.R., showed conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the horse transport Anglo-Calfornian on July 4, 1915. A large submarine was sighted on the port beam at a distance of about one mile. The ship, which was unarmed, was immediately manoeuvred to bring the submarine astern; every effort was made to increase speed, and an S.O. S. was sent out by wireless, an answer being received from a man-of-war. At 9 a.m. the submarine opened fire, and maintained a steady fire, making occasional hits, until 10.30 a.m., when it hoisted the signal to "abandon the vessel as fast as possible." In order to save life, Lieut. Parslow decided to obey, but on receiving a wireless from a destroyer urging him to hold on, he decided to get away on the ship again. The submarine then opened a heavy fire, wrecking the upper bridge, killing Lieut. Parslow, and carrying away one of the port davits, causing the boat to drop into the sea and throwing its occupants into the water. At about eleven o'clock two destroyers arrived on the scene, and the submarine dived. Throughout the attack Lieut. Parslow remained on the bridge, on which the enemy fire was concentrated, entirely without protection, and his magnificent heroism succeeded, at the cost of his own life, in saving a valuable ship and cargo for the country. Thirteen thousand workers were on strike during April. What is the Labor Department doing about it?

An Efficient Sleuth. (From the London Express.) The London consul of a continental kingdom was informed by his government that one of his countrywomen, supposed to be living in Great Britain, had been left a large fortune. After advertising without result he applied to the police, and a clever young detective was sent to work. A few weeks later his chief asked how he was getting on. "I've found the lady, sir." "Good, where is she?" "At my place, I married her yesterday."

Prince's Visit to U. S. Seems to be Assured. London, England, June.—Among the leading members of the American colony in London there is much gratification expressed over the proposed visit of the Prince of Wales to the United States, which is now believed to be assured. Many of them have met his royal highness and they have been so much impressed by his frank and unassuming democratic ways that they are certain that his visit to our shores will go far to aid the mutual understanding in both countries so earnestly desired. Speaking personally the attributes of the prince are his adaptability, frankness, modesty and love of fair play. His presence in the United States for a week would totally revise the erroneous ideas held by many Americans regarding British royalty.
