Newfoundland War Memorial.

Commencing to-day and continuing for one week voluntary subscriptions towards the Newfoundland War Memorial will be received at the following places: A. W. Kennedy's, Duckworth St.; the Board of Trade, T. McMurdo & Co., Ltd., and Connors' Drug Store, Water Street; Fudge O'Mara's, Water Street; West's O'Mara's Drug Store, Rawlins' Cross, and Parsons' Drug Store, LeMarchant Road.

It is not so much how much you give (though, of course, the more you can afford the better) as the fact that everybody gives something. Think of every boy you knitted in the Regiment and in the Naval Reserve (or in other forces of the Allies) and then think of the ones you knew "who didn't come back" and then see if you cannot spare something to help perpetuate the memory of their gallant sacrifice.

Certificates for membership in "The War Memorial Unlimited" are in the press and will be handed to subscribers of one dollar and over, but smaller amounts are welcome from those who cannot give a dollar and suitable receipts will be provided. Every cent subscribed goes towards the Memorial, no gift being deducted for printing or other expenses.

The Executive Committee of the Memorial want to be able to say that they had to ask nobody personally for a subscription towards the War Memorial—that the members of the public subscribed freely of their own will and accord. Think this over and visit one of the Subscription Centres to-day in memory of some soldier or sailor who "went West in the golden glow of sunset."

Mrs. Lillian Taylor Tells How Cuticura Healed Her Baby

"Our baby was two weeks old when his face became very red and terribly itchy, and he was fairly crazy with it. I tried all the skin broke and bled. He could not sleep, and I did nothing even better. His face looked as though he might be disfigured for life.

"I thought I would give Cuticura Soap and Ointment a trial. I found the free sample so good that I bought more and two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a tin of Cuticura Ointment. I used them as directed. (Signed) Mrs. Lillian M. Taylor, Box 99, Brackley, Muskoka, Ont., Dec. 30, 1919.

THE Lady of the Night

Amelia Makes a Success

CHAPTER XXXII. THE LADY OF THE NIGHT.

Love is a strange, mysterious thing! As Eliot put his arm round the Lady of the Night, an indescribable thrill ran through him, and he was conscious of a sense of familiarity, as if he had met her, even known her, before she came near him. He looked down at the face near his shoulder; but there is no disguise so complete as a half-black mask; and Nora held her head inclined downwards, so that he could not easily examine the features that were visible; but notwithstanding this he felt sure that the face was a beautiful one, as plainly as he was aware of the grace of the girlish figure.

She had not spoken a word, and Eliot also was silent as they glided down the ballroom. Nora danced well, with the rhythmic ease of the woman who loves music, and whose every motion is in harmony with it; and yet she was dancing as one who dances in a dream.

To see him, to be near him again, was good; but to have his arm round her, to be dancing with him to the heavenly music, filled her with an indescribable joy.

Be sure she thought of all that happened at Byeworthy, of Lonsaway, of the day she had saved his life—it all moved rapidly across her mental vision like a panorama. And he was here in London, amongst these great and fashionable people, no longer a kind of servant of Sir Joseph's, but a guest. What did it mean? Had Sir Joseph acknowledged him, provided for him? And Florence Bartley: was Eliot going to marry her? She caught her breath: with a little gasp, at the thought, and her smooth, gliding step faltered.

"Sorry! My fault," said Eliot, and as he murmured the conventional words, she too came back from a reverie, in which the past had appeared to him, as plainly as it had flashed across Nora's brain.

It need scarcely be said that Eliot was ill at ease and almost unhappy. He was weary of London, of the endless delay and procrastination which made it impossible for him to proceed with the business upon which he had come up. He tried to tell himself that he was having a good time, that most men would have been delighted with the kind of life he was leading; and he was not insensible of the fact that he had found favour with one of the most beautiful women in London. He could see Florence at the other end of the room, and knew that her eyes were every now and then turned upon him, and always with a smile, as if he and she had some understanding between them.

Why could he not lose himself in the pleasure of the moment as the other men about him were doing? Why did his mind hark back to that night at Hithercombe when he had held Nora Ryall in his arms and thought that he had won her love? And why on earth, he asked himself impatiently, should he in this scene of brilliant gaiety think of the boy Cyril?

He sighed impatiently and determined to put the past from him and setze on the pleasure of the present moment. They had taken a turn of the room, had gone into a crush, and Eliot stopped and drew her aside for a moment.

"I ought to have steered you out of this," he said, "but I'm not very used to dancing. I haven't danced for a long time." He was thinking of the impromptu hope at the Australia. "I hope you are not tired, hot?"

Nora was now obliged to speak, but her "No" was scarcely audible, and Eliot had to bend down to catch it. They went on again, and Nora's breath was coming more evenly now, though her heart was beating scarcely less. She passed, for the second time, the line of dowagers on the settees, and Miss Deborah looked up and smiled and nodded approvingly at Nora.

"That lady your mother?" asked Eliot.

"No," replied Nora.

Eliot smiled. "I beg your pardon," he said, "I forgot for the moment that you were masked and incognito, and that it is bad form to ask questions; at least, I suppose so; this is the first masked ball I have been at. You I suppose, know all the rules?"

"No," said Nora, "this is my first ball of any kind."

She had spoken in a more audible tone, and she knew by the sudden pressure of his hand that her voice had in some way affected him. He looked down at her with a sudden keenness, and held his breath, as if he were listening intently.

"You don't mean to say that," he said, with surprise. "You dance perfectly; at least, I suppose so; I'm no judge. And this is your first ball? I hope you like it, are enjoying it?"

"Yes," said Nora. "Are you enjoying it?"

He laughed shortly, the laugh she knew so well. "I'm not sure," he replied. "I certainly wasn't a little while ago; and I was asking myself why I had come to this sort of thing, rather out of my line. But I am enjoying it now."

"What is your line?" Nora asked, with a directness which would never leave her.

Eliot laughed again. "Well, I suppose it's work," he said. "I'm here on a kind of errand. I am only waiting in London until I can get some business done."

"Where are you going when it is done?" asked Nora.

He looked at her with a smile for her feminine curiosity.

"I don't know," he said. "Abroad, Australia, perhaps. I suppose you think you have a right to ask me questions because I don't wear a mask. It's arise from improper feeding, and it is important that mothers should understand that baby will thrive best if fed in the natural way—at the breast. This will not be so difficult of accomplishment if the prospective mother includes in her daily food a bowlful of Neave's Health Diet. But there are very many cases when the baby cannot be breast-fed, and then an important decision has to be made— "Which food shall we give our baby?"

MOST OF THE AILMENTS THAT MAY ATTACK YOUR BABY

It is nearly a century since Neave's Food was first made, and the remarkable way in which delicate and ill-nourished children have thriven on it has caused its name to extend throughout the world.

"A little unfair, isn't it? I ought to have my innings," admitted Nora. "Well, then, I, too, am out of my sphere. My line is also work. I am the companion of the old lady who nodded and smiled at me just now."

"She looks a dear old thing," said Eliot.

"She is," said Nora, with warm emphasis. "I know. Sir Joseph, of course, or you wouldn't be here?"

"Oh, yes, I know him," said Eliot, "but my presence here doesn't prove the fact; there are hundreds of persons here who know him only by name."

"He is a very great man, Sir Joseph," murmured Nora.

"Oh, yes, I believe so," Eliot assented. "He is one of the great workers of the earth, and is going to be a greater one, I suppose. You know him, of course?"

"Slightly," said Nora, "but I am here only as Miss—my mistress's companion."

There was silence for a moment or two, then Eliot said gravely, "I wonder if I told you my name whether you would tell me yours? My name is Eliot Graham."

"And my name is—Night," said Nora.

He had waited with a strange anxiety for her reply, and he laughed shortly with a touch of disappointment.

"I can't understand why you shouldn't tell me your name," he said; "but, of course, I can't press it. Will you come and have some wine, an ice—Night?"

"An ice, please," said Nora.

"They went to the buffet. Eliot got an ice for her, and a glass of champagne for himself. While Nora ate her ice slowly, Eliot leaned against the table and looked down at her thoughtfully. The feeling of having seen her, of having heard her voice before, was strong upon him; but her head was bent and he could see nothing of her face; and though his mind travelled and searched through his recent days in London, he could not remember, recognize her. She ate her ice slowly, with it, indeed, because she wanted to spin out the precious moments with him. To have him standing near her was a joy too deep for words. The music of the famous band floated out to them, mingled with the laughter, the light and gay chatter, of the brilliant throng; it was all like a dream to Nora, a dream from which she knew she must wake presently, to part from the man she loved with a passion that thrilled and almost frightened her. Suddenly a lady passed on the arm of a gentleman, and as she went by she touched Eliot on the arm.

ham! All the great ones of the earth here, as you may say."

Eliot nodded. "I hope you are having a good time, Sir Joseph," he said, and as he spoke, he went up to Miss Deborah, Stripley still hanging about them and rubbing his huge hands with a kind of suppressed excitement.

CHAPTER XXXIII. A DISCOVERY.

"Don't forget that the next is our dance," she said in a low, almost caressing voice.

Eliot looked up and nodded.

"That is Miss Florence Bartley," said Nora.

Eliot looked down at her curiously. "You know her?" he said.

"I've seen her," said Nora.

"You must have sharp eyes," Eliot observed. "I can scarcely recognize a lady with her mask on."

"She is a friend of yours, a great friend?" said Nora in a low voice.

Eliot moved uneasily. "She is a friend," he said. "She is going to be a friend of mine, all this is out of my line, as I told you. I am new to London; fresh and green; and Miss Bartley—He paused and stared at his empty glass.

"She is very beautiful," said Nora.

"Oh, yes," assented Eliot. "She is supposed to be one of the most beautiful women in London."

"You ought to be very proud," murmured Nora.

Eliot frowned, and then stared at his shoes.

"The music's beginning for the next dance," he said. "I'm afraid I must take you back to your chaperon."

"My mistress," Nora corrected him.

She put her hand lightly on his arm, and he led her towards Miss Deborah. On the way, he said—

"Will you give me another dance? I meant going after the next one; but I should like to dance with you again, if you will let me. It's a pleasure. It's a singular thing, a mere fancy, of course, but I have a kind of idea that I have met you before."

Nora began to tremble. "It is not very likely," she said in a low voice. "I have lived in the country all my life; I have only been in London for a short time. Where do you think you met me?"

"I don't know," he replied. "That's just as if I knew. I can't tell you. I wish you would tell me your name!"

She shook her head. They reached Miss Deborah, and as they did so a man dressed as a rustic, a kind of stage peasant, drew near them. He had an immense mouth, huge ears that stood out at right angles from his head, and prominent eyes. At the sight of Eliot he stopped and grinned, so that his mouth seemed to run beyond his ears. Eliot could not but be attracted by so grotesque a face, and after staring at it for a moment, he exclaimed—

"Why, Stripley, you here!"

"Yes, Mr. Graham," he said. "Sir Joseph was good enough to send me a ticket. Ain't he got a kind heart? What a scene of revelry by night, Mr. Gra-

In the morning they invited the landlady up to view their "bag." Opening the drawer proudly, they found therein one poor, weary bat, and the landlady laughed.

"I suppose you never thought there was no black to that old drawer?" she remarked.

Whenever there's a task to do it means the world has need of you. Whenever there's a hammer raised, Whenever metal is driven in, Or fixed a tiny cotter pin, There should be when the work is done, More joy than man has known before.

The man who puts his hand to toll, The ploughboy turning up the soil, The laborer or mechanic skilled, Give something of themselves to build The better world; a duty done, Improved the path men travel on, And there's no deed so common-place But which bestows its sum of grace.

No man has ever toiled in vain— Who sweeps a street or cleans a drain, Who drives a nail or wields a sledge, Or works with tools of keener edge, Is bettering the lives of men, And adding to their comforts then, For from such service here has come Relief from much that's burdensome.

Beauty and peace of mind and ease Are born of duties such as these, Whenever man employs a wrench, Or stands to service at his bench, Whenever there's a hammer raised, Whenever there's a window glazed, Whenever man has served a cause, The world is better than it was.

Names and Phrases.

The word burp, a stream, is, however, English. It springs from the Middle Englishbourne. The Anglo-Saxon word was burne, a fountain stream or well. The Aryan root is supposed to be "bhr" and the following are derived from it: Icelandic, brunni; Swedish, brunna; Danish, brunn; German, brunnen; Gothic, brunna. Those interested in the subject may compare with these the Greek "phreer," as well.

When a person "is particularly dense in understanding he is called a chump, which is as it should be, for this word springs from the Scandinavian chump, a log of wood, and is derived from the Icelandic kumbi. This word is really part of the parent word chup or chop, to cut. On the other hand, chup meaning a fool follows in a diminutive of chapman, a workman, as was explained a few weeks ago.

Thomas A. Becket was created Archbishop of Canterbury on a Tuesday, and the following one befell him on a Thursday, which was his fateful day. Brought face to face with the peers of Northampton; banished from England; received a celestial visit foretelling his martyrdom; came home from exile; was slain at the altar, and finally he was canonized as a saint on a Tuesday.

Household Notes.

It is a nice idea to have a guest chest in the guest-room. It should contain a nightgown, bathrobe, slippers, and even a new toothbrush.

If any bodied starch is left over, save and put it into the water with which oilcloth or linoleum is washed. It will keep them new and bright.

Delicious jellied apples are made by slicing apples very thin and packing them in deep bowls between layers of sugar, then baking slowly till the apples are full of color and tender.

Ulster Parliament opened

King and Queen Present--His Majesty Speaks From "A Full Heart"
--Sinn Fein Boycott Defeated--
Smuts Makes Prophetic Utterance.

KING OPENS ULSTER PARLIAMENT.

BELFAST, June 22. King George and Queen Mary arrived in the harbor of Belfast shortly before eight o'clock this morning. Their yacht, escorted by a flotilla of warships, made a quick trip across the Irish Sea from Holyhead, during the night, and reached here more than three hours before it was expected. The weather changed suddenly during the night and there was a steady drizzle this morning, which threatened to mar the day's proceedings. At 10 o'clock, however, crowds began to gather along the line of Royal passage soon after daybreak.

"I speak from a full heart," said King George in his speech, formally opening the Ulster Parliament to-day, "when I pray that my coming to Ireland to-day may prove to be the first step toward an end of the strife among her people, whatever their race or creed." The ceremony of the opening of the Ulster Parliament was similar to that attending the inauguration of the British Parliament at Westminster, and was a brilliant spectacle. There was but little room in the hall where the function took place for those having cards of admission, but it was a distinguished assembly that watched the event, regarded as marking an epoch in Irish history. From the moment the Royal yacht, Victoria and Albert, dropped her anchor at the entrance to Belfast Lough, the King and Queen were objects of enthusiastic demonstrations by the loyalists of Ulster. The people of County Down on the south side, the County of Londonderry on the northern side, vied with each other in extending greetings. An even noisier welcome awaited the King and Queen as they steamed past the shipyards where the cheers of thousands of workmen mingled with the shrieks of sirens and whistles.

King George and Queen Mary departed from Belfast for London at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

CHAOTIC SITUATION IN BRITISH LABOUR.

LONDON, June 22. The National alliance of employers and employed of Great Britain have asked the Government to summon a joint industrial conference, representative of all masters and men now engaged in wage disputes with instructions to try to save the industrial situation from chaos. At the same time it is understood that the Labour Party and Trade Unions Congress are considering calling a conference in London next week to deal with the proposal of a general strike in support of the miners. Reports from the Districts to-day show that no large number of miners have resumed work, but that it is secured by due intimidation rather than unwillingness.

INTERVIEW WITH DE VALERA.

LONDON, June 22. Christopher O'Sullivan, Australian correspondent, in an interview with Eamon De Valera in behalf of an Australian news agency, asked him whether Ireland would accept a status similar to that of the British Overseas Dominions, to which Mr. De Valera replied, "no such status has been offered Ireland. Until it becomes possible to translate Ireland to the antipodes, or another hemisphere, no such status can be realized." Asked what solution he proposed, Mr. De Valera replied, "A neutral Irish State whose inviolability would be guaranteed by the United States and the States of the British Empire and any others that could be secured as signatories. Free Ireland would never allow its territories or harbors to be made basis of attack upon England by an outside power. A native Irish defence force would be many times as effective in keeping out an invader as any force England could put there, while in case of danger England's forces would still be available. Any pledge Ireland gives, Ireland will keep. With an independent Ireland beside her, Great Britain would be more, not less safe than she is from foreign attack."

SOUTHERN SENATORS ACCEPT CONDITIONALLY.

Senators of Southern Ireland have indicated that they would accept a resolution with the intention of exercising fullest freedom of action regarding the powers to be hereafter granted Parliament and the Government of Southern Ireland. We are of opinion that the powers given under the present Act are insufficient to enable the Government of Southern Ireland to be carried on with any prospect of success, and urge upon the Government that the earliest possible steps be taken to amend the Act. We desire further to make it clear that we are ready to act in the second Chamber of the House with the Lower House, and are not prepared to exercise our functions in connection with any proposal to replace the elected Lower House."

Outport Man Says All His Troubles Are Over at Last

Well Known Logy Bay Fisherman Gets Rid Of Indigestion And Rheumatism - Walks Miles Without Any Trouble.

Statements are continually being received at the Tanlac office from people in all parts of Newfoundland, but especially from the Outports, many of whom are removed from all medical aid expressing their gratitude for the way this truly remarkable medicine has restored them to health in many cases after years of suffering. Characteristics of these statements is one received from James McDonald, fisherman of Logy Bay, who said:

"My stomach was so badly out of order for a year that what I ate gave me no strength at all. I got weaker day by day, finally, if I tried to walk any distance my knees would give out from under me and I would have to stop and rest. I was always having to ease up my work, as I was not strong enough to stick to it. My legs hurt me so bad at times I couldn't sleep hardly and would wake up in the morning all tired out. "On a trip to St. John's I got Tanlac and the first bottle did not seem to do me much good, but as I was sleeping better I determined to keep on taking it and it was lucky for me that I did, for after I had been taking it a little while longer I noticed a decided improvement. I kept on getting better every day until finally my health was entirely restored. My stomach trouble is gone, I have a fine appetite and I can digest everything I eat. I can walk miles and work hard now without getting tired. Tanlac is certainly a godsend to us who live in the Outports."

DIAMOND DUST

Nothing But the Truth - Without Fear or Favour.

THEY'RE OFF.

Opening Day at the ballyard! The season has started once more. And up in the bleachers, the mad rooting creatures are anxiously lapping the score. The ballclubs are off in a clatter. They've started the golfing race. The gamblers are betting. And managers fretting. And Cockey is swinging his mace. The experts have finished their dogging. Jawn B. has got them along. Cockey Mann is crabbing, some 1400. Bert Channing is gabbling. And poor Ches is calling them wrong.

GALA OPENING.

Ideal weather and a large gathering of fans including His Excellency the Governor and suite and a good brand of ball were the features that marked the opening of the baseball season yesterday morning. The grapplers were the Lions and B.I.S. and the former successfully defended their title as champs when they emerged victorious by 7 runs to 4. Both teams got away at the crack of the pistol, just after Mayor Gosling had thrown the first one over, amidst the applause of the rosters, and it was nip and tuck right up to the sixth when Munn and Robertson by their heavy slugging put the game on ice. The Irish youngsters played a good game and will have to be reckoned with. Their new discovery—Bryan Johnson—is a bird and looks like a pro in action. The veterans showed up well but Hiltz will have to put a little more snap in them if they pursue running away with the silverware for the third time in succession. However it was the opening game, and possibly some of the players in both line-ups were a little bit edgy. The score by innings was:

Lions: 1 1 0 0 1 0 0 2 2-7
B.I.S. 0 1 0 0 1 2 0 0 0-4

AFTERNOON CLASH.

Another large attendance saw the doughty and experienced Cubs manhandle the C.E.L. to the tune of 10 to 4 but although the score looks one sided, yet at times the Institute boys gave a very good exhibition. It would look however as though Scandie's gang is out for blood this season as they seem to be well drilled and rehearsed and their fielding and throwing are with almost machine-like precision. Some of the newer C.E.L. players were a little nervous and were the cause of their infield blowing up in the third when they let 5 Cubs cross the plate. The red and whites started the boys business right in the out and shoved across 2 runs before Manning could stem the tide. They have the nucleus of a good nine and it must be only the matter of a season or two more when all the youngsters comprising their, and the Irish, team must perform come into their own, for you know youth must be served. The score by innings was:—

Cubs: 1 0 5 4 0 0 0 0 0-10

NEXT GAME.

The next game will be between the B.I.S. and Cubs and a meet between them has always proved most interesting. Manager Channing proposes to strengthen the Irish line-up considerably.

TROUTIN DEY CALLS IT!

They are telling a good one this morning on a certain Water Street business man who was elected manager of a fishing expedition yesterday. The boys gave him twenty dollars to buy provisions with. He came back with fifty cents worth of bread and nineteen dollars and fifty cents' worth of the stuff that no fishing trip is good without.

"And, what the Heck," said the boys disgustedly, "do you mean by buying so much bread, Bill?"
"And all the world rejoices
For playtime now is here—
And playtime is a gaytime,
The best time of the year."

DUST THROWING.

Ever intent on throwing dust in the eyes of the fishermen, and with an utter disregard for the amenities of journalism, the Advocate forgetful of past exposures, industriously turns back to its pet habit again.

But if it be as the Premier states that Customs duties of two million dollars over and above the estimate were paid on imports last year, it is only another proof of the bad financial policy followed by the Government, and is one good reason why the revenue for the coming year has necessarily to be two million dollars less.

A Hero of the Sea.

The brain work and courage of one man alone saved the "Camperdown" from sharing the doom of the "Victoria" when that great battleship met her fate on June 22, 1893, through the ram of the "Camperdown" crashing through the steel-clad sides of the "Victoria," and sinking her with a loss of three hundred lives. The terrible force of the collision ripped an enormous hole in the bows of the "Camperdown," through which came rushing hundreds of tons of sea water. Stoker Paffett was the one man below who kept his head and realized what was happening. He ran forward, and flying like a lamp lighter down the long steel ladders, reached the platform decks to find the water high above his waist. Undismayed, he struggled forward through the rapidly rising tide, reached the watertight compartment, and, after a violent struggle, closed it. By the time he had accomplished this task, the water was up to his chin, and he was forced to swim back to the ladder, but the "Camperdown" was thus saved from the fate of the "Victoria."

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, June 23.
To-day and for the next few days subscriptions will be received at our store, as one of several stores where subscriptions are solicited, for the War Memorial to be erected in honor and in memory of our boys who gave up their lives during the Great War. The sons of Terra Nova did their full part in that struggle to save the Empire, the world, civilization and Christianity from the attacks of the unspeakable Hun, and nobly their part was done. We must not be behind in erecting a suitable monument to their memory—the only tangible proof we can now give of our appreciation. So we ask all to share in this privilege of helping to erect this Memorial.

Portia Reaches Port.

After having made a quick round trip, S.S. Portia arrived in port at an early hour this morning from Western ports of call, including North Sydney. She brought small freight and only a few passengers. Dense fog was met with during the greater part of the trip, particularly from Salmonier to Port aux Basques when going up the coast, and from St. Jacques when coming this way.

DEPARTED FROM SIDNEY.—Some ten passengers were landed from the Kyle at Port aux Basques yesterday, having been sent back by the immigration authorities at North Sydney because of not having sufficient money to meet with the requirements of the Canadian immigration Act.

KEEP BOOSTING.

There's no good in roosting like owls on a limb; there's more sense in boosting with ardor and vim. There's no good in viewing all things with dismay; far better be heaving some aim every day. There are knockers enough in a town; the grouchy old talkers run everything down; they kick if we're growing, they kick if we're not, wet blankets they're throwing till everyone's hot. Unpopular geezers, when'er they appear, these old Ebenezers who knock by the year. They're whiskered and trowey, they're not up to date, they always are drowsy save when they orate, save when they wearily picking the burrs from their backs. The custom of knocking, if given full play, is thoroughly shocking, it makes men decay. The habit of looking all chipper and bright, instead of gadzooking and cursing all night, will make you a winner, whatever your trade, oh, tamper and tinker and man with a spade! There's no good in cawing and croaking like crows, far better be singing some madrigal dops, and cheerily springing a package of hope.

Unemployed Will Celebrate June 24th.

There will be a meeting in the L.S. P.U. Hall of The Unemployed Workers to-morrow (Friday) night. It is probable that there will be a decision on the case of Caleb Robbins vs. The Mayor. Whether that decision is for or against, the unemployed propose to have a meeting followed by a concert in honour of June 24th—New-

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES DISTRESS

Tree That Poisons Flies.

The United States Department of Agriculture is testing the remarkable properties claimed for a saplin grown from the seed of a Kentucky coffee tree by the late Professor George F. Holmes, of the University of Virginia. Professor Holmes asserted that the tree gave off a peculiar poison fatal to flies, and, therefore, was a boon to humanity. He planted it in his garden and requested that it be dedicated as his only memorial. At the direction of the faculty, a metal plate, inscribed "Holmes Tree," was fastened to its trunk and a iron fence placed about it.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir.—When I last wrote on our local owned Foreign going tonnage I said I only touched the border of a lot of questions which could be raised on that point. Since then several of these questions have been raised and some of them discussed in the Assembly. I hope some able pen than mine would show up all that could be said on this subject, both pro and con particularly as I am an interested party and therefore may be regarded as considerably biased on this matter. However, in my opinion no obstacle has been placed in the way of using our local tonnage in the foreign service that cannot be coped with and overcome if only the Exporters were willing to come half way and meet us. And in saying this I do not mean that they should come half way to meet us in any measure against their own interest.

I shall now deal with some of the obstacles which have been placed in the way of our vessels. The first is our vessels are too large. My reply to that is, it is fortunate they did not put it the other way because if they had it would have been impossible for us to have met their demand, as it would be impossible to take a six thousand quintal cargo in a vessel that could only carry four thousand; but the reverse is easy. Then again it may not generally be known that a vessel that can carry six thousand quintals of fish does not require a greater number of men than the vessel that can only carry three thousand. They both take the same number of men and they require the same amount of provisions, and in coming this way in larger vessel will take the larger quantity of salt, so what they lose on the small quantity of fish they partly make up on the salt. It is also a mistake to imagine that because a vessel has three masts she must necessarily be large. For instance the Cyrill T. has three masts but is almost the smallest ship in the fleet. There are three mast vessels so much better adapted for the Foreign voyage than the two masted schooner is so easily understood by the practical man that I do not need to trespass on your space to explain it here.

So many of our vessels have been lost that insurance rates have gone up. Perfectly true. The history of our local built vessels during the years of the war was anything but creditable to us. And the fact remains that all through the war, and I think even now the Government is paying a bounty for building vessels, some of them which foundered on their first voyage. Three never reached their first destination; two others reached their first destination but were abandoned in mid ocean towards their next port, and in my opinion the vessels which we have to-day may be greatly considered a survival of the fittest. Upon this subject one could write a book, but I must dispense with this part of the subject now by saying that our experience with ships built in this country during the war was similar to the United States Shipping Board. Apart from saying that, we ought to have a report from the surveyors of our local built vessels and if it can be proved that our wood is not suitable for building purposes then we ought to stop the bounty for building, for how so many of our seamen were rescued in mid ocean without more loss of life is nothing short of a miracle.

Some advance the reason why so many of our vessels are abandoned is for the want of capable men in charge. Personally I make no such charge. But I make bold to say right here that every owner ought to do all in his power to get certificated men in charge, and I believe there are good men in charge without certificates and the reason they have not certificates may be their misfortune, but not their fault, but the days of quacks are past. No man should be satisfied to take a position to-day which he is not qualified to fill. Those who have certificates ought not to be left on shore while those who have no certificates are in command. Then with proper qualified men in charge and with good substantial vessels we ought to prove to the world that we are not indebted to any other country on the face of the globe to command our marine fleet to take our local produce to market.

I dealt with figures in my last letter, which I think was augmentative and convincing. I shall now deal with the class of men who own our local fleet. They number far too many to mention here, but can be found on the whole coast line from Burgeo in the West, to the Moores in St. Anthony, who by sheer dint of perseverance have become men of eminence. Some of them are to-day doing a large mercantile business of their own. A few of them are men who have contributed to the upkeep of the business people in this community. The unfortunate position we find ourselves in to-day cannot be attributed to the owners of our local foreign fleet, and for our exporters to engage foreigners to carry our exports to market while so many of our men are in need of employment, is not only detrimental to the interest of the trade, but to my mind criminal to the interest of our sailors and their families.

We publish to the world, that while our merchants are so handicapped that they cannot give the necessary supplies for the carrying on of our local fisheries without Government aid and assistance, they are engaging foreign vessels with foreign crews to take away our produce, thereby sending hundreds of thousands of dollars to help built up other countries, while our own children are begging for bread.

Every argument I have heard so far against our local fleet is bristling with inconsistencies for while they say our local fleet is too large, they are engaging a large steamer shortly which will take away some thousands of quintals. At least I think the question is of sufficient importance to call together a deputation not only of the exporters and vessels owners, but also from Government and Opposition and let us see if some settlement can't be reached in the interest of all concerned, whereby the earning power of our country may so far as possible be kept in the country and some effort put forward whereby we may make one united effort to help one another during this trying crisis. In saying this I want it to be distinctly understood that in engaging our local vessels we expect the freight rates to be such as we shall be able to give our men something more than a starvation wage and by the strictest economy on the part of the owners these vessels will be able to pay expenses and show a small margin of profit. The Masters and Cooks must forget that they are running millionaires yachts. The disbursements in foreign ports must show that the Masters and Cooks are practising economy or they will have to make up their minds that their places will have to be filled by others. In conclusion let me say to our business men generally, to you and your firms we, the local owners, are indebted for all we possess. I hope you will not forget that the success of your firm in the present and the future will largely depend on the help and co-operation of such men as are the owners of our foreign going vessels. Let us remember the old adage, "It is no time to swap horses when we are crossing the stream," and as our interests are mutual, let us show to the world that we are standing four square against all foreign competition.

Yours truly,

ANDERSON'S

St. John's

"The Hun" Reappears.

(Montreal Star.)
German justice acquits a man who confessed—or, perhaps we ought to say, "boasted"—that he deliberately sank a hospital ship in clear weather. He did not do it by mistake. He knew that it was a hospital ship, and he torpedoed it twice. He did this inhuman deed under specific orders from his superiors.

There is really nothing much more to be said. We may be sorry that so hot-blooded a machine as left at liberty; but this sorrow is mitigated by the fact that he will be pretty well confined to Germany. We rather fancy that any German by the name of "Carl Neumann" will not find it comfortable travelling in Christian countries.

"Killing the wounded" is not permitted by civilized soldiers. That is an exclusive attribute of savagery. Rudyard Kipling laid a rough hand on the nerve of horror when he wrote his grim advice to the British Tommy when he should "be wounded on the Afghan plains, and the women come out to carve up the remains," to "crawl to his rifle and blow out his brains, and go to his God like a soldier." But those were the wild races who infest the mountain borders of India; not the highly "cultured" savants who hold high court in the Kaiserhalls of Leipzig.

Germany has cleared Lieutenant Neumann, but has indelibly damned herself! The specious pleading of the prosecutor, that hospital ships were employed for "purposes" contrary to The Hague agreement if they were used for the transportation of soldiers wounded in the course of land warfare is only worthy of Beelzebub at the court of Heaven. Whatever The Hague agreement may be destined to mean, the German on the Mount gives no such splendid permission. In war-time, we were quite accustorious to the belief that the Germans were savages thinly veneered by modern civilization; but we have been hoping recently to find a more charitable version in the softening days of peace. The verdict, however, will long postpone that benevolent anticipation! All that Germany can do now to "regain her chance of recovering to some extent the good opinion of the world is to prosecute and sternly punish "the men higher up" who gave Lieutenant Neumann his ferocious orders.

"Watch Your Feet"

Mr. Coaker's Soliloquy.

Composed at Port Union after his Retirement From Public Life.

(After Coaker—A long way.)
I was monarch of all I surveyed
My rights there were none to dispute.
No thought that my glory would fade
Ever entered my brain most astute.
Oh, where are my honours of old,
The glory that used to be mine?
Even the thought of them leaves me
Quite cold.

And sends a cool chill down my spine.
I am far from publicly here
With no talk of dishonour or shame,
I read the whole press without Fear
Of finding my once dreaded name.
No longer do I read about me,
The papers to read about me,
Here alone with my poor little pup
I know what it is to be free.

Now fish regulations and salt
Which worried me much at one time
(The trouble o'er which was my fault)
I no longer consider a crime.
The not of them now that I think
Far away in my Port Union home.
For what do I find here to link
With the times when at mouth I would foam.

Politics, do you think that I care
For them as I did in the past.
Think you that I would shed a tear
Because of them I've seen the last?
But the thoughts will surge up in my brain

Of power which once I did hold,
And I find it most hard to refrain
From thinking of those whom I sold.

How often I once changed about,
What varied opinions were mine,
No sooner get in than put out,
Oh, that was a life most sublime.
I wonder if sometimes a friend
(If one I have ever possessed)
Does some wish or kind thought o'er and

To Bill Coaker now taking his rest.

At one time I was called uncrowned
king
Of the North. Oh, how things have changed.

How sweetly then did their praise ring
In my ears. For my power then ranged
Over Trinity, Fogo, St. Barbe
Bonavista and Twillingate too,
And here dressed in my old hermit's garb
My followers eye me askew.

But I must not consider that fate
Which made me go into exile,
For it profits me not to berate
The end which has come through my guile.

Bell Island Odd Fellows

RECEIVE BRO. J. A. CRAIG.

On Tuesday evening June 7th, the Brothers of the Triple Link at Wabana Lodge, Bell Island, had the extreme pleasure of receiving a distinguished guest in the person of Bro. J. A. Craig, P.G.M., P.C.P., P.G.R., of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, accompanied by Bro. E. D. Spurrell, D.D.G.M. Bro. Craig's visit of last year has been kept in mind by the Brethren of Wabana Lodge, and his words and example as an Oddfellow has been a great incentive to them. It therefore gave them great pleasure to welcome their "Beau Ideal" of Oddfellowship in their midst once more.

The Past Master gave an interesting address including a synopsis of his visit to Scotland, and to the battle scarred areas of Flanders, and in closing his address put forward an excellent appeal to the brothers of Wabana Lodge to join hands with the Brethren of the other Lodges in the jurisdiction in making Oddfellowship power for good in the community. Bro. Craig, in saying good-bye to Wabana, presented to the Lodge a substantial amount in Victory Bonds, which gift was gratefully received by the Noble Grand, Bro. Godden, in a neat little speech on behalf of the Lodge.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a Past Grand's Jewel to Bro. C. O. Butler, P. O., which the Past Grand Master handed the Lodge to permit him to personally present to the Brother as a mark of his own appreciation of Bro. Butler's work particularly at the inception of the Lodge, one year ago. Bro. Butler was quite taken by surprise and thanked the Past Grand Master for his kind words and the Jewel. After a much appreciated, and excellent address by Bro. E. D. Spurrell, D.D.G.M., given in his usual kindly manner, the Lodge closed, bringing to an end a very instructive and happy evening.

Bro. Craig and Bro. Spurrell while on the Island were guests at the Dominion Staff House.

Carpentier Hides
His Best Qualities.

MANHASSET, N.Y., June 6.—Polks hereabouts who would like to view Georges' Carpentier going through his paces during his secret training sessions but can't have expressed the opinion that the challenger is fooling the public. They believe he has more up his sleeve than he is willing to let the world in general know about and that his somewhat listless attitude when boxing for newspaper men is but a ruse to conceal his real powers.

There is no doubt that the prize fighter has a nice track full of speed, for he occasionally seems to forget himself when the newspapermen are watching him and displays a few of the traits that have made him famous. During his secret sessions, however, it is known that Carpentier takes his work more seriously. Just what he does, however, Manager Descamps said, is Georges' own business. Descamps has declared that the public will know the result of these private sessions in the ring when they see or read of Georges in action on July 2.

when boxing is resumed to lessen the danger of reopening the wound over the champion's left eye, which was split open last Sunday. Since then Dempsey has done no work with the gloves.

Jack Kearns, manager of the titleholder, said to-day that Dempsey would resume boxing on Saturday, providing the wound continues to heal rapidly.

New skin has formed over the gash and the stitches taken in it have been removed. Dempsey wears no dressing over the injury. He spends a great deal of time exposing it to the sun to hasten its healing.

Dempsey, with boxing off the programme, is concentrating on the development of his famous shift. He stands before a heavy punching bag, first shifting for a right hook and then landing a left.

The champion is timing his blows accurately and is hitting sharply and with great force.

A dinner gown of black net is trimmed with black velvet ribbon and worn over a black satin slip.

Tuesday Night's Game.

FELDIANS AND SAINTS PLAY DRAWN GAME.

It must have come as a surprise to the many Feldian supporters to find that their team was unable to defeat the Saints in Tuesday night's game, for it was confidently expected that the former team would be well in the running for the championship as a result of their game with the Saints, which ended in a draw, they have gained only two points out of a possible six. The game was keenly contested throughout, but there was a tendency towards wild kicking, and certain faults were very noticeable on both sides. The Feldians were very weak in front of goal and lost some splendid opportunities, whilst their back division was not quite up to the mark. Tait played an excellent game at centre half, his dribbling being very good, whilst he sent some stinging shots in occasionally. He was ably supported by the Martin brothers, who played up very well. Joyce played a fine game in goal for the Saints and fisted the ball out in great style. Some very difficult shots came his way and he deserves great praise for the manner in which he cleared. Carmichael and Munn also played well for the Saints.

THE FIRST HALF

opened with a rush by the Saints, who had won the toss and were defending the western goal. This was stopped by the Feldian backs and the ball was brought up into the Saints territory and after a six minutes' play, Strang, taking advantage of a miskick by an opposing back, scored. Eight minutes later the Saints equalized through Munn, who lodged the ball behind Fletcher from play in front of goal as the result of a corner kick. Soon after the Feldians missed a splendid opportunity and the ball was taken up into their territory by the Saints. The Feldians got away again however, and came right down field, a stinging shot being sent in to Joyce, who cleared well. Just before half time a penalty was awarded the Feldians. Winter took the kick, but Joyce saved and the goal was cleared by the Saints backs.

THE SECOND HALF

opened with a dash down field by the Feldians. Receiving the ball on the right wing Jerritt sent across a splendid centre from which Winter scored before the half was four minutes old. Shortly afterwards a free kick was given against Hunt and following play in front of the Feldians goal as a result of the kick, the Saints scored through Munn. A ding dong battle was waged for the remainder of the half, but despite the efforts of both sides no further scoring was done and the game ended with the score 2-2. The line-up was—FELDIANS—Fletcher, goal; Hunt, Chafe, backs; A. Martin, Tait, Martin, half backs; Ewing, Strang, Pava, Winter, Jerritt, forwards.
SAINTS—Joyce, goal; Calvert, Carmichael, backs; Elton, Foster, Clouston, half backs; Sawyers, Munn, Sawyers, Mitchell, Young, forwards.

Does Not Want a Plebiscite.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Kindly pardon my boldness in writing a heading for this letter. You may ask "If Mr. Smith does not want a plebiscite, why did he say that he had appealed to Caesar (meaning the higher authority, namely the people)?" My answer is that I was forced, like the Apostle of old, to do so in order to obtain justice. I am not anxious for the worry and trouble of a plebiscite. All I want is to ensure the coming into effect of a decent law which can be respected.

As for the cost, that is a matter for the legislators. If they will not take the responsibility of giving us decent legislation on this subject, they must take the responsibility of finding the money for an appeal to the people. The increased revenue, even from the bottle a quarter (not to speak of the bottle a week) would more than pay for the election.

There are two classes of persons who are raising this cry of cost. There are those Prohibitionists who are so anxious to hold on to the sacred name of Prohibition that they are afraid to risk a defeat at the polls. The other class consists of moonshiners for profit and those who have invested in the smuggling traffic, and they are backed by those hard drinkers who are now able to obtain a bottle a day, and who are afraid that a bottle a week will not suffice them. They are not numerous, thank Heaven, but they raise an awful row. Verily, Alexander, the Copperhead, is not dead, but it is copper tubing, not copper idols, he is making now. These latter are the people who tried hard to get a repeal section in the Act, while the bone-dry folk wanted to cut out even the medicine. I had to fight them both, and both classes are now sore with me.

Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH.

Postal Telegraphers.

CELEBRATE AT DONOVAN'S.

The annual celebration of the Postal Telegraphers' Association was held at Donovan's yesterday, the party leaving by special train at 1 p.m. The afternoon was spent in games, races and other sports, and at 6.30 a most enjoyable repast was partaken of, after which an excellent toast list was gone through. Songs were rendered by Mrs. Harry Small, Miss Martin and Mr. Harry Chaplin, whilst an excellent recitation was given by Mr. Newbury. Many eloquent addresses were made during the evening. The President remarked that this was the 3rd annual outing and the most successful one. Mr. Newbury, in replying to "Our Guests" congratulated the Postal Association on maintaining such strength, and urged every member to keep it up and success for the Postal System would be assured. Dining was indulged in until early morning and after singing Auld Lang Syne, the members boarded the waiting car on the siding and proceeded to St. John's after proclaiming the third annual outing a great success.
