When I am dead, my dearest, Sing no sad songs for me; Plant thou no roses at my head, Nor shady cypross tree. Be the green grass above me
With showers and dew-drops wet,
And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget!

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain;
I shall not hear the nightingale
Sing on as if in pain;
And dreaming through the twilight, That doth not rise nor set,

The Gentleman From Indiana By BOOTH TARKINGTON

CHAPTER VI. HEY walked slowly back along the pike toward the brick house. He was stooping very much as they walked. He wanted to be told that he could look at face was rarely and exquisitely mod-eled, but perhaps just now the sallent characteristic of her beauty (for the salient characteristic seemed to be a different thing at different times) was the coloring, a delicate glow under the in its seeming to reflect the rich beneliction of the noonday sun that blazed overhead. Once he had thought the way to the Briscoe homestead rather a long walk, but now the distance sped malignantly. Strolled they never so slow, it was less than a "young bird's flutter from a wood." With her acquiescence he rolled a cigarette, and she began to hum lightly the air of a song, a song of ineffably gentle, slow movement.

That, and a reference of the morning and perhaps the smell of his tobacco mingling with the fragrance of her roses, awoke again the old reminiscence of the night before. A clearly outlined picture rose before high green slopes and cool cliff walls of the coast of Maine and the sharp little estuary waves he lazily watched through half closed lids while the pale smoke of his cigarette blew out under the rail of a waxen deck where he lay cushioned. And again a woman pelted his face with handfuls of rose petals and cried: "Up, lad, and at 'em! You der is Winter Harbor!" Again he sat in the oak raftered casino, breathless girl who looked so bravely unconscio with pleasure, and heard a young girl sing the "Angel's Serenade," a young of the big, hushed crowd that listened, and good, that he had spoken of her as "Sir Galahad's little sister." He had been much taken with this child, but he had not thought of her from that eye, a sweet and vivacious child's face, 931,405 with light brown hair and gray eyes and a short upper lip like a curled rose leaf. And the voice—

He stopped short. "You are Tom Meredith's little cousin."
"The great Harkless," she answered and stretched out her hand to him. "I remember you."

"I guess maybe in the city you don't see as much of it or think as much about it, then. Yes, they're the In-

The whip cracked, and the buckboard

"Every once in awhile, Harkless," the old fellow called after them, "you must remember to look at the team." The enormous white tent was filled with a hazy, yellow light, the warm, dusty, mellow light that thrills the rejoicing heart because it is found no-what the great Harkless would think of me. I knew he thought me unutter ably stupid because I couldn't talk to him. I wanted to send him word that I knew I had bored him. I couldn't endure that he shouldn't know that I knew I had. But he was not thinking of me in any way. He had gone to sea again in his white boat, the ungrateful pirate, cruising with Mrs. Van meeting the elephant; here marched sturdy yeomen and stout wives; here came William Todd and his true love the good William hushed with the embarrassments of love, but looking out warily with the white of his eye for Mr. Martin and determined not to sit within a hundred yards of him; here rolled in the orbit of habit the town bacchanal, Mr. Wilkerson, who politely answered in kind all the uncouth roan heart the population of Carlow and part of Amo.

Helen had found a true word; it was a big family. Jim Bardlock, broadly smiling and rejuvenated, shorn of de-pression, paused in front of the "reserve" seats, with Mrs. Bardlock on around the brick house, or even the rain crow that sat on the fence and swore to them in the face of a sunny sky that they should see rain ere the day were done. Little the young man recked of what he ate at Judge Briscoe's good noon dinner—chicken wing and young ery one within hearing, turned to look at Jim, but the gentleman addressed was engaged in conversation with of a summer cloudlet, and honey and milk and apple butter flavored like "Hi! Hi, there! Say! Mr. Harkless!" bellowed Jim informally. The people turned to look at Harkless. His atten-tion was arrested, and his cheek grew red. "What is it?" he asked, a little confused and a good deal annoyed. "I don't hear what ye say," shouted wiches and restaurant chops might have been set before Harkless for all the difference it would have made to "What is it?" repeated the "What is it?" repeated the young man. "I'll kill that fellow tonight," he ought to have done it long ago." "What?"

"I said, What is it?" "I jest wanted to say me and you certainly did fool these here Hoosiers this morning. Hustled them two fellers through the courthouse, and no-body thought to slip round to the other door and head us off. Ha, ha! We were jest a leetle too many fer 'em, huh?"

scared and leave town, Mr. Harkless!" he called out. "Jim 'll protect you." Vastly to the young man's relief the and equestriennes captured the dressing tent for the "grand entrance," and the performance commenced. Through the long summer afternoon it went on—wonders of horsemanship and of horsewomanship, horsemanship and of horsewomanship that raising exploits on wires tight but raising exploits on wires tight but raising exploits on the high musicians blatted inspiringly through it all, only pausing long enough to allow that riotous jester, the clown, to ask the ringmaster what he would do if a young lady came up and kissed him on the street, and to explode his witticisms during short intervals of rest for the athletes.

When it was over, John and Helen found themselves in the midst of a densely packed crowd and separated from Miss Briscoe and Lige. People were pushing and shoving, and he saw her face grow pale. He realized with a pang of sympathy how helpless he would feel if he were as small as she and at his utmost height could only see big, suffocating backs and huge see big, sunceating backs and hole shoulders pressing down from above. He was keeping them from crowding heavily upon her with all his strength, and a royal feeling of protectiveness came over him. She was so little. And yet, without the remotest hint of hardness, she gave him such a distinct impression of poise and equilibrium. She seemed so able to meet anything that might come, to understand it—even to laugh at it—so Americanly capable and

The throng was thick around them, garrulous and noisy, but they two were more richly alone together, to his appre-ciation, than if they stood on some far satellite of Mars. He was not to for-get that moment, and he kept the pic-ture of her, as she leaned against the big blue tent pole there, in his heart; the clear, gray eyes lifted to his, the piquant face with the delicate flush stealing back to her cheeks and the brave little figure that had run s straight to him out of the night shadows. There was no one in the dining room when he went in—the other boarders had finished, and it was Cynthia's "evening out"—but the landlord, Columbus Landis, came and attended to his wants himself and chatted with him while he ato.

"There's a picture of Henry Clay," remarked Landis in obvious relevancy to his companion's attire—"there's a picture of Henry Clay somewheres about the house in a swallow tail. The good fellow was so earnest that when the editor's supper was finished and he would have departed, Landis detained him almost by force until the arrival of Mr. Willetts, who, the landlord knew, was his allotted escort for the evening. When Lige came (wear-ing a new tie, a pink one he had has-tened to buy as soon as his engagements had given opportunity) the land-lord hissed a savage word of reproach for his tardiness in his ear and whisperingly bade him not let the other out of

The rifle match at Kentville last Saturday, between the Bridgetown and Kentville teams, resulted in a victory for Kentville of seven points. A cross fire of one of the Bridgetown team lost them the match. Mr. B. M. Williams is again at the top of the score with 96 points, the best Kentville score being 92. Kentville has the lowest score. The match was extremely close from the start, Bridgetown leading at 200 yards with 13 points, at 500 with 5, and Kentville at 600 with 7. The following is the score:

It was exactly 1.35 o'clock when the trap was sprung. At 1.50 the body was cut down and death pronounced. Robinson made no confession and protested his innocence to the very last. The condemned man never uttered a word from the time that he left his cell. Preceded by Radcliffe and accompanied by Rev. Mr. White and Captain Ford, of the Salvation Army, Robinson walked quickly upstairs to the gallows. He looked straight ahead and showed but little emotion. His face was pale, but he bore up wonderfully well and carried out his word that he would not flinch at the last moment.

that he would not finch at the last moment.

From midnight until the hour of the execution Rev. Mr. White remained in the cell with the condemned man, and just before the final moment he administered to him the rites of the Anglican Church.

His brother claimed the body, and will take it to Lawrencetown, Annapolis County, for burial.

Apple Creps Will be Large But Not

A Halifax man who is closely in touch with the apple producing and shipping interests of Nova Scotia, says that after careful enquiry, and after driving through the great orchard districts of the province, he has concluded that the apple crop this year will be fully as large as that of last, which was a phenomenal one. He says, however, that while the quantity of apples will be fully equal to that of 1903, the quality this year will be much inferior as to appearance at least. The fruit is spotted and lacks the beautiful purity of color that marked last year's crop. This and the fact that the apple growing regions have large crops this year will, he beliaves, take a dollar off the price that will be realized in England as compared with the figures of a year ago.

prosperous looking fruit-grower pulled up his horse and got out. "I came over for a barrel of that 'ROYAL HOUSEHOLD' Flour, said he. "Suppose you have got lots of it left. My wife told me not to get any other kind, so I hope you have it here."

The merchant said he was very sorry but he had sold his last barrel of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" the day before, and didn't expect a new supply till the first of the following week. He said :-"Won t you take a barrel of -----or---. They are both flours of good reputation.

But the buyer said :-"No, we have used both those flours and we have used 'Royal Household' and my wife thinks 'Royal Household' so superior to any flour she has ever tried that she must always have it in future." The merchant talked for a while and put up a pretty good argu.

nent but finally the farmer said :-"It's only five or six miles to Middleton and, as I am hitched up, might just as well drive over there and get what I want."

He thereupon drove to Middleton and got the flour he wanted; at least, Mr. Cochran presumes that he did, as he started for Middleton where 'ROYAL HOUSEHOLD' is now sold in large quantities. Mr. Cochran thinks that there can be no doubt about 'ROYAL HOUSEHOLD' being the very best flour in this market when people will take such pains to be sure that they get it.

A Good Baker

The oven in the Kitchener Range is scientifically proportion d to the size of the fire-box so that no more fuel can be burned han is absolutely necessary to heat the oven.

The oven is lined with heavy sheet steel, which is a great adjator of heat and insures a uniform heat throughout the oven -no danger of a loaf of bread being half done on one side and burned on the other. The Kitchener range is built on scientific principles throughout, and should be carefully examined before buying any
