Married at Hamilton.

Mr. Gilbert J. Johnson, of the Hawthorn Mills office staff, who has been a resident of Carleton Place for over a year now, was married at Hamilton on the 11th. The Spectator gives the following particulars:—

"A quiet wedding took place in the Church of the Ascension on Tuesday morning, July 11, at 10:30. Rev. Dr.
Tenison officiating, when Edith M.
Walker, eldest daughter of Mrs. William Walker, was united in marriage to Mr. Gilbert J. Johnson, of Carleton Place, formerly of Hamilton, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnson.
The church was prettily decorated with daisies. The bride was married in her travelling suit of navy blue taffeta wearing a corsage bouquet of pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She was unattended, being given away by her brother,
Mr. H. V. Walker. Mr. and Mrs.
Johnson left on a short honeymoon to the Thousand Islands, after which they will go to their home in Carleton Place."
The young couple arrived here the end of the week, and are receiving a hearty welcome. They will make their home in the brick house of Mr. Thos. Burgess, on Neelin street, recently vacated by Mrs. Fife.

Perth Masonic Lodge will be one hundred years old in 1918, an honor and distinction which has fallen to only eight sister lodges in Ontario.

Miss Ida E. Fife left last Friday morning to spend a few weeks' holidays up north, visiting Chapleau, Cochrane and other places before returning.

languages, and Miss M. McCallum,

Capt. T. R. Caldwell, of Lanark, is among the invalid soldiers who have just arrived home for a short furlough.
Capt. Caldwell has one of his arms badly injured with shrapnel, but is convalescing rapidly and will soon be all right again. He passed through Perth on Sunday and received a warm welcome. Capt. W. R. Caldwell, a cousin, suffering from trench rheumatism and nervous shock, is also on his way home to recuperate. Both these worthy young men have done their "bit" for the empire, but are still anxious to return to the front.

Invalid Soldiers Home.

Among the invalid soldiers who arrived at Quebec on Saturday from overseas we observe the names of H.
Utman and E. McDonald, of Carleton Place. The former is an Englishman whose wife resides here, the latter is a son of Mr. Allan McDonald, of town, who enlisted in this west.

Traveller's Sudden Death.

Mr. N. S. Gaffield, the representative of the wholesale firm of Gilmour & Co., Brockville, registered at the hotel at Cobden a week ago yesterday, apparently in his usual good health. He retired to bed, but after awhile aroused a fellow traveller in the next room, who called the proprietor of the house, who in turn secured the village doctor. Mr.
Gaffield was suffering an attack of acute indigestion. The doctor administered some medicine and apparently the patient appeared to show signs of improvement. The doctor went to his office for a few minutes, but before he returned Mr. Gaffield passed away. Deceased was well known up and down the Valley, and was held in very high esteem by all those who knew him, especially by the business people whom he had been calling upon for a great many years.

Death of William Conner.

The death of Mr. William Conner occurred somewhat unexpectedly yesterday morning, at his home on Rochester street. The deceased was 77 years of age in June, and for some time had been suffering from arterio-sclerosis, but his collapse was not anticipated so soon. The deceased was born at South Lake, Leeds Co. He came to Carleton from Seely's Bay about twelve years ago, and has been a resident since. He was a blacksmith by trade, but worked little at his trade here, having invested his means judiciously. He was a man of staunch principles and very fixed in his opinion. In religion he was a Methodist. He was twice married, his first wife, having died many years ago, and is survived by two sons of the first family, Dr. W. R. Conner, of Gouverneur, N.Y., and Geo. B. Conner, of Oak Lake, Man. Fourteen years ago he married Mrs. D. Robertson, who also survives. The funeral is fixed for tomorrow morning, when the service at the house will be conducted by Rev. Mr.
Henderson, after which the remains will be taken to the C.P.R. station, and will leave by the 11 train for Brockville and thence to Gananoque, interment to be made in the Gananoque cemetery.
Dr. Conner is here for the obsequies.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries dedicated to tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

PRIDE IN LABOR.

Let us teach our children to earn what they get—to give useful service in such measure as in their tender years they may give without hardship. By which is meant not odious child labor—binding children down to steady work—but the little errands—the little helpful things, aside from the usually duties of home life—the useful, although not irksome, deeds that boys and girls may do, without detriment to their health and without crowding the time that rightfully belongs to them for play. For these things let them be reasonably compensated, so that they early may learn the value of earning their own way—of being self-supporting, when they advance in years.

It requires tact and good judgment to separate little kindnesses and little thoughtfulness on the part of children those acts for which they should not be paid but which they should be taught to do as a second nature habit, from the unusual service for which parents or outsiders properly may remunerate the little ones. The cardinal purpose should be to let children grow naturally and logically into the habit of being self-reliant, of having a worthy pride in sustaining themselves, as they come to maturity. If all children had instilled into them habits of industry and were imbued with the pride that should disdain to accept charity so long as it can be avoided—the pride that impels men and women to do the best they can even though adversity may impose disagreeable conditions upon them—but who insist upon earning their own way—if there were more of this pride there would be fewer chronic idlers.

But efficient into the keen desire for work should be the opportunity to get work. It is undeniable that many a deserving man, industrious by nature, too proud to accept charity so long as he can avoid it, is compelled to be the recipient of aid because he cannot secure work assuring a livelihood. Every man should want to work. And there should be work for every man who wants it.

A CENTURY OF BIBLES.

Beginning on the 6th of last May, the American Bible Society will celebrate its hundredth anniversary. This society was founded May 6, 1816, for the purpose circulating the Bible, without note or comment, in all lands. The success with which this enterprise has met is shown by the fact that during the century of its existence more than 117,000,000 copies of the scriptures have been distributed in one hundred and sixty-five languages. The society has always sold Bibles at cost of printing and given them to those who are too poor to buy. There is perhaps no single institution in the country that has had a greater influence in the spread of religion during the past century than American Bible Society, and the good that it has accomplished is beyond estimation.

A better way to show friendship for the birds than even setting up bird houses is to put a bell on the family cat. As birds acquire confidence and grow more tame in the presence of mankind they become easy victims of prowling felines.

Doctor Frank Crane says: "I believe more firmly every year of my life that a man's happiness depends upon what is inside of him and not what is around him." And yet the Doctor is a prohibitionist.

If there is ever a time when silence is golden, it is when a man is mad.

Smiles should be a part of ourselves every day of the week. Do you know we esteem those persons our best friends who greet us with a smile and a kind word. A community composed of individuals who look always on the bright side of everything would, in our opinion, be an ideal community. What we need in this life is sunshine, and a great deal of it.

LIFE'S JOURNEY.

For every life there is a summit. Happy are they who gain and sad the lot of those who faint and fail in the struggle. Short or long to the top, it can only be scaled by persistent climbing. There must be ambition to do and dare, or the prize will not be secured. Have you in the vigor of youth begun the journey? Already are you tired and weary? Are you resting by the way in slothful indulgence, hoping for wings or sails to bear you aloft without effort? Long before manhood's prime you will miss the top and go down hill. Arouse another effort. At the base is the thorn at the summit the crown. There is no escape from the one or the other in the life journey. Which will you have wealth or poverty, comfort or sorrow? Decide in the dew of the morning.

At high noon stand out a man on the peak of endeavor wearing your own crown.

The noisiest political farmer has the tallest weeds in his cornfield and the fewest potatoes in his hills.

Someone has truthfully said that nothing but a mint can make money without advertising. It might be added that the mint couldn't do it if it didn't put its competitors in jail.

No Whiskey Orders by Phone.

The Licence Board has distributed to all dentists, physicians, druggists and veterinary surgeons in the province of Ontario a blue book, which will govern their conduct in the matter of requisitions for liquor. Hitherto a doctor could phone up a drug store and tell the attendant to give a patient a certain amount of liquor. Sometimes the druggist was deceived by this method, and the Licence Board is bound that such practices must cease. The blue book contains a form which must be filled out and signed by the physician and signed by the person to whom the liquor is delivered saying plainly how much liquor is required and what the disease is. Only six ounces may be presented for internal use, but a pint may be obtained if the patient is to be bathed. The prescription may be filled only once and must be filed for purpose of record. The blue book also contains sections of the Ontario Temperance Act for the convenience of the physicians and the druggists of the province, defining their powers and duties and the penalties for infractions of the law.

Talk in the Trenches.

"When's this bloomin' war goin' to finish?" asked one North-country lad in a British regiment.

"Dunno," replied one of the South-shires. "We've planted some daffodils in front of our trench."

"Giddy optimists!" snorted the man from the North, "we've planted acorns."

YOUR FLOWER BEDS.

How to Set Plants So That They Will Thrive and Bloom.

Where beds are to be filled with a single plant they should be planted in even rows an equal distance apart and the plants alternated in the rows, which will give each plant considerably more room and light. It is well to have these lines laid out and the places for the plants marked before any plants are lifted from the hotbed. In order that the planting may go forward as rapidly and smoothly as possible. A board with chalk marks on the edge will accomplish this admirably for small beds, or a cord with bits of white cloth tied at intervals, or chalk marks even will be useful in long beds or lines.

In planting make a hole in the earth with the trowel large enough to hold the root of the plant in a natural position and place the plant therein, drawing up the earth about the roots and pressing it snugly down; pour in sufficient water to fill the hole, and when it has partially soaked away draw up the remaining earth and press firmly. Make a fine dust mulch about the plant by working the soil lightly with the trowel, and if any damp places show after the plant has been set a few moments go over the soil again or add dry earth from another part of the bed if necessary. The planting may be hastened by making a row of holes across the beds before beginning to set the plants, then placing the plants in each before applying water, but drawing up part of the earth; the water is then placed in all the holes, and by the time the last is filled the first has soaked away sufficiently to allow of filling up and finishing; this saves an appreciable amount of time when there is a large amount of planting to do.

No shade or covering of any kind will be needed if the planting has been well and thoroughly done, nor is it necessary or advisable to wait for signs of rain before planting, though planting at the edge of a spell of rainy weather has doubtless advantages. But planting before a summer shower is to be avoided, as this is usually followed by hot weather, and under the influence of a hot sun the moisture in the soil evaporates rapidly, and the soil must be constantly cultivated to retain what water it contains.

After the planting is completed go over the beds carefully and where any moisture has drained to the surface restore the dry mulch by cultivation or by adding dry soil from some other place. If the planting has been well done the plants will not need watering for several days, indeed are far better off without it. If the weather is unusually dry as soon as the plants begin to grow or show that they are becoming established by the way they settle themselves in the ground and turn toward the light water may be given in sufficient quantity to thoroughly soak the ground and the following day the soil worked over with rake or trowel to restore the dust mulch. This is better than repeated waterings.

How to Make a Dress Bag.

Make a bag of any kind of material desired (a pretty flowered cretonne is suitable), the length of the garment to be covered with the back piece a little longer than the front, so it can be brought up and fastened to the front side with buttons and button holes or "snaps."

Draw up the front to fit around the hanger, thus entirely inclosing the garment. In the interior of the bag make two or three small pockets, fill with sachet, camphor or some other protection against moths if garment is not to wash.

SOCIAL LIONS.

A Bit of History Showing How the Term Came Into Use.

When you refer to a popular man in society as a "social lion" did you know that you are drawing on a bit of very remote history for the expression? The lion is anything but a social beast, and the figurative use of his name to designate a popular person came down to us in a most curious and roundabout way.

When Henry III. came to the throne of England, in 1216, there was a curious dispute as to the significance of the figures entering into the armorial bearings of Great Britain. There were three animals, "passant gardant," and they were spoken of as leopards. As a matter of fact, they were supposed to be lions. It was argued that there had been three leopards in the Tower of London in the reign of William the Conqueror and that these had given the motif for the emblem. Or it might have been that the Norman oppressor kept three leopards as a concession to the Saxons he had subjugated.

Whatever the facts may be, Henry was satisfied that the conventionalized animals on seals, banners and coins were really lions, and in order to impress the fact he had three live and unmistakable "monarchs of the desert" brought to London and placed in the Tower. It at once became the fashion to visit the lions. When guests from out of the city were being entertained the great treat was that of a visit to the "lions of the Tower." After the sight had become commonplace and the meaning of the animals had been lost to sight the phrase remained. The "lion" was a statesman, actor or some other celebrity who held popular favor.

Squelching the Grouch.
"Samanthy, why don't you stop Mary Anne from giggling?"
"Oh, let her giggle while she can. She'll marry some day if she lives, and, heaven knows, she'll quit the habit mighty quick."

Could Not Control It.
Husband—Do you see Dasherway over there? Wife—Yes. Husband—He has named his automobile after his wife. Wife—How funny! Husband—Funny! Not at all. When he got it he found he could not control it.

FRANKTOWN.

A severe electric storm swept over this locality on Sunday afternoon, accompanied by torrents of rain and a very high wind. The latter blew down some huge trees and it is reported that the lightning struck several buildings in the neighborhood, though no serious damage was done as far as known.
The rain was welcome, as it was getting a bit dry again, and everything is revived with the refreshing showers.
The happy haying season has opened up, though seed-time is scarcely over yet, as a resident of the village ploughed
a field to-day, after taking a crop of hay off it, to plant with another kind of fodder to be garnered in the fall. Two crops from the same patch of ground in one short summer is surely going some.

Suspicion Confirmed
A worthy vicar in a rural parish who preached one Sunday in the interest of foreign missions was surprised, says Tit-Bits, on entering the village shop during the week to be greeted with marked coldness by the old dame who kept it.
He asked the cause, and the good woman, producing a half crown for a delivered and throwing it down before him said:
"I marked that coin and put it in the plate last Sunday, and here it is back in my shup. I knowed well then poor Africans never got the money."
A perfectly good lie sometimes fails to serve its purpose.

SLAYS TAKE BAIBURT

Swift Advance Is Made Against Turks in Caucasus.

Grand Duke Nicholas' Forces Have
Not Only Captured Important
City, but Have Occupied a Whole
Line of Turkish Villages—Turks Are Resisting Desperately Near Mochan but Without Success.

LONDON, July 17.—The official statement from Petrograd regarding the fighting on the Caucasus front announces swift advance by the Russian troops and headlong retreat by the Turks in a number of sectors.
The capture on Saturday night of the important city of Baiburt is announced together with the occupation of a whole line of Turkish villages. South-west of Mochan the Turks are showing desperate resistance, but the fighting is in favor of the Russians.

In the region of Irainjan 18 Turkish officers and 100 Askaris, with a machine gun, were taken. A Cossack detachment also cut off and captured 29 officers and 282 Askaris and a machine gun, as well as regimental records, stores, and ammunition. On the upper Tchouk important progress was made, and the Russians are consolidating the captured positions.
South-west of Mush the Russians dislodged the Turks from all their strongly fortified positions. A Turkish division, recently arrived from Thrace, abandoned its tents and retreated, partly towards the Eastern Eufrates and partly in the direction of Diarbekr.

The official report says:
"Black Sea: During the last cruise one of our torpedo boats sank 28 sailing boats."

"Caucasus: On the night of the 16th our brave Caucasian army, carried by assault Baiburt, which is an important strategic point of convergence. In many sectors the Turks fell back in haste, destroying their depots. In this region and in the basin of the upper Tchouk we made a further considerable advance and consolidated the Turkish positions which we had captured."

"Thus during the recent days our valiant army, with its well known pluck and courage, gained a series of battles in the regions of Baiburt, Mamakhatun, and Mush."

Russians Force Turks to Retreat.
PETROGRAD, July 17.—In Volynia the Russians in the region of Ostroff and Goubine have put down heavy Teutonic attacks, launched in mass formation, and forced the Teu-tons to retreat to avoid the danger of being outflanked, according to the Russian official communication issued Sunday evening. Upwards of 3,000 men were captured in the fighting. The official statement says:
"In Volynia, in the region southeast of Svinusky (in the vicinity of Lutsk), the enemy in mass formation took the offensive at several places. By energetic counter-attacks we repulsed them and continue to develop our success."

"On many sectors in the region of Ostroff and Goubine we overthrew the enemy despite his stubborn resistance, and he retreated hastily, owing to the danger of being outflanked. One of our regiments captured here one heavy and one light battery. We also took numerous cannon which had been installed in isolated positions."

"The total number of prisoners taken in this combat is not yet known, but upwards of 3,000 already have been reported."

BRITISH PENETRATE SINAI.

Two British Columns Have Gone 60 Miles Into the Interior.

LONDON, July 17.—Two British columns have just completed successful operations on the Sinai Peninsula, where Turkish and Arabian bands have been making raids along the Suez Canal. The columns, operating from Tor and Abu Zeenema, on the Sinai shore of the Gulf of Eux, penetrated 60 miles into the desert and hostile country.
"Prisoners and live stock were captured," says a War-Office statement. "Despite opposition and snip-ing the British suffered no casualties."

The official report says:
"The commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean expeditionary force, telegraphing Saturday, reports that two columns operating from Tor and Abu Zeenema, on the Sinai shore of the Gulf of Suez, have returned to their bases after successful raids on the enemy posts in the peninsula."

"Sixty miles of difficult country were traversed, prisoners were taken and live stock was secured. Despite opposition and considerable sniping no casualties were sustained by either of the columns."

Fierce Battle in Italian Theatre

LONDON, July 17.—Fierce fighting took place Sunday in the Italian theatre of war, according to reports received from both Vienna and Rome.

The Austrians state officially that ten violent counter-attacks delivered in succession north-east of Monte Rasta resulted in heavy losses for the Italians.
Italian troops have stormed and carried Austrian positions at the entrance of the Posina valley and have gained ground in the valley of Travenanso.

Guardships Were Armed Trawlers.

LONDON, July 17.—Replying to the German Admiralty announcement of Saturday that a 7,000-ton British auxiliary cruiser and three guard-ships were sunk in the North Sea July 11 by German submarines, the British Admiralty Saturday stated:
"There is no truth in the report of the sinking of an auxiliary cruiser, and the guardships were armed trawlers."

GOOD RICH BLOOD MEANS GOOD HEALTH

Just a Little More Rich, Red Blood
Cures Most Ailments.

The lack of sufficient rich, red blood does not end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious.
Bloodless people are tired, languid, rundown folk who do not enjoy life. Food does not nourish; there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache and nearly always nervousness. If this bloodlessness is neglected too long, a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more rich, red blood cures all these troubles. Then you have new health, new vitality and pleasure in life. To get more rich, red blood the remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. No other medicine increases and enriches the blood so quickly or so surely. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done this over and over again. Throughout why thousands of people always have a good word to say for this medicine. Miss Gertrude Haffner, Kingston, Ont., says:—"About two years ago I was suffering greatly with anæmia, so much so that I had to give up my situation. I became so weak that I could scarcely walk without help. I had no ambition, no color, no appetite and was constantly troubled with headaches and dizzy spells. I was taking medicine from the doctor, but it did not do me a particle of good. One day a friend asked me if I had tried Dr.
Williams' Pink Pills. Though as the result of my condition I was greatly discouraged, I began the use of the Pills, and thanks to that good friend's advice
after using a few boxes I began to feel much better. Under the continued use of the Pills I gained in weight, my color came back and I grew gradually stronger.
I looked so much better that people would ask me what I was taking and I had no hesitation in giving the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am so grateful for what this medicine has done for me that I will do all I can to extend its use."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr.
Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Keeping Canada's War Records

ONE of the busiest offices in London is that of the Canadian War Records, where is being collected, collated, and precisely the amazing mass of material from which the Canadian historian will ultimately compile the "Official Canadian History of the War." It will be a wonderful romance, woven from hundreds of thousands of threads of slender but tested information. Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian Eyewitness, has tackled the task of making perfect the Canadian records with characteristic energy and thoroughness. An enormous quantity of official and extra-official information—reports, diaries, photographs, maps, drawings, and so on—has been regularly collected since March, 1915, but, because there was no staff to deal with it, no serious effort had been made to dissect and collate it until Sir Max Aitken received permission to proceed with the work in January last.

To obtain some idea of the labor involved it may be recorded that in January last daily war diaries were being compiled by no fewer than 112 units attached to the Canadian corps. That is to say, that 112 battalions, batteries, and other varied units were all recording their daily history of the war as it affected themselves. To-day the number of units compiling diaries is far larger. Again, the brigades tell their daily tale of battle or rest, and the divisions, in their turn, collecting information from the brigades, deal with the story of the day in a more precise but at the same time more comprehensive manner. It is not only the diaries which have to be considered. To every diary there is an appendix, and more frequently than not the whole value of a unit's diary reposes in the appendix, many of which extend to 25 or 30 foolscap pages, which usually contain more valuable information than is to be found in the diaries themselves.

When the work was begun in January it was found that none of these vital appendices were in the possession of the Canadian authorities, although many of the diaries had been filed with the Canadian Pay and Record Office. The missing diaries and appendices, therefore, had to be recovered, and they were only secured by long and arduous labor. The Historical Section of the Canadian War Records co-operates with the Historical Section of the Imperial Defence Committee, to which is entrusted the work of collecting, arranging and filing the official British records of the war for future historical purposes, and those who might imagine that the work of the Canadian War Records is of minor importance should consider the great and growing thought and care which are given to the compilation of the British War Records. The Historical Section of the British War Records is controlled by men of distinction and authority. Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, presides over its deliberations in person. The executive is under the immediate control of Sir Maurice Hankey, who is assisted by Lieut.-Col. E. D. Swinton, formerly British Eyewitness; Major Daniel, Major Storr, Prof. Julian Corbett, the Hon. John Portesque, and Sir Arthur Lee-tham. A large staff of typists and precise writers is in the charge of an officer who is a well-known expert in such work.

The first difficulty the Canadian Historical Section had to overcome was in connection with the formation of a staff. There were plenty of Englishmen with the requisite knowledge and training to be had for the asking, but Sir Max Aitken wanted Canadians. Canadian soldiers who had returned battered, and in many cases badly maimed, from the battlefields of France and Flanders were set to the task of compiling history which they themselves had assisted to make. The staff of the Canadian War Records Office now consists entirely of n.c.o.'s and men who have been evacuated from France suffering from wounds or sickness, the number of them are permanently disabled and without limbs. They are sent to the Canadian War Records Office from the Canadian Casualty Assembly Centre after they have passed through a school of stenography, and at the Canadian War Records Office they remain, working the same hours and with the same devotion as men who are thoroughly fit and without physical disability; until they take their discharge, when they have been furnished with artificial limbs, or having been medically boarded, are returned as capable of doing duty with their reserve units.

The British War Office has recently sanctioned an official Canadian photographer, to be attached to the Canadian War Records Office, and soon, it is hoped, the Canadian Official Photographer will be able to keep up a steady supply of photographs of the Canadian troops in the field, which will not only stir the imagination of the Canadian public at the moment but which will serve as a lasting record for the pride and satisfaction of future generations of Canadians. Again, permission has been secured from the British War Office to appoint official Canadian cinematographers, to accompany the Canadian troops in the trenches. And by wise and most expert directed arrangements, these films will be circulated to the renown of Canada throughout the world. The main work of the Canadian War Records, that of compiling and precisizing the all-important diaries and appendices, is, of course, in arrears. But there should be no cause for complaint in that.

IMPORTANCE OF FRUIT INDUSTRY

(1) Gaspereaux Valley, King's Co.
(2) Starr's Point, King's Co., N.S.
(3) Packing Room at Hillcrest, N.S.

IT is said $140,000,000 has been invested in Canadian fruit production so that this is one of our great national industries. In a year of average production 15,000,000 bushels of Canadian apples are marketed, of which Ontario alone ships on an average 1,300 car-loads into the prairie provinces.

Most famous of all orchard areas is the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia nine miles wide and eighty miles long. With the Dominion Atlantic Railway running through the valley the growers have ideal packing and shipping facilities. 60 p.c. of the crop being handled co-operatively by one central association. Plums and pears are also grown here on a commercial scale.

Ontario is the proud possessor of the original McIntosh Red Tree which still stands at Dundas. Large apple orchard districts are found (1) Along the lake shore line of the C.P.R. (2) West of Toronto bordering on Lake Erie and Lake Huron. (3) In the Georgian Bay District, and (4) in the Niagara Peninsula which also produces 95 p.c. of the grape crop and at least 75 p.c. of the Ontario peach crop. Plums and pears are grown wherever apples are produced in Ontario.

British Columbia has developed its fruit industry during quite recent years, the number of fruit trees increasing from 650,000 in 1901 to approximately 3,000,000 in 1913; and the production of apples from 210,000 bushels in 1910 to 787,750 bushels in 1915. The principal fruit-producing section of the Province is the Okanagan Valley, where fruit is packed and marketed largely in a co-operative way, similar to that in vogue in Nova Scotia. There is also a large apple section in the Kootenay Lake District and on the Lower Mainland. Pears and plums are also grown very successfully in these sections of the province already mentioned, and peaches have been planted quite extensively in the southern part of the Okanagan Valley.

Between 1,250,000 and 1,500,000 barrels of Canadian apples are consumed outside of Canada every year, and most of these in Great Britain. The growers of Nova Scotia and Ontario cater especially to the Old Country market, though some British Columbia fruit also reaches it. Nova Scotia has been developing, for some years past, a trade in South America and South Africa, with very satisfactory results. British Columbia exports considerable quantities to Australia and has even experimented with China and Japan.

Should any pressure of circumstances interfere with the export fruit trade, a very serious situation would present itself, for it would be necessary either to double the consumption of fruit in Canada, or to allow tremendous quantities to waste in the orchards. The severity of the situation would only be lessened by concerted co-operation on the part of the consuming public and those who cater to its demands.

JELICOE THE SILENT

The Great Admiral's Mascot is a Black Cat.

Admiral Sir John Jellicoe must lead a charmed life. Three times has he narrowly escaped death. The last occasion was in the Boxer Rebellion in 1900, when he got a bullet through the top of one of his lungs. The first escape was in 1880, when, as a lieutenant on the Monarch, he volunteered to rescue the crew of a wrecked steamer off Gibraltar and his boat capsized. The second escape was from the ill-fated Victoria. Commander Jellicoe, as he then was, was in his bunk in a high fever when the ship collided with the Camperdown. He made for his station on the bridge, and when the ship went down was towed to safety by a midshipman.

Admiral Jellicoe was born to the sea. His father was formerly Commander of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's Fleet. Sir John was born at Southampton fifty-six years ago. Like Admiral Beatty, he entered the navy at thirteen, and quickly showed his love and aptitude for the service by passing first in all the examinations on the Britannia and winning the special prize of £80 for gunnery at the Royal Naval College.

This branch of the service has always attracted Admiral Jellicoe. The fact is not generally known that it is to him we owe the most up-to-date and efficient gunnights and other apparatus which have contributed largely to the great improvement in our naval gunnery. Some idea of the extent of this improvement may be gathered from the fact that from forty-two hits out of 100 rounds, which was the average when Jellicoe first went into office as Director of Naval Ordnance in 1905, he increased the average percentage to seventy, and that in the space of one year. It was in recognition of this splendid improvement that in 1909 a knighthood was conferred upon the man who to-day is in supreme command of the British Fleet.

A man of very few words, Jellicoe's taciturnity has earned for him the title in the navy of "Silent John." "He don't waste words," was a blue-jacket's criticism of the Admiral, "but when he does speak he hits the mark every time."

Jellicoe's popularity in the navy is due to the fact that he understands men. He takes the keenest interest in the home life of his men, and does not stint his praise when praise is due. "I feel prouder every day," he wrote, a short time ago, in a letter to Lady Jellicoe, "that I command such men." Sir John loves nothing better when at home than to spend his time in the society of his four daughters, whose portraits hang in his private cabin on his flagship, the Iron Duke, while on the mantelpiece can be seen his mascot, a black cat.

Russia Attracts Capital.

Russia will offer a fine chance for investment after the war. France already knows this field, and has many millions invested there in railways and industries which have paid well. Russia's own savings will give her much of her own money to use after the war, and these savings will be increased by the reform in the consumption of alcohol, but she will still need money from outside.

Her first attention necessarily must be given to the construction of new railways—the cost of new railways already planned in Russia and Siberia will pass $600,000,000. After that must come subsidiary railways, canals, roads, and the canalization of rivers, agricultural projects, irrigation, the manufacture of chemical fertilizers and agricultural implements, mechanical, electrical, and chemical industries, weaving, paper manufacture, mining, and the building of ports—in fact, all the industries of a great modern civilization. Regions in which particularly good opportunities will be found are Siberia, Turkestan, the regions of the Steppes and Northern Russia and the Caucasus.

The advantage of placing capital in Russia will be increased by a series of legislative reforms dealing with corporations, passports, etc., of which some already have been realized, while others soon will be.

Would Give Germans an Excuse.

The position of British prisoners in the camp at Ruhleben, Germany, whose rations are said to have been reduced, was raised in the House of Lords the other day by Baron Devonport. Lord Bessborough and other members opposed the idea of instituting reprisals on the ground that it would not influence the Germans who, they said, would be glad of any excuse to starve British prisoners.

Baron Newton, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, announced that the Foreign Office had at last received the reply of Germany to the proposals made by the British Government. The reply has not yet been examined, but it is not a categorical refusal. Baron Newton therefore asked that the discussion be adjourned.

A Royal Marriage?

It has been suggested in some quarters that the recent visit of Prince Christopher of Greece to his aunt, Queen Alexandra, might lead to a royal engagement, the prospective bride being said to be Princess Arthur of Connaught's sister, Princess Maud of Fife. It is declared, however, that the Prince's visit was in no way connected with matrimony, in spite of the arguments of the gossip.

CHANT OF LOVE FOR ENGLAND.

[From "A Chant of Love for England and Other Poems," by Helen Gray Cone.]

A song of hate is a song of Hell;
Some there be that sing it well.
Let them sing it loud and long;
We lift our hearts in a loftier song:
We lift our hearts to Heaven above,
Singing the glory of her we love—
England!

Glory of thought and glory of dead,
Glory of Hampden and Rannmede;
Glory of swords and glory of souls;
Glory of songs mounting as birds,
Glory immortal of magical words;
Glory of Milton, glory of Nelson;
Tragic glory of Gordon and Scott;
Glory of Shelley, glory of Sidney,
Glory transcendent that perishes not—
Here is the story, here be the glory,
England!

Shatter her beauteous breast we may;
The Spirit of England none can slay!
Dash the bomb on the dome of Paul's—Deem ye the fame of the Admiral falls?
Pry the stone from the chancel floor—
Dream ye that Shakespeare shall live
no more?

Where is the giant shot that kills Wordsworth walking the old green hills?
Trample the red rose on the ground—
Keats is Beauty while earth spins round!

Bind her, grind her, burn her with fire,
Cast her ashes into the sea—
She shall escape, she shall aspire,
She shall arise to make men free:
She shall arise in a sacred song,
Lighting the lives that are yet unborn;
Spirit eternal, Splendor eternal,
England!

Russian Duma May Put Out Liquor Forever.

The bill providing for the permanent prohibition of vodka came up in the Russian Duma a few days ago for the first time, and the session was given over to a discussion of the effectiveness of the present regulations forbidding the sale of liquor and the advisability of perpetuating the advantages of the increased prosperity evidenced throughout the country since the Imperial decree at the beginning of the war.

The present prohibition has been prescribed by the Government, and no option given to the people except in the matter of light wines and beer, which has been left in the hands of the municipal Councils in various parts of the Empire. But judging from the preliminary debate the representatives of the people will support the Government, and will signify their approval of prohibition by abolishing forever the sale of vodka.

In fact the general sentiment expressed by the members of the Duma was dissatisfaction with the laxity in the enforcement of the present regulation.

Quoting the figures covering eleven months in 1915, in which, despite the prohibitory regulations, nearly 4,000,000 vedros—a vedro equalling three and one-quarter gallons—of Government liquor had been sold, one speaker asserted that drunkenness was becoming as prevalent as before the war and declared that measures should be taken to strengthen the laws now in operation.

Drunkenness, continued the speaker, also had been increased by the use of considerable quantities of furniture polish, eau-de-cologne, and other substitutes for liquor consumed by the peasant population.

The measure making the prohibition permanent will be put to a vote at an early date, and it is expected will be passed with little opposition.

Rubber Honeycomb.

Would anyone think that rich, juicy honeycomb, with honey dripping from it, could be anything than—well, just rich, juicy honeycomb? Our naval patrol service can tell you that there is a kind of honey made by bees which do not buzz while they labor, although they try to "improve each shining hour" well enough. Specimens of it are occasionally found in the blockade area around Britain. As usual, it was first unearthed in a ship that was being searched for contraband, and so goes was the imitation that the "honey" had a chance of getting through.

Part of the vessel's cargo consisted of case after case labelled "pure honey." When the cases were opened they were found to be filled with the familiar little square boxes of comb with honey—or what looked like honey—running out of it. One inquisitive sailor tasted this, made a grimace, and tasted again; then he wrenched a comb from its box and dropped it on the deck—and lo! it fumed up and down there right merrily. Closer investigation revealed that the combs were built of rubber and had been filled with some smeary, honey-colored substance to make them resemble the real thing, as they did to the life. A clever idea this for getting rubber into Germany, though it failed.

Patriotism.

Here is a story told by Sir Thomas Lipton at a banquet:
"A chap was sanding his sugar the other day with his errand-boy's help. 'The errand-boy, lifting a scoopful of sand, asked:
'The usual proportion, sir?'
'No, Joseph, of course not,' the boss replied, sternly. 'The usual proportion in days like these? Joseph, Joseph, where's your patriotism?'
'Then he sighe' and added:
'Only half the usual proportion of sand, Joseph—only half the usual proportion as long as our gallant troops at the Front have such need of sand.'"

There are now 757 women tram conductors in London. Preference is given to those whose husbands have been killed in the war.

Wheat is Very Ancient.

The growing of wheat has so long been a principal occupation with man that its geographical origin is unknown. The Egyptians claim it originated with Isis, while the Chinese claim to have received the seed direct as a gift from heaven. The belief that it originated in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris is more generally accepted than any other. The most ancient languages mention wheat, and it has been found by the archaeologists in the kitchens of the prehistoric inhabitants of the Swiss lake region. It is generally agreed that at the lowest estimate wheat has been a faithful servant of mankind for 6,000 years.

"Of course."
"And then Jinks got into the game with a handful of clubs."
"Including all the honors, I suppose."
"Whereupon Cholly passed through the window—and made such a hole in the terrace they had to call it spades."

A Strict Dramatic Censor.

Vienna once possessed the strictest dramatic censor ever known in the person of Franz Hoegelin, who held that post in the Austrian capital at the beginning of the last century. Hoegelin published a manual for the guidance of censors. "A pair of lovers should never be allowed to appear on the stage alone. They must always be accompanied by a third person of mature years." Marriages out of one's class were also strictly forbidden by Hoegelin on the stage, and he quotes an instance of a play which he refused to pass because the author made the hero, Count Valdemar, marry a gardener's daughter. "Such misalliances have unfortunately been known to occur, in real life, but that is no reason why they should be allowed on the stage," he said.

The Way to Float.

This is the advice of an old swimmer to those who cannot swim: "Any human being who will have the presence of mind to clasp the hands behind his back and turn the face toward the zenith may float at ease and in perfect safety in tolerably still water. When you first find yourself in deep water you have only to consider yourself an empty pitcher. Let your mouth and nose and not the top of your heavy head be the highest part of you and you are safe. But thrust up one of your bony hands and down you go—turning up the handle tips over the pitcher." There are reason and logic in this.

Daisy's Hero

He Proved, Too, He Was a Real One

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mrs. Howard glanced apprehensively toward the row of steamer chairs where her pretty daughter, Daisy, was engaged in animated conversation with a good looking, athletic young man.

"Daisy is so imprudent," murmured Daisy's mother as she neared the chairs. "There is poor Hal eating his heart out, and that naughty girl is devoting herself to young Pearson!"

She smiled coldly at Ben Pearson as he arose promptly at her approach and arranged her chair. When she was seated and the rug tucked about her feet Mrs. Howard glanced significantly at Daisy.

"My dear, did you know that Hal was waiting for you? You promised to play accompaniments for him."

"Oh, mother, I forgot all about it!" cried Daisy as she arose and settled the blue cloth cap on her bright hair. "Mr. Pearson was describing the great Yale-Harvard game—you know he was halfback on the football team!" Daisy cast an admiring glance at Pearson's broad shoulders.

Mrs. Howard smiled perfunctorily, and she was nettled to observe that Ben Pearson accompanied Daisy in her search for Hal Denison. Just as she was congratulating herself that this Mediterranean tour, with all its pleasant intimacy of ship life, must bring about an engagement between Daisy and Hal Denison, the son of her old friend, why, who should appear but this football hero, Ben Pearson, and promptly put poor Hal out of the running.

Why they called Hal Denison Poor Hal one could not tell, for, although he was not big and brawny like Ben Pearson, he was not frail looking unless one especially noted the intellectual face which had a certain delicacy of feature and expression. Otherwise, although Hal Denison was small in stature, he was wiry and strong. He had never gone in for athletics. He was a musician, and even now there came the dreamy strains of "La Serenade" as he played on his violin. Daisy's sympathetic accompaniment. Later the music ceased for awhile, and then Pearson's deep bass voice was heard booming forth popular songs.

Dusk was settling down over the sea when Daisy came along the deck quite alone and slipped into her chair with unusual quietness.

"Hal played beautifully, my dear," murmured Mrs. Howard sleepily.

"I suppose so, mother," returned Daisy; then, hesitatingly, she added, "You don't like Mr. Pearson, do you?" "I don't admire him, my dear, but I cannot say that I dislike him," returned Mrs. Howard.

"I like him very much," said Daisy simply. "Not better than Hal?" demanded Mrs. Howard, throwing caution to the winds.

Daisy hesitated, and that instant's hesitation told Mrs. Howard that the girl's love was wavering between the two men. Which would she choose? There was little doubt, for Daisy was a hero worshiper, and she plainly admired the burly football player.

"Oh, mother," she cried impulsively, "you know I'm fond of Hal, but he's more like a girl, don't you know—quiet and dreamy and fond of simple things. One could not imagine Hal doing anything heroic, now, could one?"

"Some people rather thought it was heroic for Hal to give his cousin Ned three-quarters of their uncle's estate, when the uncle had purposely cut Ned off in a moment of anger; that's an example of moral courage. It was courageous of Hal to submit to a transfusion of blood in an effort to save his brother's life three years ago. In my opinion, Hal Denison is a hero."

"But, mother, dear, that is all very well, but that isn't the sort of courage I mean. There is a certain charm in physical courage, don't you know. Jeopardizing one's life to save that of another. I couldn't imagine Hal doing that."

"How about giving his blood for his brother? He has never been as well since then."

"I know, but the kind of heroism that I mean is born of an impulse, the sort that leaps to stop a runaway horse, that plunges overboard to save a drowning person. Oh, you know!"

Mrs. Howard smiled. "A spectacular heroism," she said dryly.

"I can't imagine Hal doing anything of that sort," went on Daisy. "He is so deliberate in all his actions. He would want to stop and think the matter over—whether there might not be a safe and sane way of accomplishing the end. Do you know, mother, that Mr. Pearson has saved eight people from drowning in the past ten years?"

"I didn't know it, Daisy, but I am sure it is a very creditable record. Did he tell you of his acts of heroism?"

"Now, Mother Howard!" Daisy laughed rather shamefacedly. "He did tell me, but only because I urged him to do so. I love heroism."

Mrs. Howard arose and prepared to go below. "Come, dear; we must dress for dinner. Remember, Daisy, that there are more unrecorded heroes in the world's history than otherwise."

And Daisy, still doubting her mother's judgment, went down to dinner quite unconvinced that there could be any lurking heroism in the quiet personality of Hal Denison.

For several days after that there was bad weather, and many of the passengers were compelled to remain in their staterooms. Among these latter were Mrs. Howard and Hal Denison, who declared himself a fair weather sailor.

But Daisy Howard and Ben Pearson braved the inclemency of the weather and the rain swept decks, and each day found them pacing to and fro, discussing a thousand and one topics, but usually swinging back to that most interesting one, absorbing alike to the young man and the girl, the heroic adventures of Mr. Benjamin Pearson.

There came a day when the party landed at the island of Capri to visit the famous grottoes. Somehow Ben Pearson had attached himself to Mrs. Howard's party, and it had become customary now for Ben to escort Daisy Howard on these excursions, while Mrs. Howard and Hal Denison followed in the rear.

Pearson had visited the island the previous year, and he had much to relate of an adventure that befell the party of which he was a member. He told the story modestly enough, but it had the inviolable ending. A child had fallen from one of the rocks into a deep, silent pool. He, Pearson, had plunged into the icy depths and restored the child to its mother's arms.

"This is the very spot," said Pearson, pointing before him.

Daisy looked. She glimpsed the dark blue water, still and icy. A glance over her shoulder showed that the other members of the party had gone on to another grotto. Only her mother and Hal Denison were near. Daisy turned her head toward Pearson, and her lips parted in a dazzling smile.

At that moment her foot slipped, and with a little cry of terror she caught herself, stumbled and then plunged down into the icy pool.

As she disappeared Ben Pearson rushed frantically up and down the brink of the pool and roared for help.

Mrs. Howard swooned away, and Hal Denison, tossing aside hat and coat, poised on the edge of the pool and then dived down. When he came up he brought the girl with him, dripping wet and shivering with cold, but quite conscious.

Hal's face was white and stern as he disdained Pearson's hastily offered assistance, and somehow he scrambled upon the rocks and bore Daisy to safety.

His shouts brought the guide and other members of the party, and, having administered restoratives and borrowed a steamer rug from a rheumatic old gentleman, he wrapped Daisy in it and, lifting her easily in his arms, bore her to a fisherman's hut on the shore.

Mrs. Howard, having been restored to consciousness, followed on the arm of one of the men, and soon she was assisting her daughter to dry her garments before a roaring fire in the fisherman's cottage.

Daisy was very pale and silent, and Hal Denison was equally reticent. Mrs. Howard, noticing that Hal was dripping wet and shivering with cold, insisted that they return to the tourist steamer at once, so that the young man might be put under the care of the ship's doctor. As for Daisy, she appeared in her normal health when she was arrayed in the picturesque gala attire of the fisherman's daughter.

For Maria, the slim, dark eyed girl, she wept with delight over the gold pieces which Mrs. Howard had given her in exchange for the garments and declared that they would buy her wedding clothes.

Once on board the Celeste, Mrs. Howard placed Hal in the care of the doctor and was relieved that he would suffer no more than a severe cold as a consequence of his heroic deed.

As for Mr. Ben Pearson, he had quite disappeared from the view of the Howard party, and it was several days afterward that Mrs. Howard espied him gloomily patrolling the deck alone.

Daisy was below in the library, reading to Hal Denison.

Presently Ben Pearson approached Mrs. Howard with unusual diffidence in his manner.

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Howard," he said quite humbly, "but I would like to make an explanation."

"Yes?" asked Mrs. Howard coolly. "About the other day at the grotto?"

"Indeed?" "I suppose you were quite surprised that I did not jump in and rescue Miss Howard at once. You may have observed that I'm hard hit with Miss Daisy. I think there's no one like her, and I'd like to believe that she owed her life to me. But"—He reddened uncomfortably and looked over the side at the swiftly rushing water.

"But?" prompted Mrs. Howard kindly.

"But, you see, I can't swim a stroke!" he confessed.

"Oh-h-h!" It was Daisy's voice in horrified wonder. She had come up just in time to hear his confession.

"It is true," he said doggedly.

"Then the eight lives you saved that summer—"

"All bunkum!" he interrupted, turning on his heel and walking away.

Daisy's eyes filled with tears. "Mother," she said humbly, "he's not only a coward, but he is a liar as well! I tumbled into the pool to prove to you and Hal that my hero was a hero indeed. But what a poor hero! When I opened my eyes and saw poor Hal's face and felt his arms bearing me out of that icy water I realized that here was my hero, modest and unassuming, but ready when the supreme moment came."

"Where is your hero now, dear?" asked Mrs. Howard quietly.

"Down in the library, mother, waiting. I have promised to be his wife, and he is waiting for your blessing!"

CHINESE PORCELAINS.

Wine Cups Like "Tilted Lotus Leaves Floating Down a Stream."

To look long upon Chinese porcelain is likely for numerous causes to result in falling under their persuasive spell. If you are interested in the sculptural stage of art, susceptible to the beauty of line, you will find it there in dignified simplicity. In color the eye is appealed to in a seductive infinity. In range of decorative motives the Celestial potter's mind is fertile with an imagery found only in the east. And there must not be left out of account the interest and satisfaction awaiting the technical student of structure that is found in a substance so quickly responsive to the deft touch of the artisan.

"The fine white bowls surpass hoarfrost and snow" is a Chinese description of one of the ancient fabled fabrics. As the aroma of a delicate wine is enriched and refined by being served in a fragile glass, so the tea drinkers as far back as the days of the Tang, in the seventh and eighth centuries, appreciated their bowls, according as they "enhanced the tint of the infusion." And here comes in another element in the charm of Chinese porcelain. Like the European art of the middle ages and the renaissance, they were so intimately related to life that they contribute to a human and better understanding of a strange and distant people. No sooner is one interested in this truly national art of the Chinese than he finds a certain even if meager knowledge of them a matter of concomitant interest, even though not essential to an appreciation of their creations.

Wine cups of the Tang were likened by their poets to "tilted lotus leaves floating down a stream." There came into porcelain the hue of "royal dawn." Does one not find here a sympathetic communion with nature in far Cathay? Those so called "ginger jars" of the capriciously named "hawthorn pattern"—the most commonly known of all Chinese porcelains in the occident—were used for sending presents of fine tea at the Chinese New Year anniversary. Their decoration, which has nothing to do with the hawthorn, was made in representation of the blossoms of the winter blooming wild prunus tree lying on streams whose ice covering was disintegrating under the warming influences of the approaching vernal season.—Dana H. Carroll

Art a Trustworthy History.

Great nations write their autobiographies in three manuscripts—the book of their deeds, the book of their words and the book of their art. Not one of these books can be understood unless we read the two others, but of the three the only quite trustworthy one is the last. The acts of a nation may be triumphant by its good fortune, and its words might be the genius of a few of its children, but its art only by the general gifts and common sympathies of the race.—John Ruskin.

Civilians Victims of Raids.

In the attacks on the British Isles from sea and air during the war 2,160 persons have been killed or wounded. The number of deaths is 550.

The figures were given in the House of Commons recently by Herbert L. Samuel, the Home Secretary, as follows:

In the three attacks from sea 61 men, 40 women, and 40 children were killed, and 611 persons were injured.

In the 44 air raids 222 men, 114 women, and 73 children were killed, and 1,005 persons were injured.

The number of soldiers and sailors who were killed is only a comparatively small fraction of the total.

He who has conquered doubt and fear has conquered failure.—James Allen.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Where is your hero now, dear?" asked Mrs. Howard quietly.

"Down in the library, mother, waiting. I have promised to be his wife, and he is waiting for your blessing!"

Lesson V.—Third Quarter, For July 30, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Cor. i, 18, to ii, 5. Memory Verses, i, 22-24—Golden Text, Gal. vi, 14—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It is not many weeks since we had a Whitsuntide study in I Cor. ii, and now we are to have three studies in the letters to the Corinthians, with another a few weeks later. The epistles tell us of the church in this age and how we should live to glorify God, and therefore these studies ought to be most helpful. May the Spirit speak to our hearts. Sothenes, who is associated with Paul in this epistle, was one of the rulers of the synagogue who was privileged to suffer shame publicly for Christ's sake (i, 1; Acts xviii, 17). The church of God at Corinth meant the company of sinners who had become saints by believing the good news concerning Jesus Christ and receiving Him as their Saviour.

How great sinners they had been is seen in chapter vi, 9, 10; but, being purchased with precious blood, they were now in Christ Jesus, saints, washed, sanctified and justified, wholly by the grace of God, apart from any merit or works of theirs (i, 2-4; vi, 11; Acts xx, 28). They were saved by the cross of Christ, which is the power of God (i, 18). Christ Jesus was made unto them, as He is to all believers, wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption (i, 2, i, c, 30), for all that Christ is before God He makes His redeemed to be. As He is so are we in this world (I John iv, 17), which may mean that as He is before God so He makes His people to be even while we remain in these mortal bodies. There is another truth in this, and that is that as the world regards and treats Him we must expect the same, for we are here for Him, in His name, as His witnesses.

Although the standing before God in Christ of every saved sinner is so absolutely perfect, yet in these mortal bodies we are weakness itself, so that he had to reprove these believers as being carnal because of their envying and strife and factions, standing for this or that teacher instead of glorying in the Lord alone (i, 29, 31; iii, 1-7, 21-23; Isa. ii, 22). Because of their unworthy conduct some were weak and sickly and some were dying, forgetting that if we would judge ourselves we might escape much chastening of the Lord (chapter xi, 30-32). We must expect trials, but we shall never have more than He will give us grace to bear (chapter x, 13), and we should be careful not to bring unnecessary trials upon ourselves. The wisdom of this world and every arm of flesh we must persistently turn away from, and, though we may be foolish and weak and base and of no account in the eyes of the world, yet if fully yielded to Christ He will be glorified in us. Apart from Him we are nothing and can do nothing, but we can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth us (xv, 10; John v, 6; Phil. iv, 13).

Probably the greatest reason why our Christian experience does not measure up to our standing, why we are not as to our daily life what we ought to be, is because we fail to grasp by faith what we really are in Christ, and not seeing the fullness which is already ours in Him, we try to attain to it by our own efforts. If we only knew by believing what is written what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints and what is the exceeding greatness of His power toward us (Eph. i, 18, 19), we would live better lives because of what we really are in Christ before God. Next to the assurance of what we are now because of His finished work there is nothing so purifying, separating, uplifting, as the knowledge of what we shall be at His coming (I John iii, 1-3). Note what is written in this epistle concerning it in chapters i, 7; iv, 5; vi, 2; xi, 28; xv, 23-25; xvi, 22, and may the thought of fellowship with Him in His kingdom and glory make us more gladly willing to have fellowship with Him now in humiliation and suffering (I John i, 3; Phil. iii, 10). He is pleased to call us "laborers together with Him," and yet He does it all, working in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure (chapter iii, 9; Phil. ii, 13; Heb. xiii, 20, 21). We are bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ, that we may be temples of the Holy Spirit, who worketh in each one as He will when He can have the right of way in us (chapter vi, 19, 20; xii, 7-11).

The one only foundation is Jesus Christ, the sure foundation (chapter ii, 13; Isa. xxviii, 16; I Pet. ii, 6), all else being as sand, a refuge of lies (Matt. vii, 26, 27; Isa. xxviii, 17). But we may be safely on this foundation and yet so build, so live, that the building, the daily life, not being acceptable to God, shall not be approved in that day, but rejected and the believer suffer irreparable loss and find himself just barely saved—saved as by fire (chapter iii, 12-15). This was evidently what Paul had in mind when he spoke of denying self that his service might not be disapproved or rejected (chapter ix, 25-27, R. V.). We may not judge others till the evidence is all in, but we may and should judge ourselves always by the question: Will He approve? Is this of the Lord?

"THE WAR IS FINISHED."

So Say German Soldiers When Captured by French.

PARIS, July 10.—The new French front before Peronne appears to have been fortified now so as to facilitate flanking movements southward and a widening of the position already conquered. French infantry inaugurated this operation Saturday night by successful attacks in the region of Belloy-en-Santerre, where 850 Germans were made prisoners, and east of Estrees, where fifty men were left in French hands after an assault on a communicating trench.

The French had scarcely reached the first line of their adversaries when the Germans were seen climbing out of the trenches in clusters with their hands up and marching in double-quick time toward the French trenches.

"The war is finished. The war is finished," cried many of them with their faces expanding into smiles as they leaped into the French communicating trenches and fled back to the rear between lines of more French troops, waiting for the word to take their turn in the assault. The prisoners then cried for water and bread.

Camel Carriages.

Camel carriages are not common conveyances in most parts of India, but on the great trunk road leading to Delhi they are frequently to be seen. They are large, double story wagons, drawn sometimes by one, sometimes by two or even three camels, according to their size. Iron bars which give them a cage-like appearance were originally intended as a defense against robbers, and the carts were probably also used for the conveyance of prisoners.

The Chipmunk is a Hermit.

Evidently the chipmunk has no partner and will spend the winter in his subterranean retreat alone. I think this is an established chipmunk custom, rendered necessary, it may be, by the scant supply of air in such close quarters, three feet underground, and maybe under three or more feet of snow in addition. At any rate, the chipmunk, male and female, is a hermit, and there is no co-operation or true sociability among them. They are wonderfully provident and industrious, beginning to store up their winter food in midsummer or as early as the farmer does his.—John Burroughs

Overheard Under the Sea.

"Hypocrite!" cried the swordfish to the clam. "Why hypocrite?" retorted the clam. "You consider yourself the emblem of pacifism, and yet all the time you and your tribe are engaged in the making of shells!" sneered the swordfish.

Consoling.

"What did you say your age was?" he remarked, between dances. "Well, I didn't say," smartly returned the girl, "but I've just reached twenty-one."

"Is that so?" he returned consolingly. "What detained you?"

His Merits.

"We object to the young man who is courting our daughter because he is a shoemaker." "Why, a shoemaker is the best sort of a man, because he is usually whole-soled and well heeled."

War Nicknames.

War nicknames are a curious study. Probably there never was a war which did not give rise to some comic or offensive designation for the enemy. "Picts" (painted people), and "Lombards" (long-beards) remain as isolated monuments of the Roman soldier's play of fancy. The French in the early centuries called us "talls," for some rather mysterious reason. On more obvious grounds we have been known since the days of Joan of Arc as "god-lams," the one epithet to which our gallant allies have remained faithful throughout the centuries. We on our side have chiefly exercised our wit on the supposed passion of all Frenchmen for frogs. The nature of a war, indeed, can generally be traced in war nicknames. There is nothing opprobrious in "Ruski," and something positive, caressing in "fuzzy-wuzzy," the English nickname for the brave but misguided Soudanese. "Guppy" suggests good-natured contempt. The Boer "rooineid" and "Broodrick" are familiar, but not insulting.—Tit-Bits.

How would you set down in figures the number eleven thousand eleven hundred and eleven? About half of a class in which the teacher put the question wrote the answer 11111; the other half wrote it 111111.—Youth's Companion.

NEWS FROM CAPT. HOOPER

Improving in Health but Still a Prisoner of War.

Mrs. Hooper had a letter last week from her husband, Capt. W. H. Hooper, who is still a prisoner of war in Germany, and by her permission we are permitted to give the readers of THE HERALD the following excerpts:—

June 7th, 1916.
I got parcels containing cereals, just what I've wanted. All arrived o.k. Remember me to Mort. Brown. I'm glad Horace and McLaren are still o.k. Send them good luck for me.

Oh say, a Lieut. O'Grady, from Edmonton, who up to three months ago was in hospital with Clyde Scott, tells me there is no doubt in the world but Clyde will be sent to Switzerland. I'm so glad, for O'Grady says that with special attention and in time he will suffer only from a stiff knee. He says the brothers in the hospital all think the world of Clyde, and that they cannot do too much for him. O'Grady is here to appear before the Swiss Commission. I tell him he is a lucky beggar. Three months ago I'm sure I could have passed easily, but now I am so well finished that it's out of the question. Only the muscles of my left leg still cause me anxiety. I am indeed lucky, for had one of the wounds gone an inch deeper into the stomach it would have been fatal.

I had a good walk on Saturday, along up the Rhine this time, and not too long with a good chance to sit down and rest. I'm in a new room now. Artillery Leech and I from the old room and six others are here; it is crowded, but the view from the windows makes up for any discomforts. It looks right up the Rhine and up the junction of it and the Main, also on the station at Mainz. I'm afraid I'll do little French this week, most of my time will be spent looking out of the window. I got copy of McClure's and Cosmopolitan; also canned goods.

P.S.—7 p.m., just changed from room 36 to 30, view is not so good, but we have more room.

Brothers Meet on Train

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Robertson returned on Friday last from a month's enjoyable trip through the Canadian west. A visit was made to Winnipeg; then at Penoka, Banff, and Edmonton. W. S. is dated on the beauties of Banff. He crossed the divide through the Crow's Nest Pass, and was going to Fernie, B.C., to see his brother Jim, but was prevented owing to a landslide and washout on the line. On his return east the brothers met on the train and neither knew of the other's presence on the train until the meeting. It was a sad mission east for Jim, who with his children were accompanying home the body of his wife to Renfrew for interment. Mrs. Robertson had been ill for some time. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Robertson returned via the lake route from Port Arthur.—Perth Examiner.

THE TWELFTH AT ALMONTE

Wednesday was a typical Twelfth, as for weather, exceeding that the local thunderstorm did not make its appearance. The thermometer must have registered about 100 in the shade, but that did not prevent hundreds of people from the neighboring towns and countryside from turning out to celebrate the Orange fete day. The alarm drum was heard early in the morning and the members of Almonte Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 378, met in solemn and secret convocations at seven o'clock, as is the custom of all lodges to do on July 13th.

The factories of the town were all closed for the day and the streets, with the numerous streamers, and gathering crowd from town and country soon took on a holiday appearance.

Special trains from the south, and the regular trains from both north and south brought in additional contingents, others coming in by teams and autos. As the visiting lodges arrived, they were marshalled and escorted to the agricultural grounds. Dinner was served by the Almonte Orange ladies in the agricultural hall.

The procession was formed in the grounds, and promptly at 2 o'clock moved out, with County Marshal S. J. Lowe, as director of ceremonies.

The following lodges were in the procession, the ladies riding in automobiles, which had been commandeered for the occasion. They were headed by St. Andrew's Pipe Band of Ottawa; Ladies' Lodges from Carleton Place, Almonte and Billings Bridge; Orange Young Britons, Carleton Place; Orange Lodges from Hazeldean, Franktown, Drummond Centre, Carleton Place, Smiths Falls, Innisville, Almonte, Hopetown and Lanark. The line of route followed was along the principal streets, starting out on Church street, and returning by Water street.

Returning to the grounds, addresses were delivered by members of the order and others, County Master Ebbs of Drummond presiding.

Mayor Pittard, in extending a welcome to the visiting lodges and other visitors present, said that there were legitimate reasons why the attendance was not as large as might have been expected. He pointed out that the weather conditions have been such that the farmers had been delayed with their work and now that good weather had set in, they were busy saving their hay, and could not well spare the time away from the farm. The excessive heat had also something to do with keeping many away, and then so many of the young men of the surrounding districts had answered the call of their King and Country that the ranks of the Orangemen had been depleted. Of the 350,000 Canadians now wearing the King's uniform, over 20,000 were members of the Orange order.

Rev. J. C. McLeod, Worshipful Master of Lanark, was the principal speaker. In rising he said that he considered it an honor to be asked to speak in the interests of the Order. Some might think that a celebration of this kind at such a time was out of place, but the Orange Order had nothing to do with sectarianism. It exists for the purpose of propagating and maintaining the principles of Liberty, Righteousness, Order and Equality. It seeks to give a square deal to all, regardless of class distinction. He referred to the effect that the call to arms has had upon Canadian life. "We are," said he, "forgetting the small and petty things in the light of the bigger things for which our men are serving and dying on the battlefields of Europe. The awful loss in life, which we have sustained, has given us a new outlook and a new character, as citizens of a great Empire, and has struck the death blow to ancient sectarianism. The character of men and institutions that is being developed and will serve in the coming day, is such that shall see things in their right relationship and in their true perspective, and sinking the unimportant, will emphasize the things that are of real worth." In dealing with the bilingual question, he pointed out that it had been said that Ontario did not understand Quebec, but he would say that Quebec did not understand Ontario. We of Ontario were not opposed to children speaking the French language. If it were possible he would be glad if every child in Canada could speak that language. But we are opposed to any power that would seek to impose its views upon us, and would seek to destroy the autonomy of the provinces in dealing with the question of education. "I am not afraid of Papal control," said the speaker, "but I am afraid of the carelessness of the Protestant homes regarding things that make for good citizenship." He pointed to the need of efficient schools, purity in political life, a passion for a unity, extending from ocean to ocean, a devotion to Country and a passion for integrity. There should be no "scrap of paper" in our national life. In closing he said he had spoken thus candidly to his audience, that we may go out into the new day that is dawning to play the part of noble men.

Rev. J. S. Lowry, district chaplain, moved, and Col. Balderson seconded, the following resolution, each making a suitable and timely address:

"Resolved—That we declare anew our loyal attachment to the person and throne of His Gracious Majesty, King George V, Sovereign of Great Britain, Ireland and the Overseas Dominions and our unalterable devotion to the Protestant religion and the liberties of England and our earnest prayer is that our present King and Queen may long be spared to live and reign over a happy, contented and prosperous people."

Short addresses were also given by the following gentlemen: Dr. Howard, D.M., Carleton Place; W. J. McDowell, W.M., Almonte; Dr. McGregor, P.C.M., Carleton Place; and Rev. Messrs. Stevens, Saddington and Brown, Almonte. The platform meeting was brought to a close by a vote of thanks tendered the chairman and the singing of the National Anthem.

In the evening a goodly number attended the picture show put on in front of the grand stand, the music for which was supplied by the Pipe Band of Ottawa.

Dr. Elizabeth C. Seord, the first duly qualified and registered practicing woman physician in New Brunswick, if not in all Canada, passed away at her home, Farmerston, Carleton county, N.B., recently, at the age of seventy-two years.

A cheque for $10,000 was sent to Capt. Paul Koenig, captain of the German submarine Deutschland, by August Heckscher, a New York capitalist, in recognition of the submarine's feat. The sum will be distributed among the officers and men.
