

Catarrh, Bronchitis

Are sure to follow in the wake of a neglected cold—but the folly of it, why will any one be so foolish? When you do get a cough or cold, don't wait, hoping that tomorrow or next week, or in a little while, it will leave you, or that you are so strong and hearty that nothing can harm you. Be wise while you are strong. Get one bottle of Tolu, Tar and Tamarack, the magic cough cure, then you need not

Price 25 Cents.
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
77u

ferred to R. K. Cowan, local master in chancery, to inquire as to whether or not defendants had trespassed upon the property of the plaintiff; if so, to what extent, and fix the award. The question of costs reserved. The court to order payment by the defendant to plaintiff of the amount of compensation and damages, if any, found by the master, and payment of costs by either party. James Magee and U. A. Buchner for plaintiff.

Annie A. McLurg vs. Wm. Marshall, and others. This was an action to set aside the will of Griffith Phillips, late of the city of London, and formerly of East Williams, who died on May 28, 1897. The will was dated Oct. 14, 1895. The plaintiffs are all the children of the testator, and defendants are four grandchildren of the testator, the widow, sister and brother, all of whom are beneficiaries named in the will. The plaintiffs claim that since the spring of 1894 the testator had been of unsound mind, having many delusions, and constantly talked incoherently. While in this condition he made other while in this condition he made other wills, which he afterwards burned. The last one, which it is now sought to set aside, devised his farm to four infant grandchildren, subject to certain legacies in favor of his daughter, his wife and brother and sister.

ALONE IN THE WORLD.

Death of an Aged Citizen Under Pathetic Circumstances.

Mr. W. D. Harper, an aged citizen, died yesterday morning, in his 87th year, at the residence of Mr. Archibald McAlpine, 85 Byron avenue, South London, where he had been staying for the last eighteen months. The circumstances attending the sad event are pathetic. Two relatives of deceased are said to be living in Michigan—one in Detroit and the other near that city, fairly well-to-do—the remains may be laid at rest in the pot-

The old gentleman was not a relative of Mr. or Mrs. McAlpine, but some time prior to his going to stay with them they had observed him at church, and noticing that he was apparently friendless, took an interest in him out of compassion for his loneliness. Finally he requested that they take him to board, and they consented. He had owned a farm near Toronto, he said, which he sold and gave the proceeds to his two relatives, with the understanding that they should pay for his keep. He said also that he owned a plot in a burying ground near where his farm was situated, and that he would like to be buried there. One of the relatives wrote, Mr. McAlpine says, promising to send money, but did not do so. When Mr. Harper's death occurred Mr. McAlpine telegraphed the relative in Detroit and received a dispatch in reply, saying, "Can't come; bury him." However, interment will not take place for a couple of days, in the hope that some relative will be here.

New York, Nov. 18.—The building occupied by Woolsey's paint works in Jersey City collapsed today, causing a loss of $20,000. There were many narrow escapes on the part of employees, but all of the 100 in the building at the time succeeded in getting out uninjured.

Steamship Arrivals.

Nov. 15.	At	From
Aller.....	Bremen.....	New York
Cephalonia.....	Boston.....	Liverpool

Syctelia.....	Queenstown.....	Boston.....
Wastewater.....	Bremen.....	Haidia.....
Grocion.....	London.....	Montreal.....
Avlona.....	Shields.....	Montreal.....
Cynthiana.....	Manchester.....	Montreal.....
Buenos Ayres.....	Liverpool.....	Montreal.....
Rosarian.....	Montreal.....	London.....
Ambria.....	Montreal.....	Autweg.....
Multimore.....	Montreal.....	Lacorne.....

Genoa.....	Montreal.....	Newcastle
Lake Superior.....	Father Point.....	Liverpool
Nov. 13.....	At.....	from
Normannia.....	New York.....	Hamburg
Europe.....	New York.....	London
Nomadic.....	New York.....	Liverpool
Kaiser Wilhelm
der Grosse.....	New York.....	Bremen

Peruvian.....Glasgow.....Montreal
H. H. Meier.....Bremen.....New York

A DINNER PILL.—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment, it becomes a poison to the system. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convey the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medi-

Cheap Sugar. See India Tea Company's ad., 6th page, tomorrow. ywt

FAGGED OUT.—None but those who have become fagged out know what a depressed, miserable feeling it is. All strength has gone, and despondency has taken hold of the sufferers. They feel as though there was nothing to live for. There, however, is a cure—one box of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills.

will do wonders in restoring health and strength. Mandrake and Dandelion are two of the articles entering into the composition of Parmelee's Pills.

Hood's Pills

Commercial.

Local Market.
Reported by A. M. Hamilton & Son.
London, Tuesday, Nov. 16.
Wheat, white fall, per bu. 82c to 84c
Wheat, red fall, per bu. 82c to 83c
Wheat, spring, per bu. 83c to 84c
Oats, per bu. 21½c to 22½c
Corn, per bu. 22½c to 24c
Barley, per bu. 22c to 23c
Rye, per bu. 23½c to 25c
Buckwheat, per bu. 28c to 29c

There were very light receipts of grain today. The wheat ruling price of oats, but some odd lots were taken at 72c by private parties. Wheat was quiet and unchanged. Peas sold at 7c to 7½c. Butter was steady, and eggs in good demand. The meat market was quiet, at about the same figures. Hay was active; supply light, demand good. General quotations:

GRAIN.	Nov. 16.	Nov. 15.
Wheat, white, fall, per 100 lbs.	138 to 140	138 to 140
Wheat, red, fall, per 100 lbs.	138 to 140	138 to 140
Wheat, spring, per 100 lbs.	138 to 140	138 to 140
Oats, per 100 lbs.	75 to 77	75 to 77
Corn, per 100 lbs.	65 to 67	65 to 67
Barley, per 100 lbs.	60 to 62	60 to 62
Rye, per 100 lbs.	60 to 62	60 to 62
Buckwheat, per 100 lbs.	60 to 62	60 to 62

MEATS.	Nov. 16.	Nov. 15.
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12

MEATS.	Nov. 16.	Nov. 15.
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12
Beef, extra, per lb.	10 to 12	10 to 12

New Buckwheat Flour.
White Oat Flakes, Old Oat Cornmeal, Entire Wheat Flour and Seven's Breakfast Food.
A. M. HAMILTON & SON,
375 Talbot St., Opposite Market. Phone 602.

The Oil Market.
Petroleum, Nov. 16.—Oil opened and closed at 11½.
NEW YORK.
New York, Nov. 15.—Petroleum: Pennsylvania crude, no market; nominally 8c.

English Markets.
RULING PRICES FOR THE PAST FOUR
The following table shows the quotations per cental at Liverpool for the three previous market days. In the case of wheat highest prices are given:

	Nov. 16.	Nov. 15.	Nov. 14.	Nov. 13.
WHEAT—
No. 1, extra, spring	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4
No. 1, California	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4
Dec.	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4
March	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4
May	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4	7 1/4
CORN—
Spot	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2
Nov.	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2
Dec.	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2
March	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2
May	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2	3 1/2
POSS—
Spot	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2
Nov.	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2
Dec.	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2
March	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2
May	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2	1 1/2

Liverpool, Nov. 16—12:30 p.m.
Wheat—Spot quiet, No. 1, Cal., no stock.

Which would you rather trust? An old, true friend of twenty years, or a stranger? You may have little health left. Will you risk it with a stranger? If you have a cough, are losing flesh, if weak and pale, if consumption stares you in the face, lean on Scott's Emulsion. It has been a friend to thousands for more than twenty years. They trust it and you can trust it.

Let us send you a book telling you all about it. Free for the asking.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Belleville, Ont.

300,000 Victims.

Horrors of the War in the Island of Cuba.

Thousands on Thousands of Women and Children Starved to Death.

New York, Nov. 16.—A special to the World from Havana says: "It appears now that nearly 75 per cent of the 400,000 helpless women, children and non-combatants in Cuba, affected by General Blanco's policy, are dead. Despite the orders issued by General Blanco, to feed the starving, the daily mortality of the remaining 'reconcentrated' is frightful. The rabid Spaniards, who believe that only by extermination of the race can the Cuban war be won, openly challenge the good faith of General Blanco's statements as to his intention to feed and find work for those whom Gen. Weyler has not killed. They publicly claim that the new captain-general is enforcing the barbarous 'concentration' of the country people exactly as his predecessor did. The local press no longer prints the news from the small towns. In one of the last articles upon the hunger situation it was called 'one of the most awful spectacles ever presented to humanity.'"

LYNCH "LAW."

Proof That an Innocent Man Was Hanged in Dakota.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 15.—An innocent man was hanged by lynchers at Williamsport was the startling statement made yesterday by Chief Justice Corliss, of the state supreme court. Corliss, after examining the evidence to the statement, continued the judge. The supreme court ordered a new trial in the case of the man who was hanged. The man was convicted on the uncorroborated evidence of Holytrack and Ireland, both of whom confessed to taking part in the murder of the Spicer family, and whose statements were refuted by the strongest testimony given by Dr. Ross, the resident agency physician at Standing Rock. Dr. Ross' veracity is unquestioned, and his testimony is supported by notes from his memorandum book. Another fact is that the man who was hanged made two other previous confessions. In neither of which did he implicate Holytrack and Ireland. The man was hanged on the 13th inst. at the gallows, as there was no question of his guilt, but the mob made no distinction, and hanged the innocent with the guilty. The lynching of Coudert is a foul crime, and a blot on the fair name of the state, and his murderers should not go unpunished.

MIDDLESEX.

County Constable B. W. Fisher, of Mount Brydges, on Monday arrested Joseph Cass, charged with breaking into the school house of section No. 5, township of Carleton Place, and stealing a number of books, registers, etc. Cass was taken before Justice J. Lawrence, who committed him for trial. The accused pleaded guilty and was sent to the county jail. A second charge was placed against him for entering the home of Joseph Kidd, lot 9, con. 1, Carleton Place, and stealing two horse blankets and some traps. Cass is about 50 years of age, and has been a criminal several times. He has been in the House of Refuge at Strathroy.

ILBERTON.

Ilberton, Nov. 15.—The Presbyterians of the village celebrated the second anniversary of the church on Sabbath, Nov. 7. The Rev. Mr. Moffatt, of Chesham, London, preached at 2:30 p.m., and Rev. E. H. Savers, of Westminster, at 7:30 p.m. Both preached appropriate and eloquent sermons, and the church was crowded to the doors, many could not get standing room. The choir sang some very choice anthems, under the leadership of Mr. R. Calver, and Miss Maggie Telfer as organist. On the Monday evening following a tea-dinner was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, where the ladies were laden with good things. The ladies of the congregation took a great deal of trouble and pains in getting up the supper. After the dinner was satisfied they adjourned to the church, where the concert was given. The Rev. S. Lawrence, pastor of the church, occupied the chair, and Miss Flora Sheldon, of London Conservatory of Music, gave some very choice selections which were very popular to the evening's entertainment. Music was interspersed by the following: Miss Aggie Telfer, of London; Miss Kate McLean, of London; Miss Walden and H. McTavish, of London. Messrs. F. Walden and R. Calver sang a beautiful duet, which was well received and won hearty applause. Altogether it was an evening to be remembered. The proceeds amounted to $175. The congregation have just finished building a very good shed, which will add much to the comfort of the church-goers. The Methodists are holding evangelistic meetings in this place. We would advise some of the young men to try and save the souls of the lost citizens. We welcome them to the meetings, but they must understand that there is a law to protect the place of worship. Their timely warning. They are invited to come in, but not to stand in the entry or just outside the doors. Mr. A. C. Attwood, of Vanneck, shipped 250 barrels of apples to the English market on Saturday from this station. Mr. Fred Charlton has been forced to give up work as blacksmith on account of trouble with his eyes, but he hopes to see Fred at work again.

CHICAGO.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Native beef, largely at $4.30 to $4.50, the commonest lots of fed westerns and fed Texans selling around $3.40 to $3.50, best lots of shipping native beefs, $5 to $5.20. Hogs—Sales largely at $3.25 to $3.50; heavy packing lots, $3.20 to $3.40; choice to prime shipping grades, $3.40 to $3.55. Pigs, largely at $3.25 to $3.50. Sheep—Native, $3.20 to $3.45; western range, $3.20 to $3.45; extra natives, $3.45 to $3.60. Lambs, $4 to $6.20 for common to extra grades, with numerous sales at $8 and over. Receipts—Cattle, 26,000; hogs, 42,000; sheep, 15,000.

MONTREAL.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—There were about 500 head of sheep and lambs offered for sale at the east end abattoir today. The butchers were out in large numbers, and an active business was done at slightly higher prices all around. Prime beefs sold up to 4½c per lb. Good cattle sold at 4c per lb. pretty good stock sold at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. Common dry cows and rough young stock at from 2½c to 3¾c per lb. and the leaner heads and hard-working bulls at from 1½c to 2c per lb. Calves are pretty high priced, considering the quality. Shipments are paying from 3c to 3½c per lb. for good large sheep. Lambs sell at from 4c to nearly 4½c per lb. Hogs sell at from 4½c to 4¾c per lb. Dairy Markets. LONDON.

The cheese market on Saturday afternoon was fairly well attended, and although prices were lower, bidding was more active than on the previous Saturday. The total number of boxes offered was 7,293, of which 3,219 were sold. The following factors were represented: Payne's Mills, 150; West Williams, 205; Blanchard and Nissouri, 825; Cedar Vale, 310; North Middlesex, 120; Union, 240; Malahide, 1,250; Delaware, 312; Northwood, 465; Elgin, 230; Muncey Road, 155; Belmont, 300; Pond Mills, 560; Emboynay, 374; White Oak, 260; Galloway's, 232; Kintore, 855. The following sales were effected: West Williams, Cedar Vale, North Middlesex, Union, and Malahide, at 8c; Payne's Mills, at 7½c, and Blanchard and Nissouri, at 8½c.

OUTSIDE MARKETS.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Butter—Market steady; creamery, 15c to 22½c; dairy, 12c to 20c. Cheese quiet, at 8c to 8½c. Utica, N. Y., Nov. 15.—At the Utica board of trade today the following sales of cheese were made: 250 boxes large at 7½c; 702 boxes large at 7½c; 50 boxes large at 7½c; 425 boxes small at 8c; 160 boxes small at 8½c; 40 boxes small at 8½c; 6,500 boxes condensed. Butter—Sale: 50 packages creamery butter at 20c to 21c. Cheese very dull. Montreal, Nov. 15.—Cheese, 7½c to 9c. Butter—Townships, 15c to 18c; western, 13c to 15c.

SICK SOLDIERS.

Havana, Nov. 15.—The Spanish Government has started for Spain today with sick and invalid soldiers.

under the skillful treatment of Dr. O. LaGrange, of London. Farmers are pretty well through with their fall plowing in this vicinity. Mr. Scott, cattle buyer, of Brampton, visited our village last week. Mr. John Harker attended the funeral on Saturday in Exeter of Edward Jones, who died after a short illness. T. Oliver, of this village, is away at present as organizer of lodges of the A. O. U. W. We wish him success, for he is the right man for such work. Miss Minnie McDonald, one of our popular dressmakers, is off duty at present, being laid aside by sickness. We wish her a speedy recovery.

CREDIT.

Crediton, Nov. 15.—The wet, cold weather seems to have a bad effect on our sports. Our three "hunters" arrived home on Thursday from Muskoka, each bringing some game with him. Mr. Henry Elbert, jun., entertained a few friends with "roast turkey" on Sunday.

Charles A. Hoffman, of Plattsville, is in town visiting friends. Mrs. George Brown, of the seventh concession, is on the sick list. We hope of her recovery. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kuntz, of Exeter, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Elbert.

Michael Beaver, jun., got his hand hurt by a cold chisel which he was using, and is consequently off the working men's parade.

Mr. Rivers, of this place, occupied the pulpit of the M. E. Church on Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Yelland resuming it in the evening.

Mr. P. Fandol, of Exeter, was in town on Sunday. Miss Carrie Faust was the guest of Miss Lavina Brown on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Schmitt, of the G. E. Church, is on the sick list, and Rev. Mr. Stablo occupied the pulpit on Sunday, both morning and evening.

The R. T. of T. announce Nov. 19 as rally night, and it ought to be a grand success, to judge of the efforts the ladies are putting forth.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lampert spent Sunday out of town. Mr. A. Clark spent Sunday out of town.

LUCA.

Lucan, Nov. 16.—Four cars of stock were shipped from the G. T. R. station last night.

The proceeds of Canon Dann's lecture on Thursday night last amounted to about $25, which will be applied to the general fund of Holy Trinity Church.

Mr. Halliday, of Quebec, shipped from Lucan station this fall over 5,000 barrels of apples.

Miss J. K. Porter gave a progressive piano party on Friday evening to several of her acquaintances in Lucan, which was quite a success. Dancing followed until early morning.

Rev. Canon Dann delivered his inimitable lecture, "Ireland and Irishmen," to a Lucan audience on Thursday evening, the 13th inst., and kept his hearers in the utmost good humor for one hour and a half. The reverend gentleman was devoted to the subject during the entertainment in songs and recitations by Miss Maude Ferguson, Miss Pauline Stanley, Miss Emma McDougall and Mr. F. W. Forte.

Dr. Chase Cures Catarrh After Operations.

Toronto, March 16, 1897. My boy, aged 14, has been a sufferer from Catarrh, and lately we submitted him to an operation at the general hospital. Since then we have resorted to Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, and one of his medicines has made a prompt and complete cure.

H. G. FORD,
Foreman, Cowan Avenue Fire Hall.

LABOR MATTERS.

Proceedings of the Knights—Mill Operatives Shut Out.
Louisville, Ky., Nov. 15.—Yesterday morning's session of the general assembly of the Knights of Labor was devoted to a discussion of the report of the committee on immigration. It was the prevailing sentiment that some vigorous steps should be taken to restrict immigration, and statistics were presented showing that nearly 100,000 foreign laborers had come to this country during the last 25 years, all of which, it was claimed, worked a hardship on the American working-man.

The report that Past General Grand Master Workman Sovereign had stepped down and out because he desired to fix his fences for the presidency on a labor reform ticket in 1900 was vigorously denied on all sides. "Mr. Sovereign has no such idea," said one of his closest advisers, "and there is absolutely no truth in it. If the presidency was offered to him, I suppose he would accept it, as almost any other man would do, and the Knights of Labor would glory in him, but he has no designs on the presidential chair. His resignation was solely for the purpose of giving him more time and a broader and wider field in which to work for the uplifting and strengthening of the cause in which he is so vitally interested."

MANY PEOPLE OUT OF WORK.
Providence, R. I., Nov. 16.—All the departments of the British Hosiery Company, with the exception of the spinning department, were shut down yesterday, and 425 operatives are out of work. Some time ago the knitters to the number of 50, struck for an advance of 20 per cent in wages. Treasurer Cooper says he had found the operatives who remained at work were supporting those on strike, hence his action in shutting down the department.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases.
Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, etc., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for "Swayne's Ointment," Lyman, Scott & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents. Avoid substitutes.

Stoves, Stoves, Stoves.
Box stoves, big stoves, cook stoves, little stoves, parlor stoves—all in stock of stoves and furniture, bedroom suites, mattresses, pillows, feather beds and mattress cleaned. Stoves bought at HUNT & SONS, 593 to 597 Richmond street north. Telephone 597.

Shortness of breath—a sensation of dryness and heat in the throat. Neglect is dangerous. Dr. Hanson's Hives Syrup and Tolu acts like a charm on the throat and bronchial tubes. Use it before it is too late. Sold by druggists.

Yeoman's Weather Strips stop draught

WEATHER PROBS:

Decidedly colder.

LITTLE DROPS.

These little drops of water, because of their steadiness, are hard on business. But we are keeping time with them by giving little drops in prices, and these little drops are bringing business our way. Everybody is familiar with the excellence of our goods, and all we need to draw your attention to is how cheaply they can be bought.

Easy Corsets.

If you have had trouble with your corsets we can give you relief. We have added several first-class corsets to our already large assortment. Besides a complete stock of Canadian goods we have a large imported stock—American, English and French. This popular department is on the first floor, reached by elevator or stairs. Visit it when down town. We have Corsets from 39c to $10 a pair.

Curtains:

Chenille Curtains, 3 yards long, full heavy fringe, deep dado, in terra, cardinal, blue and olive, $2.50.

Chenille Curtains, full three yards, heavy fringe, green and gold, cardinal and gold, brown and gold, blue and gold, $4.

Special in Lace Curtains at 65c, full size, tape edge.

VEILINGS DOWN.

A Veiling Special, in silk gauze, plain black, black with white spot, white with black spot, brown and navy, 18 inches, worth 25c, for 20c.

Fancy Neck Rouches for evening wear, cream, edged with mauve and nile, also plain cream and black, 75c each.

Some very choice real Honiton Lace Handkerchiefs, at $1.50.

You can order anything from this big store by mail. Many customers do a great deal of their shopping this way, which is proof that they are satisfied.

SMALLMAN & INGRAM,

149 and 151 Dundas Street.

RUBBERS & OVERSHOES

...VERDICT...

All the leading dealers in the principal towns of the Dominion agree that

"THE CANADIAN RUBBER CO.'S

RUBBERS

ARE THE BEST IN THE MARKET."

All Dealers... keep them.

STANDARD NEVER LOWERED.

LABOR MATTERS.

OVERWORKED INTELLECT.

Stories about Lincoln, if they are genuine, are always interesting and generally amusing. Here is one which will be immediately recognized as characteristic:

Mr. Lincoln was once trying a case on a steamboat race, some years before he had acquired more than a local reputation. His opponent was a pretentious man whose argument was voluminous and rhetorical, but devoid of coherence or logic. When his pyrotechnic eloquence had spent itself, Mr. Lincoln replied somewhat as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Jury,—I have enjoyed, as everyone in this court-room must have enjoyed, the extremely fluent and eloquent words to which we have listened. But while the rhetoric of my learned opponent is unimpeachable, I confess myself unable to detect anything in his argument which has any bearing upon the case in hand, or indeed upon anything at all."

"I have been driven to the conclusion that the intellect of my learned friend has no control over his organs of speech, and that while he talks his mind escapes entirely to act."

"He reminds me forcibly of a little steamboat I used occasionally to see upon the Sangamon River, which had a five-foot boiler and a seven-foot whistle. Whenever the boat whistled, the engine was obliged to stop working."

The aptness and homely humor of the illustration set the house in a roar, and the case was won without further effort.

GRAVEL

CURED BY

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

After twenty years of most excruciating pain caused by gravel I am pleased to make it known that I have been completely cured of this long-standing trouble by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

During these years I have spent hundreds of dollars without any permanent relief. Had I heard of your wonderful remedy years ago it would have saved me months of agony and hundreds of dollars.

JOHN NICHOLAS BABCOCK,
Sharbot Lake, Ont.

Dodd's Kidney Pills

Always Cure Gravel.

These little drops of water, because of their steadiness, are hard on business. But we are keeping time with them by giving little drops in prices, and these little drops are bringing business our way. Everybody is familiar with the excellence of our goods, and all we need to draw your attention to is how cheaply they can be bought.

Easy Corsets.

If you have had trouble with your corsets we can give you relief. We have added several first-class corsets to our already large assortment. Besides a complete stock of Canadian goods we have a large imported stock—American, English and French. This popular department is on the first floor, reached by elevator or stairs. Visit it when down town. We have Corsets from 39c to $10 a pair.

Curtains:

Chenille Curtains, 3 yards long, full heavy fringe, deep dado, in terra, cardinal, blue and olive, $2.50.

Chenille Curtains, full three yards, heavy fringe, green and gold, cardinal and gold, brown and gold, blue and gold, $4.

Special in Lace Curtains at 65c, full size, tape edge.

VEILINGS DOWN.

A Veiling Special, in silk gauze, plain black, black with white spot, white with black spot, brown and navy, 18 inches, worth 25c, for 20c.

Fancy Neck Rouches for evening wear, cream, edged with mauve and nile, also plain cream and black, 75c each.

Some very choice real Honiton Lace Handkerchiefs, at $1.50.

You can order anything from this big store by mail. Many customers do a great deal of their shopping this way, which is proof that they are satisfied.

SMALLMAN & INGRAM,

149 and 151 Dundas Street.

RUBBERS & OVERSHOES

...VERDICT...

All the leading dealers in the principal towns of the Dominion agree that

"THE CANADIAN RUBBER CO.'S

RUBBERS

ARE THE BEST IN THE MARKET."

Free! 350 Pictures
Free! To Be Given A way
Free! Absolutely Free.

We bought them so cheap at the recent Custom House sale that we can afford to give them away. Call early. Select your picture and have it framed by us at a very small cost.

E. N. HUNT
190 DUNDAS STREET.

HONORE'S FATE.

"It must have been Hervey who joined Lawrence on the road, suggested Phoebe. 'For I'm sure Lawrence would not overtake and join Hervey of his own accord.'"

"And pray, why not?" inquired Mrs. Payte, sharply. Would not Mr. Haughton like to be the means of benefiting a young man whose mind is peculiarly alive to good influences?"

Phoebe looked into the old lady's face astonished; but never for more than a minute at a time did she trouble herself to study Mrs. Payte's mood. The gentlemen came up to the gate just then, and stopped, with a look of pleasure as well as surprise; but after that first moment, Honore could see that Lawrence was in one of his moods of smothered ill-humor.

"Walking home, are you?" said the old lady, her shrewd glance impeded by the brim of her ugly brown hat. "What enterprise! But I must stop you here. Look upon East Cottage as a half-way house—the traveler's rest—and when you leave, I will let you take your words with you, Mr. Haughton. Now, Honore, run and order the tea-table to be brought out."

There was no hesitating in Hervey's mind about accepting this invitation, and though Lawrence paused for a moment, he did not refuse.

"I like to have young people round me," observed Mrs. Payte, particularly addressing Hervey, as he threw himself languidly on the garden seat. "It gives me life and vigor. As one grows old and feeble, one likes to study enviously the strength and energy of youth."

"Does one, Mrs. Payte?" inquired Captain Hervey, politely, as his lazy eyes rested on the small wiry form before him. "I should have thought it would have bored one."

"Mr. Haughton, you must not bring your business face here, please; we do not want to make our wills, or draw up our marriage settlements—quite yet. We only want to fritter away an hour in nonsensical tea-drinking. Stupid, don't you think?"

"One wasted hour cannot signify very much," the lawyer answered indifferently.

"Perhaps not, only the difficulty to me is to determine which of our hours are wasted. Now, Mrs. Payte, I am a practical farmer, as well as a practical Christian; a man with a clear business head and a warm, unselfish heart; a man at once shrewd and frank; at once provident and generous; worldly in just those varied senses of the word in which it is safe for a good and upright pastor to be worldly, while this is the world in which his help is needed."

"I understand from my old clerk," he said, with his arm greeting all round, "that Mr. Keith was here."

"He only stopped for a few minutes as he rode past," explained Mrs. Payte, while more than one present noticed the frown gathering on Lawrence Haughton's brow. "What do you want with him, Mr. Rome? Wasn't he at church last Sunday?"

To be Continued.

The Eiffel tower weighs 7,000 tons.

Mr. Haughton, I patronize your end of the table, and Phoebe's tea. I look upon coffee as a lingering poison for a bilious constitution like mine. Your vaunted air has done me no good so far."

Honore glanced at the real invalid who never spoke of her ailments, and grew even more gentle in her attentions.

"Hervey," she said, "did not Mrs. Trent tell us last night that Lady Lawrence said Kinbury air would kill her?"

"I dare say," assented Hervey languidly. "I rarely recollect what she says."

"In that particular matter, Lady Lawrence's opinion entirely coincides with mine, then," said the old lady, smiling graciously in answer to Hervey's words, "though in other respects I fail to learn any good of her. You are more privileged, I presume; you are sure to hear the best points of her character."

"Then I should like to be told which are the worst," observed Mr. Haughton bluntly.

"I suppose, Mr. Haughton," mused the old lady, as she sipped her tea, "that it is you who have the greater choice of her favor; you are so clever, and so well understand the value of money."

"It would be rather a dangerous thing for you, Lawrence," said Honore, when he turned to her. "Don't you remember Little, the miser? He saved forty thousand pounds, and when at last the doctor told him he must spend a little and take wine, he died in the act of drawing the first cork. How much better it would have been if he'd gone on saving, and left the wine alone."

"You are a ridiculous child," snapped Mrs. Payte. "Mr. Haughton, will you kindly bring me another cup of tea from Phoebe?"

Phoebe had been gazing regretfully into his angry face, and perhaps the little old lady had noticed this. When tea was over, and Honore was again enlisting Hervey's aid for the invalid, Mrs. Payte had managed to keep Lawrence on the seat beside her. Phoebe hovered about for a time, but she was so very coolly and persistently kept at arm's length that she was obliged to fall back and join Honore and Mrs. Disbrow in the sitting-room.

"Captain Trent is exerting himself unusually," observed Mrs. Payte. "I suppose he will presently exert himself sufficiently to marry."

"I suppose so,"

"Theodore Trent will make him an excellent wife," she continued, pushing her hat back a little and smoothing her tiny gray curls, "and a stylish wife, which is all important. That being the case, and their marriage a settled thing, I don't like to see him dancing attendance—I mean, scattering attendance—on Honore Craven."

A flame of fiercest scarlet rushed into Lawrence Haughton's face.

"And I am afraid," resumed the old lady, placidly, "that the day of Hervey's marriage will be a heavy day for you. I have heard that Miss Trent is always resolved at the Larches with open arms."

"Pray, whose arms open to receive her?" inquired Lawrence, with undisguised scorn.

"Miss Haughton's; and they say Mr. Haughton's, too, though he would not confess it for a thousand pounds."

"Why should I lie for a thousand pounds?"

"Is it only what I have heard," explained the old lady, apparently anxious to impress this fact upon him; "you will excuse my mentioning it."

He bowed a sullen acceptance of her apology.

"There is no preventing idiotic things being said," he muttered. "I never believe a word I hear."

"Nor do I," returned the old lady, soothingly; "not a word, and I know that some day I shall have the pleasure of offering my congratulations on your marriage with Phoebe Owen—a nice, lively girl, with plenty of smiles and agreeable sayings. I suppose in the event of your inheriting old Myddelton's money, you would sell your practice, Mr. Haughton?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Payte had just answered by a smile full of sympathy, when the garden gate swung upon its hinges, and a cheery voice saluted the party.

"Glad to see, Mr. Rome," called Mrs. Payte, in her brisk, shrill tones, "for my young visitors were just leaving me."

The Rev. Walter Rome, rector of Station (the village to which Dedgrove and the Larches and East Cottage belonged), was a cordial, hearty, old gentleman, who equally enjoyed tending his spiritual flock and farming his little land; a practical farmer, as well as a practical Christian; a man with a clear business head and a warm, unselfish heart; a man at once shrewd and frank; at once provident and generous; worldly in just those varied senses of the word in which it is safe for a good and upright pastor to be worldly, while this is the world in which his help is needed.

"I understand from my old clerk," he said, with his arm greeting all round, "that Mr. Keith was here."

"He only stopped for a few minutes as he rode past," explained Mrs. Payte, while more than one present noticed the frown gathering on Lawrence Haughton's brow. "What do you want with him, Mr. Rome? Wasn't he at church last Sunday?"

To be Continued.

The Eiffel tower weighs 7,000 tons.

Mr. Haughton, I patronize your end of the table, and Phoebe's tea. I look upon coffee as a lingering poison for a bilious constitution like mine. Your vaunted air has done me no good so far."

Honore glanced at the real invalid who never spoke of her ailments, and grew even more gentle in her attentions.

"Hervey," she said, "did not Mrs. Trent tell us last night that Lady Lawrence said Kinbury air would kill her?"

"I dare say," assented Hervey languidly. "I rarely recollect what she says."

"In that particular matter, Lady Lawrence's opinion entirely coincides with mine, then," said the old lady, smiling graciously in answer to Hervey's words, "though in other respects I fail to learn any good of her. You are more privileged, I presume; you are sure to hear the best points of her character."

"Then I should like to be told which are the worst," observed Mr. Haughton bluntly.

"I suppose, Mr. Haughton," mused the old lady, as she sipped her tea, "that it is you who have the greater choice of her favor; you are so clever, and so well understand the value of money."

"It would be rather a dangerous thing for you, Lawrence," said Honore, when he turned to her. "Don't you remember Little, the miser? He saved forty thousand pounds, and when at last the doctor told him he must spend a little and take wine, he died in the act of drawing the first cork. How much better it would have been if he'd gone on saving, and left the wine alone."

"You are a ridiculous child," snapped Mrs. Payte. "Mr. Haughton, will you kindly bring me another cup of tea from Phoebe?"

Phoebe had been gazing regretfully into his angry face, and perhaps the little old lady had noticed this. When tea was over, and Honore was again enlisting Hervey's aid for the invalid, Mrs. Payte had managed to keep Lawrence on the seat beside her. Phoebe hovered about for a time, but she was so very coolly and persistently kept at arm's length that she was obliged to fall back and join Honore and Mrs. Disbrow in the sitting-room.

"Captain Trent is exerting himself unusually," observed Mrs. Payte. "I suppose he will presently exert himself sufficiently to marry."

"I suppose so,"

"Theodore Trent will make him an excellent wife," she continued, pushing her hat back a little and smoothing her tiny gray curls, "and a stylish wife, which is all important. That being the case, and their marriage a settled thing, I don't like to see him dancing attendance—I mean, scattering attendance—on Honore Craven."

A flame of fiercest scarlet rushed into Lawrence Haughton's face.

"And I am afraid," resumed the old lady, placidly, "that the day of Hervey's marriage will be a heavy day for you. I have heard that Miss Trent is always resolved at the Larches with open arms."

"Pray, whose arms open to receive her?" inquired Lawrence, with undisguised scorn.

"Miss Haughton's; and they say Mr. Haughton's, too, though he would not confess it for a thousand pounds."

"Why should I lie for a thousand pounds?"

"Is it only what I have heard," explained the old lady, apparently anxious to impress this fact upon him; "you will excuse my mentioning it."

He bowed a sullen acceptance of her apology.

"There is no preventing idiotic things being said," he muttered. "I never believe a word I hear."

"Nor do I," returned the old lady, soothingly; "not a word, and I know that some day I shall have the pleasure of offering my congratulations on your marriage with Phoebe Owen—a nice, lively girl, with plenty of smiles and agreeable sayings. I suppose in the event of your inheriting old Myddelton's money, you would sell your practice, Mr. Haughton?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Payte had just answered by a smile full of sympathy, when the garden gate swung upon its hinges, and a cheery voice saluted the party.

"Glad to see, Mr. Rome," called Mrs. Payte, in her brisk, shrill tones, "for my young visitors were just leaving me."

The Rev. Walter Rome, rector of Station (the village to which Dedgrove and the Larches and East Cottage belonged), was a cordial, hearty, old gentleman, who equally enjoyed tending his spiritual flock and farming his little land; a practical farmer, as well as a practical Christian; a man with a clear business head and a warm, unselfish heart; a man at once shrewd and frank; at once provident and generous; worldly in just those varied senses of the word in which it is safe for a good and upright pastor to be worldly, while this is the world in which his help is needed.

"I understand from my old clerk," he said, with his arm greeting all round, "that Mr. Keith was here."

"He only stopped for a few minutes as he rode past," explained Mrs. Payte, while more than one present noticed the frown gathering on Lawrence Haughton's brow. "What do you want with him, Mr. Rome? Wasn't he at church last Sunday?"

To be Continued.

The Eiffel tower weighs 7,000 tons.

Mr. Haughton, I patronize your end of the table, and Phoebe's tea. I look upon coffee as a lingering poison for a bilious constitution like mine. Your vaunted air has done me no good so far."

Honore glanced at the real invalid who never spoke of her ailments, and grew even more gentle in her attentions.

"Hervey," she said, "did not Mrs. Trent tell us last night that Lady Lawrence said Kinbury air would kill her?"

"I dare say," assented Hervey languidly. "I rarely recollect what she says."

"In that particular matter, Lady Lawrence's opinion entirely coincides with mine, then," said the old lady, smiling graciously in answer to Hervey's words, "though in other respects I fail to learn any good of her. You are more privileged, I presume; you are sure to hear the best points of her character."

"Then I should like to be told which are the worst," observed Mr. Haughton bluntly.

"I suppose, Mr. Haughton," mused the old lady, as she sipped her tea, "that it is you who have the greater choice of her favor; you are so clever, and so well understand the value of money."

"It would be rather a dangerous thing for you, Lawrence," said Honore, when he turned to her. "Don't you remember Little, the miser? He saved forty thousand pounds, and when at last the doctor told him he must spend a little and take wine, he died in the act of drawing the first cork. How much better it would have been if he'd gone on saving, and left the wine alone."

"You are a ridiculous child," snapped Mrs. Payte. "Mr. Haughton, will you kindly bring me another cup of tea from Phoebe?"

Phoebe had been gazing regretfully into his angry face, and perhaps the little old lady had noticed this. When tea was over, and Honore was again enlisting Hervey's aid for the invalid, Mrs. Payte had managed to keep Lawrence on the seat beside her. Phoebe hovered about for a time, but she was so very coolly and persistently kept at arm's length that she was obliged to fall back and join Honore and Mrs. Disbrow in the sitting-room.

"Captain Trent is exerting himself unusually," observed Mrs. Payte. "I suppose he will presently exert himself sufficiently to marry."

"I suppose so,"

"Theodore Trent will make him an excellent wife," she continued, pushing her hat back a little and smoothing her tiny gray curls, "and a stylish wife, which is all important. That being the case, and their marriage a settled thing, I don't like to see him dancing attendance—I mean, scattering attendance—on Honore Craven."

A flame of fiercest scarlet rushed into Lawrence Haughton's face.

"And I am afraid," resumed the old lady, placidly, "that the day of Hervey's marriage will be a heavy day for you. I have heard that Miss Trent is always resolved at the Larches with open arms."

"Pray, whose arms open to receive her?" inquired Lawrence, with undisguised scorn.

"Miss Haughton's; and they say Mr. Haughton's, too, though he would not confess it for a thousand pounds."

"Why should I lie for a thousand pounds?"

"Is it only what I have heard," explained the old lady, apparently anxious to impress this fact upon him; "you will excuse my mentioning it."

He bowed a sullen acceptance of her apology.

"There is no preventing idiotic things being said," he muttered. "I never believe a word I hear."

"Nor do I," returned the old lady, soothingly; "not a word, and I know that some day I shall have the pleasure of offering my congratulations on your marriage with Phoebe Owen—a nice, lively girl, with plenty of smiles and agreeable sayings. I suppose in the event of your inheriting old Myddelton's money, you would sell your practice, Mr. Haughton?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Payte had just answered by a smile full of sympathy, when the garden gate swung upon its hinges, and a cheery voice saluted the party.

"Glad to see, Mr. Rome," called Mrs. Payte, in her brisk, shrill tones, "for my young visitors were just leaving me."

The Rev. Walter Rome, rector of Station (the village to which Dedgrove and the Larches and East Cottage belonged), was a cordial, hearty, old gentleman, who equally enjoyed tending his spiritual flock and farming his little land; a practical farmer, as well as a practical Christian; a man with a clear business head and a warm, unselfish heart; a man at once shrewd and frank; at once provident and generous; worldly in just those varied senses of the word in which it is safe for a good and upright pastor to be worldly, while this is the world in which his help is needed.

"I understand from my old clerk," he said, with his arm greeting all round, "that Mr. Keith was here."

"He only stopped for a few minutes as he rode past," explained Mrs. Payte, while more than one present noticed the frown gathering on Lawrence Haughton's brow. "What do you want with him, Mr. Rome? Wasn't he at church last Sunday?"

To be Continued.

The Eiffel tower weighs 7,000 tons.

Mr. Haughton, I patronize your end of the table, and Phoebe's tea. I look upon coffee as a lingering poison for a bilious constitution like mine. Your vaunted air has done me no good so far."

Honore glanced at the real invalid who never spoke of her ailments, and grew even more gentle in her attentions.

"Hervey," she said, "did not Mrs. Trent tell us last night that Lady Lawrence said Kinbury air would kill her?"

"I dare say," assented Hervey languidly. "I rarely recollect what she says."

"In that particular matter, Lady Lawrence's opinion entirely coincides with mine, then," said the old lady, smiling graciously in answer to Hervey's words, "though in other respects I fail to learn any good of her. You are more privileged, I presume; you are sure to hear the best points of her character."

"Then I should like to be told which are the worst," observed Mr. Haughton bluntly.

"I suppose, Mr. Haughton," mused the old lady, as she sipped her tea, "that it is you who have the greater choice of her favor; you are so clever, and so well understand the value of money."

"It would be rather a dangerous thing for you, Lawrence," said Honore, when he turned to her. "Don't you remember Little, the miser? He saved forty thousand pounds, and when at last the doctor told him he must spend a little and take wine, he died in the act of drawing the first cork. How much better it would have been if he'd gone on saving, and left the wine alone."

"You are a ridiculous child," snapped Mrs. Payte. "Mr. Haughton, will you kindly bring me another cup of tea from Phoebe?"

Phoebe had been gazing regretfully into his angry face, and perhaps the little old lady had noticed this. When tea was over, and Honore was again enlisting Hervey's aid for the invalid, Mrs. Payte had managed to keep Lawrence on the seat beside her. Phoebe hovered about for a time, but she was so very coolly and persistently kept at arm's length that she was obliged to fall back and join Honore and Mrs. Disbrow in the sitting-room.

"Captain Trent is exerting himself unusually," observed Mrs. Payte. "I suppose he will presently exert himself sufficiently to marry."

"I suppose so,"

"Theodore Trent will make him an excellent wife," she continued, pushing her hat back a little and smoothing her tiny gray curls, "and a stylish wife, which is all important. That being the case, and their marriage a settled thing, I don't like to see him dancing attendance—I mean, scattering attendance—on Honore Craven."

A flame of fiercest scarlet rushed into Lawrence Haughton's face.

"And I am afraid," resumed the old lady, placidly, "that the day of Hervey's marriage will be a heavy day for you. I have heard that Miss Trent is always resolved at the Larches with open arms."

"Pray, whose arms open to receive her?" inquired Lawrence, with undisguised scorn.

"Miss Haughton's; and they say Mr. Haughton's, too, though he would not confess it for a thousand pounds."

"Why should I lie for a thousand pounds?"

"Is it only what I have heard," explained the old lady, apparently anxious to impress this fact upon him; "you will excuse my mentioning it."

He bowed a sullen acceptance of her apology.

"There is no preventing idiotic things being said," he muttered. "I never believe a word I hear."

"Nor do I," returned the old lady, soothingly; "not a word, and I know that some day I shall have the pleasure of offering my congratulations on your marriage with Phoebe Owen—a nice, lively girl, with plenty of smiles and agreeable sayings. I suppose in the event of your inheriting old Myddelton's money, you would sell your practice, Mr. Haughton?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Payte had just answered by a smile full of sympathy, when the garden gate swung upon its hinges, and a cheery voice saluted the party.

"Glad to see, Mr. Rome," called Mrs. Payte, in her brisk, shrill tones, "for my young visitors were just leaving me."

The Rev. Walter Rome, rector of Station (the village to which Dedgrove and the Larches and East Cottage belonged), was a cordial, hearty, old gentleman, who equally enjoyed tending his spiritual flock and farming his little land; a practical farmer, as well as a practical Christian; a man with a clear business head and a warm, unselfish heart; a man at once shrewd and frank; at once provident and generous; worldly in just those varied senses of the word in which it is safe for a good and upright pastor to be worldly, while this is the world in which his help is needed.

"I understand from my old clerk," he said, with his arm greeting all round, "that Mr. Keith was here."

"He only stopped for a few minutes as he rode past," explained Mrs. Payte, while more than one present noticed the frown gathering on Lawrence Haughton's brow. "What do you want with him, Mr. Rome? Wasn't he at church last Sunday?"

To be Continued.

The Eiffel tower weighs 7,000 tons.

Mr. Haughton, I patronize your end of the table, and Phoebe's tea. I look upon coffee as a lingering poison for a bilious constitution like mine. Your vaunted air has done me no good so far."

Honore glanced at the real invalid who never spoke of her ailments, and grew even more gentle in her attentions.

"Hervey," she said, "did not Mrs. Trent tell us last night that Lady Lawrence said Kinbury air would kill her?"

"I dare say," assented Hervey languidly. "I rarely recollect what she says."

"In that particular matter, Lady Lawrence's opinion entirely coincides with mine, then," said the old lady, smiling graciously in answer to Hervey's words, "though in other respects I fail to learn any good of her. You are more privileged, I presume; you are sure to hear the best points of her character."

"Then I should like to be told which are the worst," observed Mr. Haughton bluntly.

"I suppose, Mr. Haughton," mused the old lady, as she sipped her tea, "that it is you who have the greater choice of her favor; you are so clever, and so well understand the value of money."

"It would be rather a dangerous thing for you, Lawrence," said Honore, when he turned to her. "Don't you remember Little, the miser? He saved forty thousand pounds, and when at last the doctor told him he must spend a little and take wine, he died in the act of drawing the first cork. How much better it would have been if he'd gone on saving, and left the wine alone."

"You are a ridiculous child," snapped Mrs. Payte. "Mr. Haughton, will you kindly bring me another cup of tea from Phoebe?"

Phoebe had been gazing regretfully into his angry face, and perhaps the little old lady had noticed this. When tea was over, and Honore was again enlisting Hervey's aid for the invalid, Mrs. Payte had managed to keep Lawrence on the seat beside her. Phoebe hovered about for a time, but she was so very coolly and persistently kept at arm's length that she was obliged to fall back and join Honore and Mrs. Disbrow in the sitting-room.

"Captain Trent is exerting himself unusually," observed Mrs. Payte. "I suppose he will presently exert himself sufficiently to marry."

"I suppose so,"

"Theodore Trent will make him an excellent wife," she continued, pushing her hat back a little and smoothing her tiny gray curls, "and a stylish wife, which is all important. That being the case, and their marriage a settled thing, I don't like to see him dancing attendance—I mean, scattering attendance—on Honore Craven."

A flame of fiercest scarlet rushed into Lawrence Haughton's face.

"And I am afraid," resumed the old lady, placidly, "that the day of Hervey's marriage will be a heavy day for you. I have heard that Miss Trent is always resolved at the Larches with open arms."

"Pray, whose arms open to receive her?" inquired Lawrence, with undisguised scorn.

"Miss Haughton's; and they say Mr. Haughton's, too, though he would not confess it for a thousand pounds."

"Why should I lie for a thousand pounds?"

"Is it only what I have heard," explained the old lady, apparently anxious to impress this fact upon him; "you will excuse my mentioning it."

He bowed a sullen acceptance of her apology.

"There is no preventing idiotic things being said," he muttered. "I never believe a word I hear."

"Nor do I," returned the old lady, soothingly; "not a word, and I know that some day I shall have the pleasure of offering my congratulations on your marriage with Phoebe Owen—a nice, lively girl, with plenty of smiles and agreeable sayings. I suppose in the event of your inheriting old Myddelton's money, you would sell

