APPLES

We will receive No. 1, No. 2 and cull apples this year, and will pay the highest market price.

Every apple grown in this district will be needed to keep our factory running.

Every car sold to outside buyers means the factory will shut down two days sooner, less money distributed in Waterdown, and less employment for the workers.

Bird Noises

All Sounds Do Not Come From Their Throats.

Has it ever occurred to you that many of the sounds which birds make do not come from their throat at all, but are produced as mechanically as the noise made by a boy rattling a stick along palings.

One kind of woodpecker produces a sound exactly like the distant roll of a drum, which can be heard half a mile away on a still day.

The "beats" are made at the rate of at least sixteen per second, and how the bird can do it is one of the many mysteries of nature which has still to be solved.

The "beating" of a snipe is another puzzling performance. The snipe has a way of rising high in the air, then dipping sharply, with wings and tail outspread.

The wings quiver from force of air pressure driven through them, and the sound is believed to come from the rapid fluttering of the individual feathers. In any case the sound is produced not vocally but instrumentally.

You have perhaps heard a corn-crake "rasping." It is a most harsh and unpleasant noise, rather like that of a mowing machine. It is more than suspected that this sound, too, is produced otherwise than from the throat of the bird.

In Canada is a sort of nightjar called by the country folk a "bull-bat." Like all nightjars, it is a night-flying bird, but sometimes comes out in the twilight. The sound this bird makes is a curious booming drone which certainly does not come from the throat, but is probably made by its wings as it swoops after an insect.

Deserts Native Land.

Lt.-Col. Percy A. Guthrie, organizer of the famous "McLean Kilties," has taken out his naturalization papers in the United States, according to word received from Boston, where he intends to reside in the future. He is to become a partner in the law business with James D. Colt, attorney, with offices in that city. These facts were announced when the colonel arrived in Boston from Fredericton, N.B., where he has resided with his wife and children for many years, and where he practiced law for several years prior to the outbreak of war.

Col. Guthrie has many friends in Boston and other sections of New England, gained while he was there recruiting for the "Kilties" Battalion. He obtained his first naturalization papers there on June 20, which date was his 35th birthday, and his application for admission to legal practice will soon be acted upon.

Col. Guthrie was the first Canadian to offer his services to the crown, and went overseas as a major in the first contingent. Prior to the war he was a colonel in the New Brunswick militia, and a member of the Parliament of that province, having been elected to the latter office when but 27 years of age. He was further distinguished as the "boy alderman" of Fredericton, being then 25 years of age. In the fighting overseas he received 27 wounds from shrapnel.

The Grizzly.

Bears, like pigeons and cats, have an instinct for "homing," it seems. In his book on "The Grizzly" E. A. Mills quotes this story about a pet bear: "He has been teased by a visiting ranchman. When the ranchman had been reasssembled and revived, it was decided that the bear must be 'lost.' He was led two hundred miles from the ranch and bidden to go his way. His return to the ranch preceded that of his keeper by eight hours. Mr. Mills gives the grizzly a good character, saying that he rarely attacks man. When brought to bay, however, he is a courageous fighter. This incident is cited in proof. A grizzly was chased by dogs and hunters into a box canyon. The bear fought the dogs with coolness and resource while the hunters waited for a chance to shoot. When the dogs attacked him from behind or at the side, he brushed them off without turning his eyes from the front. At a favorable moment he charged, scattering the dogs and killing two of them, disabling two horses, breaking a man's arm, and making good his escape before the demoralized party could fire a shot!

Not at Athens.

There will be no exhibit by Canadian manufacturers at the Athens Fair this year. It has been decided the notice was too short for anything but a Canadian Government exhibit, but arrangements are being made between the Government and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for future exhibits to be made at short notice in connection with the Dominion's bid for European trade.

Re-Union of the Featherston Family

The spacious dining room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Featherston, Dundas street, was the scene of a very happy event on Monday afternoon last, when Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Featherston held a family reunion. Twenty-six members of the family being present from Waterdown and outside points. A sumptuous dinner was served, and all had a most enjoyable time. During the afternoon the members of the family motored to Hamilton where a group picture was taken, which will serve as a happy souvenir of the joyous occasion.

The following members of the family and near relatives were present. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Featherston, Mr. Percy Featherston, wife and family of Cleveland, Mr. Frank Featherston, wife and family of Kilbride, C. R. and Mrs. Roberts and family of Toronto. Mr. Arthur Edwards of Dayton, Ohio, J. H. Rodgers and Bray Edwards of Hamilton, Lorne and Miss Velma of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Featherston of Waterdown, and Harry, Mary, Keith, Elgin and Glenn at home.

We might here mention that Mr. Arthur Edwards, of Dayton, is an old Waterdown boy, having first seen the light of day in this village some sixty odd years ago. He removed to the States when he was sixteen years of age, and is now a prosperous merchant in the Ohio town.

The Review extends hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Featherston and family, and hopes that they may all be spared to enjoy many more such happy events.

Strabane Umpires (?)

The historical village of Strabane, like Stratford on the Avon, can lay claim to the home of poets, situated as it is in the center of the "Garden of Canada" whose soil is so fertile and rich that almost anything in the shape of grain and vegetables can be grown there. But when we say everything we overlook the fact that there is one thing which it has been impossible to raise there, and that one thing is reliable umpires, at least, if the one who officiated in the game last Monday is a fair sample of their stock in trade, we would strongly advise the burg to switch off from base ball to marbles until such time as they can produce an umpire who can give fair decisions, and not hand out raw deals to visiting clubs. This was certainly done in the Dundas-Waterdown game on Monday last. A man to fill the position of umpire must be possessed of a mind of his own and not allow himself to be influenced by outsiders. It was a regrettable incident that happened in the game between our boys and Dundas, and one not calculated to increase the popularity of the noble game. Our boys are perfectly willing to play either the Dundas or Strabane teams on neutral ground, for money or marbles, where a fair and impartial umpire can be got who will give fair decisions, and not hand out raw deals to either contesting teams.

The Harvest Home services held in Grace Church on Sunday afternoon last were largely attended. The interior of the church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with an abundance of grain, fruit and flowers, and reflects great credit on the members who conducted the work. The Rev. Mr. Archer, rector of St. James Church, Hamilton, a former rector here, preached an able sermon which was greatly appreciated, as was also the music furnished by the choir of St. Matthew's Church, Hamilton, who so kindly offered their services for the occasion. The church is now in a flourishing condition. The Rev. Mr. Leake, rector of the church, has endeared himself to his congregation and made himself popular with the citizens generally.

Death of Jas. Thompson

The many friends of James Thompson Sr. will regret to learn of his death which occurred on Tuesday night last at the General Hospital, Hamilton. Deceased was in his 91st year at the time of his death. He leaves to mourn his loss, one daughter, Mrs. R. Glass of Buffalo, N. Y. and one son, Richard of Hamilton.

Deceased was widely known and highly respected. He resided practically all his life on the homestead on the 4th concession, East Flamboro but since leaving the farm a few years ago he has been residing near Waterdown with relatives.

He was possessed of a kind heart and genial disposition, and he dearly loved to relate incidents in his early life. Few men in these parts were better posted in East Flamboro and Waterdown's early history.

Deceased paid Waterdown a visit a short time ago and his friends here were pained to note his failing health, and it is with deep regret that we are called upon today to chronicle his death. To sorrowing relatives we extend deepest sympathy.

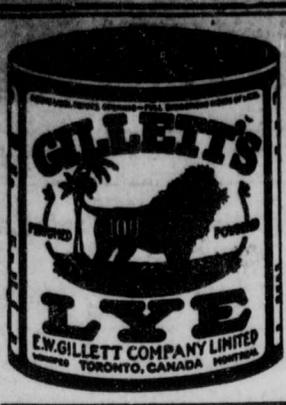

The funeral will take place tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at two o'clock from Dodsworth & Albright's private chapel, Hamilton, interment being in Waterdown cemetery.

Corp. Thompson Decorated by Prince of Wales

Among the heroes who were decorated by the Prince of Wales at the big investiture in Toronto last week was Corp. W. A. Thompson of this village. Corp. Thompson went overseas with the 129th battalion, and served in France for nearly three years. He won his military medal for gallantry in action last year. To be decorated by the Prince of Wales on his first visit to Canada is an honor to be highly prized, and we heartily congratulate our young soldier.

Civic Holiday at Carlisle

On Carlisle's Civic holiday nearly all the people of the burg spent the day at Scarborough Beach. All report a most pleasant time. The writer of this epistle unfortunately was unable to go, and so cannot describe the events as an eye witness. During the noon hour I motored through our town and its suburbs. Everything was quiet. The stores were closed, the postoffice blinds down, no sparks were coming from the anvil, the dogs were quiet and chained to their kennels, the cows in the suburban fields were contentedly chewing their cuds, the Warner river was gently rippling o'er the sand bar. All that broke the town's stillness was the echo of the hourly suburban street car as it glided through the streets. The burg's quietness gave me a chance to study nature. Its solemn deadness reminded me of Strabane the modern "Deserted Village", and would have been a suitable place for the writing of "Gray's Elegy written in a country churchyard". In the evening the cars began to stream in as the joy-seekers returned, each telling a different tale of the day's pleasure. New life sprang up. The dogs barking for their dinner and supper combination, the cows bawling for their calves tired babies crying for their beds, while the moths and bats flew around the electric lights. Everything was astir. Dr. Blagden and Ted Morrow had an exciting time riding in the squirrel cage, one of the features of the Scarborough Beach midway, but just what happened I do not know. Louis Hattie had a miraculous escape from serious injury while riding on the rooster on the merry-go-round. Louis said that something went wrong with the rooster's differential gear and fixed it so it could not crow and it exploded.

Worth Knowing.

Bread should be baked slowly and long if you want good, sweet bread. If it is baked too quickly it is apt to be sour.

When applying an ice bag a cloth should be wrung out of ice water and put between the patient's head and the ice bag.

Greens should be cooked in their own moisture in the double boiler or plunged into rapidly boiling water, salted, and cooled and drained while they are still green.

Strawberry shortcake with whipped cream colored green with pistache is attractive to behold and very good to eat. Never make strawberry shortcake with cake dough. The original shortcake mixture is like baking-powder biscuits. Roll out the dough and divide in equal parts. Spread one piece with butter, and place the other piece on it. Bake and while hot gently separate the two pieces. Spread with the berries and put together again. Serve with cream.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

TO LIVE 1,000 YEARS.

All That is Necessary is to Eliminate Waste and Disease.

"Death under fifty or sixty years of age has got to be prevented or avoided," said Sir George Newman recently.

Why should Sir George Newman limit the age at sixty? Seeing that sanitation and preventive medicine have already raised the expectation of life at birth from forty years in Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Dear Sirs,—I had a Bleeding Turnor on my face for a long time and tried a number of remedies without any good results. I was advised to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, and after using several bottles it made a complete cure, and it healed all up and disappeared altogether.

DAVID HENDERSON, Belleisle Station, Kings Co., N. B., Sept. 17, 1904.

1834-64 to fifty-one in 1908-18, why should not people live normally to be 100 or even more?

Scientists have agreed that there is nothing to prevent the human body living and enjoying the full possession of its faculties for an indefinite number of years, 500 or even 1,000, providing disease and waste matter are eliminated from the frame.

Old age is caused by the gradual accumulation of calcareous matter in the veins, tissues and joints, which leads to stiffness, ossification, and eventually death, through the organs being unable to work. Eliminate this waste matter, which is mainly lime, and, if scientific theories are true, there is little to prevent you living indefinitely.

This is the case of all the methods of prolonging life, such as the drinking of sour milk, which has the property of dissolving lime in the system. The apple, which curiously enough, is popularly supposed to be the "tree of life," the fruit of which Adam and Eve "did eat," has similar properties. Buddhist monks in Tibet undoubtedly live and retain their faculties to abnormal ages, which they attribute to their sparse diet of apples and rice. Hindu fakirs declare that youthfulness of body, not of mind, can be retained to any age by frequent baths in diluted glacial acetic acid. These acid baths certainly dissolve lime and calcareous matters, and it is noteworthy that apples contain a quantity of this chemical. Michael Angelo, who died through an accident at 33, declared that eating grapes and drinking wine was the secret of his unimpaired vitality.—Tit-Bits.

Saved by Their Horses.

An Australian Anzac writing home describes the sagacity of his horse: "It's wonderful how a horse knows danger in the firing line. During a recent push in Palestine my horse, for instance, understood exactly the difference between a shell coming over and one likely to land anywhere near our lines. When the buzzing of a Taub's engines had been heard in the distance I've known them to stampede and race for miles before they halted. But when the machine disappeared they returned back. I've patrolled close to Turkish positions on dark nights, and although there has been no sign of a hidden enemy my horse has suddenly reared, and the next second a shot from a nearby bush or cactus grove has rung out. Many a Light Horseman owes his life to this strange instinct amongst the hoofed Australians."

PROTECTS BIRDS.

Quebec Sets Aside Perce Rock for Them.

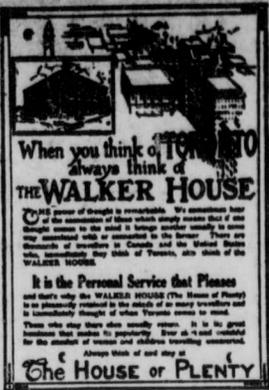

It is an encouraging sign when grave politicians like those who make up the Parliament of Canada and the Legislatures of Ontario and Quebec forget politics and consider the welfare of the birds of the air. The latest move on behalf of these neighbors was the passing of an act by the Legislature of Quebec, establishing Perce Rock, the bird ledges of Bonaventure Island, and Bird Rocks, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, as sanctuaries for the sea fowl that abound in that region. In 1913 the Federal Government set aside Point Pelee as a national park and bird sanctuary, and in 1917 the Ontario Government set apart two Crown game preserves or bird sanctuaries, one located near Collingwood, known as Peasemarsh farm, and the other a district in Essex County, surrounding the farm of Jack Miner, who has, perhaps, the largest private sanctuary in the world, Peasemarsh, which forms one of the scenic features of the Bay of Chaleur contains about six square miles and rises to a height of over 300 feet, and upon its ledge thousands of birds nest without fear of molestation. This rock, it is believed, is the sole refuge of the herring gull and the crested cormorant. The Bird Rocks, a group of three, belong to the Magdalen Islands, and lie 100 miles off the coast of Gaspé. On Great Bird, which contains about seven acres, is situated the lighthouse, and here the auks, the Solan goose, and kittiwakes in great numbers have their nests.

TIMELY RECIPES.

A DISH OF PINEAPPLE. Pineapples are coming into market, and by the middle of the month the small strawberry pines will be plentiful, of good quality and not expensive; the larger variety is not likely to appear in quantity before June. In using this fruit as a dessert it must be remembered that in combination with gelatine pineapple must always be cooked. The fresh fruit is here illustrated. After brushing, washing and drying, the pineapple, rind and all, is halved lengthwise, then cut into slices with a sharp knife; the rind portion is cut out, leaving the rind intact; each slice after eyeing is carefully slipped back into the rind and all put together on a serving dish, so that apparently it has only been halved, the central portion of the crown, when in position, adding the finishing realistic touch.

OXFORD JOHN.

This is an old English dish that offers a simple but delectable way of reheating cold meats. Brown well in butter slices of cold mutton; add one cupful of rich stock or cold gravy, and a teaspoonful of currant jelly, and season with salt and pepper, onion juice, little chopped parsley and a blade of mace. Simmer for five minutes. Arrange the slices on a platter, surrounding with a low mound of mashed potatoes. Strain the gravy over all. Garnish with a large spoonful of jelly.

TONGUE FILLETS. Cut cold boiled salted tongue in pieces about four inches long, two inches wide and half an inch thick; dip in melted butter and in flour; for eight fillets put two tablespoons of butter in the frying pan and when hot put in the tongue; brown on both sides; remove and put one more spoonful of butter in the pan and add one teaspoonful of flour; stir until dark brown, then add one cupful of stock, half a teaspoonful of minced parsley and one tablespoonful of lemon juice; let this boil up once, then pour over the tongue, which has been placed on thin strips of toast; garnish with parsley and serve. This is one of the best ways known for serving left-over tongue. Fresh tongue may be used, in which salt will be required.

FRIED APPLES. Slice some ripe tart apples; beat two eggs, sweeten and flavor; dip in the slices of apple and fry in butter.

CRACKED WHEAT. Stir a teaspoon of cracked wheat into a quart of boiling water; boil slowly one hour; serve with sugar, cream and nutmeg.

CHICKEN CROQUETTES. Take one cold boiled chicken, chop fine, with a teaspoon of suet, two prigs of parsley chopped, one nutmeg grated, a tablespoonful of minced onions, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, salt and black pepper to taste; mix all well together; add a teaspoon of cream; mold into croquettes, dip in beaten egg, and roll in pounded cracker; fry in boiling lard.

Worth Knowing.

To keep irons from rusting rub with mutton fat and wrap in brown paper before putting away.

If a pan of water is placed in the lower shelf of the oven when cake or bread is nearly baked it will be found that the cake or bread will brown nicely on top without becoming burned or too hard upon the bottom.

Bits of soap are often a nuisance when they are kept for future use. They may be used up at once if they are put in a little dish as in a jelly-mould and boiled with a small amount of water for two minutes, then cooled in the mould. A cake of soap in which these bits are held together will result.

CANADIAN CHEMICALS

Survey of Industrials by Dominion Bureau.

At the request of the Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has completed a special survey and directory of Canadian chemical industries. The chemist in charge was Mr. S. J. Cook, B. A., A. I. C., who has introduced the report with a summary of war-time enterprise and accomplishment which must rank as a proud chapter in the development of Canadian industry. Mr. Cook refers to the construction of Shawinigan Falls, Quebec, of one of the largest power reservoirs in the world, second only to the great dam at Gatun. A city with great industries has grown up at Shawinigan and there the world's largest glacial acetic acid plant was built for war purposes, an entirely new process beginning with acetylene having been developed. Other important chemical products of the highest grade are being manufactured there, while two plants at Shawinigan are producing aluminium. Mr. Cook reports that salicylic acid and its derivative, aspirin, are now made in Canada, as are many other chemicals. New disinfectants, closely resembling former German products, are appearing from Canadian factories. Mr. Cook enumerates a large number of other chemicals which are now being produced in Canada for the first time in commercial quantities. He also tells of the expansion in lines of production which, before the war, were comparatively undeveloped. But public support is essential if this progress is to be maintained. War demands built up in Canada a number of large industries employing thousands of workers and unless many of these factories can find peace-time uses for their products much of the advantage will be lost. Already many of the plants operated by the Imperial Munitions Board have been closed and, in some instances, dismantled, but there remain many plants in the chemical field which are still operating and there is room for others. Mr. Cook points out that "in every land where an industry of national importance is to be built up, the people must be educated to its importance and value."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces. The Arenga.

The arenga palm is useful. It grows wild in the Dutch East Indies. Its leaves are covered with long, black fibres. These fibres appear after the old leaf-stalks have withered. The arenga fibre is known by the natives as "gemutu," "duk" and "Indjuk." They use it for roofing their huts, in making small stiff brushes, in house and boat building. The arenga fibre has great resistance to water, and consequently makes a fine coating for submarine cables. Sago and palm sugar are also obtained from the arenga, which is known to botanists as "Arenga saccharifera Labill."

The Coldstream Guards.

The Coldstream Guards is a regiment of footguards in the British army, forming part of the royal household brigade. It is one of the oldest regiments of the British service, dating from 1659. In that year Gen. Monk, who, after the death of Cromwell, took sides with the Parliament and the army, organized the regiment at Coldstream, a border town of Berwickshire, Scotland, whence the name of the regiment, and marched with it into England. It has seen service in every British campaign of any magnitude, and has emblazoned on its regimental colors the names of many of the most brilliant victories of British arms.

TRUE STORY OF CZAR'S MURDER

Entire Royal Family Slain
by Lettish Soldiers.

Crown Prince Survived,
Was Finished Later.

London Cable — Alleged authentic details of the killing of Emperor Nicholas and the other members of the Russian royal family at Yekaterinburg on July 17, 1918, are contained in a report drafted by an unnamed French officer who had been employed in an official capacity in Southern Russia, was made public to-day by Reuters Limited. The story purports to have been told by a sentry who guarded the royal family while its members were under detention.

Under the orders of Commissary Kourovsky, the account runs, the Emperor, the Empress, Crown Prince Alexis and the Grand Duchesses Olga, Anastasia, Tatiana and Xenia, together with Court Physician Botkin and three servants, were taken to an underground room. No interrogation occurred. The Emperor carried his son in his arms because of the boy's inability to walk in consequence of illness. Jurovsky, another Bolshevik leader, the account continues, entered the room and immediately killed all the occupants with revolver shots.

The sentry on hearing the reports dashed into the room, he says, and saw eleven bodies lying on the floor. Only the Emperor's son was still alive. Seeing this, the narrator added, one of the Bolshevik party killed the Crown Prince with a point blank shot.

A Safe Pill for Suffering Women.—The secluded life of women which permits of little healthful exercise, is a fruitful cause of derangements of the stomach and liver, and is accountable for the pains and lassitude that so many of them experience. Par-melee's Vegetable Pills will correct irregularities of the digestive organs and restore health and vigor. The most delicate woman can use them with safety, because their action, while effective, is mild and soothing.

MIRABEAU

Whatever Mirabeau may have been—or may not have failed to be—one great testimony to his character remains unshaken—the high opinion his British friends formed and kept of it. Sir Gilbert Elliott, whose distinguished history is a voucher for his character, and his character is a voucher for the moral value of his judgment, found Mirabeau, when he resumed his acquaintance in England, "... an ardent friend and I believe a sincere one." ... When Mirabeau returned to London, he found himself partly, at least through his friendship with the Elliotts more or less a persona gratia in London society.

Presently, some time during this winter of 1784-85, Mirabeau went to stay with Edmund Burke at Beaconsfield. The two parted swearing eternal friendship, quite unconscious of the "Reflections on the French Revolution" the one was to write, and the "fierce philippic" against it the other was to deliver from the tribune, because the "Reflections" reflected upon the wisdom and utility of the National Assembly. ... On Jan. 25, 1785, Mirabeau was present at the opening of Parliament and saw William Pitt, the younger, at six-and-twenty years old, "debating as a master with his rivals the affairs of the world." He also saw there Lady Warren Hastings, much over-dressed, which reminded him of a passage of the wives of magistrates! He quoted it to Burke, who used it later in one of his speeches against Hastings.

Among other acquaintances formed in England, it is said that Mirabeau made that of Nelson. Nelson was certainly a friend of Sir Gilbert Elliott's, but, on the other hand, he was in England only a very short time out of Mirabeau's stay there. Mirabeau was also introduced to Hurd, literary man, court favorite, and Bishop of Worcester, while he knew well Dr.

Price, the famous non-conformist divine; Lord Shelburne, just created Marquis of Lansdowne, and Benjamin Vaughan (the author of the English version of the pamphlet on the Scheldt) were both not only true friends to Mirabeau, but, as will be seen, to Madame de Nebra also.

The justice, the shrewdness and the sobriety to recognize and appreciate what was good in us, to see what was bad, and to foresee the best way to make that bad good, were attributes which Mirabeau possessed as no other of our foreign critics has ever possessed them, and which he applied not only to our criminal system, but to our government and to our national character. The flattering hyperboles in which Montesquieu and Voltaire adore us are much less gratifying but far less sound and true than Mirabeau's rough, generous strictures. If, in his study of a country so much freer and happier than his own, he was betrayed for a moment into an exaggerated enthusiasm, his statesman's mind was at hand to correct the impulsive heart.

Later Mirabeau told La Marek that France must have a representative government as England had—"It contains every guarantee of judicious liberty." Yet though he certainly did not regard the House of Lords as "a monument of Gothic superstition," as the Abbe Sieyes did, he protested against it when the question came before the National Assembly in 1798. ... The most cursory acquaintance with the English political history of the latter part of the eighteenth century reveals a jobbery and corruption Mirabeau's mind could never have missed. Voltaire, indeed, seeing the pearls, forgot the mud. Mirabeau saw through the mud to the pearls below it.

Perhaps, as a whole, the most just description of his attitude to us both as a nation and a constitution is to say that he admired us, but did not love us.—From "The Life of Mirabeau," by S. G. Tallentyre.

PETROGRAD SAFE

Russ Capital's Fall Not Imminent Now.

London, Cable — The reported impending attempt to take Petrograd from the Bolsheviks is not likely to materialize, according to the Daily Mail's Helsingfors correspondent. Such an operation, he points out, must be by land, and the only available forces consist of Finns, Russians and Estonians. It is very doubtful, however, in the opinion of the correspondent if Finland's help could be obtained, since the Socialist victory in the presidential election defeated General Mannerheim, who alone was capable of leading an expedition.

The Estonians are unwilling to advance unless the allies formally recognize her independence, and anti-Bolshevik Russians are probably unable alone to take the capital before winter, notwithstanding supplies furnished by the allies. Moreover, financial support for them would have to be arranged.

It is understood the correspondent continues that Major-General Sir Hubert Gough, the British commander, is going to London for a conference, and it is improbable that General Denikine would be able to take Moscow or Petrograd without co-ordination on the northern front. A great Bolshevik offensive is under preparation on the Pskov front.

SERBIA EXPLAINS

Movement of Troops is Not Mobilization.

Paris — Cable — A report received in Paris says that the Serbians are mobilizing forces in Banat and Temesvar. N. P. Pachitch, ex-Premier and head of the Serbian delegation, says that the Serbs are reinforcing their troops on the side line through Banat, established by the Supreme Council, because the Roumanians are concentrating on the other side, causing great agitation among the population of a considerable part of the territory which is preponderately Serbian for a considerable distance inside the area attributed to Roumania.

The talk of mobilization, however,
M. Pachitch, declares, is exaggerated.
There are no Serbian troops in Banat excepting in the territory attributed to Serbia by the Supreme Council, and the number there, he says, is only such as prudence demands. In view of the state of unrest due to the fact that the dividing line breaks up a region inhabited over three-fourths of its extent by Serbs and Croats, and even cuts the loop in the railroad from Szegden to Prschitz, requiring travellers to cross and recross the line when proceeding from one point to another on the Serbian side, while at Bazias, on the Danube, it cuts off both port and terminus of the same railroad.

TO CUT DOWN EXPENDITURES

Lloyd George is Chairman of British Committee.

Sir Auckland Geddes Reviews Trade Problems.

London Cable — Sir Auckland
Geddes, Minister of National Service and Reconstruction, speaking at Basingstoke to-day on government economy, announced that a special financial committee, of which Premier Lloyd George is chairman, had been formed for that purpose, and that the Premier was throwing himself with great energy into the work of cutting down expenditure.

Sir Auckland argued that it was useless to rely on the United States to pull the British people through their difficulties. America had her own trade difficulties. She had increased the industrialism of her population, and was not only a great exporter of manufactures, but the greatest exporter of raw materials. She was in the unhappy position of possessing so much that there was little she wanted, and as a result exchange between New York and London moved in her favor, and therefore against her power to export.

Moreover, he continued, because Britain required American raw material, it was increasingly difficult for America to get her manufactures across the Atlantic. The only result of America flooding Europe with goods would be a movement of exchanges in her favor, making the price of American goods in this country prohibitive.
Europe must therefore work out her own salvation, he declared.

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them.

Pleasant Old Age.

What blessings are these—that the soul having served its time, so to speak, in the campaigns of desire and ambition, rivalry and hatred, and all the passions, should live in its own thoughts and, as the expression goes, should dwell apart. Indeed, if it has in store any of what I may call the food of study and philosophy, nothing can be pleasanter than an old age of leisure.—Exchange.

SHARP NEW NOTE SENT ROUMANIA

Supreme Council "Impatiently" Awaits Reply.

Austria Still Treated as Enemy Country.

Paris Cable — The Supreme Council at this afternoon's meeting discussed Roumanian's attitude in the Hungarian situation, and sent Rou-mania another note saying that the Council impatiently awaited a reply to the note sent on Saturday concerning reparations.

The Council discussed the response to the Austrians at length, but did not complete the text of the reply, and will consider it again to-morrow.
Some changes are being made in the treaty in compliance with the Austrians' request. Austria will be treated simply as an enemy country, despite the fact that the Government is new.
It will be required to bear reparations alone, but the pre-war debt and the war expenses will be apportioned among the new countries which have grown out of Austrian territory in accordance with the income of their territory before the war.

It Rubs Pain Away.—There is no liniment so efficacious in overcoming pain as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil.
The hand that rubs it in rubs the pain away, and on this account there is no preparation that stands so high in public esteem. There is no surer pain-killer procurable, as thousands can attest who have used it successfully in treating many ailments.

BETTER STILL.

First Voter: "That was a good long speech our candidate made on the farming question, wasn't it?" Farmer: "Oh, ay, it wasn't bad; but a couple o' nights' good rain 'ud 'a' done a sight more good."

On account of some unwritten law most women seem to think that ice cream or sherbet is the only dessert to be served as refreshments at any afternoon or evening party. But it is time to break away from that old custom and see what can be made without ice that will be "just as good."

There is a macaroon dainty that is delicious, and so easily and quickly made that it is an ideal emergency recipe. Whip a quart of heavy cream to a stiff froth and stir into it a pound of macaroons that have been rolled to make rather coarse crumbs. Sweeten to taste, add a small bottle of marachino cherries, cut into pieces, and serve ice cold in sherbet glasses topped with a whole cherry.

Marshmallow Pudding

To make a marshmallow pudding that will rival any frozen dessert made cut up into a bowl a can of sliced pineapple, another of peaches, six oranges, six bananas and half a pound of marshmallows. Add lemon juice if it seems too sweet. Just before serving add a cup of pecans and garnish with whipped cream.

Caramel Trifle

The English hostess serves trifle as often as we do ice cream for refreshments. A caramel trifle is novel.
Make a soft caramel custard in the usual way. Melt a quarter of a cup of sugar, stirring until it is dark brown. Beat three eggs slightly, pour the sugar into a pint of scalded milk, stirring until the sugar has melted, then add the eggs, a pinch of salt and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook in a double boiler until thick. Put four lady fingers in each sherbet glass, fill with the custard when it is cold, top with whipped cream and garnish with blanched almonds.

Mocha Pudding

A very simple refreshment that everyone will like is a Mocha pudding.
Beat the yolks of two eggs with a cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cocoa and four of flour. Add two tablespoonfuls of water. When this is a smooth paste, stir into it three cups of boiling hot coffee. Cook until thick. When partly cool add half a teaspoon of vanilla and the whites of the two eggs beaten stiffly. Serve with whipped cream.

Frosted Peaches

A most interesting new recipe is called frosted peaches. Rub the skin off from one dozen perfect peaches.
Whip the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth and add two teaspoonfuls of cold water. Dip the peaches into this, roll in powdered sugar, set carefully on end in a sunny window and let them become partly dry, then dip again and roll in the sugar. This time leave them in the sun and breeze until they have become quite dry, then pile up on a flat glass dish.

Miller's Worm Powders prove their value. They do not cause any violent disturbances in the stomach, any pain or griping, but do their work quietly and painlessly, so that the destruction of the worms is imperceptible. Yet they are thorough, and from the first dose there is improvement in the condition of the sufferer and an entire cessation of manifestations of internal trouble.

CITIZENS' LIBERTY LEAGUE

Its Aim and Its Object

The Citizens' Liberty League is an organization of representative men and women throughout Ontario, who through necessity have banded themselves together to oppose all legislation (Dominion or Provincial) which tends to curtail the liberties and lawful rights of the citizen.

In view of the imminence of the Ontario Referendum the activities of the League will for the present be chiefly directed to

SANE LIQUOR LEGISLATION

The Ontario Temperance Act, adopted by the Government as a war measure—without the vote of the people—is legislation that does curtail personal liberty and one which has bred great dissatisfaction.

The Citizens' Liberty League is absolutely opposed to a return of the open bar as it previously existed in Ontario under the old License Act. The League believes that The Ontario Temperance Act should be repealed and so enable the Government to enact a law in accord with the sentiment of the people, permitting the general sale of non-intoxicating beer and light wines and the sale of pure spirituous liquors only through Government agencies under proper restrictions.

Now that a Referendum is about to be taken, the members of the League feel that every citizen should clearly understand the meaning and significance of the questions asked in the Referendum Ballot.

In order to accomplish this purpose the Citizens' Liberty League will discuss all phases of this great issue in the public press in the interests of sane, moderate temperance legislation.

A MOTHER'S TRIALS

Care of Home and Children Often Causes a Breakdown.

The woman at home deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy tolls, while hurried meals, broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headaches, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and the cure at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is always one unfailing way to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood abundantly, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired or depressed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you.

SAMOA

The German Samoan Islands, for which New Zealand is to hold the mandate, according to preliminary summaries of the peace treaty, are described in a bulletin from the National Geographical Society, based on a communication to that body, as follows:

"Samoa, called by former geographers the Navigators Islands, from the skill in navigation shown by its inhabitants, consists of four principal bits of land lying in the South Pacific, nearly midway between New Zealand and Hawaii.

"The number of islands in the group may, by counting the smaller, be increased to 11, or even 14, but only Savai, Upolu, Tutuila, and the three usually included under the general term Manua, are important.

"All are verdure-clad and inhabited, and in appearance and shape resemble immense green hats, the interior representing the crown being mountainous, while the brim or shore is covered with cocoanut palms, breadfruit, banana, and other tropical trees, which furnish the native food.

"At some prehistoric period the peaks of a submerged mountain chain running northeast and southwest have been lifted from the depths of the ocean by the upheaval of volcanoes now long extinct. Accumulations of soil brought by heavy rains from the mountains meet the ever-growing reef, which prevents easy approach to the land except in those places where fresh-water streams, forcing their way through, form openings in the coral barrier.

"Between reef and shore a lagoon, varying in width from 200 yards to two or three miles, provides a secure highway for coast and inter-island traffic. The entire length of the group, if Rose Island be included, is little less than 300 miles, and its gross area is larger than the state of Rhode Island by 50 square miles.

"The native inhabitants of the islands are of Polynesian stock and are clearly related to the natives of both Hawaii and New Zealand. For practical purposes these natives may be divided into four classes. At the head stand the chiefs, who are hereditary in the sense that they must belong to certain families, but elective in that they exercise authority by virtue of titles conferred on them.

"The Tufafale, talking-man, is their executive officer, who phrases their thoughts in eloquent language, and is frequently the central figure in the district and the source of authority. Below him and above the lowest class, composed of what are known as the 'common people,' are the native teachers and catechists, who wear more clothes and do less fighting than the rest of the population.

"There is nothing in the dress or bearing of a high chief which enables a foreigner to distinguish him, but he is isolated from the rest of the people by a system of rigid etiquette. No one may hold up an umbrella or do certain kinds of work in his presence, and a special vocabulary is set apart in which to address him. The common names for food, an ax, a pig, etc., are taboos in his presence. His face, his anger, and other attributes are described in an entirely different set of words from those used for ordinary men.

"Hedged about as he is, the chief, in his intercourse with persons not of his rank, has come to depend largely on his 'talking man' who, like his chief, is elected from certain families in which the office is hereditary. As a rule no one is elected who has not a gift for oratory, which is a common talent in Samoa.

"The powers and duties of the 'talking men' are considerable. They are men of much dignity of carriage, and as they stand leaning upon a staff of office with a 'fus,' or fly-trap cast over one shoulder, with which occasionally to emphasize their remarks, they compare favorably in appearance with the orators of a nation more civilized than themselves."

WEDDING QUEUES.

322 Civil Marriages in Glasgow Last Month.

Glasgow Falls is always a popular time for marriages, but never before have there been so many holiday marriages as during last week. This statement applies particularly to "irregular" marriages, or what are more correctly described as civil marriages. So great was the number of wedding parties at the county buildings that they literally formed up in queues for registration. On Friday Sheriff Lyell registered 78 of these marriages. This easily constitutes a "record" for a single day. Since the end of June 322 civil weddings have taken place in the county buildings—a daily average of over 20. Up till the end of last week there have been 2,373 such marriages this year. The first occasion on which the number of civil marriages exceeded 1,000 in a year was in 1900, during the South African war, and then the total was 1,064. During succeeding years the total fluctuated around 1,000. In 1914 when the war broke out the total suddenly jumped up to 2,657, and in 1915 the highest number yet recorded for a single year was reached—namely, 3,676. Peace year, however, promises to exceed even that number.

HABANA.

Cuban Capital's Long Name Has Dwindled.

The full name of the capital of Cuba is San Cristobal de la Habana. In 1634 a royal decree conferred upon the city the sounding title "Lave del Nuevo Mundo y Antemural de las Indias Occidentales" which signifies "Key of the New World and Bulwark of the West Indies." In emphasis, the coat of arms of the municipality bears a symbolic key and representations of the fortresses of Morro, Punto and Fuerte.

Habana is one of the several towns founded by the governor, Diego Velasquez. He placed it upon the south coast, where the town of Batabano now stands. It was shortly removed to its present position and rapidly it grew to be the chief centre of the island and one of the most important places in the new world. La Puente, the oldest fortification in the city, was erected near the close of the sixteenth century. Shortly afterward, Philip the Second of Spain ordered the construction of the Punta and Morro forte, for the protection of the harbor, and at about the same time the official residence of the governors of the island was transferred from Santiago de Cuba to Habana.

In 1650, the population of Habana was hardly more than three thousand, but in the following two or three decades it doubled, owing to a large immigration of Spaniards from Jamaica.

During this period, the city rose to be the commercial centre of the Spanish American possessions, and the principal rendezvous of the royal fleets that carried on the trade monopoly between Spain and America. The walls enclosing the city were commenced in 1671 and finished 30 years later.

A map of the city at the beginning of the nineteenth century strikingly illustrates its rapid growth. Then the residences were almost all intramural, or within the walls. Large estancias and huertas occupied ground which is now intersected by paved streets and covered with substantial buildings.

The first impression made upon the visitor is of the massive character of the architecture. This characteristic is more pronounced than in any other Latin-American city. The building material generally used is a conglomerate of marine material, which hardens on exposure to the air. It is hewn into great blocks, and so used in construction. Walls are usually covered with stucco or plaster, and colored in a variety of tints. Roofs are either flat, or built of the old Spanish tiles. The effect, which is enhanced by the presence almost everywhere of trees and shrubs, is pleasing in the extreme.

The most interesting portion of Habana is that which formerly lay within the walls. The houses here have for the most part been converted

AFGHANISTAN

The reported assassination of Habibullah, amir of Afghanistan, is a reminder that not even that remote and obscure land of Middle Asia escaped the effects of the world war. Now that there is any evidence as yet that the monarch's murder was inspired by growing antipathy to autocrats, but the collapse of Russia left Afghanistan free from an influence that often caused her considerable embarrassment.

Habibullah is credited with observing scrupulously the policy laid down by his father, a noteworthy ruler, that of consulting Britain about matters of foreign policy, but brooking no interference from the outside in the domestic affairs of his absolute monarchy.

Habibullah's father it was who made travel comparatively safe among the heterogeneous tribes of Afghanistan—tribes which formerly pounced upon each other at the slightest provocation. Frequently they submitted their disputes to arbitration and the custom of the loser awarding several of its marriageable women to the rival tribe was one factor in eliminating any clear-cut distinctions between the tribal units of the land.

To the stranger the Afghan displays a sort of specious and deceptive Oriental courtesy. In fact a national proverb is that "The man who shuts his door to a stranger is no Afghan." But the stranger also would do well to know a saying current among the Hindoos, "God shield you from vengeance of the elephant, the cobra and the Afghan." For many strangers have found that, upon provocation, to which the Afghan is extremely sensitive, his disposition is vengeful, cruel and crafty. His desire for pillage, theft and deception also is apt to get the best of him.

Your Afghan is a swarthy, swaggering, proud, but withal prepossessing sort of man, every inch the warrior while he keeps his turban on, but giving a faint suggestion of a bewigged jurist of old English days when he removes it to disclose a head shaved ringlets falling about his shoulders from the unshaved portions.

Occasionally the men are fair, as are most of the women, whose hair in two plaits with colored tassels at the end, conceivably might call to mind an American musical comedy chorus prepared to sing "School Days," were it not for their flowing oriental robe.

Afghan women, like Turkish women, are kept secluded, but they are considerably more adventurous than their Turkish sisters, hence scandal is not infrequent, even in a land where a man may have as many wives as he can support. Amir Habibullah, if report of his death be true, left four widows.

By Habibullah's father, Abdur Rahman, also were enacted measures of national defence singularly in keeping with occidental schemes for conscription. He made the boast that he could throw a hundred thousand men into action in a week to defend one of his provinces, and said his entire domain could raise a million fighting men to defend her soil. Nor did he stop at the prediction. He worked out a system by which each man in every eight would alternate in taking military instruction. One had to be very young, or very decrepit, to escape the amir's draft, for the services ages were from 16 to 70.

So far as barring private munitions makers is concerned, Abdur Rahman, long before his death in 1901, might have subscribed to the proposed League of Nations, for he had his own factories at his capital, Kabul. There are said to have been produced a dozen or more rifles and thousands of cartridges a day, and several guns a week.

But neighboring states never had much fear of any pan-Afghan aspirations on the part of the Kabul warlord. The arms were most varied and picturesque, and the cartridges are said to have been excellent save that they seldom fitted many of the rifles.

Though he may know not efficiency, the Afghan is a "first-class fighting man," as the British learned in the two Afghan wars. It was at the close of the second, in 1879, that Gen. Roberts made his famous march to Kandahar to reinforce Gen. Burrows, who had been defeated by the Afghans, a feat which was rewarded with the peerage and the title, "Lord Roberts of Kandahar."

Persia, Turkestan, Baluchistan and India surround this island monarchy with an estimated area of 245,000 square miles and a population, also estimated, of 5,000,000. Afghan historians date their people's beginning to King Saul, and refer to them as Children of Israel, a theory that may have gained popular acceptance because of the Afghans' Semitic appearance, but it is not generally credited by ethnologists. Afghan literature is rich in poetry, mostly war epics and love lyrics. All but the mountain Kafirs are Mohammedan, and they cling to a pagan belief in which are blended faint suggestions of old mythologies and ancient religions.

Shedding Their Bodies.

People who lose a leg or an arm feel it to be a great misfortune. But a lobster or a crab does not mind. He simply grows another leg in its place. Even one of the lobster's big claws is no such great loss. A lizard cannot afford to lose a leg, but if you seize him by the tail he says, "Good-bye, tail!" and scurries off over the rocks, leaving it in your hand. As for the starfish, the piece broken off in a short time mends matters by growing a whole new body to fit that piece.

He Understood Girls.

Donald, aged six, has made a very good beginning on understanding the eternal feminine. He was playing with little Eleanor recently, when his mother heard him teasing the girl unmercifully. She said: "Donald, I want you to stop teasing that little girl. Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" "Well, I've got to tease somebody," replied the boy. "What an ideal!" said the mother. "Well, that's so," said Donald, "and she wants to be teased. If I quit teasing her she'll go play with some other little boy."

SIR WILLIAM'S WILL

CHAPTER IX.
Jack rowed a little way out, and followed the coastline; and, of course, rowed in silence.

He had come to Withycombe on the impulse of the moment, and just because it occurred to him that he would like to see it again. He was not in the mood for London, for his father's death had hit him hard, and the fact that he had died in enmity with him had filled him with a regret, and caused a softening of the heart, which made him long for quiet and repose. And Withycombe, he remembered, was quiet enough.

The fisherman's kit was adopted as much for convenience as disguise; he was fond of the sea, he had worked his passage out to Australia, and he plausibly accounted for his presence at Withycombe by telling the simple fisher folk that he was out of a job, and fancied a spell of rest. No one had recognized him. Mrs. Bunce would have done so, of course, but Mrs. Bunce was dead, and her daughter did not recognize in the good-looking young fisherman the lad who had scamped about the place in the by-gone years.

Jack, not having heard of the Misses Bramleys' arrival, had no idea of the identity of the two girls who had engaged him as if he were an ordinary fisherman. He felt rather amused, and was not at all annoyed at their mistake; indeed, it was a tribute to the excellence of his disguise; and he considered it was rather a pleasant way of spending the morning, far pleasanter than rowing by himself, or lounging on the beach brooding over the miserable past.

Every now and then he glanced at Clytie, who was leaning back, her eyes fixed on the small village of white cottages which climbed from the beach itself, and wound in broken line through the ravine until it was lost among the trees above. It was as beautiful a scene in its way as any part of England can show, and Clytie, as she sat and gazed at surrendered to her. He listened in a kind of dream to the girls as they talked and laughed.

"Clytie, you're getting your feet fearfully wet!" said Mollie reproachfully; but Clytie laughed almost gaily; she seemed as young, as girlish, as Mollie at that moment.

"Who cares?" she cried. "That's all very well," retorted Mollie. "But what would Doctor Morton say?"

"So, she was ill, delicate, thought Jack, as he watched her. "What does it matter? Besides, salt water never hurts one," replied Clytie carelessly.

"That's a mistake, a popular fallacy," said Jack involuntarily. Both girls straightened themselves. They had been bending in search of the shells—and looked at him with a scarcely veiled surprise; and Jack bit his lip and looked, in his confusion, very much as a fisherman would look who had been guilty of an involuntary presumption.

"I beg your pardon," he said—it seemed to him that he was always suing for forgiveness—"but salt water is just as likely to give you cold as fresh. Why, nearly all the old people in Withycombe have rheumatism—so I'm told."

"If that's the case—and he ought to know; he's a sailor—you'd better come home as soon as possible and get your feet dry," said Mollie. "I don't want to have you laid up with a feverish cold or rheumatism, or whatever it is cold feet give you."

"Nonsense!" said Clytie, resuming her hunt for the shells. "You talk as if I were an old woman."

"You're worse; you're young and giddy," retorted Mollie. "We've got quite enough; let us go now; besides, I'm hungry. What shall we do with the shells?"

"We're like the poor millionaires," said Clytie, with a laugh. "Embarrassed by our riches."

"Put them in this basket," said Jack, holding it out.

Like children they poured in their treasures. Then Clytie went to step into the boat. Jack jammed it against the rock and held out his brown hand; and Clytie put her white one into it. His strong fingers closed over hers, and seemed to support, to steady, her whole body. Mollie put her small paw on his shoulder and jumped in, and he arranged the impromptu cushion and pulled out of the cave. His pea-jacket lay in the bottom of the boat, and gradually he managed, as if unconsciously, to drag and push it forward with his feet until it touched Clytie's; then he remarked, as if the thought had just struck him:

"You might as well put this round you, miss."

"Oh, no, thanks!" said Clytie, with a laugh. "My feet are not at all cold; and I'm not at all likely to catch cold; I never do. My sister was only joking."

"Yes, put it round them!" said Mollie. And she bent forward to take the coat; but Jack, as if he had not noticed her intention, drew the thick coat over Clytie's knees and dexterously turned it under her feet.

"That's first-rate—and very thoughtful of you, Douglas," said Mollie. "They say that Jack is always the handy-man."

"Yes, Jack's my name," he said. "Oh, it is? Yes, I'd forgotten; I meant a sailor, of course. Row quickly, please; I don't want my sister to sit too long."

Clytie looked at her with faint surprise and reproach, but laughed amusedly as she said:

"Mollie, I decline to be treated as if I were an invalid, especially as there is nothing whatever the matter with me. Why, I'm stronger than you!"

"You!" retorted Mollie scornfully. "I'll bet you I walk you, swim you, ride you, row you, for—for a dozen pairs of gloves—Pine's!"

"Done!" responded Clytie, imitating the boyish challenge. "You couldn't row from here to the pier!" declared Mollie contemptuously. "I don't believe you could get those frog's paws of yours round the oars!"

"Clytie rose promptly, but Mollie pulled her back again. "No, no! You look so comfy! But I think I'll have a turn, please," she said to Jack.

He glanced at her hand sideways, but Mollie had the quick eyes of a monkey, and caught him. "Oh, yes, my hands are large enough. They're ever so much bigger than my sister's. Look!" she said, holding them out.

"Yes, they'll go round," he said, with a smile. He gave up his place, and was going to the vacant seat beside Clytie; but, suddenly remembering himself, pretended to arrange the coat, and went into the bow.

"How heavy it is!" remarked Mollie, after a pull or two. "Why, no wonder! The boat's all down in front. Go to the stern, please, Douglas."

"The boat's all right," he returned, almost sullenly, and therefore more like a fisherman than any former speech of his was. "Go and do as you're told," said Mollie, sharply.

But she had met her match. He

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Itched and Burned. Scarcely Slept. Cuticura Heals.

"Pimples affected my face. They were large and always feasted, and they were scattered all over my face. They afterwards turned into scales and when they fell off they left big marks until my face was disfigured. They itched and burned so that I scarcely slept at all."

"I had been bothered for nearly two months before I started using Cuticura, and after I had used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss L. Burns, St. Basile, Que., June 6, 1918.

got up and reached for the oars.

"Better let me take her in, miss," he said, in the tone which always obtained obedience for Jack Douglas, the other before which Teddy's lofty spirit had bent submissive. "There's a current setting off the shore, and you may not hit the channel."

Mollie looked up at him for a moment rebelliously; then Clytie said: "Come back to your seat." Mollie's eyes fell, and she obeyed.

The tide had run out since they started, and he saw that if the girls tried to land without assistance they would have to wade. He leaped to shore with a painter in his hand, and pulled up the boat as far as it would go, but it was not far enough to permit them to step out dry-foot. Without a moment's hesitation, and in a matter-of-fact way, he went to the side of the boat and held out his arms.

Mollie went into them with a spring that would have knocked him over if he had been less strong, and laughingly clung to him as he carried her to shore. Then he returned for Clytie. She had not been carried in a fisherman's arms since she was a child, and she hesitated, standing with one foot on the gunwale of the boat, and eyeing the water doubtfully.

"There used to be a landing-board," she said.

Jack looked round. "There isn't one here now," he answered.

"Oh, well," she murmured, with an air of resignation, and he took her in his arms. She was very little heavier than Mollie, but for some reason or other, Jack's heart beat fast, and he felt a strange embarrassment and awkwardness, which did not, however, discover itself, for he bore her with apparent ease—and indifference—to the beach, and did not deposit her until he could do so on absolutely dry land.

"Thank you," she said, quite placidly, and without the trace of a blush; why should she be confused?

Jack touched his cap, and was turning away with an apologetic: "Oh, I forgot!"

She felt in her pocket, consulted in a whisper with Clytie, then said: "I'm so sorry, but we haven't any money with us. We will pay you to-morrow."

For the life of him Jack could not prevent the rush of blood to his face, but he said, with feigned politeness: "It's of no consequence." Then he added, on a sudden impulse: "Shall you want me to-morrow?"

"Shall we, Clytie?" asked Mollie. "Oh, I don't know. But perhaps you

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Help to Pass the Crisis Safely—Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Can be Relied Upon.

Urbana, Ill.—"During Change of Life, in addition to its annoying symptoms, I had an attack of grippe which lasted all winter and left me in a weakened condition. I felt at times that I would never be well again."

I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for women passing through the Change of Life, so I told my doctor I would try it. I soon began to gain in strength and the annoying symptoms disappeared and your Vegetable Compound has made me a well, strong woman so I do all my own housework. I cannot recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly to women passing through the Change of Life."

had better keep about. We'll send word. Good morning. Come on, Clytie, I'm simply starving!"

Jack tugged the boat up the beach, and, lighting a pipe, sat down beside it.

The situation was a bit grotesque, he thought. Here was he, Sir Wilfred Carton, a baronet, playing at fisherman, boatman, and "waiting" on the girl who might have been his wife. It was all very well for a day, was rather amusing than otherwise; but—but had he not better take himself off? Why should he remain in England, to be harassed and worried by his proximity to the hall, and—and what might have been? Out there in Parraluna a warm welcome awaited him; he had half the prospect in Silver Ridge, was not quite a beggar—in Australia; while here—

But he had asked if the girls would want him on the morrow, and had been hidden by Mollie to "keep about!" Yes, it was funny, very, he told himself, and he smiled, but rather ruefully. Then he thought of the two sisters. He liked Mollie—a rippling little tomboy, and as quick as a needle. He had seen that in the glance he had got of her in the churchyard. And, of course, that was—Clytie, he should say—Miss Bramley—who was playing the organ. Though she had scarcely spoken twenty words to him, he left that he liked Clytie better even than he liked the younger girl. She had altered so much that it almost seemed to him as if he were making her acquaintance for the first time. How gentle she was. And yet there was strength of character behind those gray eyes, indicated by the firm lips with their dainty curve of sadness, of wistfulness.

Now, supposing that he had not quarrelled with his father and left England to wander in strange lands; supposing Clytie and he had grown up together—it was just possible that he and she—

He awoke from his dreams, and, with a rather angry gesture, muttered:

"What an idiot I am, to moon like this! What's the use of supposing this, that and the other? I've settled things once and for ever, and the best thing I can do is to clear out, to go where there's work waiting for me. She'll make a splendid mistress of the Hall, will marry a decent chap, a nice earl or marquis—she wouldn't make a bad duchess, by George—and—well!—What is it, Mary Mavourneen?"

The little girl of the cottage where he was lodging came unsteadily down the beach toward him.

"Mavourneen says your dinner's ready," she said; "and gettin' cold!"

"And I'm ready for the dinner, and I'm precious warm; been getting into hot water, Mary."

He swung the child on his shoulder and marched up to the cottage.

He was lodging in a little rook's nest of a place stuck half-way on the hill which commanded a view of the sea and the road that wound through the valley; his landlady was the widow of an old fisherman, with one child, the Mary Mavourneen aforesaid; and both the mother and the child had taken a great fancy to their young lodger; and both, after the pleasing way of women, had begun thus early to domineer over him, and to regard him as one of those simple and helpless men who require careful looking after in the matter of meals and wet clothing.

"Do'ee put the chill down and come to your dinner," said Mrs. Westaway; "it's been waitin' for ever so long, and must be as cold as charity, tho' I've done my best to heat it up for you. You men, the best of you, 'ud worry a woman to a skeleton. Polly, come off Mr. Douglas' knee."

"No, no; let her stop where she is," said Jack. "You stay and see that I don't eat too much, Mary. It's your mother's fault if I do; best steak pudding I ever tasted. If Eve had been half as good a cook as you, Mrs. Westaway, Adam wouldn't have got into trouble over his gardening. Didn't you say there was a cushion for that boat, and didn't I see a scrubbing brush lying about somewhere? should like to give her a good clean-out. "Cushion? No, of course there isn't; and you didn't see any brush o' mine lyin' about, because I keep 'em in their place. But there's an old cushion somewhere, and you can have a brush. I suppose you want to spruce her up for the young ladies from the Hall?"

"There's no concealing anything from you, Mrs. Westaway," said Jack. "I thought as much. Well, they're worth taking a little trouble over, for, bless their hearts, they're like all the Bramleys, sweet and kind to the core. I like the old families myself, Mr. Douglas."

"Hear, hear!" said Jack. "They're both as sweet as they can be," she went on, "and have always got a word for one. Miss Mollie—Lor', what a handful she must be to Miss Clytie, bless her!—must stop on her way up to Mrs. Fry's, though she was late for lunch, to a handful of chocolates. What have you done with them, miss?"

"I've eat 'em, all but this one for Jack," said Mory, proffering a moist and dilapidated chocolate cream.

"Thank you, Mary Mavourneen," said Jack gravely, as he disengaged the sticky mess from the warm pink little palm. "I'll eat it with the rest of the sweets. When I've finished, you can come down and clean the boat while I help by looking on. That's the way, isn't it, Mrs. Westaway?"

"Yes, that's the way with most men," she assented, with a sigh; "but you're one of the soft sort, I'm thinkin'!"

When he had finished his pipe, Jack took Polly on his shoulder—she HAMILTON, ONTARIO.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription helped me greatly at the turn of life. I commenced to have heat flashes and dizzy spells and became nervous and run-down. was already so accustomed to her beast of burden that she could ride by holding on with one hand only—and, with his brush sticking out of his pocket, went down toward the beach. As he crossed the road, Clytie and Mollie, on horseback, rode up. Clytie, with a smile at the child, rode on; but Mollie stopped, and, as she held the fidgeting horse well in hand, said:

"So you're going for a ride, too, Polly? I hope your horse is quieter and better tempered than mine."

"He's the best horse as ever was," said Polly emphatically. "Say 'ass' and you'd be right," muttered Jack.

"I'm glad to hear it," remarked Mollie. "Oh, Douglas, we shall want you to-morrow, in the afternoon. Have everything ready, please."

"Certainly—thank you, miss," said Jack.

He turned as she went on, his eyes fixed on Clytie. How slight and graceful she looked in her habit; and how well she sat her horse. Suddenly he saw a horseman coming down the hill road. Jack's eyes were as keen as a hawk's, and he recognized the thin, pale-faced man with the dark hair he had met the night he had arrived, as he was going into Mr. Granger's.

Mrs. Westaway had come out of the cottage with a pitcher, to draw water from the village well; he waited until she had come up to him, then he said:

"Do you know who that gentleman is, Mrs. Westaway?"

She shaded her eyes with her hands; her sight was not so good as Jack's.

"No—yes; that's Mr. Hesketh Carton, of the Pitt Work," she replied. (To Be Continued.)

THE WORLD is staggering with debt. Some of the leading countries are verging on bankruptcy.

Five years ago Canada had never dreamed of the financial burden she carries to-day.

Canada entered the Great War with a National Debt of $337,000,000, or $42 per head of population. Canada emerges with a National Debt to date of $1,670,263,691, which is expected to approximate $2,000,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year—or about $250 for every man, woman and child in the country. Interest charges alone will eat up nearly one-half our present national revenue, and soldiers' pensions will have to be provided as well.

Can Ontario Afford to Spend $36,000,000 a Year on Booze?

PREVIOUS to the Ontario Temperance Act the drink bill of the Province approximated $36,000,000 per year, an amount about equal to Ontario's share of the Annual interest on our National Debt. In the face of our financial responsibilities alone, is this the time to repeal the Ontario Temperance Act or relax a single one of its restrictions upon waste of money and man power?
