Not now—my child—little more rough toss—
A little longer on the billows' foam—
A few more partings in the desert darkness,
And then the sunshine of thy Father's Home!

Not now—for I have wandered in the distance,
And thou must call them in with patient love;
Not now—for I have sleep upon the mountains,
And thou must follow them where'er they rove.

Not now—for I have loved ones sad and weary—
With throats that cheer them with a kindly smile;
Sick ones, who need thee in their lonely sorrow—
With throats that need thee yet a little while!

Not now—for wounded hearts are sorely bleeding,
And thou must teach those widow'd hearts to sing;
Not now—for orphan's tears are thickly falling—
They must be gather'd 'neath some sheltering wing.

Not now—for many a hungry one is pining—
Thy willing hand must be outstretch'd and free;
Thy Father hears the mighty cry of anguish,
And gives his answering messages to thee.

Go with the Naves of Jesus to the dying,
And speak that Name in all its living power;
Why should thy fainting heart grow chill and weary?
Canst thou not watch with Me one little hour?

One little hour!—and then the glorious crowning—
The golden harp strings and the victor's palm—
One little hour!—and then the Hallesan jubilee—
Eternity's long, deep, thanksgiving psalm!

Not now—for I have loved ones sad and weary—
With throats that cheer them with a kindly smile;
Sick ones, who need thee in their lonely sorrow—

Interesting Story.

The Pastor of St. Agathy.

In the most remote and unknown parts of one of the French departments, there existed in 1793 a little village of poor peasants under the name and patronage of St. Agathy. It contained about forty houses, which might more properly be called huts for their roofs were composed of reeds and straw, and their walls were a miserable union of woodwork and clay.

There lived here, however, a community distinguished both by simplicity of manners and firmness of religious principles. Its pastor had taken his post here at the age of twenty-five, and had ever since shared the joys and sorrows of his flock, living like themselves in a miserable hut, satisfied with the same meagre fare, and doing his duty in every respect, with that faithful zeal which only a deep and quiet conviction can stimulate.

Thus he had spent fifty years, and had won the hearts of all his parishioners, who loved and revered him as a father. He had during this time declined all propositions for bettering his position; partly from love of those under his charge, partly from fear that no other pastor would remain long in such a poor parish; and, therefore, he became old on the same spot, amid the same poverty, doing all the good he could in his narrow sphere, for which he felt himself richly rewarded by the child-like love of his little flock.

As the French revolution broke out, the pastor began to fear that neither he nor his flock would be spared from the all-victorious storm. One day he received orders from the chief of police of the department to swear to what was then called the civil constitution of the clergy, or to give up immediately his post and quit his parish.

The good man was so little acquainted with political matters, that he did not know at first what was required of him; but as a copy of the constitution accompanied the order, he lost no time in studying its contents, and came to the conviction that he could neither acknowledge nor swear to it.

Interesting Story.

The Pastor of St. Agathy.

No words can express the deep pain he felt as he saw the desolation of the scene, in which the families to whom he had so long administered were gathered in the open air, robbed of their hill. With streaming eyes he reproached himself.

"Would it not have been better to have delivered the old man of three score and ten, who has at the most but a short time to live, and thus have saved the rest?"

They answered him he was the father of the community; and that good children should shun no sacrifice for their father. He rejoined that, such a sacrifice was worthy of equal love, and that he hoped to show them on his part what he was able to do for his children.

Three days after, as the commissary, or Representative of the convention, sat in cabinet at Niort, an old bald-headed man was led before him, supported upon a stick, his shoes covered with dust, and wearing the gown of a priest, sadly and wearily for the wear. The old man approached and said:

"Citizen Representative, you have made known at St. Agathy that twenty thousand francs will be given to him who shall deliver up the head of the pastor of that village. I am ready to earn the price."
Much as the representative was acquainted with the business of men, he was yet astonished at such a proposition from a man who was himself evidently so near his own end.

Interesting Story.

The Pastor of St. Agathy.

The National Convention, informed of the state of things, ordered a troop to restore tranquility wherever it was disturbed. Commissioners were appointed with full powers. Such a commissary came to Niort, the chief place of the department in which St. Agathy was situated.

This man was of a cruel nature, and believed himself bound to act with severity against all those who resisted. He ordered all insubordinate clergymen to be taken prisoners, putting a price on the head of such as could not be found.

The pastor of St. Agathy could evidently not escape the prescription, and one evening accordingly the news spread, and the next day a company of soldiers was to come from Niort to take him prisoner.

The communal council immediately assembled. Of resistance there could be no question, as it would have been useless. Yet the worthy pastor, whose safety was the subject of universal anxiety, could not be forsaken. It was, therefore, resolved to bring him to a place of safety which had already been found out.

He opened at first, and he would willingly endure whatever Heaven had ordained for him. He suffered himself, however, finally to be led by his faithful parishioners to a coal-hut in the forest where four armed men remained with him, both to prevent him from delivering himself up voluntarily, and to defend him in case of necessity.

BEST ON EARTH
SURPRISE SOAP
THE GREAT TEST
This Soap is the best in the world for all purposes. It is made of pure vegetable oils and is free from all impurities. It is the best for washing clothes, for scouring pans, and for cleaning the house. It is also the best for washing the face, and for cleaning the hair. It is the best for all purposes. It is the best for all purposes. It is the best for all purposes.

scarcely visible at the bottom of this fearful abyss, and were we informed that this little streamlet was able to wear off annually only one-tenth of an inch from its rocky bed, what would our conception be of the prodigious length of time that this stream must have taken to excavate the gorge? We should certainly feel startled on finding that the stream had performed this enormous amount of work in something less than a million years.

How Long?
Mammon is a god whose devotees have extinguished humanity and abjured all feeling of the brotherhood of mankind, and among his worshippers are none so cruel as those who make the rum traffic the highway to his shrine. "Am I my brother's keeper?" cries each of these modern fratricides. "It isn't my fault if this man drinks. He is old enough to take care of himself." The blood of these poor, weak Abels cries from the grave against their murderer. How long will the people themselves go about with leaden and unheeding ears? How long will this traffic in rum, accursed of God and man, be allowed to burden the earth with woe? How long will the rum power, banded together by selfish greed be allowed to ruin humanity at will, in order that their coffers may be filled with ill-gotten gains? When will men, recognizing the enormity of the evil, cease pruning the branches and lay the axe of public condemnation at the root of the pestiferous tree which fills the land with mourning perpetually? How long will this blood-stained and crime-burdened earth groan under the perpetuation of the evils that come from the rum traffic.

Day and Night
During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a coughing, tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

Without Relief,
I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stovall, M.D., Carrollton, Miss.
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases.—M. A. Rust, M.D., South Paris, Me.
I was attacked, last winter, with a severe cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physicians told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally cured by using two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Sauburg, Penn.
For years I was in a decline. I had chronic Bronchitis and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Cured By Using
Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he finally prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine a short time, and was cured.—John W. Waller, Rutland, Vt.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The New Assessment Law.

The agitation that some years ago shook this county and other parts of the Province for a more equitable assessment law, has after years of careful study and expensive inquiry on the part of our law-makers, borne fruit in a new act under which the next assessment of the Province will be made. This act which was to relieve the farmers from the disadvantage under which they labored, seems to differ from the old more in appearance than in reality and the burden seems as before to be placed on the same broad backs. The chief features of difference between the new system and old are the tax on incomes and the appointment of a board of revisors. The name of having an income tax may satisfy those who have been agitating for one, but in this case it means little more than the name, for while the farmer pays the tax on his real and personal property (except $200 worth of tools), the holder of notes, mortgages, etc., only pays at the same rate on the income derived from them and that only when the income exceeds four hundred dollars, which amount is deducted when it does. It will probably tax the intelligence of the ordinary farmer to understand why the highly-salaried official should be exempted from a tax on part of his income—or that the rich holder of bonds and mortgages should have a like exemption on the interest derived from the same, while he has to pay at the same rate on all his principal.

The Act in Clause 5 says, No income shall be taxed, which is derived from property subject to taxation under this Act, and in Clause 6, that the produce of any farm being the property of the person who raised or produced the same shall be exempted from taxation, but we find included as taxable property in the schedules which the rate payer has to fill up, "Cattle, horses, sheep, hogs, and other live stock." We really cannot see why the pig the farmer is fattening for his winter supply of pork should be taxed while his apples and potatoes intended for market should not, and why the calves and lambs he has raised during the summer are not as much the produce of his farm as his turkeys or hay, passes our comprehension. While the farmer pays to the full valuation of his property without reduction for mortgages or debts on the same the holder of such mortgages or debts pays a tax on the interest he receives from them. This looks like the same property paying twice and will have a tendency to raise the rate of interest of farm securities—a rate already high in comparison with other investments of equal security. In the working of the new act it is safe to say that the expense will be at least doubled and all the relief to the property-holder from any tax on incomes will be more than swallowed up in increased expenses. That the Act will work smoothly and economically the first year, is more than its best friends could wish. That it will ever be satisfactory without many amendments, we do not think. It seems unfortunate that after the time and money expended in framing this Act it should have all the objections of the old one and many of its own.

Mr Mott, representing the College branch of the Y. M. C. A., spoke in College Hall on Sunday afternoon and in the Baptist church in the evening. On Monday a meeting was held in the College to discuss the propriety of forming a branch of this Association in connection with the Institutions here.

Educational.

The Teachers' Association for Inspectional District No. 5 (Hants and Kings) met in Windsor October 11th and 12th inst. A large number of teachers (male and female) of the District assembled in the Town Academy to discuss such topics as might naturally come before that body. C. W. Roscoe, M. A., our amiable and efficient Inspector, presided and was the leading spirit of all the meetings. Dr Allison, Supt of Education, was present and took a lively interest in all the discussions; also Dr Young, American consul, Prof. Muller of the Collegiate School, Rev. Mr Nelson and other prominent educationists of Windsor attended and added materially to the success of the Association. The meeting was characterized by a feeling of deep interest and harmony. All came away highly pleased at the success of the convention and all declared that such meetings cannot fail to do a great deal of good to the teachers of the district.

The first and only paper of Thursday morning's session was read by Mr George J. Miller, Principal of the Hantsport High School. Mr Miller is able and always willing to write a paper on any subject and it is very seldom we have a meeting in which he does not take a leading part. "Grammar in the Public Schools" was his subject and he handled it in a masterly manner. He thought the text-book was introduced too soon, criticised the manner of instructing beginners by placing unsuitable books in their hands, and read an excellent extract by Will Carleton, on the "Old Schoolhouse." The paper was carefully written, ray and witty and contained many useful hints to teachers. Spoken to by H. S. Shaw, C. F. Hall, Inspector Roscoe, A. McLeod, and others.

A novel feature of the Association was the introduction of a Question Box. Several pertinent questions were placed in this box by teachers present which were read by the President and answered by the advocates of the Convention.

Association met at 2 p. m. Miss Calder, of the Windsor Academy, read a very excellent paper on the "Kindergarten." Froebel's great system was set before the teachers. She showed that with a little care and preparation, the elements of the system might be introduced into every graded school in the Dominion and that with little cost suitable apparatus might be procured. The paper was highly commended by several teachers.

Mr E. A. Read, of Acadia College, but now teaching in Brooklyn, followed with a very well written paper, entitled "Reading for Teachers." The writer showed clearly that the teacher is incomplete if he relies solely on text-book knowledge. He believed that supplementary reading is necessary to make a full and successful teacher. He outlined the works the teacher should read, giving prominence to the leading newspapers, current literature and the leading works of the best authors. The paper was highly commended.

sympathy with the teachers. He upbraided the parents for their lack of sympathy. He thought the remuneration to teachers was not sufficient.

Rev. Mr Brown paid a high tribute to Dr Allison, at whose feet he sat in his youth and drank in life-long truths. He would hail any movement that would yield a larger remuneration to the teachers of the Province.

Editor Anslo thought the teachers were not properly paid.

Miss Mumford's paper, "Character-building in the Public Schools," opened the meeting. She believed that the training of the teacher would in a very large measure wash away the evils of home-training. The paper was worthy of commendation and it received it from Principal Hall, Principal McLeod, Mr Woodworth, Dr Allison, and others.

One of the best papers of the Association was that entitled "The Endogenous Nature of Education," read by Mr O. H. Cogswell. He illustrated the growth of education in this Province from the day "When Britain came over and planted his flag with sea-foam still wet," up to the present time. This paper deservedly received a large share of praise. A lively discussion followed.

Prof. Snell, an expert in penmanship, conducted a very interesting exercise in writing. His system is an excellent one. He is not only a splendid penman but also a good instructor, who has reduced the art to the simplest, practical forms. We believe his method to be the best ever introduced into the Province. He showed some splendid specimens of writing and pen sketches.

Mr H. S. Shaw came next with a carefully prepared and well written paper—"The Common School, a Teacher of Morality." This was probably the best paper read at the Association. We would not do it justice if we attempted an abstract. Dr Allison spoke of it very flatteringly. We would like to see the paper printed.

The last paper, but by no means the least, was read by Principal Hall, of the Windsor Academy. Mr Hall is a clever scholar and his paper on "Discipline" was a splendid effort. It was pregnant with useful hints to teachers. Mr Hall also won the thanks of the Association by his untiring efforts to make the convention a success.

Prizes were offered by the Association for writing and drawing. First prizes in drawing were awarded to Lena Lawrence, Windsor, and Fred Coffill, Hantsport; second prizes, to Gertrude Curry, Windsor, and Josie Lawrence, Hantsport. The first prize in writing (Grade VII), to William Card, Summersville; second, Ralph Nunn, Summersville. First prize in Grade VIII, to Clara McNeally, Summersville; second, Bena Thomson, Windsor. Maps—first prize, Fred Coffill, Hantsport; second, Ranie Carter, Hantsport.

Officers for the following year are—President—Inspector Roscoe. Vice-President—O. F. Hall. Sec'y-Treas.—J. L. Bishop. Committee—Principal McLeod, Miss Burgoyne, Miss Mumford, Principal Miller.

Association meets next year in Kentville.

How People Talk!

Let people talk, but never believe all they tell you. If you do your head will be full always, and your heart very often. David said all men were liars, and I think if he was here now he would tell me the same thing again. People exaggerate some things there is no mistake. George Washington they say couldn't lie, but I would just like to hear him tell about Kennedy hitting Armstrong the other day in Truro and see if he couldn't. Anybody of ordinary capacity could lie about that and a great many did. The first report said Kennedy hit Armstrong and he died in two hours. Then the second said that Kennedy killed him dead, and that is pretty badly killed. Then I heard Armstrong died Saturday morning—that was just five hours before he was hit. And now the paper tonight says Armstrong is doing well. I doubt now if Kennedy ever hit him. Armstrong may possibly have shook his fist at Kennedy. Or perhaps sometime Kennedy told Bill McPherson that if ever John Brown said that he couldn't throw Tom Short he would break his head. Oh yes people will lie. I sometimes feel as if I ought to run away for fear I learn. If truth came natural to people it would be better. It is hard to be as good as you ought to be. It seems easier for a boy to say "Darn you" than the golden text of last Sabbath school lesson. And it is easier for grown people to talk about the bad manners, poor prayers and crooked actions of their associates, than about their kindness or their pretty cloths, or their little feet. Old sayings are not all truth either. A person told me yesterday that wearing a nutmeg around your neck would cure rheumatism. Now I would as soon think of curing myself of being a Baptist by wearing a mousetrap in my pants pocket. Some say red-haired people get mad quickly, but I have seen seven or eight black-haired people get that way too. A man can bring his temper up quickly no matter what color his hair is.

Some say the world grew from nothing. If it did I guess it is the only thing. There is nothing grows now-a-days that way. I wish there did. I would grow a Cornwallis Valley and sell it over in Sheet Harbor. Aristotle thought the world was too great for even the Creator to make, but some now think it so small a work that chance could do it. Just think of chance making a Universe like this! He couldn't make a moonlight night. I doubt if he could make a spider and get him to spin real well.

People talk curiously. They are just full of sayings. If they were as full of religion they would tell you about the Lord being their shepherd when they meet you, instead of about the frost killing their buckwheat, or their minister's wife wearing too good clothes. I would here mention that I never blame frost for killing buckwheat, and as to a minister's wife wearing good clothes, I don't think it is any more harm than for an old maid to have family worship. Talk about dressing any woman too fine. It can't be done. Nova Scotia is full of mothers and sisters for which gold cannot purchase anything too good for them.

Letter from North Dakota.

In the town of North Dakota there are many comfortable houses. While not many of these are large, they are of sufficient size to furnish convenient accommodations for the families occupying them. But among the farmers very few houses can be found which even a modest taste would pronounce convenient and comfortable. Lumber is very expensive, and for this reason the poor people—and most people here are poor—are compelled to get along with as little as possible. You will therefore find families of six or eight people living in houses hardly large enough to furnish sufficient accommodation for two. But this is not all. Many have not reached the point where they can afford to build wooden houses, and are living yet in sod shanties. These are small, dark and ugly in appearance. It is said that they are warm in winter and cool in summer; but of the number and varieties of the bugs which find refuge in their thick sod walls I have heard no estimate.

In North Dakota the fuel problem is a difficult one. Wood costs from five to six dollars a cord, and coal from ten to twelve dollars a ton. In a country where winter lasts half the year, and the cold during much of the winter is intense, such prices for fuel are formidable. And there would seem to be little ground for hope of much lower prices in the future. The cost of transportation will keep up the price of coal, and the scarcity of wood will prevent that from becoming cheap. There are few places where trees can be found. The open prairie is entirely treeless; but beside the small lakes, and along the banks of the rivers, a small amount of timber is found. Sun-flowers are raised to some extent and the stalks are used for fuel. The cost of wood and coal become greater the cultivation of these plants may become more general.

Home. A man can build a mansion, And furnish it throughout; A man can build a palace, With lofty walls and towers;

So 'tis a happy faculty Of woman far and wide To turn sweet or pale, Into something else beside.

Canada. Mr Robert Marshall of St John, in an issue of the News a short time since gave a compilation of interesting figures showing the progress of Canada in the twenty years of the confederation closing with 1887.

The national tax of Canada is shown to be $5.88 per head vastly less than that of the United Kingdom, New South Wales, South Australia, Western Australia, New Zealand or France, only that of the United States $5.59 being less than that not including state tax.

The net national debt is $227,314,775 which, it is shown, has been aggregated by the amount of Provincial debt assumed by the Dominion; and to the Pacific Railway, and other Government railways and canal expenditures, in all $236,690,952 exceeding the national debt by $9,376,177.

No Smoking. Persons who cannot abide tobacco may be glad to know of one town, in Pennsylvania, where not only are smoking and chewing prohibited, but the prohibition is actually carried into effect.

Lighting from the train at the handsome modern station house of stone, close by the river-side, we start up the railroad leading over the bluff to the village. A middle aged German accents us, smiling, "Welcome," he says, pleasantly. "I shall be delighted if I had many people shown Economy."

Skepticalism. By reason of the state of chronic incredulity in which many men pass their lives they miss half the good of the world. They seem to think that doubt and unbelief are proofs of wisdom, and through fear of being deceived reject much that is true and good.

8600 Reward for an innumerable case of Chronic Nasal Catarrh offered by the manufacturer of Dr Sage's Catarrh remedy.

What is Success. Most of us are so in the habit of measuring the success of ourselves by our external achievements that we are in constant danger of losing sight of the estimate. A life is successful not by reason of the external success which it wins, though this is not without its value, but according to the fulness and richness of its development. The only value of external success is as a sign of interior spirit.

The boy Henderson, who was accused of shooting the women through the car window near Pictou, has been committed for trial in the Supreme Court.

The Stinky Young Man. I would go across a muddy street of a very muddy day to shake hands with the person who stands at the head of this paragraph, and when I had shaken hands I should perhaps humbly beg him for his autograph or a lock of his hair.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became a Man, she cried for Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Fall Fertilizing. The best farmers in this section of the country, where the soil is exceedingly varied, and is of all kinds, follow the practice of spreading the barnyard manure on the surface the latter part of summer or in the autumn. They put it on the meadows to improve the grass and on the pasture for the same purpose, and also on greenwaste, to be plowed up in the spring for corn. They get the best results in this way.

Messrs C. B. Richards & Co. Gentl.-I took a severe cold, which settled in my throat and lungs and was not entirely less by my voice. For six weeks I suffered great pain and discomfort and tried numerous remedies. My wife advised me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT and the effect was magical; after only three doses and an outward application, my voice returned and I was able to speak in the Army that night, a privilege I had been unable to enjoy for six weeks. These facts can be verified by numbers of people in this town.

A correspondent of the North Sydney Herald denies the truth of the story in regard to a boy's throat being cut by some companions at Cow Bay while playing "killing pig." They did make a slight scratch across his throat, but his death was really caused by swelling of the glands of the neck, from which he had suffered previously.
