POETRY.

Written for the ACADIAN.

The Evening Hour.

O land of early bliths and hope!
I saw thee in my dream,
And yearning thought drifts out to thee On life's fast ebbing stream.

No more my steps shall wander where The dewy grasses lie, Only this gift I ask of thee,
A resting place—a grave.

No more, amid the lingering chill Of Winter's vanished breath Shall I, these hands with blossoms full, Rare sweetness won from death—Where sheltered nood of doll and vale And sunny mountain side, Among the sunset and the gray These choicest treasures hide.

I saw the mayflowers in my dream,
And gathered them again,
And watched the eager, laughing quest Of roving children; when Awoke to weariness and pain, Yet, waited all around, Came subtle fragrance as from rain, Besprinkled May-day ground.

The early robin's chirping note, All harmonies of spring Beyond the curtain seemed to float As birds upon the wing.

Then retrospective events,
With hilt of rest and peace; O may these guard the waiting till Mortality's release.

Near wild-wood shade and meadow's song
Apart from clamor, rush and throng Prepare an early grave.

There would I rest beneath the well Remembered hush and Lay, And wait your coming on the hill, O fragrant birds of May!

SELECT STORY.

The Little River Mystery.

CONTINUED.

Such was the case as it came into my hands. I could get no additional information from my client. He had become sullen, as I supposed, and would say little but, "Yes may as well go up, sir, like the lano. There'll be nae good in stan'ing up for me."

I took me further's gun when he bade me no; an' I aimed wi' it, like a deaf body, at Jimmie Munro, though I kenned I was behavin' wrang. I'll hae tae dres it now."

As I was talking my pises at the hour set for trial, I felt a gentle pull at the sleeve of my gown. A slight and pale but very clear-witted and determined-looking boy stood beside me.

I knew him at a glance from his resemblance to the prisoner.

"I'm Will Hargrave, sir," said he,
"an' if your the lawyer that's tae stan' up for our Rab, I was thinkin' maybe ye'd need me tae help ye."

I was amused at his boyish self-confidence, and willingly gave him a seat beside me.

The prisoner's father, who considentiously doubted his son's contention was the strongest witness for the prosecution. Only his drawn face and tightly clenched hands told that he was suffering. His son sobbed bitterly while he was giving his testimony.
At its conclusion, in spite of all his efforts to keep up, the man had to be helped from the court-room.

The boys who were with Munro admitted that they had seen neither flash nor smoke when the shot was fired. They had heard the report very plainly. The wind was blowing strongly down the ravine from the bridge, which they supposed accounted for this fact.

"That's why Rab didn't hear it," put in Will in a whisper to me. "The wind was blawin' the sound awa frae him."

Neither of the lads could say exactly how Munro was facing when he shot. They believed he was looking toward the bridge as they were. He was a little behind them when he cried out and fell; they had sprung to help him then. They had seen no one near the place that afternoon but the boy on the bridge.

Mrs. Munro testified that the prisoner had quarrelled with her son for accusing him of pretending to fish in the ravine as a blind for intended fruit-stealing.
Boys from the village often stole fruit in that way. The prisoner had become very angry and had used threatening language.

"Ask her," whispered Will, "if Rab didn't just say he'd elude Jimmie's lugs for him some day for ca'n' him a thief?"

But the witness would not swear to the prisoner's words; she was certain, however, that he had been very angry and threatening.

I had no witness to call for the defense. I had made no impression in cross-examination; and I fear I delivered a very halting address to the jury, for the prosecution did not trouble themselves to reply. The judge charged; the jury retired, and in ten minutes returned with a verdict of guilty.

The bush which fell upon the crowded court-room was broken only by Willie's sob. The judge, with trembling fingers, drew on the black cap preparatory to passing sentence.

The prisoner had listened to the verdict with parted lips and wild eyes; but he braced himself and spoke out manfully when asked if he had anything to say in arrest of sentence.

"I hae tae say, sir, that me feyther thinks I should be punished, an' gin you say I must be, I'm willin'; but I didn't shoot Jimmie Munro, an' I didn't ken who did."

"An' I hae tae say," almost screamed Willie, before I could stop him, "that I'll swear Rab's speakin' true; an' ye'll be sorry for it afore lang gin ony harm's done tae him!"

The hysterical lad was quickly removed from the court-room. The sentence of death was pronounced. It did not see Will for several days, but heard that he was almost constantly with his brother.

It was nearing the middle of March, and the days were growing warm. I was sitting at my desk one bright morning, when the door opened and Will came in. I set out at once to comfort him with assurance that his brother would almost certainly escape execution on account of his youth; but Will interrupted;

"I'm no ca'nin' tae hear that. I ken weel they'll no hang Rab, for I'm tae prove he's nae guilty."

I glanced up in surprise at his confident tone.

"Oh, ye need no look that way," flushed Will, mistaking my expression.

"I'll do it as soon as the snow melts an' shows Rab's tracks just as they were frozen in the ground the night after he made them. I but ca'd tae see gin ye'd help me."

"What are you going to do," I asked.

"I'll seek till I find the bullet he fired. He's tellt' me near where he fired, an' what the tree he aimed at looked like. That'll prove he couldna hae shot Jimmie Munro, winna it?"

"Pretty nearly, Will," I answered, for the purpose of getting rid of him as gently as possible. "But take someone with you, and do not disturb the bullet when you have found it until there are other witnesses."

Two mornings later Will, accompanied by his father, was waiting for me when I reached my office.

"We've found it! We've found it!" he shouted, as soon as I came within hearing. "Johnnie Gunn, the constable, goed out wi' me yesterday, an' we found it in an hour's time!"

"God forgie me for disbelievin' the poor bairn," said the father, brokenly, as I shook hands with him. "I've done him sair, sair wrang, an' I'll ne'er forgie myself!"

We three set out for little River as soon as a carriage could be got ready.
At the end of the bridge-path near the bridge we left our team in charge of the driver and went into the woods on foot. Half a mile in, Willie led us to a tree some thirty yards from the path, and pointed to a small round hole in its trunk.

It was the work of a very few minutes with the axe we had brought to cut out the bullet. It was little injured, and was of the bore of Hargrave's rifle, thirty-eight calibre.

"Now," cried Will in an ecstasy of triumph, "that shows our Rab didn't shoot Jimmie Munro. An' Rab says he didn't hear the shot; an' that proves it mun hae been fired frae the woods anent the barn. Gin we seek, we'll maybe find the right bullet yet."

We went back to the bridge without delay, and thence to the Munro farmyard, as my requesters were returning pointed out for us the exact spot where her son had fallen.

As soon as she had re-entered the house we drew an imaginary line from the opposite side of the ravine, some sixty or seventy yards away, through this spot and followed it to the barn.

We had scarcely to search for what we wanted. The spent bullet from a forty-four calibre rifle lay right before our eyes, imbedded sidewise in the boarding. Will picked it out with his knife and handed it to me for safekeeping.

"Now, Will," said I, "you've proved beyond reasonable doubt that your brother didn't shoot Jimmie. Perhaps you can tell us next who did."

"Na," answered Willie, with a stytink of his eye; "it's for wise lawyers and judges tae be seekin out that.
I ken naething but what Rab tellt' me."

"All right then, Willie," I replied, "though I fear I am not a wise lawyer in your opinion; but I'll go into the house and see what I can discover, if you and your father will wait for me here."

Mrs. Munro as yet knew nothing of our discoveries. She was talkative and quite willing to answer my questions.

She assured me confidently that no one but herself could have had any special interest in her son's death.

Under her husband's will all the property which Jimmie would have inherited had he lived to be twenty-one came to her. I made a note of this before going on with my questions.

After more or less beating about the bush, I found out what I wanted to know. She confessed that she was engaged to be married a second time to a bachelor of forty who was living alone in the neighborhood. His name was Joseph Wilson, and his place lay half a mile away at the farther end of the strip of woods that terminated on the other side of the ravine.

She became quite garrulous on this subject, once the ice was fairly broken, and told me confidently that poor Jimmie had objected to Wilson's visits.
After her son's death, however, he had been so kind and neighborly and she was so lonely and helpless that she had agreed to marry him.

I bade Mrs. Munro good-bye rather abruptly then; and we quickly drove away, not homeward, but into Colby.

where I had a warrant issued at once for Wilson's arrest.

That warrant was never executed.
When the constables went to Wilson's house in search of him, they found it deserted. He had taken the alarm and disappeared. To this day no one knows what became of him.

But a thorough overhauling of his premises brought to light a forty-four calibre rifle, which none of his neighbors had known he possessed. It had been concealed hidden beneath a loosened board in the floor of his attic.

No doubt of his guilt was left. He had shot Jimmie to clear the way to Mrs. Munro's hand and property. It was generally believed that while lurking in the bushes near the ravine he had seen Robert Hargrave on the bridge, and fired when he did to divert suspicion from himself to the boy.

Unfortunately there was no legal process by which the verdict of the jury could be formally reversed; but Robert was promptly pardoned and set free. Will was highly indignant at this fresh defect in the law.

"Just to think," he muttered wrathfully, "o' judge an' jury, an' lawyer's an' everybody blamin' our Rab, an' findin' him guilty o' doin' what he ne'er dreamed o', an' maist hangin' him, too, an' then talkin' o' pardonin' him!
By my way o' thinkin' it's Rab should be doin the pardonin', no them," concluded Will; and I for one agreed with him.—Fourth's Companion.

Young Orchards.

Your orchards should have attention; when there is any spare time go over the trees, cutting away weak, useless wood. When the trees are young is the time to give them good attention, and a well kept orchard will respond to the extra labor laid out, says American Orchardist. If young trees be left to themselves it will not be long before they grow out of shape. Strong shoots, which give the trees a staggering appearance, should be shortened back; one should always aim to have compact, well-balanced trees, and also, if fine fruit be the object, keep the growth thinned out, as when there is much wood in a tree sunshine cannot get at the fruit, and under these circumstances poor fruit results. Young orchards should be thoroughly cultivated for a few years. I don't know of anything better for young trees. If one half of an orchard be cultivated, the other left in grass, that which was cultivated would grow just as fast again and much cleaner and healthier. A tree that makes a clean, healthy growth is the one from which we can expect fine fruit.

Evolution in Theology.

Theology is the science of religion, It is the result of an attempt made by men to state in an orderly and systematic manner the facts respecting the life of God in the soul of man. It involves intellectual definition of the various forms of consciousness which constitute the religious life. Its relation to religion is the relation of other sciences to the vital phenomena which they endeavor to explain. With the growth of the human intellect there comes a wiser study of life's better understanding of it, a new definition of its terms, and a new classification of its phenomena. The life does not change

Electricity is likely to be effectively applied to the exigencies of war. By the microphone it will be possible to detect the approach of a hostile force, guns are made of such mighty power that naught can stand against them; sapping and mining are becoming more powerful factors than ever before; in fact, if things go on at this rate war will completely annihilate all engaging therein, and even the victor will not live to tell the tale.

Paine's Celery Compound

Saves Sleepless, Nervous and Despondent People From Insanity.

THE GREAT MEDICINE HAS NO EQUAL.

Medical men of the highest standing, and a host of others competent to judge, decide that Paine's Celery Compound is the only effective medicine for the treatment of all the troubles that lead to sleeplessness or insomnia.

In the spring season thousands are restless, fretful, nervous, despondent and gloomy. They find it impossible to obtain restful and sweet sleep, and soon become physically exhausted; some already are mere wrecks of humanity.

Such sufferers cannot with safety trifles with sleeplessness and continued unrest.
All in such a condition demand immediate aid, and aid before nature becomes too overtaxed. The weakened, exhausted and irritated system must be strengthened.

For every form of sleeplessness or insomnia there is but one remedy, one healer; it is Paine's Celery Compound,

The Gale Meetings Are Closed.

Never probably has an Evangelist visited Wolfville with more power than Evangelist Gale. Coming before his audience as he did in his quiet way, so unlike many Evangelists, he sought first to win their confidence and esteem.

Night after night, notwithstanding the rain and mud, vast companies assembled in College Hall, apparently eager to hear what message each night would bring—some believing, some sceptical, some praying, some scoffing, but the faith of the strong leader never wavered.

On the sixth night came the turning point in the nature of the meetings. Then it was that the first appeal was made to those who were not Christians and this strong and noble appeal shall not soon be forgotten.

One of the most interesting features of the services held by the Evangelist were the afternoon meetings held in the Baptist church.

On Sunday last Mr. Gale conducted six services. At 9.45 a. m. a meeting in the Baptist church for all who could attend and a most fitting address was given at the opening of that bright day.

The farewell service was held on Monday evening, Mr. Gale taking for his closing talk—"The harvest is passed, the summer is ended and we are not saved."

Next meeting in Temperance Hall Thursday, April 23d, at 3.30 p. m. The meetings are always open to any who wish to become members.

The following extracts are taken from a lecture recently delivered in Tremont Temple, Boston, by John G. Woolly, the famous temperance orator:

I was riding in the train yesterday on my way home. I don't remember the day. Crushed and mangled his little body lay opposite the window of the car in which I was riding, and I exclaimed when I saw the bleeding body, "Why, we have run over a boy!" Two women were sitting behind. One covered her face with her hands and cried, "Oh, mercy! don't tell me, I don't want to hear about it. I wouldn't look at him for the world." The other woman, with white lips and pallid face, touched me gently on the shoulder and said to me, "Would you please find out if there is anything that can be done?" One was a woman who pitied the boy, to be sure, but by the impulse of humankind covered her eyes and wouldn't look at him for the world. She would have been glad to have done some kind act; perhaps she would have liked to have had her carriage take the body away, but she drew the line at looking at the wounds and taking the meaning of it all into her heart.

She was an excellent horse-woman, and as we were burrying through the town, a little boy came near being run over by our team. And what did she do? I know her well, and I believe she is an tender-hearted woman as you will find in a year's search, and what did she do? She bit the horse with the whip and shut her eyes. She was going to keep from seeing it all. Oh, so unwilling to see the wretchedness of the world.

I was in a railroad wreck not long ago on Sunday, for I have to travel sometimes on Sunday, when I believe that the necessities of men and the work of the Lord demand it. The train in which I was wrecked, a carload of young men on an excursion, and many were killed and wounded. The dead were covered up and put in racks along the ground, their faces covered with a bit of canvas. People were there looking for their friends. Presently I saw a man and his wife, who had lost two children—for some were looking for children—and the mother screamed at the sight,—and that was no wonder for we men were sickened by what we saw—and she sat down at a little distance, while her husband searched. He went from one dead body to another and looked into the face of the dead and covered it again after he saw that the face was not the one he was searching for, but after a little while he dropped upon his knees beside a ghastly mangled form, killed by the bursting of the boiler, and it was horrible to look upon, the eyes staring from the sockets, the lips turned to the bone. The father kissed the ghastly face, the open eyes of the dead, and calling to me said, "Oh, my wife, here is Albert, come." And she came and dropped down upon her knees on the other side and would have arms about the stiffened form, tried to drag it up to her bosom, talking to the ghastly corpse of the boy.

Could you have done that? No, no, but it was her boy, you know, her own child, she could take it all in, and she could touch with her own bare hands and lips the wounds of her dead. Oh! get that lesson. As Jesus Christ has healed you, given himself for you, so do you get the fine eyesight that He has. Go your way watching for opportunities to do a kind act. There is many a man going down to hell with set teeth and clenched hands, who might be saved if some good man would go to him, without any undue excitement whatever, and, touching him on the shoulder like a man, say, "Don't you want to be the man you need to be? Don't you want to be the man you ought to be? Rise up and let me help you. I cannot give you a privilege to do it." But not many are saved, because you are depending upon Francis Murphy to do the saving, or the preacher or the missionaries. There are too many drunkards and not enough missionaries of the right sort. And the drunkards will not be saved until you, by the help of the touch of the hand, are doing your own religious, charitable, benevolent work, are going out into the highways of the city and the country and helping these men and women in the

TO PIANO AND ORGAN PURCHASERS! The great popularity of the "BELL" PIANOS and ORGANS has created much jealousy among certain Piano-dealers. Bear in mind that the latest improvements are not owned by and cannot be secured from any firm in Nova Scotia but the Willis Piano and Organ Co.

Any other advertisement, therefore, who may claim to any way the agency for the Bell Piano and Organ Co., do so under false pretences, to attract attention, to goods sold in opposition to those renowned instruments.

THE SLATER SHOE

Under false colours. Some Mackay stitched shoes are made to imitate Goodyear W.C.L. They have a "dummy welt" on the outer edge of the sole, and a false insole covering the stitches under the foot. But no matter how skillful the deception to the eye, the effect upon the feet soon shows it up. Any shoe stitched under the foot must form hard and callous spots on it, as soon as the leather wears away and the stitches form elevations under pressure. The sole of the Goodyear Welted "Slater Shoe" is sewn to a strip of leather outside the shoe—not a stitch or peg being under the foot. Each pair remains six days on the last to take the stretch out of the leather, moulding it to keep the niceties which constitute fit and comfort. You'll know that it's genuine Goodyear Welt if stamped on the sole with the "Slater Shoe" name and price, $3, $4, or $5. A tag on each pair tells the leather it is made of—the wear it will give.

For sale by C. H. Borden, sole agent for Wolfville.

Granby Rubbers

It is no wonder that rubbers, which are not the same shape as the foot, should be uncomfortable. It costs money to employ skilled pattern makers but the result is a satisfactory fit. Each year new patterns are added, to fit all the latest shoe-shapes, and Granby Rubbers are always "up-to-date." They are honestly made of pure rubber, thin, light, elastic, durable, extra thick at ball and heel. Don't Draw the Feet They Fit the Boot

As every thread of gold is valuable so every minute of time.—Mason. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes, by beginning ably, and by mistakes. Orange victory out of mistakes.—J. W. Robertson.

Ask for Minards and take no other. But papa, you have no idea how he loves me. He is willing to die for me this minute. Well, said the old man, as he scratched his head, thoughtfully. I don't know as I have any objection to that. I was afraid he wanted to marry.

Keep Minards Liniment in the House. Mrs De Form—Now, that baby is three weeks old, John, we must send out his cards to let folks know that the dear little fellow has arrived. John (as the baby yells) Ah, my dear, don't you think he'll make the announcement himself?

Minards Liniment the lumberman's Friend. When the Duke of Monmouth was executed in the reign of James II for treason, his Duchess ordered every oak in the park to be cut on the fatal morning. The new growth, belonging to Lord Ebury, is one of the finest forests in Britain.

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. Bridget—Yeer snigger him wid me down at that shop. Oh saw a most lovely sight. Jane—What was it? "Why, was of the kind dropped about two dozen plates on smashed them all 't bits. It made me wish Oh was a man an' wracked in a chain shop."

Why was out with coughing, at night, when Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve and cure! During the hearing of a case before Mr Justice Day, the following dialogue took place: Counsel, at the end of a long speech. Then, my lord, comes the question of bags; they might have been full bags, or half full bags; or again they might have been empty bags. Judge—Or they might have been windbags.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer has restored gray hair to its original color and prevented baldness in thousands of cases. It will do so to you. Aged Husband—You are going to ruin me with your extravagance. You don't need that cap any more than a cat needs two tails. How often have I told you never to buy anything because it is cheap? Young Wife (with the air of one who has got the better of the argument)—But it was not cheap. It cost fifty dollars.

He's a very enterprising young man, remarked the elderly gentleman; very pushing and alert. He belongs to the rising generation. Miss Cayenne, have dreamed it, said Miss Cayenne. Indeed? No, from his manner I should not have hesitated about concluding that the rising generation belonged to him.

The latest results of pharmaceutical science and the best modern appliances are available of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Hence, though half-a-century in existence as a medicine, it is fully abreast of the age in all that goes to make it the standard blood-purifier.

The story is told that Daniel Webster, when on his way by stage coach to Washington once, was looked upon with suspicion by his travelling companions. Finally one of the latter tapped him on the knee and said: How far are you going? I am going to Washington, answered Webster.

Are you a merchant? I continued the inquiry. No; I am a senator, replied Webster. Well, well! exclaimed the other, holding out his hand. I am relieved. We feared you might be a highwayman.

STAFFORD, 4th Aug, 1893. Messrs G. C. RICHARDS & Co, GENTLEMEN—My neighbor's boy, 4 years old, fell into a tub of boiling water, and got scalded fearfully. A few days later his legs swelled to three times their natural size and broke out in running sores. His parents could get nothing to help him till I recommended MINARD'S LINIMENT, which, after using two bottles, completely cured him, and I know of several other cases around here almost remarkably cured by the same Liniment, and I can truly say I never handled a medicine which has had as good a sale or given such universal satisfaction.

M. HINCH, General Merchant.

A Sunday-school superintendent at the close of an address on the creation, which he was sure he had kept within the comprehension of the least intelligent of the scholars, suddenly invited questions. A tiny boy with a white, eager face and large brow, at once held up his hand. "Please, sir, why was Adam never a baby?"

The superintendent coughed in some doubt as to what answer to give, but a little girl of 9, the eldest of several brothers and sisters came promptly to his aid. "Please, sir," she said smartly, "there was nobody to use him!"

Gravel in the Bladder. Ured Eighteen Boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills—The Stone Dissolved and Removed—Knew of Others Cured. Shelburne, Mar. 29 (Special)—Mr John McGill, known locally as well as far and near, as physical giant and glorying in his strength came to be a great sufferer and tells his cure as follows:— "I do not hesitate to speak of Dodd's Kidney Pills or anything else exactly as I find them. If a medicine cures me I think it will cure others why not say so? It is true I had been suffering for some time with bladder trouble and burning of a urine made in a similar case by Dodd's Kidney Pills, I commenced using them. In all I have used eighteen boxes and they have dissolved the stone and have entirely cured me of any sign of such difficulty. If a medicine cures me I think it will cure others why not say so? I know of many persons who have been cured by them."
