CHAPTER I.

She went on playing for a time, almost forgetful of her audience, and when she presently looked around she found that Mrs. Lexington had fallen asleep. She rose softly, and stood looking down at her for a moment or two, then she went to the open window and stood gazing over the lawn. It was still light, a light from the sunset, and Claire, taking a small Indian shawl from a chair, put it over her head, in fancy fashion, and went down the steps into the garden.

She wandered slowly between the flower beds, picking a blossom now and again, intending to make a posy for Mrs. Lexington, who was passionately fond of flowers. And with a bunch in her hand, she strolled aimlessly along the smooth path toward the wood, which ran to the edge of the garden. The shadows deepened under the trees, tempted her to enter, and she passed into the twilight made by the thick overhanging boughs.

At little way into the wood was a small arbor, raised above the path by a mound, and she went into it and sat down, and began to arrange the flowers. She had not been there many minutes when she heard footsteps, and looking down, she saw a young man walking along the path in the direction of the house.

He was not a bad-looking young fellow, and wore a riding suit, not altogether unbecomingly, though he did not carry his head very well, and was rather round-shouldered. Claire knew him; it was Mr. Mordaunt.

As he came abreast of the arbor he stopped, and looking round, whistled and called, "Trap, trap," and Claire, bending forward, saw a fox terrier puppy playing among the bracken at a little distance. It was so engrossed in sniffing out the rabbit, that it either did not hear his master's call, or ignored it, and Claire saw Mr. Mordaunt's face grow impatient, and then angry.

At that moment, Claire was struck by a certain resemblance in the son's face to his father's. She had always thought—if she had thought about it at all—that Mr. Mordaunt was rather good-looking, but at that moment he looked ugly and repellent.

He called the pup two or three times and with an oath. The dog came at last, came cringingly. Mordaunt picked it up by the scruff of its neck, and holding it aloft, lashed it cruelly with his riding whip.

The wretched little animal shrieked pitifully, and Claire, crimson with indignation, sprang to her feet and had gained the door of the arbor with the intention of rushing down to rescue the dog, when some one sprang from

Film Faking

ROOSEVELT'S "KILL" IN CHICAGO.

Roosevelt Himself Was Cause of First Film Nature Faking.

Los Angeles.—Though perhaps he never guessed it, the late Theodore Roosevelt was the father of the animal picture which has developed into one of the most popular forms of film entertainment.

W. N. Selig, who began making motion pictures on a commercial scale in Chicago in 1896 and was one of the leading producers when Roosevelt was president, tells the story, a hitherto unpublished sidelight on the statesman's career.

When Selig learned the president planned to go to Africa on a big game hunt immediately after the expiration of his term in 1905 he began negotiations to bring Kermit Roosevelt to Chicago for a course in motion picture camera work. The plan was to have him photograph the hunt as a cameraman under contract to Selig.

Negotiations lagged, however, and the best Selig was able to do in a personal interview with the president shortly before Christmas was to obtain his promise that if he did not take a Selig cameraman along he would not take another on a big game hunt. Matters stood here when the expedition, however, the Smithsonian Institution's connection with the Roosevelt hunt. The Institution knew nothing of his conversation with the retiring president, and when the expedition embarked the big game country an English motion picture cameraman was along.

This was bitter news to Selig. He thought Roosevelt had broken his promise, and so, when word of the former president's first lion kill was flashed to the United States, he resolved to fake the hunt in a film.

Up to this time animals had played no part in motion pictures, save for the occasional individual appearance of a cat, dog, horse, or other domestic animal, and if Selig expected to film an African hunt he had to have African animals.

After some difficulty, he found a debt-harassed owner of a small menagerie in Milwaukee who was only too glad to rent any or all of his African specimens and to sacrifice his most precious lion for slaughter in the Roosevelt film.

There was in Chicago at the time a vaudeville actor who was staging a clever impersonation of the famous statesman. He was signed, and the filming of "Big Game Hunting in Africa" began.

Fake Climax.

The climax of the picture was enacted in a big cage, about 100 feet long and 50 feet wide, containing an African "set" convincing enough scenically and in which a stout iron grill separated the section in which "Roosevelt" aimed his rifle from the section in which the lion roared. Negroes gathered of the streets of Chicago made up the "native" train of the big game hunter.

At the critical moment a puff of white smoke issued from the counter-aim ex-president's rifle, and the menagerie lion fell mortally wounded. To avoid disappointment and a possible retake of the scene, "Roosevelt" was given only blank cartridges to shoot; the actual killing was done by a sharpshooter posted on the sidelines and using smokeless powder.

Although the name of Roosevelt was not mentioned anywhere in the film, the public generally accepted it as a picture of the Roosevelt hunt, photographed in Africa, and it made a tremendous hit. It was popular even abroad, and Roosevelt—the real Roosevelt—arrived in Berlin on his homeward journey from Africa just in time to see the fake film featured in the theatres.

He was furious, of course, and when he next met Selig, in the Republican club at New York, he spoke hot words. But his wrath vanished and the fact that Roosevelt smiled gleamed again when the film producer said:

"If only you had taken an American cameraman, Colonel, I wouldn't have done it. But you took an Englishman."

Relation of the Liver and Kidneys

Such that each organ is affected by the other. Both organs are affected by the same disease, and they are affected by the same cause.

When the liver becomes torpid or torpid in action, the kidneys have to help out with the work of elimination. When the liver fails the kidneys have all the work to do.

Hence the beginning of trouble is usually biliousness, indigestion and constipation and after a time the kidneys begin to be affected and there comes backache, urinary derangements and kidney disease.

The remarkable success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is due to their unique combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels. They get at the cause of trouble and remove it no matter how complicated it may be. Promptly and thoroughly they cleanse the bowels, stimulate the liver action and thereby relieve the overworked kidneys.

German Trade Advantage

LOWER TAXES AND CHEAPER LABOR.

"Foreign manufacturers, not only those of British nationality, who have visited Germany during the past year and have looked into matters themselves, are one and all amazed not at the amount of German competition which they are experiencing, but at the fact that it is not greater."

This is an extract from the official report on the economic and financial conditions in Germany just issued by the Department of Overseas Trade.

The report is full of information about the strenuous efforts Germany is making to capture the trade of the world.

The report states that Germany, with a population of 64,000,000, is taxed to produce 2,268,000,000, and that England with a population of 45,000,000, is taxed to produce 2,889,700,000 representing £15 per head, compared with £8 per head in Germany.

German production is fostered by reduced railway rates on raw materials, and export is promoted by preferential rates between inland stations and the ports.

FULL DAVE'S WORK.

Mr. J. W. F. Thelwall, commercial secretary to the British Embassy in Berlin, who has prepared the report, says:

The vital factor which differentiates English from German cost of production is labour. The German workman receives considerably less than the pay of his British colleague, and often works unrelentingly, unhampered by any trade union restrictions as to the quantity of his output.

Unless some adjustment is made the effect of this difference will make itself increasingly felt, as the disadvantages from which Germany at present suffers, particularly the financial one, disappear.

Red Plot in China

GEN. FENG'S PLANS FOILED.

PEKING.—There has been a dramatic change in the situation in China. Marshal Chang Tso-lin, the Mukden War Lord, declares that the so-called Christian General Feng Yu-hsiang attempted to trick him, working in with the Governor of Honan with the idea of attacking him in his three most vulnerable points.

Marshal Chang is now concentrated in Paris.

The action arose out of a frontier incident in the "dividing" of waters of the lake between France and Switzerland. A French fishing boat from Tsonon-les-Bains was fishing at the lines it had laid down to capture the delicate fish trout, when it was pounced upon by a fast Swiss motor craft, a motor boat, whose role is to prevent poaching in the Swiss waters.

The Swiss sailors claimed that the French boat was in Swiss waters, and casting grappling irons about the

Perfect Meat Refrigeration

Australian meat exporters suffer from the "drip" that follows the freezing and thawing of beef. This marks the product and lessens its value. The cause is believed to have been traced to the rupturing of the French craft, they proceeded to board it, revolver in hand. The Frenchmen were outnumbered and unarmed, but they seized oars and guns and resisted desperately until they were overpowered. The Swiss warship finally towed its prize into the port of Yvevey, where the two members of the crew of the French vessel were lodged in gaol.

This naval dispute is to be settled through diplomatic channels.

Idently believed a new era had begun not only in Ulster and the Free State, but in the whole world so far as Irish affairs were concerned. He also announced that at the London negotiations, the vexing question of political prisoners had been settled with the agreement that prisoners held for political offences in the north would have their cases reviewed by the British Government and its decision as to their disposal accepted as final. He paid a tribute to Cosgrave and other Free State leaders.

NEWFOUNDLANDER WASHED OVERBOARD AND DROWNED.
SLEDNEY, N.S., Dec. 9. John Cook, Postmaster at Ingoultah, and a native of Newfoundland, was drowned when washed overboard from Capt. William Dunphy's schooner, Julia, when caught in an off-shore gale, 3 miles off Cape Smokey, to-day. Bert Dunphy was also swept overboard but was rescued after a thrilling fight for life.

BIRTHRATE LOWEST ON RECORD.
LONDON, Dec. 9. For every thousand births born in England and Wales last year there were 1047 boys. The birthrate was 13 per thousand, the lowest yet recorded except during the war years. The population in 1924 was 38,746,000.

SYRIA'S APPEAL CANNOT BE RECOGNIZED.

GENEVA, Dec. 9. Syria sent an emissary to the League of Nations to-day to demand action to stop bloodshed in Syria, but as the Council already had approved of a plan of the Mandate Commission to meet in Rome in February to probe the situation, the indications were that Syria's petition would not be recognized. Representations declared that 'hooded' and oppression had existed for five months in Syria, with the French bombarding and burning villages incessantly. Famine menaces the country and thousands are homeless, it was declared.

Sees Pacific Theatre of World's Next War

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 27.—The Pacific is "the ocean of to-morrow," and will probably be the main theatre of the next great war, General J. H. MacBrien, chief of staff of the Canadian department of national defense, declared in addressing the Canadian club here. He demanded more adequate defenses on the Pacific coast, declaring that the nation's present naval base, while not obsolete, was obsolescent.

Gen. MacBrien stated that the United States has spent $22,000,000 on the defence of the Panama canal and that another $68,000,000 is to be spent on that subject. He declared that during his sojourn as an observer in Japan he had learned to like the Japanese very much, and that he believes the Japs are right in their claim to a sort of Monroe Doctrine over the Far East.

HAPPY IRELAND.
BELFAST, Dec. 10. Following the approval to-day of the Ulster Parliament of the Irish Boundary Agreement, Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, declared he con-

British Company since the war is announced by Vickers, Limited, which will drastically write down its capital by many millions sterling as the result of greatly decreased earnings in recent years.

AUSTRALIAN NATIONALISTS CLEAR MAJORITY IN BOTH HOUSES.
MELBOURNE, Aus., Dec. 9. The final counting and checking of votes in the Australian General Election of November 14, have been completed. Not a single Labor candidate was elected to fill any vacant seats in the Senate. The Government now has twenty-seven supporters in the Senate and Labor nine. The Nationalist Party, of which the Premier is leader, has now a clear majority in the House of Representatives and the Senate.

BRITAIN ADOPTING PROTECTIVE POLICY.
LONDON, Dec. 9. Despite prolonged Laborite and Liberal protests that the Baldwin Government was putting through protectionist measures by backdoor methods, the House of Commons to-night passed the second reading of the Safeguarding of Industries Bill. This embodies three resolutions adopted last week imposing duties on cutlery, gloves and incandescent mantles.

REDUCING ITS CAPITAL.
LONDON, Dec. 9. The House of Commons to-day unanimously approved the Boundary Agreement.

SHIPPING YEAR ON RECORD.
LONDON, Dec. 9. This year has been the worst for shipping ever experienced. Lord Ingham declared to-day at the annual meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company over which he presided. He declared over one million tons of shipping were laid up and the few ships in commission earning sufficient money to cover their expenses.

CAPT. NELD, VESSEL TO SUE THE GOVERNMENT.
Newfoundland Schooner Sails For Ram Row.

NORTH SYDNEY, Dec. 1.—The Newfoundland schooner J. D. Hazen in command of Capt. E. O. Fudge, which has been in port for the past several days with a full load of Scotch and other whiskeys, sailed this morning for sea. She was detained here on account of the rough weather and high seas which swept the coast. During her stay here she contributed quite a bit to the Customs treasury by way of watchmen, food and so forth. The Hazen was here on several occasions in the liquor trade, and about a month ago she made her last appearance, after disposing of a cargo of stuff taken on at Demerara last spring. She had about sold out when the disastrous gale sprang up and before anything could be done was blown off to sea, the mate in charge barely succeeding in making her homeward at Belleoram, Nfld., where she was driven on the rocks and became rudderless and otherwise smashed up by the heavy seas which prevailed at the time.

London Police Say Women Menace

LONDON, Nov. 29.—London hobbles declare women are both deaf and blind, when they wear the latest head-gear. Tight hats, drawn down over the ear and eyes, frequently adorned with "blinders," which make it impossible for women to look to the side, are considered a poor equipment for crowded streets. "Women in modern hats are a menace to themselves, to drivers and to traffic policemen," one traffic officer at Piccadilly declared. "We try to save them, but it's a hard job. One needs his ears and eyes at his best in these days of motor traffic."

"Seven Chances"
Has 700 Brides

BUSTER KEATON JUST CAN'T SAY "NO" IN LATEST COMEDY.

When it comes to money and marriage in "Seven Chances," his latest Metro-Goldwyn comedy, coming today to the Nickel Theatre, Buster Keaton just can't say "no."

Buster starts out as a millionaire but, being of a most religious turn of mind, he sells all he has and gives the proceeds to the poor. Meanwhile some 700 women in bridal regalia answer his newspaper advertisement for a wife, believing him to have $7,000,000. And there the fun begins.

David Belasco considers "Seven Chances" the funniest stage comedy of recent years. And Buster Keaton has "gagged it up" until his film version is declared to be seven times as funny as the stage comedy was. Joseph M. Schenck purchased "Seven Chances" from David Belasco and released it through Metro-Goldwyn Pictures.

Buster's new leading woman in "Seven Chances" is Ruth Dwyer, who has just finished the lead in "White Fang." Miss Dwyer is the third leading woman Buster has had in the past year. Natalie Palmadge, Keaton, his wife, and Kathryn McGuire having played opposite to him in his previous comedies.

Buster also is supported by T. Roy Barnes, star of many Hollywood comedies and New York musical comedy successes; as well as by Snitz Edwards and Jules Cowles and a boy, at seventeen beautiful "baby" stars. "The Man on the Box" will be shown as an extra feature at the big Saturday matinee.

Evidently a Bargain

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, replying to questioners in the house of Commons said that if Great Britain's debt to the United States had been funded on the same terms as Italy's, the amount which the British Government would pay to the United States Government during the present year would be approximately $11,000,000 instead of $150,000,000.

Bargains For All

Prospero Will Make Another Trip

The Prospero, which sails for the Cook's Harbor service on Saturday, will be making her last trip for the season, and on return she will lay up to have some repairs made to her boilers. The steamer Kyle, which has been assisting the Prospero on the route, left Lewisporte at 10 o'clock this morning on the return run, and should reach port Sunday night or early Monday morning. The Railway management intends to keep the Kyle on the northern service until navigation closes.

Bumper Audience Delighted With Mystery Comedy

The opening performance of the mystery comedy, "Anne What's Her Name," was presented to a crowded hall at St. Patrick's Parish Hall last night, when the St. Patrick's Theatrical Troupe very ably acquitted their endeavor to give the audience a hearty laugh and an enjoyable evening. "Anne What's Her Name," is a play that is full of laughter from beginning to end. Every succeeding situation is comical to the extreme. The story deals with Anthony Wheat, who is wanted for the death of a girl and, being chased by the police he makes his way into the house where they are awaiting the arrival of Ebenezer Whittle. The former learns of this and poses as the one who is expected, getting away with him for a long time until the arrival of the true Ebenezer, then, however, the former claims to be his uncle.

Between the acts specialties were rendered by Misses Ida Howlett, Mary Jackman and Mr. R. P. Redmond, which greatly augmented the evening's entertainment. The G.L.B. Band played splendidly during the evening.

The performance, which is under the direction of Capt. O'Grady, was a decided success and will be repeated to-morrow evening.

Big Attraction at the Majestic

"Hearts of Oak," which opened last night at the Majestic Theatre, is a gripping story of hearts and the sea which has gained rather than lost strength in its transcription, to the silver sheet. With an excellent cast headed by Hobart Bosworth, the photoplay grips you from the start, just as did the play, and it holds you until the very last flicker of the camera. There is a heart throb, a smile or a tear in every inch of it.

Bosworth, who is well known for his portrayals of sea-faring men, plays the character of Terry Dunne, and his strong dramatic qualifications are tested to the limit only to add more glory to his estimable reputation. Pauline Starke as Crystal Herne and Theodore Von Eltz as Ned Fairweather commit themselves admirably in difficult roles.

The artists Hope and Menton scored a second success by reason of the excellence of their musical, and the many who heard them congratulated the management upon the splendid bill and talented artists.

To-night the same programme will be repeated. Much interest is now centered in the Pony Contest. The large number of school children who have already seen the Sletland Pony are enthusiastic campaigners for votes. Who will win?

The Pathé serial ten installments will commence at the Majestic Theatre with the usual first-class programme to-morrow night. The title "Ten Scars Make a Man" is a thrilling story, every chapter of which creates much interest and is very exciting to the finish.

Another Great Film Has Arrived

"KISS ME AGAIN" TO BE SHOWN AT THE NICKEL.

The sad truth that "when you get what you want, you don't want it any more" is the basic theme of "Kiss Me Again," the newest Warner Bros. production that will be featured at the Nickel Theatre beginning Monday.

"Kiss Me Again" is the latest vehicle for the directorial genius of the great Ernest Lubitsch, who has contributed more to the progress of screen development than any other director in the industry. Since his arrival in America, about two years ago, he has introduced an entirely new technique in screen production with "The Marriage Circle," his first picture for Warner Bros. He followed this by "Three Women" and now his third effort, "Kiss Me Again" is ready for the public.

Marie Prevost, Monte Blue, Clara Bow, John Roche and Willard Louis are the players chosen by Mr. Lubitsch to enact "Kiss Me Again" on the screen. These five favorites constitute the entire cast, which means that the action will be concentrated and well done; if the past performances of Mr. Lubitsch and each of these stars are the criterion.

Notes for Women!

I have just received a new shipment of Lantic Brown Sugar. It is packed in drums which conserves its superior qualities. You will find it best for making Christmas cakes and for all cooking purposes.

Before you buy brown sugar you will find it worth while to see Lantic Brown. In my opinion it is the best obtainable, but if you don't agree with me you are under no obligation to buy.

A cupful of Lantic Brown melted in a cup of boiling water makes a splendid syrup for pancakes or puddings; 8 pounds of Lantic Brown (which costs only 56 cents), when dissolved in 8 cupfuls of boiling water, is equal in strength but better in quality than a gallon of molasses.

Try Lantic Brown instead of white sugar in your coffee. Don't fail to use Lantic Icing on your Christmas Cakes. I sell it in one pound sealed packages. 'Twill improve them wonderfully.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Dec. 9th.—Up and to seek for news of the City Election in my morning sheet, and do find that the fight for 6th place lies between Mrs. Earle and Mr. Ryan. But when the last count comes, Ryan wins by a small margin. The others chosen are Messrs. Fitzgibbon, Tait, Martin, Brophy, and Outerbridge. The indeed a pity that no woman was elected albeit Mrs. Earle did indeed make a pretty fight of it for which she deserves congratulations. Talking with other merchants this day and learn from them how the retail trade in the city is not so good as in former years, for which they give a variety of reasons, and one of these the fine weather which do cause people to hesitate about buying winter clothes. This night to the Nickel Theatre, where greatly amused at Syd Chaplin playing in "The Man on the Box," and is methinks a greater comedian than is his famous brother. But Lord, how annoying are those people that do read aloud the titles and methinks they should be all taken together and drowned in the waters of the harbour.

Expects Airdale to Refloat To-Night

Messrs. Harvey & Co. received word this morning stating that a large quantity of flour had been jettisoned from the S.S. Airdale and that it was expected the ship would refloat to-night. The Airdale which went ashore near Quebec, has about 8,000 barrels of flour for St. John's and a large quantity of cement destined for a South American port. Some of the flour has been salvaged by lighters. The ship will be towed into Quebec and after repairs are made she will proceed here.

Personal

Mrs. S. Jackson, who is one of the passengers on the Newfoundland, en route to England has paid her second visit to the city. On her last trip she was a passenger on S.S. Digby when that ship assisted in the towing of the Krona by the S. S. Winifred.

NICKEL WILL RAISE PRICE OF PRODUCT.

There is still a heavy demand for International Nickel shares around 45, or within four points of double the par value of the shares. Two or three brokerage houses have circularized their clients recommending that they purchase the stock. It is understood that there have been quite a number of tips from New York to buy the shares. This is generally regarded as a danger sign. It is understood, however, that there has been a distinct improvement in the sales of nickel and nickel alloys, and a new bullish factor has been the announcement of the International Co. that it intends to increase the price of nickel for 1926 delivery. It is being estimated that earnings to date are on a basis of $5,000,000 yearly, while high prices for products will materially add to this.

British News Notes

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 7 (C. P.)—"I shall never buy or start another newspaper, except for defensive purposes or as a reprisal," declared Lord Beaverbrook in an advertisement concerning the Sunday Express, one of his trinity of journals. The exception which his Lordship indicates is capable, of course of a very wide interpretation.
 In an article discussing how the big financier has come to dominate London newspaper ownership "Truth" remarks:—
 "The dark horse in the newspaper world to-day is Lord Beaverbrook. He is the ablest man in the business. He has money, brains, youth, ambition. He has also personality. He is a man who takes long views; any observer can see that in his newspaper policy he is not concerning himself so much with the dividends for the day, as with building for the future. Lord Beaverbrook is gaining in experience and ripening in judgment, but he still handicaps himself by impetuous and amateurish exhibitions enough as a newspaper man. He will go far if he is capable of concentration on newspapers and manages to impress upon himself that responsibility goes with power."
 Rumors which have been going around Fleet Street for some time concerning the fate of Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail, and its stable companions, the Evening News and the Weekly Dispatch, are thus disposed of in a paragraph in the Mail:—
 "A paragraph appears in the current number of G. K.'s Weekly which is edited by Mr. Gilbert Chesterton, the humorist, stating that negotiations have taken place between Lord Rothermere and Sir William Berry for the purchase of The Daily Mail, Evening News and Weekly Dispatch.
 "There is not a word of truth in the suggestion. No negotiations have ever taken place between Lord Rothermere and Sir William Berry for the purchase of those newspapers or any part of the property, nor have any such negotiations ever been suggested at any time or in any circumstances. No offer would be entertained. The whole story is entirely and utterly untrue."

Lord Leith Dead

MILLIONAIRE PEER WHO WAS ONCE A CLERK.
 The ancient curse of Fyvie, which avers that no laird will ever be succeeded by his son, has been tragically recalled by the death of Lord Leith of Fyvie at Hartwell House, near Aylesbury, Bucks. Lord Leith was the first baron, and in his 79th year. While serving in the Navy in 1870, Alexander Forbes-Leith, as he was then, met Miss Mary January, the beautiful daughter of Mr. Derrick Algernon January, an ironmaster of St. Louis, U.S.A. They fell in love, and the young man asked the girl's father for his consent to the marriage. Mr. January, practical business man that he was, pointed out to the young officer that his pay in the Navy was a slender foundation on which to build a home, and offered him a place in his own factory if he would leave the Navy. Forbes-Leith accepted the offer, married the girl of his heart, and began a business life as a clerk in his father-in-law's factory. Within a few years he had become one of the steel kings of America. He retired a millionaire, returned to Scotland, and bought the ancient home of his forefathers, Fyvie Castle, Aberdeenshire, for £175,000. The castle is supposed to have been built from the stones of a ruined abbey in the neighborhood. One of these stones was thrown into the river Ythan, which runs close to the castle, and according to the legend until it has been removed there shall be no male heir to the estates. Strangely enough, many of the lairds preceding Lord Leith had no male issue. The "curse" was transmitted to the newcomer. His only son, at the age of 19, died from enteric at Pietermaritzburg during the South African war. Mr. A. R. Burn, his grandson, then became the heir, but was killed by a shell in the trenches in Belgium in 1914. Lord Leith therefore leaves no heir. He is survived by his wife and a daughter, who married Colonel Sir Charles Rosden Burn.

Awake Too Soon

Lord North (Prime Minister, 1770-82) was accustomed to sleep during the Parliamentary harangues of his adversaries, leaving Sir Grey Cooper to note down anything remarkable. During a debate on shipbuilding, a tedious speaker treated the subject historically, beginning with a description of Noah's Ark, tracing the progress of the art regularly downwards. When he came to the Spanish armada, Sir Grey inadvertently woke the slumbering Premier, who inquired at what era the honorable gentleman had arrived.
 Being answered: "We are now in the reign of Queen Elizabeth," "Sir Grey," said he, "why did you not let me sleep a century or two more?"

Catching Snakes for a Living

A writer in 'The Wide World Magazine' gives an interesting account of a strange tribe of snake-hunters whom he met in the course of a trip through the Sunderbunds, a network of islands and creeks at the head of the Bay of Bengal. He writes:—
 "They exist solely by means of catching snakes, which they sell to private collectors and the Zoological Gardens in Calcutta. By snakes I do not mean harmless grass snakes and the like; on the contrary, their choice is in the direction of the venomous and deadly cobra, the dread hamadryad, and the great python.
 "I have seen these amazing people approach a deadly 'spectacled' cobra and catch it with bare hands with the ease and dexterity of a man picking up a piece of rope! They usually carry with them a long polished bamboo of fine balance and weight, having at its end a blunt, two-pronged fork, and also another bamboo with a sharp spearhead, but not once during the couple of days I watched them did the hunters have occasion to use these implements.
 "The poison is apparently not extracted from the fangs of the snakes by these strange people—at least, so they told me. In view of that statement you can imagine my horror to see one of the women teasing a great eight-foot cobra, freshly caught, and not even wincing when the hideous thing struck at and bit her on the cheek-bone! Indeed, she laughed and continued her teasing, what time my mind was reeling with horror, for I expected at any moment to see the poor woman fall back and expire.
 "A man, however, seeing the anxious expression on my face, explained that the members of this tribe were immune to the effects of the snake's bites."

Another "Steve"

One of the outstanding features of the racing season that is now closing has been the astonishing success of Gordon Richards, who has ridden more winners this year than any other jockey.

Not for many a year has a young rider made a bigger impression on the great race-going public. It was only four years ago that he made his first appearance in the saddle, yet now he is in the front rank of jockeys.
 A modest, level-headed, and popular youth, Richards has within his grasp an income that many a city magnate would not despise. One well-known trainer predicts that he will eclipse the achievements of riders like Archer and Tod Sloan.

4 Duels in a Forest

JUNKER KILLS HIS LAST OPPONENT.

The practice of duelling continues to be the accepted way of settling quarrels among men of the upper classes in certain parts of Germany. Public attention has lately been thrice drawn to the matter:
 (1) By the Pope, who condemned the practice in a speech to a pilgrimage of German students.
 (2) By an attempt of the Nationalists in the Reichstag to make duelling punishable for officers, and
 (3) By the recent case of Boguslaw Sommits, a Pomeranian Junker, who is to be tried for duelling.
 A quarrel at a hunt breakfast at his castle led the Junker to challenge four guests, three of whom were neighbouring landowners. At 3 a.m. on July 3 his opponents and the seconds met in a clearing in the forest, and he fought four duels with pistols one after the other.
 In the first three no blood was shed, but in the fourth the Junker killed Walter Helweke, who was shot in the head. He has therefore to answer a charge of manslaughter as well as one of duelling.

Ancient or Modern

TORONTO, Dec. 4. (By Canadian Press)—Principal Hulton in a lecture pleads for "backgrounds" and the Victorian type of woman, "restful and pleasant; the modern woman lives in garish limelight which makes the eyes ache." He imagined some defender of the modern woman saying, "That's all Victorian hypocrisy." What is garishness? Rouge and carmine and lipstick and black dye and beauty parlours? What if our young women wear like troopers and dress like chorus girls all superficial merely. Superficial certainly, but the superficial is sometimes the outward and visible sign of the inward and spiritual malady, of the only serious malady; irreligion and infidelity reckless pessimist; and a feverish restlessness. The modern woman is in an unusual number of cases purposeless, resourceless, and where she is purposeful to no purpose except auction bridge, and resourceful only in killing time.

London's Lady Mayoress

DIES AFTER SERVICE AT ST. PAUL'S.
 LONDON, Dec. 2.—Three tragic deaths have occurred in connection with the passing of Queen Alexandra. Saturday evening the lady mayoress, wife of Sir William Pryke, lord mayor of London, died suddenly from heart disease after she had attended a morial service in St. Paul's Cathedral. In the afternoon Canon Westlake, custodian of Westminster Abbey, who had overtaken himself in arranging for the funeral of Queen Alexandra, went home ill. "I am afraid it has been too much for me," his wife heard him murmur as she sat at the bedside. Immediately afterward the canon died.

 At Sunderland on Wednesday the warden of a church was killed as he was muffled the bells for tolling during yesterday's service in Westminster. A large bell which had been tilted fell over and pinned him to the floor of the belfry, crushing his head and body.

Salt Water for Teeth

The best thing to use for the daily cleansing of the teeth is salt water—a teaspoonful of kitchen salt in one-third of a tumbler of water, said Sir Harry Baldwin, surgeon-dentist to the King, in a recent lecture. Pastes and powders, he continued, might be used for occasional polishing of teeth.
 Pyorrhoea can be avoided if the edges of the gums are kept tight and hard by daily friction. Every part of the gums, back and front, should be rubbed vigorously with a tooth brush night and morning. Although pyorrhoea does not cause pain, it is a serious disease that might eat through the bone of the jaw and penetrate to the nose.
 The destructive action of acids resulting from stagnation of starch foods in the mouth is the cause of the decay of teeth. Fruit is an excellent thing to stimulate the formation of an alkaline saliva, and an antidote to the acid.

The Sheik's Car

The Air Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, made this new contribution to the stories about a certain famous make of car when I met him recently.
 An Arab sheik was being taken across a very bumpy patch of desert in Transjordan in one of these cars, and so bad was the going that at last the car overturned and the sheik was thrown out. Instead of turning in wrath upon his driver, the Arab picked himself up and apologized profusely, saying: "I'm so sorry, I have not learned to ride one of these things yet."

A Family Affair

The revival at the Lyceum Theatre, London, of "The Man in Dress Clothes" is remarkable if only for the fact that in it will appear three members of one family—Mr. Seymour Hicks, his wife, popularly known as Ellaline Terriss, and their daughter, Betty Hicks.
 Miss Hicks is a vivacious girl whose stage career, predestined though one would have thought it to be, is really the result of an accident of fortune. She had no thought of going on the stage, she told me, until last year, when, while she was in Australia with her parents, several members of the company went down with typhoid. Miss Hicks then undertook to play one of the vacant parts.
 She told me this story the other day: "Do you know," remarked a rather conceited actress, "I was offered £200 a week to stay in New York." "Really?" said a spiteful friend. "The offer was made in London, of course?"

"Touched" Them!

Recently Prebendary Carlile, head of the Church Army, was dining with one of the rich city companies. Asked to reply to a toast, he mentioned that just before the dinner he had arranged a supper in his own kitchen for men rescued from the Thames Embankment, the menu being thick pea-soup and bread.
 At this point one of the guests near him sprang to his feet and exclaimed: "Here, I can't stand this!" Seizing a plate, he put a pound-note into it, afterwards handing it to his neighbour. In spite of the chairman's protests that it was out of order, the plate went half-way round the table, and a large sum was collected for the "down and outs."

Void Marriage

Made in England
 Because Dame Antoinette Dupont went to England to marry her fiance, Joseph John Gooch, in order to avoid being married under the laws of her domicile—the Province of Quebec—the marriage was annulled by Mr. Justice Bruneau in the Superior Court on Saturday. The evidence showed that the pair had gone through a form of marriage before a Registrar in the district of Poplar, London, England. It transpired that the marriage has not even fulfilled the requirements of the law of England, as the parties had not acquired sufficient residence in that country prior to their union. Dame Dupont further pointed out that she was a Roman Catholic and Mr. Gooch was not, this making the marriage a nullity under canonical law. Mr. Gooch offered no defence.

The New Chrysler Six, with Startling New Results.

Startling new results are attained in the new Chrysler Six—results made possible by the kind of engineering and manufacturing genius which never rests satisfied.

Walter P. Chrysler and his staff of brilliant engineers, with the fine Chrysler manufacturing facilities, had every excuse—every reason, some might say—to rest on the laurels their cars have won. Inevitably, the great tide of public approval would have carried the Chrysler Six to still more conspicuous success.

But Mr. Chrysler, his producing organization and his engineers have never relaxed for a moment their labors to emphasize and enhance its wonderful performance qualities.

The most surprising thing about the greater Chrysler Six is not its new lower price—remarkable though THAT achievement is.

Its most impressive feature is the amazing ability which succeeded in improving the quality and the performance of a car that everywhere had met with overwhelming public acclaim—AND WHICH MARKED A REVOLUTIONARY ADVANCE OVER ALL PREVIOUS PRACTICE AND RESULTS.

In this new Chrysler Six, the power is increased approximately 30 per cent. The 70-mile speed is more easily and quickly attained. The breath-taking get-away and acceleration are still swifter. In smoothness, this new Chrysler actually exceeds the former super-smoothness introduced by Chrysler.

The beauty originated by Chrysler—and which still belongs to Chrysler alone—is re-expressed in refined and attractive body lines and new body colors, with Chrysler-designed closed bodies built by Fisher.

Syrian Views of Syria's Troubles

The campaign against the French Mandate in Syria is gaining ground daily, according to Paris press dispatches, which relate at the same time that France will have soon re-established military control in Syria, without the necessity of using an excessive number of troops. Now the Syrian Press, so little heard from usually, have very definite ideas about the situation, and they contrast interestingly with the views of British and French newspapers. Thus we find some Syrian papers published in this country which defend France's stand in Syria, while others condemn it without qualification. There are those that concede France has committed grave offenses, but they charge that the Syrian revolutionists are far from being without guilt, and they say that the complete independence of Syria, without a guarantee for the security of the Christians there would be a great calamity. But the serenity of many Syrians toward the French appears in the Syrian newspaper Mirat-ul-Gharb (New York), which quotes a line from an old Arab poet that "the sword is more truthful than the pen," and goes on to say: "How often had the Syrians submitted petition after petition to the League of Nations, complaining of losses and humiliations their country had suffered under the French mandate but it was as if they were crying out to stones or seeking mercy from idols. To-day, however, when the Syrians have girded on their swords, have shouldered their guns, and marched against the tyrannical Power to address it with tongues of fire, the whole world listens to the voice of Syria, even the League of Nations listens, but it had persistently turned a deaf ear to the free sons of Syria—even France listens, which met their every plea with contempt and disdain."

"Who to the unrighteous murderers," cries Al-Bayan, a Druse newspaper, published in New York, which speaks of France as an "evil nation," that was "not content with robbing the Syrians of their rights, their country, and their properties, with putting the chains of slavery around their necks, but makes bold further to slay them in all barbarism, and demolish their dwellings, making no distinction between those who defended themselves and those who were merely peaceful men and women." This newspaper describes the Damascus incident as "an offense unparalleled in the history of mankind," and adds that "there is no doubt that France, who condones in herself what she condemns in others, would, if she could, eliminate the entire population of Syria, in order to establish her hated mandate," (criticizing France from a different angle. Al-Hoda (New York) lays the blame on "three criminals," whom it particularizes as the former High Commissioner, General Sarrail, his subordinate, Carbillot, and Sultan asha al-Attrash, and it goes on to say: "Again and again we say France is now reaping in conflict what she sowed in negligence. The revolt against her in Syria is only the result of her policy of favoritism, of indifference, and of putting things in the wrong place. She preferred her enemies to her friends. She ignored those who were sincere toward her, in order to please those who were rebellious. France herself encouraged Sultan Pasha-al-Atrash to revolt, for she had given him and others pardon, when firmness and justice of treatment were her evident duty."

The Syrian Eagle (Brooklyn), which has relentlessly attacked the Druse revolutionary bands for their manner of dealing with the Christian villages of Hauran, Wadil-Ajam and other sections, is indifferent to the nationalist aims of the Syrian revolutionists, and it says: "No Christian objects to the establishment of a national government in Syria, whether that government be made up of Druses or of Moslems. The Christians in general wish liberty and independence for their homeland, but every Christian protests against the formation of a Syrian Government which should fail to guarantee the security of the Syrian Christians in their own country."

Running all through the editorials of the Syrian press in this country, and from a large part of the discussion in the Syrian papers published in Syria, which have reached the United States, is the fear that the violence of the Druse and Arab revolutionists may lead to a repetition of the dreadful days of 1860, when thousands of Christians in Lebanon and Syria were massacred in a general uprising against them of the Druses and Mohammedans. The fact that most of the revolutionists in Syria are Mohammedans and Druses, also a great many Christians have joined them, are told, has given rise to the suspicion of many Christian writers that the revolution is a religious outbreak. But a correspondent of Al-Hoda in Tripoli, Syria, declares that the chief cause of the trouble in Syria is the hatred of the Mohammedans for France, a hatred, he declares, which dates farther back than the appointment of General Sarrail. This correspondent tells us of a certain Mohammedan notable in Beirut, who, on the occasion when the one-armed French General Gouraud presented some chandeliers to a mosque in that city, said bitterly: "By Allah, if he cuts off his other arm and gives it to us with half of France we can not like him or his country!" Those who are in a position to know the situation, this correspondent goes on to say, "know that the enemies of the mandate were preparing for this revolt as long ago as the days of General Gouraud, but the advent of General Weingand obstructed their plans and put an end to their activities." He adds: "They were jubilant at General Weingand's resignation and at the appointment of General Sarraill, especially as they believed that General Sarraill would strike the Catholics a death-blow. But when they saw he was impotent before the clerical tide, and that he returned to the policy of his predecessors, which favored the Catholics and respected their rights and traditions, they were disappointed and lost their hope in the mandate."

According to some Syrian editors in this country, it is difficult to determine from the conflicting reports of the movements of the Druse and Arab revolutionists how far they are inspired by nationalist motives and how far by religious. Al Karmel, a Palestine newspaper, edited by a Christian, in reviewing the activities of the revolutionists around Damascus and in Wadil-Ajam, remarks that "most of these bands pay no attention to robbery and pillage, but content themselves with despoiling of their own villages by which they are attacked. They themselves do not attack except when they are attacked." This journal believes that the revolutionary Syrian bandits are "saturated with a purely patriotic spirit." Another newspaper, edited by a Christian, the Damascus Aleph-Ba, advises us that "the bandits operating in the Chuts of Damascus, when they were reinforced, attacked the villages of Al-Shantuniah, Afrees and Al-Nashabiah," but it adds, "they did not carry away anything except arms and provisions they found in the homes of prominent citizens who sided with the Government."

"These Christian refugees from Majdal-Shams, which was attacked by the Druses, give an interview to Mirat-ul-Shark, a Christian newspaper published in Palestine, in which one of them says:

"What the press say of assaults by the Druses on refugee Christians is undoubtedly true. But all the blame falls on the French. The Druses never attack unless they are attacked. Through its agents in Majdal-Shams and other Christian towns, the French Government urged the Christian inhabitants to desert their towns, and tempted them with free transportation. To my misfortune, I was persuaded by Satan to leave my town, Majdal-Shams, and ride in a large automobile which was guarded by three French cavalrymen. On the road we were met by a band of Druses which, when they ascertained that we were native Arabs, left us and went their way. But certain French soldiers, who had taken to ambush, opened fire on the Druses. Whereupon the Druses returned fire, rushed upon the travellers, robbed them of their goods, killed the three French cavalrymen and resumed their journey laden with booty."—Literary Digest.

Getting to the Roots of the Disease and a committee has been set up to give its attention to the study of the disease. It is disconcerting to learn that the physique of the children in some localities is deteriorating, as a teacher writes:—

In my opinion, poor housing, very elementary sanitary conditions and the poor feeding have a great deal to do with the production of children who attend my school. Consequently, healthy, but some of the laborers' children never get a really well cooked dinner, have tea and bread.

The youngsters drawn from the crowded homes of Liverpool and other looked in better health than the children of this particular village. Another rural school the pupils said to be more like school children than the little ones of this village. In another rural school the pupils are said to be more like school children than the 'robust' checked children one would expect to find." In Sir George Newman's opinion, these conditions, due to the migration of the stocks from certain districts, behind them almost derelict and deserted villages. Obviously fresh air does not counteract the effects of food and bad housing. Parents note with profit a warning that often between the ages of 11 and 12, often enjoy what is really "flu" or "temporary" health. That is the germ of disease are at work in the young frame, but the condition masked by the "vital forces" at this period of life, are struggling against the ascendant.

Consumption, so long the scourge of this island, is yielding to improved conditions, better nutrition, the exclusion of infection, and direct treatment. The public, always on the look-out for swift "cures" should take heed of the admonition that the royal road is at all likely to be covered which will create a safe immunity to disease. The best conditions for the cure of attack and defense, just established, are complementary. Sir George last word is that the school child or the place of the parent's school medical service can do nothing more than to give a warning that their part by a fuller appreciation of the elementary laws of health.

Duke and Pastor Have Controversy

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Argyll people are interested in a lively correspondence between the Duke of Argyll and Rev. Scouler Thomson, minister at Inverchoulain, which has just been revealed in the press. The correspondence arose over a little difference between the Duke and the minister respecting the whereabouts of a font which has been missing from the Caird Church, and statements made at a meeting of the Dunoon presbytery with regard thereto.

The Duke wrote to the minister taking the latter to task for a reference at the presbytery meeting to "abominations" in connection with the matter, and said:

"The innate quarrelsomeness of Presbyterianism is everywhere notorious. Even now they are setting all Canada by the ears with their foolish bickering over union schemes. But what is more serious is Presbyterianism's laps in many English and American districts into Unitarianism or other heresies. I intend to have religious peace throughout the marches of my lordship of Cowal, and I shall write setting you some penances."

After a period of silence, Rev. Mr. Thomson replied:

"Long and silently I have waited for the imposition of penances befitting my misdeeds. I must now presume that your Grace is following illustrious family precedent by postponing valor to discretion. Gone happily are the days when a Campbell sheriff, a Campbell jury, a Campbell prosecutor and a Campbell hangman in a Campbell court could glut their vengeance on a Campbell chieftain."

In the letter the minister makes a playful reference to the Duke as "one to whom Providence has not granted a humorous mind."

SIR G. NEWMAN AND HEALTH OF CHILDREN.

"Never better in the history of England has there been so much lightened and organized effort for the half of child welfare as at present," writes that great public health officer, Sir George Newman, Chief Medical Officer of the Board of Education, in his annual report. The total amount of defects treated or under treatment during the period under review, including dental troubles and malocclusion, was 911,000. The L.C.C. provided treatment for no fewer than 228,000 children. Though the medical service has been in operation since 1903, the number of sick children at the commencement of this life is as large as ever. The parents have little or no change in the cause or origin of disease in school children. This statement instantly suggests the need for diligent research on the efforts of the State to raise the standard of health care to meet the highest possible success. This need is forcibly illustrated by the well-known prevalence of tooth and adenoids. Every week thousands of children are undergoing operations for these diseases, operations which as suggested in our last issue, search into the causes might be expected, keenly interested in.

George Veizina is Through After 18 Years of Service

Veteran Canadian Goalie, Best Game, Ordered Out for Good by Doctors.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—George Veizina, veteran goal keeper of theadiens, has been ordered out of the game for good by his physicians after eighteen years' service. He has taken ill a few weeks ago with a cold, but few knew how really he was. Since his confinement in his home in Chicoutimi.

Veizina left his team mates yesterday without a word to indicate he wasn't coming back, and took train home. The beginning of the season last Saturday night when a veteran collapsed in the dressing after the first period of the game, the Pittsburgh "battle."

His former team mates were told until today of his exit from the Montreal Sparring Club, through a telegram from Holm, Dec. 4, last night.

"Perhaps they will play tonight," they think I am coming on," he said when requesting that his going be kept from the team until after he had gone.

Our Twenty-Four Page Paper

To-day The Telegram appears for the first time as a twenty-four page issue, and in presenting to its readers an extended copy at the same rate as before, it expresses the hope that its expansion will tend to add to its usefulness in the public service, and enable it still further to cater to the needs of the community in the field of journalism.

By the addition of a four page unit on November 7th, 1924 The Telegram was increased from 16 to 20 pages, but it was soon found that a further addition was necessary and preliminary arrangements to that end were at once undertaken.

When the blue prints arrived for the new unit, we found that they called for an extension of 18 inches in the length of the press. This, with our limited floor space, we could not spare, so Mr. Martin, when in New York the past summer, had several conferences with the Duplex agents to try and induce them to overcome the difficulty by building the paper hoist frames higher. He could not get them to alter their plans, so the unit had to come as originally set out.

Here again the genius of Mr. Mercer overcame our difficulty. By building in two steel arms on the paper frames and attaching them to the frame of the main press, 18 inches of valuable floor space was saved and a lot of inconvenience avoided. To Mr. Frank Marshall, who so ably carried out Mr. Mercer's ideas, and with the aid of his assistant turned out a job of which we feel proud, our thanks are due. Of Mr. Wm. Taylor and his efficient staff of electricians we cannot speak too highly for the manner in which they dismantled the old motor and installed the new press motor. They worked night and day so as to have everything in readiness, and the result of their efforts and ingenuity was most successful.

To the other members of the permanent staff of the press room the highest praise is due for the tireless manner in which they pushed the work forward, and at the same time carried out the regular routine. The installing of the new unit necessitated taking down a four page section of the paper hoists, but in spite of this there was no break in the service and it was possible to issue regularly a 16 page paper.

The milestones passed during the career of 'The People's Paper' during its forty-six years of service are as follows: First published, April 3, 1879. Removed to present building, Jan. 11, 1894. First 12-page issue July 1, 1906. 16 Page Tubular Plate Press installed Dec. 31, 1917. First 20-page edition, Nov. 1, 1924. First 24-page edition Dec. 10, 1925.

The New Council

The Telegram extends a welcome to the new Councilors

and commiserates those who through no fault of their own were unsuccessful in the contest.

The final count shows three of the members selected from the new aspirants to office and the return of three of the old Council. The combination should be productive of good results, as to the experience of those who have dealt with the affairs of the city is added an equal proportion of new blood.

The support given to Messrs. Outerbridge, Martin and Ryan must be taken as a vote of confidence of the electorate of the service, and we trust it will inspire them to greater effort. The newly elected candidates, Messrs. Fitzgibbon, Tait and Brophy, who head the poll, and from whom Mr. Fitzgibbon has been chosen by the citizens as the Deputy Mayor, have reason to feel honoured by the trust imposed in them, and we feel confident that they will prove worthy of that trust.

The election is the first in the history of this country in which lady candidates have entered the field. That they have not been returned is not altogether a matter of surprise, as it naturally takes times to enable the public to adapt themselves to the new order of things. Their standing in the list gives them no occasion to feel discouraged, and the close fight of Mrs. Earle for the sixth place is a matter which entitles her to hearty congratulations.

We should like to avail of this occasion to extend our congratulations to Hon. Tasker Cook upon his return by acclamation to the office of Mayor. The position is one of great responsibility, and requires of the occupant many personal obligations which make heavy demands on his time, energy, and means. The Mayor has shown commendable public spirit in accepting the chair for a second term, and we trust that his duties will be lightened not only by the fullest co-operation of his Council, but by that of the public whose practical support is essential to the success of any undertaking.

The Return of His Grace the Archbishop

The popular reception given His Grace Archbishop Roche this morning on the safe return to his diocese after his visit to Rome was appropriate to the notable occasion, and was a practical expression of the respect and esteem in which he is held by his own flock and the community generally. This is the first occasion, we believe, when His Grace has made the Ad Limina visit in person, and in this instance it has a special significance, as it took place during Holy Year, an event which occurs but once in every quarter of a century.

The Telegram extends a hearty welcome to the Archbishop, and trusts that his visit has had results which will be beneficial not only to his people but to himself personally.

Talented Musician's Services Recognized

The announcement that His Holiness the Pope has conferred the Distinguished Order of Knight of St. Gregory upon Mr. Charles Hutton on recognition of his long and valuable services to his Church will, we feel certain, be learned by the whole community with gratification. Mr. Hutton's services not only to his Church, but to St. John's generally, cannot be too highly spoken of. Possessed of great musical talent, he has ever been to the fore in lending his assistance to any and every worthy object, and it can be said that he has been largely instrumental in having raised the musical and dramatic standard to that high position which it holds here to-day. We congratulate Mr. Hutton and trust that the city will long have him in its midst to continue the great work which in the past he has so ably and willingly performed.

Enjoyable Social at George St. Basement

An enjoyable entertainment was held in George Street Church basement last night, under the auspices of the Women's Guild. Rev. C. H. Johnson presided, and the following programme was sung through before a capacity audience: Solo, Miss Jean Taylor; duet, Messrs. Lawrence and Calvert; reading, Mrs. L. C. Mow; solo, Miss Ross; solo, Mr. Whiteway; duet, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Mow. The concert proved thoroughly enjoyable, the different performers rendering their numbers in a manner which won well merited applause. At the close of the programme tea was served.

St. Joseph's Christmas Tree

The Christmas Tree in aid of St. Joseph's Convent was opened by Rev. Father Flippy at St. Joseph's Hall yesterday afternoon and was largely patronized. The chief attraction was a large Christmas tree situated in the centre of the room, which was laden down with a good selection of wares, principally presents suitable for the Xmas season. The ladies of the Parish served teas during the afternoon and evening. The tables were largely patronized. The sale will be continued this afternoon and night.

To-Night's Radio Concert AT WESLEY CHURCH BASEMENT.

All local listeners-in know of Station SWMC, which has increased interest in radio products and reception within our midst. The transmitting outfit of the station is most efficient and possesses the latest microphones and speech amplifier manufactured by the Canadian Marconi. The whole affair was the venture of a church, but of a minister of a church in the city, to minister to his shut-ins. The income for running it has been voluntary on the part of listeners-in, and the concert to-night is an effort to meet expenses incurred in some serial equipment, new transmitting tubes and accessories which were necessary for the efficient operation of the machine during the Fall and Winter seasons. An excellent programme has been prepared and musicians of distinction are taking part, and it is hoped that the basement of Wesley Church will be crowded to-night and make a success of the effort that will mean so much to the station, which Sunday after Sunday ministers to those who enjoy it.

Enjoyable Dance

In aid of St. George's Day Parade Committee, a most enjoyable dance was held in the Gaiety Hall last night, under the direction of Misses Gladys Wiseman and Leah Rendell, who had everything arranged to ensure the pleasure of all who attended. The music was supplied by the Prince's Orchestra, in their well known manner and everyone of the regular programme of twelve dances and several extras were encored several times. During an interval supper was served in an acceptable manner.

His Grace Archbishop Roche Returns From Rome.

Vociferous Welcome Accorded the Distinguished Prelate.

The joy bells of the Roman Catholic Cathedral pealing forth this morning shortly after nine o'clock announced the arrival home by S.S. Rosalind of His Grace Archbishop Roche, who had been on an Ad Limina visit to Rome. Quite a number of citizens had assembled at the Red Cross pier to welcome His Grace, who was accompanied by Monsignor McDermott and Rev. Dr. Greene. The Executive members of the Reception Committee, the Priests of the Diocese, with the Christian Brothers, were the first to greet the returning prelate. Before His Grace entered his motor to drive to the Palace, cheers were called for by Mr. Howley, R.C.G., head of the Reception Committee, and given with a will. As the motor proceeded along Military Road, cheers went up from hundreds of school children who, bearing flags and streamers of the papal colors, lined the route to the Palace. The Mount Cashel Band was also present and rendered appropriate music. After the reception the children disbanded to enjoy a holiday, which was given them in honor of the event.

The official reception arranged for His Grace will take place to-night. All the Catholic Societies in the city will meet in the various halls at 7.15 and will proceed to St. Bon's Campus where a joint parade will form under the direction of Major J. J. O'Grady, M.B.E. The Societies will move off accompanied by the C.L.E., C.C.C., and Mount Cashel Bands, proceeding by way of LeMarchant Road to Patrick St., thence to Water Street and the National War Memorial, where a wreath will be placed in memory of the Glorious Dead. From this point the procession will move to the Cathedral Square via Cochrane Street and Military Road to the Cathedral where an illuminated address of welcome will be presented.

Prospero in Port

S.S. Prospero, Capt. Wes Kean, returned from the Cook's Harbor service yesterday at 5 p.m., after a very pleasant passage for this season of the year. The Prospero brought a few car loads of freight, and the following saloon passengers:—Messrs. Warr, Horwood, Neville, Kelloway, Fowler, Bester, Jaffet and child; Messrs. J. Reeves, McDonald (2), Malone, Mercer, Merriman, Fontaine, Elms, Jones, Flynn, Noble, Reid, Alock, Hawkins, Ginn, Noseworthy, Maddock, Butt, Stratton, Fowler, White, Roy, Way; Misses N. Flynn, McDonald, Fontaine, Zabor, Haynes, Fowler, Whittan and Nurse Layton. Capt. Kean reports the weather excellent all through the trip, and all ports of call were made without the least trouble. Returning south the ship called at Grosis Island and brought home all the people who had been delayed there during the trip. A number of men were also landed at Hampton to engage at logging camps with H. J. Crowe during the winter months. Winter has set in as yet on the coast, although the harbors along the French shore are frozen solid.

Christmas Railway Fares

In order to accommodate people travelling during Christmas and New Year, the Railway have granted excursion fares between all stations and steamship ports of call. The Christmas tickets will be valid for going trip from December 20th to December 26th, and returning up to and including December 29th, while the New Year tickets will sell from December 27th to January 1st, and returning up to January 6th. By paying just a little more than the excursion fare, people could buy tickets for going trip from December 20th to January 1st, valid for return passage up to and including January 6th.

Diocesan Magazine

CHRISTMAS NUMBER. The Christmas Number of the Diocesan Magazine, a copy of which we have just received, is most seasonable in the matter it contains and will be read with interest by its subscribers. The address delivered by His Lordship at the National Funeral Service for the late Queen Mother, appears in the issue and the Bishop also gives in it his Christmas Message. The following ecclesiastical appointments appear in the Diocesan:—Rev. Walter Bugden, to Tack's Beach; Rev. M. B. Way, to Bay de Verde; and Rev. G. H. Seavay, to Bay Roberts, as Curate.

Annual Sale CHILD WELFARE ASSOCIATION.

The Child Welfare Association are holding their annual Sale of Work in the Presbyterian Hall this afternoon, which promises to be a very successful undertaking. Lady Howard will declare the sale open at 3 o'clock.

Portia Sails West

S.S. Portia, Capt. Connors, sailed for the westward at 10 o'clock this morning, taking a full freight and the following saloon passengers:—Mr. and Mrs. Mayo, Mr. Judge, Mr. Hartigan, Mr. Giovanni, Miss Rodgers P. J. Murphy, besides 28 in steerage. Other passengers for points on the S.W. Coast will board the steamer at Argentia.

Rosalind Arrives in Port

S.S. Rosalind arrived in port at 3.30 after a run of 46 hours from Halifax. Last night when passing Cape Pine rain, sleet and snow with high wind was encountered. The ship was delayed for 33 hours on the passage from New York to Halifax. Dense fog was run into off the Sound, and the ship was compelled to lay to. When the fog lifted there were 33 other steamers held at anchor within sight of the Rosalind. The following passengers arrived:—His Grace Archbishop Roche, Rev. Msgr. McDermott, Rev. Dr. Greene, Bernard Parsons, Gladys Avery, Frank Fowlow, Maude Fowlow, Fred Bartlett, Irma Greenberg, Kelvin Greenberg, Mary Adams, Michael Duff, Lilla Ross, Rowena Luther, Abe Gevirtz, Alexander MacLean, Major Kelly, William Yetman, Dennis Doyle, Timothy Hawco, Patrick O'Brien, Wm. Murphy, Bernard Costello, Edward Joy, James Kelly, John Gushue, Bridget Gushue, John Gushue (Jr.), Patrick Gushue, Geo. Gushue, Leo Williams, Arthur Buck, Geo. Gushue (Sr.), Philip Kennedy, Phillip Buck, Paul Forward, Patrick Kelly, Joseph Harding, Llewellyn Barry, Maria Williams, Bessie Williams, Wm. Williams, Chesley Pyle.

Magistrate's Court

The man Dewling who has been held on remand at the Penitentiary in connection with the charge of issuing worthless cheques, within the past three months, appeared before Judge Morris this morning. The accused who consented to be tried in the Lower Court, entered a plea of "guilty" on all counts, and was given the option of a fine in the sum of $100 or in default six months' imprisonment. The unfortunate woman Milley, who was only liberated from the Penitentiary a few days ago, was again arrested by the police last night. In court this morning she was again set down for thirty days for being a loose and disorderly person. A man for ill-treating his horse was fined $5.00. A case for assault was dismissed. A defendant, in a second case for assault, was ordered to give bonds to keep the peace towards complainant, or in default serve 90 days in the Penitentiary.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

3 CHILDREN PERISH IN A FIRE. -MONTREAL, Dec. 10. Three children, aged three, five and seven years respectively, were burned to death when fire destroyed their home at Caughnawaga, sixteen miles from here early this morning. Their father, Jos Caucotte and two other residents, are in hospital with severe burns.

RAILWAY DISPUTE OVERCOME. LONDON, Dec. 10.

The demands of the railway companies for a general wage reduction and a counter claim of the railway men for wage increases which recently threatened a serious situation in Britain have been adjudicated by the National Wages Board, which has issued a report practically maintaining the status quo of both parties.

CHARGES OF SPYING A MARES NEST. PARIS, Dec. 10.

The famous air service espionage case is now admitted to be a "Mares Nest" by the same papers which made the charges that Great Britain employed alleged spies. The police assert they have found no evidence to support Mile. Marthe Moreuil's confession that she had been spying in the employ of James Leather, Ernest Philippe, and William Fisher, who were declared to be former British officers and now in Britain's intelligent department. The three men are expected to be released immediately.

Rumours of a Royal Engagement

WILL THE PRINCE WED A FOREIGNER AFTER ALL?

No doubt it is natural that when young and pretty princesses visit a country where are young and eligible princes the gossips should manifest interest in them. If any of the sons of the King and Queen are to marry into Royal Families (and in the case of the Prince of Wales, at any rate, a Royal bride, while not essential, would be preferable from several points of view) they could hardly do better than look in the direction of Sweden. Difference in religion or nationality that until lately was an enemy, bars the various princesses who might otherwise have been suitable. In the remaining countries princesses are few (writes a lady society correspondent of the Weekly Post).

PRINCESS MARTHA.

One of the prettiest princesses in Europe at the moment is Princess Martha, a niece of the King of Sweden on the one side and of the King of Denmark on the other. She has been here for some time with her unmarried sister, Princess Astrid, and her married sister, Princess Axel of Denmark. Princess Margaret of Sweden was married some time ago to her cousin Prince Axel, and he is also of the Royal party who have been much in the company of the Queen of Norway and the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden.

ACCOMPLISHED AND DOMESTIC.

Although nice-looking, Princess Astrid and both are very accomplished and skilled in all housewifely arts. The father of the Royal girls is Charles Duke of Westrogothia, who married Princess Ingeborg of Denmark twenty-six years ago.

Britain's Lucky Latitude

When we complain about our weather, few of us realize that, according to the rule of latitude, our islands should be almost Arctic in the severity of their climate.

If the latitude of London is followed across the Atlantic, where does it lead? To Labrador! Yet Labrador is usually regarded as an annex to the Arctic. Vast ice-floes block her coasts and shut out the rest of the world; dog teams take the place of other means of transport.

If, instead of following the latitude of London westward, it is followed eastward, you arrive in Russia, and, farther still, Siberia, where you can get an Arctic winter and a very brief summer. Siberia has, in fact, the worst winters on the planet, the average temperature for six months of the year being far below zero.

Even if we compare the latitude of London with the corresponding latitude in the southern hemisphere, we find that the Falkland Islands lie about as near the South Pole as Britain is to the North Pole. Yet winters in the Falkland Islands are a succession of fierce gales, heavy snow-storms, and thick fogs, and the frost is often terrible in its severity. So bad is the weather during five months of the year that no ships call at the islands.

Britain is a favoured land when its northerly position is considered, and has one of the world's best climates, thanks to the tempering influence of the Gulf Stream.

What is an Acre?

In school table books, $\frac{5}{8}$ yds. are called 1 rod, pole, or perch, and the square formed by this length, containing $30\frac{1}{2}$ sq. yds., is called 1 square rod, pole, or perch.

Surveyors object to this confusion of terms, and are agreed that the term pole should be used for lineal measure, and perch for square measure.

Originally land measure differed in various parts of the country, being governed by the custom of the particular locality. For instance, 3,850 sq. yds. made 1 Wiltshire acre; 4,900 made 1 Devonshire or Somerset acre; 5,760 made 1 Cornwall acre; 7,840 made 1 Lancashire acre; and 10,240 made 1 Cheshire or Staffordshire acre. Now, however, land measure for the whole of England is governed by law, 4,840 sq. yds. making 1 acre, as by an Act passed in 1835 all local or customary measures were abolished.

On old documents and plans the area of lands is given in customary acres, rods and perches. The standards of measurement in London for testing chains, rules and measuring rods are situated in the Guildhall and on the north side of Trafalgar Square, and may be used by the public.

Handedness and Eyedness

These are the terms applied to the predominant use of either right or left hand or eye. According to recent theory, if one is right-handed he is also right-eyed, and vice versa. There are puzzling exceptions, but in general the rule holds, we are told by the reviewer of a recent book on the subject by Beaufort S. Parsons, an American investigator. Mr. Parsons develops a new theory of the origin of "handedness, which connects it directly with that of "eyedness." Says the reviewer, writing in The British Medical Journal (London):

"Plato believed that handedness was the result of nursing and early education, and many others have followed him. Sir Thomas Browne declared that handedness is the result of institution and not of nature.' Sir Geo. Murray Humphrey of Cambridge expressed the opinion that 'there is no anatomical reason for it with which we are acquainted,' and many others have accepted this position. Cunningham accepted the hereditary theory, and gave some examples to show that left-handedness is transmitted from parents to children. Professor Jordan of the University of Virginia, after collecting many pedigrees, concluded that the appearance of left-handedness is sporadic, and in general conforms to the Mendelian law of inheritance.

"Warlike theories have been propounded, and the necessity for protecting the heart with the left arm. More recondite explanations have been sought in unequal blood supplies of the two cerebral hemispheres. Le Conte, without attempting to give a detailed explanation, simply expressed the opinion that 'People are right-handed because they are left-brained.' Humphrey hinted at the beginnings of a new theory in referring to the correspondence between hand and eye. Others worked out the idea into a theory of ocular dominance, and to this Mr. Parsons appears to lean. He suggests that earliest man, like the highest apes, sighted laterally, with either eye as needed, and, like the simians, was ambidexterous; that the fixt unilateral sighting faculty, accompanied by handedness, developed with the manufacture and intelligent use of weapons, and that in the beginning it was without any marked general bias for either the right or left side. The biological ascendancy of right-eyedness and right-handedness, he thinks, came about subsequently through natural selection as a result of one or more now obscure causes, the more likely being the advantage that would accrue to the warrior who, as he faced his opponent, carried his spear or club in his right hand, and later a shield in his left. He thinks, too, that sun worship probably had much to do with fixing manual dexterity.

"The theory of unilateral sighting as the cause of handedness is, he says, susceptible of proof by a simple test. The eye that fixes a given object (under conditions that enable the observer to determine which eye is fixing) will give the 'eyedness and handedness' of the person under examination. He has devised an instrument for this purpose. But the test can be made without apparatus as follows. Double up one fist with the index finger pointing freely. Lift the fist above the head and imagine it to be a pistol. With both eyes open, fix the pistol forward at arm's length as tho to fire instantaneously at some distant object. Now rapidly shut first one eye and then the other, and note which eye is in line with both forefinger and object simultaneously. If it be the right eye, the subject is right-eyed and right-handed; if it be the left, the subject is left-eyed and left-handed.

"But, alas for the theory, there are many persons who are left-eyed—that is, in the majority of the tests the left eye is the fixing eye—yet they are without doubt pure right-handed in their childhood or in their family records. There can be scarcely an ophthalmic surgeon who has not seen patients who complain that they are bad shots, and in whom there is found left-eyedness. They are right-handed, and can only shoot from the right shoulder, whereas, for no discoverable reason, when both eyes are open in taking aim the left eye makes the choice. These cases are sheer puzzles for which no explanation can be found; certainly none of the conditions suggested by Mr. Parsons meets this flaw in his argument."

Sprouting Logs for Holding River Banks

Sprouting poles of white willow constitute the binder for protecting the shores of lakes and streams by the method patented by O. S. Scheffele, an engineer of Waterloo County, Ontario. The long green poles are laid in shallow trenches, spaced about five feet apart along the banks, and it is found that each pole will quickly send up shoots at intervals of about two feet, the growth in a couple of months or so forming a dense protective shield against wave and wind action. The poles may be two to six inches through and from 20 to 30 feet long. Roots shoot into the soil in every direction, and in a surprisingly short time they transform the cumbly, shifting water edge into a dense matting that no flood can wash away. Where immediate checking of erosion is necessary, a temporary board fence may be built along the lower ends of the poles. Little willow cuttings have been long planted for holding threatened banks in place, but the new plan gives a stiffer, broader and more substantial holding. The use of 80,000 lineal feet of willow poles is said to have ended a railway's struggle of years against a stream's encroachment.

Making Copper Conduct Better

An enormous tonnage of copper now used in electrical transmission may be released for other fields of industry, following the discovery that this metal may be transformed into a superconductor when crystallized in a peculiar way, already described in these columns some time ago. The new discovery is announced by L. A. Hawkins, research expert of Schenectady, New York, in a statement of scientific progress in this sphere issued by the Engineering Foundation (New York). Laboratory experiments carried out by Dr. W. P. Davey of the General Electric Company prove that the conductivity of copper can be greatly increased. Commercial utility, however, has not yet been attained, and Dr. Davey's work is regarded by science as a " tantalizing triumph," which promises to lead to industrial economy. Says the Foundation's statement:

"A small increase in the conductivity of commercial copper would have great value. An increase of even 10 per cent. would release for other fields an enormous tonnage of copper now used for transmitting power. The economic radius of all-existing transmission systems would be increased 10 per cent., increasing 21 per cent. the area served; or, the underground cable subways of cities, so many of which are taxed to capacity with their loads of to-day, could without enlargement carry additional loads of 10 per cent."

Possibilities of great scientific interest have been disclosed by Dr. Davey's experiments, according to the Foundation. Dr. Davey found by calculations, based on the arrangement of the copper atoms which the X-rays revealed, that copper composed of a single crystal should have a conductivity of 14 per cent. greater than ordinary copper, greater even than that of silver. To quote further:

"The only known material with higher conductivity than copper is silver, a metal too costly to use in line wires. To check his calculations, Dr. Davey devised apparatus for producing large single crystals of copper.

"The single crystals were made by very gradual heating and cooling pure copper in an electric furnace. When molten metal is quickly cooled, very small crystals are formed; if the melt is cooled slowly, the crystals are larger.

"Dr. Davey cooled the melt so slowly that only one crystal was formed, and that included all of the metal. By this method, he was able to produce single crystals three-fourths of an inch in diameter and six inches long, and one that is fourteen inches long.

"The conductivity of these crystals, checked within one-quarter of one per cent. of the calculated value.

"In a crystal, the atoms—the unit particles of the substance—huddle up in regular fashion. The crystals of copper, for example, are made up of very tiny cubes, with atoms of copper at the corners and centres of the faces of each unit.

"The large crystals grow in such a direction that the atoms are arranged in columns along the length of the crystal. It is this regular arrangement of the atoms, which, it is believed, gives to the single crystals their superior conductivity when compared with ordinary copper, in which the crystals are small and the arrangement of these crystals quite chaotic.

"There is reason to believe that the conductivity of copper crystals along another axis from that measured may be even 60 per cent. greater than the value for pure copper, but the growth of single crystals along this other axis has not yet been brought under control.

"This newly discovered high conductivity has not yet been utilized commercially, as the single crystals are very delicate and difficult to manufacture.

"One of the first facts discovered about single-crystal copper was that the specimens could be bent double with one finger, but that strength was required to straighten them afterward.

"A crystal of the size of a lead pencil, if given a jerking motion, bends like a stick of soft wax. Having been once bent, however, it acquires the properties of ordinary copper, for the bending has transformed the large crystal into a mass of smaller ones."

Rabbit

Oh, why is life so full of care, and trouble everywhere? And trouble there is everywhere, and trouble there is everywhere, and trouble there is everywhere.

Because a shadow here and there, makes this life seem much more fair.

Because if I get never sorrow, we would not work for glad tomorrow.

That's the only way I can explain, dear little reader of my stories, why in Rabbitland there should live such disagreeable people as Danny Fox, Old Man Cottontail and Mr. Wicked Wolf. Or why in this every day world of ours there should lurk little troubles for us to overcome. Yes, Mr. Troubles are sent to us to help us build up strong characters. Without a care in the world little folks would soon grow careless and forgetful of the happy things in life. Without Danny Fox and his two disagreeable comrades little rabbits would grow fat and lazy.

Well, now that your Uncle Dave has explained as best he can, that troubles and rain are useful to all of us, and that without them joy and sunshine would soon become stale the good, kind, Policeman Dog, whom Cousin Cottontail had called up on the telephone in the last story, you remember, has already knocked on the front door of her next little bungalow beneath the Old Bush. Hear on the hill.

"Who's knocking on my cabin door? Please give your name, I do implore," cried Mrs. Cottontail, her pink nose all a-twitch with fright.

"Your friend, the Policeman Dog," answered a deep, kind voice. "Didn't you just a few minutes ago call me on the telephone?"

"Yes, I certainly did," answered Cousin Cottontail, opening the door just a little crack. My, but she was a cautious lady bunny, wasn't she? But I don't blame her. Foxes sometimes imitate another's voice so well that they fool brighter people than tiny rabbits.

"Where is Danny Fox?" at once enquired the alert old dog, looking back over his shoulder. But before he received an answer away he darted.

"You can't catch me," shouted crafty Danny Fox as he sped down the path to the bubbling brook he leaped on his four swift legs.

"Policeman!" growled the good old dog, following a club, but not so

Development of Ocean Sounding

A deep-sea sounding to 18,000 feet, or more than three miles, is made in an hour and a half with the new electrically-driven apparatus of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, this being a gain in speed of about thirty per cent. over that of the machine displaced. The new machine is a reel about two feet in diameter, driven by a two-horsepower motor, and wound with 4,000 fathoms—nearly five miles—of hard-drawn steel piano wire of No. 21 Brown and Sharp gage, or a thickness of .02846 inch. This wire is so fine, though wound with a tension of 100 pounds, that the groove on the reel containing the entire 24,000 feet is only four inches wide by an inch and a half deep. Early soundings were made with a hempen cord, carried down by a weight that might reach several hundred pounds and with such a line Ellis in 1749 found a depth of 891 fathoms off the northwest coast of Africa, and Ross—in 1819 seeking a northwest passage from Baffin's Bay—reached a depth of 1,000 fathoms, entangling on the line the first discovered specimens of deep-ocean life. In 1854 Brooke, an American, devised a weight that became detached at the bottom, only a tube containing a sample of the bottom being brought up. This greatly lessened the labor of sounding, and in 1873 the substitution of a wire for the clumsy hemp rope brought further improvement, though at first the wire was quite large.

Rattlesnakes Stop Construction Work

Rattlesnakes near Powder River have been stopping work on an oil pipe-line in the Salt Creek fields, according to John Keyes, a Chicago salesman, quoted in the Billings Gazette.

We read in this Montana newspaper: "Mr. Keyes heard of the troubles at Powder River from a laborer who had been working on the line and afterwards heard the same account at Lander. During the last week or two while the rattlers have been molting and have been in the 'blind' stage, when they strike without warning, the men working on the line have been in almost constant terror and in considerable danger from the snakes. "Several men have been bitten, according to the former workman, and it has been necessary to have clubs handy to keep the snakes away. After finding snakes at hand or under feet whenever he turned for a few days, the workman in question quit the job, and many others have also left after the presence of the rattlers had shaken their nerves. "The news of the invasion of snakes was noised about the oil-fields so that the company has had difficulty in replacing the men who have quit. The contractors have little hope of being able to replenish their crews until the snakes resume their normal habits of rattling warnings and keeping out of the way. "Some unusually large snakes have been killed in central Wyoming recently. One which was killed near Lander recently measured nine feet and two inches in length."

Patented by Housewives

SEVEN INVENTIONS IN 10 MONTHS

Quite half the number of money-making inventions which pass through the Patent Office day by day are just simple little "gadgets" which have come as happy ideas during the course of a day's toil, and many of them have been devised by the woman workers themselves. Quite recently one woman patented no fewer than seven domestic devices in ten months, all simple little things but valuable as making for greater efficiency in the house and therefore of the "money-making" order. Possibly Trifling, But Very Useful. There is no reason why any bright notion which comes along during the course of an ordinary day's work should not be turned to commercial account. Many women have made very fine incomes from trifling, but useful, inventions, while others who have thought out a bright labour-saving idea have it "punch-pooped" by their male relatives or have been shy of acting for themselves. But the woman inventor has no need to be shy. A visit to the Patent Office will not only solve the problem as to whether someone has thought of the same thing before but will also lead to much useful

Freed From Harems
Now Seek Husbies

ANGORA, Nov. 26.—Hundreds of beautiful women, highly trained in the social graces, arts of the toilet, dancing, music and religion, who have been freed from harems, now have the Turkish government seeking husbands for them. Most of them are wholly unfitted for the practical work of life.

Abandonment of the harem also placed on the hands of the government many eunuchs, but their disposition has not been so difficult. In the absence of regular employment in the cities they have been sent to the provincial districts for work on the farms.

When President Mustapha Kemal assumed power in Angora, one of his first official acts was to banish the harems and slave households of Sultan Mohammed VI., the princes and members of the Royal Court.

In order to set an example, most of the Nationalist government officials have one, or at most only two wives. Indeed, Mustapha Kemal Pasha has no wife at all, having recently been granted a divorce. Economic conditions also serve to make it almost impossible for one to indulge in the old luxury of plurality of wives.

Prior to the present social revolution in Turkey, every woman was obliged to veil herself from all except her father, brother and husband. If a man, either Turk or foreigner, entered the sacred precincts of the harem, he usually paid with his life, while the master also had the right to kill his unlawful wife or concubine.

Only three foreigners, an American, a Britisher and a Frenchman, are known to have entered a harem when it was occupied, and they were disguised as Turks and spoke the Turkish language. By posing as government representatives, they escaped the usual penalty.

Any departure from the rules of conduct in the harems were severely punished by the eunuchs, who maintained security of the places and who were euphemistically called "Masters of the Maidens," or "Chiefs of the Abodes of Felicity."

While Sultan Mohammed VI. had only four legal wives he had at his disposal several hundred "hikals," or favorites. Sultan Abdul Hamid was said to have had 1,000 wives in his harem.

Madam Edibe Halliday Hanoum Bey, a Turkish woman trained in the American Girls' College at Constantinople, was one of the first to agitate a change in the status of Moslem women, insisting that the system was wholly inconsistent with any high ideal of womanhood.

Abandonment of the harem has been noted as Turkey's most radical step in its transition from an Oriental state to a modern Western country.

Where Saul Died
BIBLICAL DISCOVERIES NEAR THE JORDAN.

PHILADELPHIA—One of the most interesting discoveries of recent years is made known in the announcement of the University of Pennsylvania that the University's Palestine expedition has uncovered an ancient Philistine stronghold at the top of the hill of Beth-Shan, near the Jordan, the wall on which Saul's body was suspended after his death, and possibly even the Temple in which, according to the first book of Samuel, Saul's armour was placed.

The hill has been the strategic point of military operations throughout history, and the excavations, which have been going on steadily for two seasons have penetrated strata indicating man superimposed civilizations including the Greek, Roman, and Christian periods the era of the Crusaders, and so on.

Beneath these have been found the debris of the fortifications of Old Testament fame. These, however, were not built by the Philistines, but at an earlier period by Egyptians who under Rameses II. erected a monument containing the only known record outside the Bible of the sojourn of the Hebrew in Egypt.

Nine-Year-Old Boy Murdered His
Foster Mother

PORTLAND, Oregon, Dec. 4.—A nine year old boy shot and killed his foster mother because some beans happened to be burned, he confessed to deputy sheriff yesterday. The boy is Frank Thomas, negro, adopted son of Oliver F. Thomas, negro, proprietor of a tavern in the outskirts of Portland. The boy said he was angered because Mrs. Thomas called him a liar. He had reported to her that the beans, being cooked on the kitchen stove were all right. Soon afterwards she smelled the beans burning and reproached the boy.

Darning is Motto of the Modern Girls
EVERY THROWN AWAY WHEN HOLES PUT IN AN APPEARANCE.
Years ago women darned. To-day they don't. This is the opinion of Miss Grace Walton, advertising manager of Julius Kupper Co. of New York, after selling the counter of a Window department store. Miss Walton, her managerial desk to spend the time selling hosiery behind the counter to obtain first-hand information regarding the whys and reasons of the tremendous increase in hosiery sales throughout the country before the war," says Miss Walton, "darning hosiery was considered a woman's daily duty. To-day the hosiery basket is out of fashion because women given up this art because it is cheaper and they can afford to dispose of their husbands when they are tired of them. Or does the short skirt come in order to prevent men from exhibiting anything but a silk-stockinged limb—but by this wouldn't pertain to their husbands' socks, and I understand have no help in this direction. Then again, it may be that women are turning heads to hosiery instead of household duties. Let us see their every day life."
In these questions to solve Miss Walton took her stand behind the counter and talked to women as she darning hosiery. She found that women on the average bought one or two pairs of hosiery at a time—rarely more. In the past they bought to last six months to a year, this is undoubtedly the result of shifting color hosiery as well as dress. Women used to buy a dozen to a dozen and a half pairs of gossamer yearly, and she is unable to figure at all. This would intimate the quality inferior—not a bit of it—it is the change and the ego which prevents women from being caught alive style dead and buried. Only a few years ago the demand centred in black, white, seal brown, calf, silver and gold, to-day the color selection in a store runs to a hundred. Yes, and the color has a real job on her hands, along with different shades she qualities, makes and weights of endless variety and she must be willing and patient as Job—even she has her distressing and heart-breaking moments. "If you ever get the sensation of how you would rather jump off the Woolworth than take yourself to a hosiery store as a salesgirl."
When your feet are taking your attention than you feel like a pompous woman call you with "Oh, I see something better," "What color would like?" you say. "Oh, I don't know what is best just now." You then yourself by your aching feet up down the counter, bringing out the varying shades you think are "Yes, they are nice," she says, "haven't you something just a darker, with just a little more to it. Then you trot off and do some thing all over again, and a half hour of opening and showing find yourself standing in the top of a pile of hosiery, heaving the top, feeling you have made a great effort, all of which is displayed in front of you.
When your customer looks sweetly at your face and says, "They are good. Thank you so much" and de-lights my teeth, I turned to the saleswoman and said, "How do you hold your temper after this line that—if I worked here I would be calling them all the best words not in the dictionary—serve of the female."

Wild Labour Sup-planting Adult Labour
TORONTO, Nov. (By Canadian)—Women in industries and professions formed the theme of an address by Julia Varley, senior woman manager of the Workers' Union of Great Britain, which was a martyr in that she put it, she was a martyr for the King and wore his uniform for six weeks in one of the jails. England she is not one of the first variety of British Labour leader. On the contrary, the lady made moderate but earnest appeal workers, both men and women, to the trades union movement.
Speaking of conditions in Great Britain, Miss Varley declared child labor was supplanting adult labor, especially in the metal trades. In England, which is her headquarters, she said that owing to the introduction of labor-saving machinery, girls were able to do much formerly done by men. This had led in an agitation for raising school age.
Change is a general stimulant, tonic and vitalizer.
The treatment is given by means of a powerful handle-power lamp, and the patient wears a minimum of clothing, usually a white gown.

Labor Defends British "Reds"

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(C.P.)—Demands for the release of the 12 Communists who were convicted and sentenced to prison last week on charges of sedition, provided material for much week-end oratory on the part of Labor leaders.

A manifesto was issued by the Independent Labor Party, the sponsors for the manifesto including some Labor members of the House of Commons, taking a merely academic view of the matter of the prosecution, conviction and sentence of the Communists. The manifesto declares: "There is a special danger to Labor in the assumption that the doctrines of the Communists are illegal. The great mass of the Labor movement believes in them and will continue to express its beliefs. We urge all to make clear that they persist in their advocacy of these principles and deny the right of any Government to interfere with such advocacy."

John Marchbank, President of the National Union of Railwaysmen, says if it is sedition to appeal to the soldiers not to shoot the workers in an industrial dispute, as the Communists have done, then he ought to have been jailed 20 years ago. He declared that he will go on saying this.

The Moral for England

The fruits of Fascism in Italy should serve as a warning to the less stupid among British "Diehards" that it is not wise to imitate in this country, with its long traditions of political freedom, methods and ideas that may have a certain sorry "success" in countries whose education to liberty and its responsibilities dates at earliest from the middle of last century. Our laws, well and justly administered, suffice amply to preserve us against "Communism" or any other sort of illegal revolution; and "society" will certainly not be saved by silly pranks like those of the "Fascists" who held up and robbed a newspaper van belonging to the Daily Herald. Upon the proceedings taken against a dozen prominent Communists we do not comment because they are still sub judice, nor do we express opinion on the withdrawal of the charge of larceny against the "Fascists" aforesaid. These things will doubtless be thrashed out in Parliament—for, luckily, we have still a Parliament. "Society" and "the state" are probably exposed to greater danger from the irresponsible though not perhaps disinterested clamour of widely-read newspapers like the Daily Mail and the Daily Express than from the activities of Communists or the propaganda of the Daily Herald. Campaigns obviously designed to engender a reactionary panic, in the hope that it may drive Mr. Stanley Baldwin from office and make room for a Government susceptible to the enlightened influence of my Lords Rothermere and Beaverbrook, tend, in reality, to cause far more serious disaffection among the people than any Bolshevik propaganda is likely to produce. By lumping together all sections of the Labour Party as "Reds," and damning them all with one comprehensive epithet as the enemies of "Society," these noblemen are doing the work of Moscow with an efficiency for which Zinovieff should be grateful. They are constantly using arguments and making statements which the masses of workers know to be unfounded, and are driving them to conclude that, if "capitalism" needs to be defended by such methods, it must be a sordid affair. The country is not on the verge, nor is it on the road to ruin. Its prospects are improving. Its people are animated by a better spirit to-day than at any time since the end of the war. It is not dissatisfied with its Government, though it sometimes wishes that the Prime Minister would give it more of the sound and sane leadership of which he has shown himself capable. In his speech at Aberdeen he said much that was good and true. But nothing better than that. "What we ask for is a new birth of freedom for our country." There is no more urgent task awaiting our thoughtful leaders than a restatement, in terms comprehensible to young and old, of the essential doctrines of liberty that lie at the base of our institutions so that those doctrines of liberty that lie at the base of our institutions so that these doctrines may again become a faith in the hearts of the people.—Review of Reviews.

Wordy Battle
End in Tragedy

OLD PROSPECTOR THE VICTIM

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C., Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Fear that a gold rush would drive him from the wild little kingdom which he had come to regard as his own, led to the death of Alex. Ducharme, trapper, in the lonely Chalko Lake district, according to a story told friends here by Fred Cyr, charged with Ducharme's murder, before Cyr left on Tuesday to guide a coroner's jury to the grave of the man he admitted shooting. Cyr had gone into the district and found good gold prospects on several creeks and had told Ducharme about it. Ducharme insisted on the younger man giving up prospecting and going into partnership with him as a trapper, fearing a rush of miners, with all his attendant ravages, would upset his plans and destroy the quiet living which he had obtained from trapping and hunting. After many wordy battles between the two, the quarrel had its climax in a duel in the wilds, according to Cyr, between the old trapper, armed with a $8.40 United States army gun, and Cyr with a .22.20. The latter shot Ducharme, he declared, to prevent being shot himself.

The Call of the Campfire

BERTHA PRICE
If you'll build the fire and draw the water, John,
I'll pare the taters and put the kettle on the stove,
I'll bar the door and hang a tasty log of wood,
They will all be ready when the folks are due.

Won't they come a-whooping when they get a sniff
Of the taters and the bacon, and a whiff
Of the steaming coffee-pot. The cheery "Hi-loo"
Bertha hoots round the campfire to the barbecue.

You talk about your cafes and your French rooms;
Your dinners, your cocktails and your silver spoons;
But the sizzling frying-pan, the crispy bacon-bait,
Are in another class—you can bet your hat!

Old Time Dickensian Christmas

LIKELY IN ENGLAND.
LONDON, Nov. 30.—An old-fashioned Dickensian Christmas with a plum pudding instead of a fazz band as the centerpiece is likely in England for the first time in many years, partly because of the death of Queen Alexandra.

Society is flocking to the country or to the Riviera to escape London during the three months of mourning for the late Queen during which really elaborate entertainments would be in questionable taste. This exodus means that the glamorous "Yuletide of hotel balls, dinners and dancing such as England has experienced during recent years will give way to the old-fashioned observance of the season, and unusually wintry weather probably will add to this illusion of long ago. Skating and sleigh riding, already being enjoyed in many parts of the country, and may continue until the holidays.

Fashion experts already are pondering on the probable reaction from these months of mourning which will end just in time for spring fashions to be displayed. The designers expect bright colors, the brighter the better, to be fashionable when the mourning period is over. Even for men there will be an extra touch of brightness in ties, socks and handkerchiefs.

Within the royal circles, Alexandra's death probably will result in a royal moving day for the Duke and Duchess of York and the Prince of Wales. The Prince lives in comfortable apartments in St. James' Palace. The Yorks have just moved into Mayfair from their suburban white lodge. Neither the palace nor the Mayfair home is exactly suited to the position of their respective occupants. Since the Prince left the parental roof of Buckingham Palace and the Duke of York married, the problem of royal residences has been acute. Queen Alexandra since the death of King Edward, has occupied Marlborough House in London which normally would be the residence of the Prince of Wales. It was as Princess of Wales that she first lived here.

Now, it is likely that the Prince will move into Marlborough House in the Spring, and the Duke and Duchess may move into the Prince's vacated quarters in St. James' Palace. As the master of Marlborough House, the Prince will live amid rich surroundings. The contents of one room are valued at more than $5,000,000. In that room is kept the collection of gold and silver plate and jewels which were presented to King Edward during his reign.

and to celebrate the occasion a special book, a literary treasure of rarity and value was put in as the two hundred thousand book,—an old Italian book on Anatomy by Girolamo Boncompagni, Archbishop of Bologna in 1635. It is entitled, "Man and His Parts," collected and explained with illustrations, from sacred and secular authors, in two separate books, by Ottavio Scartelini, Canon of the Lateran, Doctor of Theology, preacher. It has still the original white vellum binding and is the gift to the library of Francis McLennan, one of the Library's benefactors.

The building which now houses the library was opened on October 31, 1923, by the Governor-General the Earl of Aberdeen. It had been erected and presented to the University by Peter Redpath, the ground having previously been purchased and presented to the University by J. H. R. Molson.

Losing "Face" in the Orient

Geoffrey Drake, in the Edinburgh Quarterly Review: The British Government, when it speaks of the peaceful outlook of the world, and the absence of naval antagonism, has not reckoned with our loss of "face" in the East, owing to our naval weakness and our complete isolation. As the late Sir John Jordan, who was the greatest authority on the Eastern question, pointed out in the Times on June 15, 1923: "Sixty years ago (British) naval co-operation cleared the decks of pirates, and for the lack of it the southern seaboard is now so infested with piracy that trade is at a standstill." Since June things have gone from bad to worse, with the ever-increasing seriousness of the position, the colossal losses of our business men, the number of ships laid up, our vast trade ruined; our people vilified in every way; in a word, the destruction of the whole position that our fellow-countrymen had built up since 1840. "Face" is nine-tenths of the battle with Orientals, and the Japanese are unfortunately only too well aware that the present Government has mortgaged our financial future by its Peninsular Act this year, and let our navy down far below the strength required to maintain its position even on the one-power basis.

Horned Ancestors

The Evil One is generally supposed to be provided with horns, but it comes as a surprise to find that cases of horned men and women have been known. A speaker at the meetings of the British Association stated that the curious formation of the recently discovered Galilee skull must have given its owner, during his lifetime, almost the appearance of being horned.

Quite recent times, however, afford examples of people who wear horns, and that did actually grow horns. The most remarkable case was that of a "Cheshire" woman, who, in the sixteenth century, made quite a good living by exhibiting herself as a freak at "Charing-Cross." The first horn, a long, slender one, took twenty years to grow. It was then shed, and in its place came pairs, cast at irregular intervals and invariably re-growing.

A more recent example was Mrs. Allen, of whom engravings made in the year 1780, showing a slight horn, are still in existence.

The Mid-Ocean Tidal Station

A submerged ocean station, on the plan of the "artificial island" proposed by Prof. R. W. Wood for observing deep-sea tides, has been used by Swedish oceanographers for fifteen years in studying the subsurface tidal currents off the coast of Sweden. The station is a large buoy with a net buoyancy of about 550 pounds, and double anchorage by cables diverging about 120 degrees keeps it at a fixed depth of some 50 feet, just deep enough to avoid shipping. Recording current meters attached to this buoy at any desired depth take observations of the direction and the velocity of the current every thirtieth minute for a fortnight without recharging. So far this submerged buoy has been employed only at depths of about 100 yards, and the weight of anchors and necessary wire-rope would be a difficulty to overcome in deep waters. For a considerable time, however, the Swedish hydrographers had had in mind the idea of a submarine hydrographic station with a complete equipment in the open sea. This would require two buoys anchored some distance apart, with visible flag-staffs to give a base-line; and, in connection would be provided such apparatus as thermographs for indicating water temperatures, drifters and recording current-meters for taking horizontal movements, and balanced submarine floats and pressure-gauges for measuring the vertical rise and fall of the ocean tides.

Rebuilding

German Capital

The rapidity with which an industrious people can, after a great disaster, rebuild their capital is indicated, we read in a Berlin dispatch to the Boston News Bureau, by the accumulation of new wealth in Germany during the past year. The great contrast, we are told, is between the Germany of to-day and Germany as it was before the end of the inflation period. The Germans are said to be moderately well off again as far as their actual capital wealth is concerned, but what they need is fluid wealth for running expenses, a need which is likely to be acute, as it is difficult to realize on existing plants and stock. Certain facts regarding Germany's return toward something like its pre-war wealth are presented:

Briefly, Germany, taking to-day's frontiers as the measure, is back to 90-95 per cent. of pre-war production. German industry the past 12 months produced 13 to 14 billions of marks in goods, 12 to 14 in agriculture, and 6 to 7 in transportation and miscellaneous. Of this there was an increment in new wealth of 6 to 8 billion marks compared with 8,500,000,000 before the war. Accumulation of new stocks in Germany since the beginning of 1924 would total some 10,000,000,000 marks. In these, however, is a fair amount of borrowed money. The foreign loans totalling some 400,000,000 are about half used in financing German trade abroad.

Germany's national income the last 12 months was 45,000,000,000 marks, compared with Heiferich's estimate of 40,000,000,000, to 42,000,000,000 before the war. This is the total of incomes in Germany. People get their wages or profits and spend the greater part on living expenses. One must therefore distinguish between incomes and additions to national wealth.

Allowance must also be made for depreciation in gold purchasing power in the interim. Thus, while the 45,000,000,000 national income to-day is nominally 3,000,000,000 to 5,000,000,000 marks above pre-war, actually, taking depreciation into account, it buys but two-thirds as much in real values. The national income, for example, to-day at 45,000,000,000 may well increase within the next few years to 60,000,000,000 marks. This, however, in real purchasing power would be but about the equivalent of the pre-war income.

The excess tax gives a convenient way to arrive at national income. Wages and salaries in Germany totalled 32,000,000,000 marks. Taxes on wages are deducted automatically at the source, and are therefore an exact reflection of income. Salaries are declared voluntarily, and are doubtless higher than declared, thus bringing the total to over 32,000,000,000. The remainder of the 45,000,000,000 represents profits, including about half the national income; but profits and returns on capital have a smaller place in the German total.

There are no generally accepted estimates of wealth in Germany. In government circles the opinion is widely held that production in Germany is 65-90 per cent. of pre-war. Dr. Julius Hirsch, whose estimates are widely discussed, says it is nearly that of pre-war. The pessimistic Employers' Association put it as low as 70 per cent., but this is generally recognized as too low.

Their pessimism must partly be put down to anxiety that wages, still some 20 per cent. under pre-war in real value, will continue to rise. Also there is anxiety in political circles that talk about accumulation of wealth would lead reparations creditors to become insistent in their demands for payment.

At the end of inflation the country was literally gutted. Inflation dumping drained the country of stocks. The last lap of inflation also paperized two-thirds of the population. Ruhr resistance drained the treasury.

The contrast of Germany then and now is striking. The German Government and communes have literally billions of surplus tax receipts. German industry has less than a fifth of its pre-war mortgage burden, and has accumulated moderately large stocks again. The farmers are also fairly mortgage free, have replaced their live stock, and are supposed to be producing more than before the war. Thus in plant and stock the Germans are moderately well off again.

But most of this is momentarily frozen or "unrealizable" form. Their urgent need is for cash credits for running expenses, and this need is likely to become acute this winter.

Two Delicious Recipes Using Ham

The Virginian Way.

A delicious way to cook a ham is to boil it in the ordinary way until it is nearly done, then remove from the pot and take off the skin. Stick cloves about an inch apart into the fat, cover with coarse brown sugar, and pour over a glass of sherry. Bake in the oven for three-quarters of an hour to an hour, and serve hot.

The ham is also very good eaten cold when cooked this way.

Baked Ham.

A favourite way of cooking ham in America is to take a thick slice, about 1/2 inch thick, and mix together a teaspoonful of made mustard with a tablespoonful of sugar.

Rub this well into the ham, and place it in a covered dish with a cupful of milk. Bake in a slow oven for 1 1/2 hours, basting occasionally, and adding more milk if necessary.

Corpse Factory Story

WAR MINISTER ON HOW IT AROSE.

Commander Kenworthy (Lib. Hull) asked in the House of Commons in view of the feelings aroused in Germany by the recrudescence of the rumours of the so-called "corpse conversion" factory behind the German lines during the war, information could be given as to the source of the original rumour and the extent to which it was accepted by the War Office at the time.

Sir Laming Worthington-Evans (the War Secretary) replied that the source of the original rumour could not be traced with any accuracy at this distance of time. The statement that the Germans had set up such a factory for the conversion of dead bodies first appeared on April 10, 1917, in the Lokal-Anzeiger, published in Berlin and in the independence Belge and La Belgique, two Belgian newspapers published in France and Holland respectively.

In the summer of 1917 a German Army Order containing instructions for the delivery of dead bodies to the establishment described in the Lokal-Anzeiger was captured in France and forwarded to the War Office, who, after careful consideration, permitted it to be published. The terms of this Order were such, when taken in conjunction with the articles in the newspapers and the previously existing rumours, that it appeared to the War Office to offer corroborative evidence of the story.

Evidence that the word "kadaver" was meant to mean human bodies as well as carcasses of animals was found in German dictionaries and German anatomical and other works, and the German assertion that the story was disposed of at the time by reference to the meaning of the word "kadaver" was not accepted. On the information before them at that time the War Office appeared to have seen no reason to disbelieve the truth of the story.

Pressed for a denial of the story he added: "It is not a question whether it is accurate or inaccurate. What I was concerned to show was the information on which the War Office acted at the time. The fact that there

The Deepest Mine and Its Product

The St. John del Ray mine, in the State of Minas Geraes, Brazil, is of extraordinary interest, both on account of the time—nearly a century—it has been worked, and as the deepest ore mine in the world. It was purchased in 1834 for £55,737, states The Mining Journal (London). Its location is about 2,700 feet above sea-level, and the lode lies on a calcareous schist, possibly of pre-Cambrian age, the ore consisting chiefly of massive pyrrhotite, with mispickel and iron pyrites. From a vertical cross section, the lode appears to be a vein 650 feet or more long and 45 feet wide, dipping at an angle of 45 degrees. The mine was at first a steep open-cast supported by props and timbers. After interruptions in working in 1867 and 1888, two new shafts were completed, each to a depth of 2,292 feet, in 1892, and since that time the mine has been developed by a series of internal shafts, each 1,200 feet deep. In step-like succession, 1,420 feet apart, the total vertical depth is now 6,800 feet, the lowest portion of the mine being reached by two inclined shafts, the lode having flattened to 19 deg. increase of temperature 1 deg. for every 125 feet—has been one of the serious difficulties of the mining. At 6,500 ft. the rock has a temperature of 180 deg. F., and that of the air 190 deg. F. Cooling is effected by a fan delivering 80,000 cubic feet of air per minute, to which is added 5,000 feet from the winding engines, the surface air being cooled at 45 deg. In steel drums revolving in chilled water and delivered at 81 deg. at the 6,500 foot level. About 4,000 horsepower in electrical and compressed air energy is used, the power being transmitted electrically from eight small hydraulic stations. About 70 per cent. of the free gold is recovered by crushing and washing and 25 per cent. by subsequent cyaniding. 5 per cent. being lost in tailings. The mine has produced 130 tons of bullion, representing 15,000,000.

OUR THANKFULNESS ACCEPT.

"I have lived to thank God that all my prayers have not been answered."
—JEAN INGELW.

Life's a funny thing, isn't it? Someone has said there are two roads to disappointment. One is not to get what you want and the other is to get it. That is terribly clever but like most excessively clever things, true only in its implication not in its entirety. And yet, while we are being thankful to-day, let's not forget to be thankful for the things we didn't get as well as the things we did.

For The Happy It Might Have Been. There are plenty of happy "it might have been" as well as unhappy ones in most lives. A Letter Friend tells me of a case in her town of a schoolboy "who in anger at his parents because they would not let him marry a certain girl, ran away from home and riding a freight froze a foot until he lost one of his big toes, but in after years he was heard to remark that he would rather have lost his whole foot than to have married the girl."

After The Infatuation Passed. I know of a girl who because of a reorganization in the newspaper for which she was working lost her position just a few weeks before Christmas. It wasn't a position that she cared very much for, in fact she disliked it heartily, but it was something and just before Christmas is not a happy time to be fired. So she felt very bad.

Montreal's Debt is $152,042,658

The total debt of the city of Montreal reaches $152,042,658, according to the budget figures which will be considered by the City Council tomorrow. For 1926, the figures are $136,537,091, and for 1925, $136,346,656. To each of these items are added some $14,000,000 in loans to issue. Interest on the above amount totals $7,527,862.00 which is provided for in the estimates. The interest last year amounted to $6,717,478.12.

Turkish Threat

CAUSES ALARM TO NATIONS LEAGUE.

GENEVA, SWITZ., Dec. 9.—Great uneasiness is manifest in League of Nations circles over the Mosul dispute between Great Britain and Turkey, on which the League council must make a decision because it is realized that it may be difficult to reach the unanimity in the council required under the recent ruling of the Permanent Court of International Justice. Another disturbing factor is the announcement by Turkey that she is unable to recognize any decision which falls to meet with her views. It was learned to-day that the situation is so critical that various members of the council already have been privately consulting one another during their meetings in the various European capitals. Should Turkey, after refusing to comply with a ruling by the council, resort to hostilities, the matter would then come before the council as a separate problem under articles 16 and 17 of the League Covenant.

(Article 16 states that any member resorting to war in disregard of its obligations under the covenant "shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all the other members of the league which hereby undertakes immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking state, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other states, whether a member of the league or not.")

In deciding the sovereignty of Mosul, unanimity in the council is necessary with the exception of the vote of Great Britain and the vote of Turkey which is a temporary member of the council while the boundary dispute is being discussed.

Issue Warning.

With the League of Nations council about to name a committee of experts to prepare for an international economic conference, extraordinary interest has been created here by what is tantamount to a warning by the International Labor Bureau that the time has come to write the statutes for a world economic system. Basing the conclusions on an exhaustive inquiry into production and economic problems—a story whose telling requires eight volumes of more than 6,000 pages—the labor organization announced to-day that the international economic crises and turmoil in exchange, have let loose a dangerous movement toward protectionism.

It declares the situation disclosed an urgent need for the adoption of measures of reciprocity and co-operation, abandonment of methods of isolation and economic struggle; and the substitution of a unified expansion of economic forces in the different countries of Europe. After insisting that disarmament cannot be realized as long as economic conflicts put a premium on armaments, the bureau concludes that the statesmen must understand that, if the world is to go forward, the economic systems of the various countries must be made inter-dependent. It urges the forthcoming economic conference to take cognizance of this situation.

British Trade

RECOVERING EXPORTS UP $5,000,000 LAST MONTH.

Preliminary figures for October of imports and exports were published in the Board of Trade Journal. These show the following:—

Oct. 1925	Sept. 1925	Oct. 1924
Imports: £ 2,106,538,994	£ 1,975,255,934	£ 1,204,588,328
Exports: £ 7,081,986	£ 6,734,568	£ 63,586,638
Re-Exports: 18,277,420	10,625,830	12,931,489

It is pointed out that the increase in each of the main divisions of our external trade, which usually occurs in October, is fully represented this year. The lower prices prevailing for such commodities as wheat and cotton may account for the lower figures of imports as compared with a year ago, in the main at any rate. The excess of imports over exports for October was £28,000,000 approximately, as compared with £26,800,000 for September and £38,900,000 for October, 1924.

The exports of "articles wholly or mainly manufactured" were £5,000,000 more in October than in September, and the October total exceeded that for October 1924 by £944,000.

Exports of raw materials (mainly coal) were greater in value in October than in September by £850,000, but less than in October 1924 by £1,773,000.

THANKSGIVING.

For the glory of the day
With its duty and its play
For Thy merces manifest,
Unconsidered, unexpressed;
For the precious right to live
Now our gratitude we give.

For the leaf upon the tree,
And the drooping of the bee,
For the countless joys we take
Every morning as we wake,
Love and strength and laughter sweet,
These poor thanks we now repeat.

For the good friends ever near
With their words of faith and cheer
And for all that makes this life
Something more than selfish strife,
For Thy care on land and sea,
Now we give our thanks to Thee!

WEARY WILLIE.

When the autumn gales grow rougher
I feel sorry for the sufferer,
For the ho-ho who must suffer,
For the man without a boss;
It is bad for Weary Willie
As he plods the road so hilly,
When the nights are long and chilly,
And the farmers' dogs are cross.

He's a bleak and joyless figure,
Shaken by the weather's rigor,
Hoping for a hand-out
Bigger than the one he had before;
Nothing, nothing can awaken self respect,
By him forsaken; hoping for some eggs
And bacon, he is knocking at the door.
He is tattered and unshaven,
Groaking hoarsely like a raven,
And he has no other haven
Than the poorhouse or the jail; he is shooed
From every cottage, shooed with adjectives
And swatage, told to go and earn his pottage, told to hustle for the kale.
He might have the legal tender,
He might live in state and splendor,
If he'd ruin a suspender,
Working hard, as others do; but if he must sprain his body to secure a cottage gaudy, all our culture is but shoddy, he believes, his mind askew. So we have but little pity for the outcast from the city, tramping where the roads are gritty, when the night is coming on; and it's little men are caring if he dies where he is faring, if he's deadlier than a herring on some cold and bitter dawn.
For the man who doesn't labor with a sawtuck or a saler, who is idle while his neighbor earns the shilling or the pound, and who thinks it smart and clever to avoid all wise endeavor, and to bum his way forever, might as well be underground.

SUZANNE POWERS.

was seen this past season in "Tarnish," "The Pottery," and "The Bluebird." She writes: "Women who have adopted the new severely plain mode in hair-dressing find in Stacombs a delightful and effective aid. Very few women can achieve this desirable effect without it." (7)

The Highest Speed

How a million revolutions per minute may be attained has been told the French Academy of Sciences by A. Cotton, E. Henriot and E. Tuguenand. A speed of 650,000 revolutions has been reached, and this should be greatly increased by using high resistance steel rotors. Friction must be reduced to the utmost. The structure of the rotor is the chief essential, however, the axle's extremity having a conical striated surface, against which compressed gases are discharged through small tubes.

Those "Fierce" Wild Beasts

By A TRAVELLER.

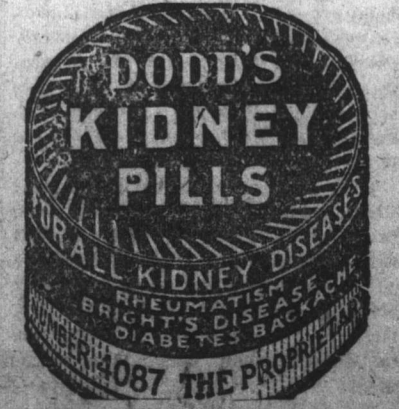

I have been reading of several cases of unarmed persons in Africa meeting a lion which, instead of roaring in a blood-curdling manner and promptly proceeding to make a meal of them, bounded off into the bush.

Are lions becoming effete? Have Siberian wolf-packs lost their taste for devouring feeble sledgeloads of moujiks? The truth of the matter is that practically all the legends about wild beasts being fiercely hostile to man, eager to attack and devour him, are sheer twaddle. The poor things want nothing better than to be left alone and to avoid any sort of fight with man.

Indians are highly amused at the dread with which the tiger is regarded in England. Hundreds of villages situated on the fringe of the jungle live cheek in jowl with a tiger or two, who is regarded as a cattle-looting pest but nothing worse. Only when he has bitten or pounced on and eaten a human being does he become a menace. But not one tiger in a thousand ever does become a man-eater.

If you meet a lion in the course of a morning's walk in Kenya or Rhodesia it will not eat you; it will run away. If you meet a bear in the forests of Russia, Siberia, or Canada it is no more likely to attack you than is a cart-horse in Covent-garden. Wolves are not to be feared. All one winter's night they followed my sledge in Siberia, trotting along in the edge of the forest, a few yards away, their green eyes glinting eerily in the dark. But what they wanted was the horse.

The cougar, or American mountain lion, has the reputation of following its man for days and then "getting him" unawares. Two or three good lies probably started this legend. There is not a single authenticated case. The puma, the leopard, and the lynx are very unpleasant opponents in a fight, but so would be any manly rural dean or family grocer if you went after him with a gun. Such cases as there are of men being attacked are due almost entirely to man being the provoker or approaching a mother with cubs. A few are due to bad temper; a few are due to bad eyesight or other infirmity or illness driving the beast to attack a prey it dreads. Hunger drives hard when one is nearly blind or too lame to chase a fleet-footed dinner. And of course, many wild beasts, however timid in their natural environment, will turn on you in a case. Personally I would rather meet any number of grizzly bears or wolves again than some of the nasty snarling little Pekinese encumbering High-street, Kensington.—Daily Mail.

Better Clothing

It is by making better clothing—not cheaper—that we are able to hold and increase our patronage. Always keeping a large stock of British Woollens—in Tweeds and Serges, you are assured of getting first-class material. As to the cut, making and trimming of our garments, we can only say "when better Suits and Overcoats are made, SPURRELL will make them."
